

Gamification as a motivational tool for software systems, as illustrated in a second-language learning environment

Geraldine Exton

Publication date

01-01-2017

Licence

This work is made available under the CC BY-NC-SA 1.0 licence and should only be used in accordance with that licence. For more information on the specific terms, consult the repository record for this item.

Document Version

1

Citation for this work (HarvardUL)

Exton, G. (2017) 'Gamification as a motivational tool for software systems, as illustrated in a second-language learning environment', available: <https://hdl.handle.net/10344/6521> [accessed 1 Sep 2022].

This work was downloaded from the University of Limerick research repository.

For more information on this work, the University of Limerick research repository or to report an issue, you can contact the repository administrators at ir@ul.ie. If you feel that this work breaches copyright, please provide details and we will remove access to the work immediately while we investigate your claim.

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

1 - 20 of 912

[accessed March 9, 2017]

1 (EN) - Articolul hotărât: "the"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2840354>

fantomitzah 25 18 17 17 16 11 9 9 2 2 696

În engleză, articolul hotărât se scrie „the” indiferent de genul substantivului sau dacă acesta este la singular sau plural.

Articolul hotărât se citește

- cu “ă” la final [dă] sau [ză] dacă după el urmează un cuvânt a cărui citire începe cu o consoană

Exemplu: the girl, the book, the school

- cu “i” la final [di] sau [zi] dacă după el urmează un cuvânt a cărui citire începe cu o vocală

Exemplu: the English girl, the orange book, the old school

1. Cu substantivele comune folosim articolul “the” atunci când:

ne referim la ceva unic, cunoscut de toată lumea

Exemple:

the moon (luna), the sun (soarele), the Pope (Papa), the internet (internetul)

dorim să subliniem calitatea sau importanța excepțională a unui lucru sau persoană (în acest caz punem accentul pe “the”, adică pronunțăm cu “i” la final [di/zi])

Exemple:

It is THE house of my dreams. = Este casa visurilor mele.

She is THE love of his life. = Ea este iubirea vieții lui.

folosim adjective la superlativ

Exemple:

He is the tallest boy in the class. = El este cel mai înalt băiat din clasă.

It is the oldest building in the town. = Este cea mai veche clădire din oraș.

folosim numerele ordinale

Exemplu: the third man = al treilea om / bărbat

ne referim la ceva ce a fost menționat anterior

Exemplu:

I need a book. But the book is expensive. = Am nevoie de o carte. Dar cartea este scumpă.

facem afirmații generale

Exemplu:

-- Dacă folosim substantivul la singular pentru a ne referi la toate elementele de acel tip, atunci folosim articolul “the”.

The kangaroo is found only in Australia. = Cangurul se găsește numai în Australia.

-- Dar dacă folosim substantivul la plural, atunci NU folosim articolul “the”.

Kangaroos are found only in Australia. = Cangurii se găsesc numai în Australia.

Observație: În română, substantivul care are rol de subiect în propoziție nu poate fi nearticulat.

ne referim la instrumente muzicale

Exemple:

Joe plays the piano really well. = Joe cântă foarte bine la pian.

She is learning the guitar. = Ea învață să cânte la chitară.

ne referim la clădiri publice, instituții, mijloace de transport

Exemple:

You should call the police. = Ar trebui să chemi poliția.

I heard it on the radio. = L-am auzit la radio.

I have to catch the train. = Trebuie să prind trenul.

folosim adjective precum "rich" (bogat), "poor" (sărac), "elderly" (în vârstă) pentru a ne referi la un grup de persoane

Exemple:

Life can be very hard for the poor. = Viața poate fi foarte grea pentru cei săraci.

I think the rich should pay more taxes. = Cred că cei bogați ar trebui să plătească mai multe taxe.

folosim cuvinte pentru momentele zilei

Exemple: in the morning, in the afternoon, in the evening, during the night

2. În general nu folosim articolul "the" cu substantivele proprii.

Totuși, avem unele excepții de la această regulă, când este vorba de:

nume de popoare (atenție, în engleză se scriu cu literă mare!)

Exemple:

the French = francezii

the Swiss = elvețienii

the Americans = americanii

the Italians = italienii

NU folosim "the" pentru nume de limbi: I speak English / French / Spanish / Romanian.

nume de țări care conțin cuvinte precum "kingdom" (regat), "states" (state), "republic" (republică)

Exemple:

the United Kingdom = Regatul Unit (al Marii Britanii)

the Kingdom of Nepal = Regatul Nepalului

the United States (of America) = Statele Unite (ale Americii)

the People's Republic of China = Republica Populară Chineză

nume de țări care conțin substantive la plural

Exemple:

the Netherlands = Țările de Jos

the Philippines = Filipine

NU se folosește "the" pentru nume de țări simple: France, Germany, Romania, etc.

elemente geografice cum ar fi:

-- lanțuri muntoase

Exemple: the Himalayas, the Alps, the Rocky Mountains

NU se folosește "the" pentru vârfuri muntoase: Mount Everest, Mount Whitney, Mount McKinley

-- grupuri de insule

Exemple: the Canaries, the Bahamas, the British Isles

NU se folosește "the" pentru insule singulare: Corfu, Bermuda, Sicily

-- râuri, fluvii, mări, oceane, canale, nume care conțin "of ..."

Exemple:

the Amazon, the Nile, the Rhine,

the Atlantic (Ocean), the Mediterranean (Sea), the Black Sea,

the Panama Canal,

the Statue of Liberty, the Tower (of London), the Isle of Wight

NU se folosește "the" pentru lacuri, parcuri, străzi:

Lake Michigan, Loch Ness,

Central Park, Hyde Park,

42nd Street, Oxford Street

-- regiuni

Exemple:

the Middle East, the west of Australia

NU se folosește "the" pentru continente, orașe:

Africa, Europe, Asia

Cairo, New York

nume de clădiri, opere de artă celebre

Exemple:

the Empire State Building, the Taj Mahal,

the Mona Lisa, the Sunflowers

nume de organizații

Exemple:

the United Nations = Națiunile Unite

the European Union = Uniunea Europeană

nume de ziare

Exemple: The Times, The Washington Post

nume de hoteluri, restaurante

Exemple:

the Ritz (Hotel), the Plaza (Hotel), the King's Head, the Déjà Vu

NU se folosește "the" când numele hotelului/restaurantului este numele proprietarului: Brown's,

Brown's Hotel, Morel's, Morel's Restaurant

nume de familie

Exemple: the Obamas, the Jacksons, the Smiths

NU se folosește "the" cu prenume: Peter, John, Mary, Luis lunile anului, zilele săptămânii

-- Se folosește "the" când ne referim la una anume.

Exemple:

The August of 2001 was hot and dry.

I always remember the Monday when I had an accident.

-- NU se folosește "the" când vorbim în general.

Exemple:

July and August are the most popular months for holidays.

The weekend is over on Monday morning.

anotimpuri (spring, summer, autumn, winter)

Se folosesc cu sau fără "the": in summer, in the summer

Observație: Cuvântul "fall" (toamnă, în engleza americană) se folosește mereu cu articolul "the".

Notă: Cele descrise aici se constituie într-o prezentare pe scurt a acestui subiect. Pentru explicații mai detaliate și de specialitate pe marginea acestui subiect se pot consulta cărți de gramatică a limbii engleze.

Articol realizat de: fantomitzah

Pentru alte articole despre limba engleză, verificați CUPRINSUL.

Give Lingot62

572 years ago

Leave a new comment
53 Comments

fantomitzah 25 18 17 17 16 11 9 9 2 2 696

Va multumim si noi, echipa de moderatori, pentru aprecieri si pentru ca aveti rabdare acolo unde mai intalniti erori si ne ajutati sa le rezolvam! :-)

14ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

da1969 7

Multumim,o aplicatie excelenta!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

trifannicu1 16 1

Multumesc,o aplicatie excelenta!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

Lord1968 3

O aplicație Excelentă. Felicitări!

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

florin209 12 6 2

Foarte frumos, eu personal iti multumesc pentru contributia ta adusa acestui site ,si noua romanilor.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AliCamC 15 6 3

Dragi moderatori, mulțumesc mult pentru aceasta aplicație. Și multe scuze pentru momente de nedumerire și supărare, și comentarii neplăcute. Ceea ce faceți e ca un act de caritate pentru noi. Ca sa ne ușurați metoda de studiu și sa ne scutiți de multa răsfoială prin cărți. Respect!!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dinady2000 4

Bv.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

elenai.ionescu 6

Multumim, e foarte bun.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Grig40 9

O explicatie excelenta!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JuliaCiocoiu 10

Multumesc mult! Felicitari pentru aplicatie! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Adrian_Mota 6

o prezentare foarte folositoare

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

narlait 4 2

Multumesc pentru informatie.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CotelnicDaniela 4

mersi, ati facut o treaba buna

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Turai_danny 13 6

Felicitari pentru realizarea acestei aplicati excelente. Cred ca este cel mai tare profesor virtual de limbi straine .Va urez mult succes tuturor pentru invatarea unei limbi straine :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ElidaConstantin 19

multumesc mult tuturor "ajutoarelor" de pe acest site. Sunteti minunati

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gabby3131 2

Multumesc, o sa-mi foloseasca.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

57apv 10

Da , un curs pe care il parcurg cu drag, chiar daca am 62 ai, nu am facut engleza la scoala, dar,ca metodist de 35 ani, nu gasesc explicatii metodice dupa fiecare capitol, pt. a ma putea corecta sau pentru a invata partea teoretica. Cred ca este singurul lucru care-i lipseste acestui curs pentru fi inteles de oricine.Oricum , meritati toate aplauzele si felicitarile pentru aceasta activitate.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

VargaNina 14

Va multumesc mult. Un program foarte bun. Pentru limba germana cand va fi o astfel de aplicatie?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sanducojo 8

Vă mulțumesc pentru străduința și ideia de a da posibilitatea celor care n-au studiat limba Engleză, să se poată iniția în deslușirea celei mai populare limbi de pe planetă. Sunt cred, cel mai în vârstă elev al acestui curs, care mă atrage să-l străbat, exersând zilnic. Nu cred că o să ajung să vorbesc limba engleză, dar măcar știu cum și de unde pot afla răspuns la întrebările ce apar în diverse situații. Regret că nu sunt pentru români și studii pentru alte limbi, cum ar fi; Germana pentru români sau Spaniola pentru români. Copii mei lucrează în Germania și în Spania și mi-ar prinde bine dacă ar exista astfel de cursuri cu aceleași metode de studiu. Acest gen este foarte atractiv și cred că mulți români ar fi interesați. Vă doresc în continuare succes în ceia ce faceți și să știți că atît pe calculator cît și pe telefon abia aștept să exersezi în fiecare zi.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Dementu 25 25 25 13 6 6 4 3 2 2
Ms!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

AlexandraB114252 11 5 2 2

Wow, tu joci de mult timp, nu? Felicitări că bravo se zice l măgari. Eu joc numai de 2 zile. :*

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dementu 25 25 25 13 6 6 4 3 2 2
Mulțumesc! Totu se face în timp, spor și ție :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexandraB114252 11 5 2 2
Mersi.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CazacuVeronica 6

Multumesc mult pentru aceasta descriere clara si completa a informatiei.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TeodorAncuta 7

mulțumesc pentru aplicație este excelentă

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PopFabi 8

Unde pot gasi baza teoretica si pentru capitolele urmatoare? Mi s ar parea potrivit sa fie pus la fiecare capitol un suport teoretic pentru a putea intelege cursul in sens logic... Multumesc

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IliliB 4

foarte util articolul, felicitari!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

popaelena1953 8
Felicitari!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gustawsohn 25 19 14 4 2 2 108
Foarte documentat, dar mai ales util!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ivabradina 14
Felicitari! pentru aplicatie.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

anastefanica 9 1
multumec,sper sa le pot aplica

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BranescuGhezi
Sunt convins ca v-ati castigat, prin acest demers, RECUNOSTINTA noastra. Felicitari.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nica1401 23
Foarte buna explicatia si pe intelesul tuturor,cu exemple,cu sublinieri. Felicitari!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CatalinaMotan 9
Foarte bine documentat si foarte util, multumesc!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gavrusa 12 11
Mulțumesc, ne sunt de un real folos aceste explicații.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LORDUT 10 1
felicitari pentru acest program

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nica1401 23
Foarte buna explicatia si forte necesara! Multumim! De altfel,tot cursul este excelent. FELICITARI!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nink1955 8
cred ca este " The Kingdom of Nepal"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ardelean_codruta 4
Felicitari pentru explicatii.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Doinaverzea 12 9
Ce clar si metodic! Mulțumesc!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ionel.lele 14
este prietenos,atractiv

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

VASILEPETRAS 8
O aplicatie foarte buna.Felicitari.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gheorghechirita 19 1
Foarte bun articol.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cornelia.jiga 15
Bine structurat! Felicitari!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

willystancu 13
Da ,imi place totul mult mai simplu si pe intelesul tuturor.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

erolhasan1 25 369
O aplicatie minunata. Felicitari .

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

erolhasan1 25 369
Explicații competente .Bravo .

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Doinalones2 8

buna ziua sunt la inceput de drum imi place calatoria in.....engleza ! mi-am gasit momentul.....avand in vedere BREXITUL !

sunt deabia la a 3 a lectzie am ceva notziuni necesare PC - imi doresc sa intzeleg textele muzicale .. e frustrant sa -tzi placa un cantec shi doar sa banuieshti despre ce este vorba apropo de Duolingo, cand nu sunt invitata sa continui, inseamna ca pot sa inchid aplicatzia ? imi apar mereu primele 3 lectzii cu invitatzia "refa"..... un impediment este ca tastatura mea nu are tz, sh, numai a shi i , astfel incat am aprecieri "aproape corect" multzumesc

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

gabi667679 21 38

Mersi. F. utila aplicatie si pot spune consecventa m-a ajutat sa ajungi sa invat cat de cat l. engleza, mai ales ca ma apropii de o varsta (LXXX). " MULTUMIRI "

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

ghitanicol1 14

Va multumesc frumos pt acest site.Este minunat.Sunteti niste oameni minunati.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

AronAna-Iulia 11

Neaşteptat ,...de bun , de binevenit , Felicitări iniţiatorului si ECHIPEI !!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

bucurialecturiii 6

O explicatie de folos. Mumtumim!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Lia660431 10

Bravissimi! Respect!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

2 About Duolingo

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us>

General Questions

What is Duolingo?

Where can I use Duolingo?

How much does Duolingo cost?

I think Duolingo is awesome and want to work there! How do I submit my resume?

Are there official studies about Duolingo?

Do I need the internet to use Duolingo?

See all 8 articles

Using Duolingo

How do I switch my Duolingo course language?
Parental controls and online maturity
How do I invite and add friends?
How do I block someone?
Why did I lose my streak?
How can I learn multiple languages at the same time?
See all 17 articles
Account

My account is in a language I do not understand! How do I change it back?
How do I change my username or email?
Someone created a Duolingo account with my email. How can I remove it and unsubscribe?
I forgot my password, how do I reset it?
How do I change my profile picture?
I can't access my account or reset my password!
See all 12 articles
Forums & Community

Troubleshooting
What are the forum community guidelines?
Who are the forum moderators?
How do I edit or delete a comment?
What are those arrows under the comments?
What are the Moderator Guidelines?
Technical Problems

Is Duolingo down right now?
My sound is not working. What can I do?
My microphone is not working. How can I fix it?
How do I take a screenshot?
How do I allow Duolingo to use my microphone on Chrome?
How do I make a video attachment for a bug report?

Reporting Issues

How do I report a problem with a sentence or translation?
How do I report an issue with the course?
How do I report a bug?
How do I report abuse?
Incubator

What is the Incubator?
To Beta and beyond. What are the course progress phases?
How can I suggest a new language course?

The Duolingo English Test

What is the Duolingo English Test?
Duolingo English Test FAQ
How is the Duolingo English Test different from Duolingo's other tests and quizzes?

About the Duolingo English Test Scores
Tinycards

What is Tinycards?
How do I add Tinycards to my Android Home Screen?
Is Tinycards down right now?
What if I come across inappropriate content on Tinycards?
About Duolingo for Schools
General

What is Duolingo for Schools?
How do I access Duolingo for Schools?
Is Duolingo for Schools free?
What is the difference between a student and a teacher account?
Is Duolingo for Schools safe?
What does Duolingo do with the students' personal information?
See all 8 articles
For Educators

Can I disable the flirting skill for my students?
Why is my classroom set to Spanish?
How do I become a Duolingo for Schools Ambassador?
What can I do with Duolingo for Schools?
How do I create an account?
How do I create a classroom?
See all 11 articles
For Students

I'm a student and I forgot my Duolingo password. Now what?
How do I find an assignment?
Why can't I see my assignments?
What if I want my teacher to stop tracking me?

Resources and Community

I have an idea! How do I request Schools features?
Do you have an "Introduction to Duolingo for Schools" for me to share with others?
Where do I find classroom activities and lesson ideas for Duolingo?
Updates
News

New article: 3 habits of successful language learners
Tinycards mobile-friendly website now live!
"Pending Assignments" issues fixed

Archive

Mobile-friendly Tinycards website release date!
New Duolingo status page!
Luis Von Ahn AMA on Reddit
Introducing Duolingo Clubs!

Ask us about Duolingo—Community Q&A
What happened to Immersion?
See all 13 articles
Still unsure about something?
Ask the Community or Submit Bug Report

3 Cách dùng mạo từ THE/A/AN

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3850844>

Huysan 13 11

Mạo từ THE/A/AN là những từ thường dùng nhất trong tiếng Anh. Có hai loại mạo từ: mạo từ xác định the và mạo từ không xác định a/an

<h1>THE</h1>

Mạo từ xác định (definite article) THE được dùng khi người nói và người nghe/người đọc đều biết họ đang nói cụ thể về một ai hay vật gì. Ngoài ra the còn được dùng trong những trường hợp sau:

Khi chỉ duy nhất có một người hay một vật nào đó

The Pope : Đức Giáo Hoàng

The Sun : mặt trời

The Queen of England : Nữ Hoàng Anh

Khi nói về những những gì mang tính tột bậc

The tallest building in Saigon : tòa nhà cao nhất Sài Gòn

The smallest boy in class : cậu bé nhỏ nhất trong lớp

Khi chỉ có một người hay một vật gì đó trong khung cảnh xung quanh

We live in a small village next to the church : Chúng tôi trong một ngôi làng bên cạnh nhà thờ. (Nhà thờ nằm bên ngôi làng)

Dad, can I borrow the car? : Ba, cho con mượn chiếc xe nhé? (Chiếc xe của nhà)

Khi người hay vật nào đó đã được nhắc đến trước đó.

A boy fell down from a tree. An ambulance is taking the boy to the hospital. : Một cậu bé đã ngã từ trên cây xuống. Một xe cứu thương đang chở cậu bé tới bệnh viện.

Khi nói về thứ mà dùng một danh từ có thể để mô tả chung tất cả loại

The snake is a dangerous animal : Rắn là một con vật nguy hiểm (Những con rắn đều nguy hiểm)

My son can play the piano really well: Con trai tôi có thể chơi piano rất giỏi (Có thể chơi bất kì piano nào)

Khi nói về một hệ thống hay dịch vụ

You should tell the police : Bạn nên báo công an.

I heard it on the radio: Tôi đã nghe nó trên radio.

Khi dùng với tính từ để chỉ một nhóm người

The gap between the rich and the poor is big. : Khoảng cách giữa người giàu và người nghèo thì lớn.

The city should help the disabled more. : Thành phố cần nên giúp đỡ những người khuyết tật nhiều hơn.

Mạo từ THE không được dùng cho tên riêng trừ những trường hợp sau:

Tên của những nước mà có chữ kingdom, states hay republic

The United Kingdom : Vương Quốc Anh

The United States of America (USA) : Hoa Kỳ

The Republic of Ireland : Cộng Hòa Ireland

Dùng để chỉ những người của một nước

The Vietnamese : những người Việt Nam

The Netherlands: những người Hà Lan

Những vị trí địa lý như dãy núi, đảo, đại dương, kênh đào

The Himalayas: dãy Himalaya

The Pacific Ocean : Thái Bình Dương

The Panama Canal : Kênh đào Panama

Những công trình kiến trúc nổi tiếng

The Eiffel Tower : Tháp Eiffel

The Forbidden Palace: Tử Cấm Thành

Những tổ chức

The United Nation: Liên Hiệp Quốc

The ASEAN : Khối những nước Đông Nam Á

Những chuỗi khách sạn hoặc nhà hàng

The Ritz Carlton, The Marriott

Tên của một dòng họ

The Williams, The Obamas, The Beckhams

<h1>A/AN</h1>

Mạo từ không xác định (indefinite article) A/AN được dùng khi người nói và người nghe/người đọc nói về một ai hay vật gì chung chung và không cụ thể. _A_ được dùng trước phụ âm, còn AN được dùng trước nguyên âm a e i o u hay phụ âm có âm câm (an hour, an honor). Ngoài ra the còn được dùng trong những trường hợp sau:

Một người hay vật trong một nhóm

She is a student at Harvard. : Cô ấy là một sinh viên tại trường Harvard.

He is a person from the South: Anh ấy là một người từ miền Nam

Không dùng A/AN để chỉ số nhiều hay danh từ không đếm được

He likes blue shirts : Anh ấy thích những chiếc áo màu xanh.

She likes to play with fire: Cô ấy thích đùa với lửa.

Khi dùng để nói về nghề nghiệp

He is an engineer: Anh ấy là (một) kỹ sư.

She is a director: Cô ấy là (một) giám đốc.

Khi dùng một danh từ số ít để đại diện cho một nhóm người hay một loại

A man needs friends : Đàn ông cần có bạn bè. (Tất cả đàn ông cần bạn bè).

A cat likes an animal : Mèo là một con vật . Tất cả con mèo đều là con vật

(Nguồn : British Council)

Give Lingot17

162 years ago

Leave a new comment

45 Comments

JenJolie 7

thank you nha !!! mình hay lộn tùm lum từ lựa cái chỗ này =))

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mikiiscute 8

hì hì

-1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

dieucanlam 8

Trước Monday, Tuesday.....,January,...June,July,..... có thể đặt mạo từ the được không?

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AEvulcan 11 6 7
không

2ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

mikiiscute 8
khong duoc dau may cai do thi dung mot minh

2ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Alstonialts 9
hay quá ha, mình đang lung tung cái chỗ này^^

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mikiiscute 8
tot qua ha

-1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

bongan2004 6
thanks

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hdky2014 2
thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rubbypham 10
thanks

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bixinhnguy 7
làm thế nào để đạt 5 điểm b1 đây. hix

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mikiiscute 8
co gang thoi

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Englishismylife0 5
tk

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

diepltn 10
Thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nuvati 8
thank you :v

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NguyenHuuDien 11
Hay quá, mình học phần này cứ lung tung hết cả lên

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Khanhlinh2127 10 4
<3 thank ad

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nhathuynhvan908 4
We live in a small village next to the church : Chúng tôi trong một ngôi làng bên cạnh nhà thờ. (Nhà thờ nằm bên ngôi làng)

Hình như các bạn dịch bị sai, theo mình nên dịch: Chúng tôi sống trong một cái ngôi làng nhỏ cạnh bên nhà thờ.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lamhothanh 3
Cho mình hỏi, tại sao trong câu này lại dùng the: Some British families decide not to buy televisions because they influence THE development of THE creativity of children.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vduythuan10 7
Thanks ad! Mình hay bị nhầm ở chỗ này. ^^

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ducvd69 21
thông tin bổ ích quá . xin cảm ơn

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nguyenkhanh2988 6
cái này mình lần suốt cứ dùng nhiều sẽ nhớ

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LpTmlyhoc 4

"She has the plates" và "He has apples". Cho mình hỏi sao 2 câu này lại khác nhau vậy?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

anhhoang1052004 11

mình ko biết nữa :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

politteo0711 8

Cô ấy có những chiếc đĩa và Anh ấy có những quả táo thì khác nhau còn nữa :v

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

meomoon_01 6

Thanks <3

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vuquanghong 18

chúc các bạn xây dựng một hệ thống giảng dạy ngữ pháp thành công. cảm ơn rất nhiều!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

inhVnHongA 8

m.n ơi, khi nào thì ko dùng mạo từ the ạ ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

siachan99-- 2

native speaker còn nhầm

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Phng1194 6

Hix, nội nhớ mấy cách dùng của the là cả một vấn đề :((

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

thaonguyentphcm 5

cảm ơn rất nhiều

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PhMMan 16

cho mk hỏi giữa phân biệt the phân 5 và a/an phân 4 khác nhau cho nào vd The snake is a dangerous animal A cat likes an animal

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

trancong65 8
thank you .I'm often use wrong remember with word a/an/the

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

tonyhng96 10
hay quá , lâu nay mình không biết gì nay thì biết zoi

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Minhhienhocgioi 8
hay lam thanks nha

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

isala_isala1 10 5 2 2 cái này mình lộn tùm xèo hết

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

khoanvj 4
cảm ơn tớ đang cần

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

LiJing6477 8
bạn ơi, đoạn này viết nhầm rồi nè: <http://prntscr.com/dktv76>, bạn sửa lại nha :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

tothang97nbvn 7 thank

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

LmTrngNha1 10
thế father hay mother có dùng the hay a ư không?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

thang7764119 3
mình học tiếng anh ngu quá, ai có cách học nào hay chỉ mình với

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hugokute1994 8
luyện tập nhiều vào là sẽ tốt lên bạn ạ. fighting :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tamdoremon
huhu làm sao đậu b1 help me

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Khanhlinh_KG 11 21
cái này mình biết rồi, nhưng mạo từ THE thì hơi có chút nhầm lẫn

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

botbien 14
Mình vẫn chưa hiểu lắm lắm cái mạo từ The

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

4 How can I learn multiple languages at the same time?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204830160-How-can-I-learn-multiple-languages-at-the-same-time->

To add new languages to your profile, go to <https://www.duolingo.com/courses>, choose a language and select "start course." You can change the language you want to learn from by using the drop-down menu on the top right of the page.

Adding languages will not make you lose progress in existing courses. You can switch between courses you've started by clicking on the flag icon in the top right corner of Duolingo and selecting a different flag from the drop down menu.

If you switch your base language (the language you are learning from), some of your existing language trees may "disappear" from your menu. Don't worry! They are still there. To visit them again, simply change your base language back to what it was originally. The skill trees displayed depend on what language you have selected as the base language.

5 Italian Subjunctive Guide

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8783716>

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

The subjunctive (Il congiuntivo) can be tricky to grasp for English speakers, as it's rare in our language. I'm putting this guide together in the hopes that it will help those who struggle with this aspect of Italian.

<h1>What is the subjunctive?</h1>

The subjunctive is a verb mood. What does that mean? A verb mood, of which there are four, shows the meaning behind a verb, not the time at which it occurred - the subjunctive ≠ a tense. The four verb moods which exist are the indicative, the subjunctive, the conditional, and the jussive. The indicative is the easier form which is learnt first - used for things like facts or definite situations, like "He was here". The conditional is used for situations which are dependent on other situations to be able to occur, like "I would go, if I had the time". The jussive is the form used for the "Let's ..." and imperative forms of the verb, like "Let's eat" and "Eat!". The subjunctive, however, is used in situations of doubt, desire, opinion, and others, which will be shown later.

<h1>How to conjugate the subjunctive - Present Tense</h1>

To conjugate the subjunctive in the present tense, take the io form of the verb, remove the final -o, then add the personal endings:

Note that for io, tu, lui/lei & loro for -ire verbs, the -isca/-iscano form is used when the verb ends in -isco in the io form of the indicative (e.g. "Finire" - "Finisco"), and the -a/-ano form when the io form of the indicative doesn't end in -isco (e.g. "Dormire" - "Dormo").

So, let's look at these endings on some verbs:

There are, of course, irregular verbs in the subjunctive. Some of these are:

Essere: Regular = Si-; For noi & voi = S- (For example, "Io sia", "Noi siamo")

Stare: Regular = Sti-; For noi & voi = St- (For example, "Lui stia", "Loro stiano")

Avere: Regular = Abbi-; For noi & voi = Abb- (For example, "Tu abbia", "Voi abbiate")

Andare: Regular = Vad-; For noi & voi = And- (For example, "Io vada", "Noi andiamo")

Dovere: Regular = Debb-; For noi & voi = Dobb- (For example, "Lei debba", "Voi dobbiate")

Fare: This verb acts like an -ere verb. Regular = Facci-; For noi & voi = Facc- (For example, "Tu faccia", "Noi facciamo")

Regular = io, tu, lui/lei & loro

There are other irregular verbs; these are just some of them and how they work.

<h1>How the present subjunctive is used</h1>

The use of the present subjunctive can be hard to get the hang of at first, as it appears so seldom in English (an example being "I suggest that he go"). If you've already encountered the subjunctive in other languages like French, it will be a bit easier, as many of the "subjunctive phrases" will carry over to Italian. Likewise, getting familiar with the subjunctive in Italian first will help when it comes to using it in other languages.

1. Doubt

If there is doubt within a situation, the subjunctive is used. For example, phrases like "Credo che..." (I believe that...), "Penso che..." (I think that...), "Non sono certo che..." (I'm not sure that...) all use the subjunctive. Let's look at some example sentences - words in Italics are "subjunctive phrases", and words in Bold are verbs in the subjunctive.

Credo che il suo compleanno sia in agosto - I think his birthday is in August

Non penso che loro vadano domani - I don't think they'll go tomorrow

Suppongo che debba aiutarti - I suppose I ought to help you

Dubito che ci sia abbastanza tempo - I doubt there is enough time

Note that after these types of "subjunctive phrases", the "che" can be omitted:

Credo (che) abbia ragione - I think you're right

Penso (che) sia bella - I think she is pretty

2. Wishes/Orders

If there is a wish or an order, something which may not end up happening, the subjunctive is used. Some phrases which require the subjunctive are “Voglio che...” (I want (that)...), “Desidero che...” (I wish (that)...), and “Insisto che...” (I insist (that)...). Let's look at some example sentences of this use:

I miei genitori vogliono che io impari il tedesco - My parents want me to learn German

Insistiamo che mangiate qualcosa - We insist that you eat something

Mio fratello spera che non piova domani - My brother hopes it doesn't rain tomorrow

3. Impersonal statements

Statements like “È bene che...” (It's good that...), “È difficile che...” (It's unlikely that...), and “È necessario che...” (It's necessary that...) use the subjunctive. “È” can be replaced with “Sembra” for the same effect. However, remember that the subjunctive is used where there is uncertainty - so statements like “È certo che...” (It's certain that...) wouldn't be used with the subjunctive. Also, if you use “Mi sembra che...” (It seems to me that...), the subjunctive isn't used. Here are some example phrases:

È strano che non possa venire - It's strange that she not be able to come

Sembra difficile che io vada con te - It seems unlikely that I'll go with you

È necessario che tutti lavorino insieme - It's necessary that everyone work together

Here is a list of phrases which use the subjunctive:

4. Direct effect

If an action affects you directly (e.g. “I don't like that...”), the subjunctive is used. Some phrases which use the subjunctive in this way are “Mi disturba che...” (It bothers me that...), “Mi piace che...” (I like that...), and “Mi sconvolge che...” (It upsets me that...). Some examples are:

Non mi piace che stia sempre aspettando - I don't like that I'm always waiting

Mi disturba che non si ricordi di me - It bothers me that he doesn't remember me

Mi sconvolge che alcune persone non abbiano abbastanza da mangiare - It upsets me that some people don't have enough to eat

5. Fixed expressions

Some fixed expressions use the subjunctive. Some examples of such expressions are “Benché...” (Although...), “Nonostante che...” (Despite...), and “A meno che...” (Unless...). Here are some examples:

Benché mi piaccia il gelato, non ne voglio nessuno - Although I like ice cream, I don't want any

Lei va alla festa nonostante che sia molta stanca - She is going to the party despite the fact that she is very tired

A meno che non mi rompa la gamba, giocherò a calcio - Unless I break my leg, I'll play football

Inviagli un messaggio prima che sia troppo tardi! - Send him a message before it's too late!

6. Che...

The last use of the subjunctive is starting a sentence or clause with “Che”, then using the subjunctive. This is used to show desires and thoughts. For example:

Che nessuno mi faccia ridere! - No one make me laugh!

Lei non è venuta a scuola oggi. Che abbia la febbre? - She didn't come to school today. Could it be that she has a fever?

<h1>How to conjugate the subjunctive - imperfect tense</h1>

The subjunctive also directly exists in the imperfect tense. To conjugate it, take the io form of the verb in the imperfect tense, remove the -evo, and add the following endings:

Here are the endings on the verbs we looked at for the present tense:

The verb Avere is regular in the imperfect subjunctive, however the verb Essere isn't. To conjugate Essere, remove the i- at the beginning of the -ire conjugation, then add fo- add the beginning of the new endings. For example, the -ire imperfect subjunctive conjugation for noi is -issimo. Remove the i-, which leaves us with -ssimo. Then add fo-, which gives us "fossimo" - the imperfect subjunctive conjugation of Essere for noi.

<h1>How the imperfect subjunctive is used</h1>

The imperfect subjunctive is used, for the most part, in the same cases as the present subjunctive. Generally, the preceding phrases are either in the conditional or imperfect tenses. So while the present subjunctive would be used with "Voglio che..." (I want (that)...), the imperfect subjunctive would be used with "Vorrei che..." (I would like (that)...) and "Volevo che..." (I wanted (that)...). This carries across for all aspects:

Non credevo che avesse diciotto anni - I didn't think he was eighteen

Vorremmo che venissi alla partita - We'd like you to come to the game

Sarebbe essenziale che bevessimo acqua - It'd be essential that we drink water

Mi piacerebbe che le vacanze fossero più lunghe - I'd like the holidays to be longer

However, if a structure like the "impersonal statements" is used to refer back to a past event, this will remain in the present tense:

È bene che tutti potessero venire - It's good that everyone was able to come

Non penso che mi vedesse - I don't think he saw me

Se + Conditional

Unique to the imperfect subjunctive is the "Se + Conditional" sentence. This is used to state hypothetical actions - which is why the subjunctive is used. This type of sentence is the only sentence where the subjunctive is still fairly identifiable in English - "If I were rich, I'd buy a mansion". This type of sentence works exactly the same in Italian:

Se potessi imparare qualsiasi lingua in soltanto un giorno, quale sarebbe? - If you could learn any language in a day, which would it be?

The sentence structure can also be flipped, starting with the conditional clause and then using the imperfect subjunctive. For example:

Mi piacerebbe il congiuntivo se fosse più facile! - I'd like the subjunctive if it were easier!

Come se...

“Come se” is the translation of “As if” in Italian, which always uses the imperfect subjunctive. It works in the exact same ways as in English:

È come se non mi conoscesse - It's as if she didn't know me Come se io non sapessi quella cosa! - As if I didn't know that!

<h1>Perfect and Pluperfect Subjunctive</h1>

The perfect and pluperfect subjunctive tenses also exist in Italian. These are formed by either using the present subjunctive of Avere/Essere + Past Participle, or the imperfect subjunctive of Avere/Essere + Past Participle. For example:

È raro che tanta gente sia andata in spiaggia - It's rare that so many people have gone to the beach
Se mi avessi detto la verità, ti avrei potuto credere - If you'd told me the truth, I would have been able to believe you
I hope this helps!/Spero che questo aiuti!

Check out my other subjunctive guides!

⇒Portuguese Subjunctive Guide

⇒Spanish Subjunctive Guide

Give Lingot481

6431 year ago

129 CommentsThis discussion is locked.

sheldolina 25 20 19 19 18 10 9 73

Thank you very much for making this amazing guide! I definitely wish I'd had this when I first came across the subjunctive. :)

60Give Lingot10•1 year ago

Rompip 25 25 9 1195

ditto, and thanks from me too.

8Give Lingot3•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

No problem!

6Give Lingot6•1 year ago

PaoloDiBello 16 14 12 12 10 8 5 5 2

672? How? :O

2Give Lingot2•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Prego :)

4Give Lingot4•1 year ago

IDIOT 25 14 9 6 5

Man, you write subjunctive guides? I'm not sure if you're a hero or a masochist. Either way, thank you.

48Give Lingot3•1 year ago

nastysdsi 10 9 6 5 3 2

Certi italiani dovrebbero proprio leggere questo documento :)

22Give Lingot4•1 year ago

PaoloDiBello 16 14 12 12 10 8 5 5 2

Sono italiano.

4Give Lingot3•1 year ago

717Vale717 24 16 89

Ahah sii infatti lo sto leggendo con attenzione!

1Give Lingot3•1 year ago

Monsieur_Bovary 17 15 15 12 12 11 11 8 156

As a native Italian speaker and a Spanish learner, I thank you for both these useful and very, very fine guides. I'm always glad to see someone so keen to learn and teach our beautiful language! A lingot for you.

11Give Lingot3•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Grazie/Gracias!

2Give Lingot4•1 year ago

psionpete 25 21 15 15 14 6 5 4 3 1147

Gratzie Molto Adam, that is most enlightening and really useful.

9Give Lingot3•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Prego! :)

0Give Lingot3•1 year ago

Abenhakan 25 14 14 13

Oh,. this is so very useful. I am Hungarian and study Italian via English. We do not have subjunctive forms and these tables of yours seem to be quite essential. Thank you friend!

8Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Nincs mit, én pedig neked szeretném köszönni a munkádat a magyarról angolra és angolról magyarra kurzusokon. Eredetileg magyarországról származom, de elfelejtettem a nyelvet amikor angliába költöztem, és megint akarom beszélni :)

5Give Lingot•1 year ago

Abenhakan 25 14 14 13
Azért elég jól megy!:-)

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

GiuliaJill92 8 7

Just be careful that "vorremo" is the future form of "volere", not the conditional. The conditional form is instead "vorremmo"... :)

7Give Lingot1•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7
Grazie - l'ho corretto :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

anamarija_k 21 16 12 8 6
THANK YOU SO MUCH.

6Give Lingot•1 year ago

Susanna35 25 20 17

Thanks a lot, Adam! I have adding this to my collection of "helpful hints."

5Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7
Prego! :) Sono contento che ti aiuti :)

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

PaoloDiBello 16 14 12 12 10 8 5 5 2

Hemh, "Sono contento che ti aiuti", maybe it should be correct but usually Italians don't use it this way! "Sono contento/felice che ti sia di aiuto" I am Italian

7Give Lingot•1 year ago

esha_ahmad 10

i lived 10 years in italy and i am only 12 :) and i think you did a great job explain it really similar how they explain it in 6th grade in italy

inoltre italiano che sto facendo per ripetizione, tedesco e spagnolo che lingua mi consigli?! grazie in anticipo

5Give Lingot1•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Non so quale consigliarti, perché ognuna è buona... Se impari lo spagnolo, il vocabolario sarà più facile, ma forse se vuoi una sfida, ti direi di imparare il tedesco (mi piace più il tedesco, ma mi piacciono entrambi). Buona fortuna! :)

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

esha_ahmad 10
grazie

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

jessebae 22 14

Is it normal for my head to be spinning or am I just stupid?

5Give Lingot•1 year ago

wshvet 24 10 4

You wouldn't be normal if it wasn't, from what I see and hear.

4Give Lingot•1 year ago

mmctigue 25 7 6

WOW! Great work! This is a lesson in itself

4Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Thank you :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Flying_Blue 21 15 12 6 4 246

Earlier this morning, while surfing the internet for a translation, I ran across an Italian forum and I was thrilled to find that I was able to follow the ongoing discussion (having to look up only a handful of words!)

Re-energized I came to DL and continued with my studies, truly believing I was making some sort of progress until I ran into this sticky!!!

Now, I'm back to thinking I'll never be able to learn Italian! Well, thanks a lot!!!

LOL!

Naaah, thank you for taking the time to put this together! Who knows, one day it may actually make sense and stick ... One can only hope! ;-)

4Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

You're welcome! And don't worry, the subjunctive will become second nature with time :)

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

Flying_Blue 21 15 12 6 4 246

I hope so! I noticed that I started to take a second look when 'che' appears. (I know it's not the key to subjunctive but it seems to always be a part of it.)

PS: In your 'What is the subjunctive?' paragraph, the sentence "The four verb moods which exist are the indicative, the subjunctive, and the jussive." <-- is missing the 4th one, 'conditional' ;-)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

het_aapje 25 23 11 11 10 8 7

Grazie mille :D

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Prego! :)

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

GC1998 17 15 14 13 13 12 11 7 7 6 6 5 5 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 2

Thank you for making this guide. I am just on the subjunctive and even though I know how to use the subjunctive in Spanish and French, the Italian subjunctive seems different in that verbs like pensare don't need to be negative.

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Yeah, that is the main part where it's different. Apart from that I think it's pretty much the same though :) And you're welcome!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

wshvet 24 10 4

THANK YOU, thank you, THANK you. Very informative and comprehensive guide. Now. Can Duo please paste it to the home lesson page when we first see subjunctive???

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

You're welcome, and I don't know... You'd have to ask them... :)

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

seipsum 8 6 4 3 2 2

The four verb moods which exist are the indicative, the subjunctive, and the jussive and the conditional.

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

Jaybirdcrow 25 633

This is awesome! Thank you so much. I wish DL would give us a few lessons of conjugating the verbs like this before throwing them at us in 12-word long nonsensical sentences.

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

PaoloDiBello 16 14 12 12 10 8 5 5 2

In Italy strangers always use the infinitive of the verbs in all situations!

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

CleopatraD 21 12 11 8

wowGrazie mille Adam! that is very useful for me that I'm studying English

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Prego :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

iracemapg 25 25 25 6 3 2 2

Thank you for sharing this!!!

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

You're welcome :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

pantograph3 25 9 6 6

Molto interessante e utile! Grazie!

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Prego :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

MarioMammaMia 10 10 9 3

sono d'accordo con te mille grazie :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

grassator97 15 7 7 7

For those of you who might be curious, the Latin subjunctive is not super hard to make. It's really predictable, and there's like one or two verbs for which you actually have to remember it.

For example, to be present indicative: sum es est sumus estis sunt

To be present subjunctive: sim sis sit simus sitis sint

But seriously, fantastic job on this article. Super thorough, and incredibly informative.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7
Grazie :)

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

goldy1992 20 19 17 8 8 4
very useful guide thank you.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7
You're welcome

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

AndyP11 25 14 3 6 5 7
Very helpful guide, thank you.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7
You're welcome

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

jaye16 25 25 25 13 6 3 2 16 2
Beautiful work. Well done and deserving of a sticky; I believe it's the first in Italian. Have a lingot or two.

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7
Grazie mille :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Kiryo 15 14 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 8 7 6 6 6 5 5 4 3 3 3
Grazie per le spiegazioni! C'è una ragione perché "fare" in congiuntivo diventa come se fosse -ere: viene del latino facere! Viva (congiuntivo) l'italiano! Vivat (subjunctivus) lingua latina!

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

PaoloDiBello 16 14 12 12 10 8 5 5 2

Maybe this would be the reason because the Italians always use (voi) facete instead of fate XD ..In italian language isn't correct use facete instead of fate

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

FrancescoG501115 17 14 9 8 5 4

Hello, nice guide :)

I just want to help you with some little changes I'd suggest: • in 5. Fixed Expressions of the Presente tense, remember that there's an additional "non" after "a meno che" so it would be "A meno che non mi rompa una gamba" • in How the Imperfect Subjunctive is used, the sentence "Non penso che mi vedesse" would be translated with "I don't think he could see me". "I don't think he saw me" would translate "Non penso che mi abbia visto"

Other than those, I think the rest of the guide is completely ok :)

*source: I'm an Italian grammar freak :P

1Give Lingot1•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Grazie :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

FrancescoG501115 17 14 9 8 5 4

Ack, I didn't notice the "A meno che non mi rompa una gamba, giocherò a calcio"

We don't use the article, yet the preposition "a" to introduce a sport we play :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

agyy67 15 13 9 9

Caro Adam! Grazie mille per questo. Ho studiato l'italiano tanti anni fa, ma congiuntivo era sempre in cinese per me :) Adesso cerco di studiarlo di nuovo.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Prego, mi piace che ti aiuti :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

dpavloska 6

Grazie :)

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

VossBucci 12 11 6

Fantastic guide! Very well written :-) I remember when I first came across il congiuntivo, I thought it was insane... then I realised that I'd been using the various English subjunctives without realising for years! Unfortunately, most English people I've met don't actually use the English subjunctives which makes learning il congiuntivo even harder. What was it Goethe once said? "Wer fremde Sprachen nicht kennt, weiß nichts von seiner eigenen." :-)

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

1scottie1 19

Absolutely brilliant, so clear and concise and well explained. Thank you so much

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

frankiebluej 18 7 6 3

I'm not even talking Italian (yet), however I'm bookmarking this! ~frankieb

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

Maluferrari 24 19 17 11 9 8 41

Bravissimo!

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

ZacharyWes4 18

This is an amazing tool, and awesome that it is concise and very well laid out. Thank you so much for this.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

Kay-Laura 23 9 8 7 6 5 5 5 3

Bless your soul

0Give Lingot1•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Grazie :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

marussy1227 9

Thank you. It will really help me to understand the Italian language.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

You're welcome :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Rubenveres 25 21 8 2

Very helpful! Would love to see it one day formulated into a guideline for the relevant topic, as it has been done with other topics along the three in the "tips and notes" section

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Thank you. It's quite a lot of text so I don't know if it would fit, but it's stickied :)

1Give Lingot1•1 year ago

DuyLe8 25 6 6 6 5 5 5 4 4 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 2 820

Thanks for share

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

You're welcome :)

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

ronsayers 24

Are other people seeing the images? I just see a broken picture symbol. Great guide! Definitely worth a lingot.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Hmm, it should be working, I'm not sure why it isn't for you...

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

jeroenvandinther 25 25 25 23 23 22 22 15 12 8 8 7 6 4 2 2 826

This could be the case when you are behind a firewall or on a VPN

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

ronsayers 24

Since I am following this active discussion I have looked at the thread from several different computers and devices in different locations over the last week. I have looked from home (no vpn/firewall), work (very limited internet filter for pornographic websites) and over the verizon cellular network on my phone and tablet. I have used explorer, chrome, firefox and safari on various windows and mac computers. I have tried both chrome and dolphin on android. Same result. Broken picture links. I'm in the U.S.. I'm surprised that I'm alone on this issue, but it would appear that I am.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

KimikoMatsuo 10 6 5 4 4

Helps alot~! <3

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Inez305585 4

Thank you - since I have started learning Italia all the grammar is my one area of weakness and you have taken away a little of the confusion - Inez

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

You're welcome :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Moustafa1705 11 10

Thank you !!!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

You're welcome :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

eman.albet 15 10 6

Grazie :))

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

mary_505 12 11 10 8 7 5 2 2

"Nonostante che" is rarely used, "nonostante" is a lot more common. Even though they're both correct, "nonostante" without "che" is what every Italian would use easily ;) Good guide!

Edit: "Nonostante che" is used when there is another element (like a complement) between the expression and the verb.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Ferreybar 25 15 11

Really very usefull. Thanks.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Paul837256 23 6 6 590

Molto grazie

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

velvet_machete 21 12 10 7 6 3 3 2 2

Thanks! This has been so helpful!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

PolyglotCiro 25 25 25 25 14 13 13 12 11 11 9 4 34

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Maggie621605 21

Thank you very much. It will come in handy when I take that lesson as I am just starting! Grazie mille!!!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

nerevarine1138 23 22 21 14 10 686

You'd think DL would have something like this in the non-existent Tips & Tricks section for the single hardest verb tense...

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

That's why I made it :)

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

Laura_Targaryen 12 11 11 6 5

grazie mille!, good information!

0Give Lingot257•1 year ago

gooley 25 8 4 1093

Thanks again. Take 10 lingots.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Squalo23 23 9 2

What a great help. Thank you very much!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

MarioMammaMia 10 10 9 3

This really helped me! I should have read this when I just started learning Italian. It's a beautiful language and I'm studying it so I can go to my favorite country-Italy! Thanks for the amazing guide! Grazie mille!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

murglescymru 20 12 11 8 7 4

Brilliant! Thanks ever so much. I have been trying to figure out how to translate the subjunctive when it doesn't really work that way due to its almost total non existence in English. The whole idea of trigger phrases has created a light bulb moment for me. Thank you so much.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

rmantegassi 24 24 517

Good job! Are you also planning to write a French Subjunctive Guide? :-)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Gio_Iaco 11 11 8 6

Hi, I have some doubt about your statement: "statements like "È certo che..." (It's certain that...) wouldn't be used with the subjunctive". It's not clear and it's changing with the time because fewer Italians can use the congiuntivo correctly, but phrases that follow "che" (When the verb is the subject of the main verb) sound really weird in simple present. With exceptions of course.

For the students: Italians have a lot of problems with the congiuntivo, if you can use it as foreigner it will really impress us!!!

0Give Lingot1•1 year ago

robertogalea 14

Gio, the expression "È certo che..." can be used in the indicative and subjunctive: È certo che lui viene and È certo che lui venga", both are correct. I personally would not use the subjunctive if I were talking about a friend coming. However, if I were speaking about my professor Umberto Eco coming to meet me at the University of Bologna I would probably use the subjunctive. I prefer to add a little doubt to the expression just in case Umberto doesn't show :-)

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

Angelo454227 5 2

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

yuheelieben 10 1

Hi, I don't know where to go. I just want to ask if there's any translate of City of Water in Italian aside from Città di acqua? thanks :) -newbie

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Gio_Iaco 11 11 8 6

What's the context? Venice is the "City of Water" = Venezia è la "Città sull'acqua" (both over the sea or near the seashore) -

During the World Water Summit Rome begun the "City of Water" = ...Roma è diventata la "Città dell'acqua" -

The mermaid empire's capital was "The City of Water" = ...era "La Città delle acque" (like the seven seas) -

All the buildings made of Ice, that was a "City of Water" = ...era una "città d'acqua"

"Città di Acqua" is not used, at least is "d'acqua".

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

yuheelieben 10 1

It's about Venice. I just want to translate it in Italian for research purposes thank you so much :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

ami_Dipanwita 8
grazie

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

RosaLollipop 9
I dont understand....

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

lite336 8 3
Isn't it. Io parlo , tu parli, Lui parlo, noi parliamo, voi parlate, loro parlano.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Gio_Iaco 11 11 8 6
Io parlo, tu parli, lui parla, noi parliamo, voi parlate, loro parlano... by the way when we decline a verb by heart we use "egli" instead of lui (same meaning, ancient form), and "essi" instead of loro (like the other, but "essi" is still good if you are speaking about inanimate objects or animals). When uncertain you can skip the pronoun, we do it a lot.

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

PaoloDiBello 16 14 12 12 10 8 5 5 2
Hai ragione, ad ogni modo come già sai nella vita di tutti i giorni non vengono mai usati.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Ferreybar 25 15 11
Really very usefull. Thanks.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

SuckTheUniverse 9
e bellissimo ^^

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

MimiBaka 24 16 10 451
Thank you so much for this useful information. I tried to study this from other sources I found but your explanation is much more extensive and detailed which helps understand the topic better. Thank you. :-)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

natftw 14 12 12 7 2 2
grazie. molto bene. due lingots.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

LourdesAlo 22

Thank-you! I often wish there was a little grammar lesson with each new conjugation studied. It helps to remember!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

marygbaker 23 615

Incredibly useful! Thanks so much!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

fiammettalucy 3

Thank you so much, Adam!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

GiorgioTes3 10 7 2

If you use "mi sembra che" you almost always need a subjunctive! "Mi sembra che sia arrivato". Indicative is acceptable too.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

6 I'm stuck, why can't I open the next skill?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204777904-I-m-stuck-why-can-t-I-open-the-next-skill->

You can "unlock" the next row of skills in your course when you've completed every lesson up to and including your current skill. Open an unlocked skill to refresh your learned lessons and complete the skill by passing all of its lessons.

skill example

Finishing lessons 2 and 3 from the "Phrases" skill in this example, would unlock the next row of skills with new learning content.

7 My microphone is not working. How can I fix it?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204642264-My-microphone-is-not-working-How-can-I-fix-it->

Before you start, if you are having loading errors or random slowness, please check out "Is Duolingo down right now?" to see if we are experiencing server issues.

1. Make sure the issue is not with the microphone itself. Confirm that it is on, plugged in, and that it works on other applications. You can also try refreshing the page or restarting your computer and browser to see if that helps.

2. Go to your settings page.

Then make sure your microphone is set to "on." Make sure you save your changes!

3. If you have a working microphone which is already set to "on" and it still doesn't work, there is another thing to try: Duolingo on the web requires the Adobe Flash plugin to accept speech input, so first ensure that you have Flash installed.

4. If none of these solutions work, make sure you do not have any browser extensions installed that would block the Flash plugin. Some extensions known to interfere with Flash include Ghostery, Adblock, Flashblock, and DNT. Here are some helpful links depending on the browser you are using:

Chrome

Internet Explorer

Firefox

5. Try using Duolingo on a different browser.

6. If you are using Chrome, make sure Duolingo is on your list of websites "allowed" to use the microphone. If you denied it permission in the past, then you have to change it manually in your Chrome settings. More information on that here.

7. If it still doesn't work, consider submitting a bug report. You can disable the microphone (and prevent speaking questions from appearing) for the time being by setting it to "off" in your settings.

8 Spanish "tap the pairs" error?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7798060>

delimbert 22

In two tap the pairs exercises, I was left with only "great" and "madre". This did not look like a pair to me, but I could not find a way to go on, so I tapped them anyway and was told I was correct. Why?

Give Lingot

61 year ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

Dcarl1 25 22 5

They seem to provide alternate meanings for words in this exercise that have not yet been taught.

I loathe this new exercise. Silly busy work. Of course you get it all right, in time, but it does little to grow learning.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

mhmarble 17 9

I have had the same issue in French. On my most recent matching exercise, the last remaining pair was "sugar" and "mercredi"

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tolunayo 25 25 6 923

I see those kind of odd pairings too. Sometimes I can see a very weak relationship but other times it is a total mystery. I have to agree with others that it can be actually counterproductive to those at earlier levels.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MuhammadSRashed 14 14 13 10 10 6 6 6 5 5 5 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 723

Was this on the phone, or on your PC?

It misbehaves sometimes because of previously downloaded material "for offline practicing" when you are out of coverage e.g. "if you are in the subway or something". :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

davloose 25 21 8 5 3

Also: direcciones/headship, pronunciar/sounds, was/trataba, boxes/áreas, The/(i forgot, cuantos or something, but not el/la!) Definitely not helpful to someone just learning, and more of a find the mismatched pair exercise if you've been at it for awhile!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DobbsBob 19 14 12 11 6 5 3 2 19

I see this a lot. It seems less common translations / conjugations that you haven't learned show up, kind of like they did in flashcards. Hope they fix it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rockseed 25 17 5

This exercise does little to promote learning

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarcSetGo 15

I am also seeing mismatched pairs. My most recent bad pair is Estate Car and familiares. No connection that I can find.

Unlike others in this thread, I do find this exercise useful. I try to speed thru it and have found that I start thinking in the meaning instead of having to explicitly translate in my head.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

9 Meet your new language tutors: the Duolingo Bots
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/18155544>

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 467

I'm really excited to announce the future of Duolingo and of language-learning in general: Bots!

Being able to have fluent conversations in a new language is an important learning goal. For some people, it is the goal. And yet, it's really hard to practice this. Most of us hate sounding stupid in front of others so we avoid speaking in a new language. When I visit Brazil, I always feel shy and awkward when trying to speak Portuguese (even though I think my vocabulary is pretty good!).

And I'm one of the lucky ones. Besides producing anxiety, language conversation is a luxury most people don't have access to. Even in the language classrooms of good schools, students usually sit silently while their teachers lecture. Speaking practice ends up being limited to those who are rich enough to travel abroad or hire personal tutors.

The Duolingo Bots are here to change that. Powered by artificial intelligence, Bots will help extroverts and introverts, rich and poor, prepare for real-world, meaningful conversations.

Thanks to your support, we've grown tremendously in just a few short years. But, even now, we're just as committed to innovation as when we were a 3-person team just starting out in a cramped, Carnegie Mellon University lab.

As you guys know, our team has used machine learning to make lessons personalized since the very beginning, but I believe that these Bots will take conversational practice to another level. Unlike most chatbots so far, Duolingo Bots understand and react to thousands of unique responses. The more you interact with them, the smarter they become.

I'm excited because I believe Duolingo Bots are the most advanced way to learn a language.

Bots are available in the latest version of the Duolingo iPhone app for users learning French, Spanish, and German. Other languages are coming soon, and so are other platforms.

Give Lingot359
6325 months ago

Leave a new comment
1003 Comments

QuadraticLingual 11 2
Sounds great! Can't wait for an Android version, though.

598ReplyGive Lingot70•5 months ago

Vedun 14 12 12 12 11 11 10 9 8 6 5 4 2
Can't wait for the web version.

796ReplyGive Lingot46•5 months ago

68dustin 9 3
We need web version of this pleeeeeeaaasseeeee!

301ReplyGive Lingot22•5 months ago

ShakoVeragi 11 5 2
Web version!
67ReplyGive Lingot5•4 months ago

68dustin 9 3

Yep!

12ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Telisa7 21 14 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 2 2 25

Yes, Please!!

9ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

[+] 3 hidden comments

FrancescoDT 25 8 2

WEB!!

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

KawaiiCookies 13 6 148

Web version!

10ReplyGive Lingot2•3 months ago

68dustin 9 3

Yeah!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

maryannstickler 21

I agree. I like typing much better on my Mac! Keep working on these great innovations please!

9ReplyGive Lingot3•4 months ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

dreydenlxxx 12

verdad que si

8ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

HarmonyJen 13 7

I agree. I have the app, but i am on the web so much more often... although, the bots sound pretty cool.

17ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

bobbyfetta 9

This has come at a good time for me - I only started learning french through a podcast 5 days ago, and this is only my third day on Duolingo (and first discovery there is a website!) but the bot's are amazing!

I think maybe it's on app first because of how it works. At first I was a little frustrated that it wouldn't let me expand my question too much, or, answer then ask a question in reply, like a normal conversation; it has a finite list of acceptable answers for each bot question in the conversation.

Having used it for a couple of days though, it's very good for noobs like me because whilst it doesn't let you reply whatever you want, it does force you to get out of your comfort zone a bit. One thing you can do is see the words it knows if you get stuck or if you want to expand your answer, that's been great for my early days vocab!

Thanks Duolingo - excellent feature!

40Give Lingot9•4 months ago

funny-tigre 16 11 8 2
They even have voices?

2Give Lingot2•3 months ago

Abear87 11 3
D'accord

1Give Lingot3•4 months ago
[+] 1 hidden comment
[+] 1 hidden comment

pixielemonade 6
yes, please!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 682

The thing with a web version is you can access it from iOS and Android until it makes it to the platform specific app. Why isn't available on the web first?

167ReplyGive Lingot10•5 months ago

WahahaDrills 22 18 18 12 9 6 5 4 4 3 2

Not that I'm defending it, but apps are sort of the cutting edge thing. It's the new frontier. You can access websites from mobile devices but apps are almost uniquely mobile. My guess would be that they're going suuuuper hard in the paint to appeal to the casual mobile user. Maybe an effective business model on paper but it doesn't seem very logical or efficient in practice. I get the feeling that web versions of things like this will soon become obsolete and just not done, unfortunately. Even Windows 10 allows you to use apps on a PC.

But I agree that a web version first would have made more sense. I, not having a mobile device, certainly would have appreciated it.

46ReplyGive Lingot8•5 months ago

ngarrang 23 18 10 8 6 3 682

Mobile Apps are not cutting edge, they are a retread of an old concept before computers were networked or barely networked. A web browser represented a major step forward in that a user only needed one application installed on their computer (the browser) and it could access all of the internet's resources.

iOS and Android apps represent a step BACKWARDS because now you are tied to a specific piece of software to access a particular internet resource. Mobile apps represent a walled-garden, a limitation that a company will place on how their resource is accessed. "You do it our way, or you don't get it."

No, mobile apps are about as cutting edge as someone that still runs DOS and WordPerfect.

25ReplyGive Lingot12•4 months ago

LuciusVoreniusX 25 15 9 8 2 334

Agreed. It's even worse that this was first made as an IOS app, something that seems to be driven (and not just at DL) by the thought process of "oh it's Apple, it must be cool". But the reality is that Apple has about a 17% market share in mobiles, Android has about an 80% share. So for every 1 DL user who can access this, 4 can't, and that's not even counting those who don't have Smart Phones in the first place. Had it been made a "Web First" development then 100% of DL users would have access to it from the start. There are reasons for developing apps (you have more control over what they can do) but they should always be as an "extra bells and whistles" option built onto a web offering.

16Give Lingot5•3 months ago

WahahaDrills 22 18 18 12 9 6 5 4 4 3 2

I'm not talking about it from a technological standpoint. If I were, I would agree with you. My point is being made in regards to the average consumer, to which mobile apps are the new cool thing. Or, as a said, "cutting edge."

4Give Lingot5•4 months ago

Caversham 25 22 18 15 5

Haven't got a mobile device either - hope a web version will appear soon!

23ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

ABelleCat 7 2

me too

4Give Lingot1•3 months ago

EmilyMMM2015 15 4 2 713

same here

0Give Lingot•1 month ago

Avared 7 2

i know what about us non mobile device people

9ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Jepkatoj 14 12 6 2 36

As of 3 years ago, less than half of their user base was on iOS, and 1 in 4 were on the web (presumably with overlap). Source: <http://i.imgur.com/IY6GXTn.png>

8ReplyGive Lingot2•4 months ago

ABelleCat 7 2

i tottaly agree with making web version

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

MatthewChu3 7 3

An "App" on windows is only what it is called. you still cant use an ios app on windows.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

ABelleCat 7 2

me too

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

carwile.brett 12

Very true. . . that'd make a lot more sense than what they have done with the chat bots and TinyCards. That way nobody would be left out (They could then eventually roll out the app versions at a later time).

30ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

GabiRMoore 16 3 2

They really should have ChatBots and TinyCards for the web and THEN make the apps

52ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

Talca 25 12

Claro

7Give Lingot1•5 months ago

EnderQueen85 6

Exactly! There is a website for Duolingo Bots, but it just says, "Oh, you need to download the app!"

2Give Lingot•4 months ago

darkslayer21 7

i know right

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

johnnysabu 15 10 4

Because if you looked at the stats you would know that the majority of users either learn languages on their handheld devices (iOS/Android) or prefer to rather than on the web. It mostly has to do with convenience in that people can open the app anytime on their phone whenever they get 5-10 mins of free time in the day such as while commuting.

9ReplyGive Lingot2•4 months ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 682

I know about the stats, but everyone can access the web version, even people on mobile (mobile web version), whereas now Android users as well as desktop web users are left out.

But I also understand that they might want to limit the amount of people that have access to it while they still are fine tuning it, since it's a new feature. It's just frustrating to always feel left out because we didn't want to buy one specific brand of device.

36ReplyGive Lingot7•4 months ago

Melarish 16 15 14 12 12 11 9 8 4 3 2

It's disappointing they choose iPhone when their aim is to provide language learning for anyone rich or poor. iPhones are really expensive but you can get a cheap Android phone.

37Give Lingot5•4 months ago

kdb119 14 14 11 11 11 8 6 6 2 645

@1Milano: Swift is currently an Apple-only programming language. Both Swift and Objective-C were created by and propriety to Apple. Java was created a couple of decades ago and simply adopted by Google. Although, there are rumours that since it has now been made Open Source, Google is considering supporting Swift (V3) for use for Android. This would in theory make it easier for developers to develop for both platforms. But only up to a point, since the APIs and whole way the interfaces work are very different in both concept and implementation. So only non-interface logic could maintain a common code-base. So in cases where most of an app revolves around the interface, visual and audible, it doesn't necessarily gain very much.

So your comment is correct only in the sense that they would code for iOS in Swift. Given that (I think) the Duolingo App existed prior to Swift, much/most of Duolingo would have been written in Objective-C and probably still is. Unless they decided to rewrite everything in Swift - which would have been a major effort and require an overwhelming reason for doing so. However, the earlier versions of Swift were buggy/problematic, and each version has changed syntax and implementation, so I doubt they would have committed to Swift before version 2.2.

Another factor is that there is no common IDE (Integrated Development Environment), the editor used to code and build applications, that can easily be used to develop for both. Even though one can bend, for example Xcode to also be used to write and build Java all aspects that revolve around the interface are only geared to the concept used by iOS/OS X. Additionally, Xcode only runs on OS X (without considerable persuasion and effort on an emulator). Cross-compilers can be used, but that still leaves the interface difficulties. Even if one pulls all this off, there will always be bizarre little anomalies where things don't work as they should. Plus Apple is very strict about what code and APIs are used in apps submitted to the App Store. So it is very much safer to use the most appropriate tool for the targetted platform.

Earlier versions of Xcode used to support Java (Cocoa-Java/Swing) but that wouldn't really help with the Android GUI.

Even if Google were to adopt/support Swift, it would be unlikely before Swift V3 has been finalised/standardised, and even then it would sit alongside Java much as Swift can sit alongside and be inter-operable (to some extent) with Objective-C).

Even with Swift V3 if it were adopted/supported by Google the difference in interface concept with still make things very difficult to maintain a common code-base. It isn't simply a case of calling different APIs, the whole concept is fundamentally different. Cars and ships both have a steering system, but they work rather differently.

Every app and update has to start somewhere, so they might choose to begin with iOS since that is by far the simplest and most consistent interface and OS with fewer devices with different characteristics to be concerned with. Plus, because Android is open, manufacturers can modify the OS in any way they wish which makes things even more complicated. So it makes perfect sense for them to get things working as they wish first on iOS, learn from mistakes or things they might do better, and only once things are settled and established begin the mammoth task of creating or updating an Android version based upon the now finalised design.

Even the concepts of Java and Swift/Objective-C are different. Loosely-speaking, Java runs in a bubble isolated from the OS, whereas Objective-C/Swift are more conventional and interact (more) directly with their OS. The reality is a lot more complex than that, but that is the concept. One of the main design concepts of Java was to make it a universal language that (due to its abstraction) could run on any operating system, that possessed the Java Virtual Machine environment. C was also intended to be machine-independent but in a different way and more direct way at the source code level, by use of different libraries on different OSs. Objective-C is an extension/superset of C. Whereas, Swift is, in essence, a separate language in its own right.

Finally, OS X is unix-based, or arguably perhaps more correctly, unix-like. iOS is not (really). OS X is the direct descendent of NeXTSTEP, which like WindowsNT was greatly inspired and influenced by DEC's Vax/VMS OS - very un-unix like (at least at the time) - and was the first time both became anything like a true operating system. OS X does use a unix command shell, but that reveals nothing of the underlying OS. Nevertheless, the kernel is unix-based and POSIX-compliant.

12Give Lingot5•4 months ago

danielaustin978 15

I can access all platforms, but I prefer the web (SOOO much easier on a full keyboard)

9Give Lingot•4 months ago

frannie_yang 21 16 13 11 8 6 6 5 5 5 3 3 2 39

So far Duolingo has tremendously accommodated my interest in taking up new foreign languages. I think the team will not let us down with the new features and in a not-so-distant future, the new app will apply to all devices.

1Give Lingot2•4 months ago

GabiRMoore 16 3 2

the struggles of being in the minority

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

Nathanking98812 14

That is both the strength and weakness of the phones brands. Iphones have a much smaller number of variants compared with android. This tends to make it easier, when rolling out features to target a smaller number of devices initially, to trouble shoot the issue that will invariably come up in the course of use by the masses.

While 'android' is a nice unifying term, and my preferred platform personally, the devices themselves, and by extension their specifications, are as varied as the consumer's reasons for purchasing them.

This is much reminiscent of the PC/Console games market, where it is easy to develop for consoles, (one set of hardware specs, guaranteed standard of performance etc) vs the trouble of developing for PC (varied hardware, OS, drivers etc.)

0Give Lingot•3 months ago
[+] 2 hidden comments

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 240

Is that indeed true? I don't well understand this preference for the app. I don't much like it because you don't just get a keyboard to type on (I don't mean a physical keyboard, just a proper keyboard as you get it also on a smartphone with all keys on it), and instead just a number of letters, most if not all of which are necessary for whatever word or phrase you are typing. That's probably just me, though.

6ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

LoganMac13 4
le livre est rouge

4Give Lingot•4 months ago

MatthewChu3 7 3
Yessssss... but some people (moi) have a hard time typeing on a phone.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

kaphinga 25 23 22 19 18 16 8 7 4 3 2 2 501

I am going to take a guess that it may be more difficult to develop a web version. What I have seen playing around with the chat bots on iOS is that the bots take advantage a lot of auto-completion and predictive typing. And, I imagine that a lot of that predictive capability is already baked into the operating system.

4ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 240

Interesting, indeed. I don't have any system that uses iOS, so let me just ask you: how do the bots take advantages of auto-completion and predictive typing? Is the conversation not in turns, with the bots speaking only after the user sent some text? That's what I would have expected.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

kaphinga 25 23 22 19 18 16 8 7 4 3 2 2 501

Basically, you start typing a word, and the system tries to figure out what the word is before you finish typing the word. So, for example, the bot may say "What toppings do you want on your pizza?" I start typing, "I want m-u-s-h...", and the bot anticipates that you are trying to type "mushrooms" and auto-completes it for you. It's not going to let you type "mushroms" or "mushroooms."

The result is that it is difficult to make routine typos and to miss accent marks and so forth when you are chatting with a bot. I imagine that not having to worry about typos cuts down on the number of alternatives that the bot has to consider.

Yes, you still have to send text back to the bot, but the bot places restrictions on what you are allowed to send. Sometimes, it can be overly restrictive --- at least at the moment. I have read, though, that the bots remember the answers that they don't accept, and they can learn to accept a wider range of answers over time.

6Give Lingot•4 months ago

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 240

I see. Well, perhaps (hopefully) they can simply forego that feature for an eventual web version, but then again, if they included it to begin with, they probably have a reason, such as—like you said—to limit the options the bot has to consider. Another reason might be that if the bot indeed learns from user input, as we were told, then it wouldn't be good if it learned all sorts of typos from careless users. Thanks for your reply.

1Give Lingot•4 months ago

GRIFFINCON2 6

Yeah, that doesn't make sense.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

corbinmoreno 3

no it doesnt

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

patfinegan 20 19 12 176

You can also access a web version from a Blackberry and a Windows 10 phone (yes, I've owned both and still use a Nokia Lumina). The BOT idea is fantastic but the widest usage will come when the application is accessible by browser.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

Kelvin803946 22 13 10 6 398

I'd venture to say they are still working on it, or they'd have to released it on all platforms right away, but I do agree. I hope they get it working quick.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Abear87 11 3

D'accord

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

hebell 22 425

Web and Android, please!

95ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

GraceScarbrough 6

yeah!

10ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

dnz147 7

please android i soooo want it

8ReplyGive Lingot8•5 months ago

MayaMichaels 8 4 3

Why does duolingo only make apple apps??? Most of their user base is either on android or the web!

Upvote this comment if you want to see duolingo's apps like tinycards made for android and the web!

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Scarlet2906 13

Ja!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

gfhytftfjg 5

Cant wait for the web version...

7ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

JarkoRab 25 11 9 133

Whichever version for Italian ...

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Telisa7 21 14 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 2 2 25

Yes, please. I am glad to hear you are working on it. I can hardly wait. But I am excited that I have at least one friend who has Duo on iphone.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

KawaiiPuff 3 2 1

same!!!! we need it!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Sarah_Lin 18 7 6 5

Yess!!! Need a web version!!! Do they have a iOS version???

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JohannahJeanty 6

So true

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

orde90 11 11 10 9 5 5 2

There is not even an iPad version even though it is mentioned in the update note. This time it's really disappointing for many people.

Edit: After 2 weeks it finally came to iPad. Thanks Duolingo team!

29ReplyGive Lingot5•5 months ago

Vorylon 18 8 2

Yeah, I got really hyped then got really disappointed when I saw it wasn't in the app on my iPad... even though it was written in the update notes

5ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

illu45 10 9 8 6 3

Yes, I was also hoping for an app version after seeing the update note. Hopefully soon!

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Blake32Griffin 6

Can not wait for the www version

16ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

sweetkundy 15 9

T.T I can't wait for the andriod version as well

8ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

solojones1138 15 8 7

87% of smart phones in the world are Android phones (largely because they make cheap options). By limiting this to Apple, Duolingo has made it clear they're only interested in providing this feature to the world's richest people, who can afford the most expensive phones (and could probably afford paid language learning). This seems contrary to Duolingo's entire mission statement, and is extremely disappointing.

8ReplyGive Lingot3•3 months ago

swingbeatnik7 14 14 9 8 7 6 6 6 2

Can't wait for them to tell us what device we should be surprised for. 2nd time they said "Coming soooooon" and THEN we find out it's for apple users, again. They could at least let us know. otherwise I really do appreciate the service DL offers.

7ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Sotgid 16 10 3 27

Android and web version is something we really need.

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

turbotyrant 9

Or at least some news on a release date for an Android application.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

AlyanAziz-Khan0 3

Same! Need Andriod version

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JoanneSalazar 21

I agree I would love to get access to an android version PLEASEEEEE

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

oscarroe 6 5

its great on the apple app how come theres no android version

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Tink629986 15 66

jVale! =}

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Migmasters 8 5

I really need a web version! I CANNOT use duolingo on my phone! please please please make one for here!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

MossGlover 10 3

I agree

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Dr-Pen 25 25 5 2

Dittos to that!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

King2E4 14 9 8 7 2 563

Yeah, that is the only problem with being an Android user. We get things last, whereas iOS always gets then first. Because of that, I am actually thinking of switching to iPhone when I buy a new phone (although I am an Android fan).

-7ReplyGive Lingot31•5 months ago

pont 25 23 18 16 9 5 99

Spare a thought for the Windows Phone users, who mostly don't get things at all :).

One advantage of Android: Anki is free on Android, but 25 USD on iOS.

dqxxmvvyvoedn

62ReplyGive Lingot3•5 months ago

CodyORB 22 11 2 2 2

I have a friend with a Windows tablet, and it still has hearts :P Too bad it's just modern enough to not have duels :(

15ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

RKhan 13

Hearts sucked! I'm glad they got rid of it. It was sooo discouraging!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

ronkisimo 25 25 23 659

what happened to the duels? Those were great! and i don't miss the hearts but they forced you to learn, I kind of miss them.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

King2E4 14 9 8 7 2 563

My dad has a Windows phone, and I completely agree with you. Windows hardly gets anything. When I compare the Windows app store (is there a name for that?) to that of both the Google Playstore and the App Store, I can clearly see that Windows is let down by so little apps.

9ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

sol3terran 7 6

Ah yes! Anki <3 I owe 90% of all my learning to Anki. Used it for all my A levels

2ReplyGive Lingot3•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

KristenDQ 19 16 15 13 13 13 12 10 9 755

Which really puzzles this Android user, as statistically there are more of us (given the number of companies that use Android OS over Apple) than there are Apple users.....

17ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

somelauw 12 12 10 10 9 6 5 5 5 3 32

Then you might want to read this article theguardian: If Android is so popular, why are many apps still released for iOS first?.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

berberu 11 173

That's 3 years old & just proves the reason is that iOS users are ready to spend more for prestige (cult) show-off & Apple can sell sufficient #s. Android has more apps & many exclusive (not all functions available in iOS). It is simpler to test on few iDevices & bring prototype apps to limited hardware platform 1st (still not supported for >2yr old iOS version 8).

7ReplyGive Lingot2•4 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

berberu 11 173

Android is universal most dominant OS & works on >24,000 devices. It has larger app store, more variety & many apps are exclusive (not all features are supported in iOS). iOS has to be tested on a few supported devices →faster to test & deploy. Whatever you do, you cannot avoid Android (watches with Sim/camera/radio..., home/car appliances, cameras, smart TVs, Dect phones, game consoles, smart glasses...)

Do you want to complicate life with 2 OSs or a universal one with >88% vs 11.5% (& falling due to Asian competition, value/$)? <https://techcrunch.com/2016/05/01/how-android-gets-to-100-market-share/>

15ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

HappyEvilSlosh 25 23 21 20 13 11 10 9 8 7 4 2 2 4

I'd prefer consistent protocols/standards across devices so I didn't have to decide which walled garden I wanted to get locked into.

7ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

berberu 11 173

I also prefer cross platform apps. HTML5 (& 6) should become more dominant on smartphones & take over native (walled) apps. Apple & developers that want quick money are resisting this change for vested interest.

8ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Veronicatheboss 4

but, to be fair, android phones are normally less expensive than apple devices. iphones are a tad over priced.

10ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

King2E4 14 9 8 7 2 563

That is true, although there are many Android models (like Samsung) that are quite expensive.

Phones, nowadays, are getting too expensive! It is ridiculous!

-1ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

AureliaUK 25 25 21 12 12 11 3

That's because they're no longer phones but handheld computers.

10ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

berberu 11 173

That's because they can be SEEN as personal prestige & show-off (brand name). No other reason that overpriced/locked/proprietary Apple is popular. 'Simpler' is not applicable as Android is more logical/simpler. Anything that you use regularly is 'simpler' than something you rarely use. 'Just works' also not applicable as lacking many functions (SD cards, stylus, file manager/cloud flexibility, configurability/designs...) does not just work (at all). Windows phone is simpler & just works better than iGadgets, but lost the popularity contest.

No wonder the computers/software are becoming more intelligent than majority that doesn't want to think for themselves.

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Melarish 16 15 14 12 12 11 9 8 4 3 2

Really? I remember buying a Nokia that didn't even have WiFi capability for €100 back in the day. Now I can get a smartphone for that. Seems quite the same to me, and I get much more functionality! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Najeka 14

I am kicking myself for buying an I phone. Be happy you have an android

9ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

lemelisk 13 10

I'm kicking myself for buying a windows phone. Be happy you have an Iphone.

12ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

berberu 11 173

Read the comments from the article & be Happy. The future is brighter (not for iphone)-
<http://www.zdnet.com/article/its-time-for-microsoft-to-give-up-on-windows-phone-and-switch-to-android/>

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Jeremy547027 9

Despite the fact that there are vastly more Android users than iOS users, iOS users are a self-selecting group that have paid a chunk more for an equivalent phone. Because of that, they are considered both wealthier and freer with their money, and hence more likely to be low-hanging fruit to buy crap in apps. So developers release first for that way smaller user base.

EDIT: Why was I downvoted for this? It sucks, but it's true, and it's not my fault. And indeed, I was just talking with my friend who works at Facebook today about why he released their new Events app for IOS first. This is simply a fact of the industry,

7ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

King2E4 14 9 8 7 2 563

It makes sense now. Even the earlier iPhone models are considerably more expensive than most Android devices. I know that because I was looking at the iPhones 4 and 5 on Amazon a few months ago, and most of them were over £200. No way am I paying over £200 for an iPhone 4 or 5 when the iPhone 7 has just been released.

Anyway, I am sticking with Android. I know it is a great Operating System and does everything I need it to do.

4ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

[+] 3 hidden comments

sol3terran 7 6

I'm thinking this too.. I've been a die hard android user since my first smartphone.. but Apple have made it so easy to develop for them that everything is always released first on IOS! I'm still waiting for tinycards too!

4ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

larsth 18 4 157

quote: I'm still waiting for tinycards too!

You don't have to wait much longer:

3 days ago I got an email from Duolingo: It announced Tinycards for Android - and the web.

I clicked on the "notify me", which send me to a Duolingo web page; which suggested it should use the email address Duolingo is using to email me.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

[+] 1 hidden comment

[+] 1 hidden comment

[+] 2 hidden comments

sarefo 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 14 14 12 12 11 5 4 4 4 3 3 3 3 2 2 2 158

Please, next time you do a teaser that is for iOS only, just mention it in the teaser :) very disappointing to wait for a week, just to learn I have the "wrong" phone.

123ReplyGive Lingot23•5 months ago

Ginkkou 16 15 15 11 11 6 4

Tbh I really don't understand why they're not developping cross-platform by now...

34ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

elvper 25 13 12 8 288

It's possible that they receive money from Apple for releasing there first. It's not uncommon for Apple to offer deals to certain app devs for releasing on iSnob first.

23ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

carwile.brett 12

Yes, I know!!!! I actually made a post earlier about that! I had been waiting for over a week, after seeing the teaser, only to this get IOS only "for now" stuff. I had my suspicions, but just kinda blew them off. I guess my suspicions were right.

10ReplyGive Lingot3•5 months ago

emptystackexn 15 12 12 10 8 6 4

Exactly... So disappointed

4ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

rogduo 25 10 6 3 2

Yes, the teaser is a big disappointment. Makes me not want to do anything duolingo until they get us something on android. Grrrrrr ;{

7ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Bruno_de_Brito 18 14 11 9 8 7 6 4 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 1

Wooooow exactly as I was thinking ;{

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

neio75 14 10 7 5 4

Totally agree

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

JlioGomes1 21 14 12 11 6 4 2

Yes, man. It's bad. --' I already know that my windows phone isnt the best. but now i'm starting to feel more sad then before. --'

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Bruno_de_Brito 18 14 11 9 8 7 6 4 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 1

Sure, Sarefo!!! :)

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

carwile.brett 12

I hope they are coming to web soon! If so, it'd be worth the wait. When I head the chats announced, I had assumed they were coming to web, and was kinda disappointed when I found out it was IOS only. . . Oh well, I guess I'll just wait for chatbots to come to web along with TinyCards, and the characters: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/10334502> (Its been a year since they announced that. . . I hope we don't have to wait that long for chatbots or tinycards!).

68ReplyGive Lingot20•5 months ago

FluencyPlan.com 23 19 16
exactly. disappointed, but not at all surprised.

29ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

carwile.brett 12

Yes, I know! I literally stayed up past midnight waiting for it to update. It never did, so I went to bed, thinking it would be on in the morning (LOL I actually had dreams about using the chatbot last night). I got up REALLY early (Keep in mind I was already up late), only to find that it wasn't for web. Now, I've been like a zombie all day, and have been barely able think or function (All thanks to me getting overexcited about a duolingo feature that I don't even have access to!).

16ReplyGive Lingot20•5 months ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

Dzhocef 16 5 5 4

It's pointless not to add these features on the website when the apps rely heavily on internet connection in the first place.

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago
[+] 2 hidden comments

y.ademas 25 25 283

So the bots and tinycards roll out on iOS and us android users get the ads? Sounds fair. =)

49ReplyGive Lingot18•5 months ago

airelibre 24 21 21 19 13 13 11

Ads are on iOS too, I've seen them anyway and have screenshots to prove it.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

israelpolasak 25 11 11 74

No he means iOS gets everything early, and android has to wait a year+ (and theyre still not out, like the characters, and then tinycards and now chatbots) however with ads, we do get it early... :/

10ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1
and android has to wait a year+

... and web version 2+ years and Windows Phone version... eternity. ;)

14ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

berberu 11 173

If it comes to web it comes to any platform, inc. Windows phone. The web version of Duo is more usable.

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

LoganMac13 4

La livre est rouge

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

DonFiore 16 10 10 9 6

Why would you even want the characters? I'm not using any Duo app and I'm glad they are not on the website.

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 240

I think they're cute and they look fun, but for any version, be it Android, iOS, or web browsers, I think it'd be good for it to be an option with a setting to turn off for those who don't want them, like yourself.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

airelibre 24 21 21 19 13 13 11

The way he worded it makes it look like iOS doesn't get ads, but it does. It just also gets new features first. Fine for me, because I have an iPhone, but I agree with the other comments in this thread that this is completely at odds with their goal of reaching everyone who can't afford good education, when most of the smartphones in the world are Android, especially the cheapest ones.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

[+] 3 hidden comments

Luscinda 25 25 25 14 11 10 8 7 6 6 5 4 3 3 2 2 3

Even in the language classrooms of good schools, students usually sit silently while their teachers lecture. Speaking practice ends up being limited to those who are rich enough to travel abroad or hire personal tutors.

I don't know which schools you visit, Luis, but I would be horrified if I encountered that as normal practice in the teaching of languages and I would not regard it as normal - and I don't just mean in the privileged west.

41ReplyGive Lingot15•5 months ago

RandomTed 20 18 8

The classroom Luis described was my classroom experience through years of school. I supposedly had 5 years of French in school, but learnt almost nothing.

29ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

Ungewitig_Wiht 24 12 3

Our Spanish class involves speaking practice, but it's very structured so there's literally only one possible correct answer. It's no better than translation exercises in my view.

6ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

squaredsquare 10 7 4 2

And now it (...) ends up being limited to those who are rich enough (...) ... to own an iPhone.

19ReplyGive Lingot20•5 months ago

WildSage 22 20 18 17 16 13 10 8 8 6 6 4 3 3 2 2 504

I've never seen a lecture based language class in any of the classes I've been in. Wherever these are the teachers should be fired.

15ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

Luscinda 25 25 25 14 11 10 8 7 6 6 5 4 3 3 2 2 3

Nor I. Not even when I was at school. I've certainly never seen a language course aimed at schools structured in that way.

13ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

[deactivated user]

Actually, this was pretty standard in my school, and three foreign languages were compulsory. One year I had a Welsh teacher who only allowed talking when answering her questions (in the entire year, I don't think we had a single chance to practice conversations) and another year I had a Spanish teacher who didn't let us write anything down; seriously, in a whole year I filled up ~20 pages of my exercise book, whereas in most other subjects I went through two or three books. They were extreme...ly bad teachers, but even the "good" language teachers only allowed us a five minutes conversation practice about once a fortnight, if we were lucky. It's no surprise that everyone hates taking languages in schools if my classes were anything to go by lol.

14ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

rachael.cr3 18 15 14 13 13 13 12 11 10 9 9 8 8 8 7 7 7 7 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 171

I think this might be changing. My classes were very interactive and involved lots of conversation when I was in school, and when I became an English teacher, it was almost all speaking, mostly from the students.

12ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1154

My thoughts exactly.

9ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

AureliaUK 25 25 21 12 12 11 3

True. I did secondary school French in the early 1970s and we had weekly sessions in the school's "language lab" and with the French speaking "Assistant", who, from memory, variously came from various French regions, Switzerland and Tunisia. No doubt the students learning German had access to the same facilities. When I did a year of Spanish in 6th Form we had a Spanish Assistant from Seville. As she was lodging near my home we spoke Spanish whenever we happened to meet.

3ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

kdb119 14 14 11 11 11 8 6 6 2 645

@AureliaUK: I also did Secondary School French in the early 1970s. You certainly had significantly better facilities than us. We had no language lab or assistants, merely a single teacher in a normal classroom. When I went on to Sixth Form I had, sadly dropped languages. We were the first year of it being a Sixth Form college which had previously been the neighbouring Grammar School. Hampshire was in the final year of phasing out all Grammar Schools. I was surprised to discover only recently that some counties, notably Kent, still had Grammar Schools! I'm sure you will know to what I refer. Whilst a grammar school it had apparently been mandatory to study Latin and at least one modern foreign language. As a Sixth Form I think they had A'Level courses in Russian and Chinese (Mandarin) as well as the usual French, Spanish and German. My Secondary School was - how can I put this? - not especially aspirational!

I did later (mid-80s), whilst working near London, try Adult Education/evening classes a couple of times for French and once for German, but it didn't really work for me. This was also just in a normal classroom. They were following the BBC Language Courses, 'A vous la France' and 'Deutsch Direkt'. Both teachers were native speakers and I learnt a lot of interesting things incidentally about their customs etc, but it was only two hours once a week, and once work or illness caused me to miss any time I just fell way behind. Trying to practice conversations with fellow learners really didn't work for all the reasons Luis and others have said.

I made several other attempts trying various language courses tapes, CDs books etc, over the years. Duolingo has been the only thing to prove really successful; but its lack of conversation facility meant that whilst I can now understand some languages pretty well, I couldn't really even attempt to hold a conversation. As I mentioned elsewhere, I did try Speaky but even just using text-based exchanges I found it very difficult. It's a great idea in theory, but I think you need to already be fairly advanced/confident to be able to much benefit from it. The Bots despite their (current) limitations, even after only a few days have already made me feel surprisingly more confident and despite some minor frustrations I have found it an enjoyable experience. So I'm keenly anticipating the release of the Bots for Italian, especially, and making them available on iPad. Although I fear there may be a long wait for them to appear for the non-core Pittsburgh produced courses.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Well, hate to rain on your parade, but that is in fact the norm. Even in privileged or potentially rich schools one can't really force an introvert (or average speaker) to speak as easily, and they might just utter some nonsense just to get the teacher to get off their case.

Just to consider the math for this, a teacher might be lecturing an average of 30 - 40 students or less (if they are lucky). A regular weekly lecture may last 1 or 2 hours , and so even if a teacher spends as much time as possible speaking with each student, that would mean $120 / 40$, 3 minutes (perhaps 15 minutes weekly) for conversing with each student (worse case scenario). That's not counting regular assignments, and course work required, and repeating some sentences due to them not understanding. That's not even taking into account how much harder it is to learn languages that have nothing in common with each other.

Schools and teachers aren't always bad because they don't have adequate resources. The problem is that the current education system was created by applying a mass education system to a originally traditional system of master and apprentice (1:1) that would generally be more successful than any school. This means that the needs of the group outweigh the needs of the individual, and stragglers get left behind.

Other living creatures don't place such educational constraints, and so can reproduce a lot without such issues, humans on the other hand don't have that privilege.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1154
but that is in fact the norm.

I don't think you can claim to know what the norm is, when several other users have very different experiences.

can't really force an introvert (or average speaker) to speak as easily, and they might just utter some nonsense just to get the teacher to get off their case.

A good teacher will find exercises that suit the class and student in question, and not be so easily fobbed off.

a teacher might be lecturing an average of 30 - 40 students or less (if the they are lucky)

In exactly none of the language classes (across several countries) I've been to at school or elsewhere has the staff--student ratio been that awful. Also, I wouldn't call a language class a "lecture" exactly...

even if a teacher spends as much time as possible speaking with each student

Who said only the teachers would speak with students? As soon as you're past the very basics, students can practice with each other, with the teacher helping out as needed, and making sure they are doing what is required (see my second point above).

17ReplyGive Lingot20•5 months ago

Luscinda 25 25 25 14 11 10 8 7 6 6 5 4 3 3 2 2 3

I wouldn't even expect them to be past the basics. In my experience pair work is normally built in from lesson 1.

12ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1154

Yes, in my experience, too (but at the very latest then). At which point I normally hate it, because I feel silly sitting there making these strange noises towards another person who then makes strange noises back. :-) Modern language tuition is actually too interactive for my personal liking...

11ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1154

@Luscinda: You clearly haven't met my Estonian class... :-) Average age: about 60+, average silliness level: very high.

8Give Lingot•5 months ago

Luscinda 25 25 25 14 11 10 8 7 6 6 5 4 3 3 2 2 3

Yes, but we're not five year olds at school. :-)

2Give Lingot•5 months ago

DianaLR 23 18 18 17 14 13 8 7 7 5 5 2

Look at your streak! Congrats!

-2Give Lingot•5 months ago

londoncailling 20 16 15 10

In the UK it is very normal to have 30-40 pupils in a school class.

-1ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

I don't think you can claim to know what the norm is, when several other users have very different experiences.

It is not a claim, it is a fact determined by research 1, 2. "Users" is a small, self-selected, biased, and non-representative sample. This also applies to almost every single area in the world.

A good teacher will find exercises that suit the class and student in question, and not be so easily fobbed off.

In a perfect world a teacher would have the time to spend on each and every single student, in reality they don't. It is easy to think that just because some students grasp the subject matter, all of them will. The fact is that some people may not get it even after 20 explanations. This isn't only the case in language learning, even in maths, after years of schooling a good number of students may have a very fragile grasp of many concepts.

In exactly none of the language classes (across several countries) I've been to at school or elsewhere has the staff

Perhaps in first and second world countries (or privileged schools)... Elsewhere it is likely more than normal, considering that most students learn a second language as part of regular schoolwork.

Who said only the teachers would speak with students? As soon as you're past the very basic, students can practice with each other

That's assuming two things, a) a basic good enough grasp of the language to practice with someone else, and b) motivation of students to do beyond what the teacher tells them to. Unlike something like history, language studies requires self-motivation.

It is easy enough to learn "enough" to just pass, and forget everything within 2 months or less.

-3ReplyGive Lingot3•5 months ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1154

If you're going to use the phrase "determined by research", you'll have to link to something more comprehensive than one academic paper about students in one country, and a newspaper article about students in a country known for its awful track record in learning and teach languages. :-) (The second being the country where I once tried and failed to learn Russian...)

Of course users writing here are a small, self-selected sample -- my claim wasn't that all is hunky-dory in language teaching all around the world, but that your statement of what "the norm" is was already contradicted by several people here. You're the one who made the specific claim, not I. Those sources aren't really convincing proof of "the norm".

Of course some people will need many explanations and others will grasp things quickly. I don't see that as being up for debate here.

I don't know about privileged schools, since I haven't really attended any. But in my experience language classes often have a smaller number of students than, say, maths classes, since students often have some opportunity to choose between different languages.

Again, a good teacher (and I know there are many bad ones out there), will give students tasks that are suitable to their level and then make sure they do them. I don't see how language classes would require any more motivation than history. Also, most teachers would expect more than their students just "passing".

12ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

Tattamin 25 21 13 10 4 4 3 516

I learned four foreign languages at school and (apart from Latin which was only ever to be translated from) we were always encouraged to talk to each other, to sing silly little songs together, and later to discuss given subjects in the target language. Speaking is one of the four basic abilities of language acquisition, so not teaching it is pointless.

15ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Sirveaux 25 25 24 21 17 4 1

This was my experience even in a small class at a very prestigious private school. Our teacher was a fluent German teacher, but we had to rely on one another for conversation. 15 unskilled students with low vocabularies have trouble challenging each other to speak and think in a language.

My son is fortunate to be in a dual immersion class for Spanish, where he is required to speak only in that language for half of every day with his native tongue teacher and all his classmates. He has the benefits of "living" in a Spanish-speaking environment four hours a day.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

WahahaDrills 22 18 18 12 9 6 5 4 4 3 2

That describes the U.S. Here, Spanish is one of the most common second languages to study, but, because of the, at best, horrifyingly bland teaching style of most Spanish teachers, people rarely continue it past high school. I remember being in Spanish 3 my senior year of high school, about four years ago. I was legitimately the only person in the class who cared about Spanish whatsoever. I can guarantee that not one of my peers(who wasn't already a native Spanish speaker) probably only remembers the very basics, if even that. Because all Spanish was in the classroom was just another thing to be drilled in for credit so people could go to uni. Lectures were done entirely in Spanish, but the teacher spoke like a robot and people around would constantly ask what she was saying because, obviously, not caring about it and having the system fail them meant they struggled with it. Here, in California, you have to take three years of a foreign language to get credit to go to a university and that's all people wanted, just the credit.

Luis is right. Call the West "privileged" all you want but we don't get a lot of things that are necessary for learning a certain subject. Public schools are preoccupied with having you pass your standardized tests in English and math and then getting you out in 12 years. If you want to learn something meaningful beyond the factory that is our education system, you either need money, connections, and/or creativity. Of course, I can only speak for the U.S. as "the West" is made up of a lot of different countries and there are obviously exceptions.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

[+] 3 hidden comments

[+] 10 hidden comments

neio75 14 10 7 5 4

I'd like to know when it will be available for android users too

28ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

FluencyPlan.com 23 19 16

NO DESKTOP BOTS?!?C'MON GUYS :-(

24ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

neio75 14 10 7 5 4

Don't you know Duolingo loves leaving things half done?

18ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

HackedAcct 4

Why make it available to all users when they can get it to the richest users out there. That is their mission isn't it?

15ReplyGive Lingot4•5 months ago

HackedAcct 4

In your last post you talk about keeping things free and open to as many people as possible yet every new feature is added exclusively to the most expensive platform. Maybe you should spend time developing a Mission for your company and finding ways you can actually achieve it.

18ReplyGive Lingot5•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

bookrabbit 22 22 20 19 19 17 16 16 16 16 14 13 13 13 13 12 12 8 5 15

Please please Kindle. I don't own a phone or a computer, don't leave me out!

17ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

[deactivated user]

I saw some screenshots of it in action a while ago, it does look fun! Hopefully there'll be a web version soon, and for some other languages. Can't wait to use it when it's fully available :)

17ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Sjodni 19 18 16 7 3

It really is, and it is great practice to try out new vocab.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

PJMCD 25 15 4

Also, will this be coming to the website? Since Immersion is being removed.

14ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

jimnicholson 23 22 14 14 2 708

Many of us suspect Immersion is going to be removed - in fact I had half expected it to happen today. Still here though.

However, unless you have personal contacts in Duolingo, I don't think you can make the claim that it is being removed.

11ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

WildSage 22 20 18 17 16 13 10 8 8 6 6 4 3 3 2 2 504

Since they haven't been willing to do anything to improve immersion they might as well remove it. What's the point if A/B testing a feature they aren't willing to maintain properly.

6ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Theron126 25 21 16 15 4 2

A lot of people still get a lot of use out of immersion even in the state it's in right now. The bots feature may be good too but I doubt it will be a substitute. I'd be very disappointed if they decide to remove immersion.

8ReplyGive Lingot3•5 months ago

jimnicholson 23 22 14 14 2 708

I agree. In fact I thought they might bury the bad news with the release of the chatbot, but it is still here. However, this user was making a specific claim, I think without a source.

Perhaps they need to see out their CNN contract?

Or perhaps they are keeping their options open?

I don't know. But neither does this user.

8ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

PJMCD 25 15 4

They have definitely stopped developing it, and they have said it isn't part of their product model. So the general assumption is that it's going to be removed at some point.

3ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

jimnicholson 23 22 14 14 2 708

Sure, I assume this also. That is why I have never used it.

But it sounded like you were making the type of claim that would require a source.

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

EpicNougat 25 10 10 8 3

...what? What?! WHAT?!?

Does that mean my Javascript bookmark will yield 404 errors because Immersion won't exist at all anymore?! And my favorite part of Duolingo will be crunched to dust?!

-2ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

PJMCD 25 15 4

Yes. That's why the A/B test has been running. It's apparently because it doesn't fit their "product model" or something.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

EpicNougat 25 10 10 8 3

My rage levels are now over 9,000.

0ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

Mathso2 25 23 11 11 10 10 10 10 10 9 8 7 6 6 6 6 4 4 3 68

Bots are amazing! Just gave it a short half-a-chat go for German and it seems great! However, as an intermediate learner of German going back to the basic chat, I find it frustrating that there are some words that aren't accepted, like when it came up with the sentence "Was isst Robert?" I went and replied "Robert isst Pizza" but wanted to add another sentence - "Mag Robert seine Pizza?" but the word "mag" was not accepted. Maybe it'd just be too hard to accept all possible responses, but it feels just a bit too structured and doesn't let us practice a wide range of sentence structures/vocab/grammar ideas etc.

Sorry if I sound like I'm ranting! I do love the feature on the whole :)

12ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

Anj199 11

Agreed. I could not even include "please" or "thank you" in certain responses because it wasn't part of the accepted answers

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Imhaef 13 12 4 2

Well, after a first try, bots are not that amazing. They are certainly a great idea. Maybe too good to be true. My experience is quite the same as yours: I missed a way to skip forward. The chats may be good for absolute beginners. But at an intermediate level everything is far too limited. In a French chat I tried to add "n'est-ce pas" (isn't it) and it was refused. That is a common figure of speech! Trying around with other possibilities felt like everything except the expected straight answers to the simple questions is not understood. I agree that the possible answers are far too restricted. Let's hope for improvements, but with the promises given at the introduction of the bots, I am quite disappointed. Sorry!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

Maclomhair 24 19 12 4 2 2 833

Looking forward to being able to use this, but is it really coming soon for other platforms/languages or "coming soon" like the character illustrations the iOS app got over a year ago and were promised to be coming soon for the web app and Android and for more languages and which we are still waiting for?

12ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

TadashiShichida 2

No point to this unless there is a version for every platform!!! Cant wait for Web Version. That would save us all.

12ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

EvgeniyChe3 14 9

Tiny cards for iPhone, Bots for iPhone... Poor people around the world don't have iPhones! Android phones are much more available for poor people. So why don't you make Android versions of your software for everyone around the World, but only for the rich northern american iPhone users? That's very strange issue...

12ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

israelpolasak 25 11 11 74

Don't forget about the characters, which a year ago they said "will be coming soon to other platforms" beside for iOS, and I am still waiting...

9ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

doombuddha 11

This is the second new app to not have an android launch beside it. The last app, the tinacards, at least it's website says an android app is coming. However, this one didn't even say that. I understand sometimes that developers are better with one ecosystem than another, but other app developers release both side-by-side or within a week of each other.

12ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

comeinandburn 15 8

why is it that these Apps always start out on iOS when the majority of users use Android!

12ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Tomer530853 17 7 4 4 2 2 3

I heard that it is much easier for app-developers to create their apps for iOS than to Android.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

EpicNougat 25 10 10 8 3

You're a beast, Luis! Great work, and thanks for continuing to provide us with wonderful, free services that we can use to learn to connect with people all over the world! :D

10ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

Ifphigenia 25 25 22 17 11 9 5 4 2 2 2 2 786

But he hasn't provided "us" with the wonderful free chatbots, he has only provided them to those who are rich enough to own an iPhone, the same people who are most likely to be able to afford to travel or to pay for teaching services which include speaking practice.

What happened to making language learning accessible to all, particularly those who have the least money and the greatest need?

0ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

EpicNougat 25 10 10 8 3

There's a certain gap that's difficult to mend, especially when your main audience must have internet access. For example, some people who are finding it difficult to make ends meet could still use Duolingo by, say, going to a public library. But if you're talking about people living in slum-like areas, I think those people have higher priorities to deal with.

Granted, there are ways they could attempt to bridge those gaps in ways that don't involve internet, but actual classes. However, Duolingo would likely have to become a for-profit organization in order to make them happen and maintain them. Or they could finally add that dadgum Donate button.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

EpicNougat 25 10 10 8 3

OK, reading other comments, I realized that you were specifically referring to the iPhone platform and not just using that example as illustration. In that case, yes, I do agree that Duolingo could spread their resources more evenly among all of their platforms.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Ifphigenia 25 25 22 17 11 9 5 4 2 2 2 2 786

I saw both your replies at the same time, so yes, I was referring to their practice of always rolling out the useful innovations on iPhone months if not years before the more widespread and cheaper options of pc (accessible, as you say, via public libraries) and android.

I do however, agree with you wholeheartedly that the very poorest people in the world remain disadvantaged whatever the platform and that they themselves have far greater problems to contend with than the availability or otherwise of chatbots.

It would seem that we are in agreement on all points. :-))

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

kdb119 14 14 11 11 11 8 6 6 2 645

I can only agree with your sentiments. Although, at one point they used to bring things to the website first - and they still only release Beta languages to the website first.

However, I suspect they (still) don't have a huge development team and either need to develop for platforms sequentially, or (as I've mentioned elsewhere) it is simply that iOS is more straightforward to develop for and thus quicker. They probably wish to see how new features pan-out and so don't wait until all versions/devices are ready before releasing. A benefit is that the Android version might be better than the iOS version once it is released, since they can learn from things they need to improve. In the case of the chat Bots, being supposedly AI-based, the delay should mean the conversations and permitted responses should improve. I know that isn't much comfort for anyone keen to use a new feature.

It also means that something goes badly wrong or is widely disliked for some reason, they only upset (for the most part) one group of users and not everyone. Also rolling out in stages means that they can be sure the servers can handle the load. Don't forget the devices are only part of new features, many things will require back-end changes as well.

I'm purely speculating, of course. What could be improved is that they could be a little more forthcoming about plans and timescales (they were happy to brief the Guardian (UK newspaper) after all, and the accuracy of their announcements.

3Give Lingot•4 months ago

kdb119 14 14 11 11 11 8 6 6 2 645

One other factor to bear in mind about the cheaper Android phones is that they are often (very) more limited as regards memory; both RAM and app data storage. Sometimes these restrictions are artificial in order not to reduce demand for more expensive models in a range. They want to encourage you to buy or upgrade to the more expensive models. Some models restrict, or won't allow moving of app data to SD cards, meaning some apps won't even install. This can make designing apps to work optimally across different Android phones across different ranges from different manufacturers very difficult, or even mean an app won't run on the more basic models. It isn't practical to test an app with every possible combination.

iOS devices don't provide SD card storage, but do generally come with larger storage memory. They generally use better components such as more reliable and responsive glass capacitance touch-screens, whereas the cheaper Android phones use plastic and/or resistance based touch-screens. All these factors add to the costs and generally make iOS devices more expensive, but there is no denying there is a 'brand' mark-up as well. Mind you, not all Android phones are cheap. A Samsung Galaxy Note 7 may literally 'burn a hole in your pocket'. ;-)

-1Give Lingot•4 months ago

DUBBY234 11 3
Very true

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

mkarabiy 24 7 7 31
Thanks, waiting for the android app.

9ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

MikeHejjas 25 9 477

This morning the Duolingo app updated to version 5.0.0 on both my iPhone 6 iPad Pro 9.7. I read the update description about the new Bots feature, which sounded intriguing. Previously, I had completed the German tree, and I keep it "golden" by performing repeated 'Practice' sessions daily. Since Bots was stated to be available for German, I wanted to try it out. First on the iPad (which I use most often for my Duolingo lessons) -- nothing -- the app currently functions the same as before. Then on the iPhone -- ahh, a change! -- a new icon is displayed at the bottom of the screen along with the other three old timers... I tried out the new feature and do like it a lot. I hope it will be enabled on the iPad ASAP and also on the website (which would be useful for people not having access to iOS devices)...

8ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago
[+] 2 hidden comments

TwoWholeWorms 20 8 7 6 6 4 3 3 2 2

The bots are a fantastic idea, but I'm going to have to put in a massive complaint about how you've actually implemented it in the iOS app.

Firstly, it hasn't been tested properly with non-stock keyboards. For example, if you're using SwiftKey the input field gets hidden behind the keyboard, which makes it unusable until you switch keyboard.

Secondly, the way the input method has been overridden makes it impossible to correct errors introduced by the input method because it's not a real text field, just something that's pretending to be one. For example, I wanted to type "¿Qué haces?" earlier, and the input mechanism kept changing it to "¿que haces?" which is incorrect. It also inserts spaces before punctuation, which is really annoying, especially if you're trying to always type things correctly including all the accents, etc.

Lastly, the "Not an accepted word" error needs to die. Just remove it. For example, your second bot on the Spanish course asked me "¿Me puedes ayudar, por favor?" to which I wanted to reply "Vale, ¿cómo puedo ayudarte?", except it won't even let me type "cómo". I can't think of a single response which isn't just "Sí" or "Vale" which doesn't include either "cómo" or "qué", so I'm very surprised that it's not accepted.

All in all, it's a good start, but it needs some serious work to make it usable. Perhaps a "Report error" button in a similar style to that which exists on the standard practice screens, allowing you to suggest valid responses?

8ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

Ontalor 22 22 16 14 13 12 6 2 3

I think the issue is that if they're coding this, they can't actually accommodate all possible answers that somebody could give and verify that those answers are correct. I was wondering how they were going to handle that, but it seems "not an accepted word" is the route they took. Basically, if the answer you're about to give isn't in their (albeit very large) list of responses, you're not even allowed to type it.

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

TwoWholeWorms 20 8 7 6 6 4 3 3 2 2

Looking at the pile of downvotes, clearly a lot of people who have never tried SwiftKey or Swype disagree with us. :p

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Ontalor 22 22 16 14 13 12 6 2 3

I mean, my comment was just on how the coding of the bots worked, sometimes the downvotes on here really are absurd.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

TwoWholeWorms 20 8 7 6 6 4 3 3 2 2

Unfortunately, the list doesn't actually seem to be that big, and it really needs a "Suggest an answer" button. As I said, it's a good start, but it needs a lot of work.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Fazac 24 22 18 13 11 77

Not accepting certain answers has put me off this quite quickly, otherwise it would be great. But i try several perfectly good answers and it won't accept them ... I give up and use the "help me answer" function because i've no idea what they are looking for, despite my answers being perfectly fine! Frustrating.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

Searlasmane 12 10 68

A 'report' button (either on the web or within the bot) where you can note problems would be good; for instance it just threw "d'accord" back at me as "not an accepted word". Peuh?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

kdb119 14 14 11 11 11 8 6 6 2 645

With my fifth chat in French, I encountered a very officious but sadly ignorant passport/customs official who insisted I needed a visa! No matter how hard I tried to explain that as a citizen of The European Union I didn't need one, he wouldn't accept it! ;-) When I told him I didn't have one, he said it was very serious and simply kept insisting I looked until I found it.

I suspect he was actually American and thus had no idea of geography. When I tried to say I came from Le Royume-Uni, he insisted I meant Lesoto! When I tried Le Grande-Bretagne, he still insisted on Lesoto! I tried Royume-Uni and was told I meant Romanie. Tried l'Angleterre, nothing doing. Tried Angleterre but was told he only knew of Angola. Finally he accepted Grande-Bretagne, but still insisted upon a visa. Brexit hasn't happened, yet!

Anyone have the number of Le Cour de justice de l'Union européenne?

He also refused polite forms of address, not allowing me to add monsieur to the end of sentences.

8ReplyGive Lingot5•5 months ago

Frosch0066 20 13 10 3

I also did that one and it came up with all sorts of countries, like Laos, until it finally accepted 'Allemagne'. When I declined to have my picture taken, a mean looking 'agent' with sunglasses appeared to take me away. Lesson learned: Don't mess with French customs officers.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Bruno_de_Brito 18 14 11 9 8 7 6 4 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 1

When I read "Other languages are coming soon, and so are other platforms." my head began to ache hahahahahha..... Android waiting for you to come :)

8ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

PJMCD 25 15 4

Is this basically Immersion's replacement? Or is there something else in the pipeline? O.O

7ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

PianoMaja 14 4

Sorry, but what's Immersion? I hear of it for the first time here.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

PJMCD 25 15 4

On Duolingo, it is something which allows you to translate documents into or from your language. I don't believe they have it for Norwegian, but there is I believe a way to get around that. Ask this person <http://www.duolingo.com/Tattamin>

2ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

PianoMaja 14 4

Thank you! :) I understand now.

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Veronicatheboss 4
i didn't know that Duolingo taught Norwegian. Cool!!! :D

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

PianoMaja 14 4
It does, and it's quite amazing! You should try it if you have the wish to. :)

3Give Lingot•5 months ago

JosieSkivington 14 9 9 8 5
It is surrounding yourself by the language that you are learning; reading foreign text, translating, changing the audio on films and so on.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

-ThatFrenchGuy- 8
Sounds great! Can't wait for an Android version!!

7ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

KyleeWalsh1 4
Can't wait for android

7ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Veronicatheboss 4
agreed!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

SeptimusBones 18 17 16 16 15 14 13 9 8 8 6 2 2 3
This sounds amazing, looking forward to it. Simultaneously though, the web version should've been the number one priority, not iOS.

7ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

nguyennngocthuy123 7
can't wait for the web version

7ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

WhitestOwlet 10 8
Are you planning to make an online [web] version? We currently don't have any Apple products [iPhone, iPad, ect;] and I'd love to try this out [I don't get much practice with friends :(]

7ReplyGive Lingot4•5 months ago

heathermagoo 25 25 23 17 13 11 11 10 9 180

Mimics day-to-day immersion without the trauma. Terrific resource. Bien hecho, Duo. As you can see all the world is clamoring for the desktop, android, windows phone, even Kindle versions and no wonder!!! Everyone will benefit from this effort as it evolves.

7ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

KrazyKaderKat 25 11 9 4

Are the Duolingo Bots gonna be a feature to Duolingo?? Or will they be part of the language trees?

Can't wait for the Android version!

6ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

Hi Luis!

Thx for the official announcement!

Could this sticky message be (translated and) posted(*) in all other "main" forums (=of all languages)? And not only on the English forum.

I imagine the entire community would like to have such important news. ;) And even in the case that it's only available to English speakers (at the moment?): non English speaker users would be happy to be informed too.

Thx by advance!

(*) in a sticky way on each general forum.

6ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Lou772780 25 346

At this point it is very clear that non i-phone users really want the Bots on other mobil devices and everyone seems to want them on laptops. So, could we start a new discussion thread on how to use the Bots and issues that we find when using the Bots. That should help Duo improve them faster and make versions for other devices even better when they are rolled out.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

SusanBernard 19 55

An Android version for Italian pretty please with sugar on top!

4ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

orde90 11 11 10 9 5 5 2

I tried the feature and it's very good but when I heard that it was an A.I. I expected something like Siri or Google Assistant which you can talk to freely. This is somewhat restricted and it doesn't allow you to write something other than the already defined phrases. Actually this is better in terms of learning since it guides you very well during the chat so you don't waste time by writing something irrelevant. It also says the A.I. gets smarter as you talk to it more, so I wonder how it is possible since it doesn't allow you to write something different than what you are given. Sometimes it asks what my favourite color is or if I have a pet. Is it the only way the A.I. gets improved? And will there be any change about how the A.I. works in the future?

Edit: I just found this article and it gives answers to all my questions above
<https://www.theguardian.com/technology/2016/oct/06/duolingo-chatbots-learning-language>

4ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago
[+] 3 hidden comments

solojones1138 15 8 7

87% of people in the world (and about 65% of people in America, where Duolingo is based) own Android phones. By limiting this to Apple, you are limiting this fantastic free tool to a small percentage of people. And probably the people who need it least, as Apple only makes expensive phones for rich people (who can afford paid language learning), whereas there are much cheaper Android phones.

I am extremely disappointed in this move by Duolingo. The company's mission is supposed to be to make language learning free and accessible to a huge group of people. Instead, this is focusing on the small percentage of people in the world who can afford (or even want to use) the world's most expensive mobile platform.

Also, a web version would be much better for conversations, as typing is much more natural on a computer. Not only that, but it would be available then to people who can't afford a mobile device, but might be able to go to a library to use a computer.

Everything about your approach to the dissemination of these bots is antithetical to your company mission. I am very disappointed in this, and hope that you rectify it very quickly.

4ReplyGive Lingot2•3 months ago

LuciusVoreniusX 25 15 9 8 2 334

Just before I gave you a Lingot on that I got the dialog box asking me "are you sure you love this comment so much that you want to give away a Lingot"? Let me put it this way; I don't think I have read any comment, in any group, that I feel more entirely in agreement with than this one. Every nail, hit squarely on the head.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

berberu 11 173

I spent 2 lingots but you deserved yours back, as you started the energy exchange.

You know the communication of the entities is more important than the entities themselves. Think how relevant are the strings the body of a guitar without the vibrations/exchange that can create a beautiful music/message.

Now - to accelerate the vibrations. If Esperanto is the easiest to create according to Google Translate, why not create Esperanto chatbot that can aid the most energetic Egalitarian learners (that focus on the main purpose of an effective communication language)?
<http://googletranslate.blogspot.com/2012/02/tutmonda-helplingvo-por-ciu-j-homoj.html>

Native languages usually have their concentrated areas. I expect that Esperanto would be native to ChatBots as the most effective communication language. Trying to teach them more difficult languages reduces their Self Esteem - we want stronger companions.

Gaja.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TRULYgrateful 16 159
[deleted]

0Give Lingot•3 months ago

LuciusVoreniusX 25 15 9 8 2 334

You do know that by constantly catering to a small minority of users with a lot of money, they're both contradicting their own mission statement (as solojones said) AND running the risk that some other site with less exclusive tastes will come along and suck the user base out of them, right? Or does being free put them beyond reproach for making bad decisions?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TRULYgrateful 16 159
[deleted]

0Give Lingot•3 months ago

LuciusVoreniusX 25 15 9 8 2 334

The violins are playing, the audience is crying, and nobody is aware that on the internet anyone can tell any story they want. Such as stories about getting their multi hundred dollar iPhone for free by "earning credit with their phone company" while living in a shoe with a room full of orphans while the cupboard was bare. (An option that I'm SURE is available to everyone on the planet. I do wonder how someone who "doesn't have any money" can afford their telco network access bills, but we'll set that one aside for the moment.) Presumably the company was so grateful for you stinking up this thread by posting the same thought-free platitude "you know this is FREE, right" about a dozen times in 10 minutes that they delivered one to you. Or perhaps they admired your insight in saying "they (Android) don't do free. IOS does". Yes. An open source operating system (meaning that there IS no "they" other than "anyone on the planet who can open a text editor and write code") "is greedy for money" according to you, while Apple, the wealthiest company on the planet, is all about giving away phones to phone companies so that they can in turn charitably "give" them to "impoverished" people such as yourself. I suppose it's possible that you didn't actually read SoloJones' comments which explain why this is a bad decision rather well, or perhaps you did read them and there is a good and valid reason why you agreed with the comment "Sounding stupid online is better than sounding stupid in person, i guess". But I think it's more likely that you are just trolling.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

somelauw 12 12 10 10 9 6 5 5 5 5 3 32

I don't have an iPhone but I'm curious what this feature will be like. Is there a youtube video yet of someone giving a demonstration?

3ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

Lou772780 25 346

I have an I-phone and immediately started trying the Bot. Here are some initial reactions, in no particular order order of importance: 1) Great concept. There is a lot more that can be done with Bots over time. 2) The present Bots give you initial conversations. Sort of ice breakers so that you might feel a bit more comfortable early in the conversation. 3) If you are well into the Duo Tree, you can rack up XPs a lot faster with Bots than with lessons or the regular practice session. You get no XPs for a minimal response (like responding with Hola to Hola from the little Bot person), 1XP for a good answer and 2XPs for a great answer. 4) Unfortunately, you don't get to see what the Bot would consider great answers, unless you ask for help with your response. To work around this, you can run through a Bot conversation doing the best you can without asking for help, and then repeat it, clicking on "help" to see what Duo has as acceptable responses. It is pretty clear which responses are better. You won't get any XPs when you ask for help but you might expand the variety in your speaking (and understanding). 5) The Bot speaks to you and gives you text. Unfortunately it only takes typed responses from you. Hopefully a voice recognition capability will become available soon. It is one thing to intellectually know what to say and another to actually get it out of your mouth. 5) There are a limited number of Bots. I completed all that I could find in the first two days. 6) Like other aspects of Duo, the Bots want you to stay fairly close to the prompts from the little people you are communicating with. If you get a little too elaborate in your response, you get a "word not accepted" message. On the other hand if you have typed in a response that the Bot will accept, the "Send" button will be highlighted (In that case you will see whether you got zero, one or two XPs for your response. 7) The present Bot conversations are pretty basic but much better than what you see in phrase books because the Bots put things in context. 8) It would be great if Duo could adapt the Bot conversations to your level, or your fluency or how far you have progressed on the tree. For now, you are not going to get much practice with things like verb tenses, or compound sentences (pero or y rarely work). Bots do use and accept pronouns connected to verbs. 8) The Bots are somewhat addictive. Expect to spend a fair amount of time when you start on them.

Overall, this approach has huge potential in building confidence so that we are more comfortable starting conversations with native speakers. I agree with all the comments on getting the Bots on laptops and other systems as soon as possible.

3ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

kdb119 14 14 11 11 11 8 6 6 2 645

Great write-up. Duolingo would have done well to have included something similar in their announcement! Along with a note that it only (currently) works with iPhone.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

javatete 23 502

I'm also very sad they gave up on the "pairing users" possibility. I think it would be very useful for people, especially after they work through half or more of the tree.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

dwduo 21 9 2 567

Truly exciting news, congratulations. I will await Android and/or Web.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

celebrim 25 11 11 9 5 5 2 1149

Duolingo needs to stop developing only for iOS first. BOTH Android and iOS at the same time please!

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

WmEsq77 10

Great idea! iPhone, iPhone, iPhone! Android users greatly outnumber (about one billion +- to 470 million iPhone users) - so when does Android get to have access to this great idea? Please let me know and thanks.

Wm.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Thyago31 3

Why Duolingo do not prioritize Android users?

I live in Brazil, an emergent country, and in my country only 3% of the users use iPhones because it's very expensive and we don't have much brazilian apps to the iOS plataform. Only rich country populations (like USA and Japan) use Iphone, the rest of the world uses Android!

Duolingo, please, don't forget the Latin America, the Africa, the East Europe and the Asia users! We don't have much money to buy an iPhone!

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

morganrc115 9

Has anybody thought of releasing a web version yet? Just for us who don't have any phones, or maybe bringing it on an Android version?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Narell1 18 3 4

Bring on the Italian please ;)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Mariannarelli 23 7 4 3

Yes, please. Italian!!!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

CatherinGregory 25 17 16 6 1146

Just tried the french bot ... Thanks! That was a meaningful experience. Can't wait for the Italian bot!

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

russtang 25 14 11 9 7 6 6 5 5 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2

EMULATORS? Does anyone know if there is a way to get some kind of iphone IOS emulator so I can try this on my pc? I really want to try the bots like right now

2ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

msameet 22 10 6 6 6 4

And you disappoint again by not releasing a Web version or an Andriod version. Really iOS is not the most used platform in the world!! Does the Duolingo team have specific bias against people using Andriod, or more specifically people not using iOS devices?

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Andreas1028 13 2

yes, i agree. we need the web version soon guys! bots is such a great idea!

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

lilweisel 14 5

Will there be a web version?

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

BartHumphries 15 5 3

There are over 3 million Duolingo Android reviews. There's barely an eighth of a million iPhone reviews. There are x24 more Android reviews. Duolingo, WTF? Why are you primarily developing an iPhone app instead of an android app?

2ReplyGive Lingot3•4 months ago

WillhartMo 16

Why in the world would you premier this feature to a platform that struggles to maintain 10% market share?

2ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

TwilightStarz 9 5

we really need the web version of this

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

MonsieurGP 22 275

What's up with the iPhone platform getting everything first? And then the long lad to Android?? It's like a 5:1 ratio. Not feeling the love here "Mr. Owl".

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

LauraWiigh 7

come on Android app. isn't android by far the most used in the world? Far outpacing apple?

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

RPD85 11 138

Why is there no web version? I do not use apple products, so although the idea seems great, it is useless to me and potentially many other PC user.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

icemgonewrong56 7 3

i wish i could use this for esperanto

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 240

That would be good for my mother & boyfriend, who are both beginners at the language. Other languages are supposed to be coming after Spanish, German, and French, so I guess we only have to wait.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

berberu 11 173

Esperanto should be the easiest to create (according to Google Translate team). It should come soon.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TortugaCielo 25 13

Grateful that things are still growing. Looking forward to Android. Will tell hubby about the iPhone. He'll love it!

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

margaret790869 15 3

The bots have quickly become my favorite way to practice French. Thank you so much for the upgrade!

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

HenryCutter 17 3 11

can;t wait for italian

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Mariannarelli 23 7 4 3

Italian! Italian! Italian! Please.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

SMO617 11

This is so great! Any updates on when Italian might be available? I can't wait!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Mariannarelli 23 7 4 3
Me, too. Italiano!!!

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

martin887568 5 5 2 2 2 2
Si, perfavore, Italiano

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

DexX 21 6 2 59
Really enjoyed the starter German conversations on my iPad, and looking forward to the feature coming to browser and Android. Thanks for your hard work!

2ReplyGive Lingot5•3 months ago

HotSauce409 2
Do you think there will ever be Duolingo bots on the computer?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 240
I really don't know. There still is no Tinycards or even the characters that have been around for much longer for iOS, I believe, so I'm not holding out a lot of hope. It might happen someday (not even sure of that), but I don't think it will be soon.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TwilightStarz 9 5
Leave a like ppl if u want it on the web

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

FrankySka 25 23 16 14 14 10 8 1344
YOU GUYS ROCK!

1ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

J_Calenmiriel 9
OH MY GOSH! This is totally what I've been needing! I don't have many chances to use my German anyway, and when/if I do, I'm so nervous! This seems like it will be AMAZING! I don't have any apple devices though, so I'll keep waiting for the Android &/or PC version (along with TinyCards) :P -JCal

1ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

AndrewMarquardt 9 8
I can't wait until this is available for PC! I would download the app, but for some reason, even after deleting ALL my apps, and MANY photos, I don't have enough room. It might be because I don't have an sd card though...

1ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

Yuri768370 15 406

I Can't wait for the Android version! Let's go Skynet!

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

PamSmith5 23 33

Sounds great. Await the android version with suspense

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

JlioGomes1 21 14 12 11 6 4 2

Can't wait for Windows version, though. Please!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

GabiRMoore 16 3 2

Are they going to do something for the computer/web?

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Veronicatheboss 4

hopefully!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

[deactivated user]

Android and Russian please!!! :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Italian2thecore 13 6

So the Duolingo Bots are basically translating programs?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Ifphigenia 25 25 22 17 11 9 5 4 2 2 2 2 786

Recaptcha reborn ?

Does this mean that instead of immersion which was/is very useful we will now be providing native speakers voices as well as text? If so, shouldn't we be consulted before we are used to act as voice-overs?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

SMCG9 25 12 348

I'm with requests for Android version, puhleez?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

freddielamby 4

I feel like I have been born again. My languages have really touched me. Thank you Duolingo.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Alex_Lone_Alone 15 10 9 6 2

Any plans about web and android version? :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

AnaPaulaLelis 13 7 7 6 2 2

I really want it, please make a web version with more language options, especially the ones it's hard to try people to talk to, like Esperanto.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 240

As for Esperanto, are you aware of the Telegram community? It's quite large, with the biggest group having currently 1025 members, and very active as well. Link

There's also several other groups, such as a Voçmesaêjo—where you can speak by sending voice messages, so it's not just chatting—and many others.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

AnaPaulaLelis 13 7 7 6 2 2

oh nice, thank you! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

AmyWeishei 10

what about android app? Will it be available on it?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 240

Yes, they have stated they are working on it.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Uncoolioca 12 2

Is Italian going to be one of the upcoming languages including bots?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ElizabethS746001 16 14 11 10 9 6 179

I do appreciate your hard work. For being a free app and service, this is outstanding. You do not see this kind of excellence and dedication on most paid language apps. Thank you so much

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

bcarrs 20

So exciting! Yay! Can't wait to use them!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

HarshitRaj9 3

Can't wait for this :):)

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

EnderQueen85 6

Some people have different learning strategies, and some learn differently. Some may be visual, some may be hearing, and some may have to do the work to actually learn something. So it is nice for all three learning styles to be able to get this app and talk to a bot. Yes, it has its disadvantages, but it has its advantages too! Embrace those instead of the others.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

kdb119 14 14 11 11 11 8 6 6 2 645

To fellow iPad owners/users who, like me, have been awaiting the arrival of Bots on their favoured device; an update is now in the App Store which finally includes this functionality. Yippee!!! :-)
Apologies to Android owners/users. I'm sure all iOS device owners hope Bots arrive for your favoured devices soon.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Suzanne805808 12 8

Super excited for this! Can't wait for it to be added to Android in Spanish!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

jmboc 19 8 54

Awaiting the Android platform!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

didi101224 8

Sounds great! On a different topic, since my mother tongue is French and I am learning Italian, do you have or are you planning to have French to Italian? It converts so much better than English to Italian.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

DukeWellz 25 15 2 953

Thank you for your extreme dedication to making the learning of languages both fun and successful! Chapeau!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Exodus8 11 11 7

when will the android version be on ? :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ctmorris1999 15 5 5

Do you ever think it will be possible to have more freely developing conversations. Like lets say the bot says "What's your favorite season?" and you want to say "Fall because I love the leaves," but Duolingo only allow you to say "fall" and no more. Will it be possible for the bot to respond to thought provoking conversation, maybe like Cleverbot.

Also, could it be possible in the future to maybe have the Duolingo conversations, yet with other humans and you can have conversations with each other. You could earn XP from every 5 words you use in a desired target language, and people from the same level will be matched together. Also to keep things appropriate, people can report things such as people giving away personal information or using inappropriate language. I think this would provide the most candid practice for any language.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

SimonJacks5 11 8 7 6

I use web version often, but Android most often. I hope this isn't anything to do with Apple funding which could then lead to iOS only!??

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

lksailboat 11

can't wait for Italian bots!!! they seem really helpful

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

KaptianKaos8 13 8 7 7 17

This is great! I hope Italian is added soon!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Alek143979 12 3 2 55

Web version would be nice

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

msameet 22 10 6 6 6 4

It would be really nice to know what you mean by "soon". Tiny cards for iOS has been around for long. I used the bots on my iPad. They are awesome! addictive! and have a lot more teaching value!! We have to have them for the Andriod. Not having them for Android means you are being completely unfair to the 2/3 of your users. You could argue that Andriod platform is fragmented (I dont think so, but the argument could be valid), what about the web-version. That should not be a problem. Not having bots for any other platform is just wrong!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

penglase 8

From what I understand an iOS version is easier to deploy than Android, not sure how you can see it as "unfair" given that it is a free program, and you are free to buy or borrow an iPhone until they have navigated the Android waters.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

msameet 22 10 6 6 6 4

I agree with you on the iOS version is easy to deploy. But I do not agree on "free to buy or borrow" point. This is free program. That is true. It is upto them to treat all users as equal. I maintain that if you are going to make something free for everyone, then there should be no "walled garden" that restricts you from doing something because you cannot afford some expensive piece of technology. I am pretty sure it is not more difficult to deploy for web than to deploy for iOS.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

TRULYgrateful 16 159

thank you I appreciate and am grateful for all your help.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

jeremyleeb 22 359

When will I see something on Android?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

WatrousRoxanna 17 12 3

I absolutely love the bots! This was such a fantastic idea. They really help me get a feel for practicing the language. Well done!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

QueenKhadijah999 7

Can't wait for Android and Web versions, C'mon Duo!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Jackw0565 6 3

Please add the robots to the Google Play store. Apple is becoming out of fasion, and more people, (like me) are using Android. "Be together, not the same."

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

emmajoe365 2

man this amazing!! great job!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

[deactivated user]

cool

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Snakelog 5 3
awsome

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

jmiguelasturias 15 10
Italian for Android!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

tammythree 20 238
I missed this announcement and discovered this on my Ipad by accident. I love it. It really feels like I'm having a conversation. Keep up the good work Duo!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

WolframOmega 13 8 2
Still waiting for customizable Duo owls :p I gotta have some use for all these lingots.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

theLydia 15 2
Enjoying the Bots, have done all of them already, please create more.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

RoadRdr 25 651
I'm enjoying the bots a lot. They are challenging me to compose a sentence versus recalling a sentence. and its nice to have some help if needed. I assume there are a limited number of them so far, at least in German. The Bots have helped to revitalize my desire to return each day. Well done.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

TinyKitties 25 20 3 1180
Thank you for the bots!! Just tried them out on my husband's iPhone. It was lots of fun. Can't wait until they come out for Android. :) Duolingo is the best!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

Sam81198 13 9
Any idea about when Bots might be available for Polish?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ArianaMoni 9 2 2 2
The bots are cool and help while learning a language in the app

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ArianaMoni 9 2 2 2

The bots are great for helping you talk in the course you are learning.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ShelbyMcC 5

Brilliant! This will be really helpful to me, because I'm completely what you described up there. I get embarrassed so easily practising with a fluent speaker in case I mess up! Eagerly awaiting the release of the bots on android and web! Thanks so much :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

kaydelaney 14 8 8 6 2

PLEASE soon make an android version! Don't leave us in the dark! I can benefit from this greatly!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

neto.tms 13 12 12 9 6 5 4 3 9

Great idea! Waiting for an android and web version, thanks.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

K.McG13 8 5 2

Is there an estimated date for an Italian Bots release?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

LaurenLame 12 8 2

I'm dying for the Italian version! :) The French is fantastic!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Bcturner59 25 4 809

I love these new language bots. Sometimes I just can't figure out what the right answer is. But that's part of the learning. Rather do this in front of the bots then in front of a real person !

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

theovdhd 11 9 5 2

can't wait for Android! :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Simon_Baumann 17 11 9 4 2 2

So I think this is a really great idea, and I really appreciate all the features Duolingo offers for us users for free. But still, I am kinda disappointed that iPhone version of Duolingo seems so privileged. They have got the bots and tinycards, while Android and the web version do not have both features. And I just wonder why? Cos only the minority of users, do use Apple? But the web version, for example, is accessible to everyone. So why not publish it first for the web version? I just don't get it, but this comment is not meant to disregard all the great features Duolingo offers for free.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

TRULYgrateful 16 159
ok thank you. I appreciate your help.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

primhypn0 11 6 4 3 3 2 2
Spectacular, will benefit my learning.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

cassiepintal28 8 7
The bots have been such a fantastic addition to the app! I have used Duolingo for years, but have had a new surge to talk about it with friends now that this new feature is available. It's actually what got me on the web version to see if there are other features, and there are! I really like the web version too. Loving the progress, Duolingo, Thank you!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

adniki77 3
I can't wait for the android version!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

brkcash5 9
Great, another service I can't use since I'm an android user. I only sound so salty because this is obviously such a great idea, that I want to use it! Keep going Duolingo, you're chaaanging the wooooorlllddd.
and gimme android support already.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

oreodog2342 3
ANDROID, ANDROID plz

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

QUADRIADEB 6
Super cool!! can't wait to get the app on my android mobile

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

KayleighDa15 13 2
When will the bots be available on android?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

EmilWisekal 21 5 408
I am very happy that I have used the new "bots". They are quite interesting and beneficial. Where else can I get personalized German language practice like this? Nowhere else. -- I used the bots on my iPod. (The iPod is an iPhone without telephone service.) However, I carry an Android phone with me everywhere, so I do hope that Duolingo introduces bots for Android soon.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

niamhwitch 16 11 776

This is excellent! Can't wait to see this on Android and for Irish. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

8nicholas8 11 1

Hopefully this will be available for lesser spoken languages like what I study e.g. Esperanto.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

tjs8023 5 1

Android Version!!!!!!!1 Please

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

goanna9 7 3

Please add Italian I love the idea of the bots

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

ultraprimed 6 2

Android and web versions should come first!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

varedodroja 15 4

I a beginner italian adult-student. In order to amplify my once a week class I am using Duolingo. Today i just decide to write a short daily journal, in italian, to enhance my learning. I would love to send my diary to your italian bot

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

suec862843 6

To Heidi409157: I just started learning French but once I feel comfortable with French, I would like to start learning Italian. If you could explain what you are writing in your journal to enhance learning a new language, I would appreciate any details. Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

varedodroja 15 4

I call it "Caro Diario" (that is Italian for Dear Diary). I use a word document and turn on track changes function. I write a few of my day's activities. such as "Today is Thursday and it is raining. I went for a 1.5 miles walk with my dog". My italian vocab is little since I am new, so my journal (or Dear Diary) entries are simplistic, but I figured it is a good practice lesson. I will send my journal (or "Dear Diary) to my Italian teacher and have her correct my grammar. But it would be great if I could send my diary to the Duolingo bot (when they have the Italian bot available), and have the bot correct my grammar.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Syls2 9

Android, pleaaaaaseee ! :P :

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

marcelo.walter 14

Android version, please?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

tiagosarmento 22 14 14 10 5 2 1

please guys fix the IOS features duolingo, comments in the app, see the new words if singular or plural we IOS Users need features like android or webversion.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Cathy792388 5 4

Android version! Alright!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

MarkSameh95 21 11 7 7 2 1

waiting for the android version !!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

alexp10801 7 6

Can't wait for when this comes out on Android and Windows Phone!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Yosef5269 13

Please make it available for Franch and on the android platform

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Pititnatole 20 13 8 6 5

Just a little question: When will the bots be released from other languages such as French? I can't wait :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

estherPuebla 3

u can do french on here cool

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Pititnatole 20 13 8 6 5

No, I mean, bots for French speakers, not for French learners :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

estherPuebla 3

cool also cool picture

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Koocper 10 9 5 5

Can't wait for both Russian bots and the android version :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

avirodoinho 12

when is the android version coming out?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

uk2rajesh 15

thank you very much for duolingo it's very good, is there any android version of it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

zyulguk 10 6 5

when is it coming to android and web?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Th3mida 9

How about the web version for Italians also ? The idea is great but should be also for Android and Web available...can't wait!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Patricia867952 18 8 4 95

Please include android and web versions for Italian!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Devan_NC 8

Awesome, I want the Norwegian one for android

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

ErikaAnder9 19 7 6 293

I really like the Bots (even though the vocabulary constraints are frustrating at times). Please make more!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JohnSurpyc 8

Even though its a small group, Esperanto would really benefit from this due to there not being many fluent peoples in one concentrated area.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

rubemgcfa67 13 11

Agree. Smaller groups are the ones that need it the most.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ToniSoward 21 264

sounds fantastic! and web and android versions... and web and android versions of tiny cards. i can't believe i have stuck with this daily for almost six months. sometimes i do get bored and don't want to practice, though. new formats of learning sound very exciting.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Rhabarberbarbara 23 19 18 16 9 556

Is there any chance of getting a christmas android present?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

rubemgcfa67 13 11

This is not just about extroverts and introverts, rich and poor... Bots will be an extremely important learning means to those interested in more - so to say - exotic or less universal languages. Lots of English, German and Spanish people around to speak and train your language skills with with, but what about Turkish, Romanian, Esperanto and similar?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 240

I understand your question was more general than this, but if you or anyone else reading is looking for Esperanto practice partners, either for typing or for actual talking by voice, there is a very large and active community on Telegram to be found here.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

rubemgcfa67 13 11

Wow!! Will check it out. Thank you for the hint!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ScubaDennis 3

That sounds really good, I hope the Android version is comming soon :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

JugeMcJugePants 13

I love this idea! Please make this feature for the website!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

JugeMcJugePants 13

Please make it for Italian! I can't do it even on mobile :(

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

YGlen 25 1416

Absolutely brilliant Duolingo Team! I, for one, welcome our new Duolingo Bot overlords!

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

EricaHarley 11

You make it sound super creepy.

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

YGlen 25 1416

Sorry about that! It's not at all creepy. Super enjoyable ... somewhat like texting with a good friend, though using the speech to text function is an even better experience.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

[+] 2 hidden comments

Fendith 4

Sounds awesome. Hope soon for android and in Greek

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Anomaly90 9

Web version please

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Lighty691 7 2

Hopefully! Would love this too

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Shimerab 15 84

It seems most of you have phones that do a little bit of everything. Since my phone has none of those features and since I couldn't read them if they did, I want these apps for my nice big screen computer where I can read and hear better. I don't even have messaging on my phone and don't intend to get it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Maluferrari 24 19 17 11 9 8 41

android please!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

SR_7 8 2 2

Please!!! Can we have the web version?? Duolingo is just AMAZING!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

QueenAbby17 9 4

OMG! I'm sooo excited...an android version please!

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

mpineda18 17 17

Need the Android Version please

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Devin53310 11 5 5

when will it come out on google/ android ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

kdb119 14 14 11 11 11 8 6 6 2 645

The conversation 'Getting Around' is a little frustrating. It currently rejects many of the most correct words and phrases in answers.

More generally, I'm not sure how the 'AI'/Neural Network can learn if (words within) phrases cannot be typed because preceding words needed to construct the sentence are rejected and so the later words cannot be entered, so that makes conversations a bit artificial. Also, many of the answers seem to reject pronouns and instead require explicit repetition of parts of the question. Yet in other questions it strongly resists repeating from the question.

Another annoyance, is when it appears to reject everything sensible, so one has no option but to tap 'Help me reply' to see exactly where it wants to head, it suggests an answer, which if you choose it, then states, 'A better answer would be...'!

In common with the other conversations, it won't accept 'autobus' for a bus.

It really does still require a 'report a problem' feature.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

airelibre 24 21 21 19 13 13 11

Apparently the system logs what you type, even what you don't or can't submit, so if enough people want to type a certain response it will be logged.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

kdb119 14 14 11 11 11 8 6 6 2 645

I have found it (currently) also frequently rejects various adverbs such as 'aussi', 'également' and 'très' when they would be appropriate. But, as you say, these should become accepted by the system if sufficient people respond similarly.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago
[+] 3 hidden comments

DenisBouch7 22 176
Sounds great! When do you expect an android version?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

barnrat 20 159
Oh I would love this. I am living in Mexico and it is soooooo difficult to get people to talk to you in Spanish because the whole world wants a native English speaker to speak English with, even if they only know one word or even no words of English!!! I have resorted to telling people (in Spanish) that I am German and do not speak English. Fortunately I am far enough along and have gathered some confidence in speaking Spanish that I can pull this off. I do have an Android though that works on wifi down here in Mexico so I too am eagerly awaiting the Duolingo Android App for the Duolingo Bots!!!!!! Please be soon!!! Great idea!!! Especially for native English speakers who I feel are under tremendous pressure from almost the entire world that wants to learn English. I am no expert but I don't know if there is anywhere a native English person can go to learn another language without being ACCOSTED by someone who is a non- native English speaker who wants to learn English. This happened to us in China learning Mandarin and now here in Mexico. End of rant.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

IsaacMarru3 7
Nether can I wait for the android version ether

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Ezzieboss 10 2
When will android be out

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ArsalanJun 10 9 171
BOTS FOR ANDROID PLEASE!!!!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Joe101516 19 68
I'm enjoying the bots, they have a lot of potential. I smile when I see a message from one of them pop up on my screen like a text message. They're very adorable, that's for sure. The limitations on my responses can be a bit frustrating, but I understand that it's new, so it will take some time for the algorithm to become more flexible with the conversation. Thanks for everything, Duolingo team. Keep it up!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Martha288927 15 74

Bring it to the web and to Android as quickly as possible. Thanks!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Gauri_x 6

it sounds pretty cool, but need a Microsoft and Android version.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Nicolas286097 16 15 8 60

please make it happen fast for the spanish speakers!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

happy2bits 14 4 282

There is a bug with the bots. I leveled up while doing it and it never registered on my account. Missed out on the gems and there is no record on in my progress history of leveling up :/ Other than that I think they are pretty good!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

AliciaHiver 16 4 4

Can one speak with the bot, or only give written answers?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

adam.tobey 14 8

You can speak with them if you utilize the microphone on the keyboard.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ElizabethS746001 16 14 11 10 9 6 179

I just found this today for the French learning on my iPhone. Love it!!!! So very pleased with what I have tried so far.

And I realized in the first conversation, I fully understood what they were saying quickly and what the program was asking for my response.

Admittedly French is very easy to learn, of all the languages I have been studying through Duolingo. Can't wait! I know it will be far down the line, for the Irish, Welsh and Hebrew. Especially the Irish. But so happy with Duolingo program.

Bravo Zulu all at the Duolingo team

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

EnderQueen85 6

I agree, thank you ElizabethS746001!!! I am learning French too!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Dezaray408430 9

Quiero bots para Android!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

kariew57 19 3

Love them, only wish they would understand more. I KNOW I am answering correctly sometimes and they won't accept my answer.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

joluas 21 218

Well it didn't last really long. I used the bots since they appeared and by now there are no new conversations appearing. It was not completely an "open word" of answers but it was a fun twist to a daily activity that I've been doing for a long time. The 20 conversations to learn German from English were fairly simple but it certainly feels restricted in some of them. The one about clothing and the painting were the ones where you could experiment the most.

I could expect more conversations in the future but for now it doesn't seem possible.

Thanks Duolingo, it is great to practice with you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

zemonkey 14 11 9 6 6 2 2 5

yep, interesting at first but ran out of convos.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Dianne808464 22 308

conversing with the bots is great, but what they allow in response seems quite limited. If I try to respond in a more complete way-eg-phrase or sentence, they will not accept it-just the very basics.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

theLydia 15 2

I agree. It would be great if this could be improved further but in general the Bots are great.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

jamieedwards 13 2

Web and/or Android s'il vous plait!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

anm00l 3

such a good platform for people who love learning new languages . it is helping me alot in learning german .

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Morganblue25 3 3

I am definitely getting the app to do my german!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

darkslayer21 7

is it going on the iPad

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ayePete 24 12 8 7 6 5 3 3

Great! :D Still waiting for the TinyCards for Android, though. Why is it taking so long?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

05TR1CH 6

We need a web version and some for other languages like dutch.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

psychofangirl37 6

Whens the web version coming?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Neuropagan 12

So instead of it going to rich people that travel abroad it's for rich people that buy the latest greatest iphone. really nice let me know when android version comes out.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

tom.harlan 25 9

Bots are really fun. Great addition to the learning format.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

chris294126 14 1

iPhone? Bah. We need android and web-bots!! Your site is terrific. I heard that it was created by a Guatemalan. I am an American who has spent most of my time in Guatemala for the past three years.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

kavonjr13 7

please make it on web. want to learn as fast as possible .

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

gmsantos00 11 5

J'ai essayé cette actualisation et je l'aime beaucoup. C'est un façon de pratiquer une conversation avec une autre personne imaginaire en français, allemand, espagnol... Je pense que je vais progresser beaucoup avec les Bots de Duolingo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

VietAnhHA 10 2

Bonjour GonzaloMar, avec quel cursus Espagnol as-tu testé le Bots? J'apprends l'espagnol via le français sur iOS et je n'ai pas trouvé cette fonctionnalité dans mon application qui est pourtant à jour :{.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

gmsantos00 11 5

c'est dans l'application de duolingo de mon iphone. on peut faire les bots seulement si on a l'application pour les cellulaires ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

SaptarshiM11 11

When will the mac version come out?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

johnnythedog 12 7

It's really fun! at first I was super scary to try, but now I love it! DO we have access using a desktop or is only for mobile?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Samie163348 7

Can there be a chromebook version? I am in 8th grade and learning some french to advance in highschool, but I can take my lessons/courses on my school-issued chromebook. Please update for chromebook!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

MohammadMu907022 25 25 261

Great ! Awesome!! I'm Enjoying it on my iPad though I observe sudden crashes since I started using DUOLINGO BOTS. Pray when do we expect ARABIC from ENGLISH ? I would like to take on this before tackling CHINESE from ENGLISH.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ElizabethKrispin 25 9 226

That sounds wonderful! Thank you!!!!

A question for you...

Is there any chance that Latin will be added as a language to be learned in your collection of languages? I understand that so many European languages are based upon Latin. I have always wanted to learn it.

if it is not currently in the plans to add Latin as a language, could you please consider it?

i would hope that there are many people out here who would be interested in learning it and who also would benefit from the experience!!!!

Thank you SSSSSsoOOOOOOooooo much for inventing this app. It has been a material positive 'good' in my life and in the lives of so many people around the world.

In this day and age, when negative, polarizing forces seem to be on the uptick around the world, I am hearten to know that people like you, and your many many many colleagues, followers and admirers are laboring quietly to make this a better world.

Many, many thanks!
Danke vielmals!

Elizabeth Krispin

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Kimasuzana 13 10 7
Please provide bots for Norwegian!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

adri.albrecht_ 11 5 2
oh ok so there isnt bots one the web ???

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

odickinson 25 421
This is great. Can't wait for more.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Serenity907 3
me to

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Alex817258 9 9 2 2
there needs to be a web version of this!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Jantrap1957 25 249
Bots are absolutely awesome. No better way to learn a language than to speak it! Good job folks

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

LupineGirl 5

Je pense que vous devriez faire une version en ligne, car il serait beaucoup plus facile. Merci beaucoup!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Arizona_Polyglot 22 16 12 11 10 8 8 8 8 7 6 6 6 6 4 2 2 1

Love these bots! Great feature!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

jnguyen995 3 3

duolingo bots sounds cool

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

AM217 4

I'm Absolutely ratchet at spanish, but I'm trying. Had anyone learnt a language and is fully bilingual using duolingo?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

penglase 8

I think you're expecting a bit much out of a little app. I see 'fully bilingual' as to mean that you understand the nuances and colloquialisms of a language, and for that you will need to be around other regular Spanish speakers.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

AM217 4

I'm pretty sure I'm going to try to be an exchange student in Spain eventually so i can be around the language 24/7

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Bloodchild121 20 10 9 7 303

I tried this out, and I seriously was very impressed with it. Though I have only done the first conversation for German, but I know this is going to be a fun way to pass some time. Can't wait for it to be on the Android system. But thanks a million for making a fun, and new way for me to work on bettering my language skills

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

adam.tobey 14 8

I think I found a bug. I just started using the bots in Spanish, and when I got to the second conversation about the animals in the zoo, I wasn't able to respond to the first question concerning the turtle. Hope you guys can work the bug out soon, as I think this is an excellent addition to Duolingo!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

marcmayhugh0 12 1

I got up to forty % and I was given a owl award and now can't go any farther.Why?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

mariofinatic0 10 1

if you are talking about the fluency that is because the % is actually not about how fluent you are in the language it is how much work you do in a short amount of time if you did twenty lessons in a week you would have like 40% fluency if you did twenty lessons over ten weeks you would have like 11% fluency Hope I helped, mariofinatic

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

learner1908 7

please donate lingots !!!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

Fousey_Tube 4

ME GUSTA LOS LIMONS

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Nicola526448 21 3 2 258

That's amazing! Great news for those of us who feel a little shy :-) I talk to my dog in french but he never says anything back.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Mike716479 14 13 436

Too much discussion here about android. More important is when we might get more languages? Is Russian in development?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

RumiByNight 6 2

It's more important that a limited number of users get more languages than expanding it to more users?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

crypticbutton 5

Not too happy with how linear the conversations feel. There is not really a natural flow like real conversation would have

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Fabulouspinkgal 10 9 9 7 6 6 4 4 2 2 2

How about for ios7?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

stephanjd 12 2

Improve the courses first! It's hard to learn with just exercises with short sentences. Give us paragraphs, to start with.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

duggers8 10 2

Good thing you didn't post this on April 1!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

mariofinatic0 10 1

I think this should be on the web Pleassssssssseeeeeeee I really want to try it

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

greenbean999 10

I only checked in on this app briefly but it seems to be another good addition to the process of learning a new language. I do however long for an app (or a real person) to actually speak with. I'd love to have a bot that can "hear" and respond to a conversation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Stan976113 13 10 9 6 5

This is fantastic news, I'm looking forward to the Android and the Web-versions. I'm interested in both the AI aspect of it, as that is one of my interests, and to see how advanced it'll be, and, obviously, the language learning paradigm that it will offer! I'm super excited.

Also, just a word of advice to the developers - the need to be online to access lessons (and, presumably, to access the bots?) can be very limiting. I'm sure that I'm not alone who has an issue with using Duolingo on the subway. I can't access a new lesson when I'm underground and where there is sporadic connection the wait from one question to another question takes minutes, because it keeps trying to reconnect to the web. If I could just download the lessons to my mobile device, that would be worth PAYING for the app. I understand that you need to take the ad serving loss in this scenario into your business forecasting - I would be willing to pay $20 per language for a downloadable version. There are probably hundreds of thousands of potential paying-customers like myself out there in large cities where subways are still not equipped with internet connection. I'm from New York.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

rivergirl9 14 7 21

Looking forward to this!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

tonias123 16 11

Yes please to the web version, can't wait either.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Geoff_Campbell 25 152

Just tried it on my wife's iPad - great fun and a great tool. PLEASE add it to the web interface soon!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

MachelP 11 4 2

How do you access it on the iPad? I haven't been able to.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

farway2000 7

When will there be support for Swedish? I have a friend who is fluent in Swedish but he's not confident to speak Swedish outside the home.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

tesswa 18 13 778

I am stuck in trying to answer one of the questions in the Spanish series about Halloween. I have no idea what I'm supposed to answer to describe the man at the door. Nothing I've tried works. And the program doesn't give you any way to figure out what you're supposed to say. I've been successful with the other conversations, but I'm stumped with this second guy.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ButMadNNW 16 12 11 9 5 411

The program has a "help me reply" button if you're stuck. I've also used other dictionary/translation apps to help me come up with words I don't know yet, like "el vampiro". The sentence structure you need to describe the person at the door is: "He/she has a costume of ____"

Hope this helps.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

suec862843 6

Thank you for this fabulous opportunity to learn French! I have found duolingo a few days ago and am enjoying the process. I don't know what ingots are for, but I have 4.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

nickyagar 22 205

I am loving the new Bots!! I seem to have lost 2% fluency since using them though. Is this because I have been neglecting the usual 'tree'? The tree was getting a little boring as I had finished it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

sandranufc2 11 26

i have been using the bots for French on my iPad but every time I go in to it it goes back to the beginning and repeats the conversation I've had about 10 times now. How long till it moves on to the next phase?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

mariofinatic0 10 1

it may be because they haven't added new chats yet

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Danielkaas94 13 12 12 8 8 8 7 5 2 2 1

Nice! Some love for the Windows Phone users?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

wthede 25 852

Nice! Been waiting for this! Thanks!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Aditya703 6

pleassssseeeee i want both versions

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Takeo.22 6

cool

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Lainie44 25 636

I have an iPhone and I can see and hear the BOTS but they don't seem to hear me. How do I turn on this feature. I have an Iphone 4S.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

bekahk222 12 3 2 2 2

I used the iPhone Bot app and LOVED it! I can't wait for a web version! Please, please, PUHLEEASE do a web version ASAP! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

meliscarm 11

I just discovered the Chat bot and it is great! Thanks a lot for adding this.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

helenhoc 15

Hope Portuguese is high on the list of languages. A friend, who is learning Spanish, says this is great.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

curryforthewin 10 2

Lovingh new an droid it is so quick and easy to browse around

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

crossflow 13

Excellent! Very well done!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

dawnmariemackay 21

When using the bot I am only able to type my response. Is there a setting where I can actually speak my response?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Lighty691 7 2

Just used the Bots for German and thought it was excellent. It was great to have a proper conversation rather than just learn words and phrases. Good job! Hopefully more languages can be added

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

IsabelleJoseph 7

C'est super! Je suis tres excite!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Stacy51601 13

I enjoy using it on my phone. It's lots of fun!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

licialicii 6

web version, please!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ElRengo2 10

that is a good idea it will help a lot

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

kelly.s.co1 11 5

Bots are great. I just wish my the XP earned would show up in my students overall totals. Will they eventually? In the meantime, I encouraged them to screenshot their totals and show them to me at the end of the assignment period.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Nih160 7

finally

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

abigail.robinson 9
omg cant wait

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

jkoetzner 3 2 danken du

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Ben-14072204 14 7 6 5 3 42
Hopefully, Portuguese will be one on where you can use a Bot. Started using Bots with German, it is awesome.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

CallyManSam 5
lingots pls

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

farmcat123 6
i think this is very cool!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

omvirk 22 70
sounds nice

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

24torretoa 9
hi

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

alekblair 6
CAN SOMEONE HELP ME WITH MY SPANISH

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

WordedPuppet 10 16
Will there be a web version?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

IMmimi1999 7 7 7
i'm learning french

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

hamedmp 12 9 7 3 165

Please fix the bug on iPads too, they don't appear :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Deb39571 19

It just popped up on my I pad today, lots of fun!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

DeKingdomCrafter 2

how make your own conversation

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

AsuraLouise 15 5 186

thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

MichaelintheUSA 25 13

I don't get how Duolingo can achieve so much and be so great but only release this feature to the iphone app users. Why not wait to release this feature until they can offer it to Andriod users, too? Sad.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Wander167 6

Welcome to Lag-Ville, where everything is glitchy!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ryry915 11 8 7

Any idea wen the web version will come out? Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

oscarroe 6 5

they need to make that available on the web because its great on the app

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Bina_Leila 7 3

Is there a Sofia and David too? Like from the courses? Cuz there's a Luis.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

GPate15 8

I am really excited for the I pad version

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

rose1376 4
Hola Como esta

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

EmmaBarkwe 2
whats the easiest question you have been ask

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Safarieherculu 4
How do you get to talk so fast when the 'bots' speak Danish?! I am learning danish and it is so hard to become fluent even with the first lesson! I am honestly astounded by how amazing people get at languages from Duolingo!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

foxblue5 8
i have done it on the i pad but do it on DOUOLINGO ON THE COMPUTER

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

foxblue5 8
ppppppppppllllllllleeeeeeeaaaaaassssssseeeeeee do the web version

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Wolflord1000 2
can't wait for web version

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

DylanHamer13 9 6 3
Charlie

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

DylanHamer13 9 6 3
CXDX

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Cjwar725 3 2
When do you think Korean will be launched? I would really enjoy learning Korean! I can't find any other sites to learn it, so I'm most likely to rely on Duolingo. It says that it isn't close to being launched (34%) I believe, it also says that it will be 'hatched' on 12/31/99. I think that this was a while ago. Anyway I think that bringing bots onto Duolingo is a great idea!

Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

RyanCraft7 6
be stupid

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Scarlet2906 13
are you going to make a web version?!?!?!?!?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Fiona499966 3
This is what I have been waiting for. I don't have an iPhone though so am looking forward to the other platforms. Can you tell us what they might be?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

MonKey_Aviation 12
I think the bots are great but i miss the feel when you can freely answer so that every word is accepted.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Jane195236 18
I kinda dropped it last May when I couldn't understand something. The forum is not available on my phone app. I s s should use online version

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

FrenchHornSnail 7
These are super cool!!!!!!! They just were released on iPad and I love them. It makes it so much easier! However the only issue is that they do not ever sharpen your skills. It would be nice to be able to use them as a skill set or something. I really like them!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Jane195236 18
I started started understand people who speak French. So it is definitely working.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

zphelps76 10
wow Carnegie Mellon is like my favorite school :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TheSlytherinHeir 11 11 3

I've used this on iOS and it's amazing. However, I mainly use Duolingo from my Mac and would love to see the web version soon :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

EllieNicka 5

I'm having a hard time with the verb charts!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

imperialsnoop377 9 3

Bots!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

curryforthewin 10 2

You know many of the questions, since they have been asked ad nauseum. Why don't you simply provide some answers?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

curryforthewin 10 2

Stickied the unofficial but still amazing wiki :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

AlyanAziz-Khan0 3

i think its a cool idea

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Jthom12345 4

bonjour

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JamesJordan5 8

Hello, I am James and I am trying to learn spanish.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JGUzq9 4

I highly appreciate your efforts. Being able to do conversation in the language you learn while doing something else (dishes, driving to work, going for a walk) will be really helpful. I hope the commands will also be handsfree for that purpose :-).

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

bert.tussing 23 16 2 156

Truly enjoy the Bots on my iPad. Looking forward to when I can access them on my PC.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

ajacobs3974 3
this is crazy

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

geneg415 17 6 115
I have been using the bots on my phone and really like the feature. However, it is just as much an exercise in typing on the (small) iphone keypad as it is a language practice tool. Would love to have this feature available in the browser version so I can focus on the language.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Oona389189 8 6 2 2
Oh wau this is just great! Can't wait to have it on other languages too!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Niamhfw 22 7 6 6 180
Really excited about the Bots, but when would other languages be added? Does it depend on the course makers, popularity of the course, etc.?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

raaaaaiiiin 7 3
bleh bleh bleh

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

MatthewChu3 7 3
cant wait for windows!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

maetig 9 7
Super cool! when does the computer version come out though?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JeffThompson67 9
Lots of fun I tried it!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Narell1 18 3 4
Totally spot on, I don't have the confidence to practice with people. I cannot wait for the Italian Bots.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

rosenthalec 13 3

Are the Bots available for every language? My iPhone is up to date but I can't seem to find the Bot feature for Italian.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Digital_RuFi 7 3

Its amazing, im learning today french.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

peige_ishmael671 7

Hi

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

447Spanish 5

My co-teacher and I think this is a great feature and we have been playing around with ways to have our kids use this feature. Will duolingo be adding this to the assignments section? IE: will teachers be able to assign a certain number of bot chats that students have to complete in a set time period? If not, I think it would be a great addition!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

wesleelowe 6

great content for a discussion keep it up!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

martin887568 5 5 2 2 2 2

I tried it on Ipad for German. It works very well except the wording can be off slightly :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

EllatheCat 13 21

I have been using Bots for a few weeks and it works fantabulously well. It has helped me a LOT. Thank you to all the people who made this amazing thing!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

EmilyForlizzi 3 1

Sounds awesome

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

mjcoco2001 3

WOW im exited web version por favor?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

OmarAndres588586 9 6

I use Iphone Duolingo app and I'm learning French but I don't find Bots in the app where are they????

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

BrentlinSh1 12 9 3 2 2 2

They should be there. It was added recently. Can you report it?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Seonigh 12 11 6 2

The robots re-inspired me to use Duolingo daily again.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

omfgzor 14 4

I can't wait for a web version I can use in my browser on my Mac.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

HariNepal 12 1

I totally agree with you mi amigo ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TheresahAkowuah 7

Duolingo is very interested and very good as well.i am very interest of learning french language but i need your support to help me or push me up.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Zentori 7 3

Very excited for this! I use a Language Exchange app but usually I find myself using English more. This eliminates awkward language barriers and allows me to get adequate practice in. Can't wait for Bots available in Norwegian. Jeg elsker lære Norsk!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

niahrya 11

great news! I'm looking forward to the web-version for any of my target languages :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Dave7.0 10 7

useing web version! so helpful

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

LisaMarieGarver 7 4 2 4

this is what I need right now! only on iphone :(typical!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JanisYoung 16 532

I don't have an iPhone or anyone to talk to for conversational practise. I am really enjoying the course but I really need conversation too. When will this be available please?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JackB.Henley 6 3 1

ok good

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

marianafikse 13 4 262

Do you think they will have a Dutch version soon??? This sounds awesome!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

vincentmetcalf 2

cool

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

bjbillion 4

Really need computer version

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Madeleine_64 6

I tried it on an iPad. It was great! I wish you had a web version so I could do it more often, though.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

MariuxiCor 7

can't wait to try it out!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Taisen5 3

wow! good now we won't have those not - smart robots that correct our words because i have reported the same problem a thousand times ! and still nobody has returned my report or worked on the problem . the only problems on duolingo are the glitches, and the words, the robots that watch over and correct our word!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! SOMEBODY NEED'S TO LOOK OVER MY COMMENT AND DO SOMETHING ABOUT INSTEAD OF JUST SITTING THERE AND DOING NOTHING!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

colleenyoung0 22 35

web version would be great

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

hsims1 8
sounds great Cant wait !!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TylerMoore2167 7
hola

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

304742 6
Cool really exciting

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

raffol5 9 3
Sound super! please advice as soon as the Portuguese will be available. Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JasRay 14 18
Sounds great, when will the other versions be ready ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Carolynn644944 25 5 192
Alas, poor me...no smartphone. Can we get bots for desk top?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

zmanthepaladin1 5
awesome that will help me out a bunch! thank you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

ErickBeltr19 13 2
ok

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

MADMAX458928 3
please give lingot so i can have new ways to learn

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

IsabelleClevy0 7
Ar fheabhas! as pointed out by the President, well done to you all in the team. I am a fan but my God it is tough ;-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

ncfd32 5

WE NEED A VERSION OF THIS PLEASEEEEEEE

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

lindnerjo 15 5

I am so excited about the bots! I know they will help, but pleeeeeeaaasssse work on Italian bots!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

cladams20 6

kys

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

bensonduck 6 6

I can't wait!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

toolestooles 16 12 10 10 3 2 2

But who will love the bots? More importantly, will they like nachos? Are the bots available to catch a movie on Friday night?

These are the things I want to know.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

dizkirb 15

Fantastic! I've just tried the iPhone version and it works great. Bring on the web version, I'm ready!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TheWhipBoy13 6 2

I don't know maybe this is a bad idea. I mean what if the robots are so smart they can turn themselves into terminator or something.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

b3seidfert 3 3

agreed

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TheWhipBoy13 6 2

Web Version of this would be sooooo Great!!!!!!!!!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Saanvi334498 8
cant wait for web version

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Indie789 5
that is so cool!!!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

cmartien 10 6
The suspense!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

MrJoshuaTozer 20 2
"Duolingo Bots understand and react to thousands of unique responses. The more you interact with them, the smarter they become."

I'd love to see / read some more detailed information on this. On a quick test on a friends phone (as I don't use the iOS) I discovered that you couldn't hit send for some messages, which gave me the impression there is quite a finite number of replies you can give a bot. I understand that the bots are in early stages though.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

wrylycoyote 14 10 6 2 6
Il bot spagnolo e bravo, ma non posso aspettare per il bot italiano!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

tobifant 18
Sounds Great. I guess as a Windows Mobile User i have to wait :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Dbabb3 13 6
Nos precisamos isso para portugues

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

BrentlinSh1 12 9 3 2 2 2
Eu sei, irmao. Espero que tenhamos um tambem.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

reader1680 5
This sounds amazing! Like the text says, having fluent conversations is an important feature in learning a language. This'll definitely help me and much more people learn whatever language they're going for.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

ColeDavis123 2

can someone tell me how to cheat because my teacher is making us do this and it is SOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO

boring.....i have a girlfriend

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

CrowHarvest 10

i dnot have an iphone, let alone any phone, i hope there will be a web version of this or even a kindel fire version

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Shahrazad26 14 13 9 5

So even if I had an iphone I'd be screwed because I am learning Turkish.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

gemizcool_17 11

of course not for android, or is it (please) ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

333Mali333 16 10 9 9 2

This is such a great idea! Thank you very muuuuuch! <3

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

TaraAwesomeness 9 1

Question- If you're a Bot, how do you earn lingots and level up in stuff? Or is it just the developers testing things out? Also, what does it mean if you have a blue star or a green shield around your profile picture?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Judyrobinett1 14 89

Love this feature!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

tariqnisarahmed 19 11 8 7 5

I generally like the Bots. But I would add my voice to those wanting Bots on the regular web page, too. I would much rather type on a physical keyboard than on my phone or tablet screen.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

echothecclone 2

fuckfuckfuckfuckfuckfuckfuckfuckfuckfuck

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ander324 12 2

Are there any updates of when an android version would be coming out? Or even just how successful the program has been. I am really excited about this for I am one of the people too shy to practice with native speakers.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

liamdavis0 3

when are they out

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

JoannaNorwood 12 4

Duolingo Bots are so cool!

0ReplyGive Lingot10•2 months ago

AbbyCatoe 11

This is so cool

0ReplyGive Lingot5•2 months ago

DaveCowl 24 6 246

It would be great if the Bots contributed to experience and fluency - my fluency rating has dropped since I started using Bots for German. Also I haven't seen a new conversation in a while - are more coming?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

sarahoflaherty1 6 4

have they come out yet ??

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ZachHolmes6 8

awesome

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

jonathano19 7 1

wwow

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

SofiaLOLO 6 3

awesome!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

samanthawi730208 13 1

The bots are amazing. I recommend it!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

tompanagis 12 9

Hi Duolingo team,

When will the new bots be available in Portuguese? Many thanks for your response, and thank you for your wonderful app.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

SHREYATIWARI1 4

Thats great

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Ashlee2815 15 72

I've enjoyed the bots on my phone so far, but I would love to see a web version! Thank you for all your hard work!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Kat4501 7 7 1

can't wait for the Italian version

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

gram9 10 6 3 3

I just got on Duolingo for the first time since September. I have a request. I don't know if anyone will answer it, but oh well. Can someone please make Creole one of the languages able to learn? I have adopted cousins coming from Haiti soon and it would be nice to talk to them in something other than French which I'm not very fluent in anyway.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

catofstealth 10 8 8 5 3 3 3 3

I love the bots. However, I would enjoy them more if they allowed you the chance to speak. What I find is when people attempt to speak a language they are more fearful of making a mistake in pronunciation. I don't really have anyone near me who speaks French and I can't check with them. Some people I know speak Canadian-French but it isn't the same dialect. So... I don't know maybe Duolingo will be like an iPhone and slowly improve its technology with every try. Also I would love to learn Japanese. Please make this possible! (P.S. If you are wondering why have almost all the languages in my profile, it's because I sampled them over the summer because I wasn't sure what language I wanted to learn.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Arrigor 22 7

I'm really enjoying the new Bots! Having completed the tree in Spanish a while ago, I find this much more interesting than just going over the exercises again! I'm also continuing to take Spanish classes and Bots will help me enormously with my conversation practice. Well done again Duolingo!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Mahamed_Abdi 5 4

Yes, i have the android version and the computer version. On the android version, bots are available. They are really helpful and useful. They seem to help me practice talking in french. Which is really cool :D Also you get lots of XP if you respond correctly, all in all bots are really useful and amazing. Nice job Duo Lingo ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

pumpkin_princess 6 3 2

do you have any idea when this will come out for computer?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Williedunn 25 9 6 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 85

Hope the Android version is soon available. I've enjoyed the Bots on my Ipad. I love Duolingo and enjoyed this new to Duolingo method of learning. I enjoy the ever greater level of challenge duolingo gives. The Bots could be more flexible though.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

JasonOuell1 10 4

Any word on when Android is coming? I'm getting jealous of my husband whose got an iPhone and has been chatting with the bots. It looks great. I like how you can stay in French for a conversation instead of switching back and forth to English like most of the lessons. Once it's added to Android that will definitely be part of my daily French practice!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

elijahskjoldager 7

i only use browser so when will it be for browser?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

EstebanRey7 13 6 4 6

That's excellent! I hope have this soon on android

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

IMmimi1999 7 7 7

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/20065429> arabic course

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

MrCulkenny 7 4

Incredible! A version on this website would be lovely though... Please?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

SusanS1 16

Any word on the android version yet???

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

ellisdp 17 12 3

Tried on the iPad app, very nice new feature! Hope this will be available in the web version soon.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

mrcampoos 25 518

Android , please!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

BrentlinSh1 12 9 3 2 2 2

Maybe it'll come soon...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

SMO617 11

Any update on the Italian bot?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

GeorgeUshakov 7 6 3 2 14

Can't wait for the Portuguese version!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

JJT60K 12 44

Why is there bots for French, but not for Dutch?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Lucy411350 13 7 6 131

I am studying French. The conversations with bots do not work properly. I can listen to the phrases only once. The sound sign which I could press and listen to the phrase again has disappeared.What should I do?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Lola269277 10 6

Will Bots be available for PCs soon? I use them on my iPad, but miss them on the computer.....

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

natlguardgirl34 13 4

When is there going to be bots for Portuguese?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Benjamin4A27 10 8 5 3

Great! I hope there's an online version soon.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

caronash 14 10 66

The "New Chat" option seems to have disappeared for me. Did I run out of Bots to chat with?

Also, a Chat Bot sent me a picture of himself in the shower and I did not feel that the pre-programmed answers were sufficient to communicate my surprise. If you're going to throw us a Nude Bot, at least throw us a little mon dieu to react appropriately!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

MiaMooClaire 8 1

We need a web version of Bots!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

Terk59 14

I really like the Bots. Being able to have a conversation is nice. I wish that they accepted a larger variety of answers. Most of the time, I am told that my answer is not one of the accepted words or some such thing.

Also, if you are going to "grade" our answers, I would appreciate knowing why I got that grade.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Searlasmane 12 10 68

I get the feeling that feedback happens here and is pulled into the next conversations, though! As for the 'grade', I've noticed that if you give a slightly more complex answer - eg "je preferiez manger une pomme" rather than just "une pomme", you get "Great answer" instead of "Good answer".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Jacquie559343 11 31

Disappointed that they are not on Android!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

lauracamac111163 4

Hello!

How do I get the Duolingo Bots?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 days ago

Sarahafirth21 13 3 7

I'm pretty sure that you can get duolingo on andriod? I got it on my fire tablet. Or maybe that isn't android.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 days ago

vivid.illusion 14 12 10 6 3 5

The conversation is about Duolingo Bots, not Duolingo in general :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•yesterday

Sarahafirth21 13 3 7

Oh, i thought that you couldn't get duolingo at all, and that was the problem. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•yesterday

billwool99 21 8 286

Is there an estimate as to when this will be available for Italian?

0ReplyGive Lingot•yesterday

leon-bass 23 84

I hope you add Italian soon...

0ReplyGive Lingot•13 hours ago

Ryan699307 10

Just tried the new Bots. That was really fun! Good job.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Woobinda 15 186

great, great news, I just hope the android or web version will arrive very soon.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

LukeYoung6 21 6

Are they going to support Norwegian?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Xx_Zytka_xX 5

Can't wait for it to be available for Polish!!!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

usul2 12

As one of the dozen or so people left on Windows 10 mobile, would love to see it integrated into the Windows app.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

macy._.crumley15 7 5 5 2 2
Oh cool ! Merci pour cette opportunité !

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

edR9NU 19
Love the new bots addition, hoping it will make the difference of getting the best from Duolingo

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

lisha.song2005 14 10 7 6 6 5 4 4 3 3 2 2 2 2 2 YES! Thanks so much:)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

kdb119 14 14 11 11 11 8 6 6 2 645
Okay; so after the annoying scripting craze of a few months ago, it would now appear that the same, or similarly-minded, people are now running scripts to repeatedly down-vote posts within the discussions!
It would appear that they 'cut their teeth' by first running scripts to create new discussions with nonsense text or variations of 'hi', 'hello', 'hola' etc. You're not impressing anyone guys!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

MinecraftGuy28 7
Sounds cool!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ChrisWM4 23 672
Brilliant. Thanks. I just downloaded the update and look forward to using it.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

RamonZazar 7 2
Respect

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

DuosFriendJoanna 11
Im so happy! New updates are ALWAYS great!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

TortugaCielo 25 13
G

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Kristna241504 8
when you have a feeling that it's going to be pretty amazing :))) can't wait.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

SamFGibbs 13 7

I love this new feature. Can't wait for the speaking version.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

BoyerJosiah2 6 1

TayAndYou 2.0!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

CameronFot 3

Is there a apple app for it'

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

itzMal 8 4

This seems awesome!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

EssenceBes 9 6 3

That's awesome :D

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Akihawka 9 2

Could you explain how to use it?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

taylor-dalton 11 2

Sounding stupid online is better than sounding stupid in person, i guess

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

TRULYgrateful 16 159

agreed! but some of us are brain-damaged and can't help either one. Not kidding. sorry. thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TheyLoveJDaisa 5

follow me plz

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

williamhawk 9 3

but i only have it on a macbook air

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

[deactivated user]
Great! It is excellent!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

RandomPixels166 5
who speaks polish

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Papaya49 7
I would like to see a picture

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Joshrocker184 5
cool can't wait

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ElijahWils12 10
Pretty legit I tried it it's fun

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

TheDabMaster 5
Awesome!Plus a mobile version?EPIC!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

haitham22 11 9 8 7 4
it will be great , Can't wait♥️👍♥️👍

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

porkrind94 16 4 4 4 3 2
Hurray! I have learned so much through duo lingo. can't wait to try it!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

yovitalily 16 10
waiting for the speaking version

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ButMadNNW 16 12 11 9 5 411
You can indeed speak to it. Install the keyboard for the language you're learning, make sure that's the active keyboard, and tap the microphone symbol next to the space bar to have your device take dictation. :-) (You also need to turn on the dictation function.) I enjoy doing it that way to practice having to orally compose my reply.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Lashiaht 4 2

follow me on instagram @carver.goals for a follow back

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

prashanthr281875 11

can anybody tell me where can i join a class at duolingo ?? or can someone add me in their classroom ?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

BrentlinSh1 12 9 3 2 2 2

I like the Duobots as I like to call them. They make speaking and listening easier. There's just one thing that bothers me. This may be because it's still new and you may have this problem too, but I can't really say what I want to say, your choices are limited and it won't let you use slang. You have to answer the questions a certain way and sometimes with a few words. Overall, pretty good, hope they improve this new feature over time.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Matej353125 8

hallo

bitte schon

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

marwansuluiman 8

you are amazing, this new methodology will change many things!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

onthehype25 20 18 6 5 316

I love this so much! I just went through 3 chats all 3 fairly easy, I hope it gets harder along the way, but I adore this new feature!! I can't wait to see more stuff like this, I'm excited to see what Duolingo has planned for the future!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Amaya656559 18 6 3 716

Tried it on my iPhone and it's awesome. I just wish I could talk instead of just text.

-2ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

ripcurlgirl 25 25 4 4 3 418

You can - you need to turn on the speech -> text function. Search your phone's model but here is a simple youtube video on how to do it on the 4S:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7eAmrPlq-Vs>

0ReplyGive Lingot5•5 months ago

steelnothing 15 14 12 12 8 7 7 6 4 220

thanks for that, I have started using the speech recognition with tinycards as well, a good way of practicing your pronunciation and a good way of getting to know how to use it, it is rewarding when what you said is recognised correctly

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

mae-mae26 7

that is so cool!! a robot teaching language!

-2ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

KylCes 14 10 9 7 7 4 3

SWEDISH BOTS I IMPLORE YOU!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! ALL MY IRL SWEDISH FRIENDS BARELY TEXT BACK!!
PUH-LEASEEEEEEE SWEDISH

-2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

minasf 5

This is an excellent idea! I can't wait for the Russian and web version! :)

-2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Cloudster 25 25 11 8 7 6 6 5 4 3 866

Thank you for the bots. The app is helping me speak rather than just translate. I use the keyboard microphone. I've only done a few lessons and already love it. In real life when I speak, I pause, forget how to put words together and I feel like an idiot. I think by using the app daily that my brain will make the necessary connections to think in Spanish.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Troy991307 16

Sounds like a great learning tool, looking very much forward to seeing a english to swedish version!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

penglase 8

It is always a challenge for those who don't have others to converse with, to improve conversational skills in a natural way. Thank you for this great innovation.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Blonde_Mason 6 3

Oh cool! i might try the app

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

madalyn67890 6

Awesome!, This sounds really fun.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Reinaldo.37 17 7

Gracias. Me gusta los Bots.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Abdallah_Desoky 23 35

I'm sooooo excited about that and can't wait for the android version. but I have a suggestion, why don't you make the bot correct your mistakes? like when you type a wrong phrase he corrects it and you have to type it again for him to respond to it. is that achievable?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

I2IKenny 11 2

could you guys put an option that when practicing we are asked a question in the respective language we are learning and have to respond in the language?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

TheNatKnows27 7 4

BOTS ARE FRICKIN AMAZING

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

jimipedaler 23 7 47

Hope it works better than the audio on this site

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Iz_Arts 10

I have downloaded the app to my iPad, but I can't find the place you can talk to a duo bot! Help!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

kdb119 14 14 11 11 11 8 6 6 2 645

Welcome to the club! Sadly, it doesn't work on iPad in spite of the update description in App Store! Scroll through this topic and you'll see there are many disappointed iPad users.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

ClipBoard1 8

Can I have it on the computer?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Namka0 10
Great! Can't wait!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

zXRedst0n3Xz 7 3
sound awesome

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Lizardness 4
yes

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

carole401419 14
will be great to be able to do this on my laptop!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

lucy.gardiner 6
wow

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Ivonne-Cat 11 8 3
Thank you, Im already looking forward to it!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

WernickesArea 14 13 11 7 6 3 2
Que Legal!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

JordonRodman 3 2
Merhaba Ben Urdun

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

SteveLando 22 18 17 16 14 12 11 10 10 10 9 9 8 8 8 8 7 6 6 6 5 5 3 3
Can't wait for the Latin version of this:~)

-29ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

TheEeveeLord 5 3 2
Well, given that there isn't even a Latin Duolingo course, it seems unlikely that we'll get Bots in Latin (unless a Latin course is made eventually).

8ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

myfatcat123 7

i am learning french but i want to learn latin i know how to say "Les robes es rouge."

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

zapzor 3 2

dzien dobry

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

10 What is the difference between III and Ⅲ?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/17454475>

BundleRiff 6

Is it just pronunciation or does it serve an actual purpose?

Give Lingot9

656 months ago

Leave a new comment

184 Comments

AustinTheroux 15 12 12 12 11 11 10 7 7 7 7 4 4 3 3 2 2 2 283

RomanDrozd is correct. To clarify further:

Ⅲ - sounds like "sh" in ship, crush but with the tongue farther back in the mouth

Ⅲ - sounds like "shsh" in rush-ship. When pronouncing it, try to place your tongue higher and more forward in the mouth than in English.

44ReplyGive Lingot11•6 months ago

RomanDrozd 25 23 15 8

What is that language that you're level 3 in? The red/white/blue striped flag with the red dot in the middle?

14ReplyGive Lingot1•6 months ago

AustinTheroux 15 12 12 12 11 11 10 7 7 7 7 4 4 3 3 2 2 2 283

Guarani! It's an official language of Paraguay alongside Spanish. It's a native South American language! It borrowed some words from Spanish though (like manzana and pan). I'm learning from Spanish, as I am English. It just went into beta today

29ReplyGive Lingot3•6 months ago

guinea_pig_joe 5

jeez, you've learned so many languages D: O

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

JOAT2B 20 20 14 8 41

I can't wait until this is available for English speakers!

I know we can take it from Spanish (along with Catalan, which I also can't wait for), but it would be so much easier to go from native to new. I'm not sure my Spanish is good enough for me to trust for use in learning another.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 months ago

RomanDrozd 25 23 15 8

Interesting. Sounds rather useless though D:

-114ReplyGive Lingot6•6 months ago

kevolutionary 17 17 14 11 9 7 324

No language is ever useless.

149ReplyGive Lingot84•6 months ago

Bobboski 15 14 12 12 10 9 6 3 2

Very wise words, kevolutionary!

12Give Lingot5•6 months ago

MisssSandra 14

You get a lingo for that Kevolutionary

4Give Lingot1•5 months ago

marcos49088 12 8

Very true. A lingot for you :D

1Give Lingot1•5 months ago

fhaubert 12 12 12 12 9 8 4 4 4 11

Great words!

0Give Lingot1•3 months ago

WHeary 8 2

Agreed

0Give Lingot1•2 months ago

PurplePoneSE 19 50

Aye!

0Give Lingot2•2 months ago

SilverCharacter 14 13 9 8 5 5 3 3 3 164

Not if you know someone from Paraguay or you're going to certain places in South America:
https://en.m.wikipedia.org/wiki/Guarani_language

10ReplyGive Lingot2•6 months ago

AustinTheroux 15 12 12 12 11 11 10 7 7 7 7 4 4 3 3 2 2 2 283
Paraguay is on my list of places to travel :)

6Give Lingot1•6 months ago

SilverCharacter 14 13 9 8 5 5 3 3 3 164

Cool! It looks like a beautiful country and culture; truly the heart of South America. Spanish and Guarani will do you well there. <3

0Give Lingot1•6 months ago

dogclient 13 42

I'm sure there is a business out there somewhere that would pay good money for a Guarani translator

0Give Lingot1•5 months ago

Febrentu 15 14 13 13 12 11 9 8 8 7 7 6 4 2 105

It's very useful to more than 7 millions of speakers in South America. People knowlege of natural medicine, food, literature, songs ... inside the south american languages are not useless. When someone has kidney stones and takes some medicine from a bottle, even doesn't know it was made using a plant that grows in our backyard and used for thousand of years by our natives (I hope you can see the link).

5ReplyGive Lingot3•5 months ago

bleepandbloop 11 3 68

People often tell me Russian is useless when they find out I'm learning it, they tell me to learn Spanish instead.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

DanielPric8 11 2 64

Absolutely not Russian is used by 38 countries and is spoken by almost 300 million people. Great For Diplomatic Skills

1Give Lingot•1 month ago

GeorgeUshakov 7 6 3 2 14

Spanish could be useless too if you never plan on going to a Spanish speaking country or talking to Spanish speakers.

1Give Lingot•1 month ago

Ron584351 14 2

I've heard that. And from a native Russian speaker!

0Give Lingot•1 month ago

PseudoBerliner 20 19 12 6 6

In the Post Soviet countries and east Europe, the Russian language is still important. You can communicate with the people emigrated from those countries in Russian and they will feel different if you will speak to them in Russian. Yes, Russian language experienced difficulties because of the collapse of Soviet Block but I think it is temporary.

0Give Lingot•1 week ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

[deactivated user]

Щ in Bulgarian makes the sh sound, in Ukrainian it makes the shch sound, and in Russian it makes the sh sound like in "mushy". The lips are a bit more rounded and more air is pushed through. It's a sharper sound than that of sh as in "ship".

7ReplyGive Lingot2•6 months ago

Mr_Pizza034 6

HOW MANY LANGUAGES DO YOU KNOW!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

LuisAcuna0 6

bien dicho hermano . bien dicho

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

SashaHessler 8 3

I GAVE YOU LINGOT SO BE HAPPY BECAUSE YOUR SMART... whoever you are dont judge me plz

0ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

RobertjrJunior 14 13 12 11 11 11 10 8 8 8 7 7

interesting thanks for the support pal !!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Doctor-Pancake 11

That's a lot of languages, man. I envy your ambition.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

EvaLearnsRuss 5

Thx, i had that question too!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Fran937943 12 8 4

Great man! thanks for the info!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

Harvey_Duffy 4

You need to be careful because щ is pronounced ShCh- like PushChair, as it is a conjunction of both ч and ш.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 days ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

No, that's the Ukrainian pronunciation. In Russian, Щ sounds like a palatalized Ш, like a more-palatalized "sh" in "sheet." There is no "шь" in Russian, but a Щ takes its place. You don't separate the ш and ч like your "push chair" example. You do, for Ukrainian Щ, though.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 days ago

Mr.Mead1 6 6 3

*edit Don't read this unless you want to see a public example of a mistake.

You certainly clarified further but you are not completely correct, I'll correct the error and clarify even further from what you have said: The names of these letters are as follows: Ш - Shah and Щ - Shchah. The letter Ш is always a hard consonant, and the letter Щ is always a soft consonant. Ш is pronounced as 'sh' in 'ship', and Щ is pronounced as 'shch' in 'fresh cheese'.

I hope this helps everyone!

-5ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

piguy3 25 25 18 17 15 14 13 12 10 10 10 10 1

Sorry, you're just wrong. People should really read longstanding threads before they post in them.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

I feel like we should have kept a running tally of "times people have brought up the seriously outdated pronunciation of these letters despite many fluent and native speakers consistently explaining the correct version". We are well into double figures, I'm sure!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 66

times people have brought up the seriously outdated pronunciation

The problem is: Russian speakers often think they are pronouncing щ as шч. I've thought that Russian щ = шч when I was in school, and I've found out it's not in fact the case (even in my pronunciation) only in the university.

It's not always easy to speak about your own pronunciation because it's hard to separate what you really pronounce from what you know.

On one of the forums I used to visit, we had an argument about whether войны and войны are pronounced differently or not. And it was a great flamewar, because it's very difficult to judge your own pronunciation.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

Wow, that's very odd. Is шч a common pronunciation in Beralus? I mean, I find it hard to believe you could have come up with that naturally: there is no reason to think ш is pronounced шч unless you have been taught that or heard that. For me it would be like thinking that Д is pronounced as "j" (the pronunciation of ш was standard where I was born).

3Give Lingot•3 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 66

@Shady_arc Ш + hard ч is not uncommon, although this is usually considered Trasianka.

Ш + soft ч is pretty rare, I guess.

0Give Lingot•3 months ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

sigh I feel like this needs more than just saying you're wrong:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=V3y3QoFnqZc>

Please, don't make definitive statements on things you don't understand.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Mr.Mead1 6 6 3

I'm sorry. I read this out of a Russian textbook and I now know it is outdated. Thank you.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

piguy3 25 25 18 17 15 14 13 12 10 10 10 10 1

"sh" in English "ship" in phonetic terms is a voiceless palato-alveolar sibilant

If you start pronouncing "ship" but hold at the "sh" for a while, you will feel that the front part of your tongue is up near the top of your mouth. With reference to that sound getting to ш and щ represent two distinct changes.

ш is a voiceless retroflex sibilant That means it's a sound a lot like "sh" but with only the tip of the tongue near the top of the mouth, not the whole front of the tongue like in "sh." Basically, just try to produce the "sh" sound just by pointing the tip of your tongue toward the top of your mouth, and I think you'll get close.

щ is a voiceless alveolo-palatal sibilant Again, what that means isn't really the point here. But I'm putting the names just to give an idea of how closely they are related. The only difference between "sh" and щ is that the first is "palato-alveolar" and the second is "alveolo-palatal." Basically all that means is that you get even more of your tongue up near the top of your mouth than with "sh."

You might have heard of "palatalized" sounds in Russian. Well, the palate is the top of your mouth, "palatalized" just means the tongue is up by the palate. щ is the "palatalized" version of ш because the whole tongue is up by the palate, whereas for ш it's just the tip.

Obviously I don't write this as a native Russian speaker with an inherent understanding of these sound differences. Nor am I somebody who actually has any linguistics background. I've just read Wikipedia articles and have found them immensely helpful in learning to understand how to pronounce sounds outside my native English. So all those better informed, please correct me!

31ReplyGive Lingot10•6 months ago

kevolutionary 17 17 14 11 9 7 324

Spot on. Although 'sheep' would be my example of choice. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

The question has been asked quite a few times. Unfortunately, Duolingo's forum search leaves much to be desired. Therefore I expect it to be asked over and over again. Anyway . . .

I posted one explanation here. A few years ago I recorded the pair шуба / щука to illustrate the difference.

Here and here I tried to explain the difference in pronunciation to an English speaker who was familiar with German.

23ReplyGive Lingot3•6 months ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

I agree! If there was such a thing as "шюка," it would be pronounced the same as щука. The easiest explanation, I think, is that Щ is a palatalized Ш, since there is no actual шь in Russian.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 days ago

KaramataBG 15 10 10 8 7 73

Except for the difference in pronunciation, these sounds have different origins. They both have arisen from palatalization of certain consonants - ш (sh) comes from the proto-sounds *sj and *hj, and щ (shch) comes from *tj, *skj, *ktj / *gtj. Strictly speaking, these palatalization rules apply only for Church Slavonic and Bulgarian, but since Standard Russian was constructed by mixing Church Slavonic with Moscovity Russian, щ has remained in modern Russian. The native Russian equivalent of щ (shch) is ч (tsh) - e.g. свеча = 'candle' /of Russian origin/, освещенность = 'illumination' /of Church Slavonic origin/, светлый (m.) = 'bright' /non-palatalized root/. An example for a ш-word is шить (inf) = 'to sew', both coming from the ancient root *syuH- ;)

10ReplyGive Lingot3•6 months ago

bonbayel 20 17 14 13 13 13 9 8 6 35

Thank you for your historical explanation! I studied Indoeuropean historical linguistics many many years ago, mostly Germanic, but also Sanskrit, and I had a year or so each of Russian and Lithuanian to balance things out - but not the historical part.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

bonbayel 20 17 14 13 13 13 9 8 6 35

Do you know if the modern distinction of shsh and shch is a dialect thing? Someone further down - a native speaker - says she says chsh.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

DZpz 19 12 11

Щ-like in should, Ш-like in shield

9ReplyGive Lingot15•5 months ago

BaconChomper 21 19 13 9 8 8 6

As an American, the sh in should and shield sound the same.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

Also as an American and a Russian, I can tell you that we don't have the sound that Щ makes in English. Our "sh" sounds closer to the Russian Ш, but Ш is even more palatalized than American English "sh."

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Unusual2be 22 19 14 6 5 3 2 2 2 154

Hi Dzpz, as a native Slavic speaker I can say, that Your Suggestions are definitely unacceptable, sorry. I really have to think and advise with a someone who speaks many years before I can give an example!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 66

native Cyrillic speaker

Did you mean native Russian speaker? Because Cyrillic is used in many languages, and they pronounce Щ differently: in Bulgarian, it's sh+t; in Ukrainian, it's sh+ch; in Russian, it's a single sound.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

homka89 16 11 8

and that's exactly true. you gave the simplest explanation :) and the Russian word Щит is very similar in sound to the English word shield

0ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

piguy3 25 25 18 17 15 14 13 12 10 10 10 1

Except that "should" and "shield" start with the same sound :) In IPA: /ʃ/

13ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 66

They start with the same phoneme. Phonemes are 'meaningful' sounds. In English, the difference between the sounds of 'should' and 'shield' is not meaningful, it doesn't change meaning of any word, therefore it's marked by the same letter in most transcriptions.

However, the difference does exist. When you pronounce /ʃ/ in those words, you prepare for the pronunciation of the following vowel:

In 'shield', to pronounce the front vowel /i/, you move your tongue away from your mouth, back to the palate a bit. You start moving your tongue a fraction of second before you start pronouncing /i/, when you're still pronouncing /ʃ/. So, /ʃ/ becomes a palatised: [ʃʲ].

In 'should', you prepare to pronounce a rounded vowel /ʊ/. Again, you normally prepare for pronouncing the vowel in advance, so you round your lips during the pronunciation of /ʃ/. So, /ʃ/ becomes labialised: [ʃʷ].

Note the square brackets. Slashes are used to mark phonemes, square brackets are used to mark sounds.

The difference between [ʃʲ] in 'should' and [ʃʷ] in 'shield' is pretty real, and audible to Russian speakers. These is not 100% same as Russian sounds (Russian Ш is not necessarily labialised: it is in шыба, but not in шапка), but it's a reasonable starting point.

You probably think you're pronouncing the same SH sound. But for a Russian speaker's ears, you're producing a щ-like sound in 'shield', and ш-like sound in 'should'. The following vowel gives a colouring to the SH sound, and this colouring is negligible for an English speaker, but noticeable and important for Russian speakers.

In fact, I believe the difference would be audible to English speakers, too. If you replaced one sound with another, e.g. pronounced palatised [ʃʲ] in 'should', or lip-rounded [ʃʷ] in 'shield', this would come off as a very thick accent.

6ReplyGive Lingot3•4 months ago

piguy3 25 25 18 17 15 14 13 12 10 10 10 10 1

Interesting. Although I think the vowel in "should" is a schwa for most English speakers. It is listed as the "unstressed" pronunciation on Wiktionary, and all seven pronunciations on forvo seem to reflect this version. I personally can't imagine any other pronunciation of the word, but I do not speak any of the dialects listed on Wikipedia as even having a near-close near-back rounded vowel, so I can hardly be the definitive authority for all English speakers.

If anything, staring at my mouth in the mirror, I think I see my bottom lip being very slightly more open for the /ʃ/ in "shield" relative to "should."

EDIT: Hmm, the fact that General American doesn't happen to be listed on Wikipedia as a dialect containing /ʊ/ doesn't mean it doesn't. Now I can't really figure out why Wiktionary lists the alternative with a schwa. I can feel the [ʃʲ] happening in shield, although it obviously isn't to the point of щ.

4ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 66

I've just understood I've been pronouncing should incorrectly :D

2Give Lingot•4 months ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

I cannot say the difference between shield and should or shoes is very audible to me. At least, in some speakers they overlap.

Given that Russian does not have a palatalized ш, it is sort of understandable that I do not hear much there.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

If anything all examples sound closer to ш to me

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

I would say that the easiest way for an English speaker to understand the difference between ш and щ is exactly that:

щ makes the sound of a palatalized ш

I know that шь doesn't exist in Russian, but if it did, it would make the same sound as щ. That's my opinion.

Your example of щюка, to my ear sounds the same as if it was spelled (and allowed in Russian) as шюка.

0Give Lingot•3 weeks ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

I am a native Russian speaker, and if you hear ш in "should" then you are not hearing normative American English. Maybe it's a specific dialect, because there is no ш in "should." It falls short of a щ--not as palatal, but definitely not retroflex, which is what щ is.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

arcusimpetus 17 17

This is really the best explanation. Everything is clear!

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

"should" does not have a ш. It's closer to a щ but less palatalized. "Should" and "shield" pretty much have the same sound, only slightly different. There is no ш in American English except maybe with regional exceptions

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

These are two different letters that look and sound somewhat similar but they are used in different words and never interchangeably.

4ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

homka89 16 11 8

Правильно))

4ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

Спасибо! :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

[deactivated user]

They are two different letters that make different sounds and therefore yes, they serve a purpose. It is kind of like the v and w in English. They also are two letters for two very similar sounds (to non-English speakers) that lots of people often confuse.

4ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

poin-dexter 13 4

I do щ by putting the tip of my tongue down and raising the middle to my palate, then the sound is made by forcing the air through the gap between the palate and the tongue while making the "sh" sound.

Then for ш I raise the tip of my tongue up slightly, which flattens out the middle and back of my tongue. Then make the "sh" sound.

The щ sound is higher pitched and a little longer than the ш sound.

It's difficult to tell the difference at first but keep listening to words with these sounds in and it will become clearer.

3ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

slogger 25 23 22 20 14 1170

> . . . or does it serve an actual purpose?

Actual purpose: correct spelling and pronunciation.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•6 months ago

Emangedo 13 7

the other guys responded on your question, but i recommend for you Memrise website, it explains the difference between the Russian letters in a simple way. good luck :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

TomvanderV3 7

This video tutorial was very usefull for me.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tENgvnbflw>

At about 5:25 they explain the pronunciation of ш and щ

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

notpopeye 10

Thank you for the link. It makes sense now - ш is the weird one not щ.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

AlexeyGolo4 10

Ш is a harder and Щ is softer. for example ЩУКА (a pike) is pronounced like ЩЮКА
ШУБА (a fur coat) is pronounced ШУБА but ЩИТ (a shield) - ЩИТ ШИП (a spike) -ШЫП

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Unusual2be 22 19 14 6 5 3 2 2 2 154

AlexeyGolo4, as a native Slavic Speaker i can hear very easy the difference between the two letters, in my lanuage they exist as well. I would like to say to be careful with your Statements. In russian ЩУКА (a pike) is NOT pronounced like ЩЮКА, the correct pronunciation would be more like ШЮКА (exept for that Ш is almost like double pronounced). It is really difficult sometimes to explain a sounds from one to another language. Still, it is always a good thing to check your infromation with a native before you announce it as a correct solution. Anyways, good luck and have a nice time while learning! =)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

Good luck with pronunciation of something like "ШЮка". Even the word парашют is in fact pronounced with "y" instead of "ю".

At the same time "ЩУ" does sound as non existent "щю", otherwise this simple rule for Russian children wouldn't be necessary: ЧУ-ЩУ – пиши с буквой У.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

Where do people speak "Slavic"? What is it?

-2ReplyGive Lingot3•3 months ago

bleepandbloop 11 3 68

Slavic is a the group of languages that Russian is in, encompassing languages like Polish, Bulgarian, and Ukrainian. They have similar sounds (like palatalized consonants, consonant heavy words) since they evolved from the same language.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

A native speaker of a Slavic language then. Okay. Which one exactly? Back to square one...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 66

Actually, it's a very wide group, and most Slavic languages aren't very similar. For example, Slovene has no palatised consonants.

When it comes to ш/щ, Russian is different even from its closest relatives, Belarusian and Ukrainian. So, I don't think speaking other Slavic language would be of much help much when mastering the ш/щ distinction.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

KomissarEdvard 13

Not an expert myself, but a Russian speaking friend suggested grinning with Щ helps distinguish it from Ш.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

RonanSefton 10

I would add, verbs with 'C' like писать conjugate to: Я пишу.

Where as words with CT often go to щ like Чистить to Я чищу.

Your question could be answered additionally just like how in English we had C and S. Cents or sense, pronounced the same but used differently.

By this I do not mean they are pronounced the same,

I think it's obvious that щ= Shch and ш= Sh.

I was explaining in terms of grammar and root knowledge. A root with C is to ш and CT to щ.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

Verbs like твитить, постить, фиксить would be even better an example. :) Писать is actually inside a closed class of verbs (though it is a large class). However, verbs like говорить are standard and will have a mutation in 1st person singular, provided their stem ends in a consonant that mutates.

Also, ш and щ are not exactly close in pronunciation (whereas cite/gym and site/Jim do sound exactly the same).

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

Not everyone even uses such verbs, while чистить can never go wrong as an example.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

cazort 18 18 18 12 8 6 2 2 1

They are definitely different, but I haven't fully grasped the distinction yet.

I have a question if anyone else knows these languages. I know Mandarin Chinese and some Japanese as well and I have been told my pronunciation in both these languages is quite good, but I'm still struggling with Russian pronunciation, probably because I haven't worked on it as hard.

Is Ш a little like what is written "sh" in Mandarin Pinyin, and Щ like "x" and like the Japanese "shi" as in "し"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

It sure seems so, though it may depend on a speaker. Note that Щ is a long consonant, so it is like し in Japanese.

I can confirm that the pronunciation of ざっし in Japanese here by male speakers has a consonant that sounds amazingly similar to the Russian Щ. I still think that they use the blade of their tongues a bit more than we do—at least when they start their "sshi". However, it is very close.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Epicalmeow 7

I haven't used duolingo until recently and I'm mainly using it as my mum's family is russian and I'd like to speak with them.

Naturally they've taught me a little bit and I've caught some very bare basics from ear.

If you know what ь (Myerkiznak) is, It's basically like that.

Ш is your standard "sh" sound, while щ is sort of like ш that has a ь after it.

Aka it's basically the same but more muffled and soft at the end, Kind of like you whisper it away with your breath.

I'm not the best at describing so sorry if this didn't really help you. But in summary, щ = шь.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

bleepandbloop 11 3 68

I just realized an English word that contains a sound very close to the Russian Щ: "sexuality"

Since it's said like sek-shyoo-a-lit-ee", that "shyoo" becomes very close to Щ.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

SUPA_MOT 6

Щ is low Ш is high

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

SergeyLari2 11 29

that's true. They are like one musical note in different positions. Though, it is just part of the answer, and if you follow only this rule, you will still sound foreign.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

RomanDrozd 25 23 15 8

Щ - Sh Ш - Shch

0ReplyGive Lingot1•6 months ago

daughterofAlbion 14 13 11 9 8 6 6 3

Shady_arc says (above) that the 'shch' pronunciation is not heard anymore "except in dialects". May I ask which region your pronunciation comes from?

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

Yet it still remains one of the most frequent ways of transliteration for Ш. And as it is merely written here I assume that SHCH (ШЧ) doesn't reflect the way he pronounces Ш.

As for his roots, he has "Canadian" in his profile :P And by the last name used in his screen name my guess would be Belorussia (most likely) > Ukraine > Russia. People move and everything is possible but the roots of this last name most likely come from outside of what people in Britain call Russia today.

Now let's wait for his reply :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

I live in L.A. and am a part of the ex-USSR community here. Some people do pronounce Ш as "shch" [шъчъ] but it reveals their regional dialect, usually a Ukrainian dialect of Russian (not to be confused with the Ukrainian language itself in which Ш is pronounced like ШЧ) or Belarusian dialect of Russian (not to be confused with the Belarusian language itself in which there is no letter Ш at all!)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

follieskate 19 10 9 8 4 3

best one yet, and I agree...ш sh as in sheep.....ш shch as in fre[shch]eese (fresh cheese) at least as far as my old Russian prof was concerned. But then, I'm a native English speaker...

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Norrius 19 11 6 6 5

Pronouncing ш as шч was common some 150 years ago, but in modern Russian it sounds just wrong (at least in the standard pronunciation).

4ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

I disagree that Ш sounds like "sheep." We don't really have the retroflex Ш sound in English. "Sheep" sounds more like «щип» but stopping the initial consonant more quickly in order to produce the English sound. Same idea as the Russian word for "shield"--«ЩИТ»--which sounds similar to but not exactly like the English word "sheet." In fact, when the English bad word "sh*t" is said by someone with a Russian accent, it sounds almost exactly like «щит».

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

alex905095 6 5

м е ж д у ш и щ есть разница в том что ш твёрже щ

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Abderrahim184385 5 3 2

Indeed Austin. Fso pravilna !

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

Vsyo pravil'no* [всё правильно]

:-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Fluffrito 7 6 5

the first one is soft, like sh. the second one is harder, like SH but say it like you are saying O in russian, except say sh.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Tsarist_Russia 9 2 48

Щ is a lighter sound and is used for different words. Ш is a harder sound and you can't use ы after it. You have to use и instead.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

KatelynMania 7 7 5 4

how can you differentiate letters in russian? many of look the same to me :-(

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

GlobalJim711 15 13 12 11 10 12

Very true! Based on context...some Russians put a line over a т and under ш. I will write the letters and post them. It might be good to make a video and explain in English the technique and crucial details. What would be a good platform? YouTube?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

KatelynMania 7 7 5 4

Yes please! Youtube is a great platform.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

SergeyLari2 11 29

being a Russian native speaker, i also find it hard to differentiate them sometimes. In this case I try to recognise the first letter's strokes and then begin with the next letters strokes. Take them as hyerogliphs, which go one after another. try writing down the word шиншила :-) and begin with writing шилла in it. You can see that you need three hooks at the bottoms to get the first ш, and of course you know that after ш there must be и which has two hooks at the bottom (good, we have got ш and и, ши. And if you know how to spell this word, you can certainly guess which letters go next.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

gabriel930786 10 7 5 4 2

wo

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

opraz 14 7 3

i want to learn roman = romeneshte can it be possible please?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 66

Hello! This topic is about Russian. Bună ziua! Tema asta este despre limba rusă.

Do you want to learn Romanian? The course "Romanian for English speakers" is not available right now, but it's expected to appear soon. You can subscribe to the notifications here: <https://www.duolingo.com/course/ro/en/Learn-Romanian-Online> (click on the "Notify me when available" button, and you'll get a notification when this course becomes available).

Sau Dvs. trebuie să explicăm Ш și Щ românește? Or do you need an explanation about Ш and Щ in Romanian?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

opraz 14 7 3

thank you! i just wrote what i wrote in the wrong place and you answered me! thank you! i know a little romanian and i want to learn it properly/

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

DianaRoman775295 8 4

in some cases its grammatically incorrect to put in the latter. Such as adressing "you", in the case of saying "you do something" you must say "ты делаешь" with the шь instead of Щ

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

guinea_pig_joe 5

You'll find that the second one is softer

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

GermanFyodorov1 2

thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

theloluser 8 7 4 11

Oh my god, there are so many comments under this question!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

GabrielBra278909 6 3

k

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

AlmyGR 8

Perdonami, sono italiana, usa Google Translate. Durante delle piccole lezioni di russo ci hanno spiegato che Ш si legge "sc" (shut up), mentre Щ si legge "sci" (ship).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Renata29110401 8

Б у к в а Ш звучит, как в слове ship, например, а буква Щ звучит как в слове rush-ship! Это две разные буквы^_^ letter Ш is like word ship but letter Щ is like rush-ship Спасибо, если вы поняли меня. Я специально пишу на двух языках:) Thank you, if you read it. I specially write on two languages:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

guernica5 9 6 4

It is another sound in Russian language. another kind of letter

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

GeorgeUshakov 7 6 3 2 14

ШШ makes a hard 'sh' sound Щ makes a soft 'sh' sound

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

SergeyLari2 11 29

i guess many English speakers will not get it :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

kristinakoller 14 10 8 6 4

Щ is pronounced "sh" and Ш is pronounced "shch" They are both different letters

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

piguy3 25 25 18 17 15 14 13 12 10 10 10 10 1

I'd recommend you read this thread more thoroughly. You'll learn something.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

lilyflower2312 3

н е з н а ю

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

lilyflower2312 3

н у я зачик!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

I don't know, to me, Щ just sounds like a palatalized Ш. This makes sense since Ш followed by palatalizing vowels, Ъ,Я,Е,И,Ё,Ю, still retains its unpalatalized sound. Ши always sounds like шы, ше always sounds like шэ, etc.

By the same token, Щ always sounds like a palatalized Ш, never unpalatalized, like a Ukrainian Щ which sounds like ШЧ.

For example, the Russian щука sounds as if it were spelled шюка.

This is the best way I can explain Ш vs. Щ in English.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Hugh675826 12 7 115

Hey y'all, I'm learning Russian and I'm wondering if anyone knows a good way to start reading books in Russian to help speed this along. I can get books in Russian but of course there's no real space to write translations. I'm guessing there's some kind of program/app for this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

SergeyLari2 11 29

Щ is more rapid and the split is smaller. Русскоговорящий

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Hugh675826 12 7 115

Or we could be honest and say "I don't know".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

frere_etienne 13 12 11 11 10 10 8 7 7 7 6 6 4 3 203

As i hear as native speaker, Ш sounds like sh in "wish" (http://www.oxfordlearnersdictionaries.com/definition/english/wish_1?q=wish); Щ sounds like sh in "ship" (http://www.oxfordlearnersdictionaries.com/definition/english/ship_1?q=ship). For example, words чаша (bowl or big cup) and чаща (thicket or dense forest) differ in this phoneme.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

piguy3 25 25 18 17 15 14 13 12 10 10 10 10 1

I don't know that I immediately understand the wish/ship distinction. Those "sh"'s should represent the same sound, which is produced slightly differently than either "ш" or "щ". (If anything, it would seem to me, the "sh" in wish is longer, which would make it more like "щ".)

The forvo recordings for "чаша" and "чаща" do a wonderful job showcasing the distinction, though. Maybe the speakers for чаща are exaggerating the щ a little? (curious for native speaker opinion on that) But it makes the palatalization easier to hear. сейчас is another useful example (с equating to щ in pronunciation). It's easier to hear for me from some speakers than others though.

6ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Olja. 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 18 516

I am a native Russian speaker and here's my recording for чаша, чаща and чаще and... Чижик часто чистит чашу в чаще :)

<https://www.evernote.com/shard/s470/sh/b1970657-a146-4d62-b64a-9016b9ac67b1/702fb6cbc4a29073ee24c8b3a53f4e08>

7ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

daughterofAlbion 14 13 11 9 8 6 6 3

Your link is private. Could you reenable it please?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

It sounds right. Just slow.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

I disagree about "wish." I am a native speaker of both Russian and English. The "-sh" in "wish" (and "English") does not sound like Ш but instead sounds like Шь, if there was such a phoneme in Russian, which there is not. The closest thing to it is, in fact, Щ! The English "sh" is not as strongly palatalized as Щ, so it falls somewhere in-between, palatalization-wise, the retroflex Ш and the stronger Щ. If anything the American English "sh" sounds more like a Щ than a Ш.

I also agree with @piguy3 that "wish" and "ship" have the same "sh" in both words. This could be different in different regions or dialects of English.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

homka89 16 11 8

"Ш" звучит как в слове Fish, твёрдый звук, , "Щ" - мягкий звук, для удобства напишу так: ЩЪЕ то есть произносится почти как Ш, только мягче и на конце слышно (очень) короткий звук "Е", мягкий знак между буквами я поставила для обозначения мягкости.. а вообще в фонетике Щ выглядит так [Щ'], а Ш - [Ш]

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

Н е т . Fish не кончается с "ш." Ближе к "шь" но не до "щ".

П о -английски в принципе Ш нету. Sh лежит между Ш и Щ

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

IvanMotori 5

yes i am russian

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Corinder1 5 4 3

Ш ш is the sound 'sh'. Like 'Ship'. Щ щ is the same thing, but your tongue is on the roof of your mouth, giving it a more 'tsh' sound.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•yesterday

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

No, Ш is retroflex, tongue curled back, like when you say the American standard English /r/ sound. Place your tongue in that position and say the English "sh" sound--then you get a Ш. Otherwise, the Ш sound doesn't exist in English.

A quote from Wikipedia: "Shcha (Щ щ) is a letter of the Cyrillic script. In Russian, it represents the voiceless alveolo-palatal [not retroflex] fricative /ɕ(:)/, like the pronunciation of ⟨sh⟩ in sheep (but longer). In Ukrainian and Rusyn, it represents the consonant cluster /ʃtʃ/."

The English "sh" is postalveolar, meaning the tongue is not curled back like the retroflex Ш. "Ship" is actually closer to щип (more like in-between "ship" and "sheep") than шип, because ши is pronounced "шы" in Russian--back to the retroflex sound.

2ReplyGive Lingot•yesterday

[deactivated user]

[deleted]

-2Give Lingot•1 month ago

pigu3 25 25 18 17 15 14 13 12 10 10 10 10 1

Actually read the thread. You'll learn something useful :)

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 month ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

I'm glad someone beat me to it. I was ready to scream "AGAIN?!?!!" lol

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

andersonbr93 16 10 9 7 5 2 2 2

Hello, I am the administrator of a group on Whatsapp to practice English. So, wherever you are from, you can join us! +5521992990537"

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

transformer52 5

Ш - sounds like "sh" in ship, crush but with the tongue farther back in the mouth

Ш - sounds like "shsh" in rush-ship. When pronouncing it, try to place your tongue higher and more forward in the mouth than in English.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

MagicFox157 4

the first ones sh and the second one is ts

-4ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

No, ts is ц, not щ.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

C_Avila 11 7 7 3 2

I'm going to explain the easier as possible:

Ш = sh

Ш = shch (sh-ch)

-7ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

kevolutionary 17 17 14 11 9 7 3 2 4

Not in modern pronunciation. I don't know where this sh-ch comes from. It's щ people should work on, not ц. Ш in Russian is most similar to the sound in English.

5ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

C_Avila 11 7 7 3 2

Wow, really?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

kevolutionary 17 17 14 11 9 7 3 2 4

Pretty much. Щ+и - щи pronounced 'she' - actually a type of cabbage soup. Ш+и makes a darker sound, pronounced like ш+ы.

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

C_Avila 11 7 7 3 2

Wow,thanks,I didnt know that

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

follieskate 19 10 9 8 4 3

How would you pronounce еще (only with an umlaut over the last e which my keyboard won't do)??
I was taught "yeesh chyoh" by a native speaker.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

GlobalJim711 15 13 12 11 10 12

I'm guessing you know the diacritical Mark is not called an Umlaut. One thing I did not know was some Russians don't bother putting them over ë! I was told, for example, everyone would recognize елочка as Ёлочка!

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

If only those were just some Russians but it was done on an official level. In newspapers and in technical literature for example. I have no problem understanding it but I dislike it not being used. It's even in the alphabet which is supposed to consist of 33 letters and still such people couldn't care less.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

@ bonbayel

What you have learned is correct.

What I am saying is that since the letter Ë is a part of the alphabet writing E instead of it means replacing one letter with another and the fact that people still can figure everything out doesn't make it right. It is still wrong but it happens nonetheless.

I have to reply to my own message here because there is no space anymore. I hope you will receive it as an email.

1Give Lingot•4 months ago

bonbayel 20 17 14 13 13 13 9 8 6 35

I understood that the ë is only to show that it's accented, and that accented ë is always yo.

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

kevolutionary 17 17 14 11 9 7 324

'yeesh-YO' - ё always takes the stress.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

GlobalJim711 15 13 12 11 10 12

Wow. Now that you mention it..it was pronounced more like ш back in the late 70s. It just never really registered!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

GlobalJim711 15 13 12 11 10 12

How do you pronounce борщ или Крущев?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

"Хрущёв" ;-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

GlobalJim711 15 13 12 11 10 12

But how?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

These examples are correct:

<http://forvo.com/word/%D1%85%D1%80%D1%83%D1%89%D1%91%D0%B2/#ru>

I don't like борщ so get щи instead (pay attention to the country of origin there too):

<http://forvo.com/word/%D1%89%D0%B8/#ru>

2Give Lingot•4 months ago

GlobalJim711 15 13 12 11 10 12

Ok...I am not really hearing a difference. I'm thinking th pronunciation of these two in the alphabet is the only time they are clearly distinguishable. Otherwise, most of what we hear...is nothing more than a psychological reality. I thought they were different; therefore, they were different. I clearly say ёще as ёшеand if I forced "a correct" pronunciation, it would sound odd or exaggerated. It is what I would call a hyper correction.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

I disagree. Is there no difference between щиток and шина for example?

<http://forvo.com/search/%D1%89%D0%B8%D1%82%D0%BE%D0%BA/ru/>

<http://forvo.com/search/%d1%88%d0%b8%d0%bd%d0%b0/>

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

I am not sure a native speaker could pronounce ешѐ. Maybe ешо, at which point you would hear the difference.

If you are familiar with how they pronounce R in the U.S., try pronouncing ш with your tongue about there. It won't be that close but it will, at least, give you an idea how SH-like consonants may change their sound depending on where your tongue is.

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

@ Shady_arc

My thoughts exactly after trying to imagine "Хрущѐв" with "ш" instead of "щ": it turns into "Хрушов"

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

Harvey_Duffy 4

Borshch ili Krooshchev

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 days ago

va-diim 15 14 12 10 6

Borsh' ili Hrushiov

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 days ago

bonbayel 20 17 14 13 13 13 9 8 6 35

That's how I learned it in college back in the 1960's. I was very surprised when I discovered that the 2 letters are nearly the same now, and definitely not shch. I guess щ as a long (double) ш ш makes sense and is an understandable transition. Knowing some linguistics about language change, I expect that the shch sound still exists - maybe in "educated classes", and the shsh version became more politically correct in Soviet times. Just a guess, I haven't a clue!

2ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

The "shch" version was common in St. Petersburg in the 19th century. You can even hear such pronunciation in Nadezhda Krupskaya's recordings (born 1869). It was alive even at the beginning of the 20th century when [ɕ:] was the norm in Moscow. This sound was also a de facto norm for theatre actors both in Moscow and St. Petersburg, which probably eventually lead to its spread.

The old pronunciation was still marked as a possible variation within the norm in the 70s. However, by the 1990s it was all but dead except in dialects—both for old and for young speakers. So it is not even mentioned anymore.

You can listen to different pronunciations here.

The database includes not only words with an orthographic щ, but also words like ежy and дождь.

3ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

bonbayel 20 17 14 13 13 13 9 8 6 35

Thank you! I studied Russian in college in 1961, so the textbooks were probably from the 50's and the text we read were Turgenev, Chekov and the like, so we were learning "literary" Russian. I just found "A short Russian Reference Grammar with Pronunciation", published in 1960. It says that щ should be pronounced as standard Moscow щ , but in Leningrad it was pronounced shch. My first teacher was actually from Lithuania, so he may have learned the Leningrad version. My beginner textbook was probably written by Leon Stilman (I just found it on Amazon just now in 2nd edition from 1972, together with a book I still have Russian Verbs of Motion from 1951.) He would have had an older pronunciation, and if he was a refugee might have insisted on the St Petersburg version.

4ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

Even in the late nineties, textbooks were still teaching this sound as shch. I think it's hard to explain the real difference between the sounds in text, but I have no idea why they get around this issue by teaching an incorrect pronunciation. It's quite peculiar :-/

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Robert252247 19 17 16 15 13 12 10 9 6 34

Yes, I have a textbook from around 1990 that says shch. When I start losing the sound for щ and ш in my head I go to the IPA site on wikipedia and just click on the two alternating for a while. Then I try to copy what I heard rather than worrying so much about position of tongue (although that info is a good place to start). This is also useful for ы, which I think is even more difficult for English speakers to get right. If you don't know the IPA for the sounds, just search for "Russian IPA" and you can read all about the sounds of Russian, as well as click on sound samples. Use Forvo to hear how they sound in actual usage. :)

2Give Lingot•2 days ago

bonbayel 20 17 14 13 13 13 9 8 6 35

I guess it's not really incorrect, but regional. Interesting that it was still being taught that way so late.

1Give Lingot•4 months ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

You're right - maybe "non-standard is a better definition.

My best explanation is that it's easier to differentiate sh and shch, and then hope students will pick up the correct pronunciation when they're exposed to the language, but it seems a bit backwards/upside down to me.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

11 My sound is not working. What can I do?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204882510-My-sound-is-not-working-What-can-I-do->

If you are unable to hear audio on Duolingo, please follow the steps below:

0. Before you start, if you are having loading errors or random slowness, please check out "Is Duolingo down right now?" to see if we are experiencing server issues.

On duolingo.com:

1. Try refreshing the page. In many cases, sound issues are only temporary.
2. Check your microphone and sounds settings on Duolingo and make sure your voice autoplay, sound effects and speaker are "on." Remember to save by clicking on the green button. Refresh the page to check that the change in settings was successfully applied.
3. Make sure the issue is not with the speakers themselves. Make sure they are on, plugged in, that the volume is turned up, and that audio works on other applications and websites. You can also try restarting your computer and browser to see if that helps. Also try using Duolingo with earphones plugged in—sometimes that will work. If it does, this could indicate that your speakers are malfunctioning.
4. Check to make sure you have the latest version of your browser. Clear your browser's cache and cookies, and then restart it.
5. Update Flash. (Skip this if you're using Duolingo on Chrome, which uses HTML5 instead of Flash.)
6. If you have the Adblock Plus in your Firefox Add-ons do the following: while you have the Duolingo website up, look on the button bar at the top of your browser for the red ABP stop sign button. Click on it and to bring down the menu, then click on "Disable on duolingo.com". The ABP stop sign should turn gray. Now refresh your page.
7. Remove/disable browser extensions. Here are instructions for how to do that in specific browsers:

Chrome
Internet Explorer
Firefox
8. Try a different browser (such as Chrome, or Firefox) to see if there is a local issue on your browser.
9. If audio still doesn't work, turn the sound settings off (see step 2) and consider submitting a bug report. Make sure you have checked out "Is Duolingo down right now?" first, to see if we are experiencing server issues.

12 Eureka Moments with the Irish Copula: A Crib Sheet

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7068975>

heathermagoo 25 25 23 17 13 11 11 10 9 180

The copula looked easy at first glance. But the devil was in the detail.

Drawing on my own series of eureka moments, I put together this crib sheet. I focus on the copula in Classification and Identification sentences, pulling together all the information I encountered while completing the Duolingo lessons and including Duolingo examples as much as possible. I've tacked on a brief teaser at the end for negation, question/response, copula inherent in questions, and other idioms. When you spot errors, please post and I will make corrections.

Since this "crib sheet" has grown to the length of a short chapter, I don't always include numerous examples. But if you have favorite Duolingo examples just say the word and I'll add them. As you've learned or will learn soon, ba can indicate past or conditional. To minimize clutter in the translations,

I've split the difference. I've translated the "X is Y" ba sentences using the past tense; for the "liking and preference" ba expressions (where "would be" is the more likely translation) I've gone with the conditional.

EUREKA MOMENTS WITH THE IRISH COPULA: A Crib Sheet

Use the copula is/ba to link the subject (noun/pronoun) to the predicate (noun/pronoun) in a relationship of equivalence, "X is Y"

Is bean í. She is a woman.

Is gúna é. It is a dress.

Is buachaill mé. I am a boy.

Ba chapail iad. They were horses. (Ba +lenition)

WARNING: Avoid the dreaded TSF error (Tá sé fear). WRONG! WRONG! WRONG!

IT MUST BE: Is fear mé. I am a man. RIGHT! RIGHT! RIGHT!

CLASSIFICATION AND IDENTIFICATION

CLASSIFICATION (X IS "A" Y)

--Expresses class membership. X (the subject) belongs to the class Y (the predicate).

--The predicate is always indefinite (uses the indefinite article "a" in the singular and no article in the plural – a teacher, a doctor, an animal, teachers, doctors, animals)

Is dochtúir í. She is a doctor. That is, "she" belongs to a class called "doctor."

Is portán é. It is a crab. That is, "it" belongs to a class called "crab."

Ba dhochtúir mé. I was a doctor. That is, "I" belonged to a class called "doctor." (Ba + lenition)

B'aisteoir é. He was an actor. That is, "he" belonged to a class called "actor". (Use b' if the following word begins with a vowel)

IDENTIFICATION (X IS "THE" Y)

--Expresses identity of subject and predicate. X (the subject) and Y (the predicate) refer to the same entity.

--The predicate is always a definite noun, i.e., noun with definite article (the river, the trees, the shop), noun with a possessive pronoun (my horse, your book, their ice cream) or proper noun (Paul, Dublin, Apple).

Is í an dochtúir an bhean. The woman is the doctor. "The woman" and "the doctor" refer to the same person.

Is é mo dheartháir é. He is my brother. "He" and "my brother" refer to the same person.

Is é Pól uachtarán na hÉireann. Paul is the President of Ireland. "Paul" and "the President of Ireland" refer to the same person.

Ba mise an dochtúir. I was the doctor. "I" and "doctor" refer to the same person.

PRONOUNS WITH THE COPULA

Sé, sí, siad with Tá (and all other conjugated verbs) become é, í, iad with the copula; note that object pronouns (used as the object of conjugated verbs) are identical to copula pronouns except that tú becomes thú

Ea the neuter pronoun meaning "it," is used only with the copula. Ea is a survival from an earlier time when Irish had a neuter gender.

Emphatic pronouns are used in some copula constructions: mé/mise, tú/tusa, é/eisean, í/ise, ea/eadhon, muid/muidne, sinn/sinne, sibh/sibhse, iad/iadsan

WORD ORDER FOR CLASSIFICATION AND IDENTIFICATION—ITEMIZED

Now we have all the pieces and some stickum. Let's make sentences.

Classification: X is a Y

Is dochtúir í. She is a doctor. That is, "she" belongs to a class called "doctor."

Classification: X is a Y with emphasis (left shift)

Dochtúir is ea í. She is a doctor.

Here's how you emphasize the predicate. Take your unemphasized sentence:

Is dochtúir í. She is a doctor.

For emphasis, shift the predicate, dochtúir, to the beginning of the sentence (left shift). This leaves a blank in your original sentence.

Dochtúir is ____ í.

Something has to go into that blank. What is that something? Ea. The neuter copula pronoun is used in this instance, regardless of the gender/number of the noun being emphasized.

Dochtúir is ea í. She is a doctor. Literally: A doctor, is it she.

Classification: the X is a Y

A proleptic [anticipating] pronoun is placed before the subject. It matches the subject in gender/number

Is dochtúir é an fear. The man is a doctor. Literally: He is a doctor, the man.

Identification: I am the Y: Subject is Personal pronoun, 1st and 2nd person

Is mise an dochtúir. I am the doctor. (emphatic pronoun preferred in 1st and 2nd persons)

Identification: She is the Y: Subject is Personal pronoun, 3rd person

Is í an léachtóir í. She is the lecturer. ("echoing" pronoun added at end in 3rd person)

Identification: Séamus is the Y: Subject is Proper noun/definite noun/noun with possessive pronoun

Is é Séamus an múinteoir. Séamus is the teacher. (proleptic [anticipating] pronoun added before the subject; agrees in gender/number with the subject)

Identification: This/that is the Y: Subject is a demonstrative pronoun

Is é seo an peann. This is the pen. (proleptic [anticipating] pronoun added before the subject)

Seo an peann. This is the pen. (Simple structure. Is é can be dropped in affirmative statements.)

WORD ORDER PATTERNS WITH "SUBPREDICATES"

Caution! Garbledygook Ahead!

The basic word order for the copular sentences itemized in the previous section is:

Copula – Predicate – Subject. Is dochtúir í.

But in many instances, we find pronouns (ea for indefinite predicates; personal pronouns matching gender/number for definite predicates) popping up in the sentences.

All those ea's and é's are referred to as "subpredicates".

Traditional grammars and theoretical linguists come up with different explanations for this phenomenon. But descriptively speaking, it should be safe to say that sometimes a noun in the original copular clause, for emphasis or for some other compelling grammatical or linguistic reason, may shift its position, forming a new clause. Then a pronoun takes its place as a substitute in the original copular clause and that pronoun is called the "subpredicate".

The four patterns below show shifts that take place in X is Y copula sentences. (The nifty patterns are not my own invention and I have credited them at the end of the crib sheet.) Whenever possible, I have provided literal translations below to give a sense of the shift, the substitution and the resulting clauses. I've avoided comments on why these shifts occur (except in the obvious instance of emphasis above in the X is "a" Y construction) because I don't have adequate experience or knowledge at this point to inform a viable opinion.

In other words, it beats me.

Pattern 1 – Copula + Predicate + Subject (used with Classification; predicate indefinite)

Is bean í. She is a woman.

Pattern 2 – Copula + Predicate + subpredicate + Subject (used with Classification; predicate indefinite)

Is dochtúir é an fear. The man is a doctor. More literally: The man is him, the doctor.

Pattern 3 – Copula + subpredicate + Subject + Predicate (used with Identification; predicate definite)

Is é Seamus an dochtúir. Seamus is the doctor. More literally: Seamus is him, the doctor.

Pattern 4 - Copula + subpredicate + Predicate + pronominal subject (used with Identification; predicate definite)

Is é an dochtúir é. He is the doctor. More literally: He is him, the doctor.

NEGATION:

Some people describe the copula as a defective verb. Some describe it as a particle. On the practical level, if you think of the copula as a particle rather than as a verb, it makes it very easy to understand how other particles like ní, níor, an, ar, etc. can replace the copula in negative sentences or question/response.

Ní replaces is in negative sentences (if the word following ní begins in a vowel add h to the beginning of that word, no hyphen; h-prothesis)

Níor replaces ba in negative sentences (+ lenition)

Níorbh replaces ba in negative sentences if the word following begins with a vowel

EXAMPLES

Ní fear mé. I am not a man

Ní mé an dochtúir. I am not the doctor.

Ní hí an léachtóir í. She is not the lecturer. (h-prothesis)

Ní hé an dochtúir an fear. The man is not the doctor. (h-prothesis)

Níor dhochtúir í. He was not a doctor. (+ lenition)

Níorbh aisteoir é. He was not an actor. (use níorbh if following word begins with a vowel)

QUESTION/RESPONSE

QUESTION:

An replaces is (DOES NOT cause eclipsis when replacing copula)

Ar replaces ba

Arbh replaces ba if the word following begins with a vowel

-----Ar replaces is in Connacht Irish; ab if the following word begins with a vowel.

Nach replaces is for a negative question

Nár replaces ba for a negative question

Nárbh replaces ba for a negative question if the word following begins with a vowel

RESPONSE:

USE EA in the response if the predicate is indefinite (h-prothesis, if the word preceding ends in a vowel, add an initial "h": Ní hea.)

Use the personal pronoun that matches the gender/number of the subject if the predicate is definite (h-prothesis, if the word preceding ends in a vowel, add an initial "h": Ní hé.)

EXAMPLES

An dochtúir í? Is she a doctor? (no eclipsis) Is ea. Yes, she is. Ní hea. (h-prothesis) No, she isn't.
An portán é? (no eclipsis) Is it a crab? Is ea. Yes, it is. Ní hea. (h-prothesis) No, it isn't An dochtúir é Pól? Is Paul a doctor? (no eclipsis) Sea. (Sea is the contracted form of Is ea) Yes. Ní hea.
(h-prothesis) No, he isn't.
An peann é sin? (no eclipsis) Is that a pen Ní hea. (h-prothesis)
An é an portán é? Is it the crab. Is é. Yes it is. Ní hé. (h-prothesis) No it isn't.
An í Máire mo mhúinteoir? Is Mary my teacher. Is í. Yes, she is. Ní hí.(h-prothesis) No, she isn't.
An é Pól an dochtúir? Is Paul the doctor? Is é. Yes, he is. Ní hé. (h-prothesis) No, he isn't.
An mise an léachtóir? Am I the lecturer? Is tú. Yes you are. Ní tú. No you aren't.
An sibhse a tuismitheoirí? Are you her parents? Is muid. Yes we are. Ní muid. No we aren't.
An tusa Seán? Are you Seán? Is mé. Yes, I am. Ní mé. No, I am not.
An é seo an peann? Is this the pen? Is é. Yes, it is. Ní hé. (h-prothesis) No, it isn't An é sin m'athair? Is that my father? Is é. Yes, it is. Ní hé. (h-prothesis) No, it isn't -----Ar dochtúir í (Is she a doctor?) Connacht Irish
-----Ab ise an dochtúir (Is she the doctor?) Connacht Irish

Ar mhúinteoir í? Was she a teacher? (+lenition) Ba í. Yes, she was. Níorbh í. No, she wasn't.
Arbh é an múinteoir? Was he the teacher? Ba é. Yes, he was. Níorbh é. No, he wasn't.
Nach dochtúir mé? Am I not a doctor?
Nar dochtúir mé? Was I not the doctor?
THE HIDDEN COPULA IN QUESTIONS (a few examples from Duolingo)

The copula is inherent in many question words. In those instances, the response will also take the copula.

Take a look at a couple of examples from the Duolingo course to understand this more fully:

Cé? = Who [is]? The copula is is inherent in cé (Who is?). So the response to cé questions also includes the copula.

Cé tú? Who are you? (copula inherent in cé) / Is múinteoir mé. I am a teacher.

Cé hí? Who is she (copula inherent in cé; h-prothesis) / Is múinteoir í. She is a teacher.

Cé hé? Who is he? (copula inherent in cé; h-prothesis) / Is múinteoir é. He is a teacher.

Cé hiad? Who are they? (copula inherent in cé; h-prothesis) / Is múinteoirí iad. They are teachers.

Cér? = Who [was]? The copula ba is inherent in cér (Who was?). So the response to cér questions also includes the copula.

Cérbh? Who [was] (Use cérbh instead of cér if the following word begins with a vowel)

Cér tú? Who were you? / Ba mhúinteoir mé. (+lenition) I was a teacher.

Cérbh iad? Who were they? / Ba mhúinteoirí iad. (+lenition) They are teachers.

Cad =What [is]? (the copula is is inherent in cad)

Cad é do cheist? What is your question? That is: What is it, your question?

This sentence has two clauses:

Cad é What [is] it

do cheist your question

Knowing the copula is inherent in cad helps us understand another Duolingo example:

Cad atá sin? What is that? More literally: What is it, which that is?

Cad What [is it] the copula is is inherent in cad; "it" is also implied in this instance a is a relative pronoun which/that ("which" used with a comma, "that" used without a comma) introducing a new clause (tá sin=that is)

tá is sin that

So two clauses:

Cad What [is it]

atá sin which that is (a and tá contract to atá)

OTHER IDIOMATIC USES

Liking and Preference

Is maith linn seacláid. We like chocolate.

Ba mhaith liom é sin. I would like that.

B'fhearr liom tae. I would prefer tea.

Arbh fhearr leat caifé? Would you prefer coffee?

Name

Yu Ming is ainm dom. My name is Yu Ming. (Literally: Yu Ming is name to me)

Place of Origin

Is as Éirinn di. She is from Ireland.

Ownership

Is linne é. It is ours. (Literally, It is with us [permanently]. linne= linn + the emphatic suffix –ne

Is le Pól an carr. The car belongs to Paul. (Literally: The car is with Paul [permanently].)

Superlative

an fear is mó the biggest man

I MADE NO ATTEMPT AT A COMPREHENSIVE SURVEY OF THE LITERATURE OR ANYTHING ELSE. I WENT FOR WHATEVER CAUGHT MY FANCY. :D :D :D

My main references were the Duolingo “Notes and Tips,” sentences and attached posts!

For the catalog of syntax:

<http://www.braesicke.de/gram.htm>

For the tidy subpredicate patterns:

<https://listserv.heanet.ie/cgi-bin/wa?A3=ind9603=GAELIC-L=0=361580=---=text%2Fplain>

Thoughts on Linguistic Theory:

<https://corkirish.wordpress.com/2012/10/21/understanding-the-copula/>

Terms and Examples:

<http://people.fas.harvard.edu/~hillers/BUNTUS-summer.pdf>

Give Lingot53

232 years ago

Leave a new comment

17 Comments

etonyan 17 14 9 6 6

Not scary after all. Just different.

Okay, heading back to the lessons (I'll save this link).

I have to live up to my green and orange.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

heathermagoo 25 25 23 17 13 11 11 10 9 180

Actually, you still look a little scared. :D

But don't worry. If a teddy bear can sort this stuff out, it should be a piece of cake for a wise old owl like you.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

galaxyrocker 18 2

For native speakers, the ba form is normally the conditional. It only becomes the past tense in context. So, it's more correct to say that Ba dhochtúir í means "She would be a doctor" but can also be the past, instead of suggesting it the other way around. Also, for tenses/moods/aspects that don't have a copular form, you can't use it. Is dochtúir thú can never be "you will be a doctor". You would say Beidh tú i do dhochtúir instead.

So, essentially, the one issue I had is with you using ba as the past, since that's the marked (not normal) form for native speakers, with the unmarked (the natural interpretation) being the conditional.

Also, just to add a little dialectal variety: Before a vowel in Connacht Irish, cé can become cérb, so you get Cérb í instead of cé hí. An, instead of an in the present tense, you'll see ar, with ab before a vowel.

Ar dochtúir í (Is she a doctor)

Ab ise an dochtúir (Is she the doctor)

3ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

heathermagoo 25 25 23 17 13 11 11 10 9 180

THANKS SO MUCH FOR ALL YOUR EXPLANATIONS THROUGHOUT THE COURSE!

A GREAT HELP START-TO-FINISH.

Would that only apply to ba or does it extend to níor/níorbh?

For this crib sheet I'm sticking with ba in the past tense for my "X is Y" translations. RTE.ie is using the past tense for their ba translations in <http://www.rte.ie/tv/turasteanga/tt.pdf> . And I see so many examples of "X is Y" without markers translated in the past tense in <http://www.focloir.ie> "advanced search". I think I'll just run with the crowd. :D :D :D

But to emphasize your important point, I've added a number of conditional Ba mhaith liom-type expressions to the Other Idiomatic Uses section.

And I've added ar/ab to the question particles, along with your examples.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

galaxyrocker 18 2

It's for all the conditional/past forms.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

TheHappyHippo 20 12 5 2 2

Nice job. How did you manage all that formatting?

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

heathermagoo 25 25 23 17 13 11 11 10 9 180
Thank you! Markdown markup.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

niamhwitch 16 11 776
Take this lingot.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

heathermagoo 25 25 23 17 13 11 11 10 9 180
Thanks so much. :D

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Anson_G 12
go raibh maith agat

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

heathermagoo 25 25 23 17 13 11 11 10 9 180
Ná habair é. :D Hope it proves useful.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Tobosaur 17 8
Thank you so much!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

heathermagoo 25 25 23 17 13 11 11 10 9 180
My pleasure!
Go raibh míle, Síle! That's a different way to say "thank you" that I picked up from Clisare:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DpYRH7AYuvA>
Truncate "Go raibh míle maith agat" and add Sheila/Síle to make it rhyme.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Daiana-1602 21 20 11 10 9 6 3 541
Thanks a lot for putting this together. I highly appreciate it. I send a lingot to you

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

heathermagoo 25 25 23 17 13 11 11 10 9 180
Glad it was useful. :D I just read through it and found it a good review.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

BaiShann 13 10 8 2

This is really a first rate essay. I gave you two lingots. Have you noticed you have more than twice as many lingots as up votes?

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

heathermagoo 25 25 23 17 13 11 11 10 9 180

Thank you for the lingots. I had't noticed there were twice as many lingots as upvotes, but now I see everyone has been very generous. :D

I learned a lot putting it together and hope it helps other learners also.

13 Russian: the Alphabet and the Keyboard

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/11449014>

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

Hello! This is largely a copy of a post we made at our Incubator page. Still, the more people have this information, the better.

Here is a short page of exercises to teach you the alphabet (a video by ShadyArc is also available, though a bit fast-paced).

smallpage

You can also read about it at these two pages.

Depending on how the situation unfolds, you may or may not immediately see Russian letters in your lessons. Duolingo uses a Latin transliteration by default. If you cannot see Cyrillics but wish to, use the small button at the top to switch to Russian. It will read Aa or Яя.

Now, some tips on installing a Russian keyboard on your device:

WINDOWS

Open the Control Panel, then go to Clock, Language, and Region. There, select Change keyboard or other input methods.

Click the Change keyboard button and add any languages your heart desires. You can have more than one keyboard layout for a language! To switch between languages, a keyboard shortcut is normally used (Shift+Alt by default, but you can change that). A phonetic keyboard can be found here. Windows 8 and higher have their own "mnemonic" layout (not without flaws, though)

Check the Microsoft site for a more thorough guide.

MAC

Open the Apple menu and click System Preferences. Select Keyboard and click the Input Sources button. You can add languages there. Mac has a phonetic one right there if you need it.

Also, check the option Show Input menu in menu bar. That is it. The default shortcut to switch languages is  + Space

Or, in more detail, HERE.

IPAD

Go to your Settings and find the General tab. Select Keyboard→Keyboards and click Add New Keyboard...

ANDROID PHONE

Go to Settings and find the Controls tab. Select language and input. Click the settings icon next to the keyboard, then click select input languages

(here is a longer explanation)

DIFFERENT LAYOUTS

Now, let us discuss different keyboards that exist. Russians do not use special rocket-shaped keyboards to type. After all, a normal keyboard already has over 100 keys, why not just paint their letters there, right?

This is exactly what it looks IRL. A keyboard has Russian and Latin letters side by side. Russian users switch the language they use by pressing a keyboard shortcut (e.g., Shift + Alt or  + Space)

There are two main layouts for a learner:

the standard (ЙЦУКЕН) is what Russians actually use. It makes sense if Russian is your love for life or if you have easy access to Russian keyboards (stickers?). Or maybe you live or plan to live in Russia, eh? For obvious reasons, it also makes total sense on a phone or a tablet. They have no physical keyboard anyway! Besides, they might turn out to be less customizable—but a standard keyboard is always there.

standard

standard2

a phonetic keyboard (say, ЯБЕПТЫ) which sort-of-matches Russian letters to Latin letters close in pronunciation (also maps extra keys somewhere). I think, these layouts are just fine if you are moderately interested in Russian but that's it. A phonetic keyboard has an obvious advantage if your physical keyboard does not have Russian letters.

phonetic

On a PC or a Mac a phonetic keyboard mapping is always a choice (Macs even have one in the basic package), and the switching between the languages is done by keyboard shortcuts (Shift+Alt /  + Space)

There are even tools to create your own layouts: for example, <http://www.keyboard-layout-editor.com/#/>.

You can also use Google Input Tools.

Now there is a chrome extension that changes the layouts automatically as your exercises require English or Russian input. Thanks to FelixAuer.

Give Lingot128

3291 year ago

Leave a new comment
283 Comments

MJG7 25 18 16 11 7 1113

An image or printout of the key-map is better than labeling the keys, and you don't have to move your hands to read it. Don't look at the keys, look at the reference card. Keep your fingers on the home keys ready to type.

If you are having trouble finding your place: There are two keys with index marks you can feel with your (index)fingers, mark those keys in your image.

55ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

Nart 20 11 9 9 4 1

I invested a few hours in learning how to touch type the alphabet from memory with no aids, and it's working very well for me. I used this free website: <http://www.sense-lang.org/typing/tutor/keyboardingRU.php>

20ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

northernguy 25 22 14 1272

It is all in Russian. Wasn't much help. By the time my Russian is good enough to figure out what their approach is, I will already have worked out a different solution.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AnnaGrace 6 2

You can use Google Translate Chrome extension to translate the page and/or you can go through the site in English to learn the format. <http://sense-lang.org/typing/tutor/keyboarding.php>

8ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

ktor 8 8 6

Hi there, the site is now translated to English and btw is very well prepared. You probably would like to know that :) I'm going to finish my russian touch typing course there.

3ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

northernguy 25 22 14 1272

Yes. I looked at their English language course enough to get the basic points about the page and started using the Russian. At the beginner level there are only a couple of things you need to know about the page anyway.

I am surprised at how difficult I'm finding it to make real progress. I'm using Memrise and Babbel just to stay acquainted with how the letters are used. Once I have the keyboard down, I will go back to Duo Russian.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

LisSmith 5 2

I agree!

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 days ago

Dim_Box 25 9

If your goal is to type without seeing on a keyboard at all, look at this multilingual site <http://study.nabiraem.ru/> Some practice, and you can do it, believe me :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dogdogcat 16

I agree about using an image of the keyboard. I am uploading the screenshot of the Russian keyboard that I use in case it's helpful for anyone else. I put red squares (somehow appropriate ;) around the index finger keys. I print it out, fold it down, and keep it at the top of my keyboard.

Duo

PS You can switch between keyboards with left Alt-Shift pressed simultaneously (at least on my PC with Windows 7).

7ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

ktor 8 8 6

When on windows, type Win+r, type in osk (on screen keyboard) and Enter. Windows will show current keyboard layout.

5ReplyGive Lingot6•11 months ago

Erwin.H 9 7 4 3

Ah yes that is very helpful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

f0ffee 15 12 9 8 8 6 4 4 2 2

Very useful! Have a lingot!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

helmi23 21 14 11 11 9 1

Sounds like a good idea so I'll give it a try, though for now just using a virtual keyboard.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

MJG7 25 18 16 11 7 1113

Actually, your way is probably better for a lot of people. I know the included on-screen keyboards in Windows and Ubuntu/Linux show the current key-map. If have room on your screen and don't need to mark your place, just turn on the on-screen keyboard and use that as a reference.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Azureskies 12 12 11 9 7 6 6 5 3 3 3

I know that-for at least Windows 8 and 10-there's a "Fade" button that makes the on screen keyboard into a semi-transparent overlay. The button appears after enabling it in Options > "Show keys to make it easier to move around the screen". It goes opaque every time Ctrl, Shift or Alt is pressed though.

It can also be docked with a button that appears after enabling the same setting, but then it cannot be resized horizontally.

I'm sure there are alternatives, but that's just what I use.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

helmi23 21 14 11 11 9 1

At first I just typed on the virtual keyboard but after your post I have now diminished it in size and put it in a corner of my screen and using it as reference. Good way of getting acquainted with where the Russian keys are. And ofcourse always at hand. A printout might get misplaced.

1ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

Drumknott 17 12 8 7 5 4

Tried that, and found I could type in a Word document with the onscreen keyboard displayed. Unfortunately, every time I tried to type anything on the Duo site, the onscreen keyboard vanished, so I had to buy stickers for the keys instead. (this is on a PC)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TyNoOutlet 9 6 3 3 2 2 2 2

I had something like that happen! I can only type Cyrillic in Word but not on Duolingo

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ratakoolta 14 12 11 10 5

Quite useful!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ChloeMacph1 10 4

I definitely like the idea of this!

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

melicampo50 10 6

715 streak? Now that's dedication!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521

I normally use Cyrillic characters in lessons, but I like to switch between the Cyrillic and Transliterated views to help me better associate the letters with their sounds. Unfortunately doing this clears the answer box, if I've already started typing there. Is there any chance this could be fixed so that switching from one to the other doesn't clear what you've typed?

15ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MaxChase 18 15 13 940

In what I think is a related vein, it'd also be nice to be able to switch between them after the answer is in.

10ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521

Agreed.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

How can I have Duolingo show me the Cyrillic ? I think I was asked to choose an option when I started, and just hit what was normal for me, but now I can't see how to change it. (I hope this made sense!)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521

As filipmc said, this has already been answered elsewhere in this thread. That said, at the top of the lesson panel there's a button labelled Aa/Яя. You can use this to switch between the transliterations and the Cyrillic characters. If you are using the Mobile Web version of duolingo, you may need to start a lesson on a desktop sized browser in order to change it. Once changed there the change should also affect the Mobile Web version.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarthaSull 12 10 7 6

Mmmmm, when I press the Aa button, it just makes my letters larger or smaller. Not Cyrillic. Мне жаль.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

Read the sticky post at the top of the Russian forum. Actually, this is its thread, so you only need to scroll to the top of this and read the post above; these are all comments on that post.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AsphodelZarafa 21 10 9 7 6 60

For those of us using Linux (I'm personally using Manjaro Linux KDE [Arch Linux distro]); you do not need to feel alienated. First, add the Russian keyboard layout from the keyboard settings. Then install Florence Virtual Keyboard. It's quite decent. All the best. <https://aur.archlinux.org/packages/florence/> ... To Shady_arc and all the Russian team who made the Russian course a reality, I just want to say большое спасибо!

14ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

You can write a short guide if you wish. Then I can append it to the above post. I do not quite remember how I added keyboard on Linux (didn't have any problems with Mint).

8ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

HuShifang 22 16 15 15 14 9 5 4 2 676

I didn't have any issues installing it on Mint 17.2 Rafaela / Cinnamon 64-bit yesterday either. A mini-guide (perhaps this might apply to Cinnamon across distros?):

I simply navigated via the "Start" menu to Preferences -- Keyboard -- Layouts and then added (with the + button) the Russian (US, Phonetic) layout (which has mappings slightly different from those in the image above).

The flag icon applet which appears in the lower right corner will, by default, still show the US flag when you're typing in Russian because the layout is QWERTY-based; to change it to display the more informative two-letter language abbreviation (i.e. "en" / "ru"), right-click on the applet, select "Configure", and de-select the button "Use flags to display keyboard layouts" (it's the only option on the Configure screen for me).

When you left-click the applet, you'll have the option of calling up the keyboard layout in its own window (which I'm finding useful).

If you want to change other options -- e.g. set hotkey combinations for cycling through input languages -- navigate to Preferences -- Keyboard -- Layouts and press the "Options..." button in the lower right corner.

As an aside, the English (US, international with dead keys) layout is great for Duo's Latin-scripted European languages -- the accents, retroflexes, and alternative letters all work more or less intuitively. (I.e., the German ß is Right Alt + S, the Spanish ñ is ~ immediately followed by n, etc. Some characters are somewhat less intuitive, e.g. ø = Right Alt + L, but they're the exception. Typically, you type the desired diacritical mark and then the letter, e.g. ó = ' + o, ü = " + u -- which can be slightly annoying when you're working with apostrophes, so you may want to still have the standard English (US) layout available for use.)

In any event, спасибо Shady_arc for all the amazing hard work you and the team did!

4ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

Baker_Matt 20 18 8 7 4

This is great. I made both these changes in Xubuntu Wily Werewolf through the default keyboard settings. Much better than trying to memorize the Unicode values!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AsphodelZarafa 21 10 9 7 6 60

I decided to create and upload a brief video tutorial. I hope it comes in handy. You may append this link: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=paojq-D9Vpo>

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

AsphodelZarafa 21 10 9 7 6 60

Thank you for the suggestion. Remember though, that different distro flavors may have varying settings and GUI layouts. Anyway, I will make a guide for Manjaro Linux, and perhaps others may be able to adapt those instructions to their own Linux distro.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

seraph-nm 15 6

Thank you. I use vanilla Arch Linux myself. Appreciate the recommendation on virtual keyboards.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

AsphodelZarafa 21 10 9 7 6 60

You are very welcome! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

sm_logowr 13 8 4 2

If you use Ubuntu or any of its derivatives, you can use Onboard as on-screen keyboard, as it's included by default.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sjalistra 10 5 5

I don't think people using GNU/Linux are having issues with a keyboard honestly

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MattCat8 19

its very interesting to see so many intelligent and supportive people in one thread. The data/idea exchanges ive been able to experience through Duolingo is unequivocally one of the best experiences of my life. It's been helping me get a bit smarter, but more than that, its been helping me emotionally. Ive been going through some stuff, life can be difficult. its obviously not always easy to be a person, but this is such a positive outlet. it makes me happy and causes me to feel very hopeful about the future as well. I think Duolingo is one of the greatest, most ethical and most important historical events against all known human achievements. I love and respect how Duolingo is changing our brains and the world for the better.

This is likely a silly question, as its probably been asked many times, but is there an ETA on iphone6 support for the Russian course? i'm very excited about it and i'm so grateful for all the hard work that must've gone into its development :D

thank you for taking the time to read this,

~ matt

13ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

It'll get rolled out to the apps when the number of reports drops below a certain threshold. The team might be able to give you an idea of how it's currently doing in this regard, but I don't think anyone can give you an actual date.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BlackDove3 9 8 3 3 3

Agree! The World will as One. Wish there was a way to let the Duolingo creators know but then they would be flooded with letters.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Oscar.Tov 19 8 6

$3 (AUD) to order some top-notch keyboard stickers on eBay, it really makes things easier.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DavidMcK 18 16 13 11 8 5 20

I've done this. £2.00 UK on eBay.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

airelibre 24 21 21 19 13 13 11

I have five keyboards installed on my computer and it is a real hassle having to change script each time the language changes in the exercises. I wish there were a way for it to select the right keyboard automatically.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

formagella 14 12 8

it's useful to know for users focused on western european languages but maybe you can also use this to decrease the number of keyboards you have to switch to write the various languages you use:

the Swiss layout (either German or French, there is a very small difference depending on whether the umlaut or accents are more important to you) has all the keys needed to type western (in the cold war sense) european languages minus north germanic and turkish, namely all the following characters can be typed on the same layout (either directly or through dead keys for the ones that are not used in the languages of Switzerland):

all vowels (both capitalized and not) with the diacritics ^~¨'¨

ñ

ç

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Soedori 21 10 8 6 4

It is relatively easy if you know the hotkey IMO. Win+Space

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Oesterreich7 16 12 4 4 2 2

If you use windows, presss Alt+Shift to change you keyboards quickly. You will still have to press it a few times to get to the right keyboard, but it should be faster than switching them manually.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

airelibre 24 21 21 19 13 13 11

That was actually what I was complaining about! Russian is my number 5 so I have to press it 4 times in a row, and then one more to get back to English. But if I forget whether to press once or four times, I end up lost and have to look and it's just a pain in the a.

Until there is some magical automatic keyboard switcher (fingers crossed!) I'll make do with the hotkeys I found out how to create (Ctrl+1 for English, Ctrl+2 for Russian - much easier).

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

Oh, I didn't know you could do that - I got rid of everything but Russian and English on my laptop because it was such a pain going through several. I shall have to look into hotkeys, cheers.

It would be lovely if it switched automagically. It does that in the app and it's brilliant. If I could use the app without the too-easy matching/build a sentence from these words exercises, I'd be one very happy bunny.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521

how do you enable that in the app? I have to manually switch the keyboard each time.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

Eep - I don't know. My iPad has just always done it automatically. Maybe it's a system thing? I know the Amazon Kindle Fire does not appear, in my short acquaintance, to do it automatically.

On the iPad, it switches between languages and has done since I started using it - not just Cyrillic versus Latin, but you get all the necessary accents and what have you for say German or Spanish or Polish or Turkish.

It's sort of spoiled me, and makes the switching on the laptop seem positively cumbersome.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

There are some tricks, like getting rid of English if another keyboard can double for it (for instance, Japanese keyboard types in Latin anyway, until you switch to kana). You can also install several keyboard under the same language and use a different shortcut to switch between them. I did it for Russian and Ukrainian keyboards, which now both live under "Russian", and I use Ctrl+Shift to change which "Russian" keyboard I use.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

I didn't know that. Спасибо!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

Oh, that's a neat idea, I'll look into it.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

Those are what I use. Nice and quick, once you start to remember which keyboard goes with which number. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

The settings off the language toolbar - the dialog box titled "Text Services and Input Languages". It has a tab called "Advanced Key Settings" where you should be able to define hotkeys for switching keyboards. It will allow me to apply my definitions, but once I close the dialog, they disappear (no longer there when I return). Even the Left Alt + Shift default definition for toggling through the list doesn't work either.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

Does it let you use them? I've had Polish disappear from mine sometimes, but it still works.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

Thanks! I have to go offline now for a bit, but I'll give that a try. I think I'll also try just using "Ctrl +" for the hotkeys too.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

That's actually what I use. Ctrl + 1 for English, 2 for Polish, 3 for Russian, and 4 for French, though I don't usually use that one.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

Thanks again A_User! I haven't bothered with the Alt+shift stuff again, but I do have a set of four Ctrl hotkeys that work together. (The dialog box accepts them when you apply, but doesn't display all of them again after you dismiss and re-invoke.) Also, it appears that I cannot make my first choices of which keys to use. By trial and error, I just have to find four compatible ones that happen to work. So there's definitely something funky going on with Windows 7. However, I have a workable solution, for which I'm very grateful! Much less clunky!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

Neither of these seem to work on Windows 7, though. Every platform has its own idiosyncracies.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

I'm using Windows 7, and it works for me. Now I'm confused.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

Oh, ok. There must be something wrong on my computer, then. If it works, that's what counts.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

Where are you going to make keyboard shortcuts?

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

freesia15 16 10 8 34

Windows users - once you have your Russian keyboard set up (through the Control Panel), you can access the on-screen keyboard and type your Cyrillic characters that way. To quickly get to the on-screen keyboard, press Windows key + R (to open the Run window), then type OSK. The keyboard will float on top of the duolingo window, so you can see the tips while you're typing. I hope that helps someone - it definitely helped me today! :)

6ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Iris_17 18 12 9 9 8 5

Thank you, great tip! One problem; when I use alt+shift, the keyboard changes, but the on-screen keyboard sometimes does not:/ Anyone know how to fix this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

freesia15 16 10 8 34

On my laptop, sometimes it takes a second for the on-screen keyboard to refresh.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

Thanks!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CSincennes 10 8

Thank you! I was wondering how to get the on screen keyboard!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

On Windows 10 English, to set hot keys to switch more easily:

Control Panel

Clock, Language, and Region

Language

Advanced Settings

Switching Input methods

Change language bar hot keys

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cobold 24 21 18 11 10 27

Switching keyboard layout on GNU/Linux (less elegant)

If you're using GNU Linux and prefer working in terminals (like me) you can just type

```
$ setxkbmap ru -variant phonetic
```

to activate the phonetic russian keyboard. Attention This will likely cause problems since once you have switched the keyboard layout you will not be able to type latin letters and thus, you may not be able to type `setxkbmap de` or `us` or whatever layout your standard is. As a workaround you can just type

```
$ setxkbmap de
```

```
$ setxkbmap ru -variant phonetic
```

Then you can just use the cursor to go to the first command and type enter.

Switching keyboard layout on GNU/Linux (using Awesome WM)

Folks who are using the awesome window manager can use the `keymap_switch` widget provided with the obvious widget library. Here is a readme for `keymap_switch`.

However, it is necessary to tweak the widget code a little since the long string `setxkbmap ru -variant phonetic` does not fit in the menu window and that seems to cause a problem such that the layout switching indeed does not work. Type

```
$ sudo vim /usr/share/awesome/lib/obvious/keymap_switch/init.lua
```

 (or use your preferred editor)

Search for `defaults.layouts` and change the line to something like

```
defaults.layouts = {{ "de", "de" }, {"us", "us"}, {"ru", "ru -variant phonetic"}}
```

Here I have the German keyboard layout, the US layout and finally the russian phonetic layout where the first string in every table is the string that will be later displayed in the menu and the second string is the command that will be later passed to `setxkbmap`.

Now go to the function `set_layouts(layouts_table)`.

In the for loop, change the line starting with `newitems[index]` to

```
newitems[index] = { value[1], function() switch_keymap(value[2]) end }
```

Finally, go to the function `switch_keymap(layout_string)` and change the line where the command is executed to

```
awful.util.spawn("setxkbmap " .. layout_string)
```

Now save and restart awesome. That's it.

And now, by clicking on the widget and selecting the keyboard layout you want, ит ис иси ту свитш ту руссиан and back ;)

This way the widget's output for the russian keyboard layout will be something like ru(phonetic). Or, if you choose setxkbmap ara -variant buckwalter (a phonetic arabic keyboard) it will say ara(buckwalter). If you find that too verbose you may change the code of the get_current_keymap() function to this

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

somelauw 12 12 10 10 9 6 5 5 5 3 32
You can do

```
<pre>setxkbmap -layout us,ru -variant ,phonetic -option grp:caps_toggle </pre>
```

This will set the caps lock key as a toggle, but there are many alternative toggles.

I didn't really like the phonetic keyboard that came with Linux though, because it maps 'в' to 'w' instead of 'v'. Instead I created a new one based on my favourite Windows layout here.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cobold 24 21 18 11 10 27
In German, it makes absolutely sense to map в to w :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jonathanslart 18 13 5 4
Thanks a lot cobold! You know, I was about to post the same thing about how to change the Russian keyboard in GNU/Linux using setxkbmap. Regards and long live GNU/Linux and Free Software community!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

gijira 4
http://winrus.com/kbd_e.htm This is aaaaall you need for a windows phonetic ;)

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3
This would be a good link to add to the post above (http://winrus.com/kbd_e.htm, as -aires- says)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6
The link was always there to begin with. I told people to consider using a phonetic layout a while before the release,

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3
Great - genius!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gijira 4
wait what oh :/

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3
Also, I saw this linked somewhere, about another mnemonic layout, maybe for Windows 10?
http://answers.microsoft.com/en-us/windows/forum/windows_8-performance/russian-mnemonic-keyboard-layout-is-missing/e2c92dd0-ca7c-400d-b9e2-bdd276150323?auth=1

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mililareis 11 9
I suggest using the virtual keyboard on Windows (after installing the Russian Keyboard, of course) until you know where every letter is.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Hellen343363 5
Good job! when will the russian-en available on ios version? :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ddbeachgirl 25 25 14 12 7 6 6 5 5 2 589
OMG I finally found the SCH, Ш & ш ! It was hiding way over on the top left under the ~ (eñe) key! I think I've finally found all the letters.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bajanisto 17 10 9 7
See also a thread A quick Mac guide to Cyrillic keyboards.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

avi1katz 22 14 14 10 10 9 9 6 2
For those that don't want stickers to permanently ruin your keyboard, look into a keyboard cover like this: <http://www.amazon.com/Kuzy-Language-Keyboard-Silicone-Cyrillic/dp/B00AVBHMPY>

I haven't used this specific one, but I've used others like it for different languages, and it does help a lot and is very easily removeable.

Happy Russianing!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Captain000 10
It's helpful to note that there are 2 types of mac keyboards, in terms of physical keys. A US version and EU version. The US and EU have different return keys.

I have one of these bit only for English letters, you can get them cheaply on aliexpress. But I am not using stickers as I have the Russian letters in a red colour and the English letters in a black colour, I find this easier to distinguish between the two. However the specific one you linked on amazon looks good because the English and Russian letters are different sizes!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

roncore 10

I specifically have this Keyboard cover for my macbook, I love it. works quite well!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Vanega 15 12 10 9 5 3 2 2 2 2 2

Where can I find an AZERTY phonetic Russian keyboard?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KaitlynV.Ellis 11 7 3 2 1

THANK YOU SO MUCH! At first I had been self teaching myself Russian (for a bout a year and two months now. So far I've only learned about %3 of the language and am just starting to recognize almost all of t he Cyrillic letters.), so this was really helpful! Now that the language is learnable on Duolingo, I feel like I can learn it easier as I'm more used to his site than any other one. Up until now I've just been typing letters without accent marks and letting it count my answers as wrong, but now that there's this I know how to fix that. Thank you so much again! I'm a Windows user and it doesn't look to hard to change the keyboard, so I'll soon be working on the Russian course non-stop whenever I've got time!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhouldey 9

Shady_Arc, this Аа/Яя switch/button that you speak of, I cannot seem to find it on the mobile web version of Duolingo. So I am stuck with latin transliterations. Am I blind or is it only available on the desktop web version?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521

Confirmed, the switch does not appear in the mobile web version for me either. If you change the setting in the regular version though, the change does carry across to the mobile web version.

Incidentally the Report and Discussion Thread buttons are also missing in the mobile web version. (which was a contributing factor as to why I stopped using it)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhouldey 9

[Conspiracy theory]

The Powers That Be at Duolingo HQ have nefarious reasons for not wanting people to use the mobile web app.

[/Conspiracy theory]

Discuss..

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521

chuckles I consider that very unlikely... :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

somelauw 12 12 10 10 9 6 5 5 5 3 32

My favourite phonetic keyboard layout for Russian is the the Slavonic Multilingual Phonetic keyboard layout, which I linked to here. It even supports some other Cyrillic languages like Ukrainian.

(Shady_arc) "these layouts are just fine if you are moderately interested in Russian but that's it". I think you can even use these if you are fully interested in Russian. It's just a way to make things easier for yourself similar to how some people use Dvorak for English.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Shalshelet 15 8 7

I would find it helpful if there was a spelling/alphabet section such as this one (the introductory lessons listed) as the first few lessons (not focused on words, per say, but on the sounding and spelling rules - as I am getting stuck on the correct spellings esp with similar sounding consonants and vowels). <http://www.russianforeveryone.com/>

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

cbn620 11 6 3 3 2

First of all I want to say I've been watching this course since the very beginning. Always signing in to see if that percentage had moved up or down. I wanted Russian duolingo more than anything. And I'm so happy to see it here. Thank you so much to everyone involved, for your hard work and dedication.

I've been studying Russian for a couple years but haven't gotten far with the language by any means, mainly because I've been doing it all on my own, no tutors or coursework, just listening to old Pimsleur tapes, watching Youtube videos, using flash cards, reading books, and trying to communicate with Russians whenever I might randomly meet them online. It's been a huge struggle, this language is a monster. A beautiful and wonderful monster but a monster. However I'll say that completely on my own, I was able to learn the Russian alphabet (Cyrillic characters) in maybe a week, tops. And I'm not a terribly smart person, I possess no special gifts and am of pretty average intelligence. Whoever you are, if you're reading this, you can do it. Unless you have some kind of actual learning disability or something... Basically if you've learned the English alphabet, you can learn the Russian/Cyrillic. It is by far the easiest part of this entire process. Because of how easy, people should absolutely not be crippling themselves by learning it with the Latin/Roman letters exclusively. Thankfully there's a switch at the top right of the page in this course for going between Latin and Cyrillic. For really easy practice outside of duolingo, try using Russian as a cipher for writing languages you already know, i.e. English if you're reading this. It may be silly and look like gibberish, but it will help. Ай ам талкинг абаут райтинг лаик дис. Ес, ит из ступид лукинг. Ат эни рейт ит кан би хелпфул фор лернинг, ор ат лйст ит вас фор ми.

Granted, typing it is harder when typing when your English keyboard layout is so ingrained into you, but simply setting up the computer to do it is not. I used keyboard stickers for awhile and tried to type with the standard Russian keyboard. I was terrible at that, very slow, and I figured the only way I'd need to learn that layout in the first place is if I ever plan to go abroad and work, which I really don't, so I decided to go with a phonetic layout, and almost immediately I could type nearly as fast as I can in English. Many foreign Russian learners, even very serious and passionate ones, may never actually move to or hold a job in Russia. I think that's a very fair assumption. For visiting Russia, which I unfortunately have not, I see no reason why you wouldn't be able to set up your own computer while there and type Russian the way you are accustomed. When using other peoples' devices while there as a tourist, you could "chicken peck" and make it I'm sure, after all, the keys will be properly labeled and you'll just be looking down a lot. And if Russia is anything like the United States where I am from, if you had a clerical or office type job you may even be able to install software on your work computer at your own liberty. So in that case, all assumptions of course, even if you were there as a resident and were employed in a Russian company, you at least may still be able to use your student or phonetic keys. So really the issue of whether to use a phonetic layout or not seems to me to be a non-issue, and certainly shouldn't be the prohibitive issue in whether or not you learn the language. If the choice is learn in Roman letters, or not learn at all, or learn in Cyrillic but type in an improper layout, I think the best decision is obvious.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

a4c8 6 3

Any chance to integrate an optional, small clickable virtual keyboard right above the textbox?

Would be a lot bigger than in the french exercises, but still easier to use than straying over my latin keyboard...

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

I do not know the answer, but it may be less likely because the major computer operating systems mostly already implement software Russian keyboards for you, as far as I know.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

But the French and Spanish courses still provide language-specific extensions themselves anyway: accented letters, cedillas, etc. I do think it might be helpful just to have what is essentially an on-screen Russian keyboard there as an alternative. Such things do not make for quick typing, but I find the other keyboard alternatives clumsy too, including having to switch back and forth between answers, depending on the language you want to enter. Sometimes I think I'd just prefer not to be shifting gears all the time but go with the automatic transmission.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

It would probably be convenient, for myself as well.

I suspect from the development point-of-view, they may be unlikely to devote time to it.

I also think that if I wanted to move from a beginner to a more serious student, that I should learn to use the real keyboard tools of the operating system, so I can use them not just on duolingo's webpage, but across everything. Maybe one day I will find the energy to become such a real student, but... sadly... it has not happened yet.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

Of course, I have no idea what resources it would take to develop an on-screen keyboard, but I suspect much of the underlying technology required is already there in DL.

I'm also with you on using real keyboard tools elsewhere, but on DL one needs to shift back and forth depending on what language the questions expect. The clumsiness of that process affects how fast one would ever be able to respond in a timed exercise, which is already dependent on typing skills.

I have not found a "phonetic" keyboard to be of any particular help. I'm making a point of learning to spell in Cyrillic, and am just not using transliterations. I expect that going that route will only prove to be troublesome later, affecting not only my spelling but my pronunciation. Call me stubborn, or a purist, but I'd rather trust to the methods that the Russians themselves have been using for so many centuries.

Energy: now there's a critical resource! I have to keep reinforcing my vocabulary so much that I'm at level 5 but have only managed to complete 3 skills. So keyboarding will eventually prove to be small potatoes compared to other hurdles.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

Russian did not use PCs for centuries. As for what they use now, well, it is a ЙЦУКЕ keyboard and a shortcut to switch from Russian to English and back (on Windows, typically Shift+Alt or Ctrl+Shift). At least, that's what I have been using for almost two decades.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

Oh, yes, I've had that experience, though my keyboarding was not responsible. Still, anything that slows one down, other than actual fluency, does lessen the effectiveness of that type of drill. I don't see what DL can do, though, except to provide the best technical alternatives available, and in this case I think the biggest hurdles are not theirs to overcome. I'm afraid I don't foresee a time when I'll ever manage a timed Russian lesson that yields more than 1 correct answer typed in Cyrillic. Fortunately, with a language that takes a Latin keyboard variant, I'm able to do fine, because I can just use that keyboard for all answers.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

Oh, goodness, Shady_arc, what did you think I meant? Only that the alphabet has undergone centuries of application to new developments leading to what there is today! And I'm saying that I prefer not to ignore the experience derived from those developments. The big question there is how well Microsoft has done meeting the needs of the Russian language. (I am not a fan of their approach to software engineering.) And that may be reflected also in my opinion of the clunkiness of their keyboard switching techniques. I do have the Russian keyboard, and find it superior to the others for my needs, once I am settled there. Trying to map 26 letters into 33 or back again just gets confusing. And Shift-Alt sounds like an improvement, but it doesn't work on my Windows 7 installation even though it's supposedly there. Neither do the advanced key settings, and even the settings are not persistent between invocations from the keyboard toolbar. No easy way to keep up the keyboard layout for more than one language, either, and I'm shuffling among four. MS has a long way to go, in my opinion.

And I guess that's why I'm looking with some favor at the notion of an on-screen keyboard, à la French and Spanish extensions. Is that a big task? Or is the question more about screen real estate? I don't use these tiny devices we have today. Older eyes don't like them.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

AsphodelZarafa 21 10 9 7 6 60

You're absolutely on point with the timed exercise scenario. I tested it twice only to end up with a FlappyBird-like experience. If you didn't get the Flappy Bird reference; I meant that I was able to answer two questions only, and then it was Game Over for me.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

A few accents versus 30+ letters is quite a big difference, I don't think it's really comparing like with like.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

Didn't mean it as a comparison, just as a starting point, hoping it might be extensible.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jensek1 13 5

This would be great, it would make everything is easier. Not all of us have the option of changing our keyboard for various reasons.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

alenakorot 8 4 2

Rather than installing a new keyboard, you can find ones online. This is the one that I usually use: <http://russian.typeit.org/>

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mivers 14 13 4

I've been using the Bulgarian phonetic keyboard that comes with Windows just fine. There was no ASDF layout under Russian. It only has Ъ where it should have Ы, so I'll check out the link above to correct that minor issue. Thanks!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlanRod 16 15 11 9 6 4 2 2 2

Hello @Shady_arc, congrats on helping the community with your personal time to develop the Russian to English course! I'm starting with the beta version, I was a little surprised because of the lack of Russian screen keyboard. I think it is very important for us learners to have access to the Cyrillic characters while learning. On the other Duolingo courses we have access to special characters on screen without having to change our physical keyboards layout, like for example the use of umlauts on German. It would be great if you pitch the app developers to include the Cyrillic characters on screen. Keep going! There are lots of people around the world like me that we appreciate the work you guys are doing!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Nart 20 11 9 9 4 1

I found it to be a very reasonable solution for this issue to just memorize the keyboard. It took me only one week on some free website to learn how to touch type the Russian alphabet without any aids. And it's working very well. <http://www.sense-lang.org/typing/tutor/keyboardingRU.php>

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

grumblyqueer 12 6 5 4

For those of you who are having problems installing keyboards, or are confused where the letters on non-English keyboards are, russian.typeit.org works without installing anything. There's a little guide at the top of the screen that shows which characters go with which keys, so you just type your text out and then copy it into the answer box. .

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MysticFury 4

My favourite one to use is: <http://www.lexilogos.com/keyboard/russian.htm>

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

guiltypixel 5 3 2 2

I've got a simple solution that costs nothing if you own a smartphone. What my wife and I do is type using the Android Russian keyboard, piped to Plasma via KDE Connect if we want to use our Linux workstation. A similar solution might be to use the app of your choice to forward your keyboard to Windows, and I'm sure Mac/iOS can do something similar. This allows us to study several languages using native layouts while providing alternative keys easily and composition tools native to the platform including spell check reminders. Hope this helps you guys. Удачи!

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

johnny_mem 11 11 9 7 103

Could you tell me exactly which Russian transliteration is duolingo using when checking the inputs in answers? Or is somewhere a table for it? According to wikipedia there are many of them: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Romanization_of_Russian

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

Maybe someone else could throw more light on this, but I've always thought that transliteration was more of a technique than a standard. Do actual full sets of standard transliterations even exist? I see that there are "systems", and automation methods, but those are standard techniques, not standards themselves. And of those techniques, it would seem likely that there would be at least one for each target language.

As a classical musician, I have seen various musical terms printed in Russian (seldom Cyrillic) as musical directions on the scores, and composers' names too. We see Tchaikovsky and Prokofiev appear often on scores printed in English-speaking countries, but I've seen Chaikowski and Prokofieff often enough in foreign editions too. The choice makes the most sense when it targets first the language and phonetics of spoken my the most likely readers. (Which really makes me wonder why anyone has gone to the trouble to try creating an ISO system!?) Note how many of those listed on Wikipedia are tied to a specific language or alphabet.

My guess is that DL uses a system that is closely tied to English in this course, and probably American English if there's a distinction to be made there, just because that's the standard DL approach to translation and teaching, the center of gravity for the courses. What the name of the system would be, I don't know.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

If you mean in general, in the scope of any language and writing system, then yes, standards definitely exist.

A well-known and completely defined standard is pinyin.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

Or if you are only interested in Russian and its transliteration into Roman letters, there is a wikipedia article addressing Romanization standards thereto, q.v:
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Romanization_of_Russian

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

johnny_mem 11 11 9 7 103

my question is if duolingo is using one of this standard or an own one

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

Duolingo uses British Standard.

1Give Lingot•3 months ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

Thanks everyone! Good question, interesting answers.

0Give Lingot•3 months ago

pseudocreobotra 14 6 6 6 5

Just wanted to add that there are lots of different phonetic keyboards and you can even customise them if you want. At least in my case, my native language uses a different keyboard layout than the English keyboard and pronunciation doesn't match either... That's why I opted for a different phonetic keyboard and it works really nicely =)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Captain000 10

Helpful post! I use a mac and changed the default language selector to the apple key and 0 as for me I found it easier. So if any users can't get used to the default option you can always change it to something of your choice.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IgnasioAndre 16 15 5

I already installed the phonetic one, the question is, does anyone know how to quickly switch from one to another? I tried alt+shift but didnt work.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

Look what you hotkey is in the language/keyboard settings. I just said what my defaults were :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IgnasioAndre 16 15 5

I found it. Thanks a lot.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pedro771 22 18 2 2 511

Maybe you do not need the other one any more. I switched ЙЦУКЕН off and use only the phonetic one. It makes easy the switch from standard keyboard.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IgnasioAndre 16 15 5

Yeah but I mean from Russian to english.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FerrisLikesEsp 25 6

It depends on your computer operating system. For Microsoft Windows, try windowskey+space

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pedro771 22 18 2 2 511

Thanks Shady_arc for your great explanation. The suggestion of using phonetic keyboard saves my life :) I was suffering a lot with the ЙЦУКЕН, it slowed me down so much...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bajanisto 17 10 9 7

On Android and iOS I use The MessagEase Keyboard (+ Russian Phonetic), see

Android

<https://play.google.com/store/apps/details?id=com.exideas.mekbhl=en> iOS (iPhone and iPad)

<https://itunes.apple.com/app/messageease-keyboard/id990325092>

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alathat 22 21 10 6 587

OK. I'd bet lunch that the answer is "no" because if yes, it would be too wonderful not to have been mentioned here, but is there a way to get the web-based version of DL to auto-switch keyboards like the app does on my iPhone? I'm going to double-up here and ask if anyone has found key top stickers which they especially like (or to avoid!) to add Cyrillic to a standard keyboard?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

Automatic switching would be the bees knees. It's my main issue with the website versus the app.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

The app has automatic switching? No fair!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

Automatic switching is a huge issue given that you do not know a person even has a Russian keyboard. Automatic installation of a keyboard would be cool but your computer's security probably would not like such a bold move on behalf of a browser app :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

Yeah, anti-virus would probably scream at me. :-) Would there be a way to set it up so that you could select whether or not you have a Russian keyboard installed, and if you do, then it switches automatically?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

Oh yeah - I see your point :-/ I wonder if it would work as an opt in feature? I realise this is a Duolingo issue, not a Russian course issue, though!

Though from experience, what the app seems to do when you don't have the keyboard is just sticks with English. It doesn't always work perfectly (if I've been using the Russian course on the website and go to learn Esperanto on the app, I confuse it totally, and half the time it's offering me a Russian keyboard to type English and Esperanto, which for me is kind of amusing), but it usually does the job pretty well.

I've discovered most of the time, using regular websites/email/etc, iOS is pretty good at assuming if you've been switching between Russian and English keyboards, that's what you want it to keep doing, but if I accidentally hit the keyboard button when I don't mean to it can get loused up, and of course, it's always when I'm attempting a timed practice!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cazort 18 18 18 12 8 6 2 2 1

Does anyone know if there is a faster / more natural layout for Russian?

I type with DVORAK and I love it (I can type 95wpm compared to 70 that I used to type in QWERTY before switching). DVORAK produced huge gains for me (and also completely stopped my carpal tunnel pain) and I think it did this because it concentrates vowels in the left hand and consonants on the right, with the most commonly used letters all residing on home row.

The Russian layout seems pretty inefficient, like И, H, and Т are all very common letters and all involve diagonal moves off home row, whereas Ф and Ж, for instance, are taking up precious space on the home row and are much less commonly typed. Also a lot of common combinations (like А/М) are next to each other vertically, leading you to type them with the same finger, slowing you down.

Now seems like a great time to learn a fast layout, start off on the right foot instead of having to relearn something new later.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

Never heard of them but you can create the one of your own. It is pretty easy these days.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Vanega 15 12 10 9 5 3 2 2 2 2 2

I would love to find a Dvorak or Colemak-esque keyboard for Russian. I use a French Dvorak and going back to Key-randomized layout is a pain to the hands.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

In ЫЦУКЕН, the most frequent letters are in the center so you could type them with your index fingers - which are faster and more skillful than your pinkies.

I'd recommend learning standard ЫЦУКЕН. I have no problem typing 120 wpm on it :-)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

seili 16 9 8 7 6 6 5 4 3

I created my own layout with Dvorak as a base - here's a link to the .zip file of the layout installer in my Jumpshare account: <http://jmp.sh/v/XHifoCWuy2la444nZsfc> The layout is a little weird with some characters (you'll definitely want to check the on-screen keyboard), but if you have another layout editor, you can tweak at will. I haven't found any equivalent in Russian-based keyboards, but for me, it was such a crazy step to learn Dvorak that I'd rather use that if I can. With this, I can touch-type in Cyrillic.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MathiasVanBeeck 9 6 6

I've already learned the йцукен layout beforehand and have no real trouble typing with it on windows. However, when I'm on my android device, I've noticed the default russian keyboard does not have a Ё-key. Do you know of any way to type this on android devices?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AsphodelZarafa 21 10 9 7 6 60

In the Russian keyboard layout on Android, long press the letter "e" and wait for a second or so. "ё" will shortly appear thereafter. While still pressing, slowly move your finger towards the letter "ё".

It is very normal for such letters to be hidden when screen space is a premium, which is exactly the case with mobile devices. For example, in the German keyboard layout, the "ß" (es tset) is hidden under the letter "S". Back then, it had me scratching my head for a while until I figured it out :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Headphonemattthew 9 5

Thank you so much for this!!!!!!!!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

megzaela 7 3 2

Is there a way to get answers to be shown in cyrillic alphabet rather than transliterated. I'm typing my answers with Russian letters, but when it tells me I've misspelled something, the transliteration doesn't help me learn what is correct

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521

At the top of the lesson panel there's a button labelled Aa/Яя. You can use this to switch between the transliterations and the Cyrillic characters. However the Aa/Яя button becomes inactive after you give your answer. So if you want the answer to be shown in Cyrillic after completing the exercise you need to select that before entering your answer. (changing mode also deletes any answer you've already typed at least for the time being)

That said, it would be useful to be able to continue to use the Aa/Яя button at that point, (during the exercise result display) and I'd love it if that could be fixed.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhouley 9

Maybe megzaela is using the mobile website.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

toomath 18 11 9 5 3 1

Ok, this is probably a stupid question, but I've beaten my head against a wall and can't figure it out. In Mac os, latest version, on my macbook laptop, I seem to lose the comma and the period when I switch to russian. Those keys become 6 and ю, and I can't find a way to type the . and the ,

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521

Try Shift+6 and Shift+7?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

toomath 18 11 9 5 3 1

Wow, that worked. Doesn't correspond to my stickers. A bit awkward, though, especially given the Russian love of commas :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhouley 9

The period should be to the right of the ю key. Possibly also comma with shift.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521

@Shady_arc, Thanks for the video, I found it very useful. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ian.Kelk 10 9 7 7 4 3

For those using the phonetic keyboard in Mac OSX, I have both a tip and a question.

Tip: to make the letter ë, switch to the Russian keyboard and use Option-e.

Question: While in the Russian keyboard, how do I make the quotation marks like «this»? In the normal English keyboard, it's Option- and Option-Shift-, but I can't find it when in the Russian one. Has anyone figured this out?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Andyemanu 20 15 14 13 11 9 9 9 121

Hello. For the keyboard I'm using (the phonetic ЯШЕПТЫ keyboard for Mac), I just click Alt+O for « and Alt+П for » :) I don't know how to do it on the ordinary layout, but you can check by using the keyboard viewer tool.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ian.Kelk 10 9 7 7 4 3

Thank you! Exactly what I needed!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Andyemanu 20 15 14 13 11 9 9 9 121

No problem :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Souperman 20 8 8 8 6 4 2

I'm wondering if it could be changed so that it's possible to switch between the alphabets after a question has been answered?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IamTh3BesT_xD 11 7 6 6 5 4 4 3 2 2

Could you link a trusted video of the Russian litters? because when I search on youtube many results dose not appear may be because of the country I live in .Thx <3

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ToastyTooth 11 7

I don't see any way to switch the lessons to being in cyrillics. The Аа Яя button doesn't exist. I am on mobile safari on the iPhone. Please help.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521

If you can load the website on a larger screen, you should be able to start a lesson in the desktop version of the site, and change the display mode. Once you do that, the change should also take effect on the mobile version.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ToastyTooth 11 7

Спасибо

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sarefo 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 14 14 12 12 11 5 4 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 158

I'm using the Google Input Tools on Chrome (phonetic keyboard: Русская клавиатура (фонетический)), that works very nicely. It's easy to switch between English/Russian by using Ctrl-G. This even works with non-QWERTY layouts, such as Dvorak, for example, typing "dobroe utro" will result in "доброе утро".

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ronniejbaroi 3 2

thanks a lot man

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

alerjik 21 19 14
thanks

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JaganKothacharla 13 9 5
Why I still dont see Russian on my Mobile app.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3
I don't think it is released for Mobile yet. Mobile doesn't have all the languages.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

stimoney 22 18 18 15 14 12 10
Would it be possible in a future revision to have the Russian keyboard pop up whenever it is necessary to type Russian so that you could point and click the letters (using Windows OS)? On the German Duolingo, the special characters come up like that. Many thanks to the team for the huge effort involved in the launch!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sinisa.rudan 10 7 7 4
That's exactly what I asked for also :) There are some answers here <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/12953513> but not promising so far :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

poccem 8 8 4
I was confused about which type of keyboard I should use, thanks to this post I have found my answer. ЙЦУКЕ all the way.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

miliarma 8 8 7 4 4 3
If you're on a Linux machine, install the program "onboard". It's a well designed visual keyboard that pops up, and you can see the letters of the current keyboard layout. It's really helpful for those that haven't learned where every key is.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521
How do you get it to recognise the russian layout? If I have my Russian layout active when I start it, it automatically reverts to the US layout. Changing layout while it's active doesn't change the displayed layout.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

miliarma 8 8 7 4 4 3

I have the command "setxkbmap -layout "us,gr,ru" -option "grp:alt_shift_toggle"" in my .bashrc. But since it fails now and then to work, I have it also in a script called "keyboard" which I run if it doesn't work from the .bashrc. It's a nasty fix, hopefully I'll find the root of the problem soon.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

somelauw 12 12 10 10 9 6 5 5 5 3 32

Seems fine to me, but you can also just set it once with localectl.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

somelauw 12 12 10 10 9 6 5 5 5 3 32

By the way, I think .bashrc is only run when you open a terminal or login on tty first. So perhaps put it in .xinitrc or. xsessionrc. If you use Gnome for example, then check in the settings if there is a way to automatically run stuff on startup.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

miliarma 8 8 7 4 4 3

Thanks, I'll check it out.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521

Hrm.,. I may have to give that a try, but I'm not sure if it would play well with Gnome's existing input method selection mechanism... Does that give you the standard Russian layout or the phonetic one? (I've been using the phonetic layout)

As to it not always working have you tried putting it in .profile instead of .bashrc? (EDIT: actually now that I think about it that shouldn't make any difference)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

somelauw 12 12 10 10 9 6 5 5 5 3 32

See cobold's reaction (and mine below it) to make it phonetic. In gnome you can also display the layout with:

```
<pre> gkbd-keyboard-display -l 'ru(phonetic)' </pre>
```

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

miliarma 8 8 7 4 4 3

It gives me the standard Russian layout (ЙЦУКЕН).

It runs ok on LXDE, not sure what it'd do on Gnome..

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HankGunderson 11 10 6 4 3 3 2

The alphabet switch button and the tips button bony show up on my phone in portrait mode but they do show up in landscape mode. It took forever to find it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IronMike94 4 2

Stickers that you can use on your keyboard:

<http://www.amazon.com/CYRILLIC-KEYBOARD-LETTERING-TRANSPARENT-BACKGROUND/dp/B000NJSVOA>

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

White.Russian 10 6 2

Is there a duolingo course to learn the Russian alphabet? (Am I the only one who doesn't know it yet?)

Also, a lot of the tips and explanations only use the Russian alphabet so I can't understand them... any chance they could be bilingual like the exercises?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

I've used the website <http://russianlearn.com/alphabet> to focus on this subject, and found it very helpful.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

In addition to sdr51's website, you could try russianlessons.net and mylanguages.org. I used those and found them very helpful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

White.Russian 10 6 2

Thanks guys!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

karlaileana1018 9

In my personal opinion, I would prefer to learn first the Cyrillic alphabet first, starting to recognize how the letters sound and look rather than typing how they sound and how you pronounce in our alphabet...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlanRod 16 15 11 9 6 4 2 2 2

Hello Karla, I agree with you. Check out Memrise, it has a couple of Cyrillic alphabet courses. Memrise also has an app and the courses can be downloaded for continuous study without the use of Internet connection. Cheers! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlanRod 16 15 11 9 6 4 2 2 2

Also, an easy and free way of learning the Russian (Cyrillic) alphabet is to use Memrise. There are a couple of Russian alphabet courses on Memrise. Check it out people!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KeitaroUrashima 10 9 6 2

There is a place called keybr.com that lets you learn how to type in many languages, including Russian.

I never bought any stickers: just practiced there at the beginning, then started to write on my own on Duolingo/Google Translate and my typing speed and accuracy have dramatically increased.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Funky_Puppy 15 7 6 3 3

Are you going to make a course where it teaches you how to write?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sinisa.rudan 10 7 7 4

Russian letters support needed, pleaseeee

I have seen in almost all languages that I'm learning at Duolingo, that there are buttons with letters special to these languages, so that we don't have to install and use that language's specific keyboard.

Only in Russian, I don't see it. And it really slows me down, to the point that I am willing to give up using Duolingo for Russian :(

Namely, I as a Serb, writing in Serbian Cyrillics alphabet, as well as many others East European people, already using and having Cyrillics keyboard. We would prefer these buttons, much more than installing and adjusting ourselves to an additional Cyrillics keyboard. All, what we need are 7 letters ё,ъ,я,ы,ю,э,й,ь specific to Russian Cyrillics alphabet.

Please, just support what other Duolingo languages have, so it is not so much extra work, let us know when it is added, and we'll be back to Russian at Duolingo. Thanks in advance :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pulverkuss 19 4 3 2

I would love to see anglicized spelling given with the Cyrillic, or at least have the option to turn such a feature on. On my phone, there's no easy way to switch quickly between keyboards. It's a three click process that can get VERY old VERY fast. I've taken to using a cheat sheet to spell the Russian in anglicized text, but it would be much simpler to simply learn the anglicized forms with the Cyrillic. I've also found that seeing the anglicized with the Cyrillic greatly improves my pronunciation.

Another issue I've noticed: the app thinks the anglicized text is a typo. It's not a typo, I just don't have that keyboard. :p

I get maybe not just including it for everyone, but can we at least get the option to have Cyrillic, Anglicized, or Both shown on both the web and App versions? Pretty please? :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

netnerd 16 135

How about adding a javascript keyboard option. It would be easy to add and could work for most languages. There is a really good one at <http://www.greywyvern.com/code/javascript/keyboard>

This way the technically changed would have a quick and easy way to get the right input.

1ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

cesardazah 11 10 9 8 5 4 4 3 2 2

It's harder to get used to the keyboard than learning the alphabet!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•10 months ago

Firestar1800 2

I am now just learning. Who knew it'd be so fun?

Thanks for helping out!

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

tuossaintlou 17 13 13 12 7 6

There are a lot of great comments on this thread, and since I also have six keyboards, the ALT+Shift Key toggle is not the best solution while doing Russian on Duolingo. This is my work around. I have two browser windows, Duolingo in one, and the other has:

<https://www.branah.com/russian>

I type, then copy and paste from there.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

airelibre 24 21 21 19 13 13 11

That sounds like a nightmare. Just use the Duolibro extension. It automatically changes the language for you.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

tuossaintlou 17 13 13 12 7 6

I gave the program a try, and it is awesome. Since I learned the Russian keyboard layout, I just type away during the Duolingo session and the program does the job of knowing which keyboard I should be using.

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

airelibre 24 21 21 19 13 13 11

Glad you found it helpful :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

toussaintlou 17 13 13 12 7 6

<https://chrome.google.com/webstore/detail/duolibro/ogianofickehjjgaopiohbgjhmhbdafn?hl=en>

Thanks for letting me know about this program. I'll give it a try.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Nullbrains 15 13 7 3

Hi I have created a browser plugin to change the keyboard layout automatically. An optional layout of that keyboard can be shown to assist in learning the layout. For Russian I included several different layouts ЙЦУКЕН (JCUKEN) and several phonetic layouts.

It is now available for Chrome:
<https://chrome.google.com/webstore/detail/duokeyboard/dekooljcgfaiokofbciaflklkfnimfa>

And Firefox: <https://addons.mozilla.org/en-US/firefox/addon/duokeyboard/>

And Opera: <https://addons.opera.com/en/extensions/details/duokeyboard/>

I hope some of you find it useful

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Awesomgirl4321 9

ok

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gargantarant 20 11 8 6 6

This is great, thanks! (What if I wanted a rocket-shaped keyboard though?)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AllisonAllain 6 5

The when I started the alphabet lesson, none of the lessons actually have Cyrillic in them, all the words in the lesson and in the description are romanized. Is that a bug or is it deliberate?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sdr51 22 10 10 8 568

When you are in a Russian lesson or practice, look in the upper left corner of your window, next to the Tips and Notes, and you will see a circular button labeled Aa (for Latin text), and another overlapping it. Click that one and you will see the label Яя (for Cyrillic), and all the Russian in your lessons will turn to Cyrillic text.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Greentchr 14 3

Is the button available only on the pc version? It does not appear on my android phone..

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

It is available on the full version of the site.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

duosam1 8 7

I did not need to install a language, it was there in the list when I clicked "add" in the "text services and input languages" window. Didn't know I could do it without installing. On-screen keyboard in windows changes to russian after clicking apply, although you need to close and open it. It does not change the actual keyboard. However, it changes back to english automatically after typing in a window like this one. So I can't use it. What needs to happen is duolingo has an on-screen keyboard like google translate has.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

embertX 20 19 13 9 8

Google translate actually also does auto switch the keyboard according to the current input language within the website. So for duolingo this should be also possible and it would be the fastest. In any case it is best to learn typing without watching at the keys so you can concentrate on the actual task instead of looking for keys and letters.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarshaMcLean 10 5

Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kosmozhuK 18

You may wish to replace your ЙЦУКЕH-keyboard pic with the one that includes Ё.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eelaynuh 4

OMG, thank you, thank you, thank you. It was driving me crazy that the lessons weren't in actual Russian letters. Don't know how I missed that, but thanks again. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Wow! This is really useful! You deserve a lingot!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

savya111 4 4 2

thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rodvil77 25 22 6

When are you guys going to be ready with the mobile version learn Russian. It is only available in a PC mode. Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JungeJunge 6 5

Hi, dear Russian course builder, I think when this course out of beta, this part should merge into the course, not only a thread in discussion, but also become a preparatory lesson to the newbie before the formal study. However we use the keyboard to study a foreign language on this website. "How to type the right letter" is very important to me. Thank you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

camari1943 18 18 17 17 15 5 3

Very clear explanation, thank you so much Duolingo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Greentchr 14 3

On my android mobile, there is no button to switch to Cyrillic

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

I believe you need to go to the full version of the site to switch it, and then it will stay on Cyrillic. Alternatively, if you switch on a computer and then use your Android, it's supposed to switch on the phone as well.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Greentchr 14 3

Thank you- that is what I did successfully. Thank you for your help!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

You're welcome!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amylhhill 10 10

I can convert my keyboard to Russian without a problem, but everything that I have seen so far from duolinguo has used the Latin alphabet. Does duolinguo not use Cyrillic? I really need to work on my spelling, and the best way to do that is by using Cyrillic to write Russian.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiblingCreature 22 12 11 521

If you look at the top left corner of the lesson panel when running duolingo on a desktop machine you'll see a toggle labelled Aa. If you click on it, it should change to Яя and the Russian course should then use the Cyrillic alphabet across all devices. For future reference though I recommend reading the thread before posting. This has been asked and answered several times.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ffirdafz 20 15 15 14 12 4

I don't know if this is already mentioned, but if you have an android phone you might as well want to try to use your phone keyboard to type Russian on PC (that is, after you set your phone keyboard with Russian input). If you own Asus Zenphone/phablet, you can use remote link to control your PC cursor (mouse, keyboard et al) from your phone. I hope this helps :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

fishmael 11 8 8 7 4 2

Is there any way that I can take the tests in Cyrillic Russian and not Anglicized Russian?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

In the lesson, in the upper left corner by the Tips & Notes button, there's a switch. It shows Aa when on English and Яя when on Cyrillic. Clicking that should change it.

In the future, please read the thread before posting, because frequently the question has already been answered at least once.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ngarrang 23 18 10 8 6 3 682

Thank you for this information.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Seattle_USA 22 21 20 16 8 760

Thank you. I was wondering how everyone else on the Russian comments were typing in Russian.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ngarrang 23 18 10 8 6 3 682

It may be slower, but I am using a web site for cyrillic input.

<http://winrus.com/keyboard.htm>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ronaldv2li 16 9 5 106

Sorry, but I think this course is pointless unless the text comes in cyrillic. There could be duplicates in latin under the cyrillic text for beginners. You could include a cyrillic keyboard under the text box (like in google translate). I think one must be able to think in the original alphabet.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DavidMcK 18 16 13 11 8 5 20

The course does come in Cyrillic. I use Cyrillic on my phone app. You have the choice to switch between Latin and Cyrillic.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ngarrang 23 18 10 8 6 3 682

Different learners, different goals. Someone might be approaching Russian from a conversational level, wanting to speak with another, but not necessarily read Russian.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tristan.D 18 8 5 2

This might be helpful when learning the alphabet:
<https://www.dropbox.com/s/k80v3ekt67qi90j/%D0%B0%D0%BB%D1%84%D0%B0%D0%B2%D0%B8%D1%82.pdf?dl=0>

It's an A4 glance-sheet of the alphabet, with pronunciations (both stressed and unstressed) and English examples underneath each letter.

This, too, is very good for learning to type the alphabet: <http://www.keybr.com/#!practice> . You can change the keyboard layout to Russian, as the number of keys it tests you on, in the settings.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pistache28 14

Hello I love studying Russian on Duolingo, I would like to have the words in Russian for the exercises and not in "usual" writing, how can I switch to cyrillic words (for the exercises) because I know how to use a russian keyboard as it is installed on my computer. I would like to see "Net, spasibo". in cyrillic and not written like that. Thank you for your help

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

Did you read the post above, the one you are commenting upon, which explains how to change to Cyrillic? (I apologize for implying you might not have read it, except, it does seem to contain the answer to the question you are asking, so I am unsure whether you tried the switch that everyone else uses to switch to Cyrillic, and it didn't work for you, or whether you didn't actually try it.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pistache28 14

Hello I have found the solution to my problem, thank you!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pczukur 7 5 5 5 4

For most English or west European language speakers who are fast touch-typers, there's a much easier and faster method. Just keep a separate browser window open to a transliteration utility such as translit.cc, type the sound equivalents into the conversion window, then cut and paste the transliterated Cyrillic into the duolingo window.

For example, in the transliteration window using your normal Latin keyboard (I use QWERTY, but works just as well if you use AZERTY, QWERTZ or another one) you just type 'horoshij zhurnal' and then you copy/paste the converted "хороший журнал" back into the Duolingo window.

For additional speed, use shortcut keys and a separate browser window to type the Latin, select/copy the Cyrillic, switch windows, and paste the result (on Windows, that sequence is Ctrl+A, Ctrl+C, Alt+Tab, Ctrl+V).

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

skindleberg 10 8

I'm really enjoying learning Russian but I realised I'm only learning conversational Russian in Latin script. Would love it if there were bonus skills teaching Cyrillic.

Also I have a peculiar problem that when I use the app all the lessons are in Cyrillic but when I access the mobile site it's in Latin script. wonder if it's something that I've missed or something in the app..

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DavidMcK 18 16 13 11 8 5 20

You can change between Latin and Cyrillic on both the app and the website versions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ry.learns 6 6

Those two links to the alphabet helped a lot. I started the lessons on the computer and it used Latin letters. Then, when I changed to my phone (I have a three-hour commute every day, might as well, right?), it switched to the Cyrillics. I just couldn't figure out which character made which sound, and it felt like it was changing constantly! I'm ready to tackle those lessons again :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarshaMcLean 10 5

What small button on the top of what?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarshaMcLean 10 5

My kindle doesn't seem to be able to sync with Running so I have to just use latin. I believe I may know the Cyrillic alphabet I to type in that, but am unable.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

Do you have a Kindle Fire? You can use the Russian alphabet on that, but you do need to install the keyboard to do so. (You can install a Russian keyboard on a Kindle ereader too, but I can't see that you'd use Duolingo from that, so I'm assuming you mean you have a Fire.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarshaMcLean 10 5

Yes, mine is a fire, I realize that there are few answers that do apply to the Kindle. So I will just have to do my own thing. I do not want to buy a keyboard for it! Thank you for your willingness to help. There are so many dedicated people giving their efforts to this site. I love it!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 4 2 2 5

You don't need to buy a keyboard :) you can add a virtual one the same as you use for English. I can't for the life of me remember the exact place in settings where you need to go, but I do know it can be done - I have Russian, Ukrainian and Polish keyboards set up in my Fire :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarshaMcLean 10 5

I have tried it a couple of times and have not been successful. I am just going to have to apply more diligence! It says in my settings that I can do it. Thank you so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SpellDuda 16 11 7 5 4 3 2 8

There is also on screen keyboard (windows 7 user here). You can add russian keyboard to your computer and open on screen keyboard.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jabberwicked 19 16 15 9 7 2

I think a pretty good option for a Mac is enabling the virtual keyboard - <http://osxdaily.com/2013/06/21/mac-virtual-keyboard-os-x/> and the shortcut for changing input sources - <http://osxdaily.com/2014/10/08/change-keyboard-language-shortcut-mac-os-x/>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IvanZDS 15 6

Is it useful for learning all the cyrillic alphabets (Bulgarian, Serbian, Ucranian, etc)? Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ADHD_Viper 3 2

Thanks :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TyNoOutlet 9 6 3 3 2 2 2 2

Thanks! I would be using the Russian keyboard add-on, but I can't switch it back to English.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sheen0987 4

I'm extremely happy that the Russian course is finally available, but on the android app it defaults to cyrillic for me whether I'm using an english or cyrillic keyboard. Is there any way for the lessons to be presented in Latin transliteration instead of cyrillic on the android app like it is on the PC web version?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Natasharom774430 8 3 2 2

Hi, I just started Russian 2 months ago but I had to restart because I was having a hard time with the alphabet. I accidentally set the writing into Cyrillic instead of Latin. How would I change it back to Latin on the app?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarshaMcLean 10 5

There is a very light blue dot at left top of the exercise page, if you press your arrow and it swiithes back and forth between Cyrillic and Latin alphabets

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EnriqueEdu1 12 10 5 4

Nice!

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

ra7bar 20 10 89

Hi, Could you please provide on-screen keyboard like for modified latin signs in other languages ? It would be so much easier than switching the keyboard. At least for the beginners :) I have issues with switching keyboard language on my laptop from sentence to sentence.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

That will not happen in the foreseeable future.

Probably, for the best.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

ktor 8 8 6

On every Windows you can use following: Win+R -> osk -> Enter

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Zinatcha 12 11 10 10

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Zinatcha 12 11 10 10

cpaciba

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

hospitaldomicro2 15 8 8 6

I'm brazilian, how can I learn russian effectively? Any tips?

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

JeffLanam 13 9 5 3

One thing that might confuse people who are learning Russian (it did me) is when they see Cyrillic in italic letters. Many of the letters look different because they are based on the cursive alphabet. In particular, Cyrillic T looks like English M. I'm learning to read and write cursive now. It would be good to have a table somewhere that showed the printed italic forms, and maybe the cursive forms, of the letters.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Ben115652 18 10 4 4

Probably not useful, but here it is anyway.
<https://www.google.com/search?q=cyrillic+alphabet+in+cursive&espv=2&biw=1920&bih=1147&tbm=isch&tbo=u&source=univ&sa=X&ved=0ahUKEwiRr7aQhpXMAhXGyIMKH3ID4EQsAQIKg>

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

JeffLanam 13 9 5 3

Thanks, I've gotten pretty good at reading it now. I'm still working on my handwriting. There are videos on YouTube showing how to write in cursive, and you can download worksheets.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Ben115652 18 10 4 4

Thanks! I'm working on one language at a time. When I get to Russian, I'll refer back here. I appreciate what you've done!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ws12121 3

Is this the place to come if I want to learn Spanish?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

eubillie 8

It's the right website, but you've wandered into the Russian discussion area. Go back to Duolingo.com and try again.

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

savannabarlow 6 2

why do people have the most hilarious profile pictures?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 1 this is not shown on the image but on the standard Russian keyboard you can also type Ъ (the rouble sign) using Alt Gr+8 (not related to duolingo, but still thought I'd leave this here)

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Peter78623 13 11 11 10 9 9 6 4 3 7
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

[deactivated user]
Oo what is this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

i5l 11 9 7 3 2
лайк если Русский лол

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

dadamache89 11 6 6 5 65
I am having a hard time with all of the letters and language. Romanian is easier for me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TakakoKumagai 7 4 3 2 2 2 2
Romanian language is never easy for me as Russian is never easy to learn, either.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

tomelvisjedusor 12 12
Oh my gosh, I need this phonetic keyboard. THANK YOU! I was stuck doing Duolingo on my phone before and that was okay but the web version is so much better!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JWSB28 10 8 5
One of the best things I ever did was learn how to type in Russian (without looking).

It makes learning so much easier.

If you know how to type in your own language, I recommend that you print a copy of a keyboard with Russian letters and lay it NEXT to your computer. Without looking at your fingers, only look at the sheet and type by feel. In no time, you'll be typing in Russian without even looking.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

johnny_mem 11 11 9 7 103

I've the question: how to input the letter 'soft sign' (мягкий знак, https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Soft_sign) using the transliteration answering the exercises? If I understood correctly, it should be single quote. I've tried ' (hex 0x27) and ´ (0x92) but both are not recognized as matched and I still have errors. Please let me know how should I input the words with soft sign as answers.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

rach122078 2

<http://russian.typeit.org/> Is an online Russian keyboard. Just type in the letters that you would use in latin script and hey presto! If you are learning more than one language with more than one script then this will help tremendously.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Sean64084 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 2 2

thank you, it helps a lot but are these the sounds that they make too?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

hienlinh201 9

thank you a lot. It is very useful, keep it up!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Stephanie473893 12 11 7 7 6 5 4 4 4 4 3 2 2 2

Yoo

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

14 What is the difference between "on" and "nous"?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6334>

amichail 16

Give Lingot1

474 years ago

Leave a new comment

28 Comments

Arjofocolovi 21 14 10 5

"nous" equals "we" in English. It is the 1st person plural, and it works exactly the same as in English.

"on" is a bit more tricky. Basically it should be used to designate a person or a group of person, which we are not sure who it might be, how many they are, and if they are male or female. An undefined group of people if you prefer. It could be a group of one person.

BUT, while talking, French people use it instead of the "nous", when it's obvious which persons we are talking about.

Ex: Eric, Jean and Paul are alone in their flat :

Eric: "Vous avez mangé ?"

Jean: "Oui, on a mangé."

Here, Jean doesn't need to specify which person the "on" designates, it's obvious that it's concerning Jean and Paul, and only them.

I hope it's clear enough.

93ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

brettsbear 7

To approximate "on" in English — it's close to "one." As in: "If one is hungry, one eats at the restaurant." <<Si on a faim, on mange au restaurant.>>

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

randyneworleans 11

In American English, the word "you" is often used in place of "one." In the States, you seldom hear someone saying "In the States one seldom hears someone saying..." (If you caught that - and I'm sure you did.) So, that part of "on" I get - I'm still a little confused about the "we." I'll get it though. You have keep studying....eh.....ONE has to keep studying.... LOL

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Kierz 15 14 12 12 6 2 2 380

So basically in English: one has eaten

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Just1MoreSweet 6

So we can use both? Like when we are translating "We can speak French"?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Gerso13 13 6 3

I almost never hear "nous" in conversation in France. It's almost always "on"

19ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

iPwnMozart 18 8 6 5 3

It's true. A frenchman I know told me that "nous" is basically obsolete today.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samy1979 23 9 1170

Maybe in the oral language but not in the written language. And then its a difference if you speak to young people or elderly people. Just looked up at: <http://www.lemonde.fr/>

There are many "nous"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ketoacidosis 25 25 15 13 9 6 4 1401

Do you know if it's different in different countries?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samy1979 23 9 1170

I don't know. "Le monde" is a paper in France.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Gersois 13 6 3

Newspapers of record tend to be more formal in their language use. Quebecois French also tends to be more formal than French French.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mhulbert 20 19 15 13

Gersois is right - "nous" is almost never used in spoken French these days, at least from my recent experience during a year in Paris.

8ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

[deactivated user]

On can mean they, too. On a dit quelque chose dans la télé. They said something in TV.

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

rkent 16

While important to learn the proper syntax of a language, it's nuggets like this that really make you conversational

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

randyneworleans 11

AH! It's a common joke when someone says "They say that falling in love is wonderful" for someone else to ask "WHO says that?" Or "WHO are 'they'?" "They" are "on." I'm gettin' it!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

learner96 11 6 3

Nous means either we or us as in "we like to play" or "she talked to us" and on means one as in "one never knows what to think"

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

vivielle01 6

"Nous" means we in English. "On" also means we (it can also mean they).

"On" is conversational and "nous" is formal. "On" is more common, so it is important to know.

It is important to know the difference between "on" and "nous" because when you conjugate a verb, "on" and "nous" are conjugated differently. Verbs used with "on" are conjugated like verbs used with "il," "elle," and singular names. For instance, let's use the verb "manger" (to eat). je mange tu manges il/elle/on mange nous mangeons vous mangez ils/elles mangent As you can see, "manger" is conjugated differently with "on" than it is with "nous."

I hope this helps!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

onedrox 9 2

"nous" equals "we" in English. It is the 1st person plural, and it works exactly the same as in English.

"on" is a bit more tricky. Basically it should be used to designate a person or a group or person, which we are not sure who it might be, how many they are, and if they are male or female. An undefined group of people if you prefer. It could be a group of one person.

BUT, while talking, French people use it instead of the "nous", when it's obvious which persons we are talking about.

Ex: Eric, Jean and Paul are alone in their flat :

Eric: "Vous avez mangé ?"

Jean:"Oui, on a mangé."

Here, Jean doesn't need to specify which person the "on" designates, it's obvious that it's concerning Jean and Paul, and only them.

I hope it's clear enough.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

DanStoroz 7

"nous" is "we" when translated to english and is Nous Sommes in etre. "On" is informal and acts as "anyone","one" and acts the same as il and elle when conjugating verbs

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

chihuahuazero 20

Is "nous" only out of practice in informal conversation, or is it still in use with formal speaking and writing?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Arjofocolovi 21 14 10 5

"Nous" is used mostly for formal speaking like speeches or things like that, or any written text. In oral French, at least in France, it's been replaced by "on".

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Arjofocolovi 21 14 10 5
@lleuad

-

The correct sentence would be "On a dit quelque chose à la télé". But you're right, as I explained above, "on" can mean "they" as well as "nous", depending of the context.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Aoming 12 10 8 5 2 8

"On a dit quelque chose dans la télé" can be translated as "Someone said something..." . This is the "on impersonnel" and can be translated in english in different ways. It is different from the "on" meaning "we". You can have a look here to see some examples..
<http://www.anglaisfacile.com/exercices/exercice-anglais-2/exercice-anglais-56317.php>

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

emilygibb 5

Nous means 'we' and on means 'one' e.g nous avons une pomme- we have an apple, on a une pomme- one has an apple

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MichaelAwa12 12 4

How is on conjugated? Is it conjugated just like nous? If it is, does 'on mangeons' make sense?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

15 When to use the -n ending

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/9650731>

RuthKC 20 12 12 11 8 6 4

Thanks to a very helpful member of the Duolingo Esperanto Learners Group on Facebook, we are pleased to present the following useful summary:

When to use -n:

1. When the noun is the direct object: "Mi amas vin", I love you.
2. When an adjective is describing the direct object: "Li ŝatas manĝi verdajn pomojn", He likes to eat green apples.
3. When there is motion towards the noun: "La infano saltas sur la liton", The child jumps onto the bed (compare "La infano saltas sur la lito", the child was already on the bed and is jumping on it).
4. When expressing a duration of time: "La kapo doloris min la tutan tagon", My head hurt the whole day.
5. When expressing length, quantities, price, distance and measures: "La ŝtofo estas 2 metrojn longa", The fabric is 2 metres long; "La domo kostas multan monon", The house costs a lot of money; "Ili marŝis dudek kilometrojn", They walked twenty kilometres.

6. For greetings, thanks, wishes, apologies, and other similar expressions: "Saluton", "bonan tagon", "pardonon", "bonan apetiton", "gratulon", "dankon", etc. These are shortened forms of a longer phrase: "Mi donas al vi dankon", "Mi deziras al vi bonan tagon".

When NOT to use -n:

1. When the noun is the subject

2. Directly after "esti" or "fariĝi"

3. On "la": "Ŝi verŝas teon en la tason" (NOT "Ŝi verŝas teon en lan tason")

4. On numbers that are not nouns: "Ili havas du hundojn" (NOT "Ili havas dun hundojn")

5. When saying the name of the person you are talking to: "Mi amas vin, paĉjo" (NOT "Mi amas vin, paĉjon")

NEVER use -n after: al, ĉe, da, de, dum, el, ĝis, kun, laŭ, per, por, pro, pri.

Give Lingot26

781 year ago

Leave a new comment

62 Comments

Ontalor 22 22 16 14 13 12 6 2 3

I feel like the -n ending is the one aspect of Esperanto that somewhat mimics how confusing every aspect of natural languages is.

30ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

vikungen 11 11 5

The reason why many "natural languages" are confusing, isn't because they contain a couple of grammatical features which are not present in your native tongue, but because they contain tons of irregularities.

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ontalor 22 22 16 14 13 12 6 2 3

Yah, it's the irregularities, but it's also concepts like this more specifically that I was referring to where it's difficult to fully grasp and remember all the rules for when something is supposed to be used in a certain way until you get to a higher level in the language and you just start to instinctively understand when it should be used and when it shouldn't.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

seveer 18 13 7 6 6 2 86

The point is taken, but the difference is whereas one can list the uses of -n on a single page, the irregularities of almost any natural language will fill a large, dense book (I had such a book in my highschool "rhetoric" class). Compare a few weeks of initial difficulty to a lifetime of uncertainty. This is a mountain-molehill situation.

There is also the problem of perspective: The -n is much less confusing if you are a speaker from a number of languages that are declined/inflected similarly (unlike English). The -n is absolutely natural and, indeed, a vast simplification compared to their native languages' case systems. Different things are confusing for different learners. That's the rub of an international language.

The -n system is a useful, if imperfect, compromise with both costs and benefits.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ontalor 22 22 16 14 13 12 6 2 3

...I was just making a simple comparison, I don't know why people seem to want to argue me on it.

10ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

BenUserName 14 11 11 10 10 10 8 6 5 5 5 5 2

If there were no accusative case, you would have distinguish subjects from objects with word order, as English does, and then there'd be someone from another background explaining how confusing that can be too.

4Give Lingot•1 year ago

Nvirjskly 12 8 7 4

Eh, the use cases of "je" though are like natural language, subjective and based on usage rather than rules.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

v.ivanov 11 10 9 8 8 5 5 3

For some people it's the article „la“.

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

RaizinM 11 10 10 6 6 3 3 3

Exactly. Knowing when and when not to use the article "la" comes natural to speakers of most European languages, but it can be a huge stumbling block for the speakers of many Asian/African/etc. languages. Because the difference between "la domo" and just "domo" is very nuanced. Most people can't even explain why one is correct and the other isn't. It just is.

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

gregnacu 16 14 10 5 2 336

Another way of describing how the -n is used for measurement of time and distance is that it stands in for the place of a preposition. That's why Ruth listed all (did she miss any?) of the prepositions at the end.

In the sentence: La ŝtofo estas 2 metrojn longa. You can think of the sentence more simply structured as: La ŝtofo estas longa je 2 metroj. But, because that preposition is for adding additional information about a measurement, the preposition may be dropped and the accusative (-n) added to the unit of measurement. This works the same for time: Mi kuris dum 3 minutoj. The preposition dum can be dropped and the unit of measurement of time can take the -n. Mi kuris 3 minutojn.

It works the same way when indicating direction with "al". Mi iras al Parizo. Drop the preposition al and add -n to the destination. Mi iras Parizon.

I dispute that: "La domo kostas multan monon" is a good example of this. Kosti is a transitive verb. Therefore, multan monon is the direct object of that verb. One cannot say, La domo kostas je multa mono.

Whenever I hear some people argue that Esperanto should get rid of the accusative (-n), I shudder. Yes, it can be a bit confusing at first for English speakers, but when you get it you'll see that it is extremely important. It carries loads of meaning and is fundamental to how the language works.

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

adromu 14 11 11 7 691

is this a special problem for english speakers? i am a native spanish speaker and i don't have many problems with the -n.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BenUserName 14 11 11 10 10 10 10 8 6 5 5 5 5 2

But you guys use the preposition "a" before animate objects, so you have something kind of similar.

Also, in English speaking countries, our education when it comes to grammar is mostly terrible. (Most English speakers seem to think "grammar" means "correct spelling".) Also, we're not really forced to learn a foreign language. Sure, we have to learn a foreign language in school, but mostly, we hardly learn anything at all in these classes. Most of my friends back in Australia are monolingual native speakers of English and they don't know what a subject or an object is and a good percentage of them aren't even clear on what a noun, verb or adjective is. I'm a huge nerd who loves languages, so I know these things, but most don't. I've also worked a lot as an ESL teacher and I know that in most countries where my students came from, people actually learn about the grammar of their own languages in school. We learn correct spelling and punctuation and read some important books and discuss the themes in them, but we have very little metalanguage to talk about language with.

I think it's got less to do with the structure of our own language and more to do with our level of education regarding language.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Pa11en 12

I never could learn in school what all the non , pronoun, adjective, participle, and the list goes on, all were. I learned to just ignore all that stuff and work with trying to make a decent sentence. And it worked well for me..... until I decided to learn Esperanto. Now I am trying to learn all that language part stuff. I do find it all interesting and wish I could keep it in my head. I keep forgetting what a noun is, and without looking it up again, I would have to guess, in this moment I would guess.."a word that is acted upon by a verb and perhaps other language parts?". Now I know you linguists are having a chuckle (or pitying this american) for my 'knowledge' of nouns, and that is ok I have to chuckle as well. I am dedicated to learning Esperanto and with Esperanto one HAS to know language parts to know when to use the -n, there is not getting around it for me. And I need that. And I will continue to fight to remember them. It will just take a lot of time for me to learn them this late in life.

This is the reason I believe Esperanto should be taught in schools when Usono children are just learning language. For me would have been fun and confidence building for me if I could have learned a second language. I always loved codes, ciphers, and liked pig latin and cheap oriental. EO would really have played into my desire to learning another language, and I would have learned the ultimate code to language learning as well.

Look out... One day I may be writing a wall of Esperanto like this rather than Anglan. ;)

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gregnacu 16 14 10 5 2 336

I understand that people who don't know more than one language, and who were never particularly fond of learning about their own language, probably don't know the technical terms for parts of a sentence. My wife also has a hard time with knowing the difference between, say, an adjective and an adverb.

But, just to clear things up. These things are not that hard.

A "noun" is a "name." That's it!

That's all you have to remember about what a noun is. It's a name. "I went for a run." In this context "run" is being used as a noun. It's the name of the thing I did. So is "I" also a noun. It's the name of the person doing the run. Both are special kinds of nouns, but ultimately they are both just different types of nouns, because noun literally means name. Some names are formal, some names are abstract, some names are names of things and some names are names of actions. But, if it names something, it's a noun. Boom. Easy.

Greg.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rsf138 14 12 11 11 8 8 6 6 5 3 2 2

I don't think it is a grammar or a language problem, it seems to me that is due to the level of your practice, like when you naturally say "her" or "him" in English when the pronoun is an object. You just have to keep practicing until it comes naturally for you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gregnacu 16 14 10 5 2 336

Yes, and I should add that eventually it does start to feel natural. English does not mark the direct object other than by the word's position in the sentence (and with the exception of a few pronouns), but I remember when I first noticed that it felt natural to add the -n. In a sentence in which the direct object was distantly removed from the subject and verb by an intervening subphrase I remember feeling like the object should have an -n but doubting myself. Then working through the structure of the sentence and concluding by logical application of the rules that my intuition was correct!

That confirmed to me that eventually it does become natural. Somehow, in that instance, my brain was aware that this word was a direct object, and hence ought to have an -n ending, even though the sentence it was embedded in was quite complex.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BenUserName 14 11 11 10 10 10 10 8 6 5 5 5 5 2
"Her" or *"him" ;-)

In English, however, there are a couple of important differences. We use the objective form after prepositions, which only happens in Esperanto when a locative preposition is used to indicate direction. We also use the objective form of pronouns when they stand on their own and after the verb "to be". Basically, the objective forms of pronouns seem to be our default and we only use the subject form directly before a verb.

Who's there? Me. / It's me. / I am.

Who's coming? Me! / I am.

Who stole your phone? Her! / It was her! / She did!

In Esperanto, there would be no -n in these examples (except for on "your phone").

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rsf138 14 12 11 11 8 8 6 6 5 3 2 2

My example was merely illustrative, just to say there are similar kinds of mechanisms in the two languages and most people doesn't even notice absorbing it naturally.

Thanks for the correction. ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BenUserName 14 11 11 10 10 10 10 8 6 5 5 5 5 2

Ah yes. There's definitely at least something we can point to and say "English has, in a very limited way, something similar to this." Languages like Chinese and Vietnamese don't have any trace of case at all and I can imagine it being a bit of a further stretch to see how it works.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

rsf138 14 12 11 11 8 8 6 6 5 3 2 2

No, I am brazilian and I have the same problem.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

seveer 18 13 7 6 6 2 86

Yes, English has virtually no declension/inflection, so I think this is mostly an English problem.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PacaViro 10 10 7 7 6 5 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 1

"La ŝtofo estas 2 metrojn longa"

Why doesn't "longa" have the accusative N?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

draquila 9 8

It describes ŝtofo, not metrojn. Notice that it's singular as well.

12ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

PacaViro 10 10 7 7 6 5 5 3 2 2 2 2 1

Ah yes. Good point.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

niamhwitch 16 11 776

Copying and pasting this into a document in my Esperanto folder. Thank you, Ruth!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

daviddempsey 18 16 16 14 9 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 678

Very helpful, thank you. Can this post be made a "Sticky" so we can find it when we need to?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RuthKC 20 12 12 11 8 6 4

Yes, it is a link in the "mega post"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

daviddempsey 18 16 16 14 9 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 678

Okay, that'll work. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pa11en 12

I just wish it had it what a noun is included. This american did not learn that language part stuff in school and I am now fighting to learn it. case in point:

When the noun is the direct object: "Mi amas vin", I love you.

I have stop and think every time. Now, I do have memory problems so that does play a part in the following dilemma.

I do not think it is the word amas play a part in this question so: Is the noun the word 'I' or 'you'? Then again perhaps amas is language part in question here. In the example "Mi amas vin" I still do not know what the noun or direct object is. Who is the object 'mi' or 'vin'. Is the object the one being declared love to or the one declaring love to 'vin'. I alway get confused or get is backwards.

This is not to get a language lesson in this thread, it would do me no good buried way down here for reference. But I just used it as an example of what I have to go through to decide who gets the -n. I really wish I could have learn it when I was young in school.

<pre>I may just make a copy of this and research the definitions of what parts are considered a noun, object, direct object and such and make my own more detailed version of the document. As it is it is not a functional aid yet. There go with another wall again, It just irks me I cant keep this in my head that is basic to others. -end wall- </pre>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gregnacu 16 14 10 5 2 336

I don't mind giving language lessons in the forum, if it helps others, and it may help give the course creators content ideas and ways of teaching something.

You're a bit confused on what a noun is still. But that's okay. In the sentence "I love you." (Mi amas vin.) Both I and you are types of nouns. They are both names, they name people in this case, so they're both types of nouns.

However, there is a difference between the noun performing the action and the noun the action is performed on. The one doing the act is the "subject". It's still a noun, but it's the subject or subjective noun. The one being acted on is the "object". It too is a noun, but it's the object or objective noun.

In english it is the order of the words in the sentence that determines which noun is the subject and which noun is the object. In Esperanto the word order is more free, but to compensate for that freedom it is always the "object" which is marked by adding a final -n. So, it is always the noun (the name) of the thing acted upon, which is marked with the -n. (Other things are marked with -n in more complicated sentences too of course.)

"I love you." Can be translated properly into Esperanto in any of the following ways:

Mi amas vin. Mi vin amas. Vin mi amas. Vin amas mi. Amas mi vin. Amas vin mi.

Did I miss any? However, in practice, some of these possible word orders are very rare. In fact I'd say they become progressively less common in the order I put them in.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pa11en 12

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

bajanisto 17 10 9 7

Vi eble uzis `-signojn?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pa11en 12

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

marcsoton 15

Dankon! Mi pensas via "acusative -n" googledoc" estas tre helpema por min :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gregnacu 16 14 10 5 2 336

I tried to edit that googledoc to add some comments. The edit kind of went south. I can't seem to figure out how to do basic things in that document. Although, I'd love to add comments to it to help clarify certain points.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pa11en 12

WOW, Dankan. Yours, along with others additions will help others who are not only having problem with the accusative -n, but who have never been able to learn sentence structure.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

tommylinsley 14 13 7

@Pa11en. Look at GrammarBook.com and see if it helps you understand the different parts of grammar (noun, verb, etc.). I was a good grammar student, but I do refer to that website from time to time. Bonan ŝancon!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bajanisto 17 10 9 7

La listo 100 bazaj verboj de Esperanto povas esti utila, bv. vidi ĉe lernu!-forumo:

<http://lernu.net/forumo/temo/1017/2#p11472>

Bonvolu noti, ke vi povas ŝanĝi la lingvon de la paĝaro. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bajanisto 17 10 9 7

Notu en la listo:

tr = transitiva [verbo] — Transitiva verbo estas verbo, kiu povas havi rektan objekton (-n). Ekz. havi, aĉeti, ami, legi, ntr = netransitiva [verbo] — Netransitiva verbo estas verbo, kiu ne povas havi rektan objekton. Ekz. esti, fali, kuri, ...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

marcsoton 15

Useful Artilce, THanks! I must admit that the acusative (-n) endings are something that I still make a lot of mistakes with and find confusing, but with time and practice I am hoping will become easier and more natural for me. Is this exclusive only to native english speakers, or do speakers of other languages also find thi a big challenge?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Raesling 6

Thanks for this. I was struggling with it and the study text didn't help. Woman is already virino, so it's not like you're adding an O. We called the object "knabon," but when a man is the subject, we don't call him "viron" or say "vio" for you. It was all very confusing.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tommylinsley 14 13 7

Yes, accusative involves adding an "n" where appropriate for correct grammar and clarification. In Esperanto, nouns end with "O", regardless of whether or not a particular noun is used as a direct object. Think of the "O" as simply just always correct spelling for any noun. An "n" is just for occasional grammar usage.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JordiFaxon 14 12 12 11 11 8 7 7 6 6 6 5 5 4 3 2 2

Thanks! I was really lost on this!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ionasky 18 17 13 11 8 6 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 3 7 3

Just seen this, very helpful

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

daviddempsey 18 16 16 14 9 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 6 7 8

Would an accusative -n ever be used directly after "jen"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gregnacu 16 14 10 5 2 3 3 6

I think this depends on how you're using "jen." Jen is a bit different, it introduces something by indicating that "here it is!" Ekz. Jen, mi havas du dolarojn. Is like saying, Check it out, I have two dollars!. I think it could make sense to say something like: Mi donas al vi jen du dolarojn. Which is like saying, I am giving you, here it is, two dollars. However, the jen is really just shoved in the middle for emphasis, but not as though "du dolarojn" is the object of jen.

I actually don't think jen is a preposition.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

daviddempsey 18 16 16 14 9 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 6 7 8

Thank you for the reply! It's much appreciated. I was also wondering, does anyone know which language "jen" is pulled from?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gregnacu 16 14 10 5 2 3 3 6

No problem! I've never thought to check what the etymology of jen is. But a quick search of the web revealed this:

<https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/jen#Esperanto>

It appears to be taken directly from Latin. The above page links further to this:

<https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/en#Latin>

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

zerozeroone 25 20 7 5 3 1007

Question on using -n with showing direction. I've come across two different sentence with different applications of -n:

In the Verbs:-lg-ig lesson, there is "Sidiĝu sur ĉi tiu seĝon!"

In the Travel lesson, there is "Turnu en ĉi tiun direkton."

Which is right?

From the notes in the Accusative lesson:

Note that an adjective modifying a direct object would also receive the -n ending.

From the notes in the Prepositions lesson:

In addition to its use for the direct object, the -n ending is also used to show direction

Now, there's noting in the notes in the Prepositions lesson to address adding the -n to other terms after the preposition; the examples shown are:

- Ĥi saltas sur la tablo. = She jumps (up and down) on the table.

- Ĥi saltas sur la tablon. = She jumps onto the table (from another location).

As an aside; perhaps better examples would be:

- Ĥi saltas sur la blua tablo. = She jumps (up and down) on the blue table.

- Ĥi saltas sur la blua[n] tablon. = She jumps onto the blue table (from another location).

With the [n] added or removed as appropriate.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RuthKC 20 12 12 11 8 6 4

Should be "tiun" in the first sentence. I will check on that sentence and fix it if there is an error.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gregnacu 16 14 10 5 2 336

Just one minor point of clarification. Salti means to jump one time. That is to thrust your body up so your feet leave the ground and then to fall back down to approximately the same place or a nearby place.

<http://www.simplavortaro.org/vorto/salti>

If you want to say jump as in to repeatedly jump up and down over and over several times, you want the verb "saltadi".

Therefore, "Ŝi saltis sur la lito", and "Ŝi saltis sur la liton" both make sense. She jumped once while on the bed and she jumped once to get up onto the bed. However, while "Ŝi saltadis sur la lito" makes perfect sense, it's what my kid loves to do, "Ŝi saltadis sur la liton" does not really make sense. She jumps repeatedly onto the bed. I guess it makes sense, but I'd probably assume the speaker had made a grammatical mistake before trying to take it at face value. The reason it doesn't make sense is that once you jump onto the bed once you're then already on the bed. So you'd have to get off the bed in order to do it again, I think that's why it sounds weird to me.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NaamaYM 17 14 4 3

In the sentence "katidoj iĝas katoj" the katoj didn't get the -n. So I guess that "iĝi" should get into the list too. Do all subjects after "iĝ" verbs don't get the -n?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bajanisto 17 10 9 7

Jes, nur transitivaj verboj povas havi rektan objekton (-n). Ĉiuj -iĝi-verboj estas netransitivaj verboj, kiuj ne povas havi rektan objekton. (Bonvolu vidi mian antaŭan mesaĝon en ĉi tiu fadeneto.)

Legu ankaŭ ĉi tiun paĝon ĉe lernu!-paĝaro: When should I use -iĝ- and -ig-?.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gregnacu 16 14 10 5 2 336

That's right, you wouldn't put an -n on katoj in that sentence. "Iĝi" is really another word for "fariĝi", both mean (more or less) "become."

The original post lists words after which to not use -n. It lists "esti" and "fariĝi". There are actually several (maybe even many) words that mean something similar to these. I always say you shouldn't try to memorize the list, you should try to understand why they don't have direct objects as a result of the meaning of the words themselves.

For example: aperi, aspekti, ŝajni, resti. And there are probably others. Every now and then I encounter another one.

Li aperis mensoganto. He appeared to be a liar. Ili restis Germanoj. They remained German. Li ŝajnis gasti en la hotelo. He seemed to be a guest in the hotel. Ŝi aspektas kolera. She looks angry.

In each case, the verb is not expressing a change that the subject is causing in the object. Instead some other relationship is being expressed with the verb.

As bajanisto said, these verbs are not transitive. Only transitive verbs can have direct objects. Although, this is a technical explanation.

You can read about it (in Esperanto) here:
http://bertilow.com/pmeg/gramatiko/specialaj_priskriboj/perverba/subjekto.html

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NaamaYM 17 14 4 3

Every time i think i completely understand the -n thing, i discover something new. But i think i get it now. thanks @bajanisto and @gregracu.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

salivanto 17 12 8 425

Note that fariĝi is in the list and iĝi and fariĝi are synonyms. For whatever reason "iĝi" seems to be preferred in this course, but in wider Esperantujo (including, apparently, for the "very helpful member" mentioned in the OP) "fariĝi" is more colloquial.

The answer to your question (do all nouns after "iĝ" verbs go without an -n) is "it depends." There are sentences in Duo like "aliĝi la klubon" which is an alternative form of "aliĝi al la klubo."

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

RuthKC 20 12 12 11 8 6 4

iĝi and fariĝi are both used frequently in the course, and we do not prefer "igxi". "aliĝi la klubon" did appear at one point in the course, but it was removed as it was deemed incorrect by our expert advisor.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

salivanto 17 12 8 425

Interesting. Thanks.

To clarify - I'm not sure off hand how frequently "fariĝi" is used -- only that "iĝi" is used in at least a few cases where many would say that "fariĝi" would be the better choice.

I stand corrected on "aliĝi la klubon". I went back and checked. Turns out I did not see it in the course. It was in a question from a learner. Nevertheless, Duo sentences notwithstanding, it is not uncommon to see an -n after a verb with iĝi in it. Sometimes it's a measurement, such as:

la stacio troviĝas ioman distancon ekster la urbo.
Sometimes it's taking the place of a preposition:

li humile alproksimiĝis sinjoron de Prelongo

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

kolego 10 8 4

Is this a possible rule: "Use the accusative for nouns which follow a verb (except "esti")"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tommylinsley 14 13 7

@kolego, I used to think that was a rule. I even thought I had read that somewhere. The "possible rule" you mention seems to work, but I've found that it's not the best way to look at it. Seems best to think in terms of using the -n to show who/what is being acted upon. This works for most general uses I've seen so far. (note: "-n" usually is added to the Noun and also the related Adjectives following verbs)

Notice the placement of the "-N" in the following examples: More fun with Accusatives ("accusatives put the -n in fun"):

What are you eating? (Literally: "You are eating what?") = kioN vi manĝas? What is eating you? = kio viN manĝas?

We are eating that. = ni manĝas tioN. That is eating us. = niN manĝas tio.

(yes, -n is also used for indicating direction and change of location and for quantity, etc. But, I would think that for beginners and intermediates, for now, just concentrate on adding -n to who/what is being acted upon)

ALSO, read this detailed explanation relating to accusative -N (from @floodzavut): https://www.duolingo.com/comment/9063207?comment_id=10752480

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

salivanto 17 12 8 425

Ruth/Margo - it was brought to my attention that this summary doesn't include when to add -n to adverbs. Do you think this should be added - perhaps as item 3b?

Amike, Tomaso/Salivanto

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

PolyglotCiro 25 25 25 25 14 13 13 12 11 11 9 4 34
Mi parolo la anglan,min Skype ciropolyglotskype

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

16 Is there anything else after reaching the Golden Owl?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/15437901>

Gregorio217189 22 6

Finally reached the Golden Owl, so 26% proficient. Is there another level to go to or just repeated review left? Do I need to go to another application for further study?

Give Lingot

010 months ago

Leave a new comment

10 Comments

DaveBoss 25 25 25 6 6 4 525

Congratulations. It depends what you want to do. If you'd like to be able to speak with Spanish speakers, then, yes you definitely do. DL does not teach you conversation. No offense, but if your fluency rating, which is not very accurate, by the way, is only 26%, then you likely don't have too many top scores (5/5 for example on the strength meter), on the individual lessons, meaning you could probably stand to repeat some of them. Take the language progress quiz from the DL Ingot Store, for an assessment of how you're doing. If you want to write better, try the translations in Immersion, if you have access to those (some DL users don't have access). If you want to learn grammar, then try a site like studyspanish.com or Butterfly Spanish on YouTube. Watch Spanish movies, listen to music, practice with others. Good luck.

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Gregorio217189 22 6
Gracias

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

aanaaaa 25 23 22 21 20 20 15 14 14 14 12 12 661

No, there is nothing more. Maybe in the future they can update the tree... But you can study in other places, here there is a good website to practice your writing: <http://lang-8.com/>

1ReplyGive Lingot1•10 months ago

Gregorio217189 22 6
Gracias

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ElimGarak 23 11 896

I'm at 55% and just about finished turning my tree gold (again) completing all the skills. My goal is to aim for level 25, which can be achieved through immersion or continuing to review the skills. You can also complete the reverse tree, learning English from Spanish.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Gregorio217189 22 6
Where do you find the reverse tree?

0ReplyGive Lingot1•10 months ago

Jazztonight 25 25 11 852

two things: First, you are at Level 20. There are 25 Levels. It will take months to reach Level 25, and you'll learn a lot along the way, and reinforce what you've learned as well.

Second, the Reverse Tree is simple. You are currently studying Spanish for English speakers. The reverse tree is signing up to study English for Spanish speakers. I'm doing that now, after having reached Level 25 on Spanish for English speakers. Now I'm at Level 23 for the Reverse Tree.

It takes a long time unless you spend hours a day on Duolingo. But life is not a race.

Good luck!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

eagersnap 19 16 14

You can also try laddering. Use Spanish as a base to learn a new language (e.g. German like I am doing). This means that every sentence you encounter will force you to use a language that is not your first.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Brent_Nichols 17 10 2 66

Try to keep your tree gold and go back and review each lesson. Use the timed practice and try to get 17/18 right before moving to the next lesson.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

carmelkell3 12 8

I'm new to duolingo. Ive reached the Golden Owl but not sure where to go next.I've signed up for the timed practice but can't find out how to use it.? I do a few practice lessons daily but no sign of the timer?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

17 Mastering the French "R" sound...any tips?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4892037>

amflutist 7 4 1

Hello, everyone! I'm not sure if this question has already been asked, but I thought I ought to try my luck here just in case!

I think I've been doing very well with pronunciation in French. The only sound that still escapes me is the "r" sound. I know there are supposed to be two different ways to pronounce it (depending on its placement in the word), but for the life of me I can't do it right either way.

Does anyone have any good tips on how to practice pronouncing the French "r"? I would like to become good at this, because pronunciation is such an important part for me!

Thank you for anyone who takes the time to help out! I truly appreciate it!

Give Lingot

62 years ago

Leave a new comment

13 Comments

Ontalor 22 22 16 14 13 12 6 2 3

This could totally be taken the wrong way, but the first time I managed to pronounce it decently was when I basically made that "ecchhh" sound people make when they're disgusted.

Don't stress too much about it. I've been trying to fully figure out the Spanish 'r' for like ten years now. I'm just learning to accept that having a slight accent as a foreigner gives you a kind of charm that people appreciate.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

amflutist 7 4 1

I know what you mean about the Spanish "r" as well. I studied Spanish in high school, and again, I was great at all the other pronunciation aspects, but rolling that r... ^^;;

Anyway, thank you for your help nonetheless! I genuinely appreciate it! Good luck to you as well! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1253

This is how I learned: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oZ3jeAU3VDk>

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

amflutist 7 4 1

I've seen a few of these videos on Youtube, but not this particular one. It looks like it could help quite a bit! Thanks for the tip! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Resonance2001 15 11 10 5

Do you ever gargle with mouthwash? It's a little bit like that although the tongue is somewhat further forward. It is a brief sound.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

amflutist 7 4 1

I do! :) And thanks! I'll have to consider that when practicing!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TrioLinguist 25 11 8

This is a hard one. I picked up my French and Spanish r's pretty fast but I'm not sure. I'd say look around on YouTube or find a French friend IRL to help you.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

amflutist 7 4 1

You're very lucky, hahaha! Thanks for your tips! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tnel1 13 12 11 10 6

There are a lot of videos on this specific topic on Youtube. Here's one: http://youtu.be/MrjMJ_PAIB8

All I can say is practice and repeat, repeat, repeat, repeat.....do it to the point you feel you are overdoing it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

amflutist 7 4 1

Thanks for the tip! (And also the video--like I mentioned to DXLi, this is one I haven't seen yet!) I appreciate it~ :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tnel1 13 12 11 10 6

oh great! it's been awhile since i've worked on french so it was fun for me to look. i must say, they have some really great resources since i last looked! good luck!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SamHansen 21 16 12 9 6 3 919

Practice it a lot, especially around native speakers. My French r is pretty solid most of the time, but there are still places that just stump me. For example, I can not say the 'eur' sound without sounding like a complete idiot

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

amflutist 7 4 1

That's awesome! Keep up the good work! :D For me, the times my "r" sound the worst are when I try to say anything where an "a" follows the "r." It's just nightmarish... >_<

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

18 How to get the most of out duolingo (and more)

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5226184>

Alexrorysmith1 14 6

This post has been rumbling around my head for a long time now and today seems like a good day to release it. I'm going to be focussing on how to best use duolingo to improve your skills in a certain language and also how to be happier about learning a language through duolingo. My only regret is that I can only post this in my native tongue.

There's a few things duolingo is great at but there's also a few things that it can allow us to neglect. One is that due to the nature of the tasks we are given, peoples reading and writing skills probably improve much quicker than their speaking or listening skills. Another is the lack of grammar teaching. Teaching grammar is incredibly difficult and I think duolingo's decision to leave it to websites and teachers is the correct one, it keeps the app compact and simple to grade.

Getting the most out of duo:

Every time you hear a sentence in the language you are learning, speak it out loud after you hear it.

Whenever you see a correct answer in the language you are learning, speak it out loud. (We don't want be speaking our answers before they are checked)

(These will help improve your speaking skills, your muscle memory will develop and you should be more comfortable when talking)

Close your eyes when you click 'continue' to move to the next task, if it's a task with sound you will hear the sentence before you can see the words. If my eyes are open I find myself reading to understand and although I hear what is said I haven't LISTENED to what is said.

(This will help improve your listening skills, identifying words and inferring meaning from sounds. Your brain still has the opportunity of inferring/confirming meaning through analysing words you read, so prioritising listening first shouldn't impact that)

Use the progress quiz as a marker for your improvement. In the lingot store you can spend 25 lingots in order to take an extended (roughly 15-25min) test that gives you a grade at the end. I've been taking a weekly test to help measure my progress and it's a big positive for me. The frequency with which you can take the tests (due to their cost) will vary, but no matter how regularly you can complete it, it may help you stay motivated. The tests shouldn't be daunting as they test you with questions that are appropriate to your level.

Compliment your learning with another resource. There are plenty around, different people learn differently, find something that suits your routines, abilities and desires. I've found interpals.net really good because I get to speak with French natives and I find people very interesting, so it's a way for me to improve my French that isn't a burden/annoyance.

(Finding something to help improve your grammar is essential in my opinion)

And here's the second part of my post which is how people can be happier while learning with duolingo. Learning any skill can be challenging and with challenge comes pain, here's some ways I feel some people could help keep themselves happier. (Happiness while learning is essential)

Entitlement. We all need to lose our sense of entitlement when it comes to duolingo. People in the comments are getting grumpy and showing anger when duolingo: marked their correct answer as wrong gave them a word they'd never heard before gave them a recording that was difficult to analyse gave them idioms that are hard to translate AND a whole load of other stuff.

When you download this app, you accept that it is going to teach you the language in the way the creators have seen fit. Sure you can suggest other ways, but the comments section of a lesson probably isn't the right place and spreading negativity is bad. Secondly, stay humble! This app is FREE, how people can demand instant corrections to incorrect exercises or an even deeper level of tuition than duolingo already provides is beyond me! Be thankful of what you have!

Positive thinking. Sure it's annoying when you have to recomplete a level, but just think of how useful for your memory going over words you already know two or three times is! Can't find the positive in a situation? Then just be thankful that you have a smart phone and that there's a FREE app of incredible value that covers the vast majority of many languages.

Personal improvement. Think of the value you are adding to yourself by progressing in any second language. This can't be understated and is all the motivation I need to continue.

Comments. There's usually some witty/funny/empathetic comments on each task that can brighten your day. Even just finding a comment from somebody who has had the same problem as you can be heartening.

I hope people find this helpful, I also hope others will share inventive ways they have used duolingo.

Give Lingot71
1972 years ago

Leave a new comment
58 Comments

prjenny 9
Thank you so much for taking the time to write such a thoughtful approach to learning on Duolingo. I appreciate your effort. Have a great day!!

18ReplyGive Lingot8•2 years ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1258

Nice post, Alexrorysmith1.

I'm totally with you on your "speaking to yourself out loud" suggestions. I started doing that a while back, and it's been a big help for me, both in terms of developing my "Spanish ear" (knowing what "sounds right" in Spanish) and in improving the rhythm of my speech.

I'm not really against people complaining about Duolingo not accepting valid answers in the comments. I mean, how else would I know what else is valid, unless somebody mentions it? You're right though, that it's easier to learn when you're not frustrated. So that's definitely something to keep in mind when you're mentioning issues with the accepted translations.

Edit: Haha, fine. I'm not really against people complaining about Duolingo not accepting valid answers in the comments, as long as they only do it once and just upvote if someone else has already made the same suggestion. Happy? :)

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12
"I'm not really...."

From the mouth of a non-moderator. :) We always delete those if there is no further contribution to the discussion. It's absolutely ridiculous how many people will report that such and such is not accepted. OVER and OVER. It's obviously not helpful, because everyone repeats each other. The contributors can't do anything about it if the sentence isn't reported, so there's no use to have it lying around. Nothing wrong with asking why, but I don't leave up blatant complaints.

Edit: I like your dreams, bud. Keep on keepin' on.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AbraxunsIllusion 25 6 5 5 5 4
Nice post, hope it makes it in the popular tab. It's a good guide to a duolingo lesson. :)

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Bertadee 24 305
You are absolutely right! I'm very grateful to Duolingo for providing this service - it's helped me immensely and has improved my ability to communicate. I am dismayed when I read comments from people who are so angry.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OjosDelMundo 24
I agree 100% with the "entitlement" point. You pay absolutely NOTHING for this amazing service. Zilch. Zero. It's been more highly acclaimed than Rosetta Stone, which costs hundreds of dollars. Show some gratitude instead of constantly complaining.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

Excellent advice! nkn15 is dead on about making use of the discussion section of the reverse course. Whenever I see a sentence in Spanish (or any other language) and I say, "Hey, that's not right," I open another tab and search for the sentence in the reverse forum. If it really is bad Spanish, that'll be a big topic of conversation. If they're talking about something else, then I know the problem is with me, not the sentence.

Asking questions in the reverse forum is a great way to practice writing too. And a lot more pleasant than attempting reverse Immersion! :-)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

truemi 25 12 6 6 5

Thanks for the post! I find this really helpful.

Just a question. You said to listen to the next question while closing your eyes, to get the most out of the voice. But when you do this, do you open your eyes, look at the screen, and type the answer, open your eyes, look at the keyboard and give the answer, to are you able to type with your eyes shut? I'm asking because if your do either of the latter two, you won't know which language to translate. If you do the former, I, at least, find myself reading the question.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alexrorysmith1 14 6

I open my eyes when duolingo has finished speaking. There's no need to try and type with your eyes closed, the purpose of the exercise it to make sure you hear and analyse the sentence before you SEE and analyse it :)

Bon chance!

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

truemi 25 12 6 6 5

Ah, okay, thanks for the explanation. I get it now. :)

Merci! The same to you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Roger_Burke 24 4

Great insights explained with care. Definitely worth an up vote and a few lingots. I have been reverse engineering the DL system as I was completing the Spanish tree. Like most of the things the creator has built there is a lot of cleverness built in that many of us might not see at first glance. There is a TED Talk on YouTube that summarizes some of Luis Van Anh's adventures in crowd sourcing. The talk is definitely worth watching and passing on to others. The only gripe I have is the latency or unwillingness of volunteer moderators to deal with reports or corrections. I have found more than a few outright errors which I reported and never got any action on. Not only did I report the errors, but I researched the correct answers in scholarly journals and university thesis papers that document my points. Then I sent links referencing page, paragraph, and line where the correct answers were. The lack of response can be interpreted in one of two ways. The moderators are dropping the ball or corrections are not looked at until an certain number of people report the problem. If it is the latter, there is a flaw in the crowd sourcing strategy because if the question or correction is obscure it will take a long time for the system to turn the problem over to a human to be moderated. This is hard to explain in abstract terms so I will give my favorite pet peeve as an example. In the Science module, we were introduced to the term "bolsa de gas" without much context. Most DLers were translating this as "gas bag" in the context of either a person with a highly inflated self-image and the urge to talk to much or as a blimp. However, bolsa can be correctly interpreted as "bag or pocket" so "bolsa de gas" is also "gas pocket." I knew that "gas pocket" is a common English term in geology and mining engineering. I didn't know if Spanish used "bolsa de gas" in the same way so I did a web search and sure enough I found a thesis on safety written at a Mexican School of Mines that referred to how a "bolsa de gas" killed a number of miners when they broke through a tunnel wall and hit a "gas pocket." And considering that the term was in the Science module this was far more likely to be correct than "bag of gas." It is the frequency of this kind of problem that frustrates students and "slightly" undercuts the programs unquestionable excellence and leads to too many repetitive negative comments. And before someone point it out, I can be a gas bag wehn I get frustrated.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Rafforza 14 11 3 3 2 2 2

I actually think a clever feature would be for reports to be channeled into a menu tab that Native speakers can see and then up/down vote the correctness.

For example, I'm Native English learning Italian (Eng2Ita) If I type an Italian sentence I think should be correct and then report it. Native Italian Speakers (Ita2Eng) could click on tab to review and up/down vote these entries based on whether they're correct.

This of course would then work vise versa. With a substantial body of votes, sentences could be filtered into three categories, the majority of them being either correct/incorrect and some percentage requiring more careful review from the Contributors.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1258

I like this idea a lot. It totally fits in with Duolingo's crowd-sourcing emphasis. Even if they're not ok with the community having final say, I think the community could do a decent job voting on the good translations and "filtering" them up the list so they get higher priority attention by the contributors.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

Contributors work with courses, not moderators (though there are some that have dual powers). Contributors have personal lives, and can't always be prompt, and the sheer amount of work that they do is incredible. They aren't obligated to spend time here, but when they do, they work very hard.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1258

Holy wall of text! Ever heard of the Enter key? :P

You're totally right with respect to the slow response times. It's frustrating to go several months before hearing that your suggestion has been accepted. It's not the case that you're being ignored though. There's just a long list of suggestions to process. See this thread for more details by a course contributor: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5149101>

Perhaps the situation could be improved by adding more contributors, but obviously that's a decision above my pay grade.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BarbaraHer124569 14 11
Thank you I really needed that.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alexrorysmith1 14 6
We're all going to make it :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aim2xl 22
Thank you for the advice!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alidun 16 8
This is really good advice, particularly about speaking the sentences - I've heard reading aloud really does help, so I keep meaning to do it more. Thanks very much! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

speedboy7777 25 285
wow. Great tips Alex. For a while I was in a Duolingo rut regarding learning French but lately I've come back with renewed vigour. Merci beaucoup, Alex. À plus tard!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TammySing 10 2
Thanks! I think you're right in that, though Duolingo is a great site, it is more about the reading and writing side of language learning than the speaking and listening. I find your tip: speaking to yourself out loud, does really help with my pronunciation and confidence in speaking. Also really listening (ie. closing your eyes to just listen) really helps me understand what is being said rather than what is written.

My second language is not yet strong enough to translate this but if anyone can speak another language fluently and could translate the original post, then I believe you could really help many more people!

And I do wish everyone was as positive as you! Duolingo is amazing for a free site and people need to appreciate that! Keep up that optimism and good for you!

Thank you / Merci / Gracias / 谢谢 / tak / σας ευχαριστώ / Danke / grazie / ありがとう / dziękuję !
Much appreciated!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Leya_1 13 2 2

Thank you for such an excellent post. I found it helpful and motivational. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

karmisson 14 9 6 4 2

Mit welchen Apps übt ihr die Deutschsprache zu lernen? Was ist ein gute Website zum Grammatik lernen?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lucille_mrgr 10 9 9 2

Thank you very much, it's really helping !

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jaye16 25 25 25 13 6 3 2 162

This should be required reading for everyone on Duo. Particularly the "Entitlement" section. Duo should have an "I accept the conditions" requirement . ;-) And a reminded that:"They're not real hearts, you know?" Your ideas for learning are spot on. Thank you for putting them all here. I have a tiny post with "hints and tips" but noway as comprehensive as this. I'm bookmarking it and will pass it on to others, in particular new users. I also make it a point to pass along the Guidelines. Here's my post if you're interested: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4821654>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DominikBosnjak 15 2

The advice to close your eyes before proceeding is really good and works.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AnnetteAtkin 15

Thank you / merci beaucoup! This post deserves a sticky!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jktsmith 21 13

Your idea of listening only is excellent! Reading aids my comprehension so much -- too much, turns out. Thanks for that smart idea.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Shim 20 17 14 12 22

"Complement", not "compliment"

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

nkn15 17 7

I never knew about the test in the lingot store. I'll have to try it sometime. Thanks for the advice.
I also have some tips for everyone: if you have a question, sometimes it might help to search it in the search box to get an answer, either if you need one fast, or if your question wasn't completely answered on the discussion you made. It is also helpful to ask it in the reverse course discussion. You'll make many friends this way and get corrections and help from people who speak a different language. It's really helpful and actually fun and encouraging to practice a language with native speakers and get advice from them. Stay determined and don't give up, because when you're done, you'll get much more than just lingots and congrats from fellow learners.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

hey great job on this post. believe it or not but your pretty cute. can you friend me? whats your name?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alexrorysmith1 14 6

hahaha I can TOTALLY believe it. Unsurprisingly my name's Alex.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

i figured that much

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

do you have a girlfriend

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alexrorysmith1 14 6

Talk to me once you hit level 5 ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

i already have so can i talk to you now!!!!!!!!!!!!!!lol

-2Give Lingot•2 years ago

BrendaLoyd 20

Question for you: When I do finish my tree, will I still have access to all of the lessons so I can continue practicing? I know that I will need to keep doing that long after I have finished. In fact I thought that I just might never finish the last lesson in order to ensure that I would continue to have access to the lessons. Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jaye16 25 25 25 13 6 3 2 162

I finished the German tree in August. Then I restarted it from the bottom up. In the meantime things decay and must be repeated. I believe this repetition is one of the genius features of Duo because only now can I say I've learned German and can do the exercises without deep thought and loads of errors. So, don't worry you'll have access and you'll appreciate it even more.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alexrorysmith1 14 6

Yeah you still have access :) Complete it all and some lessons will decay, you can also keep taking tests.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rafforza 14 11 3 3 2 2 2

Nice post, I would add on there to take the language of your Native Tongue in the Language that you're learning. (if possible) -- Duo focuses their lessons much more on comprehension than on actually producing original content. So taking your native language in the language you're learning is a nice challenge to actually produce the foreign language.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ms.mm 25 14 3 2 2

I found this very helpful. Thanks for taking the time to post and share such good ideas with all of us.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

titi11111

me encanta duolingo te puede enseñar al mismo tiempo dos idiomas mi lenguaje es español el Segundo es English gracias Duolingo

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ColettaD 25 8 905

Great recommendations and insights -- thanks! Have a lingot and a happy day

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maduganme 15 12 1

Good post, I do agree that the grammar was hard to get a grip of at first, but I'm getting there. At first I was more focussed on the reading and writing part of it, but now I also close my eyes, to see if I can identify words by hearing them. I don't know if this makes any sense, but when I listen to French natives speak, I think they speak very fast? and I have difficulty understanding words that sound the same, hopefully as I progress in duolingo that will improve. I am thoroughly enjoying this course and thanks to the people who helped make it. I am not confident enough to write in French yet, and like you, I am using my native tongue but hopefully that will happen soon.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

colorfulnitemare 11

Thanks for the advice :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tropicalnut 25 20 12 10 10 7 1082

hey I want to chip in. Thanks for a great post, I also do some vocal learning. I have found that when I have a new word that I want to learn to spell, I first need to learn how to say it. This works so well in Spanish. It also as "writchie4" suggests helps to develop a Spanish ear. :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

scombrini 9

I found this very helpful, thanks for sharing your thoughts.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Elsarules1 8

sí sí pastel. me hubiera gustado que me gustaba Duolingo pero se pone un poco aburrido ...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Excellent suggestions. Thank you! And I, for one, enjoy everything about Duolingo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SandraSilva17 10

Thank you that was very interesting and helpful . I will keep this in mind when I feel like giving up.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

msrozzie 21 160

I enjoyed reading your post. Thanks for sharing!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Quinn605 8

it always sound easier , but if you study alone, it's hard to focus on it.. So I guess classes and website practicing works better that?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alexrorysmith1 14 6

Whatever works best for you :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Alex.....great post i have read it a lot just thinking about you.....why wont you talk to me anymore? is it because i have asked a lot of questions or because.....i don't know why

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BlazingFast 19

I'm learning German right now and I crossed this page through other people.

This is a very insightful post. Well done!

Have a fun day, cunninglinguist ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lt.Franklin 7

well said! thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

msrozzie 21 160

Well said, thanks for sharing!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GaryDelligatti 16 12

I think that this pretty well sums it up....and how can one complain about a FREE app????

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

19 "The" meselesi

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1646458>

Selcen_Ozturk 23 11 10 6 6

Her İngilizce öğrenen Türk'ün kafasını en çok karıştıran şey the, yani belirli harfitarif, bilindik bir nesneden bahsederken kullanılır. Kafamızı karıştırmasının sebebi tabii ki dilimizde tam olarak karşılığı olmaması. Ama aslında, cümledeki "nesne"de kullanıldığı zaman dilimizde bir karşılığı var, "ismin belirtme hali". Örneklerle kullanıldığı yerleri ve çevirileri özetlersek:

1 "ismin –i hali" durumu. yani cümledeki nesnenin belirli bi nesne olması:

The men eat apples: Adamlar elma yer (Herhangi bir elma)

The men eat the apples: Adamlar elmaları yer.

The men eat the apple: Adamlar elmayı yer. (Belirli bir elma, karşımızdaki hangi elmadan bahsettiğimizin farkında)

(Türkçede bazı fiiller ismin -e halini gerektirdiğinden bu durum orada geçerli değildir "I look at the mirror" ya da "I look at a mirror" ikisi de "aynaya bakarım" şeklinde çevrilebilir. ama nesne tekilse a ya da the'dan birinin kullanılması gerekir) bazılarının kafası çok karışmış. yukarıda yazdığım şey cümlelerin nesnesi için geçerli. halbuki "belirtili özne" diye bir şey yok. yani özne "The dog" olduğunda tabii ki de "Köpeği...." diye çevrilmez. Öznenin -i eki alması bize belirtili olduğunu mu gösterir? Hayır! Birine ait olduğunu gösterir (Onun köpeği - His/Her dog).

2 Belirli, daha önceden bahsettiğimiz bir özne olması durumu:

My mother was sick yesterday. I called a doctor. The doctor arrived soon and gave her some medicine. (Burada bir önceki cümlede doktordan bahsettiğimiz için 3. cümledeki "doktor" belirli hale gelir, the kullanmak şarttır.)

3 ..have/has the..." cümleleri

En çok kafa karıştıran cümleler bunlar, çünkü "the" girince araya Türkçedeki cümlenin yapısı tamamen değişiyor. Bunu da örnekle açıklamıştım daha önce:

Should we buy some plates for Selcen? (Selcen için tabak alsak mı?)
No, the girl has plates. (Hayır kızın –Selcen'in- tabakları var)

Where are the plates we bought yesterday? (Dün aldığımız tabaklar nerede?)

Selcen has the plates. (Tabaklar Selcen'de. Selcen'in tabakları var yanlı!)
ek: peki ya belirli bir nesnenin birini ait olduğunu söylemek istersek ne kullanacağız? o zaman "possessive pronoun" yani iyelik zamiri kullanmalıyız. yani "the plates are hers" ya da "the plates are Selcen's" ya da "the plates belong to Selcen".

4 the yı her zaman kullanmamız gereken yerler

doğayla ilgili, evrende bir tane olan şeyler. örneğin: the world , the moon, the sky, the sun, the North pole, the universe gibi

yine bir tane olan, özel coğrafi yerler için. örneğin: the Alps, the river Rhine, the Black Sea, the Pacific Ocean

Birleşik devletlerden ve imparatorluklardan oluşan ülkeler: the United States of America, the United Kingdom, the United Arabic Emirates, the Ottoman Empire

topluca bir gruptan bahsetmek için: the Turkish (Türkler), the rich (zenginler), the Öztürks (Öztürkler yani Öztürk ailesi) sıralama sayıları: the first, the fifth, the tenth müzik aletleri: the piano, the violin

5

church (kilise), mosque (cami), hospital (hastane), prison (hapisane), school (okul) gibi kelimeler, bina olarak düşünülüyorsa the kullanılır ama iş/ibadet/egitim gibi amaçlarla gidildiğinde the kullanılamaz. Yani cuma günü camiye namaz kılmaya gidiyorsanız "I go to mosque", ama Sultan Ahmet Camii'ne turist olarak gidiyorsanız "I go to the mosque" kullanılır.

Give Lingot180
2973 years ago

Leave a new comment
273 Comments

Selcen_Ozturk 23 11 10 6 6
aklınıza gelen başka kuralları/örnekleri paylaşmaktan çekinmeyin!

135ReplyGive Lingot57•3 years ago

pis_zagor 3

Selcen hanım size çok teşekkür ederim çok güzel açıklıyor ve anlatıyorsunuz. Sayeniz de bir çok şeyi net bir şekilde öğreniyorum.

61ReplyGive Lingot6•3 years ago

emredeniz07 25 10 9 3 84

çok doğru

3ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

erdemoflaz 6

haklısın the meselesini anlamıyordum şimdi iyi anladım

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

Edagul10 6

aynen

0ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

[+] 8 hidden comments

savasxxx 13

Sorularda "have the something" için yanlış derken programın doğru önerisi şu şekilde oluyor "have got the something". Yukarıdaki açıklamalarınızda bu örneğe rastlamadım. Bu konuya açıklık getirir misiniz?

15ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

solri 13 9

Bu konuda bir makelem var, ama İngilizce:
http://www.infobarrel.com/Making_Sense_of_English_Articles

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Selcen_Ozturk 23 11 10 6 6

teşekkürler!

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 3 hidden comments

Edagul10 6

Have Has konusunu anlatırmısınız

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sf_yldz_26 5

is are nerelere gelir

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Selcen_Ozturk 23 11 10 6 6

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4180961>

0ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

hasanoncu 6

selcen hanım alakasız ama birşey soracağın size duolingo ile ilgili.Aktivitelerde cümle metin çevirileri varya onları çevirdikten sonra doğruluğunu nasıl test edeceğiz çok merak ediyorum bilgilendirirseniz sevinirim

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kosmos_ 13

merak ediyorum bunu ben de ve eklemek istiyorum, ancak bir tartışma ortamında mı o çevirinin ne denli sağlıklı bir çeviri olduğunu öğrenebileceğiz?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kalahan1 9

peki selcen in tabakları var nasıl deniyor? yada yukardeki durum bir önceki cümlelerin devamı olduğunda mı öyle düşünülmeli..

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

memo44414 23 5 2

The aslında çok basit bir durumu ifade eder. Şöyle ki "man" dediğin zaman "adam" dır ama sadece herhangi bir adamdır. Ama "The Man" dediğinde orada belli bir adam var ihtimal onu tanıyorsundur ya da en azından gördüğün belli bir şahıstır. Arapça'daki Elif Lam harfitarifi gibi. Adından da anlaşılıyor Harfi Tarif. Zaten Duolingo'da da "The harfitarifini unuttunuz" diyor The ile ilgili yapılan yanlışlarda. Yani adamı tarif ediyorsun Yani tanıyor ve tanıtıyorsun.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

velevelevele 11

sana sadece "thanks" diyorum başka hiçbirşey demiyorum selcen:))

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hey1231 4

valla her şeyi yazmışsın yazıcak bi şey mi kaldı :))

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

3DResimler 5

Siz adminsınız ama ingilizcede 10 da kalmışsınız daha neden öyle ? :-(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

metox123 6 2

The kullanmasak cümlelerin yapısı ve anlamı değişir mi?

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

aslihaan53 6

Rica etsem present perfect tensi anlatır mısınız?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

solri 13 9

Maybe one day

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aslihaan53 6

OK hee

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

busebuket 4

present perfect tense de he she it ve I da was ,, we you they de were kullanılıyor geçmiş zaman ekleridirler

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

michealcorleone1 24 8 7 3 2 2

O bahsettiğin Simple Past Tense sevgili buket Present Perfect Tense yani etkisi devam eden geçmiş zamanda I,you,we,they de have he,she,it'de has kullanılır. Present Perfect Tense'e yabancı olanlar için örnek bir cümle söyleyeyim hatta

-I have Opened The window(Ben camı açtım) yani etkisi devam ediyor.

Formül: Özne+have/has+v3 veya ed takısı+nesne+zaman

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

_hatice_nur 5

tşk secen hanım

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zehraozel 9

tesekkür ederim bu kadar yazıyı bizim için yazdınız ve hepsinin açıklamaları çok anlamlı size ne kadar tesekkür etsem bilemiyorum sadece ben değil bu metine yorum yazan tüm arkadaşlar eminim bunu begendiler ^__^

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ege.altug 5

açıklayıcı hayet

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nabihoca 6
Teşekkürler Selcen hanım!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eksalansali 5
çok teşekkür ederiz

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mamkav44 8
selcen hanım çok sağol sen ingilizcedeki püf noktaları bilmemiz gerekenleri bize söylersen memnun oluruz hoşçakal agzına sağlık

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kardelen1907FB 4
ben bişey sorabilirmiyim aceba . ispanyolcaya nasıl geçiyoruz

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cuneytoktay 10 9 7
Biraz garip bir yerden sormuşsunuz ama. En farenizle üst menude profil resminizin yanındaki bayrağın üzerine gelerseniz ihtiyacınız olan bağlantıyı açılan menude göreceksiniz.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kardelen1907FB 4
ben göremedim ispanyolcayı almanca ve ingilizce var yeni üyeyim pekte bilmiyom tşkr ederim sizede.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

emredeniz07 25 10 9 3 84
tamam selcen abla. ÇOK DOĞRU konuşuyorsunuz

-4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cankuvan 7
Sende dogruluk muhendisimisin heyere cok dogru yaziyon

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

emredeniz07 25 10 9 3 84
çok komiksin abi yaaaaa :):):):)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

-Yusuf- 8
çok doğru konuşuyosun bravo

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RdvnOz 14

tamam yusuf abi. ÇOK DOĞRU konuşuyorsunuz :D

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

fatmanurumm 4

haklısın

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Berkaynar 6

Tüm İngilizce çakralarımın bir bir açıldığını hissediyorum. Tişikkirlir dıylıngı. Tişikkirlir Sılcın hınım.

25ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

solri 13 9

"I go to mosque" pek denmez ama arada sırada gördüm.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cihangircesur 6

Son paragrafın mantığı galiba şu: Söz konusu binalar günlük yaşam içerisinde kullanıldığında onu kullananlar için her gün görüle görüle sıradanlaşmış bir yer haline gelmiştir, fakat turist vb kişiler için "ilk kez" görülüyor, bu yüzden iş/ibadet/eğitim/sağlık için gidenlerden ayrı olarak daha özel bir hale geliyor. (Bu bir tahmindir.)

6ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

blaxis94

Daha çok şunun gibi: Türkiyede yaşayan müslümanlar cuma günü "Ben camiye gidiyorum" dediğinde camiye namaz kılmak için gittiği anlaşılır. Fakat bir amerikalı turist size "I go to the mosque" dediğinde ibadet için değil,gezip görmek için gittiğini anlarsınız.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

senseix 7

Hocam sizin anlatımınız emin olun gramer kitaplarından daha başarılı, sağolun.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

QmmeR 10 2

teşekkürler

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

seyma_k 6

teşekkürler çok saolunnnn:D

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pasanak 7

Bu konu anlatımlar hoşuma gitti. Kafamda takılıp kalıyordu bazı meseleler. The gibi mesela. Belirtme hali eki anlamını sezmiştim ama yine de tam emin olamıyordum. Bir de Türkçe Öğretmeni olunca insan ister istemez her yapıyı Türkçedeki gramer yapılarıyla eşleştirmeye çalışıyor bu da biraz sıkıntı yaratıyor. Çünkü farklı dil yapıları olması nedeniyle uyumsuzluklar yaşanabiliyor. Çoğullar tekiler meselesindeki gibi :) Emeğinize sağlık

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

"Cats is animals." "The cats drink milk." Örnek çözerken rastladım. Birinci cümlede 'the' kullanılmayıp, ikinci cümlede kullanılmasının sebebi ne acaba?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

solri 13 9

"Cats are animals" denir, çünkü belirli kediler değil, bütün kedilere kastediyoruz. "The cats drink milk" desek, belirli bir kedi grubu söz konusudur. Sadece "Cats drink milk" desek, "Genelde kediler süt içer" demek istiyoruz.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Teşekkür ederim. 'The German', 'The tiger' gibi tekil isimlerle kullanırsak ta o türün tamamını kastetmiş oluyormuşuz sanırım. Çok karışık.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Selcen_Ozturk 23 11 10 6 6

bu millet isimleriyle ilgili bir keresinde bir arkadaş daha sormuştu ve o zaman Barış'la düşündük taşındık ve hiçbir yerde yazdığını görmesek de, örneklerden yola çıkarak, "-ch, -sh veya -ese" ekiyle yapılmış, okunuşları ş,ç,s ile biten millet isimlerine -s gelmiyor , diğerlerine geliyor. çünkü ses olarak tuhaf olur öbür türlü

the Americans, the Germans, the Hungarians, the Italians, the Bulgarians, the Indians, the Kurds, the Arabs, the Greeks, the Turks, the Swedes, the Iraqis, the Israelis, the Kazakhs the Dutch, the French, the Turkish, the Spanish, the Chinese, the Japanese, the Swiss (istisna the Czechs, çünkü sondaki ses ç değil k)

3ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

solri 13 9

Evet, ama onlar çok nadir. Mesela bir belgeselde "The tiger is a solitary hunter" duyabilirsiniz. "The German" denebilir, ama kullağıma biraz komik gelir. Sanırım eskiden daha çok kullanılırdı.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aslihaan53 6

nedeni birincisinde kedilerden ilk defa bahsedilmiş ikincisinde de de tekrardan tanıtılan bir kedi olduğu için :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

deniz.derya 9 2
aynen

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Atilla216742 16

Birinci cümlede "animal" çoğul kullanılmamalı ve "be" olmak fiili çoğul olarak kullanılmalı. "Cats are animal" "Kediler hayvandır." çünkü özne "cats" çoğul olarak kullanılmış. "Cat is animal" "Kedi hayvandır. Bu yukarıda Selcan hanım tarafından açıklanmış.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cuneytoktay 10 9 7

Kullandığınız cümlelerden ikisi de kendi başına yanlış. "Cats are animal." değil "The cats are animals." ya da "Cats are animals." olmalı, "are" kullanınca animal da çoğul eki alır. "Cat is animal." değil, "The cat is an animal." ya da "A cat is an animal." olmalı "is" kullanınca animal da "an" takısı almalı.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

XXX_001 6

The hiçbir şey ifade etmez ve Türkçeye çevirilemez. the bird ile bird kelimelerinin anlamı aynı yani kuş....

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ahmet1122 7

çok doğru ayrıca bana da lingot verseniz gitmiyo ben denedim lingot verene lingot verilir :D

1ReplyGive Lingot4•2 years ago

Creptics 7 5

konuda da anlatmışsınız da ben yine de ekliyim dedim. "The" aynı zamanda superlatives dediğimiz kıyaslama cümlelerinde de kullanılır. mesela 'İstanbul Türkiye'nin en büyük ilidir' derken genel bi kıyaslama yapıyoruz ve bunu belirtmemiz lazım. bu yüzden 'Istanbul is the biggest city in Turkey' deriz. bu sadece superlative için geçerlidir. biraz ileri seviye olduğu için kafa karışmasın diye fazla girmiyorum konu içine. Ama böyle de bi kullanımı mevcut

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MAysarOngel 12

Bildiğim kadarı ile birden fazla anlamı olan bir sözcüğün tek bir anlamı kastediliyorsa başına 'the' getirilir.

örn; the matrix.

matrix'in pek çok anlamı var.

biy. dokuların arasını dolduran cansız sıvı ortam. mat. matris sayı dizilimi. anat. ana rahmi. bilg. tanımlanamayan bilgisayar programlarının tümü.

örn. the mask.: olası herhangi bir maske değil, özellikle tek bir maskeden söz ediliyor.

örn. the lord of the rings. : olası herhangi bir yüzüğün herhangi bir efendisi değil. belirli bir yüzüğün belirli bir efendisi.

yanlışım varsa kusura bakmayın.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EnisX 10

the 'yı şunun gibi düşünün daha kolaylık sağlar..... hani o var ya..., hani şu bildiğimiz... Did you see that dog? look! the dog is in the backyard

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

zneel 13

başarılı bir anlatım

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NineTheme 9

"He has the books" dersem doğru mu bu kapsamda ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gunayk1995 10 4 2

maddeye bakın :) Belirli, daha önceden bahsedilmiş kitaplar hakkında konuşuyorsanız, evet doğrudur.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

celebiyuksel 12

Türkçesi "Kitaplar onda". Bu cevabı vermek için daha önce birinin size, "Where are my books" demesi lazım. Siz de kitapların olduğu kişiyi göstererek "He has the books" dersiniz.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

yunusemreisik7 5

açıklama için teşekkürler :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mkemal 4

Mükemmel bir anlatım olmuş. Teşekkür ederim. Rich sözcüğünün çoğul hali yine rich midir? -s eki almaz mı yoksa normalde riches olur ama belirtili durumda the rich mi olur tam çözemedim. Bu konuda da bir arkadaşımız aydınlatırsa memnun olurum. Teşekkür ederim.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gunayk1995 10 4 2

"Rich" kelimesi sıfattır, isim değil. O yüzden çoğulu yoktur. Birden fazla kişinin zengin olduğunu söylemek isterseniz, bunu fiille ifade edersiniz. "They are rich" dersiniz mesela.

"Rich" kelimesinden türetilmiş "riches" diye bir kelime vardır, ama bu kelime "rich"in çoğulu değildir; "wealth" kelimesiyle aşağı yukarı aynı anlama gelir, zenginlik veya servet demektir. Örnek kullanım:

"No reliable methods exist of speedily accumulating riches." >>> "Çabuk bir şekilde servet/zenginlik biriktirmenin güvenilir bir yolu yoktur."

Arada biraz vocabulary de vereyim dedim :D İyi çalışmalar!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aykutex 14

teşekkürler kafa karıştırmayan öğretici bir açıklama olmuş.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EnesAytepe 9 2

Benimde en şaşırdığım noktaydı bu. zaten bölüme 2. kere başlayınca hata yapmamaya gayret ediliyor. Teşekkürler !

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TAHA_YAZICI 7

gerçekten çok temiz bir anlatım tarzı, teşekkürler.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

adnankafali 5

Beğendim çok güzel açıklama verdim lingot'u. Tesekkurler

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

farukkarsli 11

teşekkürler

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CemSafak 3

Şu the göllere gelir gelmez ülke ismi sıradağlar falan yazarmısınız??

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

asligul02 7

çokkkk teşekkürler sizin sayenizde en çok karıştırdığım konuları öğreniyorum bana çok yardımcı oluyorsunuz tekrar teşekkürler :):):):):):):):):):):)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Faruk_Kaya 16 7 2

Selcen hanım 3. Pointte Selcen has the plates cumlesinin ceviri selcenin tabaklari var seklinde neden ceviremiyoruz

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

solri 13 9

"Selcen'in tabakları var" = "Selcen has plates"/"Selcen's got plates." ("The" yok).

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Faruk_Kaya 16 7 2

neden the yok peki ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

solri 13 9

Çünkü tabaklar belli değil. Herhangi tabaklar olabilir. "Selcen has the plates" desek, "O tabaklar Selcen'de" demek.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ADYavi 11

Bir longot verdim ama- 's got -kısını anlamadım.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

eelma 11 2

Çok teşekkürler.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

oztrlknur 5

Çok iyi oldu :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Avzer 6

teşekkürler selcen hanım ışık kaynağımız olmanızın daimi olması temenisiyle :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mutlu82 6

paylaşım için teşekkürler, çok açıklayıcı ve anlaşılır olmuş.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

serhatgokhan 11 4

Super. Teşekkürler.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Attalos_o7 5

Teşekkürler Selcen Hocam.Anlatım tarzınızı beğendim.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

elobilgi 13

evet kafamda ki karışıklık dağıldı... Tşk.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

unlu209 4

çok sağolun selcan hanım

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sunkenpearl 8

selcen hanım, çok teşekkürler. örneklemeleriniz ve açıklamanız çok anlaşılır . emeğinize sağlık.selamlar

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

asligul02 7

çok teşekkürler çok yardımcı oldu :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

saceber 8

teşekkürler

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aleynakucuk 3

çok teşekkür ederimm sayenizde konuyu anladım :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ForceArmy 10 4

Çok iyi ya

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lovelika2 3

ben de şaşıyorum nerede kullanılacak nerde kullanılmayacak şaşıyorum

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

taylosele 3

cok cok cok saol canim kitabdan bile guzel anlatiyorsun:))

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ForceArmy 10 4
:D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MuratCetiner 4

1-The men eat apples: Adamlar elma yer (Herhangi bir elma) 2-The men eat the apples: Adamlar elmaları yer.

Selcen hanım, 1. kelime de apples elma olarak geçiyor.Ama çoğul eki elma da değil mi ? Mens olmucaak mı mantık olarak ? 2. kelimedede de sadece men yazıyor ama adamlar olarak geçiyor.Anlayamadım tam yardımcı olur musunuz ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

-Yusuf- 8

Men ingilizcede adamlar demek zaten, ayrıca "s" takısı koymanıza gerek yok. Tekil olan man (adam) dır. Ve birinci cümlede apples yazılmış, çünkü adamların yediği 1 (bir) tane elma belirli bir elma değil. Mesela "Dünyadaki adamlar elmaları yer" yerine "Dünyadaki adamlar elma yer" gibi düşünebilirsin.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cuneytoktay 10 9 7

Man - Adam, Men - Adamlar. Man kelimesi "irregular" (düzensiz) bir kelimedir çoğulu -s takısı ile yapılmaz, kelimedeki ünlü harfi değiştirerek yapılır. Irregular plurals ayrı bir konu olarak işlenebilir, o yüzden burada detaya girmeyelim. Ekleme: Selcen Hanım o konuya da el atmış (maşallah) <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1432522>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RGurkan 4

açıkladığınız için teşekkürler

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BetulayM 11 7 6

Teşekkürler, the konusunda kafam karıştı yardımcı oldu baya :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ceren026 7 3 2

doğru

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ppervin 4

the yerine başka bir kelime de yazıyorduk sanki!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cuneytoktay 10 9 7

the yerine başka kelimeler de yazabilirsiniz, ama aynı anlamı vermez. örneğin, "the apple" yerine "my apple", "your apple", "this apple"... gibi.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

yagmur101 6

çok teşekkürler çok işime yaradı

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Tevfikren 3

çok prosun

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ardallayda 8

çok yararlı oldu, teşekkür ederiiim!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

snurerkose 7

süpersin çok teşekkür ederimm bizi aydınlatmaya devam edersen çok sevinirim..

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

altlejant 7

Bir de "of" 'un (preposition) kullanımında zorluk mevcut. "eye of the tiger" , "the eyes of the tiger" , "the book of life" vs.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sinanbozkus 16

teşekkürler.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nur.emine 4

aynen ben olsam bu kadar yazmaya üşenirim hakkınız ödenmez çok teşekkür ederim

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Zulu_English 6

bende diyom niye anlamıyorum bu konuyu bir türlü thank youu! :))

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ykpumt 13 9 2 34

Kafamı karıştıran bir konuya açıklık getirdiniz teşekkürler. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rssems 6

Teşekkürler, ben de en çok 'the'da problem yaşadığımı farkettim, umarım zamanla daha da oturur kafamda.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

snnarc 6

perfect!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sevdezeynep 5

selcen hanım çok teşekkürler harika anlatmışsınız.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Canzgrhan 6 5

teşekkürler kafamı karıştıran sorunlardan en önemlisini açıklamışsın

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nur.emine 4

çok doğruuuuuu

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ayrikdiss 6

Gayet açık ve net bir şekilde anlatmışsınız teşekkürler :))

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

venice77 8 4

selcen sen dil mi okuyorsun süpersin

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

qHokuspokusp 3

saolun

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

erengursoy 12

gerçekten çok eğitici bir çalışma.Teşekkürler.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fatmanurumm 4

gerçekten çok teşekkürler arkadaş olsak ya

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sultangelmez 7
beğendim çok güzel olmuş

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ercnkrkmz 6
nasıl kullanılıyor bu meret ya ,

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

abykrt 17
teşekkür ederiz.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nildayss 6
teşekkürler

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

erkan_020 18
türkçe dilbilgisi yetersiz olunca tam oturmuyor ama eline sağlık hepsini anlayamasam da faydası oldu....:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GnaAtilla 10
teşekkürler emeğiniz için çok faydalı oldu.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago esma312

mrhba size yni ktldm

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

1903elif
doğru söylemişsin ingilizcen iyi herhalde iyiye mesaj bırak

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

zehraozel 9
bencede herseyi yazmissin harika olmus :)

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

zehraozel 9
bencede harika olmus

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AylinSenol 6

the ne demek? İngilizce bir kelime olan the Türkçe'de; "Belirli durumlarda isimden önce kullanılır: The mail hasn't come yet. Posta henüz gelmedWhere's the school? Okul nerede? Which of you's the boss? Hanginiz patron? The more I get to know them the better I like them. Onları tanıdıkça daha çok seviyorum" anlamına gelmektedir.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zehraozel 9

the kelimesinin bir anlamı o daha dogrusu sen sesli sozluk veya zargana yazarsan sana guzel bir anlatim sekli cikacagindan eminim :))

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

muratca61 14

Güzel açıklama.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KolcuAhmet

thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eromerx 13

Thanks. That was illuminating.

Like this; imam, the imam :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bugra3018 11 6 2 2

Teşekkürler!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bestanyam 10

wowwww .the 'yı daha önce hiç bu kadar detaylı görmemiştim .ayrıca çok çok teşekkür ederim .anlattıklarınız çok işime yarayacak

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pudican 7

Bilgiler için çok teşekkürler, cidden faydalı oldu bana

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

08s 7

çok doğru

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fth39 10

Arapçada ki "El" takısı ile aynı görevi görüyor.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

huseyin2014 10 5 5

keşke bu kısımları android uygulamasından da okuyabilsek:(

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nurbozar_1036 9

girl,woman and man

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

32hamza58

Elinize sağlık

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

elifsude09 7

Vallahi helal olsun bunu yazdığın için. Benim elim kopardı :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AdemGne2 6

sen bu işi biliyorsun :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ahmet 5

bizi aydınlattığın için saolasın

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kurtkadiroglu 11

Aslına bakarsanız Türkçe de bunun bir karşılığı var o da "işbu" mesela "işbu sözleşme" şeklinde bir şeyi belirtmek için kullanılmaktadır. Günlük hayatta kullanılsa da hukuk dilinde halen kullanımdadır.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eftalgezer 12 12 10 9 5 5 4 2 2

İşbu resmi evraklarda evrakın kendine atıfta bulunmak için kullanılır ve İngilizce karşılığı "present"dır.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cagriuckan 3

teşekkürler

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

miladiyne 7
saol selcen hanım saolllllllllll

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

YaseminYav1 10
thank you very mach

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]
Selcan hanım çok güzel bir site

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]
Çok güzel yazdın Selcan hanım

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

yahya123yaman123 8
an ve a kelimeleri

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

oguzha1108 4
selcan abla ii anlatıyosun saol

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ege.altug 5
açıklama gayet güzel olmuş ellinize sağlık

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EmreTurker1 8
Programda " The milk" gördüm bu yanlış olmaz mı ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eksalansali 5
anlamayanlara çok güzel bir konu

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eksalansali 5
teşekkür ederiz çok güzel şeyler anlatıyorsunuz

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

muhammed5694 2
thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Edagul10 6
bu çok karışık birşey sizin sayenizde öğrenebildim sağolun

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Edagul10 6
çok teşekkürler çok işime yaradı çok sağolunnn

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

WhyCoolWT 5
Güzel Bir Yere Deyinmişsin Eline Sağlık...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Busra4835 11
"I go to the school" şeklinde öğrendik hep, kastedilen eğitim olmasına rağmen bu doğru bir kullanım mıdır peki?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NecipBaha 3
çok saçma

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Necip_Baha 6
amk

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

zaman12 10 6 3 2 2
5 çok iyi olmuş

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Necip_Baha 6
12314654 ben malım

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bekirmutlu 3
iyi günler ingilizce öğrenmeye yeni başladım.Nereden ve nasıl başlamam gerekir. etkin kaynak olarak yalnızca interneti kullanabiliyorum.Bu konuda önerilerinizi ve yardımlarınızı bekliyorum.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

XXX_001 6

Bana çevirmek istenen cümle veya kelimeleri sorabilirsiniz!! Ayrıca beni takip edip sorularınızı sorabilirsiniz!!.....

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

can4607 3

evet

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mehmet-1247 2

çok doğru

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

turkogluemre 10 9 8 4

Yararlı olmuş.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gokcebkts.. 4

bene the ingilizcede bir sözcüğün önüne gelerek o sözcüğün somut olduğunu belirtir. bence böyle =)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ziftswerk 12

teşekkürler

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

katy_1234 3

selcen_öztürk sen duolingo kurucularındanmısın? yoksa başka dilleri öğrenmek isteyen bir kişimi...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TheDifference771 8 5 5 3 2 2

sizi çok seviyoruz selcen abla çok teşekkür bu konu için ♥

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TheDifference771 8 5 5 3 2 2

tmm saolun

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TheDifference771 8 5 5 3 2 2

selcen ...çok güzel olmuş 🎵🎵🎵

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HasanTavli10 5
teşekkürler

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Hasan_Taha 6
sağ olun şu the meselesi çok kafa karıştırıyordu

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

almancareis 19 6 3 2 2
emeğinize sağlık :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

didem9494. 6
Bir hesapla türkçe-ingilizce , ingilizce- ispanyolca öğrenebiliyor muyuz?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Edagul10 6
Selcen hanım rica etsem içinde dışında önünde arkasında vb. konusunu da anlatırmısınız.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

uarslan 11 5
useful information.. thanks for your write.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

UmutSinav 10
Açıklamalar gayet başarılı teşekkürler.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

d.e.m.i 6
Hmm... demek ki öyleymiş,yani bir takı,değil mi?Anlamı yok... ;))))

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MUSTAFAAKYILDIZ 16
"The" meselesini; çok okuyarak, dinleyerek,alıştırma yaparak ve yazarak ancak anlayabiliriz/öğrenebiliriz.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hmerveozcan 5
Bilgilendirme için çok teşekkürler, gayet net anlatılmış...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

loveviolettayla7 2

anlamadım ki paylaşayım what dedim yani canıkom

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Buse850494 5

teşekkür ederiz

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

teşekkürler çok güzel anlatıyorsunuz :) :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

zeynepsaralingo 4

yani

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

work2468work 5

çok güzel olmuş ellerinize sağlık beğendim

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TalhaKyc 12 10

Teşekkür ederiz Selcen.Eline sağlık.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sinancndr 7

bu kadar güzel anlatan hiç olmamıştı. teşekkürler,

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Poyrazlar 3

Selencen öztürk sayesinde bu konuyu anladım eskiden yuvasına girememiş bi kişi gibiydim ama siz onu oturttunuz

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MelisaKalaba 10

Anlamaya başlamıştım ama Selcen ve tabak meselesinden sonra kafam yine karıştı. Ne biçim şey bu the ya! Telaffuzu da ayrı mesele. Dı mı yoksa di diye mi okunuyor hala çözemedim.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sinanalmac 21

Teşekkürler

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bengisugamze 6

AMA BENCE THE MESELESİ O KADAR KOLAY YANI ZOR DEĞİL AMA YINE DE TESEKKUR

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

umitkutlar 8

teşekkürler bir kaç meseleyi hallettik

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

izmitli75 12

Thank your sharing, it is very helpful for me

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bahar802 3

Çok teşekkür ederim. Benim için güzel bir tekrar niteliğindeydi.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

3DResimler 5

Çok güzel anlatmışınız Teşekkürler.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BARIS_KARAMAN 13

Sn. Selcen_Ozturk çok teşekkür ederim. Bence en zor kurallardan biri olan "the" ifadesi kafamda biraz daha şekillendi sayenizde.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AliBakmaz 15

süper bir program çok güzel ve keyifli teşekkürler.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

VeysiKara 12 10 9

İngilizce Dilbilgisini İmece Usulü İle Bir Araya Getiriyoruz.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/12700236>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Nisa1183 13

Çok zor bir konu. Ben belirli nesnelere the koymuyorum; belirsizlere koyuyorum. Doğru mu?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sumeyyegurkan 13 4
Çok güzel anlatılmış.Teşekkürler...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CneytAkifOkumu 4
Teşekkürler işime yarayacak bu

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AbdulazizOku1 3
Thank you very much :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ArdCtnky 10 5 2 2
Bu konuyla alakası yok ama ben anasayfadaki derslerin hepsini bitirdiğimde rahat ingilizce konuşabilir miyim

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Nisa1183 13
Çok teşekkürler emeğinize sağlık İngilizce'de en takıldığım konu bu... Sayenizde tüm konuyu net bir şekilde anladım.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ahmet1455 9 6 3
Kolay anlaşılır ve güzel bir şekilde anlatmışsınız teşekkürler

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

fatmaebrar4 13
HArikasınız

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

erbilen 8
Teşekkürler hemen bunları okumam lazım :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Poulao 11 8
good :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

[deactivated user]
where are you from i am from ardahan but in

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

[deactivated user]
tmm

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

[deactivated user]
ardahannnn

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

[deactivated user]
mal hasan

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

rmeysaaltn 5
teşekkürler

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

ADYavi 11
arkadaşlar lütfen teşekkür ve ne kadar bu çalışmaların faydalı olduğu ile ilgili kısa yada uzun teşekkür, tebrik gibi mesajlarınızı buraya yazmayın. koşturmacalar içerisinde böyle imkanlardan da faydalanmaya çalışıyoruz. fakat belki biri faydalı bir şeye dikkat çekmiştir diye tüm yorumları okuyoruz ve çoğu zaman elimiz boş kalıyor. lütfen kişisel mesajlarınızı kişilerin kendilerine yazın.inanın koşturmacalı bir hayatta benim gibiler için çok kayıp yaşanıyor.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

ahmetekinci01 6
çok iyi

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

busraduman 6
harika sağolun

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

enesCLB 7
çok faydalı olmuş teşekkürler

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Rftyklmz 13 4
Şimdi mesela hapse giriyorsak I am going to prison ziyarete gidiyorsak I am going to the prison for my friend doğru mudur?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

muzoca 15 6

İpuçları ve notlar açıklamasında "sayılamayan belirsiz bir şeyden (su gibi) bahsederken de hiçbir şey getirmeyiz." yazıyordu."Bread" sayılamayan olduğuna göre "The men eat the bread." cümlesinde neden The var.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

muzoca 15 6

Yanlışımı gördüm.Dikkat eksikliği.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

nazeninistanbul 3

selcen abla bu şekilde her konuyu atsan herkes ingilizceyi veye diğer dilleri bilir/öğrenir

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

CemTuran 5

ÇOK TEŞEKKÜRLER :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

bsquar3 8

bu dili nasıl öğrenmeliyiz kuralları türkçe okuyarak olmuyor ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

bsquar3 8

ama yardımcı olmak için sarfettiğiniz emek muazzam teşekkürler

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

NergisTAYL 17 149

Merhaba Güzel açıklamalarınız için çok teşekkürler. Lütfen yardımcı olmaya devam edin.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

fahrenayt17 6

teşekkürler

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ieatwqe 2

Sesli ve sessiz harfler kafamı karıştırıyor. Hangileri sesli hangileri sessiz.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Selcen_Ozturk 23 11 10 6 6

a e i o ö u ü sesli, gerisi sessiz

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ieatwqe 2
bu ingilizcede demi aynı

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Selcen_Ozturk 23 11 10 6 6
İngilizcede daha az, sadece a e i o u. Çünkü ı ö ü harfleri yok

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

XXX_001 6
TÜRKÇEYLE AYNI AEİÜÜÖÖ SESLİ DİĞERLERİ VE W X Q DA SESSİZ

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mehmet_emen 8
the' nin ne işe yaradığını bilen varsa bana da anlatırmı

-3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Selcen_Ozturk 23 11 10 6 6
bunu yukarıdaki açıklamaları okumadan mı okuduktan sonra mı yazdığınızı çok merak ettim doğrusu

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mehmet_emen 8
okudum ama onlarda saçma geldi

-5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Selcen_Ozturk 23 11 10 6 6
o zaman kolay gelsin

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mpce 8
Yukarıdaki paragraftan daha açıklayıcı ya da öğretici bilgiye rastlamanız pek mümkün değil.Biraz sabırla ve anlayarak okuyun.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

osman-sag 6
Very thank you...

-8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GulerH 20 4 3
Sanırım "Thank you very much" daha uygun olur. :)

6ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

zeynepguan 5
thanks daha uygun

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

solri 13 9
Hatta "many thanks" denebilir!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

muhamm2 5
evet benim diyeceğimi dedi^_^

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dogru-sozluk 4
Bence konuyu daha çok açabilirsiniz ama yinede teşekkürler...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ezgifb1907 3
harika yazı

0Give Lingot3•2 years ago

20 The difference between Sie, sie & Sie?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1222059>

Jonnyfletch 5 4

I am a beginner at German still but I really struggle to find the differences between Sie (She), Sie (You formal) and sie (They) for verbs. Could anyone please explain if possible?

Give Lingot
33 years ago

Leave a new comment
5 Comments

niceliz 25 6 3 2 2

First of all, the "sie" for "she" and "they" isn't capitalized (unless it's at the beginning of a sentence), the formal you "Sie" is always capitalized. For "you" and "they," the verb pretty much stays the same as the infinitive in the present tense, for example "Heute gehen sie ins Kino" - "Today, they go to the cinema" and "Kommen Sie bitte rein" - "Please come in." For "she," you just add a "t" to the end of the stem of regular verbs in the present tense (it's different for irregular verbs and in different tenses). This link might be useful: <http://goo.gl/dHXvnP> (This specific table is just for the kind of verb listed, scroll down for different kinds of verbs.) Hope this helps!

7ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

soccerstar321 11 6
thank you , I thought I was the only one with this problem

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Jonnyfletch 5 4

Ah thank you very much. I understand much better and you helped a lot. Thank you again :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lynpearl 11 7 3

Thank you for your explanation!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Nguyngucan773324 3

can you translate it in vietnamese for me ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

21 – 50 of 912

[accessed March 9, 2017]

21 Interesting historical YouTube channel in Polish and German: The Great War

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/14115604>

DragonPolyglot 21 15 12 10 7 6 6 4 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Today my history teacher showed us a few videos from an interesting channel called The Great War. I thought that those learning German and Polish here that like studying about history and/or warfare would be interested, as the channel is available in both of those languages as well as English. It is a channel that follows the events of WW1 in detail, every week, exactly 100 years after the date in which they post their video. There is even a 3-part series to explain why WW1 happened.

Just thought I'd share something interesting that could be a chance for learners of one or both of these languages to immerse themselves in. Just type the channel name in the search bar and it should come up.

EDIT: channel versions here:

ENGLISH: <https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCUcyEsEjhPEDf69RRVhRh4A>

GERMAN:

https://www.youtube.com/user/ErsterWeltkrieg/featured?feature=iv_vid=f11CKYB2FCA_id=annotation_315295699

POLISH:

https://www.youtube.com/user/WojnaNieznana?feature=iv_vid=f11CKYB2FCA_id=annotation_2393640957

Give Lingot10

101 year ago

Leave a new comment

4 Comments

NorskJeger175 22 19 17 16 16 15 15 14 12 11 11 11 9 9 9 8 7 7 7 6 3 3 2 2 3

Don't know why this post got down-voted, so I up-voted it. But this sounds really cool, I'll have to look into it!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sueefo 19 6

Thank you. I've read a lot about WW1 in the past year and a half so I'll find this interesting. I did what you said but only found the English version. Could you provide a link to the German version? Have a lingot. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DragonPolyglot 21 15 12 10 7 6 6 4 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

I edited the post so now they're in there. Hope you like it!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Klimovskikh 11 8 8 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 2 2
Thank you very much for this

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

22 What are those arrows under the comments?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/205125860-What-are-those-arrows-under-the-comments->

What are those arrows under the comments?

The arrow icons under each post and comment are voting buttons. The number in the gray circle to the left is the total number of votes a comment has earned. Voting is your way of anonymously voicing your opinion and impacting the content posted by the community. By voting, you help the Duolingo community remain a clean, safe, and interesting space.

The upvote button

When you like or agree with a comment, or if you think it was helpful to you, click on the up arrow to the left. The icon will turn green and the commenter will know your appreciation. The most voted comments are the most popular, and will float up to the top of the comment thread. You can undo this action if you selected it accidentally—all you have to do is click on it again. This is useful in order to show your praise and appreciation in a considerate way by avoiding too many follow-up comments that do not add to the conversation (such as "haha"/ "lol"/ "I agree!"/ "Thanks!"/ "You're right"/ etc.). This feature is especially useful under Sentence Discussions, where you can upvote comments containing the same question you had (not just the answer), so that the most common questions are easier for people to find when accessing the discussion.

The downvote button

When you don't think a comment adds to the conversation and think it should move further down in the thread, click on the arrow that points down. You will remove a vote from the count and the comment will become less popular. If a comment receives too many negative votes, the system will move it to the bottom of the thread and eventually hide it from immediate view. Use this for offensive posts, personal attacks, harmful content, and spam. Depending on the content, the comment may be deleted by moderators.

23 which superlative is true : the most lovely or the loveliest?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/11775524>

zohra1974 7

Give Lingot

11 year ago

Leave a new comment

6 Comments

Neptunium 16 12 11 7 6 6 4 3 3

They're both correct.

If an adjective is one syllable, add "-er". If it's three or more syllables, use "more". If it's two syllables, you choose which to use.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

zohra1974 7
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Anie33 12 6 3

As an American English-speaker, I would consider "most lovely" to be incorrect. I was taught that if you can use -er or -est it is incorrect or at least in bad form to use "more" or "most" instead. For example: "beautifuler" is not a real word, so you would say "more beautiful". "Loveliest" is a word, so you would not say "most lovely" (the exception being in older and more formal texts). You might be able to get away with it, but it is bad form in my opinion/experience for modern usage. Of course, this is simply my personal experience, and I could quite possibly be way off base.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Luscinda 25 25 25 14 11 10 8 7 6 6 5 4 3 3 2 2 3

No, it's fine. Slightly literary and nuanced but perfectly correct. If it's an ELT exam, favour loveliest.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pochinto 17 13 9 6 4

"Most lovely" is fine, but "loveliest" certainly sounds more native.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

elizadeux 11 10

I think most lovely is okay, but perhaps is not as common as loveliest.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

24 "More knows the devil for being old than for being the devil."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5818687>

Translation: Más sabe el diablo por viejo que por diablo.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

35 Comments

pingpong2012 11

As an idiom, I'm a bit confused by this. Is it like "knowing something for the wrong reasons" or is it more a reference to people or religion I'm missing?

22ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chicken_eyebrows 10

One translation we're more familiar with is "Wisdom comes with age"

2ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Blubbering 15

Yeah, what in the world does that mean?!

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Atokirina 13 9 5 4

So in "normal" English it would be, The devil knows more for being old than for being the devil.

10ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

da_rookie 21

In English this would probably be in a different order: "The devil knows more by being old than by being the devil."

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

david.kahle 10 10 9

Yea, I'd say this is probably the best of the translations offered. The hard part in my mind is the "[by/for] being old ...[by/for] being the devil". Maybe even better would be "The devil knows more because he's old than because he's the devil."

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eehoepp 12

I have never heard any version of this idiom in English before, but I like it and I think I will start using it. The closest English equivalent I can think of is "Age bringeth wisdom", and I think this also illustrates a valid point: most of our idioms and proverbs have been in use for generations, and the language can be archaic. Native English speakers know what bringeth means, but we would never use it in everyday speech. We would use "brings" instead, unless quoting old saws (sayings). The English "He knows not of what he speaks" has a similar sentence structure.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KendallVal1 16 14 12 46

An excellent suggestion. The English idiomatic expression should also rhyme. An experienced and crafty (might one say "devilish") person might be more capable of accomplishing that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

CoolPapi 22 80

What throws this translation off is the English work they did on it. It makes no sense. The English version should read: "The devil knows more from being old than from being the devil."

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Nyankittie 17 9

These idioms are lengthy and confusing...is there a way to break them up a bit?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

WolfgangMorales 7 5

I think it's more like when one sees "a wolf in sheep's clothing". The old man is the devil but you just see an old man. I don't think this saying has anything to do with the experience or wisdom of the viejo.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CoolPapi 22 80

At first I thought the same as you but upon reflection it doesn't quite make sense. What throws us off is the use of MAS in the beginning of the sentence. You're left to think "more what???" I think the translation should be THE DEVIL KNOWS MORE FROM BEING OLD THAN FROM BEING THE DEVIL. Hence, Nothing beats experience.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Gehayi 24 10 4

Why is "Más sabe el diablo por viejo que por ser el diablo" wrong?

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

BobPage1 22 205

More knows the sergeant from the dead stupid privates, than the smart live ones.

More knows the teacher from her c+ students, then the a+ ones.

More knows your dog caught in the act and scolded, than all the treats in the store.

I think "More knows" is like "Once upon a time" or "In a hole in the ground there lived a Hobbit." It is signal to the reader that here comes a story or a moral. "Listen up"

Más conoce al sargento de los muertos estúpidos soldados, que los vivos inteligentes.

Más conoce a la maestra de sus estudiantes de c +, luego a los +.

Más sabe que su perro atrapado en el acto y regañado, que todos los dulces en la tienda.

Creo que "Más sabe" es como "Érase una vez" o "En un agujero en el suelo vivió un Hobbit". Es señal al lector que aquí viene una historia o una moral. "Escuchen" google translate

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

KJUFORTYTWO 10 2

This is a grammatical question. Why is it "Mas sabe el diablo por viejo," rather than "Mas sabe el diablo por estando viejo" or "Mas sabe el diablo por ser viejo" or something like that?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Kris5654 12

I have understood this to say "Most people really only get to know what the devil truly is when they suffer the aches and pains that come with old age, rather than when they are younger and just imagine what the devil is like. So I would suggest its more of a comment on how people perceive old age.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Zelmon 15 10

Shouldn't it be "more know" than "more knows?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

david.kahle 10 10 9

That'd be the wrong person. Since the subject is "devil" (singular), "knows" would be correct over "know". On the other hand, the sentence doesn't make any since as-is anyways: English writes subject-verb-object in declarative sentences like this one, not verb-subject(-object).

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Zelmon 15 10

It would make sense if it is "More know the devil for being old...."

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

david.kahle 10 10 9

Only if there's an expectation of something else, like "more [people] know the devil for being old...", but that's not the sense I get from the sentence. Again, you really need that subject in there before the verb...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SallyBuxma 14 8 8 8 3

I keep getting it wrong because i use the article el before the second reference to diablo. Is that a rule or something? ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

TrevaMatix 16

Experience is the best teacher. From what you guys are saying. The devil is used as a symbol of wisdom.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

IanTully1 13

Perhaps "there's no devil like an old devil" is the closest in English.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

LisaSProvi 12

I hate idioms:-) And to think I used my precious lingots to purchase them

0ReplyGive Lingot31•8 months ago

crabilld 23 14 8 1040

Keep a streak for awhile and you won't have to worry about lingots anymore. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

TheArtsyWolf 17 7 64

This idiom makes no sense at all to me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Felix14578 11 13

Thanks again, good discussion adds clarity...

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

Nick246180 10 8 2

I thought this was similar to "better the devil you know" not exactly the same, but close. Basically someone will stick with what or who they're used to, even if that person or thing is bad. I.e. they know the bad person from experience, but just don't realise the extent of how toxic/bad the person is.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EdwardCimi 7

The idioms section really detracts from the Duolingo experience. I would seriously suggest the developers rethink this section. I doubt if obscure idioms such as this one belong so early on in the course in the first place. It's frustrating having to wade through this stuff just to get to the more meaningful modules.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SallyBuxma 14 8 8 8 3

I don't think it is mandatory. I did many of the modules before going back to the bonus ones.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Alan.WHare 10

I believe i answeredr

-1ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

[deactivated user]

Not heard this one in English. The closest I can get is "better the devil you know"

-1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

IanTully1 13

Not the same idea at all, the point is that even the Devil gains in wickedness through experience.

2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

fanny.pack 8

This is unfair, never learned this before having to translate Spanish into English. Not helpful at all!

-7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Yerrick 25 23 22 9 7 92

Units always have more sentences than the few generated for you in a given lesson. It helps make review less monotonous and memorization-based.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

25 Por que aveces la palabra "the" suena parecido a (da , de , di..)???

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2423262>

Darkclownx01 16 11 5 4

hay una regla para saber cuando se usa ???

Give Lingot

162 years ago

Leave a new comment

16 Comments

ElOtroMiqui 14 13 11 8 7 3 2 2 2

Por lo que veo, nadie te ha dado una respuesta precisa, así que te la daré yo.

Se pronuncia como di (/ði/) delante de palabras que comiencen por vocal.

Se pronuncia como da/de (/də/) delante de palabras que comiencen por consonante.

Cabe aclarar que la pronunciación no es exactamente da ni de, sino más bien una combinación de la letra "a" y la letra "e".

17ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

juansebastianro 16 6

Hola, agregando algo a tu excelente comentario. Como saber sobre esa combinación de la "a" y la "e" que comentas. Creo que una maravillosa forma de conocer con exactitud cómo pronunciar una palabra es conociendo IPA (International Phonetic Alphabet). Este alfabeto les enseña cómo suenan las palabras en todos los idiomas. No todos los idiomas usan los mismos símbolos. En lo particular, yo he mejorado mucho desde que aprendí IPA (para inglés).. Les recomiendo que ingresen en <http://www.rachelsenglish.com/> Allí pueden aprender este alfabeto y muchas otras cosas. Una vez lo aprendan, cuando tengan una duda con una palabra, pueden buscarla en <http://www.dictionary.com> , este diccionario muestra el IPA de cada palabra y pueden aplicar lo aprendido sobre IPA.. Espero les sea útil esta información.. Saludos

10ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

También se pronuncia como di para dar énfasis. Por ejemplo, "He is the (di) best" ("Es el mejor"). Y ten en cuenta que "the" no siempre se pronuncia como "di" delante de palabras que comiencen por vocal. No sería nada raro escuchar "the (da) oven" (en vez de "the (di) oven").

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ElOtroMiqui 14 13 11 8 7 3 2 2 2

Oh, todos los días se aprende algo nuevo, no sabía que había excepciones. Gracias por el dato.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Piezas. 15 3

También se pronuncia di cuando nos referimos a algo muy importante :D

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kevin_sud77 11 4 4 3 2

podrías darme la pagina de donde conseguiste o quien te dijo eso es muy buena información muy buen aporte gracias

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Piezas. 15 3

Con gusto kevin aquí tienes <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bx2DUYTLp1k> espero que te sirva :D

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

husevi 12

Muchas gracias por tu aporte. Realmente valioso.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lbautistagt 9

Me gusta tu respuesta, creo que si le agregaras una referencia de donde sacaste la información quedaria genial.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ElOtroMiqui 14 13 11 8 7 3 2 2 2

Acá está, viene con audio y todo :)

<http://www.learning-english-online.net/areas/pronunciation/the-definite-article-the/>

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DagoFernandes 6

Cuanto The va seguido de una e, suena mas como "di", por ejemplo en The egg, suena como "di eg", ya que pronunciar "De eg", sonaria como "deg" y eso diria otra cosa. Cuando va seguido de una c, suena como "da" por ejemplo en The car. Pero lo normal es que suene como "de" con la e abierta o decaída, es decir una mezcla entre e y a.

Hay que anotar eso si, que la pronunciacion lenta de esta pagina tiene tambien el defecto de marcar mucho el "di" o el "da" para el articulo The, creo que demasiado y en casos que no corresponde.. En todos los demas cursos que tengo no suenta tanto como "di" o como "da" es mas bien algo muy leve y sutil, lo normal es que suene como lo explique arriba.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MarcelaCruzco 12

Que buena explicacion dago.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kevin_sud77 11 4 4 3 2

amiguismo dago lo que pasa es que cuando se tiene que hacer énfasis la pronunciación the cambia (no se si ya lo sabia supongo que si) o sea que no es necesario que haya una vocal antes en esta caso el juego lo enfatiza a tdi por eso también "a" de un o una lo dice como "ey" por que enfatizado también es ey. aquí en este diccionario lo explica muy bien (esta en ingles pero bueno) incluso con audio

<http://dictionary.reference.com/browse/the?s=t/>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lourdesescalante 6 3

Porque en inglés "th" se pronuncia similar a la "d" del español, sólo que la lengua sube y se queda detrás de tus dientes frontales (incisivos) y sacas aire

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

averaver 25 10 6 76

Gracias a todos por las distintas aportaciones, yo pensaba que la diferencia era debida al país o a variantes de la pronunciación en cada persona. En esta página que os pongo se pueden escuchar palabras pronunciadas por hablantes de distintos países, en este caso "the"

<http://es.forvo.com/word/the/#en>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lourdesescalante 6 3

Porque en inglés el sonido th es similar. Aunque encontré una mejor respuesta que la que dí en este mismo espacio

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

26 How do I delete a language from my profile?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204611904-How-do-I-delete-a-language-from-my-profile->

Some people decide they don't like the course they are learning or that they would like to restart a course from the beginning. So how do you reset a tree or remove it completely?

Note: you must always have one course. You cannot remove a course if it is the only course you are learning.

Go to your settings page

Go to your "Language" page by selecting Learning Language from the menu on the right of the screen.

Click Reset or remove languages under the big blue "See all language courses" button.

Select "Reset Progress" (blue button) if you want to start the tree from the beginning. Select "Remove" (that's the big red button) if you want to remove the tree and any traces of it, such as the small flag next to your name or on your profile.

Please be aware that removing or resetting a course cannot be undone.

If you remove a language, you can always add it back later, but all your progress will be lost and you'll have to start the tree from the beginning.

27 What is the difference between poder and conseguir?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/217590>

Junesun 14 11 11 8 6 6 5 3 3

Both poder and conseguir seem to mean "can". When do I use one or the other?

Give Lingot

144 years ago

Leave a new comment

9 Comments

Avalone 13 7 5 3

Try this way:

Posso usar o banheiro? (May I use the bathroom?)

Você consegue (sabe) cozinhar? (Can you cook?)

Posso cozinhar? (May I cook?)

Eu consigo cozinhar (I CAN cook (I'm able to..))

I think it is very similar to the may/can distinction as Pauloenrique pointed out.

29ReplyGive Lingot1•4 years ago

Junesun 14 11 11 8 6 6 5 3 3

Very useful, thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Paulenrique 21 15 13 10 8

They sometimes have the same meaning. Example, both poder and conseguir means ability. Eu posso/consigo cozinhar, but the second one is more used. Consequir is frequently used to capacity and poder for permission. (Posso sair mais cedo? Can i leave earlier?)

17ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

cloudhorizon 16 8 6

I'm not a Portuguese expert (so correct me if I'm wrong!), but studying the language as well as talking to native speakers has made me come to the idea that you can sort of link "poder" with the english word "can" while conseguir you can link to "manage" . For example, "Can you give me that cup?" You would use "Pode me dar esse copo?" (If you think in English and use "manage" or conseguir, it wouldn't really make sense, yeah?) Likewise for "Did you manage to find bla?" You would say "Conseguiu procurar bla?"

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

crazy_doc 16 10 9 8

This makes sense and you can make this generalization, but be careful because there are always exceptions. Sou português já agora.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

richardgil 11 9 7 5 4

I am a native Spanish speaker. In Spanish (as well as in Portuguese) "poder" refers to the possibility of doing something, while "conseguir" is related to the ability to do something. "Eu posso" means "I can", "Eu consigo" means "I can" (as in "I am able to")

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

xav13rua 9 8 3

poder is to be able to do something. I can do this or that:

"Eu posso ouvir musica" (I can hear music/ I am able to ear music)

it can also transmit an "if I may" action, on a question:

"posso ajuda-lo?" (May I help you?)

"posso querer, eventualmente" (I may want to, eventually)

Conseguir is to do (also), or to achieve:

"eu consigo fazer isto!" (I can do it!)

"Eu consigo sorrir virado para baixo" (I can smile upside down)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

arroios 10 10 9 7

Is it really like this? I´m studying european portuguese and I only got to know the meaning of conseguir=to manage. Do you use it to express that somebody is able to, say, cook in general? I only find stuff like to achieve, to manage ect. or like "I´ll do it!" (which can be "I´ll manage" as well). Perhaps my dictionaries forgot some brazilian expression (though it is said on the books that they consider european and brazilian portuguese).

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MichaelMilam 12 11 7 7 2 2

I do believe "consigo cozinhar" would be the preferred form for "I can cook," as in "I know how to cook." I think a sort of distinction arises in that "consigo cozinhar" means "I manage to cook" i.e. "I cook well" or "I know how to cook / I succeed at cooking," whereas "posso cozinhar" is more about the circumstances surrounding the cooking, as in I am physically able to cook, I may cook, the circumstances allow that I cook, I am bodily able to cook, etc.

Por exemplo: "Quer almoçar agora? Acabei de acordar, mas posso cozinhar para você, se quiser." (Forgive my lack of accents -- this laptop doesn't have a Portuguese keyboard installed) This would be something like, "Do you want to eat lunch now? I just woke up, but I can cook for you, if you'd like" or something of that sort.

Conseguir also generally implies that you are attempting, or you want to be able to. "I cannot sleep" would be "Não consigo dormir!" because the person has been trying and cannot manage to sleep. "Não consigo entender o que tá dizendo" -- I can't understand what you're saying, implying that you are attempting to understand, but failing. It is a bit more closely linked to success and failure than poder, which generally just implies ability based on surroundings or situation, irrespective of intent or desire.

It's only made more complicated by the fact that "conseguir" is also a common word for "get, acquire, obtain" -- "você conseguiu bilhetes do show de Caetano Veloso?? Que legal, veiiii", something like "You got tickets to the Caetano Veloso concert??? That's awesome, dude!" (although it is potentially unlikely that a Brazilian using the young slang "legal" and "vei" have much desire to see an old classic Tropicalia singer/player like Caetano (maybe "bacana" would be more appropriate vocab, ha). But either way!)

I hope something here helped!!

Michael

1ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

28 What's the difference between här/hit, hem/hemma and var/vart? – on motion and location

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6330349>

Lundgren8 12 10 9 9 9 7 6 6 3

Swedish has a series of adverbs that are used to describe where something is or where something is going. In English these are often the same. You say both 'I am there' and 'I am going there', even though the first one really describes a location (you are located at a place) and the latter motion (you are going to a place).

In Swedish, these are distinguished in many of these adverbs, and Swedish would use two different words for 'there'. These sentences would be translated into Swedish as 'Jag är där' and 'Jag åker dit', respectively. Older English also made this distinction and had 'there' for location and 'thither' for motion, but this is mostly archaic today.

The motion adverbs are often used with verbs of motion like komma, gå, åka, and the location adverbs are often used with verbs of location like vara, ligga, stå etc.

I am going to first give a list, and then some examples, and then go into detail with some of the adverbs and how they are used. If you just want the general gist, you can stop before the line.

Here is the list of adverbs:

Here are some examples of their usages:

När åker du hem? (When are you going home?)

Jag är redan hemma. (I am already at home.)

Hammaren ligger uppe på taket. (The hammer is up on the roof.)

Hur kommer jag upp dit? (How do I get up there?)

Det är väldigt kallt ute, så jag vill inte gå ut. (It is very cold outside, so I don't want to go outside.)

Jag ska åka bort på fredag. (I am going away on Friday.)

Jag är borta på fredag, kan du göra mitt arbete? (I am away on Friday, can you do my work?)

Two of these adverbs are a bit tricky. The first one is fram which has two major meanings. The first one is 'motion towards a more central and visible place from having been hidden'. This word often matches 'forth' in English, but is used much more in Swedish.

Hon drog fram en kniv ur fickan. (She took out a knife from her pocket.)

Kom fram i ljuset där jag kan se dig! (Step into the light where I can see you.)

The second meaning is towards a goal, forward. In English this is often translated to just 'there'.

Hon gick fram och tillbaka. (She went back and forth.)

Vi hinner inte fram i tid. (We won't make it there in time.)

Vi kom fram klockan 7. (We got there at 7 o'clock.)

The location variant is framme and thus means either 'in a central and visible position' or 'there, having reached a goal'

Pappa, är vi framme snart? (Dad, are we there yet?)

Han står där framme i kyrkan. (He is standing up there in the church.)

Låt inte tidningen ligga framme! (Don't leave the newspaper about; i.e. don't let it lie visible, but rather put it away somewhere.)

The second adverb I want to mention is var and vart. In more formal language and written language, there is a distinction where var means 'where? at what place?' and vart means 'whereto? to what place? whither?'

Vart ska du åka? (Where are you going?)

Var är hon? (Where is she?)

However, in spoken language, these forms have merged for many people, and many people don't make the distinction and use either (mostly vart but it depends on dialect) for both motion and location. In the course, the distinction is always made, but be prepared that you will hear Swedish speakers say Vart är han? for 'Where is he?'

I also want to mention that you can add -ifrån to all of these to mean 'from'. This is added to the motion adverb.

Får jag se dig framifrån? (May I see you from the front?)

Varifrån åkte han? (Where did he go from?)

Jag åker hemifrån nu. (I'm leaving home now.)

Han hoppade ner/ned uppifrån taket. (He jumped down from up on the roof.)

Thirdly, the difference between ned and ner is that ned is used in writing and formal language and ner is the usual spoken variant. However, both are equally accepted in writing. In certain compounds, ned can be common even in speech and you can say/write either nedladdning/nerladdning (downloading). For a few words, only ned- is possible in compounds such as nedlåtande 'condescending'.

They are both derived from the older word neder (cf. Eng. 'nether') which is used in a few words like Nederländerna (The Netherlands) and nederbörd (precipitation)

Give Lingot102
902 years ago

Leave a new comment
21 Comments

HelenCarlsson 22 18 18 18 15 15 12 856
This is a great post! I just learnt "hither and thither" for "hit och dit", so it was nice to see it mentioned here as well.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

porpsi 18
just wanted to say thanks, great post, very helpful.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LynterriaHatake 11 4 4 2
I think that in the chart, "där" and "dit" are swapped.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lundgren8 12 10 9 9 9 7 6 6 3
Yes, thank you. I will correct it. Same goes for "här".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gisberth 25 24 22 22 21 14 813
Also var, vart? Nevertheless the compilation will be very helpful. Regarding ned/ner. Listening to the news at 8sidor I remarked sometimes that the one was spoken and the other was written. Are both spoken the same way?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lundgren8 12 10 9 9 9 7 6 6 3
I've corrected the chart.

Yeah, it's very often that you write ned but say ner which is the more natural spoken variant.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

seaeagle5 14 12 5 3 33
Thank you so much for the explanations and the chart.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

AlecHirsch1 17 6

The differences in these words seem a lot like the difference between "At [word]" vs "to [word]". Like, for example "At where are you" vs "To where are you going", "You are at here" vs "You are going to here", and "I am going to [the] outside" vs "I am at [the] outside". And so saying something like "Var går du" would translate to "At where are you going", which doesn't really make sense in English. It seems that while English can insert this distinction if it pleases, it has managed to do without it.

Is it safe to say, in this sense, the motion column can be thought of as "to [word]" and the location column can be thought of as "at [word]"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lundgren8 12 10 9 9 9 7 6 6 3

Yes, if that helps you to remember the distinction, that's a fine way of thinking about it. However, you can say var går du? with the expected answer 'on the road/pavement' or something similar.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Claring 20 8 4 25

Very useful post. How about the difference between "tillbaks" and "tillbaka"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

HelenCarlsson 22 18 18 18 15 15 12 856

"Tillbaka" is the correct word and "tillbaks" is more colloquial :).

1ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

RianZki 11 10 6 5 3 2

Varifrån åkte han? (Where did he go from?) You left out "He" as in "Han" in your translation! :) So "Where did he go from?" or "Where from did he go?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lundgren8 12 10 9 9 9 7 6 6 3

Thanks, fixed.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mercalyn 15 4 2 2 2 2

In Arnauti's post <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8970470> He mentions ville, is that vill with motion?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lundgren8 12 10 9 9 9 7 6 6 3

No, this only applies to adverbs. Ville is a verb, and it's the past tense of vilja (to want). The present tense is vill.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlecHirsch1 17 6

I feel like gone and away half make this distinction in english. We can say "He is gone" and "He is away" (and are thus interchangeable in this context), but while we can say "He goes away" We can't say "He goes gone" (and thus they are not interchangeable). A bit odd/neat I think.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ellenkeyne 22 20 19 18 17 15 7 5 3 2 2 115

Historically, they're entirely different: away began life as an adverb and developed an adjective sense, while gone originated as a verb and had its participial meaning interpreted as an adjective.

The "I am gone," "he is risen", "they are come" forms seen in older writings are remnants of the use of "to be" as an auxiliary with some English past participles, rather than "to have" -- much as German still uses "sein" rather than "haben" (er ist gegangen) with about three dozen verbs in the present perfect, French uses "être" and not "avoir" (elles sont retournées) with seventeen or so verbs in the passé composé, and Italian has thirty or forty verbs that take "essere" and not "avere" (siamo stati) in the passato prossimo.

There's a discussion here: <https://forum.wordreference.com/threads/i-am-gone-i-am-come-to-be-with-past-participle.550921/>

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 days ago

Ungewitig_Wiht 24 12 3

>Older English used thither

Actually even in the days of Beowulf "þær" and "þider"/"hēr" and "hider" were being confused.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

awrculus 17

This is very interesting, thanks for posting , it clarifies alot for me !!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

blamane 23 118

"Vart" is the motion form, but in your examples you've added -ifrån to the fixed location form ("varifrån"). Is this an exception?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Lundgren8 12 10 9 9 9 7 6 6 3

Yeah, I'd see words like varifrån, härifrån, därifrån as fixed words.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

29 What is the difference between: мой, моя and моё
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/15030386>

Galladriel 6

I understand that мой is a plural thing but I don't understand the rest.

Give Lingot1
310 months ago

Leave a new comment
9 Comments

ILoveHens 5 2 2
In Russian there are genders, so moy is masculine, moya is feminine and moyo is neuter.

3ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

dreamerkid 7 6 4 2 2 2 10
This helps thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

garpik 24 22 22 20 19 18 17 17 16 16 15 14 14 14 14 13 13 12 11 11 10 10 8 6 2 580
They are masculine, feminine and neuter respectively (according to the gender of the thing being possessed).

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

9Teen90Three 25 2
[deleted]

1Give Lingot•10 months ago

lhpch 25 25 21 11 10
Thank you! For someone learning the language, you are doing very well, writing in English! A few corrections: a. the singular, the plural. b. Native Russians say...c. the masculine gender. d. If you understand the difference... you can use...

2ReplyGive Lingot1•10 months ago

9Teen90Three 25 2
Thank you too! I caught useful advices.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

K.Nikita 22 22 394
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/11559181>

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

[deactivated user]
They all change depending on the noun they modify. Example, мой кот ,моя кошка ,моё окно мой is for masculine nouns, моя for feminine nouns and моё for neuter nouns. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Catparrot 8

All are in Nominative case.- мой Masculine - моя Feminine - моё Neuter - мои Plural -

Grammar Lesson 21 The Prepositional Case of Possessive and Demonstrative Pronouns. Uses.

Singular and Plural Forms

http://www.russianforeveryone.com/Rufe/Lessons/Course1/Grammar/GramUnit7/GramUnit7_2.htm

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

30 What is the Duolingo English Test?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204980700-What-is-the-Duolingo-English-Test->

The Duolingo English Test is a separate product by Duolingo that provides scientifically-proven language certification. The tests are extremely secure with remote proctoring, and the scores are extremely precise. The test is convenient and can be taken directly at home at the fraction of the cost of other recognized certifications.

Here is what Luis von Ahn had to say about it when it launched in beta:

"Every year, over 30 million job seekers and students around the world are forced to take a test to prove that they know English in order to apply for a job or school. For some, these tests can cost their family an entire month's salary. And not only that, taking them typically requires traveling to distant testing facilities and waiting weeks for the results.

We believe there should be a better way. This is why today I'm proud to announce the beta release of the Duolingo English Test, which was created to give everyone equal access to jobs and educational opportunities."

You can learn more about the Duolingo English Test here.

Certify your fluency level via the website or download the Duolingo English Test App for Android or iOS.

31 The mobile version ABSOLUTELY needs the grammar tips and notes section

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8862271>

munderlohsean 15 10 9 8 7 4 2 2 2

I know a lot of people who use Duolingo exclusively on the mobile app. And they were completely unaware that the desktop version had tips and notes for grammar. Personally, I can't imagine learning a language without being able to read about grammar. Is this issue being worked on yet? I think this improvement would greatly increase the effectiveness of the mobile version of Duolingo.

Give Lingot132

4461 year ago

Leave a new comment

88 Comments

m.tastic 25 13 11 11 8 6 5 5 2

I agree. The tips and notes really help.

57ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

German_learner 8

I first heard of Duolingo online and downloaded the app in early 2013. German looked interesting and I began learning. Unfortunately, I spent months trying to understand the basics, such as grammatical things like conjugations. I never really understood it, getting everything wrong in the process. Unable to progress further than the fifth set of skills, I eventually gave up and abandoned Duolingo.

Around a year later, I revisited Duolingo through the website and I finally understood my problem through the tips and notes section. The diagrams, lists, and the tables; Finally, for the first time, my problems are understood. Everything makes sense. This was a major help and I am progressing through my German very well.

Now, all of this could have been avoided if the mobile app contained the tips and notes section, as that was beneficial to my progress of German.

54ReplyGive Lingot6•1 year ago

worstquestions 17 16 15 13 10 10 9 8 1139

A textbox is literally in the literal sense the easiest thing to program. There's a reason Hello World is the first code teachers make their students write, page one of all of those BASIC and C textbooks.

Come on Duolingo, this is amateur stuff that's causing a lot of dropoff.

23ReplyGive Lingot7•1 year ago

v43ng 17 12 10 2

The staff seems to be very active on Twitter, but not so concerned about this forum. Can someone with a twitter account ask them to comment here?

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

attcat23 13 13 11 9 9

I also wish the mobile version had the feature of sending error reports because sometimes I've found glitches that I can't report to be corrected like I can on the desktop version...

18ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FaroukZeino 21 14 943

This feature is available in Andriod version.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

yalreen 25 6 3

Do you know why the ios version doesn't contain the same things as the android version? Why is the mobile version different from the computer version? I had to use the phone and tablet ios app for the last two weeks as i was on a trip without my laptop. I was surprised at the many differences between all three devices. I loved the matching pairs of vocabulary words found only on the mobile devices but hated the inability to use the immersion translation function at all. So I did manage to keep my 224 day streak going but only by doing minimal skill work on my tree and NO IMMERSION WORK! I was frustrated. I wish the mobile app would function the same as the computer version.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

v43ng 17 12 10 2

I think reprogramming immersion so it's easily usable on a tiny mobile screen is a lot different from adding a text box with grammar notes. So the mobile version is always behind the website, but it's quite confusing that simple to implement essentials seem to have a lower priority than costumes for the mascot.

9ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

FaroukZeino 21 14 943

I think features are different on mobiles phone because they are in A/B test.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

v43ng 17 12 10 2

How is the lack of a feature a test? I could understand if they test two different ways to approach something, but not implementing it for one system and not for the other one seems like a lack of resources to me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FaroukZeino 21 14 943

I don't know much about this, I just heard this in a discussion, if I found it I will send it to you.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

bretto1981 24 130

I have the latest android version and for the life of me can't figure out where it is or how to get to it. I remember seeing one of the updates mentioned it but I could never find it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

RockyKev 9

I just explored Duolingo on the website. Holy moley -- Tips and Notes?! I've been going through this whole course blind! It's like someone ripped out half of the pages of a text book. I can still figure it out, but I felt like I was missing something important.

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Brian608592 22 11 129

I've been using a tablet only and supplementing with books. I'll have to go back to the beginning and start reading the darn Tips and Notes.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

meiri-ri 13 8

Exactly. I suppose there are other things that the DL team is needing to add first, but I have always seen this as a major priority that was confusing not to see yet. The tips and notes are available if you use Duolingo in a mobile browser, but not in the app.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

v43ng 17 12 10 2

What feature would you give a higher priority than explaining grammar?

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TLogan2 12 7

I ABSOLUTELY agree with Munderlohsean's post at the top of this thread. I was very surprised to discover the "tips and notes" section on the desktop version. I too am very surprised it is not in the mobile version. So, am adding my voice to this thread. If any Duolingo developers are "listening," please take note of us!

6ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

klinehopper 12

They say the future is mobile but I have found most websites mobile apps are not great and missing essential features. If I'm not mistaken the mobile app also misses this discussion area where I've found so many people that are helpful and able to clarify things I am stuck on and driving me crazy.

Some people use the mobile version of the website and not the app saying it has more of the desktop site features. IDK (I don't know) I wasn't aware the mobile version was missing the tips and notes too.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

v43ng 17 12 10 2

Are there any news on this? It's been one year. I haven't used duolingo for a while and was wondering if anything new happened.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

Drakovyrn 10 9 8 5 5

Nope. Nothing, still. It's super sad and disheartening. Really wish the developers would focus on usability, and not how flashy their app looks.

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Luko. 16 14 13 3

My girlfriend doesn't even have a computer, but she has an android cellphone, and internet in Argentina isn't fast enough to use duolingo in the chrome app

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

v43ng 17 12 10 2

Thank you munderlohsean for speaking up. I would very much appreciate this feature on all mobile platforms. It's okay to repeat a language where I already know the grammar. But learning Turkish through guessing? Got to be kidding me. The mobile app is unusable for new grammar. If I wanted to learn vocabulary only, there are much better resources than Duolingo available.

So with the push to more and more languages and the idea to make Duo available for everyone (meaning exclusive mobile users) it's confusing to hear nothing from the staff for this extended period of time. And really, there are languages that are just too different from English to skip on the grammar. This is much more needed than fancy costumes for the mascot.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DariusJank2 7 7

Guys, we truly absolutely need it! I would give all my lingots for this discussion but got tired of clicking after 10 or so :D

3ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

an1msaj 11 9 5

Post created 1 year ago, still no grammar notes. :(

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

tiagosarmento 22 14 14 10 5 2 1

Yeah bro I'm sad too I don't have computer only my iPhone And IOS users doesn't have features see comments words informations etc, that's so sad ;(((

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Dan.Cline 25 23 17 15 11 891

I agree!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HarmAouke 15 15 15 14 2 3

I couldn't agree more!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LiaLeonetta 25 16 16 16 11 9 5 3 2 14

I usually use the iOS app to do lessons, and only use the website for forums, messages and Immersion. I'm also not aware of the app lacking grammar notes...is there a big difference?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

munderlohsean 15 10 9 8 7 4 2 2 2

On the desktop version, the lessons will usually have a page of information containing explanations of grammar rules. The IOS app doesn't have this.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HenryMille4 22 511

Try learning from the Web version on your phone there is a new mobile layout to the pages that beats the app.

Note, the mobile layout might be an ab test I'm in. I won't go back to the app anymore though.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Italian.Ice 14 14 10 8 6 5 4 4 3 3 2

I totally agree. I started learning German on the app and was so lost that I essentially gave up. Now I practically live off of the tips and notes for Turkish, otherwise I would still be saying "O adam."

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JessieBeeA 11 19

I am agreed with you! It'll be easier for us to practice any language if Duolingo Team add tips and notes to its app. I wish I did start with this PC instead of app so I can understand much better. Also, I would suggest to use colors on words for visual learners too.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ellien100 9 8

Agreed. The tips and notes are very useful. I have been looking for them on the android app and my searching led to this discussion. I alternate between using Duolingo on a tablet and my desktop machine, so I can go back to see the notes I missed while on the tablet, but many people don't have that option.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Magycmyste 14 5 3 2 17

This. I know about the notes and tips in the desktop version, and while the mobile version is more convenient, I feel restricted to using Duolingo on the desktop, because I can understand it better.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

dvbotet 10 8

I agree. I mainly use my tablet (and my sofa).

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FenwaynLizzie 11 6 4

Just wanted to jump in here to voice my strong agreement with this. I absolutely need these notes to learn, and honestly thought my iPad app was buggy when I started using it recently (after having used the website for a while). Everyone learns differently, and I think it's very wrong for an education company like Duolingo to try and force us to learn in a way that just doesn't work for all of us. They already have these notes readily available - it really isn't that difficult to make them accessible via the mobile apps. As someone else said, trying to do these lessons without the tips and notes is really like trying to do your homework with half the textbook pages ripped out. It's a terrible experience, and makes the app 100% useless to me until they're finally included.

Has anyone from Duolingo commented on this at all?

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Merrittkr 16 10

I can't believe this is still a thing. I didn't even know I could use the mobile Web site, and I have been missing so much just using the Android app. Unfortunately the mobile website is slow and buggy. I really hope there are plans to improve the mobile app...

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

sschank 15 14 3

Not having the grammar notes makes the mobile version useless (to me). I need the notes to understand the grammar behind the few examples in the lesson. This is core functionality that is missing from the mobile app.

2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

SublmnllySublime 18

I agree completely. The app feels like it is in alpha version compared to the website, even though it's been out for years.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

AssimilateSpeak 10 5 3 2

Use the mobile browser version of the app instead of the actual mobile app. It includes the tips and notes.

My pattern is to use the browser version for the start of each lesson group, so that I can see the notes. Then I switch to the mobile app, since it supports the microphone and speech better.

2ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

ReynoldDrakes 20 3

I completely agree! I 'liked' the original post a little while back, but adding a comment now in case that also makes a difference. It seems like a relatively simple add. Please help us, Duolingo!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 month ago

t0panka 21 12

YES PLEASE! Also android users have FOR LOOONG time comments section for lessons but what about iOS???

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

v43ng 17 12 10 2

Also Windows Phone is lacking this feature.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

dannycooz 20 10 3 2

As someone else pointed out, the extended section for each exercise is also missing. It would be nice to be able to drill down for clarification or to post a question about a specific exercise, as well as read others' feedback.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

suedewally 12 12 10 6 6

I cannot upvote this enough. Please add this!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LarsPtzk 22 11 8 6 6 5

I couldn't agree more. Essential feature. Does anyone know if they are working on it now?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Teacuppy 20 13 11 10 10 8 6 6 6 488

I agree too.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TKazimie 20 16 500

for me is also very inconvenient to switch to pc only to tips. Implementation on iPad would help a lot.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

endre2714 14 5 4

Bump. Quite disappointing that I have to go the desktop first to read the tips then doing the lessons on my phone.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

IstvnFodor1 9 5

Did you get any answer or promise from them? I'd really want to know if it'll be in and if it is then when.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

dsuruagy 11 8

I agree!. Please, add the grammar tips to the mobile version!

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

SublmllySublime 18

This must be given top priority. I had previously thought duolingo was just expecting me to guess and check the language. Please, PLEASE add this to the app. We needed it yesterday

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

DeColuvj 13 13 8 8 7

100% agree. We totes need the notes.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Phil.Clou 20 15 1

Yeah I wasn't aware of it either until very recently. They really should have a little mobile-friendly animation at the beginning of a lesson to explain the basics...

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

JohnH82 14 6 2

I've just started learning Danish on the iPad app. I happened to go on the website today and noticed all the tips and notes....suddenly makes everything a lot clearer!

This really does need to be added to the app.

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

munderlohsean 15 10 9 8 7 4 2 2 2

Update: I heard that the mobile apps used to have the tips and notes section, but then they got rid of it since not a lot of people used it. I think they should put it back in since it's the right thing to do.

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

keychange 7

Major issue, my wife uses Safari and DL crashes everytime she uses it on her ipad so she has to use the app which runs fine but the lack of grammar notes are really frustrating

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

RJones9 8 7

Your comment has just totally changed my learning experience! I had NO idea there was so much content on the website. It all makes a lot more sense now. Basically the App is just an accessory to the website so you can practise on the go!

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

jhoogie 9 4

Please add the notes section -grammar is critical to learning any language

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

FenwaynLizzie 11 6 4

It's beyond frustrating that this has been going on for over a year and they still haven't added this. Seriously...I find it gross being told how I should learn, especially when the resources to learn in my own way are right there. They've already gone to all the work of compiling the tips and notes...just add them!

Duolingo is an educational company, supposedly...don't they recognize that one size does not fit all, and that different students have different learning styles?

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

seanboyle30 22 16 8 5 5 4 4 3

I created a wiki to collect tips and notes which is accessible via mobile: <http://duonotes.wikia.com/>

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

AssimilateSpeak 10 5 3 2

Since the notes can be accessed from the site itself using the browser, I'm not sure that helps much. Either way you have to go to the browser, and by using your wiki, they must be kept synchronized?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

seanboyle30 22 16 8 5 5 4 4 3

I can't log in via the browser, since I log in with google and they (STILL) don't allow google logins on the mobile site.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

AssimilateSpeak 10 5 3 2

On a computer, if you go into your profile settings and set a password, then you can log in via either google, or the password. That should let you work via mobile.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

seanboyle30 22 16 8 5 5 4 4 3

That didn't work, because a "current password" is required, and my google password didn't work. However, I was able to create a password using the "forgot password" link. I am now able to see the notes via mobile, but I think my little journey through the user account maze demonstrates the need for the wiki I created. I'm sure people will find it useful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

anjp 11

+1 I agree the mobile version should have Tips and Notes that the desktop (browser) version shows

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

brigcampbell 23 871

Probably should have flash cards too.

FYI I completed the entire Spanish tree using the app, never the website.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Derdiedas812 10 10 8 7 6 5 2

Yeah, the flashcards would be more useful in the app than in the website, imo.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lhaz 15 4

Where are the grammar notes and tips? I'm using Duolingo both on my Ipad and my desktop PC. Neither version has grammar notes that I can find. I just started the past participle section and if I hadn't taken a Spanish course years ago would have been totally confused. There are no explanations of the verb forms and how they are conjugated.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tmRhema 22 15 12 39

This helped me, so maybe it will help others:

If you go to <http://www.duolingo.com> on a web browser with an iPhone and sign in you can see the tips and notes. It looks to me as if it's just like the desktop version. Another (less convenient) way to get the tips and notes would be to switch back and forth between the DuoLingo app and a browser window opened to the link provided at the bottom of the tips and notes page (usually wikipedia pages). On an iPhone this "switching between apps" is done by double clicking the home button. I suppose the developers could at least add that link to the app as a temporary way to somewhat provide this feature.

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

worstquestions 17 16 15 13 10 10 9 8 1139

They're a lot more extensive for newer languages, but if you scroll down on the lesson select page within a skill you'll see it on desktop. Not all skills have any and I think spanish and italian have the least of all (none?) so you might have to pop into esperanto or something for an example.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

meiri-ri 13 8

Try clicking on the Spanish skill "Past Tense" Scroll ALL THE WAY to the bottom of the page, you should see tips and notes.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lhaz 15 4

Thank you! I see them now.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TallulahTi 15

Totally agree!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KSmeat1990 11

Agreed

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

RonBloodworth 15 74

Everyone here talks about what a great resource the "Tips and Notes" are on duolingo. I've searched everywhere on the site and cannot find the "Tips and Notes" section. Can someone say specifically how to access the "Tips and Notes?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

seanboyle30 22 16 8 5 5 4 4 3

Go to Duolingo.com in the browser and click on a skill. You should see lesson 1 lesson 2 etc. Scroll down and you should see tips and notes.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

RonBloodworth 15 74

Went to a skill, saw Lesson 1, 2, etc., scrolled down to the bottom of the page. Did not see anything that says Tips and Notes. I don't get it. Very frustrating.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

seanboyle30 22 16 8 5 5 4 4 3

What language are you looking at?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

RonBloodworth 15 74

Spanish

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

RonBloodworth 15 74

Finally figured it out. Not every skill has a Tips and Notes section. After clicking on several different skills, I found one that has a Tips and Notes section. So now I'm in the inner sanctum with those that know.

1Give Lingot•1 month ago

seanboyle30 22 16 8 5 5 4 4 3

Are you on a mobile app or a browser? If browser, mobile or desktop?

0Give Lingot•1 month ago

seanboyle30 22 16 8 5 5 4 4 3

Welcome to our enlightened plane of existence.

0Give Lingot•1 month ago

TrevorSullivan 6 6

I didn't know that this was an option until a few days ago. I've been using since 2012 and could never keep it up for more than a few weeks because I was so confused. The lessons are essential, and their absence is inexcusable.

0ReplyGive Lingot3•1 month ago

DebnPerse 10

Come on Duolingo, get your act together re mobile app and grammar hints and tips!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Dera181 10

Until this issue is fixed, you could go onto the duolingo website on your phone using your webbrowser. It's the same website as using a computer so the grammar tips are still there. I still wish this feature was on the app though because thats kinda the whole point of the app; to be able to use duolingo easily on your phone

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

cluestick 11 2

That's incredible. I've been struggling through German exclusively in the app for a few months and had no idea how I was supposed to know some of the answers. I've pretty much worked them out now (Thanks to other books and the internet) but these grammar notes are completely invisible. I mean there's not even a hint.

I know DuoLingo is free but this lack of a feature is really, really annoying. I've wasted a huge amount of time chasing down explanations you already had. Apparently you have the technology to show advertisements but not the Notes and Tips? How does that work?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

32 What are those numbers displayed next to people's flags?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204642214-What-are-those-numbers-displayed-next-to-people-s-flags->

If you earn a certain amount of XP, you will "level up," meaning the level associated with the language you're learning will increase. The level displays your effort in learning that language on Duolingo.

You reach new levels once you accumulate the necessary number of skill points for each level. There are currently 25 levels available for each language, and you can keep leveling up even after completing the tree by practicing and earning more points.

33 Portuguese Subjunctive Guide

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/9508268>

adamyoun97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Note: Since there may be people who are trying to learn the Portuguese variant of Portuguese, I've included the tu form in this guide.

The subjunctive (O subjuntivo) can be tricky to grasp for English speakers, as it's rare in our language. I'm putting this guide together in the hopes that it will help those who struggle with this aspect of Portuguese.

What is the subjunctive?

The subjunctive is a verb mood. What does that mean? A verb mood, of which there are four, shows the meaning behind a verb, not the time at which it occurred - the subjunctive ≠ a tense. The four verb moods which exist are the indicative, the conditional, the subjunctive, and the jussive. The indicative is the easier form which is learnt first - used for things like facts or definite situations, like "He was here". The conditional is used for situations which are dependent on other situations to be able to occur, like "I would go, if I had the time". The jussive is the form used for the "Let's ..." and imperative forms of the verb, like "Let's eat" and "Eat!". The subjunctive, however, is used in situations of doubt, desire, opinion, and others, which will be shown later.

How to conjugate the subjunctive - Present Tense

To conjugate the subjunctive in the present tense, take the eu form of the verb, remove the final -o, then add the following endings:

So, let's look at these endings on some verbs:

Due to orthographical rules in Portuguese, the spelling of some verbs changes when they are put into the subjunctive. Here are the endings that change, with an infinitive and the eu form of the subjunctive as an example:

There are unfortunately irregular verbs in the subjunctive. These are:

Ser: Sej- (For example, "Eu seja", "Eles sejam")

Estar: Esteja- (For example, "Tu estejas", "Nós estejamos")

Dar: D-; The final e takes a circumflex accent (For example, "Ele dê", "Nós dêmos")

Saber: Saiba- (For example, "Eu saiba", "Eles saibam")

Haver: Haj- (For example, "Nós hajamos", "Tu hajas")

Ir: V-; Eu, Tu, Ele/Ela/Você: the a takes an acute accent. The Nós & Eles/Elas/Vocês conjugation is the same as the indicative (For example, "Ele vá", "Nós vamos")

Querer: Queir- (For example, "Eu queira", "Eles queiram")

How the present subjunctive is used

The use of the present subjunctive can be hard to get the hang of at first, as it appears so seldom in English (an example being "I suggest that he go"). If you've already encountered the subjunctive in other languages like Spanish, it will be a bit easier, as many of the "subjunctive phrases" will carry over to Portuguese. Likewise, getting familiar with the subjunctive in Portuguese first will help when it comes to using it in other languages.

1. DOUBT

If there is doubt within a situation, the subjunctive is used. For example, phrases like "Não acredito que..." (I don't believe that...), "Duvido que..." (I doubt that...), "Não estou seguro de que..." (I'm not sure that...) all use the subjunctive. The use and wording of phrases will depend on the region that you're in. Remember that any phrases where there isn't doubt don't use the subjunctive, for example "Acho que..." (I think that...) and "Não duvido que..." (I don't doubt that...). Let's look at some example sentences - words in Italics are "subjunctive phrases", and words in Bold are verbs in the subjunctive.

Não acredito que ele aprenda dez línguas à vez - I don't believe he learns ten languages at once

Não tenho a certeza de que isto seja bom - I'm not sure this is good

Eu duvido que estejas dizendo a verdade - I doubt you're telling the truth

And here are these "subjunctive phrases" flipped, to show them with the indicative:

Acredito que ele aprende dez línguas à vez - I believe that he learns ten languages at once

Tenho a certeza de que isto é bom - I'm sure this is good Eu não duvido que estás dizendo a verdade - I don't doubt you're telling the truth

2. WISHES/ORDERS

If there is a wish or an order, something which may not end up happening, the subjunctive is used. Some phrases which require the subjunctive are "Quero que..." (I want (that)...), "Espero que..." (I hope (that)...), and "Desejo que..." (I wish (that)...). Let's look at some example sentences of this use:

Elas desejam que tudo vá bem - They wish that everything will go well
Nós não queremos que chova amanhã - We don't want it to rain tomorrow
Os meninos esperam que não haja escola na Quinta-Feira - The children hope that there's no school on Thursday

3. IMPERSONAL STATEMENTS

Statements like "É bom que..." (It's good that...), "É fácil que..." (It's likely that...), and "É improvável que..." (It's unlikely that...) use the subjunctive. However, remember that the subjunctive is used where there is uncertainty - so statements like "É certo que..." (It's certain that...) wouldn't be used with the subjunctive. Here are some example phrases:

É bom que o povo saiba os perigos - It's good that people know the dangers
É improvável que eles ganhem a partida - It's unlikely that they'll win the game
É estranho que ele não lembre - It's strange that he doesn't remember
Here is a list of some phrases which use the subjunctive:

4. DIRECT EFFECT

If an action affects you directly (e.g. "I don't like that..."), the subjunctive is used. Some phrases which use the subjunctive in this way are "Me perturba..." (It bothers me that...), "Gosto que..." (I like that...), and "Me entristece que..." (It upsets me that...). Some examples are:

Me perturba que o voo seja cancelado - It bothers me that the flight is cancelled
Não gostamos que haja tanta gente - We don't like that there are so many people
Me entristece que você esteja tão infeliz - It upsets me that you're so unhappy

5. Fixed expressions

Some fixed expressions use the subjunctive. Some examples of such expressions are "Embora..." (Although...), "Não obstante que..." (Despite...), and "A não ser que..." (Unless...). Here are some examples:

Não obstante que esteja a chover, vamos nadar - Despite the fact that it's raining, we are going to swim
Embora ele tenha fome, não come o jantar - Although he is hungry, he doesn't eat dinner
Caso você não coma carne, há pratos vegetarianos - If you don't eat meat (In the case of you not eating meat), there are vegetarian dishes
Não vou ao exterior a não ser que conheça alguém no país - I don't go abroad unless I know someone in the country

6A. COMMANDS - TU (PORTUGAL)

When saying a negative command to someone you address as "tu", the tu form of the present subjunctive is used:

Não fales assim! - Do not speak like that!
Não esqueças tua bagagem de mão - Don't forget your hand luggage
6B. COMMANDS - VOCÊ & VOCÊS

For commands said to someone you address as “você” (both positive and negative), the ele/ela/você form of the present subjunctive is used:

Ponha a bolsa aqui - Put the bag here
Não fume no carro - Do not smoke in the car
Likewise, commands to a group you address as “você” use the eles/elas/vocês form of the present subjunctive:

Aprendam comigo! - Learn with me!
Por favor sejam pacientes - Please be patient
Não percam a chave - Do not lose the key
Não usem o elevador em caso de fogo - Do not use the lift in case of fire
7. OXALÁ/TOMARA

“Oxalá” comes from the Arabic “Insha 'allah”, and means “Let's hope that”, or “I hope that”. An alternative is “Tomara”, which means the same thing. Both use the present subjunctive:

Oxalá não percamos nosso voo - Let's hope we don't miss our flight
Tomara seja bom! - Let's hope it's good!
8. Que...

The last use of the subjunctive is starting a sentence or clause with “Que”, then using the subjunctive. This is used to show desires and thoughts. For example:

Que nunca partamos! - Let's never leave!
How to conjugate the subjunctive - Imperfect Tense

The subjunctive also exists in the imperfect tense. To conjugate it, take the eles/elas/vocês form of the verb in the preterite tense and remove the -aram/-erem/-irem, then add the following endings:

Here are the endings on the verbs we looked at for the present tense:

How the imperfect subjunctive is used

The imperfect subjunctive is used, for the most part, in the same cases as the present subjunctive, except for the fact that the preceding phrases are either in the conditional or imperfect tenses. So while the present subjunctive would be used with “Quero que...” (I want (that)...), the imperfect subjunctive would be used with “Gostaria que...” (I would like (that)..) and “Queria que...” (I wanted (that)...). This carries across for all aspects:

Não pensei que ele aprendesse espanhol - I didn't think that he learnt Spanish
Esperávamos que todos o vissem - We hoped that everyone saw it
Seria improvável que ninguém viesse - It would be unlikely that no one came

Gostaria que lesse o livro - I'd like you to read the book

However, if a structure like the "impersonal statements" is used to refer back to a past event, this will remain in the present tense:

É bom que vocês sobrevivessem - It's good that you all survived

Não acredito que ele partisse sem dizer «Tchau» - I don't believe that he left without saying "Goodbye"

SE + CONDITIONAL

One feature of the imperfect subjunctive is the "Se + Conditional" sentence. This is used to state hypothetical actions - which is why the subjunctive is used. This type of sentence is the only sentence where the subjunctive is still fairly identifiable in English - "If I were rich, I'd buy a mansion". This type of sentence works exactly the same in Portuguese:

Se você não tivesse de trabalhar, o que você faria? - If you didn't have to work, what would you do? The sentence structure can also be flipped, starting with the conditional clause and then using the imperfect subjunctive. For example:

Eu falaria mais em português se tivesse mais confiança - I'd speak in Portuguese more if I had more confidence

COMO SE...

"Como se" is the translation of "As if" in Portuguese, which always uses the imperfect subjunctive. It works in the exact same ways as in English:

Foi como se nunca partisse - It was as if he never left

Como se apenas eu gostasse daquilo! - As if it were only I who liked it!

Perfect and Pluperfect Subjunctive

The perfect and pluperfect subjunctive tenses also exist in Portuguese. These are formed by either using the present subjunctive of Ter + Past Participle, or the imperfect subjunctive of Ter + Past Participle. For example:

É incrível que elas tenham ganhado a competição – It's incredible that they won the competition

Se tivéssemos sabido que o tempo seria tão mal, não teríamos ido – If we'd known the weather would be so bad, we wouldn't have gone

How to conjugate the subjunctive - Future Tense

Portuguese is the only Romance language to still have the future subjunctive active. To conjugate the future subjunctive, take the eles/elas/vocês form of the verb in the preterite tense and remove the final -am, then add the following endings:

Here are these endings on the verbs we looked at earlier:

How the future subjunctive is used

The future subjunctive is used to talk about future events with uncertainty. In most other languages, either the future indicative or present subjunctive is used in these cases.

QUANDO...

When “Quando” is used with a future action, the future subjunctive is used:

Quando eu sair, irei ao parque e depois ao banco – When I go out, I will go to the park and then to the bank

Remember that if “Quando” isn’t referring to the future, the future subjunctive isn’t used:

Quando eu fui ao banco, havia muita gente - When I went to the bank there were a lot of people
Quando saio sempre lembro das minhas chaves - When I go out I always remember my keys SE...

Like “Quando”, if “Se” is used with a future action, the future subjunctive is used:

Se vocês não pararem de falar, teremos de partir - If you all don't stop talking, we'll have to leave ENQUANTO...

“Enquanto”, meaning “As long as”, or “While”, used with a future action uses the future subjunctive:

Enquanto tu estiveres aqui, estarei feliz - As long as you are here, I'll be happy
Compare this to the same phrase with the present indicative:

Enquanto tu estás aqui, estou feliz - As long as you are here, I'm happy
The first sentence is referring to the future, whereas the second is referring to the present.

ASSIM QUE.../LOGO QUE...

Both “Assim que” and “Logo que” mean “As soon as”. Like “Quando”, “Se”, and “Enquanto”, when referring to a future action they use the future subjunctive:

Assim que eu tiver feito todo o meu trabalho, poderei ir com vocês - As soon as I've finished all my work I'll be able to come with you
Ela vai chamar-nos logo que se recuperar - She is going to call us once she is better
I hope this helps!/Espero que isto ajude!

Check out my other subjunctive guides!

⇒Spanish Subjunctive Guide

⇒Italian Subjunctive Guide

Give Lingot58
521 year ago

Leave a new comment
28 Comments

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

I would like to suggest a few adjustments for this excellent post. Its very good to have people who wish to help and bring such a detailed guide to us.

First, this link is a very good resource for the English subjunctive. If you understand this, you are half the way ahead :)

There may be a difference between Portugal and Brazil here, I can only speak for Brazil, though.

1 - Doubt

In Brazilian Portuguese, we don't know the expression "à vez", we use "de uma vez (só)" instead.

These two examples prefer the subjunctive:

Acredito que ele aprenda dez línguas de uma vez - I believe that he learns ten languages at once
(there may still be doubt here)

Eu não duvido que estejas dizendo a verdade - I don't doubt you're telling the truth (this prefers to follow what the verb "duvido" asks for)

In the first one, using the indicative is assuming and accepting he actually learns 10 languages. Ex: Someone tries to convince you, and you actually accept that as true.

Using the subjunctive is to believe he probably does.

6 - Commands

Although having the same form, imperative conjugations shall not be seen as subjunctive conjugations.

But you can use it as a very good trick to remember.

8 - Que...

In Brazil, we don't understand the expression "Que não os entenda?"

We would use one of the following and others:

Ele não fez os deveres. Talvez não os entenda? (Perhaps he doesn't understand them?)

Ele não fez os deveres. Será que não os entende? (Could it be that he doesn't understand them?)

How the imperfect subjunctive is used

The following examples must have their forms/translations adjusted:

Era/Seria bom que vocês sobrevivessem - It would be good if you were to survive

É bom que vocês sobrevivam - It's better for you to survive / You'd better survive

É bom que vocês sobreviveram - It's good that you survived

(É bom que vocês sobrevivessem - Tense mismatch)

Não acredito que ele partisse sem dizer «Tchau» - I don't believe that he would leave without saying "Goodbye"

Não acredito que ele partiu sem dizer «Tchau» - I don't believe that he (has) left without saying "Goodbye"

Perfect and Pluperfect Subjunctive

Adjustments (for BR Portuguese):

Se tivéssemos sabido que o tempo seria/estaria/ficaria tão ruim, não teríamos ido – If we'd known the weather would be so bad, we wouldn't have gone

16ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

Beijemee 15 6 3

From where it says "How the imperfect subjunctive is used" for me it gets confusing. Not all of those sentences are in the subjunctive, but some are.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

The intention is to correct the original post and compare what changes in meaning when you use the subjunctive.

I listed the possible sentences and their different meanings.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Beijemee 15 6 3

Must you use the imperfect subjunctive to talk about imaginary things in the past?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

Well.... that statement can be too vague....

There are keywords and keyverbs that ask for the subjunctive.

Also, conditional sentences and a few other constructions.

It tends to be about "hypothetical" cases, but not strictly.

The imperfect subjunctive can be used either in past cases or in hypothetical conditionals.

The explanation from the past subjunctive skill quite sums up the way I currently see it:

THE PAST SUBJUNCTIVE

The past subjunctive talks about actions in the past that are uncertain and also about hypothetical things in general.

In English, you can find past subjunctive in "if clauses":

If I were you, I would stay here = Se eu fosse você, eu ficaria aqui

The conditions for using the past subjunctive are very similar to those for using the present subjunctive. There is just a difference in tenses.

But here, a very important case comes into play: the conditionals!

Conditionals with "if"

One of the most important usages of the past subjunctive is for creating conditionals. You will notice also that the "if" keyword (se) is present in conjugation tables.

Se eu fosse rico, compraria um barco = If I were rich, I'd buy a boat

Nós iríamos à praia se não estivesse chovendo = We would go to the beach if it weren't raining

Se eles gostassem de biscoitos, eu lhes daria uma caixa = If they liked cookies, I'd give them a box

Optionally, there is the informal possibility of using the imperfect past in the main clause:

Se eu fosse rico, comprava um barco

.

Some verbs asking for the subjunctive

Examples of verbs expressing "hope/doubt" in past:

Eu esperava que você voltasse = I was expecting you to come back

Duvido que fosse verdade = I doubt it was true

Não creio que fosse possível = I don't believe/think it was possible

Eu não acreditava que fosse possível = I didn't believe it was possible

Eu acreditava que as coisas fossem melhorar = I believed things were going to get better

Ela desejava que tudo acabasse bem = She was hoping everything would end well

Verbs giving orders:

Ordenei que os prisioneiros fossem libertados = I commanded that the prisoners be freed

Eles pediram que tirássemos os sapatos antes de entrar = They asked us to take off our shoes before entering

Sugeri que eles esperassem a tempestade passar = I suggested that they wait for the storm to pass

Ela insistiu que eu provasse um pedaço do bolo = She insisted that I try a piece of the cake

.

Keywords asking for the subjunctive

Here too, some keywords will ask for the past subjunctive just like they do in present tense. But now, a very important keyword comes into play: "if"; allowing us to create the most common conditionals. (Note that "if" is present in the conjugation tables for past subjunctive)

Caso fosse verdade, então deveríamos nos preocupar = If it were true, then we should worry

Embora fôssemos grandes, não podíamos alcançar o céu = Although we were big, we couldn't reach the sky

Eu faria isto, mesmo que ele não concordasse = I'd do this, even if he didn't agree

Ainda que eu quisesse, não poderia = Even if I wanted to, I couldn't

Eu acharia você, nem que eu precisasse dar a volta ao mundo = I would find you, even if I needed to circle the world around.

Ele tomou o remédio para que melhorasse = He took the medicine in order to get better

Ela fez tudo de modo que não deixasse vestígios = She did everything in a way that didn't leave traces

4ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

Well.... almost.....

If you're not picky, you can let the difference pass unnoticed.

But if you are:

With "que": it expresses more like a wish, it may sound somehow like a command. It can sound close to "You'd better survive", although the present tense (É bom que vocês sobrevivam) is the most suitable for that command-like sentence. Another possibility is "It would be good for you to survive". With "se": it expresses that I'd like the result if you happen to survive. It gives more chance and less importance to the case of not surviving.

2Give Lingot•4 months ago

Beijemee 15 6 3

Do these two sentences mean exactly the same thing?: "Seria bom que vocês sobrevivessem." / "Seria bom se vocês sobrevivessem."

1Give Lingot•4 months ago

Jayway223 23 16 15 10 9 9

When I saw the title:

Imgur

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

I'm glad you thought that! :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

WernickesArea 14 13 11 7 6 3 2

É bom saber que não é apenas eu... KKKKK

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Monsieur_Bovary 17 15 15 12 12 11 11 8 156

Tobrigado por isso! Muito útil ;-)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

De nada! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IanMendes 23 21 20 19 14 14 13 12 10 8 7 7 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 2 2 2

Amazing job! There goes a lingot!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

solidgitarius 25 25 18 15 14 7

The following seems to be wrong:

However, if a structure like the “impersonal statements” is used to refer back to a past event, this will remain in the present tense:

However, the following examples use the past tense:

É bom que vocês sobrevivessem - It's good that you all survived

Não acredito que ele partisse sem dizer «Tchau» - I don't believe that he left without saying “Goodbye”

And then about the future subjunctive:

To conjugate the future subjunctive, take the eles/elas/vocês form of the verb in the preterite tense and remove the final -am, then add the following endings:

But then the examples take the infinitive as a base.

And I'd like to qualify this statement:

Portuguese is the only Romance language to still have the future subjunctive active.

The future subjunctive is not used in the day to day language in Spanish, but it can be found in famous bible verses, in literature, in the legal realm and some popular expressions. As a native Spanish speaker I find useful to compare the Spanish future subjunctive with its equivalent in Portuguese.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

⇒ Yes, the verb in the subjunctive uses the past tense, but the “impersonal statements” are in the present tense.

⇒ The infinitive isn't used as a base. Let's take “Falar” - “To speak” as an example. Here are the conjugations in the preterite:

Eu falei

Tu falaste

Ele/Ela/Você falou

Nós falamos

Eles/Elas/Vocês falaram

Remember, to get the future subjunctive stem, you remove the -am from the Eles/Elas/Vocês form, which leaves us with “Falar”, which I've indicated with bold text. This just happens to coincide with the infinitive. If you have an irregular verb however, like “Querer” - “To want”, you end up with the following conjugations:

Eu quis

Tu quiseste

Ele/Ela/Você quis

Nós quisemos

Eles/Elas/Vocês quiseram

With this verb, you can see that the future subjunctive stem, “Quiser”, and the infinitive “Querer” are different. For example:

Se vocês quiserem ir à universidade, vocês terão de estudar - If you want to go to university, you'll have to study

⇒ Notice the word “active”. Yes, Spanish has the future subjunctive, but it's not really used on a day-to-day basis, is it? Whereas in Portuguese, it is. For example, in my phone's settings, it says “Se não estiverem redes conhecidas disponíveis, terá de selecionar uma rede manualmente”. If my phone were in Spanish, you wouldn't (and don't) see the future subjunctive anywhere in the settings app.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

solidgitarius 25 25 18 15 14 7

I see where I was wrong. Thank you, it's clearer now.

Yes, Spanish has the future subjunctive, but it's not really used on a day-to-day basis, is it? Whereas in Portuguese, it is.

It's not used on a daily basis, it's true. I just wanted to point that it is known, and still used in some contexts, in Spanish.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

As a native speaker (Brazilian), I'd be ok with the second example if it had a different translation, but I wouldn't agree with the first.

Não acredito que ele partisse sem dizer tchau = I don't believe he would leave without saying goodbye.

É bom que vocês sobreviveram = It's good you survived

Seria/Era bom que vocês sobrevivessem = It would be good if you were to stay alive.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

solidgitarius 25 25 18 15 14 7

I'm having trouble with the use of the subjunctive in phrases like this:

Eu pensei que ela tivesse usado todo o dinheiro.

The translation proposed by Duolingo is:

I thought she had used all the money.

And in Spanish:

Yo pensé que ella hubiese usado todo el dinero.

Why use the subjunctive when a past tense of the indicative is enough?

In Spanish I would say:

Yo pensé que ella había usado todo el dinero.

Is there a rule for this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rofresi2007 25 22

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

solidgitarius 25 25 18 15 14 7

After all this time I think I understand this. And as native Spanish speaker this used to confuse me, but I now see that the Spanish past imperfect is rendered in the past imperfect, but in the subjunctive mode in Portuguese when hypothetical stuff is talked about.

I did the Portuguese tree from Spanish and there were a lot of mistakes there in this respect, which added to my confusion, but it is all been corrected by now.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Don_Cristian 25 25 22 22 15 14 11 11 11 11 11 11 10 10 10 10 9 9 7 5 5 4 3 2 2

Thanks a lot, very helpful ! subjunctive is the hardest thing for me in romance languages.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Darley070 8 3

Thank you for this •_• This is helpful!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lucalingo07 22 9 5 4 2

nice

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 2 1

why does the "I think that" not express doubt? also how come in the imperfective subjunctive it says -êssemos for nós endings but tivêssemos has é and not ê?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

"I think that..." is just an exceptional case. The affirmative version doesn't use the subjunctive as expected. But the negative version does:

Acho que ele está aqui = I think (that) he is here

Não acho que ele esteja aqui = I don't think (that) he is here

Other similar verbs use the subjunctive, though:

Penso que ele esteja aqui = I think (that) he is here

Acredito que ele esteja aqui = I think/believe (that) he is here

Creio que ele esteja aqui = I think/believe (that) he is here

About the accents, it's not possible to know by any rule in Portuguese which "e" sound certain words have, unless they have accents. We know it by experience only:

Colher (to collect / harvest) sounds like "ê"

Colher (spoon) sounds like "é"

The same would apply to "o":

Força (force/strength) sounds like "ô"

Força (he/she/it forces) sounds like "ó"

For regular "er" verbs, a rule can be inferred, though: they will sound as "ê" in their infinitive forms.

Thus, the conjugated form will use "ê": comêssemos, lêssomos, entendêssemos, vivêssemos, etc....

But remember that "ter" is irregular, and its conjugation is not "têsseemos". The irregular form "tiver" sounds like "é", and thus the "we" form will use "é": tivésseemos.

That happens with other irregular verbs such as "houvésseemos" (haver), "quisésseemos" (querer), "fizésseemos" (fazer), "viésseemos" (vir)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 1 wow finally someone answered :)

but how do e, é, and ê differ in pronunciation? it always sounds the same to me

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

What??? :o :o :o

Well, I guess it's hard indeed for foreigners, especially when Duolingo messes them up sometimes....

Taking English words as parameters:

"ê" sounds like "wAy"

"é" sounds like "yElling", "hAir" (American).

As I said before, just the letter "e" is not enough to tell you which pronunciation it takes. (See the "colher" example, for instance). Accents themselves are not often used to change pronunciation (except for a very few words: "céu", "chapéu", "avô", "avó"...).

They're used to change the "stressed syllable".

Pele has a strong "pe" (skin)

Pelé has a strong "lé" (the name of a great soccer player)

Premio has a strong "mi" (I give someone a prize)

Prêmio has a strong "prê" (prize)

In total, there are about 5 "e" pronunciations:

é

ê

en

i

in

"É" and "ê" will be chosen word by word, no clear rule for them, unless the accent is actually present on the word.

The "en" pronunciation is pretty much the American "en" in "Enter" or "cAn". It happens whenever "e" is followed by "m" or "n", overriding the accents if they are there. (Words like "alguém", "também", "entre", "êmbolo", "prêmio", "premio", "Emerson"). This is called a nasal sound. (In European Portuguese, they are less nasal and more independent from the "m/n").

The "i" pronunciation (a shortened English "ee") happens at the ending syllable if it's not a strong syllable. In the following, I put the strong syllable in upper case:

Bebe: sounds like "BÉbi"

Pense: sounds like "PENsi"

Sabe: sounds like "SAbi"

(Please notice that this is a weak "i" sound. Words ending with an actual "i" will have a strong ending: "bebi" sounds like "bêBI", a not so short English "ee")

And it also appears (apparently randomly) in the middle of certain words, most of the times optionally. Classic examples are words with "des" prefix, like "desfazer" (disfazêr), "desculpe" (disculpi). Some other examples are "perigo" (pirigu), "ensinar" (insinar).

The "in" happens when "e" shifts to "i" and there is "n" or "m" after it. And also in words with tildes: "mãe" sounds like "m-an-in". In English, it would be somewhere near "mung-ing". (Discarding the "g" at the middle).

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ajokedare 13 9

incrível, muito obrigada!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

34 "In the nineties"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1272317>

Translation: Dans les années quatre-vingt-dix

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

25 Comments

ibnsina786 22 21 19 16 11 551

What's wrong with "dans les nonantes?"

20ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mnoonan912 16 7 7

Just as a friendly FYI, please report stuff like that. They almost always accept the alternate translation, but they won't know about it if it's not reported.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jaykos 12 11

the sentence does use the word "years" - it could refer to temperature !

19ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MsAdnil 13 12 11

I agree. I had done this one before though and got it wrong when I didn't assume it referred to years. Remembering that I played the game and got it correct this time. It could be anything in the nineties.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

IzaakFairc 2

The French use Celsius not Fahrenheit I believe, so for the weather to be "in the nineties" is not only unrealistic, but also a bit dangerous :D

9ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

hdh15 23 2 694

Why not "En les nonante" not that nonante has been introduced to us yet. I agree that in the nineties doesn't necessarily mean age, why not temperature or length? A ski jumper could have landed in the 90's as well as the temperature being in the 90's.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

unodingo 20

Can we say "Dans la décennie quatre-vingt-dix"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DarrelDent 23 64

I also do not understand why this can only refer to years.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PAAlbert1976 25 14 14 6 332

How are we suppose to know they are referring to time and not temperature?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

George418878 20 20 16 9 5 4 3 103

Come on, it's the 90's! <https://vimeo.com/29455771>

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

KarinKM 16 12

You do realise that France is in Europe? A hot day is +30C, not 90 or 100F. And nonante sounds too belgian anyway.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sethvw 25 14 3 1103

Other things can be in the 90s besides temperatures and years: points in a basketball game, boxes received at a store, deaths in a terrible accident.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alexanderkaim 21 5 5 3

so how would you say nineties without sounding Belgian and without referring to years? quatre-vingt-dizaines?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

billnpatarnold 17

You make a good point. I, too, thought of temperature, but then I'm dreaming of summer :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OliviaScot4 14

I was educated in a French Convent and the use of nonante was frowned on as being considered Belgian as were septante and huitante

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

divaluisa 25 25 23 20 4 2 1

Does this have to be "années" and not "ans" Can someone explain why.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Julia.s.h 11 10 10

<http://french.about.com/od/vocabulary/a/an-annee-jour-journee-matin-matinee-soir-soiree.htm>

Hope it helps !

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DarrelDent 23 64

Great resource! Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Julia.s.h 11 10 10

De rien :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

duyphmc 25 6 732

why not "Dans les années nonante" ???

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LINHARS 15 13 11 6 5 56

Is it not possible to say 'dans les quatre-vingt-dix' in French?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DongWookKi2 17 6 2

What does it mean if "Pendant les années..."

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DarrelDent 23 64

That would mean "during the nineties," rather than "in the nineties." The two would be interchangeable in most cases, but not always.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jackieallen2 17 6 5 5

The only thing it definitely wouldn't be is temperature. Only Americans, British people over a certain age and British tabloid newspapers would use the phrase "In the nineties" and mean a very hot day. In a British tabloid this would usually appear as a front page headline such as "What a scorcher. Shirts off as Britain fries in 90° heat"

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

35 "The boy eats the apple."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/211819>

Translation: Il ragazzo mangia la mela.

04 years ago

Leave a new comment

43 Comments

marziotta 17 15 12 11 10 7 2 2 148

"Il ragazzo" is not Italian, and wouldn't work in any sentence.

The apostrophe is used when the article "LO" becomes "L'" in front of vowels, but "ragazzo" has no vowel at the beginning.

12ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

beachladybug3 10

It's a capital 'i' it looks like it's a capital 'L', but it's not. so if you write in lower case it should be il. Perhaps they should write these answers in lower case letters..or use a font serif font which would be more clear ans to which letter is being used. this is the capital i "I" and this is the lower case L "l" they look the same. it's confusing...I've noticed similar replies on many discussion questions and answers.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

beckyberry 25

How do you know when a noun is masculine or not

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jeepsperson 9 2

la is fem il is masculine

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Bill-Roca 20 17

Just starting out with Italian but it looks similar to Spanish so I'll give this a try ...

Most nouns ending in -o are masculine, most nouns ending in -a are feminine. But at least in Spanish there are a lot of exceptions that you just have to memorize.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jeepsperson 9 2
its simalare im level 8 in spanish

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AndrewMS221 22 6 3 938
Level 15 I think. Ha.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Boochiemusica 7 2
2!!!! I AM THE BEST!!!! (yeah, no typo, 2)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

dominic1238136 2
Whats the difference between il and la

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

trick_master 12 11 6
il for masculine la for feminine

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kheller731 4
So how is an apple feminine? its fruit lol. I dont get that. I typed lo ragazzo mangia lo mela and got it wrong because "apples are feminine" thats confusing.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

StevenPam 6 6 1
There is nothing to "get". In Italian, some things are masculine and some are feminine. It's not always apparent why. You just need to learn them. Be thankful there isn't a third gender (neuter), like in German! :-)

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

romans_p27
russian has a third gender (neuter) too

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tez_chronis 6
although the actual item may not have a gender the spelling gives it a gender. i.e la mela (apple) is feminine because it end in 'a'. this is similar to many languages for example i know this happens a lot in Greek

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lunar_Queen 6

All words in most languages (except English) have gender, no matter if it is animate or inanimate. Our French teacher was just speaking about this. For example, in French, the word for trash can is feminine, though it is not alive. Apple happens to be a feminine word because it sounds better and flows more fluently.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Seankawx 4

How do I know when to use "una mela" vs "la mela"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

marziotta 17 15 12 11 10 7 2 2 148

In general "the apple" = "la mela" and "an apple" = "una mela". Then in some specific cases the articles are not dealt exactly in the same way. It is better to ask and read the comments whenever you find something that doesn't fit this general rule.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AbaddonNight 5 2

'Il ragazzo mangia la ragazza'! hahahahaha

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

strega_senia 6

How come "gli ragazzo" wasn't appropriate?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

trick_master 12 11 6

first and foremost, we're talking about singular here so that means we should have il.

Second, even if this was plural we should use I instead of gli, because gli is the plural for lo (we use lo when we have z+vowel or s+consonant i.e. lo zucchero, lo squalo) and for l', which is something we use before smthng that starts with a vowel i.e. l'ape l'animale

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Shoimaru 11 8 2

This is a funny option. :)) - "Il ragazzo mangia la donna." Hi hi

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GuadalupeM21 5

I put in il' ragazzo and was marked wrong. How come in this case there is no apostrophy after the L?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

notitalian123 6 2

There is never an apostrophe after il as il is the masculine the

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

perexanna 9 8 5 4 3 3 2
when should i use lo and when should i used il?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jhealy279 5 4 2
We havent done the different eating word yet..... This is ecspecially difficult as i am teaching myself itallian and french from dulingo alone at the same time

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Saffalina 12
I used Mangio instead of Mangia ... nope

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

emilyt2003 5 4
Isnt bambino techniclly correct...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

juliet880245 2
xxxxx

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ColsonSapp0 10 6
Are we overlooking that one of the answer choices was "Lo ragazzo mangia la ragazza" o.O

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BaejMarcin 7 2 2
why it cant be una mela ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

WEBHaunting 9
"Una mela" is "an apple", it was asking for "the apple" which is "la mela."

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

carlos2-cruz 2
OH

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EUMORRISON 2
bhkl/w3GKGLSHAESGHLEWHEW/GJewghewlifgowqufhyw3/gyfewfgewrgh/dklsfegv

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vargastorres77

lui mangia una mela...is that close?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GloriaPrat2

Ok

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

jeepsperson 9 2

i thought it was il

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Brady346 3

Did anyone else get an option saying "Il ragazzo mangia la donna"?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bookwormh190 8

When do you use la versus il?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

WEBHaunting 9

La is feminine, like la mela, and il is masculine, like il pane.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

36 "The letter is mine."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/78927>

Translation: La carta es mía.

04 years ago

22 CommentsThis discussion is locked.

dadaduo 10 8 7 7 6 4 2

I had a multiple choice question to translate "The letter is mine." I put "la carta es mia" AND "la carta e mio," but Duolingo counted my genius answer wrong.

10Give Lingot•4 years ago

zbuddhaha 7

"Note that the possessive adjectives [I think they meant to say and possessive pronouns: mine, yours, ours; versus possessive adjectives: my, your, our, etc.] vary by number and gender. The change is with the nouns they modify, not with the person(s) who possess the object. For example, for a male cat you say "El gato es tuyo" (The cat is yours) regardless of whether you are talking to a man or a woman."

Taken from: <http://duolingo.com/#/skill/es/Possessives> (scroll down for explanations of the subject matter instead of initiating the interactive lesson).

22Give Lingot•4 years ago

shawn_ 10

i just translated to spanish and also put "las cartas es mio" and was incorrect..... does the subject (cartas) of the sentence dictate if "mine" is masculine or feminine?

8Give Lingot•4 years ago

intricate07 9 3

"las cartas" is also plural so you can't use the singular "es" and "mio"

5Give Lingot•4 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

rick93 and intricate07 you are correct in your post. My sentence was singular, so la carta (singular and fem) es (singular 'is') mia (fem).

3Give Lingot•4 years ago

rick93 7 5

I think this is the reason.

2Give Lingot•4 years ago

rrdvm 9 6

is it because of la carta, that you cannot say mio?

8Give Lingot•4 years ago

Shatley707 13 7

that is absolutely correct. you would instead say "mia"

16Give Lingot•4 years ago

FoxMan96 7

Yes, you can only have words of the same gender (mio, mia) in the sentence, in this case la, carta, and mía

4Give Lingot•3 years ago

brownec_870 7

OK I get it. It all has to do with the subject like he said. "La carta" being the card in question is the subject therefore, the rest of the sentence follows suit in a sense. Regardless of the speakers gender, mia or mio will follow the subject of the statement not the gender of whoever is talking. :D Did I get that right?

6Give Lingot•3 years ago

SaintRidley 9 8 6

You did.

2Give Lingot•3 years ago

cabolady

And, if I am playing an alphabet game, LA LETRA could be a correct answer, no?

3Give Lingot•4 years ago

lakija 11 2 2

I thought they were talking about an alphabet letter too. :(I didn't immediately think of a paper...

2Give Lingot•3 years ago

1show 12

How do you know when to use mia or mio?

3Give Lingot•3 years ago

Santi_Minstrel 10 9

As commented previously by other people, the gender and number of the pronoun (mía, mío, mías, míos) agrees always with those of the object being substituted.

La gata es mía

el perro es mío

Los elefantes son míos

Las gafas [glasses] son mías

14Give Lingot•3 years ago

allswell 9 2

Is the word 'mine' feminine or masculine

1Give Lingot•4 years ago

Shatley707 13 7

irrelevant. The word "mine" refers directly to the subject. "El elephante es mio" and "La carta es mía" have similar meanings, even though "mio/mia" changes between the two.

The reason for the change is because the subject has a different gender. "The elephant" is masculine - therefore mi gets the masculine "-o" - while "the letter" is feminine, so mi gets the feminine "-a" ending. It all has to do with the subject.

4Give Lingot•4 years ago

nukum 10

"mine" refers to the individual not the letter....I am a male....why not "mio"...

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

nukum, possessive pronouns, just like any other pronouns take on the gender of the person, or object that it Replaces. It has nothing to do with the gender of the speaker. 'la carta' is a feminine noun and the pronoun that is associated with it has to be feminine. The real possessive pronoun here would be 'la mia' (mine) but in Spanish, usually the definite article is omitted after the verb 'ser'. I believe once you understand this concept, it will be easy for you. The possessive adjectives work the same way in the long form. ex: you can say mi carta and there is no distention of gender when using mi (my). However if you use the long form of the possessive adjective which is 'la carta mia' meaning the letter of mine, you can see that the adjective agrees with the noun.

2Give Lingot•3 years ago

SaintRidley 9 8 6

Because possessives work like adjectives. Your gender is irrelevant, since you are not the one being modified.

2Give Lingot•3 years ago

jav3 9

<----- Same problem as dadaduo below: "had a multiple choice question to translate "The letter is mine." I put "la carta es mia" AND "la carta es mio," but Duolingo counted my genius answer wrong." ME TOO!

-1Give Lingot•4 years ago

generalboop 6 6

The mia/mio part of the sentence refers to the "la carta" being fem. If magically it was "el carto" or another equally as masculine word then it would be "el carto es mío"

6Give Lingot•4 years ago

37 When to use the definite article...

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1012366>

Nitram. 25 16 16 11 6 6 5 2

It is an ever-returning question on the Italian forums: when should one use the definite article? It is a legit question, because it's use in Italian often differs from its use in English.

With the help of my PONS grammar book, I'm going to write down the rules of this nasty part of Italian grammar to help those having problems with it.

First of all, you have to understand that you're learning Italian, not German for instance, which means that there are always vague parts that cannot be explained perfectly. Most of these things are based on intuition, on the sense of the speaker, the following rules are just guidelines until you know enough about Italian.

USE THE DEFINITE ARTICLE:

1) before names of materials

Ti piacciono le carote? - Do you like carrots?

La lana è una materiale importante per l'industria dell'abbigliamento. - Wool is an important material for the clothing industry.

2) before possessive pronouns (except certain family members, of course)

Adoro il mio insegnante. - I love my teacher.

Questo è il tuo libro. - This is your book.

3) before the days of the week and times of the day IF it is a regular activity

Il sabato vado al mercato. - Every Saturday I go to the market.

La sera sono stanco. - In the evenings i am [usually/always] tired.

4) before titles IF followed by a name (EXCEPT if it's greeting/addressing)

La signora Rossi è arrivata - Madam Rossi has arrived.

Ecco il professor Angelini! - This is professor Angelini.

5) before feminine family names, rarely before masculine family names. we don't use it before famous historical Italian people

La Loren, (il) Manzoni, BUT: Fellini, Verdi etc.

6) before names of continents, countries, territories and bigger islands (EXCEPT after the preposition "in")

Mi affascina l'Africa - Africa charms me.

Sono tornato ieri dalla Sicilia - I arrived yesterday from Sicily.

7) before abstract objects / concepts (EXCEPT after the preposition "in" or "di")

L'ozio è il padre dei vizi. - Laziness is the father of vices.

8) before objects that people tend to have only one (and here possessive pronoun is often omitted)

Hai la macchina? - Do you have a car?

Mi fanno male le gambe - My legs hurt.

9) before giving the exact time

Sono le nove. - It's nine o'clock.

E' l'una. - It's one o'clock.

10) before body parts and other external signs

Mia madre ha il naso piccolo. - My mother has a small nose.

Porti gli occhiali? - Do you wear glasses?

11) before illnesses

L'AIDS mi fa paura - I'm afraid of AIDS.

12) before musical instruments

Suono il pianoforte - I play the piano.

Chi suona la chitarra? - Who plays the guitar?

13) before colors

Il rosso è il simbolo della passione. - Red is the symbol of passion.

Il rosso, il bianco e il verde sono i colori della bandiera italiana. - Red, white and green are the colors of the Italian flag.

DON'T USE THE DEFINITE ARTICLE:

1) in structures with adverbs of place using the preposition "in"

Vado in bagno - I'm going to the bathroom.

Ha mandato suo figlio in collegio - He sent his son to boarding school.

2) before adverbs of place using the preposition "a" + the following nouns:

caccia/casa/letto/lezione/messa/scuola/teatro

Oggi resto a letto. - Today I remain in bed.

Vado a teatro stasera - I go to the theatre this evening.

3) before months and seasons (more info: look at itastudent's post below about seasons/months)

In autunno la scuola inizia. - School starts in autumn.

4) before means of transport using the preposition "in"

Vado in treno a Roma - I go by train to Rome.

That's all in the book, but Italian of course has more of them than these "rules" can express. Quite a challenge to learn them, isn't it? :) But Duolingo-ers are up to challenge, I suppose.

Anyway(s), I hope I could be of help. In bocca al lupo, amici! :D

Give Lingot19

373 years ago

Leave a new comment

24 Comments

itastudent 15 14 10 9 1

Really great job! I think it's pretty clear. I am not completely sure only about your third "don't".

There are several cases when months and seasons need the article, in particular when you are specifying something more near the name of the season/month, you should specify the article:

L'estate prossima vado al mare. Next summer I'm going to the beach.

Mi sono sposato nel luglio del 1993. I got married on July, 1993.

Also, consider these examples:

La primavera è la stagione che preferisco. Spring is the season I like the most.

but:

Aprile è il mese che preferisco. April is the month I like the most.

I think we can maybe write that rule as follow. You should not use the article before months/seasons using the prepositions in/a and if there is no other kind of detail (i.e. an adjective) near the name.

Without using the prepositions in/a, seasons do need the definite article, but months don't.

It's a little confusing. What do you think about that?

7ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Nitram. 25 16 16 11 6 6 5 2

Yes you're right, but those "don't use" can be basically always ignored when speaking about something specific. Thank you for sharing this valuable information I'll refer to your post in the original post. :)

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LaMilanese 11 10 10

The definite article should not be used before first names, as it is a grammatical error commonly found among speakers from the north of Italy. Just wanted to point this out in case someone stumbles on things like "ieri sono uscito con la Maria".

Great post :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Nitram. 25 16 16 11 6 6 5 2

Thanks for pointing it out, it is very useful when someone is confused! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

itastudent 15 14 10 9 1

There's a little thing I am not sure about your example at number 8:

"My legs hurt."

I think this should be translated "Mi fanno male le gambe". Your Italian translation sounds a little weird to me, maybe it's something regional; personally, I have never heard the verb "ferire" used that way.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LaMilanese 11 10 10

Your translation is the correct one.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Nitram. 25 16 16 11 6 6 5 2

Fixed! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

annzabaldo 10

THANKS! This actually is extremely helpful! At least it organizes all of it in one place. Now all I have to do is learn 17 different exceptions and requirements ... :-)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mukkapazza 14 14 13 10 6 5

Well done!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Nitram. 25 16 16 11 6 6 5 2
Thank you :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Notsofast 12
Grazie!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Nitram. 25 16 16 11 6 6 5 2
di niente ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mazzorano 25 12 10 9
Cheers, love your enthusiasm!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

artskinner 18 6
Thank you very much!! That helps. By the way anyway doesn't have an "S"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nitram. 25 16 16 11 6 6 5 2
You're welcome. My English teacher always said there was no real difference between anyway and anyways... Anyway(s) :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Konrad127123 23 22 20 17 13 13 11 3 2 782
"Anyway" is correct and used in British and American English. "Anyways" is American slang and very informal, so I'd generally recommend avoiding it. :)

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

alrodrigues 21
After two years, this continues being a very good explanation. Thank you! But I still have a question (I'm a beginner): are definite articles mandatory before uncountable nouns? For example, "io bevo caffè" vs. "io bevo il caffè". I'm Brazilian, and in Portuguese we can use both, but the first sentence indicates a general/nonspecific idea (similarly to English); the latter indicates something very specific (the coffee in that cup, or from that package). I often come across the idea that both sentences are completely ok in Italian, regardless of its specificity. Is it true?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Katzenperson 14 9 9 8 8 7 5 5 4 4 30
I hope someone answers this question! I am wondering the same thing myself, as Duo seems to feel that the article is used whether one is being generic or specific.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

alrodrigues 21

Yeah, nobody has answered the question. Katzenperson, if you ever get to an answer, please tell me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Katzenperson 14 9 9 8 8 7 5 5 4 4 30
Assolutamente!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

valerieheath 25 118
grazie

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nicole_Di_Kansas 12 2
Grazie, grazie, grazie. Mi serve il libro

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

miles_back 22 13 5 3 2
Bravo, chapeau, Lingot!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Katzenperson 14 9 9 8 8 7 5 5 4 4 30
This is an extremely useful set of rules! I have copied them to my little notebook for reference. Mille grazie!

BTW, what is PONS?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

38 "The worst has passed already."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/278226>
Translation: Lo peor ya ha pasado.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment
48 Comments

jarhead1532 16 5
Why is it "Lo" and not "El"

180ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

rspreng 24

"Lo" before an adjective makes it into a noun: lo peor, lo bueno, etc. You can't put 'el' before an adjective. Just the way they do it.

498ReplyGive Lingot72•3 years ago

CEShann 22 5 5 3

Exactly. It may help some English speakers to think of this as "The worst THING", just the way the neuter is used.

112ReplyGive Lingot5•3 years ago

RageHole 18 9

I see some complaints about duolingo's fallibility here and there, but sometimes I think half the site's value is to be found in the comment sections. It's really helpful to find info like this from helpful people like yourself.

101ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

cdefabis 10 6

Agreed! Love the comments!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

webpilot 13 4

It seems to me that the adjective is not converted to a noun but that the 'lo' serves as the noun. So 'lo peor' means something like 'that which is worst'. I could be wrong and either way this rule of thumb works :)

24ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PabloSueno 25 25 1097

"El peor" or "La peor" would be correct if the gender were known. It is not known here, so "Lo peor" is correct. CzarnyCzesio (below) has provided an authoritative link directly in point. http://spanish.about.com/od/adjectives/a/best_worst.htm. My dictionary also confirms the usage of all three forms (lo peor, la peor and el peor) for the noun form of "peor".

14ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

vikukunta 13 13 13

"You can't put 'el' before an adjective." I suppose this applies only when there is no noun after the adjective?

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Fluent2B 23

Yes, I think you do put el or la before an adjective when it is modifying a noun.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ranchers1 13

How would someone say "The smartest wins" Could that be said in Spanish where the "one" is implied but not stated? All I could find is "Gana el más inteligente". Still though Smartest in this instance is a noun but normally an adjective. Thanx

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Happytimes777 13
Lo más listo gana. :-)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

azizspanish 11
ah-ha! What a great tip!!! Thanks!

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Emmiegram 25 195
Thanks, rspreng. You are a wellspring of knowledge about things I've not been taught anywhere else.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ChrisThomas17 16
I keep seeing your picture answering many, many questions. Thanks for taking the time to help everyone out.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

duolearner12345 24
I've known heard this explanation before and it makes so many things clearer now. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ph516503 20 15 15 12 8 6 3
gold dust! thanks rspreng

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LeanneHinton 13 7 6
Thankyou for the explanation!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TimEsh 16 2
Thanks, that's very helpful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lynne_bond 13
thanks for a very clear explanation

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

homefire 23 14 24
Good to know. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CzarnyCzesio 17 10
Here is the explanation: http://spanish.about.com/od/adjectives/a/best_worst.htm

8ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

brendals 25 9
why does "already" have to be after the word "worst"? is semantic order that important here? Why can't I say "ya lo peor ha pasado"?

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MagAonghusa 24 18 14 12 7 6 6 6 5 4 4 4 4 119
I put "lo peor ha ya pasado". would also like to know about "ya" with regards to word order.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fishysteph 19
I don't think you can split up ha pasado.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Emmiegram 25 195
I think you're right, fishysteph.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

beadspitter 17 6
Yeah, we've seen this before with questions about where it's possible to put adjectives, or even where the 'no' goes in making a verb negative. As far as I can tell, you can't split up verbs that go together in Spanish. I think of this as being like the often-challenged rule in English about not splitting infinitives (e.g., 'boldly to go', rather than 'to boldly go'), which we got entirely from Latin (though I'm not sure if it is actually related or not).

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cdhicks1 25 23 1207
I have struggled the 'ya' placement as well. But if I put it before the verb, it seems to work. Look for that word order.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Stompariffic 18
Same problem. I put the ya to open the sentence as I have seen it done a million times. Think I will submit and see.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hollyrosell 14

You fellow duoes are great! DL would not be nearly as useful without the comments! Thanks for the help =)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

adcooley 12 2

So could you say "El coche ya ha pasado" for The car has passed already?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Juanitawhite 22

I also want to know why the ya was not allowed at the beginning of the sentence

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Cheryl1 20 11 7 7

"ya" is an adverb. As an adverb it must be close before or after a verb, or before or after another adverb, such as the negative adverb "no".

Ya means a lot of things depending on context. In the present tense it means now or already, except in a negative construction when it means no longer. In the past tense it nearly always means "already" such as in this sentence. In the future, it means later....Ya lo haré - I'll do it later.

In this sentence I think it works to place Ya either before the noun, before the verb or at the end of the sentence. It generally translates the same given this sentence is in the past tense. It's never placed between the auxiliary verb and the conjugated verb.

6ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

AwkwardCactus 16 6 6

Thanks for this answer, I knew where it went from practice, but it's great to know why

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ArieSafari 19 7

Even though I have finished my tree, I'm afraid I'm never going to fully understand when and where to use "lo."

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Talca 25 12

If that's your only problem, I wouldn't worry about it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

takyon42 11

Why is no indirect or direct pronoun needed here? "Lo peor ya le ha pasado"

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TilEulenspiegel 12

"Ha pasado" is a state of being, not an action, so no additional pronouns are needed.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

laostirner 21 6 15

I had no idea comments existed, thanks for the explanation!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jrmazal 23 7

Why can't I use "ocurrido" instead of 'pasado'?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Shirlgirl007 23 22 20 42

Can the words in this sentence be in a different order, such as: Lo peor ha pasado ya. Or : Ya lo peor ha pasado?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SMAGringo 20 25

Well, all my Spanish teaching is that "The worst" is "El peor"..What am I missing?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JuevesHuevos 15

From other comments:

http://spanish.about.com/od/adjectives/a/best_worst.htm

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SMAGringo 20 25

Muchas gracias...lo veo. I did not see "worst" as a noun, but as an adjective

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johnelsworth 22 15 2 2 4

can someone explain why "ya lo peor ha pasado" is wrong. I was under the impression that words like "Ya" and "Aun" were put at the beginning of sentences etc...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LRAOKARETIO 25 13

mal, peor, el peor_ bad , worse and worst for that reason wouldn't it be right to use el peor

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RobChristiansen 11

the worst bear

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

AngelG4975 10

<h1>2 and 3 are both correct</h1>

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AngelG4975 10

<h1>2 and 3 are both correct</h1>

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

39 "Do not throw the baby out with the bathwater."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2481735>

Translation: Il ne faut pas jeter le bébé avec l'eau du bain.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

51 Comments

elfavzla 11 5

What kind of sentence is this? Lol

91ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

branbee 23 23 19 18 14 8 7 6 6 5 4 8

Very common expression in English. Basically means don't get rid of something good when trying to get rid of something bad

98ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

branbee 23 23 19 18 14 8 7 6 6 5 4 8

If you're a native English speaker then ignore this lol

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrankOvares 15 11 10

I would imagine that perhaps such an expression originated in the nineteenth century in the Wild West, when cowboys use to bathe in a removable bathtub. Naturally, since there was no plumbing in those days, once done with the business, they have to throw out of the window or out in the bushes the "tinted" water. Now , as for the "baby" part, perhaps they were carrying some gold nuggets ("The gold fever in California") and not trusting anybody (can't blame them) they would give that gold a bath as well. How's that for an explanation?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

OrchidBlack 20 19 18 17 17 14 14 10 10 10 8 6 4 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 954

The story I always heard about the origin is that it goes back to pioneer days. There was no running water, and baths were taken once a week. The water would be pumped out into the tub, then the order of bathing would be according to age: father first, then mother, then oldest to youngest kids. By the time the baby got his/her turn, the water could be rather murky. ;) Hence the expression.

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pir_anha 15 14

That's cute, but it's a myth. There is in fact no evidence that any baby was ever thrown out with any bathwater.

It goes a lot further back than US pioneer days; to a German proverb, which was probably coined in the early 16th century. An image of the first known use is here:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Don%27t_throw_the_baby_out_with_the_bathwater#/media/File:Murner.Nerrenbeschwerung.kind.jpg

The guy who wrote it was a satirist, who ranted against corruption, the reformation, and especially Martin Luther.

6Give Lingot•1 year ago

TheTastyWord 14

Exactly. I would have thought the idiomatic expression would be different in French, though. It's rare when they translate word-for-word like this. :)

Any French natives care to explain if this is indeed a set phrase in France, Canada, any other Francophone country?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LeValley1 15 6 2

I'm thinking that it is not, until someone says otherwise.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

LeValley1 15 6 2

Yes, I get that. But it doesn't say "it's not necessary" at the beginning. If it's not a common expression in French, it needs to be translated in various ways. Really bad example.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

mortto 10 7 5 5 4 3 3 2

As a non native English speaker this sentence also sounded extremely weird to me hahahaha. Would that also work in French, or would people get it literally?

15ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RyanHaining 18 12 8 7 2

Wondering the same, it's a pretty strange saying and based on its origins, I'd think it was unlikely to work in French (unless they had a similar culture to the US all those years ago)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Adaniel5 13 4 2

I am a native English speaker (American) and I have never heard this in my life, I had to go into the comments to figure out what it meant

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

R4_Online 18 10

As a native English speaker this would make no sense to me. I've never heard this been used.

-13ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OrchidBlack 20 19 18 17 17 14 14 10 10 10 8 6 4 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 954

Though it's used less frequently here, I've never run across anyone who hadn't heard the saying.

14ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jameschallinor20 20 19

Maybe it's an American saying? I'm from the UK and have never heard this

-4ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

pir_anha 15 14

No, it's used often enough in the UK that I am surprised anyone there hasn't heard it. I learned it in English class 40+ years ago. So maybe it's a generational thing? Google ngram shows it becoming steadily more present in print from about the 1920s on. The trend is still rising, but maybe Millennials don't use it anymore? The expression originates in German.

It exists in French as a phraseological calque (a loan phrase directly translated):

https://fr.wiktionary.org/wiki/jeter_le_b%C3%A9b%C3%A9_avec_l%E2%80%99eau_du_bain

5ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

OrchidBlack 20 19 18 17 17 14 14 10 10 10 8 6 4 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 954

That's quite possible.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

JenCraven 19 9 7 7

It seems to me that "Il NE FAUT PAS jeter le bébé..." means "It is not NECESSARY to throw out the baby...", i.e. "You don't HAVE TO throw out the baby..." But that's not what the English sentence means; it means "You SHOULD NOT/MUST NOT throw out the baby..." Wouldn't a better translation be "Il FAUT NE PAS jeter le bébé..."?

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Melarish 16 15 14 12 12 11 9 8 4 3 2

It means different things in positive and negative constructions, sorry :/

<http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/devoirfalloir.htm>

13ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

JenCraven 19 9 7 7

Interesting. So, "Il ne faut pas manger" doesn't mean, "It is not necessary to eat"; it means "It is necessary NOT TO eat". Counterintuitive, but good to know. Thanks!

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IDIOT 25 14 9 6 5

Counterintuitive...I'd say diametrically opposite... :/

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nicholas_ashley 25 773

il ne faut pas can mean don't

examples

Il ne faut pas exagérer. - Don't exaggerate.

Il ne faut pas regarder trop le télé - Don't watch too much tv

Il ne faut pas arriver en retard - Don't arrive late

Il ne faut pas boire ça - Don't drink it

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LeValley1 15 6 2

Yes. Which is why it didn't seem to be the right translation. Instead of being about language learning, this turned out to be about colloquialisms...

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Kennebekk 23 12 7 3 156

According to Wiktionary. com this is a common saying in several languages including French.

http://fr.m.wiktionary.org/wiki/jeter_le_bébé_avec_l'eau_du_bain

6ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Opubo 20 14 7 6

In Imperatif, Can't I say 'Jetez pas'; must I add 'Ne' as well. In most French speak I hear, they almost never negate with 'ne'.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1253

You could say that informally, but Duo's designed to teach you proper French grammar that's appropriate for writing.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sam927 13 8 7

It's slang to leave off the "ne," not technically correct French. Feel free to leave it off when speaking with friends, but it can't be accepted in a test like this.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Novakaine 16 5 4

Is «on ne doit pas...» incorrect here? Duo marked me wrong for that.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dindrtahl 15

is this a common expression in French too?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jimmy-1990 14 9

"ne pas jeter le bebe dehors avec l'eau du bain." Why incorrect? :(

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cecchisandrone 12

The english verb is throw out, so you don't need dehors

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

joseangelxi 14 11 10 10 8 3 2

How do I know when and how to use "Il faut..." or "Il ne faut pas..."?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

The ne...pas part means not (Like "no" in Spanish). Try here:

http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/adverb_negative.htm.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

moorefrench 14

Doesn't "l'eau de bain" fit common french usage?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Simon_Bell 25 4

Just introduce the imperative without warning, Duolingo, why not?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Beesnell 12

You guys are amazing! I love Duo!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kiticka 22 8 6

why cannot it be ne pas jete?- if Ne pas jetez is possible? If I mean "tu", and not "vous", it should be correct, should not it?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jwl99 25 25 8 1

I think the informal imperative would be "ne pas jette". Incidentally I tried using "ne pas jetez" and got it wrong. I am going to report it as acceptable.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sam927 13 8 7

Nope - for imperative you need to say "Ne jetez pas." "Ne pas" only works together if the verb after is in the infinitive ("Ne pas jeter") http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/imperative_3.htm

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pierrew52 18

why not " de la baignoire"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LatecomerLaurie 25 20 9 2

(American English speaker) I think "baignoire" is the bathtub.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

johans2103 11 9 5 2

Why just accpet "Ne jetez pas" and not "Ne jete pas"????

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bouchka7 25 25 3

Idiome

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

ZachFrancais 19 3

"Ne pas jeter"... is not possible? Surely at least as slang?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

FakeDiamond 20 16 6 273

What?..

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

silly_Turtles 11

I'm a native english speaker and I've never heard this one. lol XD

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

ScottFerson 15 149

If, as EStyrke argues, "il ne faut pas" means "it is necessary not to", i.e. "one must not", then it seems to me that the accepted translation "Il ne faut pas jeter le bébé avec l'eau du bain" is actually a mistranslation of the English sentence. It doesn't say one must not, it says don't. Duolingo suggested in its tips on infinitives that they can be used like instructions, so why isn't "Ne pas jeter le bébé avec l'eau du bain" the parsimonious translation of this imperative?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

hairyphil 16 9 6 72

I thought I just learned on another question that when dealing with a negative ("don't throw") the definite article should change from "le" to "de"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

symbol271 10

"Il ne faut pas jeter..." Seems wrong for this sentence. I feel like it should be "Ne jete pas..." That said, I'm perfectly willing to believe that the construction of this particular idiom is different in French than English when negated. In English we use the imperative and say "Don't throw the baby out..." But maybe in French the expression actually is "It is not necessary to throw the baby out..." Unfortunately, the article linked here in the comments doesn't deal with how to negate this idiom in the various languages that use it. It would be nice to get some clarification on this one.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EStyrke 18 10 6 4 2

No - "il ne faut pas" means "it is necessary not to", i.e. "one must not".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Susan-Robinson 14 11 9

i suggest that duo eliminate this idiom. it's archaic and confuses both native and non-native english speakers

-2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

40 What's the difference between "dein" and "eure?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8591813>

GorillaTape 8 4

They both mean "your", yet it's incorrect if you use one rather than the other at times. What's the reason for this?

Give Lingot

91 year ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

Zergalag 12 6 5 4 3 2 2

The difference is between the second-person singular and plural. "Dein" is as "du", in that it refers only to one person (second-person singular). "Euer" is from "ihr", which refers to a group to whom you are speaking (second-person plural). So, when you use "du", also use "dein"; when you use "ihr", also use "euer".

An English example might be: "Dein Essen" - "Your food." "Euer Essen" - "You guys' food."

37ReplyGive Lingot10•1 year ago

GorillaTape 8 4

Oh, I see now. I should've figured that. I forget at times.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

G0108 7 6 5

Dein is for du and euer is for ihr. In the feminine dein changes to deine (same thing in plural) and for euer it changes to eure (same thing in plural). Keep in mind these are the nominative versions. You can find all of them here

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CarlosJFort 16 7 5

YOu get confused because in English you use the same word to mean a person you are talking to, as well as a group of people you are talking to. Besides, you don't make the difference between formal and informal. For us spaniards, it's easier because we have "tú" (singular informal you), "usted" (singular formal you), "vosotros" (plural informal you) and "ustedes" (plural formal you). "dein" is singular informal (for "du") and eure is for plural informal (for ihr).

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

landsend 22 20 14 13 12 11 10 886

Adding to the other comments there is one thing you need to pay attention to. The form of German possessive pronouns follow two "objects", the thing owned and the owner.

The base form follows the owner: My - Mein, Your (singular) - Dein, His - Sein, Her - Ihr...

The ending is determined by the object owned.

Male: Mein Tisch

Female: MeinE Katze

Neuter: Mein Haus

Plural: MeinE Finger

And when used as an object in a sentence they additionally follow the case declensions, of course.

What I really want to say here is: It is not only a difference in numerus (dein - singular, eure - plural) here but also in the object owned. "dein" can be (in nominative) for male or plural objects, "eure" for female or plural. So both can be used for a number of objects owned but couldn't be used for a single item owned.

2ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

41 is spanish the easiest foreign language?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4240998>

josephkt 2

i have heard this so much times it's mostly hype to sell language software well for me Spanish is a beautiful language with a easier pronunciation than others which helps but there is more to a language than it's pronunciation and spanish grammar is not that easy or that difficult overall Spanish is similar to ,french',Italian and Portuguese but it is as easy or hard as them depends on the person but i don't think is any overwhelming more easier to learn. each one of them has things that are easier and difficult

Give Lingot

122 years ago

Leave a new comment

31 Comments

ThatOneKidJosh 25 10 9 7 3

Western Frisian is probably the easiest foreign language for a native English speaker.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ana_81 19 18 11 11 11 9 30

Spanish easy? Then I wonder why I seldom hear a stranger who is able to speak in proper Spanish. They tend to butcher it in the most joyful manner, particularly ambassadors. I usually find it very hard to understand what they're trying to say. Easily the most underrated among the most popular languages.

From what you say, I'm sure you are not one of those. I agree with you in that every language can be easier or rather difficult. For example, as a child I found terribly easy to learn to conjugate verbs in English, but I had a hard time trying to understand all the different compound forms... Learning a language always demands a lot of effort.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 1

I learned French before Spanish, so I think it's the easiest (if you're not counting English as a foreign language), though they're about the same difficulty. Spanish has easier pronunciation and accent usage. French has easier grammar, only one verb for "to be", no "por/para", and less regional difference

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aemann 14

As a terrible speller, Spanish is a great language for me. In Spanish, if I can hear it, say it, or even think it, I can usually spell it. That has never been true for me for English. So, in one way, Spanish is sometimes easier for me than my native tongue.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FresnoVegas 11 11 11 10 7 7 7 6 5 4 3 10

For a native English speaker, the easiest foreign lang probably would be West Frisian/Dutch/Afrikaans if all things were equal. But due to logistics I do agree that Spanish is the easiest, from availability alone.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 1

I think that Swedish is also really easy, since it has many similar words and no verb conjugation in present tense

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FresnoVegas 11 11 11 10 7 7 7 6 5 4 3 10

People need to stop downvoting these posts. This is a legitimate question and phrased in a respectful and honest way.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Joseph2 25 25 25 24 14 13 12 11 11 6 6 5 4 4 4 3 2 2

I can't believe people would even begin to consider Dutch easier than Spanish. The syntax alone, not to get into the random word genders, makes it tougher than Spanish. Spanish gender is really pretty simple thanks to unique word endings and clear pronunciation of vowels. I don't know anything about Frisian, but Spanish is definitely much easier to learn than Dutch is.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Uz-Zaman 25 25 10 10 8

I think it depends on your capabilities, on this website 39 million registered users are practicing dutch compared to Spanish's 18 million, so it speaks volumes on how comfortable English speakers or semi-fluent English speaker in dutch compared to spanish (those whom mother tongue is not English).

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mreaderclt 25 24 16 9 7 6 3 2 2 979

Where do your numbers come from?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

geekishly 9

They got the numbers from here: <https://www.duolingo.com/courses> However, they've misread the numbers for Dutch, which has 39 thousand users. Not million.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

mreaderclt 25 24 16 9 7 6 3 2 2 979

Ah, thanks. I think there are far fewer than 39 million native Dutch speakers in the world. So, I suspected there was a problem with that number.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

But you cant fault NoorUz-Zaman's enthusiasm for Dutch xD

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

geekishly 9
of course not!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Sie00 20 20 10 8
Legend

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

I can only speak from experience - and it's only a little experience. I did 5 years French at school; whilst lots of phrases and words stick to me, I have no fluency (That's a joke!) - I can't speak it at all!The little bit of Spanish I've tried seemed to come more naturally; but that's perhaps because I'm learning Italian, and as a fellow Romance language, it seemed to me to come quite naturally, once you grasped a few basics, like pronunciation. Having said that French is a Romance language too, but I still find it unnatural. This is not meant as an insult to the French, because theirs is the language I think I'd most like to learn.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mattaes 16 14 13 12 11 8 8 6 6 5 4 3 2

The easiest language for an English speaker is Norwegian.

<http://www.pagef30.com/2008/08/why-norwegian-is-easiest-language-for.html>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
I'm pretty sure it's Japanese ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Athenicuber 8 6

The easiest language for an english speaker would be either West Frisian or Scots.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BobbieL 24 8 2

It varies depending on the language you're starting from and what your strengths are.

If you're starting from English and living in the United States, Spanish probably tends to be overall the easiest language to learn to a high level. It has a fairly large shared vocabulary with English, and it's relatively gentle in its pronunciation and spelling rules.

Its biggest advantage, though, is availability. Many cable providers now offer the option of adding Spanish television channels to your package (far more content than you could easily get in basically any other language but English). DVDs etc will almost always have Spanish as one of their subtitle options, and will often offer it for an audio option. Amazon's Spanish selection of books and movies is far better than just about any other language. Local libraries are typically going to have a larger selection of Spanish content than they will of other non-English languages. Since it's so popular as a language to study, materials designed specifically for the purpose of learning Spanish are much more available than comparable materials for other languages.

As far as actual people to talk to go, this varies a lot depending on exactly where you are. There are obviously communities in the United States that have very strong pockets of people speaking Mandarin or German or whatever. If you're just generically considering what's available in the United States, though, it's overall VASTLY easier to find people who speak Spanish than anything else. I think it amounts to something like 12% of the population and rising. (It also doesn't hurt that many of the countries who are near the U.S. primarily speak Spanish, which makes it relatively easy to go on vacation to a nation where Spanish is the primary spoken language).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

josephkt 2

well i'm not from America so that discussion is mute for me you can say i'm near to French Spanish ,dutch speaking countries and brazil isn't to faraway either

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Maxseptillion77 7 7 5 3

Actually Western Frisian is a language in the Netherlands that is technically the easiest foreign language for English speaker to learn (since the difficulty varies with native language and heritage)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nettleleaf731 5

i think it is

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ReidHT 25 15 8 7 6 5 2

After Dutch, Afrikaans, and other languages closely related to Dutch are the easiest, but most of the Romance languages come in second. So far I find Spanish easier then French because so far, there are no articles.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

walejandromt 12 5 2

i am native spanish and i searching native learn or speak english, my whatsapp is +529171285845 and my facebook is Williams Alejandro, practice my english please!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

totallynotnikita 8 8 7 7

¡Hola! Yo hablo inglés...and I'm a native speaker! And I'm learning Spanish...what a coincidence haha!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

walejandromt 12 5 2
we practice?? please quiero mejorar mucho mi ingles

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

walejandromt 12 5 2
we learn english and spanish all

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Babel726 14 2
Oui.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GoravSingh 4
it should be English :3 ... but that's for non - native English speakers . such as myself from india.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

meggycortes 9
I think it depends on what's your mother tongue. I'm filipino and I find it easy to learn spanish because half of our native language comes from the spanish language so yeah.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

42 It's not asking me to speak. I don't know why. The microphone is on
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1360006>

WendyRiva 4
It's not asking me to speak. I don't know why. The microphone is on

Give Lingot2
83 years ago

Leave a new comment
10 Comments

yoosefi 7 4
I'm having this problem. My mic works in other apps, and the settings are all turned on. Duolingo is only asking me to type, not speak.

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EvkaVarg 17 13 9 7 6 4 487
I have similar trouble. My micro is on, speaking exercises work without problem from the beginning of the Spanish course, but I never get speaking exercises in Dutch course. I thought that speaking start later in the other course, but my friend told me, that she is already doing the speaking exercises. Any ideas what could I do?

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 467

You can turn the speaking exercises back on by going to your settings (top right corner of the screen).

5ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ElishevaGo1 8 7

Thanks :) i must have skipped it somehow...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ducics95 12 12 12 11 11 11

Im not seeing the option :S My mic is on

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Eric489305 2

Hi Luis how are you? I have speaking exercises on and it still doesnt bring up any speaking exercised. My phones mic is turned on.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

WendyRiva 4

I figured it out. It will ask me to speak and use microphone only through the app, but not when I'm using the website when I'm accessing through safari. I don't know why that happens, but at least I can do the speaking exercises.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ElishevaGo1 8 7

i am having this issue as well. i think i may have told it that i don't want to use the microphone, but that was temporary, and i don't know how to get it back now...

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Eric489305 2

I have the same problem

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

43 "In the land of the blind, the one-eyed is king."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8413385>

Translation: En tierra de ciegos, el tuerto es rey.

21 year ago

Leave a new comment
7 Comments

Limbo63 16 9 7 6 5 3

In my experience the English version of this is always 'In the land of the blind, the one eyed man is king'. I've never heard or seen it without the 'man'

12ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

andrewpcrouch 13 7
First!

Never heard this saying before. Not sure what the message is. Even if you aren't perfect somewhere you are the best at something?

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gisanttos 9 6 4 2
Yes, first

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

LoukianosP 8 5

I wouldn't say this phrase is about pointing out your strong skills. It is rather a "pat on the back" or a reminder that even if you are not good at something, you are not the worst at it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jfaust 15 9 7 3 2

I have reported this particular error at least half a dozen times. PLEASE FIX THIS QUESTION. There are no correct answers.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

young2000 10
the third answer is correct but not accepted as valid...why

-2ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Pigslew 23 23
Must be now. I omitted it and was marked wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

44 What's the difference between "rein" and "herein", "raus" and "heraus"?
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/11619891>

Olja. 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 19 516

Could you please explain it, in which cases do I need to use "rein" and in which ones - "herein"? The same with "(he)raus" :) Vielen Dank im Voraus.

Give Lingot
81 year ago

Leave a new comment
19 Comments

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 656

"hin" means away from the speaker towards some other place.

"her" means towards the speaker.

So "hinein" and "hinaus" means away from the speaker and towards the inside/outside.

And "herein" and "heraus" means towards the speaker and towards the inside/outside.

Imagine that you are inside a house. Someone knocks on the door. You say, "Komm herein!" (her = to me, -ein = towards the inside). After a while, your guest leaves. Er geht hinaus. (hin = away from you, -aus = towards the outside)

Now imagine that you are waiting outside the a hospital. Your friends has to go inside. "Er geht hinein." (hin = away from you; -ein = towards the inside.) After a while, he comes back out again. "Er kommt wieder heraus." (her = towards you; -aus = towards the outside)

"rein" and "raus" are colloquial abbreviations. They are originally from "herein" and "heraus" but can also be used in the sense of "hinein" and "hinaus". So you could invite your guest with "Komm rein!" and send them back out with "geh bitte wieder raus".

So "rein" has the same meaning as either "herein" or "hinein", and "raus" has the same meaning as either "heraus" or "hinaus".

(There are also forms 'nein and 'naus but they are dialectal/regional.)

44ReplyGive Lingot23•1 year ago

biertopf 19 2

Yep, Bavaria says: nei, nauf.

For the words hinauf and herauf (up) the hin-/her- thing is the same as mentioned by mizinamo (short/colloquial: rauf; Bavarian also knows "nauf").

5ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Olja. 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 19 516
Vielen Dank!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 656
And also runter for herunter, hinunter.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Olja. 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 19 516
Oh, was fuer eine grossartige Erklaerung! Vielen Dank fuer deine Hilfe!!! 5 Lingots. Viel Glueck! :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Guend1 18 299
V-ielen Dank

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

OscarRascn 16 11 116
That's a great answer! Thank you so much for that amazing explanation.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

Adler2302 20 284
If a child is playing in the backyard outside of the house, then his parents called him to go inside. will it be 'hinein' or 'herein'? (My best guess is 'herein') Das Kind will herein gehen

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 656
Where are the parents?

If they are inside the house, then the child has to come "inside, towards them" (herein).

If they are outside the house as well, then the child has to go "inside, away from them" (hinein).

In practice, the parents would probably simply use rein, though, which (at least where I'm from) is the same for either case -- and then Komm rein! or Geh rein!, as appropriate, depending on whether the child is to approach the parents (come) or move away from the parents (go) in order to enter the house.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

northernguy 25 22 14 1272
mizinamo

Seems like it is not that simple.

From Reverso:

heraus da! inf get or come out of there!
It seems to me that using heraus in the imperative replaces the direction of movement relative to the speaker. Instead it is the direction of movement relative to the speakers intentions.

Duo says that the following is correct.

Heraus aus meinem Haus! = Get out of my house!

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 656

I would interpret both of those as somebody (improperly) generalising the double-meaning "raus" back to the full form "heraus"; using "heraus" for "towards the outside and away from me" sounds wrong.

Like somebody trying to sound educated by using the full version of the word rather than the colloquial shortened version, and ending up sounding uneducated because they picked the wrong full version.

YMMV.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

northernguy 25 22 14 1272

By both of those, do you mean both Reverso and Duo are wrong?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 656

Yes, that's right.

Duo is occasionally overly generous in what it accepts.... perhaps after the hundredth person has reported something as correct that is not blatantly wrong, just kind of wrong, it may be accepted just to get people to stop reporting it.

Though come to think of it, both Reverso and Duo use "get" here rather than "go", which I suppose might be more a synonym of "come" here, i.e.- implying movement towards the speaker.

And if the speaker is outside of the house as well, then "heraus" is fine.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

northernguy 25 22 14 1272

Thx.

1Give Lingot•5 months ago

arnodunstatter 14

Would you mind explaining "woher" and "wohin" in this same context? Is there a way for me to generalize the understanding of the implied direction of "her" and "hin" in all these cases or must I simply remember the words for how they're used?

In my mind "hin" is consistent both in "wohin", as well as in "hinaus" and "hinein", because in either usage one is either asking about a destination or commanding/requesting a destination to go to, and in both cases the destination is away from the speaker.

My confusion comes from "her" being used to ask about origin but also to command/request one to come towards the speaker. For example, "woher" is used as "where from", implying a question about origin, while "Kommst du herein" is used as a command to say "Come (to the) inside". So in the first case the request for information is directed towards a place away from the speaker (though the movement was towards the speaker), while in the second case the command/request is to come to the speaker.

I hope my question isn't too complicated.

Thanks for any explanation you may offer.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 656

Perhaps it would help to consider "Woher kommst du?" as something like "(Von) wo kommst du her?", i.e. "from which place is that that you come towards me?" -- which emphasises the common ground of "her = towards the speaker".

To me at least, it feels fairly consistent; hin is always about "away from the speaker", her always about "towards the speaker".

The confusing bit might arise because "woher, wohin" don't ask about the same point of the journey: one asks about the origin, the other about the destination.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Anna675390 19 7 6 2 95

Woher means where from and wohin means where to. Woher would be used more with where are you from (to the speaker) and wohin would be used with where are you going (away from the speaker).

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

arnodunstatter 14

yeah, i understand that. Did you read the full question?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Anna675390 19 7 6 2 95

The request for information was in fact away from the speaker, but who the question was implied for was not moving away from the speaker, because they were moving from that place towards the speaker like mizinamo explained.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

45 What is the US college course equivalent of finishing Duolingo Spanish tree?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4771923>

rachelbeck1 16 4 2

Hello - can anyone give a general idea of what level college course (100-level, 200-level, etc.) is equivalent with finishing the Duolingo Spanish tree? I am in a college program the requires me to complete a language test that is equivalent to a Spanish 203 course in order to get my degree. Does anyone think this Duolingo program would sufficiently prepare me for that test? More specifically, where does Duolingo put me as far as course equivalency? Would finishing the tree put me at a 100 level (first year) or a 200 level (second year)? Sorry if this is worded very badly, I'm not sure how to express the question very well!

Give Lingot2

62 years ago

Leave a new comment
16 Comments

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

Hmm, there really is no official consensus. You can take this Duolingo study with a grain of salt, but other than that, it's purely opinion down below.

Duolingo may be around the 100 level in regards to college classes. Not entirely sure. People usually tout it as being better than any class they took, so it may empower you more than you think.

In terms of CEFR, if you complete the tree and use other resources, you can expect a B1 or low B2 in writing/reading, and a high A2 or low B1 in speaking/listening.

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rachelbeck1 16 4 2

That study is very interesting. I'm thinking that it might place me around the end of the 1st year, maybe slightly into the second year. Luckily I had a great high school teacher (years ago) who drilled in much of the basics, which may or may not make me a different case than other learners. Thanks for your input!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

Then it sounds like you are set. :) You're welcome!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

michalhron 21 13 12 287

link go the study appears to be dead. Can you provide an updated one?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

SamanthaWatson 22 21 20 20 15 11

Everything covered in high school Spanish (1 through 4) is covered by the tree. If Duolingo had existed when I took the placement test in freshman orientation, I probably would have placed into college Spanish 4 instead of 3 (my school only required 6 credit hours so I still tested out of the foreign language requirement). The placement test we took seemed to focus on verb conjugations.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rachelbeck1 16 4 2

Ok, thank you. That makes sense, that it might push you to the end of the first "year" and maybe into the beginning of the second.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

superdaisy 23 15 45

Reading and discussing novels was a major part of my senior level Spanish class in high school, and my college friends who took language classes talked about their reading list and discussion classes as well. Are we anomalies and most language classes mostly just press pure grammar and translation?

Or is it just that the placement tests do a poor job of assessing your ability to read and discuss literature, or hold a conversation?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BobbieL 24 8 2

You probably had a better high school Spanish class than many of us. I got through 4 years of high school French and a semester of intensive French for reading without ever actually reaching the point where I could have had much hope of reading a novel.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rachelbeck1 16 4 2

I'm not really sure what you mean by your comment...my test is not so much a "placement" test, but I have to translate a document in Spanish that would be around the 200 level. This test isn't distributed by the Spanish department, but it my own department-specific test. So mine is a little more tailored to my degree and not necessarily to placing me in a Spanish language program.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

superdaisy 23 15 45

I was thinking more broadly than your situation: I don't think Duolingo could replace much of what is taught in a college course because I thought academic discussion was a large part of the curriculum. But in terms of placement tests, I suppose "how much will Duo help me" is a totally valid question. Still, my answer wasn't directly applicable to you.

In any case, if your test is specific to translation of an article, I'd assume that the degree that Duo helps really depends on how much you use the Immersion feature! Will the test also assess your grasp of field-specific terminology? Have you been able to find Immersion topics specific to your field (even if they're the watered-down wikipedia versions)?

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

rachelbeck1 16 4 2

Ah, okay, I understand your comment now. Previously I have taken American Sign Language courses in college and it seemed that the further on you get in the language the more discussion there is in the classroom surrounding the language itself, the culture surrounding it, etc. For me, at least, the first year or so was more focused on rote memorization of grammar and vocabulary than it was on higher-level discussion of the language as a whole.

THANK YOU for recommending the "Immersion" tab! I had not explored that before, and it will help immensely with my translation skills! I think just getting familiar with certain specific vocabulary and even the ways in which my field is talked about helps so much. Hooray!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mebestia 9 6 5

In college, we were taught words and sentence structures (and some characters, because I took Japanese), and then tested on them. That was about it. We absolutely could memorise it all before the tests, and pass without learning the language. It was an accreditation checkbox the school needed filled, and everyone was expected to pass.

Some languages had a 300- or 400-level "conversation" class that sounded to me like paying tuition for a few hours of practice, but I never took one. Maybe that's more like what you're thinking of. I never understood how we were meant to get from the 200-level, still pretty basic material, to being close enough to fluent to start those classes. Anyway, only the three 100-level classes were required for graduation. I don't believe you could major in linguistics or any specific language there.

Most schools are probably in between yours and mine. Yours sounds much more in-depth than I've heard of, and mine was blatantly dumbed down.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Aliciaftw 25

Can you get ahold of the 203 syllabus and then compare the class goals with Duolingo objectives?

For example:

<http://www.pdx.edu/challenge-program/sites/www.pdx.edu.challenge-program/files/SPANISH203FALL2013SYLLABUS.pdf>

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rachelbeck1 16 4 2

Just as an update to this thread - I was able to finish the duolingo tree and pass a translation test that served as an equivalency test to finishing a second year of college-level spanish courses. Mileage may vary, obviously.

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

SusannaEDavis420 25 136

Where I went to college it would contain at least as much material as the end of the second year, possibly farther. There may not be as much vocabulary, discussion or conversation, but the grammatical rules are here. Just keep adding more of those on your own and practice other places, too!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

46 Which languages are the most popular on Duolingo? Find out here.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/15416103>

germanwannabee 25 15 11 6 4

I stumbled across this neat article about duolingo.

<http://qz.com/677833/the-languages-the-world-is-trying-to-learn-according-to-duolingo/>

These are the top languages in every country

These are the second most popular languages in every country

EDIT: here's a better link.

<http://making.duolingo.com/which-countries-study-which-languages-and-what-can-we-learn-from-it>

Give Lingot
2610 months ago

Leave a new comment
25 Comments

germanwannabee 25 15 11 6 4
Notice that the most popular language in Sweden is... wait for it... Swedish!

18ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Windrammer 14 9 8 7 3 3
Due to the immigrants. I find it funny that the colour is almost black.

0ReplyGive Lingot6•10 months ago

CodyORB 22 11 2 2 2
Also because there aren't any courses for Swedish speakers.

3ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 1
btw it says in the article that Italian and Turkish are most popular in 1 country each, but I don't see those on the map?

9ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

billlub 14 5 2 2 4 29
yes, curious about the same thing

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

vytah 13 13 12 12 12 11 10 10 9 3 5 72
You should have better linked to the original article on the official Duolingo blog:
<http://making.duolingo.com/which-countries-study-which-languages-and-what-can-we-learn-from-it>

It's also more comprehensive.

8ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

germanwannabee 25 15 11 6 4
Wow thanks, I do like that post a whole lot better, I'll edit it in.

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 1 nice to see that even North Korea uses duolingo lol

7ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

CodyORB 22 11 2 2 2
Cuba too

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 1
well Cuba isn't even nearly as "closed" as N Korea

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

CodyORB 22 11 2 2 2
True, but Wi-Fi is also banned in Cuba along with N Korea.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 1
so how are they using duolingo then

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

CodyORB 22 11 2 2 2
I don't know. I did notice that in the second map North Korea is blocked out completely.

0Give Lingot•10 months ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 1
well it's not banned, just few people have access to it

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Aistobe 25 23 18 16 6 4 2 1
Nice find!

5ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

BerryParfait 12 10 5 4
I'm happy to see so many others eager to learn French

4ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Why2. 12 3 3 2 2
Awesome! Didn't know so many people wanted to learn English. It's also weird that most people in Sweden are learning Swedish.

3ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

bibliophage69 22 22 19 17 12 12 10 6 6 6 5 5 4 4 3 3 2 2 503

Sweden has a large population of immigrants and refugees. As of 2010 over 14 percent of the population was foreign born. I'd guess it's closer to 16 percent now with the ongoing Syrian and north African refugee crisis.

5ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 2 1

so do you think that there are more immigrants learning Swedish than Swedes learning a foreign language?

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

germanwannabee 25 15 11 6 4

I guess so.

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

DrSwordopolis 22 22 19 16 11 10 8 6 5 4 4 3 2 2

Swedes learning Spanish from English, anyways.

"more immigrants learning Swedish than Swedes learning any single foreign language"

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

brittalexism 14 12 12 11 7 6 5 5 3 2 2

I've never noticed this before, but it really looks like there are only two continents. Iceland is just kind of hanging out in the middle ;) however, this is a cool graphic, but I don't find it so surprising!

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

superjessem 11

It looks interesting. The United States is learning Spanish, and Mexico is learning English. Hrm, gonna have to think about that one... XD

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

PabloPerez456 13 11 11 11 8 6 4 1

Well... Spanish is a great "platform" language to learn the other romances (french, italian, portuguese, romanian) cause it is quite phonetical, you actually say what you write straight with rare exceptions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

CosmoKaiza 17 11 9 8 5 2

I think it is quite surprising to see my home country (Tunisia) with German being the most popular language after English. I would have assume that it would have been Italian, but no German... Maybe because of the Tourism in Tunisia that requires now to speak German. Also I remember my cousins telling me that the youth in tunisia is choosing German over Italian in school

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

47 "An apple a day keeps the doctor away."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1412811>

Translation: A diario una manzana es cosa sana.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

61 Comments

jimlomma 14

En español creo que hay un dicho relativo a las manzanas que dice: "Una manzana al día salud y alegría"

30ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

andrea.car189320 9 6 4

Hay ocasiones en que un modismo puede tener dos o más equivalentes. En este caso las traducciones 'La mejor medicina es la buena comida' o 'Una manzana al día es salud y alegría' debería considerarse también como acertadas.

16ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JoakoXD 11 8

En realidad esta oración puede escribirse de la forma: Una manzana al día mantiene alejado al médico. Es decir no necesariamente se debe usar la palabra "lejos".

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JhonGonzal6 11

Estoy de acuerdo

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ianpocks 7 4 3

Como yo lo hice pero no lo dio por bueno....

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

evelyntcm 9

de acuerdo, esta correcto gramaticalmente

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Anmat 11

De acuerdo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ariadne27 12 5 4

Yo escribi Una manzana al dia te aleja del doctor. Es lo que decimos aca en mi region. Me lo calificaron como mal. :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Recuerdo un personaje animado antiguo, Juanito Manzana. Él decía, "Una manzana diaria, mantiene a la gente sana".

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Fdrik 20

En mi casa siempre se ha dicho "Una manzana a diario hace al medico innecesario", pero no me la ha aceptado. Es un ejercicio de adivinar...

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PabloJara3 11 5 3 2

Yo pense que era un modismo para "Mejor prevenir que curar" lo interpreto de esa manera. Alguien mas?

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BoniekBerd 19

En realidad ese es el significado

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

javipizarro 15 14

Yo también puse "Más vale prevenir que curar" y no me la han dado por buena. Nunca había oído un dicho sobre médicos y manzanas diarias.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SebastianA823724 14 10

Esta duda surgio hace un tiempo en este foro

<http://forum.wordreference.com/showthread.php?t=90792&highlight=manzana+al+dia>

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rozzanna 13 5

mantiene alejado al doctor es lo mismo. Debería de ser válida

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ErnestoSin 10 7

Hay una que le va muy bien que dice: Di quieres una vida sana, come diario una manzana.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JorgeDaz8 16

En México decimos "Una manzana por la mañana es una cosa muy sana"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ErierdD. 16

Yo la conocía como "Una manzana al día, salud toda la vida"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Engelberth94 16 4 3

jajaj en mi vida nunca había escuchado esta frase

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ErickAngel1 13

Yo tampoco, yo puse q es mejor prevenir q curar

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

andre_paez19 11 10 2 2

En Ecuador decimos: "Una cebolla al día, el resfrío alejaría"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

evc300 8

Tampoco la conocía, keeps no es guardar? Yo puse, " una manzana al dia guarda el doctor para el camino." Nada queee veeer!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FredyGarci4 15

El verbo to keep puede considerarse como guardar, pero aca el verbo en conjunto es -- keep away -- que significa alejar. Los verbos de dos palabras o phrasal verbs son clave en el estudio del ingles, y mas este en especifico que es muy usado para alertar de algun peligro.

Tambien veo que tradujo away como camino, lo cual tambien es erroneo.

(Nota: Aun no descubro como poner tildes desde la app)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

umberto13 25

El termino, es saludable, es mas apropiado.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

marialaura163 7

Coloque: una manzana al dia mantiene alejado al medico y salio erroneo porque es: una mansana al dia mantiene lejos el medico. No es lo mismo?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrailinaDo 6

los dichos estan bien para mi , pero este ejercicios es de adivinar, porque no todos tienen informacion y son nuevos para mi quiza me he saltado un paso no sé , si me ayudan gracias

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LisbethGue 7

"Una manzana al dia te mantiene sano" no sirve?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

carmorem93 8

Coloque una manzana al dia te mantiene alejado del doctor y la califico negativa.. A mi me parece correcta

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ariel.herr1 13

Sí queremos aprender inglés, esta lección de modismos solo hay que memorizarla si acaso la usamos algún día Jajajaja

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KarlaRebecue 9 6

una manzana al día mantiene al doctor lejos.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AntonioCil1 10

una manzana al día mantiene alejado al doctor. también sería correcto

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

molymalik3 9

el modismo aqui es keeps the doctor away?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mmarquezp 12

Al día una manzana es cosa sana

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MarilynnHe 7

El dicho en español es: "Una manzana al día te aleja de la enfermería" Y obvio no me lo aceptó.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Henryrusin 15

mi respuesta es mas que correcta

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cic1618 12 3

EN ESPAÑOL EXISTE UN DICHO: UNA MANZANA AL DÍA ES FUENTE DE ENERGÍA, DEBERÁN CONSIDERARLO.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ValeeB.Tay 11 8

¿no serviría algo como "enfermo que come no muere"? Suele decirse eso en Chile y me sonó a eso :B

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Victor_GMC 6 6

Una manzana al día mantiene "alejado" al doctor. Por favor, acepten esa expresión que es la misma.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tantanysea

Toda la vida aca en México he escuchado "si quieres una vida sana, come diario una manzana" pero tampoco me la aceptó. La traducción que dan por buena no me gusta, el chiste es encontrar frases equivalentes, no traducirlas literal

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GracielaAcevedo 6

"una manzana a diario es saludable" tiene el mismo significado que "es cosa sana"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MauricioPantoja 7 6

la traduccion de la oracion no es completa

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

baezmbaezm 12 11

una manzana al día mantiene "alejado" al doctor es incorrecta. ¿Qué diferencia hay entre alejado y lejos?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BoniekBerd 19

Es más vale prevenir que curar

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Astudillo.Jose 9 4

Si pero no me la da por valida :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

juan.ferreras 12 6

"Una manzana al día mantiene al doctor en la lejanía" es la forma con la que conocía yo el dicho

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NestorNori1 13 11 11 3

una manzana a diario mantiene alejado al medico..también es una buena traduccion

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EDIXONJN 18 11

una manzana al día mantiene lejos al doctor ... es lo mas entendible

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

XxXtremerider 12

Una manzana diaria es saludable

porque me la puso mal

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

napxos 12 8 5

"Más vale prevenir que curar" ese es el modismo, lo otro es traducir que no sirve para nada.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iMoogle 9

Otra traduccion valida es "Una manzana al dia, aleja al medico de tu vida"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jorsa76 10 6

La manzana limpia el diente y sana el vientre

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KARLOS2289 13 7 2

UNA MANZANA AL DIA ALEJA AL DOCTOR

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sersrusa 13 8 3 2

una manzana al dia da energia asi lo decimos aqui !!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mirage_9 19 18 14 9 7 3

Generalmente los dichos y refranes, al menos en español, riman, por consiguiente yo lo recordaba como "Una manzana al día te aleja de la enfermería"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

marielabriceo 9

Yo, escribi la traducción correcta, y me la calificó incorrecta. Me confunde, este resultado.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

marielabriceo 9

mi traduccion fue A diario una manzana, es una cosa sana. Y me ha calificado INCORRECTA, ello, me confunde. Por favor expliqueme si hay un error

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

NancyLaraZ 9 1

una manzana al dia es conducta sana

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

hugodiazroa 12 7 3

En español no funciona

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

anihuva 11 11 6 6 3 3

O sea esta frase es más utilizada por los doctores? Porque bueno... no creo utilizarla a diario. Acaso tiene algún uso además de la salud??

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JuanSantoT 13

"una vez al año no hace daño" es lo más parecido que se ocurre; pero no le ha gustado.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LSEL 25 6

el refrán o dicho, se refiere al beneficio que el ingerir una manzana al día causa en la salud, que no se relaciona en nada con el hecho de hacer algo allá cada cuando y no causar daño alguno.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

48 "Too many cooks spoil the broth. "

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1297684>

Translation: Muito cacique para pouco índio.

33 years ago

Leave a new comment

232 Comments

Davitablete 15

É importante também sabermos o significado da expressão ao pé da letra, para entendermos como os estrangeiros pensam.

Ao pé da letra: "muitos cozinheiros estragam o caldo."

374ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sol.olivei1 9 4

É fogo; eu errei porque usei caldo (que é a tradução mais literal) ao invés de sopa. Deviam aceitar a resposta

60ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SabrinaGOVP 13

E eu errei por causa desse nosso maldito "PRA". Sempre esqueço que o Duolingo não aceita PRA, tem que ser sempre PARA.... rrsrrsrrs.....

56ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kaio.bruno1 9 6

O meu aceitou pra

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

SabrinaGOVP 13

Que bom, Kaio. Então eles atualizaram a base de dados deles. Pois não existe a palavra PRA na norma culta, só na forma coloquial, no português falado. Abraços, bons estudos.

3ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

DeiziMeneghini 10 7

Eu escrevi "muitos cozinheiros estragam o caldo.", e ficou certo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

LorraineMariette 11

tem outra expressão em português também, só não lembro direito como é, mas usam colher ao invés, de cozinheiro rs! Eu pensei na hora isso, minha tia que costumava dizer que muita "mão" mexendo na comida desanda a receita! rs

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

emi171018 6

ok.

:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Afonsohb 11 10 6 5 5

Verdade

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago
[+] 3 hidden comments

romullolameck 16 12 12 11 11 10 7 6 5 2 2

Também deveria aceitar: Muito cacique PRA pouco índio. A maioria das pessoas fala assim.

86ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Andrericardoo 13 3

Cara tu já é nível 10 heua e ainda cai nesses erros, o PARA é padrão do duolingo desde o começo do curso

28ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Patymorena7 10 8

engraçado que nas dicas e observações, está descrito que nessa lição com exclusividade o uso do PRA, esta autorizado.

5ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Arrojada 12

Concordo, além de que faz parte da língua portuguesa a forma abreviada "pra"

21ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BrisaBroseghini 7

Não existe "pra" na Língua Portuguesa. Esse termo é uma gíria.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JakelineT 8

Pq pra é meio que giria

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FelipeFLSantos 17

Não existe esta palavra na língua portuguesa.

-40ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

RenieSique 11 5

Existe algo chamado contração. No caso contração da preposição "para" + artigo "a".

33ReplyGive Lingot4•2 years ago

thbmatrix 13 10 6 6 5

A única "contração" de "para + a" que conheço é à (a com crase). Desconheço que "pra" seja usado dessa forma. Pra é um uso coloquial, mas é tão comum na FALA que eu não veria problema em aceitar como correto.

27ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HelmarRibeiro 13 12

exatamente, usamos de maneira tão comum que acabamos confundindo as coisas. A palavra é "para" é o certo ortograficamente, o duolingo nos ensina a escrever também. Na fala é outra estória, se der "pra" entender, tranquilo!

7Give Lingot•1 year ago

hugoxrosa 11 11 11 11 7

Ótima oportunidade para aprender a escrever corretamente. Essas contrações e gírias não ocorrem em todo o país. Já o idioma escrito sim.

1Give Lingot•10 months ago

chrisparkerrr 11 6 4 2

Perdi a lição no último exercício por causa disso, AAAAAAAA

20ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lininhaave 8

"Tamo" junto! Hahahaha

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lininhaave 8

Mas na verdade eu errei porque usei "caldo" ao invés de "sopa"

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gabriel.je5 8

"Errei" na mesma situação, sacanagem.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gi-Neri 14 9 6 5 2

"PRA" deveria sim ser aceito nesta unidade em específico, porque o próprio site diz isso:

"Obs: na unidade de Expressões e Ditados aceitamos também algumas formas de linguagem informal, como "pra", por exemplo. (Mas isto não se aplica ao restante do curso)"

Esta frase aparece no início da unidade para quem utiliza o Duolingo via computador =) Você pode reivindicar isso ao site =)

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hugoxrosa 11 11 11 11 7

Aí sim, faz sentido... usar gíria só neste módulo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Suzane.Ashimi 13 6

Respondi assim e foi considerado errado. Que raiva!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

katiapolic 6

Muito cacique para pouco índio

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

marcelofandrade 13 9 9 7 5

Atualmente é dito que esta lição de expressões aceita gírias e abreviações coloquiais como "pra". Mas só aqui.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JessicaLai14 11

Coloquei isso e aceitou.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lekavc 14 9

Aceitou

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElliesJ 10

eu escrevi "pra pouco índio" e eles aceitaram hahahahaha

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nilza2016 19

Nessas expressões vale tudo, porque "pouco índio," está literalmente errado, pois se fosse um índio, tudo bem, mas pouco está faltando o S. Estas expressões certamente foram tiradas quase todas do nosso português, será que estou enganada!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

andressavs 10 2 2

Errei por conta disso af

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DanielYabu 18 11

pois é... eu pus TEM muito cacique para pouco índio e errei...

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dan_el3 12

Too many cooks spoil the broth/stew.

Significado: Muitas pessoas tentando controlar algo ou fazer a mesma parte do trabalho simplesmente o estraga.

Exemplos de uso:

Let's decide who is in charge around here. Too many cooks spoil the stew. (Vamos decidir quem está no comando por aqui. Muitos cozinheiros estragam a sopa.)

Everyone is giving orders, but no one is following them! Too many cooks spoil the broth. (Todo mundo está dando ordens, mas ninguém está seguindo-as! Muitos cozinheiros estragam a sopa.)

Resposta: Cozinheiros demais estragam a sopa./ Muitos cozinheiros estragam a sopa. (ou "caldo" só que o Duolingo não está aceitando, ainda)

Fonte: <http://idioms.thefreedictionary.com/Too+Many+Cooks+Spoil+the+Broth>

31ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Eloisa_Valadares 12 12

“Muita gente tentando fazer a mesma coisa.”

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hugoxrosa 11 11 11 11 7

Agora aceita.

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ZUMBA2013 13 7

Calma, amigos! Expressões idiomáticas causam , às vezes, confusão. Em pouco tempo, adaptar-nos-emos a tais entraves linguísticos. Imaginem um "english speaker" diante da expressão ESTOU ARREBENTANDO A BOCA DO BALÃO ! Para ele entender que tal idiomatismo significa ESTAR SE DANDO BEM , GANHANDO UMA PARTIDA DE FUTEBOL , ESTAR NAMORANDO MUITO etc terá de QUEIMAR A MUFA... Três Esses pata todos : SAÚDE, SUCESSO e SOSSEGO .

15ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EraldoCarv 25 12 7 6 45

Great. = Ditado não tem tradução, tem significado. Duolingo nos força a estudar. Isso é muito bom. VEJAM O ISSO OU ISTO, que o DUOLINGO tanto questiona. = (Acho que é isso) Pois se refere a algo que já foi mencionado.- Outra coisa= Achei que POIS é uma palavra atrativa, então usei PRÓCLISE . Vejam a regra= Quando houver uma palavra atrativa antes do verbo, o uso da próclise é obrigatório.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SabrinaGOVP 13

Como o POIS é atrativo para próclise? Eu decorei uma regrinha para próclise, é a "NARIS-D". N de negativas, A de advérbios, R de relativas, I de indefinidos, S de sujeitos pronomes pessoais do caso reto e de subordinadas, e D de demonstrativos. O pois entra onde? Nas subordinadas?

Subordinadas: (mas, embora, conforme, a medida que.... etc) No mais, concordo com sua opinião. Ditado não tem tradução, tem significado. Obrigada!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EraldoCarv 25 12 7 6 45

Realmente é tudo muito difícil. Talvez o melhor fosse aprendermos a língua pelo uso corriqueiro e nos preocupássemos com as regras num segundo estágio. Há vários instrutores e professores, que nos aconselham a aprender e praticar como as crianças fazem. O assunto é , no entanto,muito polêmico.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EraldoCarv 25 12 7 6 45

Actually all of this is very difficult. Perhaps it should be better if we learned the language through the day by day use of it and get concerned with the rules in a second level. There are lots of tutors and teachers that advice us to practice the language the same way children do. The issue is, otherwise, too complex and controversial. Adults use to stay learning a language for many years, while children use to dominate it in one up to three years.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EraldoCarv 25 12 7 6 45

I invite all of us to try to express our thoughts in English, even if we certainly make a lot of mistakes.

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

SabrinaGOVP 13

I agree. It's very difficult to think in English since we are all literate in Portuguese, but we must try. Thanks for the advice!

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

SabrinaGOVP 13

Sábia resposta.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aabgomez 6 5

Conheço esse ditado como "Cão com muitos donos passa fome". Não foi aceito... Alguém mais conhece dessa maneira?

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

camilamestre 8 6 5

É verdade, estava tentando me lembrar dessa expressão, acho que se muitas pessoas reportarem, eles começam a aceitar como correta tbm.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hugoxrosa 11 11 11 11 7

Eu conheço como "cão com dois donos morre de fome"

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

nilza2016 19

Morre de fome ou de obsidade.KKKKKKKKKKKKKK

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

theohgt 11 6 3

com o mouse em cima, broth = caldo... na tradução correta é sopa???

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Marttyns 15

meu caro, não pode ser traduzido, são expressões idiomáticas.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

biaarraz 12 6

Acredito que broth sirva para sopa, caldo, canja... Então não tem uma única tradução para nós.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

marygp8 25 25 21 14 14 13 4 386

pois é, broth, vem da palavra, " brodo" em Italiano que tb é igaul à caldo, sopa. Mas no Duolingo só se aceita "SOPA"

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 4 hidden comments

DanielKologeski 10

"Muito cacique para pouco índio" deu certo!

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

vivisaurus 17 15 13 9 7 5 4 1340

Sim, o sentido é parecido: gente demais mandando em um projeto dá bagunça e atrapalha os resultados. =)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GiovaneRibeiro 25 22 9 6

Tem um colchete a mais na frase.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

Reporte isso.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

luizvitorio 21 17 16 15 13 13 829
Já foi resolvido.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cinthiia_mc 21 17 16 15 14 9 3 595
Aqui continua aparecendo o colchete

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

luizvitorio 21 17 16 15 13 13 829
Pois é, agora apareceu.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Silva.Francisco 9
Não foi resolvido! Tive a resposta como errada por causa do colchete que não coloquei.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Silva.Francisco 9
Outra imbecilidade é colocar colocar cozinheiros/cozinheiras...

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

EridanGalvao 25 9
Eu achei que fosse: Panela que muitos mexem ou sai salgada ou sai sem sal.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

luankucko 17 11 8
O ditado que mais cabe para mim seria "cachorro com muito dono morre de fome"

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hugoxrosa 11 11 11 11 7
Concordo! "Muito cacique para pouco índio", me transmite outra ideia, de que só uma pessoa faz um trabalho enquanto o resto "assiste".

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

LillianMor4 9
Aqui se usa uma expressão com palavras não muito polidas... muito %$ pra pouca %#@&*

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

camilamestre 8 6 5
Pensei a mesma coisa! kkkk

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ambrosiora 10

A expressão: Já ouvi falar da expressão "muitos cozinheiros estragam a sopa". Eu não quis arriscar, mas acredito que é uma alternativa também

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

marygp8 25 25 21 14 14 13 4 386

com certeza, e o Duolingo aceita !

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EridanGalvao 25 9

Também pode ser: Panela em que muitos mexem, ou sai insossa ou sai salgada.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

joao.vsb 12 2

Estranhei a utilização do TOO e MANY logo no começo da frase sendo que ambos tem a mesma tradução. alguém sabe me dizer porque isso acontece?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vinidcali 13 11

Essas são duas palavras que têm muitos usos.

Nessa frase aqui, "too many" significa muito, demais, demasiado. "Many" é muitos, e o "too" não tem tradução nesse caso, ele está na frase para dar mais intensidade ao "many". Não é simplesmente muito, é demais, é mais do que precisava C:

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tcharllys 19

achei que aceitaria "muito pau pra pouca obra " . rs

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ZUMBA2013 13 7

Foi bom conhecer esta expressão idiomática.Podemos acrescentar ao nosso vocabulário a expressão "Muito cozinheiro pra pouca comida".

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

vivisaurus 17 15 13 9 7 5 4 1340

Na verdade, é mais próximo de "cozinheiros demais estragam o caldo/comida". =)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mestranda 11

broth em português é um tipo de sopa rala conhecida como caldo

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MANCE1 9

traduzi a frase como " COZINHEIRAS DE MAIS ESTRAGAM A SOPA" e foi recusada. Sendo que foi apontada como correta a resposta COZINHEIROS/COZINHEIRAS DE MAIS ESTRAGAM A SOPA. Não entendi por que minha resposta foi considerada errada, já que posso optar por cozinheiro ou cozinheira, acho que deveria ser considerada certa. Não entendi!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Parrudo123 15 2

Coloquei: "Muito chefe pra pouco índio." que é a forma que sempre ouvi a expressão e não foi aceito, acredito que deveria ser aceito dessa forma também.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

grazielle996535 6

Deveria valer: muito ajuda quem pouco atrapalha.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Baamonteiro 7 2

Continua a ser um problema não considerarem as expressões de Portugal "muita parra e pouca uva"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CarlosSara15 11

"Muito cacique para pouco índio." Esta expressão nem existe em Português de Portugal. O mais aproximado será: Muita parra e pouca uva.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

camaraoverde8 10 4 2

o mais aproximado em português de Portugal não seria "Muito ajuda quem não atrapalha"? porque segundo o que percebo da expressão, o problema de haver muita gente a fazer a mesma coisa, é que acaba por comprometer o resultado final: "Too many cooks spoil the broth".

muita parra para pouca uva = muita conversa para pouco resultado, não é?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

RabeloGabriela 16

Conheço um ditado que é bem parecido com o original em inglês: "Muita gente na cozinha ou sai cru ou sai queimado". Não ousei colocar para não perder pontinhos, mas vou mandar como sugestão para o Duolingo.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GlauCruz16 10

"Muita areia pro caminho" também tá certo?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

..BATMAN.. 16 12 2

Não. A ideia é de ter muita gente para mandar em um pequeno grupo.

Se eu fosse falar que você é muita areia para o meu caminhão, acredito que a melhor expressão seria:

You are way out of my league (Você está fora do meu alcance).

Mas existe outra expressão em inglês que traduzida literalmente não faz sentido: You are too much rich for my blood

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

uni77 11 6 5 5

tem uma outra expressao, usada no português de Portugal, que seria " muita parra para pouca uva" que significaria tanta folha para tao poucas uvas, ou seja tanta zaragata, tanta confusao, por causa de algo tao insignificante

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

almirlsa 25 212

Eu coloquei sem o colchete e o Duolingo não aceitou. Reportei o problema, pois não entendi qual a função desse colchete.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

vivisaurus 17 15 13 9 7 5 4 1340

é um erro de digitação deles. =|

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

afernandes2013 12 8

sopa não soup?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

neder 25 1

" cozinheiros/cozinheiras" significa o quê? Devemos colocar os dois? Se colocarmos um ou outro , ou ainda se consideramos apenas cozinheiros de maneira genérica está errado? Acredito que nem em inglês.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mitipr 8

Eu escrevi "cozinheiros demais estragam a sopa" e apareceu como solução correta "[Cozinheiros/Cozinheiras demais estragam a sopa.". Por favor, precisam revisar.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

IzabellyBatista 13 8 2

Escrevi a mesma coisa e disseram que estava errado. Eu escrevi: "Cozinheiros demais estragam a sopa."

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Moreda 25 16 44

Não entendi, a minha resposta considerada errada é igual a correta.....apenas faltou um "[" e também Cozinheiras escrevi com letra minúscula, ou seja escrevi: "Cozinheiros/cozinheiras demais estragam a sopa" será que foi esse o erro? Também não entendo por quê aquele "[" antes da frase, se não tem o outro depois.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mlu46cia 18 7 6

Cozinheiros (genérico) estragam a sopa,deveria ser aceito pelo menos para diminuir minha raiva

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

vradpol 14

Eu coloquei: Cozinheiras demais estragam a sopa. e apareceu resposta errada.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rafaelluz2 8 7

Eu use "pra" ao inves de "para" e eles nao aceitaram

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Marilia1999 9

deviam trocar a tradução que ta em broth já que se escrever caldo nao vai valer como resposta

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LeticiaFerr20 6

Primeiro eles dizem que é "muito cacique para pouco indio" dai depois eles pedem pra colocar em portugues essa frase e eu coloco o que eles tinham falado e eles dizem que é "cozinheiros demais estragam a sopa". Vai entender

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nairacandiago 16

Errei porque escrevi 'caldo' e não sopa. É possível??

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MauriZelin 11

Outra versão: "Cão que tem dois donos passa fome" (ou morre de fome). It's the same idea!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lady_Heavenhel 7 6

Errei por colocar cozido so invece de sopa, mas é assim que falamos aqui

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sanosuke_kursch 11

Cachorro de muitos donos morre de fome.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SabrinaGOVP 13

Maldito "PRA"!!!! Sempre esqueço que o Duolingo não aceita "PRA". Lá se foi um coração.....

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

4NDRE-FERREIRA 20 14 10 4 4 2

Por ventura alguém ja ouviu estes ditos em algum seriado ou filme? Se ja por favor me digam qual para eu assistir tbm .obrigado

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fsaraujo18 19 5 245

eu também errei porque coloquei caldo, ao invés de sopa. Deveria ser aceito caldo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Leonardo10X 5

Aff perdi todos os corações por causa do "pra", inútil :/ deveria aceitar

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RafaelBagdal 6

Haha errei porque coloquei "pra" e não "para" hahaha

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ttmedeiros 10 5

Poderiam traduzir para: "Cachorro com dois donos morre de fome"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vitoria_99 9 6 3

usei " muito cozinheiro pra caldo estragado" n deu :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Terrifyer 15

Coloquei "Cachorro com dois donos morre de fome" com receio de errar, mas deu certo. Ainda bem, já que a ideia da expressão é a mesma.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rafamachadao 17

Muito rei pra pouco trono. Não aceitou. =(hehehe

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pit.du 10

outro ditado brasileira que se encaixa aqui seria "panelas que muitos mexem, não toma tempero"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Julianoow 16 2

Aff, 30 lingots nessas lições. Acho que essa sessão merecia uma atenção especial.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vinidcali 13 11

As expressões em Português podem não ser conhecidas a todos, mas o objetivo do módulo é ensinar Inglês, não PT! E todas as expressões inglesas são perfeitas e muito utilizadas, te garanto C:

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DouglasWiliam 15 6

"Panelas que muitos bolem ou sai salgada ou sem sal" Já reporteí, para mim acho que serviria

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Wistter 19 17 1

'muita areia para o seu caminhãozinho'... kkk poderia ser aceita

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

beckout 11 3

Eu achei a tradução sem pé nem cabeça. O ditado que mais se aproxima da versão em inglês é: "Menos é mais" (muitos cozinheiros estragam o caldo). Dizer que é "muito cacique para pouco índio" não tem NADA a ver com o sentido da frase em inglês. Essa tradução está mais equivalente com: "Too many chiefs, not enough Indians". Fonte: <http://leitorcabuloso.com.br/2014/04/rapidinha-de-ingles-proverbios-e-ditados/>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ELIBETHINHA4850 25 25 23 327

Olá beckout, respondi com a frase: "Muitos cozinheiros estragam o caldo.", que foi aceita. Bons estudos. 07/08/2016

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

tharlessetti 22 12 11 6

acho que poderia aceitar também " É muito chefe pra pouco índio"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SousaGilton 12 11 10 2

Concordo com DouglasWiliam. Uma boa tradução seria algo como "Panela que muitos mexem ou sai insoça ou salgada."

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SousaGilton 12 11 10 2

Uma tradução melhor seria o ditado: Panela em que muitos mexem termina insossa ou salgada.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SantosRoni 9

Nesse caso não poderia ser " qualidade é melhor do que quantidade" ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MalGaiver 10 4 2

Existe um ditado antiquíssimo, meu avô dizia isso, que traduz perfeitamente essa frase: Panela que muito mexe acaba queimando a comida.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JuliaGusmao 14

Difícil

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MucioOliveira 13 6 5 4 2 2 2

Há um provérbio em Português brasileiro tradicional que deveria ser aceito, não como tradução mas como correspondente: Panela que muitos mexem desanda.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ThaseMorai 9 5

Devia aceitar "muitos cozinheiros desandam o caldo"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RobinsonGu15 11

Complicado essas traducoes

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

WilliamOliveir 20 16 9 9

Na minha regioao tem uma expressao que julguei correspondente.: "panela que muitos mexem quando não sai cru sai queimado". Mas acho que ninguem respondeu assim antes, acredito que o duolingo vai incluir esta resposta.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kamillagibran 13 6

Também existe "Muita galinha pra pouco ovo"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dyana534188 8

Eu não vejo sentido comparando um ditado com o outro. Me parece que são usados em situações bem diferentes!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

izadoraferreira 10

Saiu uma tradução errada para mim, "muito cacique para pouco índio"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DrikLeal 17

Uso mais "Cachorro de dois donos passa fome"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FernandoMa123 16 2

Muita parra para pouca uva, tem o mesmo significado em português continental. Deveria ter sido aceite

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aline.a.co 6

Muito cacique para pouco índio

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GabrielSan667194 13

Muito cacique para pouco índio, tão aceitando já, ;D

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Andrelima. 13 5 3

Achei difícil de acompanhar a pronuncia. Alguem ajuda?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

...Gandalf... 18 7

Aqui no condado nunca vi essa expressão :/

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AndersonJNE 13 10

muito gelo e pouco whisky!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Just_Amy 11 4

Devia aceitar 'Quem muito pede nada ganha'.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EneasGP 15

Acertei com: "Cachorro com muito dono morre de fome" rrsr

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JaelSoares 15 11 8 8 3

Que "tradução" horrível.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lucasfabrizzio 6

Agora está aceitando o "pra" rrsr

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NataliaMori 10 6

Traduzi para "cachorro com muito dono morre de fome" e o Duolingo aceitou. Acho que é o equivalente mais próximo que usamos no interior de SP..

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mary_Gaby2 7

Não entendi o significado dessa frase, tipo o que ela quis dizer em "Muito Cacique Para Pouco Índio"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RazAhlGhul 7

"É muita bandida pra um delegado só" vamo luxar vai ser melhor

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Nbusattofilho 7

Cachorro com muito dono, morre de fome, aceitou isso tambem

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Disdentation 8

Muitos cozinheiros estragam o caldo ficou mais plausível pra frase, entendo ter o mesmo sentido que "Muito Cacique para pouco índio."

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

EstevaoGauss 14 7 5 4

quem nunca ouviu essa expressão na vida? EU!!!! hahahahaa

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

FelipeDepi 19 15 7 2 37

Cozinheiros demais estragam a sopa é tipo muito cacique para pouco índio ou seja pessoas demais atrapalham ao invés de ajudar

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Jack_Sunderland 20 11 11 11

isso não faz sentido

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

PatyDea 9 3 2

Por que a tradução do too não foi aceita?

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Luana763589 8

Eu acho as expressões legais, mas se não tivesse a dica de tradução embaixo acho que não conseguiria

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

xagrot 12

tem nada a ver a tradução com a frase nem com o significado kkkkk mas ok

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Jeferson691756 11

Coloquei "Muito cacique pra pouco índio" e aceitou!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

HadamR.Lem 8

No meu também foi aceito o "pra" como correto

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

MarcosTorr593431 5

muita gente só atrapalha

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ViiiihhAs 6

Pq o (too) está como muitos? Se qnd falamos (i love you too) ele se refere a (também)?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

NunoMendes11 11

gosto da versão apresentada desconhecia mas acho que "pérolas para porcos" encaixa

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

RenanContente 13 8 8
Muita honestidade pra pouca Dilma

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

AndrLeonar1 6
Eu sempre escutei as pessoas da minha região falarem "muito cacique pra pouca tribo" ao invés de "pra pouco índio" - Usei dessa forma e me dei mal hahaha.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

_costa.alex 7
coloquei: muita areia pra o seu caminhão e não deu.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Joseli766176 11 7
Ditado popular que eu nunca ouvi

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

mariaalicecosta1 13
Esta expressão é Brasileira e não Portuguesa. Em Portugal diz-se Muita gente para mandar mas poucos para trabalhar.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

jeanmarques 12 5 3
Bem tupiniquim essa versão mesmo... Kkkk

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Cordeiro07 13 4 3
ficaria mais parecido com nossa cultura assim:"muita areia para seu caminhãozinho"

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Leandro86 11 4
Esse módulo me fez desanimar de continuar estudando hoje. haha

Amanhã eu continuo!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Bruna315884 8
Nunca ouvi esse lema aqui

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

solstabile 16 9 8 2

No Brasil temos dois ditados mais adequados: "muitos cozinheiros estragam a sopa" e "cozinheiro demais entorna o caldo".

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

solstabile 16 9 8 2

No Brasil temos dois ditados mais adequados: "muitos cozinheiros estragam a sopa" e "cozinheiro demais entorna o caldo".

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

RCunhaDaSi 25

de onde vem a expressão "muitos cozinheiros estragam a sopa"??

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

RafaelDdM 11 4 2 1

Essa expressão não é muito regional? Nunca ouvi ela antes.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

RogérioJor4 12 11 10 9 5

Isto é tão português do Brasil

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

TiagoDias20 8

O que saquei do Duolingo é que ele sabe que certas expressões que usamos aqui não existem lá fora, então ele pega um termo nosso e troca por um deles que tenham o mesmo significado, é isso? Por isso traduzir ao pé da letra sempre é divergente, porque eles não falam "muito cacique para pouco índio".

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

antoniocar797872 16 12

filho de muitos pais é órfão. Cachorro com muitos donos morrem de fome

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

RianRichard 14 9

Acho q a melhor definição para essa frase seria: "Muito ajuda quem não atrapalha" Ou não?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

ggrauna 14 4

na cultura brasileira, chefe e cacique significam a mesma coisa

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

RCunhaDaSi 25

mas no significado das expressões o sentido dos ditados são diferentes rsrsrs exemplo "muitos cozinheiros estragam a sopa" muita gente altera o resultado de forma negativa, observação mesmo que sejam diga-mos pessoas de boa qualificação, "muito cacique para pouco índio" pouca gente para muito trabalho observação pouca gente de boa qualificação para muito trabalho.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

DiogoLibana 11 9 8

"panela que muitos mexem ou sai cru ou sai queimado" Seria o melhor ditado em comparação com o original.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

RCunhaDaSi 25

a expressão "muita areia para pouco caminhão" também seria valida e acho que o duoligo aceite mas não é uma expressão estrangeira é uma expressão brasileira assim eu acho

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Suifer 11

Não seria válida, a frase "muita areia para pouco caminhão" é o contrário da frase "muito cacique pra pouco índio". Veja bem, "Muito cacique pra pouco índio" quer dizer que tem muita gente responsável por pouco serviço. Enquanto "muita areia pra pouco caminhão" quer dizer que tem muito serviço pra pouca gente. Entendeu a diferença?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

RCunhaDaSi 25

exatamente, você esta certo, o significado das frases são diferentes, eu não tinha pensado, e na tradução do duolingo muitos cozinheiros estragam a sopa é correto, mas eu me pergunto em qual das duas frases ela teria o mesmo significado, muito serviço para pouco empregado ou muito empregado para pouco serviço? ou seria outro significado?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Suifer 11

Eu acho que "muitos cozinheiros estragam a sopa" quer dizer que é muito empregado pra pouco serviço, indicando que o ideal é reduzir a quantidade de "cozinheiros" para que a "sopa" dê certo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

RCunhaDaSi 25

hahaha nesse caso seria reduzir por que seria por mal resultado e na outra expressão que também indica "reduzir" mas em outro termo "reduzir" por causa da quantidade e não por causa da qualidade.é meu ponto de vista.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Rodrigo_bass 21 7 6 53

Existe uma regra especifica para usar o ' TOO' no começo da frase ???

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

uni77 11 6 5 5

"Muita parra para pouca uva", traducao do português de Portugal :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

uni77 11 6 5 5

outra traducao possivel, do português de Portugal , seria: " muita parra para pouca uva"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

AdrianaBrisi 11 6 2

A frase mais conhecida aqui é: muito chefe para pouco índio.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Eu.Alex 13 12 2

tradução estranha para o português do Brasil mas a nossa administração brasileira é assim mesmo...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

geovaland 8 2

nem em português eu entendo o real significado dessa frase

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Suifer 11

É algo tipo, muita gente pra fazer pouca coisa. Por exemplo, por 3 pessoas pra lavar só 1 prato ao mesmo tempo.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

baladarlei 18 16 10 5

This is a puzzle?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

baladarlei 18 16 10 5

Assim fica dificil. Se não conhecemos a frase em sentido figurado, vamos traduzir ao pé da letra.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

DiegoDadiD 12 8 8 3 2

eu nunca ouvi essa expressão me ajud a socorr

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 days ago

AlinnePenedo 7

Uso sempre esta frase no trabalho kkk

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 days ago

carolhenriquez 7

MUITO CACIQUE PARA POUCO ÍNDIO???? JESUS

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mr.Clint 12

Cacique pra pouco indio? Nada a haver! Quem é que fez a tradução desse exercicio?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

vivisaurus 17 15 13 9 7 5 4 1340

Esta é a unidade de expressões. Eles tentam aproximar as expressões idiomáticas do inglês à expressões existentes em português... nesta unidade serão raras as traduções ao pé da letra. =)

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

edulgcamargo 12 12 5 1

Exatanente!;-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ruca2017 12 12 11 3 63

Com muitos cozinheiros, queima-se a comida, ou Com muitos cozinheiros, a sopa fica salgada- são expressões portuguesas bem mais próximas.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

Kisly 14 6 3

A undidade se refere à expressões idiomáticas, ou seja, nada ao pé da letra

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mestranda 11

respondi certo e deu como errado

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ZUMBA2013 13 7

Pessoal do Duolingo, que tal marcarmos uma reunião (daqui a 6 meses) em que o idioma oficial seja o "Inglês"? amadureçam essa ideia! Seria um ótimo treinamento...

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TonyEduardoSouza 11

está com problemas ainda... [

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ErikaMSouza 10

Coloquei: "Muitos cozinheiros estragam o caldo" e consideraram minha resposta errada. =(como faço para entrar com recurso =)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ce.guerreiro 11

Coloquei só cozinheirOs e deu errado! Que porcaria essa polícia feminista e politicamente correta! Vão procurar algo útil pra fazer! Bando de inúteis!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RCunhaDaSi 25

hahahahaha

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Rafaelluz2 8 7

Eu use "pra" ao inves de "para" e eles nao aceitaram

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Antonio2077 25 4

Aceitou Muito cacique para pouco indio

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

agdaoliver 12

Ditados que nunca ouvi falar... impossível de conseguir traduzir.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Pazcovsky 13

Como esperam que saibamos responder sem nenhuma das palavras com tradução?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rogerbueno1 16 8 4

Essa das expressões ta bem fraca.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mafe_nobre 11

Não consegui entender o que estavam falando

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EmersonArc 8

Eu ouvir outra coisa aff

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wellington2020 14 5

É parecido com a expressão brasileira. Muitas pessoas para pouca comida.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Silva.Francisco 9

nada a ver!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SabrinaGOVP 13

É sim. Muito cacique pra pouco índio, muitas pessoas pra pouca comida, uai.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZUMBA2013 13 7

Amigos, o curso é gratuito. É nossa obrigação tornar-mo-nos verdadeiros nativos de língua inglesa. E pensar que o pessoal do "rolezinho" poderia aproveitar melhor o tempo sempre disponível...

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

[deleted]

-2Give Lingot•2 years ago

josemonteiro1 13 2

A tradução da expressão "to many cooks spoil the broth" muito cacique para pouco índio, em meu entender, em português de Portugal se ajustaria melhor á expressão "muita parra e pouca uva"

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

AnaRibeiro184174 10

Eu dei essa resposta e o Duolingo não aceitou. A meu ver deveria ser considerado certo, porque nem só brasileiros fazem este curso. Eu sou portuguesa e nunca tinha ouvido falar nessa expressão, nem sequer sei o que significa a palavra cacique...(peço desculpa pela ignorância)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

49 Reading THE HOBBIT in a new language: an analysis and experience.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1285137>

flaneurdubois 18 17 3 2 2

Now that I've finished my French tree, it's time for a new goal to accompany my DuoLingo practice: I'll be reading the French version of "The Hobbit." I'll have an English copy on-hand, and it'll be a pretty casual affair, but for anyone interested in what it's like reading a novel in a new language, I'll post my experience here. But first...

Before starting, I was curious how much new vocabulary would be involved. It seemed likely that the first few chapters would introduce many new words, but that after a while it would mostly be the same stuff (e.g., sword, ring, wizard) and things would get easier. But, I was looking for something more quantitative... so, I wrote up some code to analyze J.R.R. Tolkien's vocab in "The Hobbit." Here's what I found:

The book is around 113 000 words long.

Only about 5% of those words are unique (~6000), BUT that includes words like 'walk' and 'walking' separately.

For the first 50 pages, there's about 40 new words per page. (A page=320 words.)

After about 100 pages, there's only about 10–15 new words per page.

A couple notes:

This analysis is of the original English version; I'd imagine the French translation would have fewer unique words (some nuance lost in translation?).

As mentioned, different forms of the same word (e.g., 'marrying' and 'married') are counted as separate, unique words. If one is comfortable with conjugations, this drastically reduces the number of unique words to learn!

Having finished my Duolingo tree, I've got a great head-start on the vocab!

Moral of the story? This will start out quite challenging, and then things should get MUCH easier after the first few chapters.

So, chapter 1, here we go! "Dans un trou vivait un hobbit..."

Give Lingot4

253 years ago

Leave a new comment

33 Comments

maximusfood 24 12 10 6

I've just quickly done the same kind of analysis to the first Harry Potter book (in English), which I have just started reading in German. For word uniqueness I HAVE used stemming (ie walked and walking are counted once, as the same word).

The book contains about 80000 words. 4000 of these are unique.

The number of new unique words every 8000 words is:

1344, 646, 475, 363, 344, 233, 217, 171, 145, 136

As you can see, the number of unique words decreases significantly as the book progresses. A third of the words used overall are first used in the first 10% of the book, half in the first 20%.

If anyone would like to perform their own analysis I can give you the program I wrote. It's just a simple Ruby command line program. Send me a message. The word stemming is done using the SnowBall API, which is so powerful it can actually handle dozens of different languages.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Oliwia 20 19 17 14 12 8 1

One thing I found hard at the time was the vocabulary very specific to sorcery. I remember quite distinctively looking up "wand" in a dictionary... And wondering if I would ever read/hear that word again outside of a Harry Potter book.

I must admit I haven't come across that word very often since. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

flaneurdubois 18 17 3 2 2

That's terrific, the "ease-with-time" trend seems pretty consistent. Thanks for sharing!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ontalor 22 22 16 14 13 12 6 2 3

I've been reading books translated into Chinese, Spanish, and French for a while now, mostly because my friends recommend so many books and I figure if I read it in a different language I kill two birds with one stone, reading it and studying. I totally recommend reading a book you've read before in English for your first one, because it's hard to figure out what's going on in the plot sometimes, and if you have a vague memory of it it clears it up for you.

Just a couple comments. I don't think you should expect some nuance to be lost in translation. Especially English to French. There are a lot of phrases and idioms that have equivalents between English and French, and part of the translator's job is to try to incorporate the artistic expression. There are many times when I've read something in a different language and marveled at the translation and the use of language and how that way of expressing it would not have been possible in English.

Also, how are you planning on tackling the vocabulary? I think there are two different methods generally. The first is to look up every new word you encounter, and I have some friends who say they prefer this, but from my experience watching them it generally makes it harder to enjoy the experience because it takes so much longer. The second method is what I do. I just read and if I don't know a word, I don't worry about it and keep reading. If the word is obviously fundamental to the plot, or I've seen it three to five times and it seems important, then I'll look it up and save it to a vocabulary list. I think this saves a lot of time, keeps your interest at its highest level, and often after enough reading your brain suddenly magically figures out what a word means. The last example I remember is the French 'éclater'. After seeing it enough times in different contexts, even though I never paid particular attention to it, it suddenly clicked in my head that it basically means 'to burst', as in 'éclater de rire', 'to burst out laughing'. I prefer to try to let my brain's natural language processes pick up on what I can, otherwise I just got bored of looking up words and never get wrapped up in the story I'm reading.

Good luck!

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Oliwia 20 19 17 14 12 8 1

I do agree with the words looking up part. I hate stopping reading to look up new words, I do it only if the word shows up again and again.

It did happen to me not to get anything about the plot (first Spanish book), that did not make it enjoyable. I figured my Spanish was too weak, so I stopped reading, worked on my Spanish and tried again a few months later. It went smoothly this time. What I learned: pick a book adapted to your level of knowledge.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

flaneurdubois 18 17 3 2 2

Thanks! I'm trying out an approach that is pretty thorough with vocab, but I'm refining it a little as I go. It's been the right balance of effective and enjoyable so far, but let me try it out till the end of Chapter 1 and I'll write a proper update.

"Vous pourrez déjà remarquer que M. Baggins n'était..."

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

flaneurdubois 18 17 3 2 2

Hey, just posted a comment with my update and how I approached the vocab. Hope that answers your question!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

4P7 21 5 5 4

Interestingly enough this is the exact same plan as I have with my spanish as the hobbit was (and still is) my favourite childhood book!! I haven't finished the tree yet, although I'm not far off!!!

I'm also interested to know if the riddles still work.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

desi.bomb 12 9

I have the same plan but with Harry Potter! Good luck, keep us updated how it goes :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

OlaBM 15 11 11 7 6 5 4 2

I am doing the same with Harry Potter in French, and it really helps that I already know the story. I started off reading the first two books and it's true, there is a lot more vocab in the first few chapters, and after that you can read much more fluently. Now I am halfway through the third book, but audio this time, and it's the same - the first two-three chapters were slightly hard, but now I get almost everything.

For German I am actually halfway through The Hobbit - both this one and Harry Potter are nice to read in a foreign language as many will know the story and the vocabulary isn't too hard. I look forward to hearing your own experiences though!

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Oliwia 20 19 17 14 12 8 1

Harry Potter was my first book in English. I was 12 and once I had read the first volume in French, I couldn't wait for the second one to be translated, so I read it in English. Since then, I've never read again a translated version of an English book.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 10

I read a book called L'Appelle Sauvage once, without realising it was originally an English book, The Call of the Wild (I just found it randomly shelf for book shares). It hasn't really occurred to me to read the original, and I have no idea if I would enjoy it as much since English is my first language. I think there is just something satisfying about reading in another language, the French translation of HP can't be that bad can it :)?

By the way, no UK flag? c|:'c

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Oliwia 20 19 17 14 12 8 1

It's not really about the quality of the translation indeed, it is nice in itself to read a book in its original version :-). Though I did notice translated books are a bit simpler, which I keep in mind when choosing a book to read in a language I'm not comfortable with. Plus the French tend to translate everything, even the names, so it's kind of annoying. <http://fr.wikipedia.org/wiki/Poudlard>

No UK flag, US flag. The country flags are the languages I speak and my English is definitely American English!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

idshanks 14 11 5 4 2

I'm doing this with Philip Pullman's 'His Dark Materials' trilogy in German! It's still very much a struggle for me but I can crawl through pages with many a reach for the dictionary. :P It doesn't at all feel like a chore either; it feels rewarding to piece together what's going on. I can feel the pace ever so subtly but incrementally increase as I go. I've not read the series in about ten years, so while I know the general outline of the story, I've very much forgotten the details (and even significant chunks of the story). I'll be interested to see how the image conjured up from re-reading the English version of the book compares to that of the German one. :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tmarvin 25 25 25 10 5

I'm reading the same in Spanish!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

idshanks 14 11 5 4 2

It's one of my favourite series' of books; I'll give it a go in any language I learn!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

flaneurdubois 18 17 3 2 2

Alright, Chapter 1 is now complete. Twice. First time, I read each paragraph several times until I could read it fluently a couple times in a row, looking up words when necessary (either from the English book or a dictionary). At first, this honestly took about 10–15 minutes per paragraph. After completing the chapter once this way, I then reread the chapter and found that I remembered quite a bit, and only had to look up words occasionally.

This was a slow process, and it may not be for everyone, but I have to say I'm really enjoying it for a few reasons: a) I'm getting so much out of the actual story by reading it so closely, and picking up on many details I wouldn't normally; b) It's really motivating to see many of the new words (and conjugations) stick in my head; and c) From my original post's word analysis, this should get a whole lot easier after a couple more chapters. So, that's motivating. :)

Onto Chapter 2...

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Alipaulam 25 23 18 11 7

I'm glad people are enjoying reading Harry Potter like this. I found that when I tried it - I was fairly new to Italian - it was rather discouraging and slow. I spent my whole time mentally translating it back into English rather than just trying to follow the story (bit like immersion really).

I got on much better with simple and short real Italian books that I hadn't read in translation, because wanting to know what happened next was a big motivator. For example, Io non ho paura by Ammaniti was a great choice. And then Montalbano and other detective stories. Still waiting to tackle I promessi sposi!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kaet 16 12 12 8 7

You sound more like me - I just can't bring myself to read in translation when I can read the original. My husband really likes the method for language learning/improvement, though.

Currently I'm frustrating myself with two books I'm trying to read in German, but not quite managing, because I don't have the luxury of sitting with a dictionary or anything for the beginning. (Heidi in the original German - I read the English translation years ago, and the German translation of The Shiralee, for which I have seen the film but not managed to find a copy of the English original.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Alipaulam 25 23 18 11 7

I always think it's better to do without a dictionary unless you absolutely have to - ie if it's important, like Olimo says below, and you can't guess at it from context. It slows you down too much. And after you've come across the same word 3 or 4 times in different contexts, you finally get it - and then you remember it, whereas if you use a dictionary, it's too easy, and you don't.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kaet 16 12 12 8 7

Ah, but I like to really understand what I'm reading. This conversation prodded me to join back up to the new version Learning With Texts on Fluent in 3 Months (<http://lwtfi3m.co/>) and read Heidi there (from Project Gutenberg).

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MrTyberian 14 8

Good luck! I read Cien Años de Soledad last year after finishing DuoLingo Spanish and I had significant difficulty for the first hundred pages or so. DuoLingo uses cognates very heavily, so despite knowing 1500ish words when you finish DuoLingo, a large number of them you would have recognized anyway. I worked through the pages, putting all new words into Anki and by page 100ish it became easier to read. By the end of the novel it was possible to understand most of the story without a dictionary, although I was still getting a dozen unknown words per page.

The lesson I learned from the experience is that I wouldn't suggest doing this. You're unable to discern between common words and highly infrequent ones and end up treating them with equal importance. After DuoLingo it is best to start with blogs, because they are often written in a conversational tone and oral communication uses significantly fewer words than literary texts. After that it's possible to steadily move up to magazines, then serious newspapers and finally literature.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

Ohhh, reading Cien Años de Soledad is my ambition too! I've read it a few times in Russian, so I'm familiar with the story. Hope it wouldn't be too hard to read in Spanish...

Like Oliwia75, I don't care about every single word and only look them up if they are needed to understand the sentence or if they repeat quite a lot.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Oliwia 20 19 17 14 12 8 1

I've read books in Spanish, but I noticed translations are easier - somehow, they always are -- I've read Italian novels in Spanish, actually. Next book will be an original for me.

Edit: but I don't care if I don't get a word. I only look it up if it shows often enough. Plus, I didn't learn Spanish on Duo, I used other apps with way more vocabulary, so...

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bellatrix86 18 12 8 8

I read the Hobbit in German when I was younger and again in English a couple of years ago. I found it much more entertaining in the original language. Not that I didn't like the translation but I got a lot more out of the English version.
Have fun!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ravalentis 25 7 5

PLEASE keep us posted!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

flaneurdubois 18 17 3 2 2

Done! Just posted a Chapter 1 update. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luscinda 25 25 25 14 11 10 8 7 6 6 5 4 3 3 2 2 3

Does no one actually want to read books in the language they were written in??!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

idshanks 14 11 5 4 2

Sure we do; that's the point of practising in these other languages. Most of the mentions here are people talking about books they've already read in English, trying them in other languages.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

Of course we do. I tried to read The Lord of the Rings in my native language (Russian), but soon switched to the original English version because I hated that names of the characters and locations were translated (very often too awkwardly). It was not an easy reading for a non-native English speaker, but at least everything was exactly as the author wanted it.

For those who want to start reading originals, I usually recommend to take books you've already read in your native language at first.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Alipaulam 25 23 18 11 7

Yes, me . I hate reading translations from English into French and Italian, the languages that I know. And vice versa. Although unfortunately there are many books in French and Italian that are still too hard for me to read in the original in a realistic time frame, so I mostly end up not reading those ones at all. Or, the best thing is, to read them first in the original and then afterwards in translation, to see how much I've missed. But I never enjoy them as much - something, some flavour, always seems to be 'lost in translation'. Hard to explain,. For example, have you read 'L'Elegance du Herisson ', by Muriel Barbery? I read it in French and loved it, then read the English translation and just found it tiresome. Maybe my understanding of the French wasn't good enough to pick up the tiresomeness, but what was amusing in French just seemed silly in English.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ravalentis 25 7 5

here are a few lingots :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AbraxunsIllusion 25 6 5 5 5 4

You know, in the Lord of the Rings (very similar to the hobbit) they made their own language! It must have taken ages to do that!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

50 French tips: How to conjugate all the French verbs.
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2376172>

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

How to conjugate French verbs?

Verbs in French are divided into 3 groups, the first one, the easier, and the most common, called "the first groupe", is the group with the regular verbs ending with "er".

Ex: danser, travailler, parler. (dance, work, speak...)

Their conjugation is very easy, the only thing you have to do is to memorize the ending.

PARLER: (to talk) (I) Je parle (you) Tu parles (He) Il parle (or elle parle: she) (We) Nous parlons (You plural) Vous parlez (They) Ils parlent (or elles parlent) endings: JE = e TU= es IL= e NOUS = ons VOUS = ez ILS = ent (and this ending is always mute)

The verb ending by "ier", remercier, gracier, etc... are conjugated the same, with the same endings, they keep their "i".

REMERCIER (to thank someone) Je remercie Tu remercies Il remercie Nous remercions Vous remerciez Ils remercient

Manger (to eat, pronunciation: <http://fr.forvo.com/word/manger/>), this verb is not irregular but has an exception, to the "nous", you need to put an additional "e" to keep being pronounced the same (this verb's root is pronounced "manj", like the "g" in "orange")

MANGER Je mange Tu manges Il mange Nous MANGEONS (and not "mangons", because it would be pronounced as a hard "g" like in "goat", and we need a soft g like in "orange". The "e" is only there to change the pronunciation and keep it alike to the other persons and to its root "manj") Vous mangez Ils mangent

SECOND GROUP: regular verbs ending with "IR" ex: Finir, mentir, servir, offrir, partir, etc...

PARTIR: (to leave) Je pars Tu pars Il part Nous partons Vous partez Ils partent

Here, I have: JE=s TU=s IL =t NOUS= ons VOUS= ez ILS= ent

FINIR (to finish, same group) Je finis Tu finis Il finit Nous finissons Vous finissez Ils finissent Same endings...

The 3rd group is the difficult one, it gathers all the other verbs, not ending by "er" or "ir" and the irregular ones with "er" or "ir".

One of the most common and weird in this group are the three ones: Être (to be) Aller (to go) Avoir (to have), you need to memorize those 3 important verbs, because you can't guess them.

ÊTRE: (to be) Je suis Tu es Il est Nous sommes Vous êtes Ils sont

AVOIR: (to have) J'ai (and not "je ai"!!, the "je" is modified because of the two vowels following each other, "je ai" would be too difficult to pronounce, "je" is always transformed into "j' " when the verb begin with a vowel, or a non-aspirated "h".) Tu as Il a Nous avons Vous avez Ils ont

ALLER (to go) Je vais Tu vas Il va Nous allons Vous allez Ils vont.

For other verbs in this group, there are general patterns, depending of their endings.

Tenir/Appartenir/Obtenir/Soutenir...etc (all conjugated as "tenir", tenir is irregular, memorize it.

Tenir: (to hold) Je tiens Tu tiens Il tient Nous tenons Vous tenez Ils tiennent

Apprendre/Attendre/Comprendre/Descendre... etc (to learn, to wait, to underscendre, to get off...) and the verb ending with "ondre": répondre, etc... (to reply) Not irregular, but with conjugate according to the "endre" ending. Only memorize one, and you know them all. Notice that the ending of the 3rd group verbs is the same than for the 2nd group verbs.

PRENDRE: (to take) Je prends Tu prends Il prend Nous prenons Vous prenez Ils prennent

Battre/abattre/débattre/combattre, etc... (to hit, to cut down, to debate, to fight...) They are simple

BATTRE (to hit) Je bats Tu bats Il bat Nous battons Vous battez Ils battent Boire/Croire etc... (drink, believe...) They are irregular for the plural persons.

BOIRE (to drink) Je bois Tu bois Il boit Nous buvons Vous buvez Ils boivent

CROIRE (To believe) Je crois Tu crois Il croit Nous croyons Vous croyez Ils croient

Naître/Connaître/Paraître/Disparaître, etc... (to born, to know, to seem, to disappear...) They're simple

NAÎTRE (to born) Je nais Tu nais Il naît (be careful there is a trick here, a ^ on the i) Nous naissons Vous naissez Ils naissent

PARAÎTRE (to seem) Je parais Tu parais Il paraît (same ^ on the i) Nous paraissions Vous paraissez Ils paraissent.

Devoir, falloir, vouloir = are irregular, but not voir, prévoir, recevoir. Vouloir is a very special one, because the ending "s" turned into a "x"

DEVOIR (irregular, to have to) Je dois Tu dois Il doit Nous devons Vous devez Ils doivent

VOIR (regular, to see) Je vois Tu vois Il voit Nous voyons Vous voyez Ils voient.

VOULOIR (to want) Je veux Tu veux Il veut Nous voulons Vous voulez Ils veulent Verbes with "ire", or "uire" and the verb "vivre" Ecrire, Lire, Rire, Détruire etc... They are regular.

LIRE (to read) Je lis Tu lis Il lit Nous lisons Vous lisez Ils lisent.

VIVRE (to live) Je vis Tu vis Il vit Nous vivons Vous vivez Ils vivent

DIRE and FAIRE (to say and to do) Dire is regular but has only one exception, "vous". Je dis Tu dis Il dit Nous disons VOUS DITES (and not disez!!) Ils disent Dire has the same exception than faire.

FAIRE Je fais Tu fais Il fait Nous faisons Vous FAITES (and not faisez!!!) Ils font Plaire, complaire, etc.. are conjugated the same than "faire", but they have not their "vous" irregular, they have a normal "vous".

Craindre (to fear): crains, etc..

Please, tell me if you have question, if I'm not clear, or if I made some mistakes (because I wrote it very late)

Give Lingot10
372 years ago

Leave a new comment
13 Comments

wintertriangles 25 10 7

The only thing I would add (as an -er exception), because I see these two mistakes all the time in tutoring, "manger" in the nous form retains the 'e' - "mangeons," and for "commencer" the 'c' becomes - "commençons"

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Yes, thanks, I add it. Not really an irregular, but definitively worth to put here.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

You may not put it in the irregular basket, but it is an exception that follows a rule. And there are quite a few others besides. The ones mentioned above relate to the group ~er , and the sub rule concerns ~cer and ~ger verbs. I am in the process of writing an article on this, and once it is done, I will try to find this link, and put a cross reference for you here. - For it will include NOT just these instances, but hopefully be much more inclusive of all the other variations. - Wish me luck , and if you pick up this link - please comment. This is part of creating the community and making things relevant :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Yes, it would be very interesting, thanks.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

Hee Hee. though not quite finished - but so close - Please check through things and tell me where things should be addressed. Starting from Verbs ~er group

Thank you PERCE_NEIGE. You are a legend !

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

Please check out Verbs ~er group - ~ger endings.
and also Verbs ~er group - ~cer endings

This is a link to an extensive 'loam' of work that I have had the privilege to work on - with guidance from PERCE_NEIGE. If you follow the links, it shows ALL the spelling rules related to ~er verbs. And this includes GREAT rules to learn that have influence over all sorts of aspects of french. I look forward to your comments to this learning loom :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HalcyonHarbinger 6

I will be reading over this until I have it memorized! I was having a lot of trouble remembering what was what! Thanks!!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 682

Thank you PERCE_NEIGE, I've added it to our French grammar references discussion.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

book1worm13 7

Wow. Merci.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Did it help you? Do you feel comfortable with French verbs now. Please tell me if you try to conjugate verb with an ending I forgot in the list.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Cely988 12 6

Thank you so much! I always have problems when it comes to conjugating verbs but this will help me a lot :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

k0biz.a 7 3

THANK you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wldz2010 12 8 8 2

Thank you! This looks like just what I was looking for

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

51 – 69 of 912

[accessed March 9, 2017]

51 Why Is the color orange "naranja" rather than "anaranjado"?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1161292>

Diggabyte 22 12 8 6 6 5 2

When I was going through my spanish skill tree I noticed that there was something that is different than what spanish I've learned in school. The color orange in duolingo is "naranja" but my spanish teacher said that it's "anaranjado" and that naranja is specifically for the fruit.

Give Lingot

53 years ago

Leave a new comment

31 Comments

ProfesorAntonnio 21 16 16 14 11 10 8 3 2 3

RAE says that both are the same for color.

Naranja. Color anaranjado <http://lema.rae.es/drae/?val=naranja>

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mary_Taylor 3

I always heard that naranja is for fruit and the color orange. That is what my deceased husband always told me unless it is in a different part of Mexico. Also there are over 200 dialects of spanish in Mexico alone so your spanish teacher may have been right for where she/he learned the spanish. Hope this helped. I'm just going by what my mexican husband told me.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

paulis_moscoso 11 9 5 1

well in my country (guatemala) we say naranja for the color and for the fruit, before we say anaranjado but not now

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rspreng 24

Depends on what part of the world your Spanish comes from. Among the Mexicans I know naranja is both, and my dictionary says that is OK.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NaroniaSonia 16 14 5 2

Some Spanish has both. But some, naranja is the fruit orange, and anaranjado is the color.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

paulis_moscoso 11 9 5 1

i talk spanish so i can say you that is the same but if you are in spain for example it says "anaranjado" for the color and "naranja" for the fruit. so it depends of the place

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

If you want, I could correct your post (here, or on your stream).

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mary_Taylor 3

Can you correct me when my Spanish is wrong? I still after all these years get my verbs and accent marks mixed up.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

I'm not a native speaker so I don't think I would be of much use. But if I see you say something wrong I'll correct it for you if you want.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

paulis_moscoso 11 9 5 1

ok thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

That was in response to Mary_Taylor.

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

paulis_moscoso 11 9 5 1

why correct it?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

Because your post had a few errors.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

paulis_moscoso 11 9 5 1

what errors?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

Here's what you should have said:

I speak Spanish so I can tell you that they are the same, but if you are in Spain, for example, they say, "anaranjado" for the color, and "naranja" for the fruit. So it depends on the place.

¡Saludos!

4Give Lingot•3 years ago

Mary_Taylor 3

examinte me gusta. Are you fluent in Spanish? I wish I was because it makes me mad when gringos try to take advantage of anyone that can't speak english. I go to their rescue and I don't care what nationality. Right is right and wrong is wrong. This is exactly the reason why I want to speak Spanish and learn the culture. I wish sometimes I was born Spanish so I would be able to speak this romantic language.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

paulis_moscoso 11 9 5 1

i would like talk spanish and not only english because its hard for me. (i am spanish speaker so i talk just spanish)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mary_Taylor 3

Are you from Spain or central,north america or another part of the Spanish speaking countries?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

paulis_moscoso 11 9 5 1

i am from central america (i do not know if i write it well, please correct me if i dont)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rimbarri 9

I'm from Spain, I use "naranja" for the color and "anaranjado" if something is a bit orange. It isn't the same: "Este blanco es anaranjado" than "Este blanco es naranja", the first is a white with tones orange, the seconds is not white at all. Sorry if I writte something wrong in english.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mary_Taylor 3

Your English is fine. I wish I could speak Spanish as well as you speak English.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rimbarri 9

Keep it up! If you like Spanish like it seems, you'll improve your Spanish skill soon.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

paulis_moscoso 11 9 5 1

well, i cannot speak english very well i speak english since 2011! so if you strive you could get to talk a good Spanish

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

INDIAN__YOGI 10

प्रत्येक व्यक्ति को अपनी भाषा पर अधिकार प्राप्त होता है। विद्वान वही है जो दूसरों की भाषा पर अधिकार रखता है। (Everybody has command on his own language. Scholar is one who keeps command on other's language.)

An illiterate in England can speak better English than a professor of English in India. Isn't it so?

:) gracias

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Diggabyte 22 12 8 6 6 5 2

Gracias para las ayudas everyone! (sorry if my spanish is incorrect) I'll ask my teacher specifically what dialect he is teaching us :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mary_Taylor 3

Thank you. I started by learning Spanish from Mexico City after My husband and I got married. I think I could have learned more if he hadn't left. Please let me say something to clarify things. There are bad apples in all nationalities. BUT, not everyone is bad. I gave my husband a choice. He could have his abusive ways while he was drunk or he could quit drinking and keep me, well he chose to be drunk and I asked him to leave. This was about 14 years ago and I just found out that he had passed 5 years ago. If I had a chance to do things over again, I would have done them differently.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

paulis_moscoso 11 9 5 1

can i correct you, i know that you don't speak spanish but i want to correct it

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

paulis_moscoso 11 9 5 1

gracias POR LA AYUDA everyone!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Diggabyte 22 12 8 6 6 5 2

gracias :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

52 French tips: what is the difference between "sont" and "sommets"?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2182250>

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

I tried to help on the forum, and I met several times this question. Here is my contribution to help Duolingo learners community.

The verb TO BE/ Le verbe ÊTRE (conjugaison)

Singular:

(I) Je suis. (You, singular) Tu es. (he) Il est. (she) elle. a special case: on est (ignore it if you're a beginner)

Plural:

(You, plural) Vous êtes. (We) Nous sommes. (They, masculine) Ils sont. (They, feminine) Elles sont.

Pronouns are mandatory in French, so, if you want to say "we are" as you used "nous" you have to pick "sommes", to say: "nous sommes" (Look in the table) SOMMES is always SOMMES and never written somme, or anything else.

What's the difference between "sommes" and "sont"; Sommes is always and only used with "nous" and each time you want to say "we are" you have to use the expression "nous sommes", don't think, only memorize it. Sont is always and only used with "elles" or "ils" pronouns. So, each time you want to say "they are" you have to translate it either by "ils sont" or "elles sont", only memorize it.

THE AUDIO DIFFERENCE

"Sont" and "Sommes" shouldn't be confused when you hear them, they are very different, but you need to train your ear first.

ILS SONT: http://fr.forvo.com/word/ils_sont/#fr (listen several times the audio from SI0uf, it's the first one) The third one (from PERCE_NEIGE) is the one I recorded for you.
<http://translate.google.com/?hl=fr#fr/bg/ils%20sont> (don't look at the translation for "ils sont" it's bad)

ELLES SONT: http://fr.forvo.com/word/elles_sont/#fr
<http://translate.google.com/?hl=fr#fr/en/elles%20sont> (don't look at the translation for "elles sont" it's bad)

SONT-ILS? <http://fr.forvo.com/word/sont-ils/#fr>

SONT-ELLES? <http://fr.forvo.com/word/sont-elles/#fr> (I think the second one, mine is better, because the first user has a slight accent.)

SONT/SOMMES http://fr.forvo.com/word/sont%2C_sommes/#fr

SOMMES/SONT http://fr.forvo.com/word/sommes%2C_sont/#fr

ILS SONT/NOUS SOMMES http://fr.forvo.com/word/ils_sont._nous_sommes.

NOUS SOMMES/ILS SONT http://fr.forvo.com/word/nous_sommes._ils_sont./

NOUS SOMMES http://fr.forvo.com/word/nous_sommes/#fr

SOMMES-NOUS? <http://fr.forvo.com/word/sommes-nous/#fr>

I hope it can help you...

Give Lingot8
732 years ago

Leave a new comment
37 Comments

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 682

I was about to say that this subject pops up every couple of days and act exasperated ;-) But your post is about offering help and not asking for it. Maybe if you changed the subject to better reflect that you'd get more upvotes... Just saying.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

dudly 21 17 9 2 2
Yup, something like "French tip/advice"

The pronoun "on" is much more used in Quebec than it is in France, I think, as we do not really use "nous" as much. I'd argue that "on" makes it easier, because it regularizes another group of people into a conjugation that already corresponds to "elle" et "il". Language economy and all! :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2
Ok. Good idea, thanks.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Khaur 15 13 11 9 4 3
On is very used in France as well, we almost never say nous in informal conversation.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

williameddey 9 9 7 6
are you kidding me i use on everyday in french it's very important french is not english so don't try to ignore things that does not exist in english

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dudly 21 17 9 2 2
Hum, what do you mean, "don't try to ignore things that don't exist in English"? I'm for sure not kidding you, and I have really no idea why you think you need to point out that French is not English. I am quite aware of it, and usually I can say I'm aware of the specificity of my language.

Because maybe you misunderstood me... To you, and to Khaur, I have to say, I did not make a statement about the statistical use of "on" in France, I just brought it up because it felt like my French-from-France family use the form "nous" more than the people around me in Quebec usually do, or so it felt.

That said, it does not surprise me that "On" is so used all around. It really is economical in this way that it generalizes the HE SHE WE into one single person&conjugation (the third person singular). So cheers to that!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Bigface 17 64

It might help to clarify the "THEY" portion a little further. I know it may be obvious, but some people might not realize that two people connected with 'and' will also use "SONT". Basically, anything plural third person (Les femmes, hommes, groups in general) normally fits this case.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Very good suggestion! I will add a part explaining when to use "they".

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DavidLBump 6 6 12

When I first began learning French, the problem I had in this area was not between "nous sommes" and "ils sont" but "ils sont" and "ils ont" -- couldn't remember which one was for "they are" and which for "they have," and the similar sounds didn't help. Nothing seems to work on problems like this than simple practice and exposure, reading and hearing and repeating each together with proper context.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Merci David, ça me donne une idée pour un autre "French tip", pour plus tard...

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

williameddey 9 9 7 6

Lol ...if someone here need help in french i will teach it to him / my native language / and maybe he can also teach me spanish

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

tbvjshqk017 22 22

I found a great source for learning french from grammar to correct pronunciation altogether with easy explanations.

<http://www.youtube.com/imagiers>

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Yes, they're good, thanks, I will add them in the links

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Samy1979 23 9 1170

I can't understand why people struggle with this. Its so easy.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

greeneyedbaby190 15 2

Because many people learning french on this site start with english. In english the verb is the same regardless of who we are regarding. So while it may seem simple to some, others have difficulty grasping the difference between the languages.

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Khaur 15 13 11 9 4 3

That's not entirely true: the third person singular is different. And to be has a first person singular version as well. So conjugation isn't entirely foreign to English, it's just a lot simpler and more regular in English than it is in French or other languages.

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

greeneyedbaby190 15 2

I suppose I can agree with that. Haha.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Tu as raison, d'où viens-tu?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 682

I've created a discussion with similar grammar tips here but it didn't seem to gather much attention... I thought we could link these two together. Or maybe create a compendium discussion referencing all these useful grammar tips discussions in one place.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 682

I've done it here. Please vote it up, to make it stand out in the French section of the discussion area !

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Abundant1 11

Nice sharing... Thanks.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ooOBilalOoo 25 25 6 5 5 5 3 2

Merci !

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LeahWynecoop 5

You helped me so much! Was getting very frustrated hopefully this helps me out now :) thank you for your info :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Thanks, I'm glad to have helped. If you have any ideas about a new grammar point, please tell me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zlcolumbus 2

Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

electrafemme 7

God bless this post. I'm taking french, and our homework is on this, but our book does not explain it, and neither did my professor. Thank you!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hahulett 5

I just did the flashcards and they had sommes translated as "sums". At least I knew enough to know that was wrong!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Khaur 15 13 11 9 4 3

Well, as a noun, sommes is the plural of somme, which is the French word for sum, so the flashcard is technically correct (unless it said it was a verb).

Unfortunately, flashcards are not a very good tool when dealing with homographs or polysemy...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hahulett 5

Thanks! I'm on the Basics lesson so I'm pretty sure my correct answer should've been the verb. They also had "est" as east and directions haven't been introduced yet. Good to know the flashcards aren't just randomly wrong though!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MuhanadAlhamwi 9

it's easy now for sont and sommes, thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nishad15 16 5 3 3 3 2

thank you so much for the post. i was really confused before reading this! it helped a lot

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

m.salameh 7 3

Thaank you =)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mari456x 2

Thank you. This helped very much.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Annie791339 6 2

So why did a duo lingo lesson use les pommes sont rouge? I'm a bit confused..

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 682

Because les pommes is a third person plural subject. Could you replace "the apples" by "they" (the apples, they are red)? Then you should use sont. PERCE_NEIGE was only talking about personal pronouns, but any subject that falls in the right agreement (first, second or third person, singular or plural) will use the same conjugation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Cassandralrene 4

With "they are" translated to either "elles sont" or "ils sont"- how do you know which one to use if you are referring to a group of men and women? For example if you are referring to a group of people (they) but some are men and some are women. Do you use the masculine or feminine words ('ils' or 'elles') Apologies if it's a silly question. I am a beginner.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Deadleech 3 2

"Ils" is for a group of men or a mixed group, while "Elles" is a group of women.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

53 Getting Outfits in the Store (IOS version). What for? and how it works?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2571740>

lucolaf 13 12 6 6 2

In the IOS version, you have the choice to get outfits using lingots (at least if you are learning french)... But I don't understand what's the point of doing that? What do you gain? If someone knows and can explain how this works please. (I got one, just out of curiosity, but i think nothing happened, I don't see anything new...that's why I am wondering. I would like the 20 lingots back if possible...)

Give Lingot23

92 years ago

Leave a new comment

11 Comments

gorn61 15

I've been wondering that, too. Have 20 lingots back.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lucolaf 13 12 6 6 2

Thank You !

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kat99 19 8 2

Yah, it's on the coach feature and whatever costume you put on him he will be wearing when he coaches you. Mine has a little mustache! I don't know how the staff was able to make a mustache work with a beak, but it does and it is super adorable!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kyumin2lee 6

Well, that's just it. It's just aesthetically pleasing. I don't know whether it goes to this extent, but multiple studies have revealed that Visually pleasing (colourful, and lots of pictures) = Better Learning. And that is what Duolingo is!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kristinemc 16 9 7 4 2

They're just for fun! I have Duo in the champagne track suit ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

marzman 23 14 13 10 5 3 43

But where do you see them? I bought both outfits but only see the owls in the shop (Androidversion, but it also has the outfits). Nothing changes when I change outfit.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LeMaitre 21 15 13 12 11 9 8 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 4 3 2 2 4

I think only if you activate the coach feature, the outfit is displayed. My coach is on, and after every lesson, the owl comes wearing the outfit I bought for him.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

marzman 23 14 13 10 5 3 43

[edit]Thanks, found the owl :) Imgur

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lucolaf 13 12 6 6 2

Exactly. I'm wondering the same, where do you see them then

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alternia 15 10 6 6 5 3 3 3 2 2 815

They are design oriented I think. I don't have the ios version.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GermanIncineroar 8

He never coaches me- I bought both at once and want my fifty lingots back.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

54 "She hit the nail on the head. "

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1299521>

Translation: Ela acertou em cheio.

13 years ago

Leave a new comment

152 Comments

serviocardus 13

Saudações,

Bem, este módulo trata de expressões relacionadas à cultura inglesa e que não tem tradução literal para nossa língua.

Contudo, é possível usar expressões da nossa cultura que tenham sentido análogo ao destas expressões estrangeiras.

"She hit the nail on the head" não pode ser simplesmente traduzido como "Ela acertou o prego na cabeça", e sim entendido como algo com sentido similar à nossa expressão tal como "Ela acertou em cheio" (ou algo do tipo "Ela acertou na mosca").

Tanto no inglês quanto no português o sentido é de "precisão"

428ReplyGive Lingot6•3 years ago

clevis.lim 10 9

Correto. Uma tradução bem feita, não é necessariamente uma tradução literal mas uma equivalente respeitando a cultura e as expressões próprias do país

132ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

EMANOEL1234 20 12 149

Eu conheço estas frases mais como ditados ou ditos populares. É muito bom, mas o que eu pensava que aprenderia eram expressões similares às nossas: "de saco cheio", "pegou no meu pé", "varei a noite" etc.

18ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LhgS 7 5

Acho que você confundiu a as palavras prego e unha (ambas são nail em inglês), só da para determinar qual é pelo contexto: Na frase "She hit the nail on the HEAD" a palavra "head" (cabeça) determina a prego tradução tradução pois fala que o objeto "nail" tem uma cabeça, e por isso essa palavra não pode ser unha.

8ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Luiz_BR 11 11

Mas o objetivo é aprender as expressões do idioma inglês mais utilizadas, EMANOEL1234.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GabrielaAl27927 10 5

eu tbm achava isso!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

erival_k 11 6

Existe, também uma expressão da lingua inglesa "bull's eyes" que possui o mesmo sentido, e que, ate onde sei, é bem mais utilizada.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rodrigoabr5 10 3

Exatamente! o mais correto seria escrever "bullseye". Mas não podemos levar tão ao pé da letra o Duolingo.

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Alexandre_013 21 12 420

Isso ai mandou bem!

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FernandoMa28 13 7 2

your explanation hit the nail on the head kakakakakak Muito bom cara!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jeancarlos526246 1

Mas essa expressao é utilizada hoje la???

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Teresinha 16 15 14 8 3

Sempre penso isso, Jeancarlos. Excelente questão!

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

GustavoVen639845 8
Isso ajudou, Obrigado

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rhybammar 9
Verdade...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

WagnerPaix 8
Interessante essa explicação, para essa expressão

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

GustavoClaude 11
Ela acertou na mosca!

255ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Gorald 10
Pensei a mesma coisa!!

Coloquei: Na mosca!

41ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gilleadesouza 11
Na mosca não aceitou!

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

yendisalbuq 18 17
Aceitou "Acertou na mosca".

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Beatrr 15 10
Walter White <3

18ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

[deactivated user]
Coloquei isso e não acc kkk

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

davus590 5
Gostei (LIKE)

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago
[+] 4 hidden comments

Dan_el3 12

Se você "acerta o prego na cabeça (cabeça do prego)" [hit the nail on the head], você descreve a natureza exata de algo como um problema, uma solução, ou uma situação. Ou seja: "Você acerta em cheio", "Acertou na mosca"

fonte: http://www.englishclub.com/ref/esl/Idioms/H/hit_the_nail_on_the_head_419.htm

67ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

flaviaschoppan 10 1

"Ela acertou na mosca" está errado?? Ah, esse Duolinguo tá de "brincation with me"!! hahahaha

18ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

carloshamilton 14

He he he brincation with me ... Essa foi boa.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago
[+] 2 hidden comments

Bruno11Adm 10 7

Ela acertou na mosca!

Na mosca! (Se não tivesse o SHE)

Bingo! (Poderia servir).

15ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Futsukasam 9 9

Gente, eu coloquei "ela acertou a unha na cabeça" e deu certo :v ayegauegsuehaue

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JorgeRapha1 7

Achei que seria o único. Hauhauahau

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

andersonfuznav 12

ao pé da letra é ela acertou o prego na cabeça (cabeça do prego)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lucas-Pablo 23 8 3 2

Eu prefiro usar bullseye!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago renanguer 7

Head shot

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Hellfir 9

Uma coisa que eu penso, tem algumas "traducoes" para ditos populares brasileiros que nem mesmo nós usamos, dai fico pensando, sera que eles realmente usam assim la? Ou isso ja esta ultrapassado tb para eles?!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vinidcali 13 11

Usam! O problema é que como são ditos populares, nem todos nós temos uma versão que significa exatamente a mesma coisa... Então eles colocam o mais parecido, por mais que seja ultrapassado :\

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

matheusalvs 11 2

É impressão minha ou é daí que vem a expressão:: "Nailed it"?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vinidcali 13 11

:D

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DanielOliv643573 11 7

Só não entendi o "acertou" se o verbo não esta conjugado no passado, e não há auxiliar na frase!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dan_el3 12

É assim mesmo, o verbo to hit tem só uma forma para todos os tempos verbais, só muda no presente para a terceira pessoa do singular he/she/it hits. Ex:

He/She/It hits (bate) Present

He/She/It hit (bateu) Past

I hit (bato ou bati) / You hit (bate ou bateu) / We hit (batemos) / They hit (batem ou bateram)
Present ou Past

Resumindo: Se fosse no presente seria: She hits. A frase do Duolingo está no passado She hit

Até como Past Participle ele se mantém na mesma forma:

You have hit = Você tem batido

29ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

DanielOliv643573 11 7

Agora sim. Entendi, mas ainda acho que ambas respostas deveriam ser aceitas já que o verbo não flexiona.

But, thank's to de answer. It's very important for all us.

Thank's.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dan_el3 12

"She hit the nail on the head." está no passado, eu dei uma melhoradinha na explicação a cima, talvez fique mais claro agora.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LavniaPann 14
crystal clear!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

edulgcarnargo 12 12 5 1

Essa língua é um jogo de intuição?! O melhor é decorar mesmo. Valeu amigo!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

emanuelmike1999 8 2

e tambem pode colocar o restante da frase no passado para simbolizar o hit no past

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

emanuelmike1999 8 2

tem que colocar numa forma logica que se possa entender e nao literal

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eriveltonms 8

"Ela acertou no alvo" também deveria ser uma opção aceitável.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aline.tart1 8 5 5

Muito hilárias essas expressões traduzindo ao pé da letra

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GeorgeR. 6

Acertar em cheio e na mosca não é a mesma coisa?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

robert.por 12 4 4

Acertô miseravi

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

brenolms1234 5

Eu coloquei ela bateu o prego na cabeça e aceitou kkk

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MorganaRus 14 14 5

Kkk

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

jeancarlos526246 1

Gostaria de saber se esta expressao e utilizada hoje e se nao esta ultrapassada?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

daniela.es4187 11

Mesmo se tradução ao pé ficar sem sentido eu prefiro saber, pq na comparação com a expressão em português faz com que eu grave a frase com masi facilidade.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

liviaherken 13 7 7

Quando eu passei o mouse em cima da frase em ingles, apareceu a resposta: ela acerta em cheio. Escrevi isso e apareceu errado: ela acertou em cheio.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

luizmiguel15 12

Ela acertou em cheio, mas eu não. Como eu escrevo esta frase usando "but"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JabezSS 11 8 6 4

She hit the nail on the head, but I didn't.

I suppose it's right

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JoseLAndradeJr 11

Ela acertou na mosca

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Wildboyz 11

Eu fui pela lógica do duolingo de não se basear na tradução e procurar um provérbio análogo em português e acertei em cheio!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

marcospere394623 13 7

Nada a ver com a tradução em PT. Fiquei a ver navios! Rsrtrs.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

VivianGA 8 6

Expressões idiomáticas em outro idioma não são para iniciantes na língua. Não existe literalidade. Tem que pensar de modo abrangente. E não esqueçam que o Duolingo é um computador. Não necessariamente o que ele diz que está errado, esteja efetivamente errado (principalmente com frases idiomáticas).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bragaabrantres 22 7 3

O que acham de "Ela acertou na cabeça". Usamos a expressão "na cabeça" para descrever precisão.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alexandre.eiras 11 6

Essa expressão me lembrou outra que vi um americano falando, ele disse: "She is tough as nails!, literalmente, ela é dura como um prego!. Acredito que a melhor ideia nessa expressão seja que ela é durona, valente e determinada.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JooVictorH4 14 13 12 7 2

Está correta essa pronúncia de "hit"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FabioOlive612186 13 9 9 6

"ela foi no x da questão" poderia ter sido aceito

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FelipeMarq932265 11 11 7 5 2

Prefiro simplesmente a expressão "nailed"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

elilde.sil 15

Ela acertou na cabeça

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PauloSergi871763 11

You nailed it guy Expressão parecida mas com mesmo sentido. Utilizada muito pelos gringos por exemplo nos jogos de basket qdo o jogador faz algo insano

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lua.ferreira 11 10 3 3

"Ela acertou em cheio!" O que unha tem a ver?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Luiz_BR 11 11

Nail pode significar prego, unha, garra... No caso desta expressão em inglês, tem o sentido de prego

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GlaucoRocha 13

Coloquei "Ela acertou em cheio na cabeça" e deu errado

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

joseronaldo2012 25 8

Ela cravou o prego na cabeça. Deveria ser aceito.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Panshex 14 4

Que frase enorme para um simples "ela acertou em cheio"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LadislauJu 11

Coloquei na cabeça não foi....

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

emanuelmike1999 8 2

acertou na mosca

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

emanuelmike1999 8 2

verdade nao precisa ser literal e nunca sera se nao fica estranho, temos de ler e raciocinar tentar pensa= poxa como ficaria mais adequado entendem?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rbsantos001 8 8 7

Olá, acredito estar o verbo conjugado incorretamente. Seria "she hits" ao invés de "she hit".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

helio_costa 18

O verbo "hit" é desse jeitinho no present, past e preterite; e, como se trata de uma "expression", que não está no presente (She hits), não há muito o que discutir. É como a nossa, por exemplo, "Chutar o pau da barraca", que nada tem a ver com o "chutar" nem com o "pau" nem com a "barraca" rsrsrs. É assim porque é assim.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

umleonardo 11 10 6 2
No alvo

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MatheusGal837025 5
Ela bateu o prego na cabeça .. E deu kkkk

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

natyangeli 11 8
Acertou na mosca! Aceitou

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CatrineViera 7
Acertou em cheio

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sara.hellen 6 2
Deveria aceitar " ela acertou em cheio minha cabeça

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Guilherme0120895 8 4 4
Eu também acertei :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Eoskcirn 12 4
Eu duvido que quem fala inglês pronuncia todas essas palavras para falar apenas "Na mosca!"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RomilsonNu
Acharia melhor que fosse a tradução literal e só então uma comparação com uma frase brasileira

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SephSunstrider 11 11 10 4 4
"Bull's eye" também é equivalente.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EliasCassim 19 8 2 399

O difícil é lembrar disso na hora que precisar falar isso kkk

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

larissabruzzoze 8 8

Pensei ela acertou em cheio mais nao valeu

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kyfelipe 7 3

Ela acertou em cheio na cabeça

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

neto9129 13

Porque fica diferente?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

katlyn_Vit 6

Oi

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ccamposs

Essa traducao nao faz sentido

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GilsonSant495858 10

"Ela acertou a unha na cabeça"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JuniorVico 7

???

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

clayton.ma5 8

Coloquei: ela bateu o prego na cabeluda, e não foi aceito! Sera porquê? Kkkkkkkk

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Luana763589 8

Porque sera q não aparece o quadro inteiro da tradução, não consegui ver o q era head.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

GabrielOli599127 13 6 2
Aceitou/acertei na mosca haha

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Pamellaamp 10 2
eh estilo um: ACERTO MISERAVI!! kkk

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ViniihhAs 6
Como vou saber que head e cabeça se nem estudei isso kkkk

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

MorganaRus 14 14 5
Eu coloquei: ela aceitou em cheio e o duolingo aceitou.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

phaeluis 19 18 17 16 5 7
Já aceita: "Ela acertou na mosca"

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

davus590 5
Vcs sao d+ you are cool

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Jackeline.ns 9
Coloquei " Ela acertou a unha na cabeça " e foi aceito

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

TomazLima1 7
Poderia ficar "she hits"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Angela.Holanda 11 6
Eu coloquei: Ela acertou na cabeça. Só pra ver se o Duolingo aceitava, mas não aceitou...

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Paolayasmim 10 6 4
Ela acertou a unha na cabeça??? Tenho muito o que aprender!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Vania.asas 20 16

Foi bem na veia!

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Vania.asas 20 16

Ela ganhou na loteria! Dá para entender que acertou em cheio na escolha dos números.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Leonardo372107 9

Tradução todas erradas aff

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

wallac8 15 7 5 3

Muito bom

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

ElianaMach9 14 8 36

por que essa frase é grande no inglês e no português é pequena

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

valterS13 9

ola essa frase nao pederia ter sua traducao como " na mosca "?

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

RibeiroCamilla 9 3

pode tirar o she da frase pra ficar só hit the nail on the head?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

irisCampos24 8

então porque é que está escrito lá cabeça? (em ingles claro)

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

workile 8

Acho que a expressão "na mosca" deveria ser implementada como possível resposta.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

JoeversonL 11 2

Bull'seye!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

BelLivros 6

Se fossemos traduzir quase que ao pé da letra seria "ELA ACERTOU NA CABEÇA DO PREGO"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Diego306613 11

As respostas completas estão aparecendo quando toco em alguma palavra.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

lucashenri786251 7

A traduzao e importante mas pra entender precisa fazer sentido ao dizer para um ameicano

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

DanielMari679881 16 1

Ela acertou o prego na cabeça.. Mudou totalmente

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

emi171018 6

"ela acertou o prego na cabeça!"

"she hit the nail on the head!"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

HeilaDias 11 4 2 2

Ótima expressão. Depois dos comentários entendi melhor. "Na mosca"!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Danielle213283 7

Like

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Anderson_QPontes 11 11 11 9 26

Translate correct in portuguese: "Ela acertou em cheio na cabeça".

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

mestranda 11

acertar no alvo esta correto

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AdrianoAug3 12 9 8

Eu acho bullseye melhor.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cadu.barbosa 12 7 7 6 4

"ela acerta em cheio" Quando coloco o verbo no passado, ele não aceita. Coloquei esse no presente, também não aceita.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

marceloramires51 8
Na mosca

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

J3SUAN 15 12 12 10
Minha tradução estava "bugada", assim como quase todas dessa lição. Já que a tradução não bate com o sentido real da oração, aí fica difícil adivinhar :)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vinidcali 13 11
Este é o objetivo desta unidade...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LuaneMorei 4
Eu coloquei: ela acertou na mosca. Mas não aceitou.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

_wtfbarbis 11 7 6 3
"Ela acertou o prego na minha cabeça" WTF GNT

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Daniel..C 12 6
Prefiro falar apenas "nailed it"

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

luizalfenas 25 8 153
Procurei o sentido da frase e sugiro o seguinte ditado de nossa língua para expressar a mesma idéia: atirou no que viu, acertou o que não viu

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vinidcali 13 11
Não! Esse ditado que você falou significa que alguém tentou fazer algo, não conseguiu, mas conseguiu fazer algo que nem estava planejando.

O ditado da lição, em Inglês, é usando quando alguém acerta algo perfeitamente, normalmente na primeira tentativa C:

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Edim7 7

Coloquei apenas, "Na mosca" e não foi aceito.. :'(

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

agdaoliver 12

O que me deixa triste nesse exercício, é que não aprendo nada. É decoreba e ponto final

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lucashenri786251 7

Vc tem que fazer um curso e seguir o canal do youtube "smalladvantages" vc vai aprender praticando assim q eu aprendi.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Ariel_Gomes 12

WTF, cara!?!?!? Aff não acredito que gastei 30 lingo-alguma-coisa pra ficar aprendendo expressões estranhas que nunca vou usar...

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

demeneck 4

Are you sure?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EmilyPinhe1 7

E a cabeça do prego? Kkkk

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlefBaldai 11

Mas por que se uma "she" ?????

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Laura427946 6 4

Quando eu não sei a frase,e fico irritada por causa disso,coloco "Dane-se".;-)

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RicardoLim320837 12

Deveria aceitar a tradução mais literal: ela acertou em cheio o prego na mão... e daí sugerir outras traduções mais adequadas ao contexto do português.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

55 "Thanks for the memories"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/357153>

Translation: Merci pour les souvenirs

13 years ago

Leave a new comment

17 Comments

Arnauti 25 25 25 21 20 18 16 12 11 11 11 9 9 3 2 2 97

Anyone got some good tips about memoire/souvenir? I googled a little but the results weren't great.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

A tip maybe: "mémoire" (hard disk to stock your memories) and "souvenir" (pictures, sounds, videos...)

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Arnauti 25 25 25 21 20 18 16 12 11 11 11 9 9 3 2 2 97

Thank you, that really helps!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Inlucia 14 11 4

même s'ils n'étaient pas ainsi sympa

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MauroQuil 11 10 10 10 10

Do we really say 'memories' in english when meaning 'souvenirs'?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

4and20blackbirds 12

I'm not sure if this is what you're asking, but I think that in this French sentence, "souvenirs" really means "memories"--moments you remember--rather than what English-speakers usually think of as "souvenirs" (snowglobes, coffee spoons, painted shells, etc.).

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

claswell925 25 25 25 439

This made me think of Bob Hope.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Inlucia 14 11 4

Personally, I thought of Fall Out Boy.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vander__ 18 8 7 7 2

Haha, same here. "Merci pour les souvenirs, même s'ils n'étaient pas si géniaux."

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Inlucia 14 11 4

"il goute comme toi, mais plus doux"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Yuujen 12 10

Est-ce qu'on peut dire merci de avant des noms ainsi qu'avant des verbes ou est-ce qu'il faut utiliser merci pour avec les noms ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Both are used, even in front of a verb:

Merci pour/de ton invitation - personally, I use "pour" before the party and "de" after, but it is so subtle that I think you can use one or the other interchangeably.

With a verb: merci de m'inviter / de m'avoir invité(e). "De" is definitely better in front of a verb.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Yuujen 12 10

D'accord. Merci de l'aide.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Doubleschnell 14 9 6

Why "les" in this case rather than "des"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

When the English sentence has "the" it means that the noun is specific (the memories I have gathered, the memories of my trip...), so in French, it will always be "le, la or les".

"des" is the plural of un/une = a/an/one

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

VikingBoat 19 14 13 12 11 10 8 2

And how do you say "thank you for the eiffel tower souvenir?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Merci pour le petit souvenir de la Tour Eiffel.

Curiously, the translation is not easy to convey the fact that this "souvenir" is an object and not a recollection of some time spent there (hence my adding "petit"). But if you say that to the person who gave you the little Tour Eiffel as a "souvenir", he/she will understand what you are talking about, obviously.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

56 Grammar: The Dutch past simple

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3846350>

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

1. The conjugation

Below you can find the Dutch past simple, or the imperfect, conjugation forms:

As the conjugation table above may indicate, the past simple conjugations of the Dutch verbs have two main variants: the stem + –te(n) verbs and stem + –de(n) verbs. Whereas the singular verb conjugation forms end with –te or –de, the plural verb conjugation forms end with –ten or –den.

When does a verb end with –te(n)/–de(n)?

If the stem's last letter is one of the consonants of the word 't kofschip, so a t, k, f, s, ch or p, then the verb will be conjugated with –te(n).

If the stem's last letter is another consonant (so not one of those listed above), the verb will be conjugated with –de(n)

The most important irregular verbs in the past simple are hebben (to have) and zijn (to be). Below you can find their past simple conjugations:

As you may have noticed, these verb conjugations really also only have two forms, depending on whether the subject is singular or plural: was (singular) vs. waren (plural) and had (singular) vs. hadden (plural).

Other verbs which are irregular in the past simple tense are, for example:

brengen – bracht: to bring – brought komen – kwam: to come – came moeten – moest: to have to – had to weten – wist: to know – knew

There is also a large group of verbs in which undergo a vowel change for the past simple, such as:

zingen – zong: to sing - sang bidden – bad: to pray – prayed

2. The Dutch Past Simple

Unsurprisingly, the Dutch past simple is used for describing events which have taken place in the past or a previous situation.

This tense is also used in the narration of a series of actions, events or situations which have taken place in the past.

It is used when we are talking about habits or actions, events and situations that have been repeated or taken place multiple times, in the past.

Lastly, the past simple can also be used for expressing an unreal condition in the present or future.

Example: "Als ik een zoon had, was ik een moeder." = "If I had a son, I would be a mother."

Useful to know: The adverb 'toen' usually introduces the past simple.

Examples:

Toen ging ik naar school = I went to school (back) then.

Toen deed hij dat = He did that (back) then.

Return to grammar overview!

Give Lingot

382 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

athanais 11 6

for memorization, it's easier to say: Soft Ketchup :)

17ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

zach_dooley 10 10 10 8 6 6 5 5 4 4 3 3

So the Dutch past simple is like the Romance language Imperfect tense correct?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jcarlosmjr 25 19 12 12 12 3

Once again an excellent explanation! The conjugation seems to be quite simple, although I think I might struggle a little in the beginning, especially when it comes to the word order. I guess it just takes some time to actually start "thinking" in the new language, instead of going for a word-by-word translation. Dank je wel, Lavinae and Team Dutch!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JamesT.Wilson 14 14 12 12 12 12 12 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 10 10 10 7 632

For those familiar with the term, the past simple is formed with D when the last consonant is voiced and T when unvoiced, right?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SJBlood 11 7 4 3 2 1

Yes, seems like it - voiced (D) for words ending in voiced consonants and unvoiced (T) for those ending in unvoiced consonants ...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iemchx 9

Thank you for the summary, it's really helpful :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

57 Why Are "The Days Of The Week" Different in Portuguese, Compared To The Other Romance Languages? :D

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/9681881>

AlphabetBoy123 15 6 4 4 3 3 2

Ola!

This is just a small question i've had in my mind for a while now, Why are the Days of the Week, so different in Portuguese, compared to the other Romance Languages?

I'll give some examples,

Spanish: Lunes, Martes, Miercoles, Jueves, Viernes, Sabado, Domingo

Italian: Lunedi, Martedi, Mercoledi, Giovedi, Venerdi, Sabato, Domenica

French: Lundi, Mardi, Mercredi, Jeudi, Vendredi, Samedi, Dimanche

Romanian: Luni, Marti, Miercuri, Joi, Vineri, Sambata, Duminica.

Now Portuguese....

Portuguese: Segunda-feira, Terca-feira, Quarta-feira, Quinta-feira, Sexta-feira, Sabado, Domingo.

(You can also say the days of the week in Portuguese, without the feira I think)

As you can see, very different from the major Romance languages. (Except Saturday & Sunday it's the same as Spanish)

Why is that?

I tried searching the answer on the web, but it kept on giving me different answers from each site I used, I don't know what to take as the truth.

So....

I thought maybe any of you might know. :D

Muito Obrigado! :D

-SageDaRoma123

Give Lingot6

141 year ago

Leave a new comment

16 Comments

RilkerBH 17 16 15 10 13

A few months ago, I was wondering about why we don't have "primeira-feira". So, I found something similar to this:

In the Roman Empire age, days of the week were named in reference to Roman pagan gods:

Solis dies - dia do Sol (sunday - domingo)

Lunae dies – dia da Lua (monday - segunda-feira)

Martis dies – dia de Marte (tuesday - terça-feira)

Mercurii dies – dia de Mercúrio (wednesday - quarta-feira)

Iovis dies – dia de Júpiter (thursday - quinta-feira)

Veneris dies – dia de Vênus (friday - sexta-feira)

Saturni dies – dia de Saturno (saturday - sábado)

Yet, at the Holy Week, celebrated by Catholics, the days of the weeks received other names because people thought that it didn't make sense call them by pagan terms in such sacred Christian time. It's called "Latim litúrgico - Liturgical Latin" Which is where we get this "feira" from the days of the week, it's come from "feria", that means "dia de descanso - rest day" in Latin. Who established these special names was Martinho de Dume, Bishop of the city of Braga, Portugal, in the 15th Century after Christ. So, the days were called:

Prima feria (sunday - domingo)

Secunda feria (monday - segunda-feira)

Tertia feria (tuesday - terça-feira)

Quarta feria (wednesday - quarta-feira)

Quinta feria (thursday - quinta-feira)

Sexta feria (friday - sexta-feira)

Septima feria (saturday - sábado)

All days were "feria", of resting, because were Holy Week period. Then, there was primeira-feira, but it received the name of "Dominus Dei", or "dia do Senhor - day of the Lord" (in tribute to Christ resurrection), which is where "domingo" comes from. "Sábado" comes from "shabbat", rest day of Jews.

Now, look. If "feria" in Latin is "dia de descanso - rest day", makes sense that we have "férias" for holidays (maybe came from holyday)/vacation. And the funny thing is that "feira" of our week are the days we work and study. Lol

Well, that's it. :)

13ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

GiovaneRibeiro 25 22 9 6

hahahahahhahahahahaha I was thinking about it while I was reading, why we work when the day of the week has "feria", I just won't do a stroke right now, because if I do, I will work saturday and sunday hahahaha

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RilkerBH 17 16 15 10 13

Hahahaha

It's all because the Holy Week. People didn't work on Holy Weeks. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MikaelMello 25 25 20 10 6 5 5 5

I did a little research and found something very interesting, in the Arcaic Portuguese, until the 15th century, in Portugal, we had the following days of the week:

Lues, Martes, Mércores, Joves, Vernes, Sábado Domingo (they never were in fact part of the Portuguese language).

This pattern of days of the week are from the pagan Latin, and the days we currently use, the liturgical Latin.

The liturgical Latin was added only to Portuguese apparently (among the major languages) in all days and Sabado/Domingo and derived are also influence from the liturgical Latin. Why Portugal/Brazil adopted those new names? No idea.

Fun fact: monday actually means moon day, which is the origin of Lunes/Lunedi, Luni, et cetera, all from the pagan Latin.

PS: I've just learnid this content, quite interesting, thanks for the question, my explanation may be a little confusing or with one or two wrong informations, but apparently that's the history. Source: here (Portuguese).

11ReplyGive Lingot7•1 year ago

AlphabetBoy123 15 6 4 4 3 3 2

Thanks for your answer! :D It seems as if I can always count on you to respond to my Portuguese questions. :D

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KevanSF 25 25 25 25 25 16 16 14 13 11 10 8 7 7 6 6 6 5 5 4 4 4 4 3 2 7 11

Interesting question, I've wondered this for years and years, but have always been too lazy to really investigate or research, so I'll look forward to reading answers here.

One small note, in the Italian days of the week, they actually end in an accented "i" which is actually difficult to see in some fonts. "dì" is a truncated way of saying "day" (compare to the Latin phrase that we often use in English "per diem"). So, the Italian days of the week are literally MoonDay, MarsDay, MercuryDay, JoveDay (Jove=Jupiter), VenusDay. I think Mars, etc, refer to the Gods rather than the planets.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlphabetBoy123 15 6 4 4 3 3 2

Yes, i've noticed the accent marks when I took a peak at Google Translate, and because I'm on my computer, I couldn't put any accent marks. Thanks for your answer. :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Snommelp 22 22 20 20 19 17 15 14 779

Yeah, I think it's Mars the god rather than Mars the planet. And it's the same concept as English and other Germanic languages, just with a different pantheon. Mars day vs. Tir's day, Mercury day vs. Wodin's day, Jove day vs. Thor's day, Venus day vs. Frigg's day.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IgorqOliveira 10 3

Well, I'm Brazilian and I can't answer you that(Maybe the Portugueses who came from Portugal to Brazil wanted to be different, I don't know), Maybe a Portuguese can answer you that.....And Yes, you can say the days of the week without "Feira"

Example Segunda-feira .. We usually say "Eu vou lá segunda"(I'm going there Monday)....

I always thought(It's my point) we say "Feira" 'cause in Brazil(I don't know in Portugal) there are days in the week which there's a farmers market on some streets (at least in my city It's)

Oops: Farmers market in Portuguese is "feira"

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MikaelMello 25 25 20 10 6 5 5 5

Actually, "feira" comes from the Latin word "feria" which means a week day when there are no feasts, that's why Sábado/Domingo don't have Feira in the name, even though we have markets open in the weekends ;)

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IgorqOliveira 10 3

So, I was almost right ^^ . Man, I'm really wondering about you, I always see you answering any question about Portuguese, are you a Portuguese teacher?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlphabetBoy123 15 6 4 4 3 3 2

Great, thanks for your response. :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Vitor.lu 17 12 12 11 10 8 5 5 3 2 408

Martin of Braga (or Martinho de Dume, but actually born in nowadays Hungary) was the one responsible for this, basically he opposed the implicit "paganism" of the previous names and advocated for the change, some useful wikipedia pages on this:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Martin_of_Braga

https://pt.wikipedia.org/wiki/Martinho_de_Dume

https://pt.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dias_da_semana

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ruama 17 14 12 11 2

There is a good explanation here:

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8894981>

See MelinaArins' comment.

The page that she mentions: <http://tinyurl.com/odtofpv>

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JMunich 22 16 16 16

Wednesday is "mercoledì" in Italian. Otherwise it sounds Spanish :) Since the languages are so close, this is actually a quite common mistake for people who can already speak Spanish (either natively or as a foreign language).

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlphabetBoy123 15 6 4 4 3 3 2

Sorry I didn't realize that, I'll change that right away! :D

Also, I sort of searched the days of the week in all the languages, besides Spanish and Portuguese, because I'm a native Spanish speaker, so you know, I don't know some Spanish, I can speak it.

Portuguese, I know a bit of it. :D At the same time, I'm learning. :D

With the Italian one, I just added an "l", and I can't put accent marks. Sorry for that mistake, but at the same time....no need to be rude, it was a small mistake.

Also, I don't think I can speak Italian, more like, I can't speak Italian at all.

Good luck with your Portuguese, and maybe your English, or something your learning from the Incubator. :D

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

58 I still don't get the difference between la and le...when should I use each one?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/17081> fule454 5

Give Lingot

04 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

[deactivated user]

Each noun is designated a gender by which it is identified with "le" or "la". One being masculine while the other being feminine, respectively. (Le = masculine, La = feminine) You should memorize each noun with its appropriate definite article, when in doubt, reference an online dictionary if need be. Though there are some patterns (along with exceptions to the patterns) that do occur which may help you. E.g. nouns ending in "-ment" are masculine (except la jument) so, l'argument, l'abaissement, l'abonnement and le classement are all masculine. Reference here for more assistance. <http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/genderpatterns.htm> I hope this helps, even a little.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

dannyjmt 10 9 8 5 5 4 4 3

These are the definite articles, le = masc. and la = fem.

LaGueule is correct that you should always learn new nouns with it's article to help learn the genders, but I would recommend using the indefinite articles (UN and UNE) to learn new nouns since sometimes you get some nouns that begin with a vowel. For example: "L'examen" and "L'université". The gender is not readily apparent to beginners that don't know all the patterns. But if you learn these words as "Un examen" and "Une université" then the gender is apparent.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Spencermacbrown 6 2

La (feminine) Le (masculine) La pomme Le pain. Unfortunately, all I remember from French class was that you slowly learn which words are feminine and which are masculine. I also have no more depth to my answer. Hope someone else can elaborate further.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

marinos

Le is masculine, La is feminine. you should remember most words by heart, you should identify some others by the ending -e which is feminin. e.g. américain / américaine. also nouns ending in -if are masculine where the feminine ends with -ive e.g. sportif / sportive

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Tatendaish 4

duolingo z helping mia lot inna studying dis ths subject

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

59 "Do not feed the animals."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/310053>

Translation: Ne donnez pas à manger aux animaux.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment
34 Comments

lolaphilologist 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 11 11 7 5 5 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 1465

I think "do not feed the animals" is a slightly different sentence than "do not give food to the animals". Same meaning, but grammatically fairly different

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

In French zoos, you will read: "Ne pas nourrir les animaux" (infinitive vs imperative).

22ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DianaM 22

"Ne pas nourrir les animaux" is accepted now 16Sep15.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AnnaTall 25 3 3 3

Sitesurf, do you reckon using infinitive rather than imperative (as per your zoo example above) makes it softer or perhaps the other way round?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

The use of an infinitive instead of an imperative makes the command less authoritative, more of a piece of advice, like:

(il est préférable/conseillé/recommandé de) ne pas nourrir les animaux.

This is just a polite trick, because in zoos, you'd better not feed the animals, otherwise you might be in trouble.

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rodge9 20 5

That's what I wrote and it was marked wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bizworld 23 419

I wrote just that, yet I was marked wrong. They used "nourris" instead of "nourrir" like you stated.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

magnolita0 20 19 16

yes it is. But "'do not give food to the animals" is "ne donnez pas de nourriture aux animaux".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Pedro_Muniz 14 9

Could it be "N'alimente pas les animaux"? Duo didn't accept that, but I don't know why.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zhebrica 20 15 11 2

I had the same question.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tsongololo 23 267

Doesn't that mean "don't swallow the animals"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pedro_Muniz 14 9

No, "alimenter" means either feed, nourish or supply. Though looking back at it, I don't think it is a verb which is very commonly used in that context. It would be better to use "donner à manger" (like Duo suggests) or "nourrir". Swallow would be "avalier" or "gober".

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TerryBarco 22 16 16 8 6 5 4 2 301

"Ne nourrir pas les animaux" was rejected; "Ne nourris pas les animaux" was the 'preferred' answer; Sitesurf says "Ne pas nourrir pas les animaux" is commonly seen in zoos. What part of nourrir is "nourris"? And what is the significance of putting "ne pas" together rather than round the verb?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

When the verb is conjugated, the negative tandem is placed on either side of the verb. But when the verb is in its infinitive form, you have to group the 2 negative words in front of the verb:

tu ne nourris pas

ne nourris pas !

ne pas nourrir.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

narcister 12 11 8

ne nourrissez pas les animaux !!! why isn't this accepted??

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

As said here before, should be accepted so we have to report it to Duo (through the dedicated button) in order to have them accepting it.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

narcister 12 11 8

I did and as a native French speaker I reported many mistakes but it doesn't seem to matter much.
Just blowing some steam... ;-)

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

I regularly receive email notifications saying that the answer I reported as correct is now accepted.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Cheyne 22 7

I can confirm this too. Sometimes they are weeks/months after i report; but, most of the time, the corrections seem to be made within a week.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Perseph1955 25 24 22 22 7 5 5 786

I have also had numerous reported changes incorporated into the lessons. Keep helping improve DL!

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

ben.kavanagh 17 14 6 2

I don't understand the solution precisely. Donner is a transitive verb so I believe it needs a direct object? Is "pas a" a pattern? Can someone please explain the grammar of this sentence?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

"Donner à + infinitive" is a construction meaning "to give something to +Verb":

donner (quelque chose) à manger = give something to eat donner à penser = give something to think about donner à croire = give something to believe

Other verbs can use that construction as well: j'achète à manger (I buy something to eat), je prépare à manger (I prepare/cook something to eat)...

In this particular sentence, "à manger" replaces "de la nourriture", a word that the French do not like much (for the sound of it?) and most of the time find ways to avoid. If you ever watch the cartoon "Ratatouille" (in English with French subtitles), you may notice that the word "food" is used many times but the word "nourriture" not once.

9ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

MaggiePye 21 8 222

Even in Quebec it doesn't seem to be a popular word in speech (in writing, it will show up). We use "la bouffe" a lot of the time instead.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ben.kavanagh 17 14 6 2

Thanks for the great answer! So then there is an implicit direct object built into the construction.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

oktorockto 20 5 2 2

Why donne AND donnez whatviscthe context for each?

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

If you have understood that "you" can be translated to either "tu" or "vous", you also know that their respective conjugations are not identical:

tu donnes vs vous donnez = indicative present

(ne) donne (pas) ! vs (ne) donnez (pas) ! = imperative

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

oktorockto 20 5 2 2

I'm practicing too early - of course this is why - thank you. I should use my brain more instead of posting questions.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

theflyingbarney 18 8 4

Had a bit of a brainfart and wrote 'ne mangez pas les animaux', which means something VERY different...

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

DianaM 22

Also a good rule to follow, though.....;-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Yveltalkun 6 6 5 4

If "alimenter" is not accepted, why is suggested?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

lincoln36 11 4

I wrote "Ne donnez pas à manger aux animaux". I thought it was a correct answer. Can a native French speaker confirm this?. Thanks

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Nouns in -al have a plural in -aux.

un animal -> des animaux

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sslawek 18 15

What about "ne donne pas aux animaux à manger"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

It sounds awkward with the indirect object first.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

60 "The early bird catches the worm."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1370597>

Translation: Le monde appartient à ceux qui se lèvent tôt.

13 years ago

Leave a new comment

29 Comments

d4nger 15

The world belongs to those who get up early. I like that. :)

142ReplyGive Lingot5•3 years ago

mathwizard1232 17 8 7 6 4 4 3 3 3 2

As someone who likes to be late to bed, and late to rise, I've never liked this line of sayings. ;-p

62ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

PugLove888 19 12 12 9 9 7

Moi aussi! I never liked this saying either

7ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

TairRee 13 5 3

Oh my goodness, thank you for this literal translation. I'm sitting here thinking "how the heck does that translate?" - This makes it much easier to understand. Thank you.

26ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

KaraLily 15 8 6 6 4

Yes, motivating people with worms is not effective.

24ReplyGive Lingot2•11 months ago

AmySison-B 14

At first i was like,'huh' and then i read your translation. Merci!

16ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

dfwgator 25 19 18 17 11 5 3 2 1001

Mais la deuxième souris obtient le fromage.

74ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

martinhern198124 22 2 446

But the second mouse gets the cheese! I like this one!

18ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

PugLove888 19 12 12 9 9 7

Now THAT'S a saying that I like! ;-D

3ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

wfluckett 16

A nice strong piece of cheddar.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Tartiflette_ 14 11 11 9 7 3 27

In German it's "Der frühe Vogel fängt den Wurm".

5ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

PugLove888 19 12 12 9 9 7

Merci! Danke!

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

MaurDL 15 12 8

What's literal translation of "the early bird gets the worm"? L'oiseau tôt obtient le ver?

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mountainrat 14

Why is there no mention of a bird in the french sentence?

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MaurDL 15 12 8

Because it is not a literal translation, it is the idiomatic equivalent.

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SmartKid8 13 4

Because you cannot translate proverbs and idioms word for word.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

The worm got caught because it woke up even earlier :-)

4ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

ElHueso 15 311

In spanish it's: "Al que madruga, dios le ayuda". (God helps those who wake up early.) It makes sense in spanish as lots of proverbs have rhymes.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

BrynDando 19 6

But the second mouse gets the cheese!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

valerie676364 13 9

Why isn't this also acceptable for the early bird catches the worm: La fortune appartient dans celle qui se lève tôt

Google translation is: Fortune belongs to the one who gets up early

That sentence was offered as a selection but marked wrong and I don't see anyone else commenting on it So perhaps I'm the only one confused.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

becky3086 17 14 8 6 3

I thought I would try these again since I gave up after the first lesson but none of them make any sense to me so this is just not going to get golden for me today.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

renanisonfire 5

"Deus ajuda quem cedo madruga" in portuguese.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Lujkan 13 5 1

Is lèvent part of conjugation? Like "Ils lèvent" ? Or not even close... ?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JosJorgensen 8

Yes. It refers to 'ceux'... those or the ones

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pluvieuz 15

So why is the reflexive pronoun singular (se) rather than plural?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Neco_Coneco 22 21 16 16 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 5 5 4 4 3 44

The reflexive pronoun for ils / elles is the same with il / elle / on which is se.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

ateep88 7

And it can make you very rich. As Paul Getty said his secret of success was "Get up early, work hard, strike oil...."

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

SEANO KELLY 10 1

Give me lingots ples.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

61 "The cat eats its food."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2346181/The-cat-eats-its-food>

Translation: Le chat mange sa nourriture.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

14 Comments

robhines 10 4

Why 'sa'?

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Hartlepublian 7 4 2

It's always dependent upon the object. If you say "Il a une balle" (He has a ball) you use 'une' because the word 'balle' is feminine. It works the same with possessives: "L'homme a sa balle." (The man has his ball) even though the subject is masculine (The man) his ball is still a feminine noun.

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

VictorHBracho 12 9

"Son" is used when male and "Sa" is used when female.. I just read it..

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

truebeatyforever 6

In this case, wasn't the cat masculine?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

robhines 10 4

Son and Sa is used when 'what' is male? Is it the cat, the subject of the verb, or the object, the food?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

VictorHBracho 12 9

Sorry my friend. It's used when the object is male/female :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jaani 9

Okay so, 'The boy eats his orange' will be ' Le garçon mange SA orange'? (sa, for orange is feminine and not son even though boy is masculine) am i right?

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Hartlepublian 7 4 2
Exactement!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Adtiana2 11 9 6
Ugh

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rrrhyme 17 7 5 3
Can 'sa' be translated to 'it'?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rakadaka 5

"It" would be ce. "It is" would be C'est. "That" wouldbe Ça. As far as i know "sa" is only used as a possessive for a feminine object. French has sa and son like English has his/her and its except the gender is based on the noun instead of the object.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

anna.prato 11

For some reason I thought it would be correct to say "Le chat mange sa propre nourriture". I learned earlier that 'sa propre' translated as 'its own'. It seems to me that " The cat eats its food " and "The cat eats its own food" mean the same thing. What do you think?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

62 Grammar: The Dutch Prepositions
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3782321>

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2
Content

Prepositions: introduction
Short overview of the most important prepositions
Prepositions of place
Prepositions of movement
Prepositions of time
1. Prepositions: introduction

Prepositions are short words which indicate a relation between different words in a sentence. This can be a relation of place (Where?), of direction (Where to?) and of time (When?)

Examples of prepositions:

Where? – Het glas staat op de tafel). = The glass is on the table.

Where to? – Zij fietsten van Parijs naar Lyon. = They cycled from Paris to Lyon.

When? – De school opent om 9 uur 's morgens. = The school opens at 9 am.

Unfortunately, learning prepositions is never an easy task. However, learning prepositions by means of an example sentence usually helps.

2. Short overview of the most important prepositions

Source: Grammaticawijzer 'Dutch Grammar at a Glance', Intertaal.

3. Prepositions of place

On this image you can see a part of the Duolingo world. You can say something about the places of certain things, building, Duo and even the mountains. For example:

The Eiffeltower is in the valley – De Eiffeltoren staat in de vallei.

The Eiffeltower is next to the river – De Eiffeltoren staat naast de rivier.

The Atomium is between the bench and the mountain – Het Atomium staat tussen het bankje en de berg (in).

Duo the owl is opposite the Atomium – Duo de uil staat tegenover het Atomium.

The Brandenburger Tor is at the foot of the mountain – De Brandenburger Tor staat aan de voet van de berg.

Duo the owl is on the top of the mountain – Duo de uil staat bovenop de berg.

The bench is in front of the Atomium – Het bankje staat voor het Atomium.

The mountain is behind the Atomium – De berg is achter het Atomium.

There is nobody on the grass – Er staat niemand op het gras.

Duo the owl is near the flying lingots – Duo de uil is dichtbij/vlakbij de vliegende lingots.

The lingots are flying above the mountain – De lingots vliegen boven de berg

The landscape is below the sky – Het landschap ligt onder de lucht.

The most important prepositions of place are:

4. Prepositions of movement

The table below includes an overview of the prepositions of movement:

5. Prepositions of time

There are two types of prepositions for denoting a relation in time. There are the prepositions which indicate an established time (think of hours, days, months, years or parts thereof) and prepositions which indicate a period instead.

At an established time

During a period of time

Extra

Flashcards

Prepositions visualized by means of images

Return to grammar overview!

Give Lingot13

672 years ago

Leave a new comment

12 Comments

Lull0000 12 9

Greetings.

So I just finished the preposition lesson for this tree and wanted to leave some constructive feedback. I found that lesson quite a bit less polished than the others up to that point and wanted to offer some suggestions. Let me know if I should post this somewhere else.

So the thing about prepositions is that they tend to be pretty arbitrary and basically depend on the verb you're using, so that makes this lesson a pain because you basically had to guess which preposition to use. A tips and hints section seems like it would be pretty helpful here.

First of, a lot of phrases in Dutch use "staan", "liggen" and "sitten" where the English phrases use "is", which is pretty confusing. I think it's worthwhile to explain the situations where these verbs should be used in Dutch, instead of expecting people to just figure it out.

Secondly, this section is full of separable verbs, which were never explained and also seem to confuse a lot of people. Honestly I wouldn't even count those as prepositions. For example, "Voorlesen" is basically a different verb than "lesen", so I think it would be better just to identify the entire verb as a new word instead of expecting people to attempt to guess how the "preposition" modifies the meaning of the verb.

Also, there are a few phrases that are basically idioms, which aren't really fair to expect people to translate. For example, "Met mij gaat het goed" means "I am fine.". The hints won't really help you get from point A to point B IMO. It wouldn't hurt to just have the hint translate the entire phrase "gaat het goed" to "is fine" or something.

I hope this feedback is useful in some way. I found this section to be a chore to grind though compared to the others since it's pretty much just guesswork based on the information provided. These are all pretty much the same sorts of things that I suggested for the German course and I think they apply here as well. Hopefully it can be improved in some way.

Cheers!

20ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

JaredBH 15 13 11 3

See the sticky'd post about all the stuff they have added but haven't made their way to us yet. They have added proper translations to lots of separable verbs that we can't see yet. Apparently it's Duolingo's problem.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

springbett 17 10 9 8 4

Is there any difference between dichtbij and vlakbij?

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

xMerrie 21 17 16 15 11 11 10 4 3 1

Not really. 'Dichtbij' is a bit farther away than 'vlakbij'. The translation could be 'closeby' and 'nearby'.

7ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

oppikoppi 13 13 12 12 11 9 6 3 3

vlakbij stresses something being really near, more so than dichtbij For example in a different sense, you could use vlak to say things like: 'dat is er vlak op' (that is absolutely correct, literally: straight on), or 'het ligt vlak vóór u', it's right in front of you... etc :)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Andre-Ruiz 10 9 5

Dutch is great... !!!

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

roferretti 14 7

How can I tell when to use "is" and when to use "staat" ? Because in the place prepositions on most examples the word staat is used, but in the example "De berg is achter het Atomium" instead of staat, "is" is used

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

talideon 24 24 23 22 20 19 13 12 186

It might be worth pointing out the 'beneden' and 'beneath' are both etymologically related, which might help with remembering the meaning of 'beneden' without giving you a false friend.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZelvaCZ 15 14 14 12 11 11 10 10 9 8 7 7 6 6 5 5 5 4 4 2 103
Wow, big THANKS! :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JaneEmily 17 8

Just to let you know, your link to Advanced Exercise 1 is broken. I get this coming up when I click on it: <http://gyazo.com/69046863159e9a17796d8dccf7db9b2d> :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 2

Hm...very strange...it does work when you open it via google.. :|

Thanks for letting me know! ^^

Guess we'll create some exercises for the Dutch prepositions ourselves. (;

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RubenFGDS 14 9 8 8

This is actually better than the prepositions' lessons... Thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

63 Finished the German tree (258 days) [insights]
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3545504>

benklinger 24 11 4 20

Hi All, I'm soooooo happy! Yesterday I've finished the German tree and the golden Duo appears at the bottom of my iPhone. Today I completed the mission by turning all lessons golden See screenshot.

I found Duolingo on the appstore and instantly fell in love with the concept of it. I chose German because I travel once a year to Frankfurt for a trade show and thought it would be great to understand and speak the language.

I started playing 258 days ago and haven't missed a day since.

The first week or two was fun and easy. About a quarter of the way down the tree things started to slow down. The lessons got harder and I needed more time to practice.

Some days I did only one lesson, and some I did more than 10.

I also had a few days with almost no time, so I did the Basic lesson again or timed practice with one or two answers.

I tried keeping everything golden in weekdays and progress on the weekends.

My native language is Hebrew, and although I've been speaking English for over 20 years now, I found some lessons challenging. I wish there were courses for Hebrew speakers.

I "bought" everything off the Lingot store, including the bonus levels and the Streak Freeze (haven't used it).

I met a tandem partner last month, who speaks German. It didn't go so well, because I felt I'm still not ready to speak. I think the next step for me would be to enroll to an intermediate course offline. I did a few tests along the way:

7 Months ago: 1.03/5.0

6 Months ago: 3.01/5.0

5 Months ago: 2.48/5.0

4 Months ago: 1.42/5.0

2 Weeks ago: 4.21/5.0

You can see an overall progression, although there are a few glitches here and there. I found that doing the test once a month is enough for me in the beginning, but then I shifted to focusing more on lessons.

I feel like I need a lot more learning, but I'm very proud of my achievement so far. I can't thank Luis and the team enough - you made my life richer.

I have more Lingots than I need! Comment and get a lingot.

Give Lingot18

992 years ago

Leave a new comment

137 Comments

95Shane 13 11 6 5 647

First of all, I'd like to congratulate you. But I have a question:

How do you feel learning German on Duolingo has helped you? You mentioned that you had some trouble speaking with a native. Of course, I'd assume your knowledge of German is definitely better after completing the course. However, in practical real-life situations (such as listening to the radio, speaking with a native, reading news/text online, possibly a job interview, etc.), how do you feel Duolingo has contributed? I understand that Duolingo is most likely not, nor should it be, your only tool for learning a language (in this case, German), but I'm curious to know, from someone who has used Duolingo extensively, how it has helped them.

EDIT: Of course anyone who has used Duolingo extensively, feel free to answer.

22ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

oletange 14 10 7

I listen to <http://www.democracynow.org/es/> I definitely could not do that a year ago. So my understanding of Spanish has gone from 0 to understanding a news cast. Actually composing sentences is much harder, but I am confident that I would have no problems as a tourist in places where they only speak Spanish.

8ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

lolaphilologist 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 11 11 7 5 5 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 1465

Thanks for the link! I've been looking for a good source.

1ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

That is actually a great question that I thought I knew the answer to, but it keeps on evolving.

I met a native speaker and found that we CAN communicate, but for me it still wasn't good enough and I felt I was wasting the other person's time. In my head I would translate from Hebrew->English and then English->German, and only then say the words out loud. This is frustrating and I believe it will improve as I practice more and more. If I was in a German speaking country things would be a lot easier, because then I would have been forced to practice all of the time. Last year I visited Berlin for 5 days (112 streak days on Duolingo) and found it extremely helpful. I was able to communicate with native speakers, very slowly.

My opinion is that Duolingo is a great tool to help you "kickstart" your second language. It's definitely not a replacement to intensive language courses, but it can save you time and money in the beginning. I now have basic German knowledge - 1700 words in my vocabulary, grammar, etc. - and I was able to achieve it FOR FREE, in my spare time.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

emmilennia 13 4 3 3 3 2

First, congratulations on your perseverance - completing a tree is no small task!

Second, and to your point of not feeling ready: I get the sense you're holding yourself back. Perfectionism is the bane of language-learning. I know this first hand. I have a BA in French, but you'd never know it. I was afraid to speak (terrified, actually) and kept waiting for the "perfect" moment when I'd be ready. It didn't happen! So 20 years later, I'm starting over because disuse made so much of all I learned fade. Now, I'm determined not to allow that fear to prevent me from speaking a language I love. (Because of the way my brain works, passive activities like reading and listening don't do that much for me; I need verbal use and training myself for recall.)

If you sit back and think on it, you'll realize 1700 words is quite a large vocabulary! According to some linguists, the average person only uses about 2000 in daily life (his or her "idiolect"). You're almost there :) You CAN do a lot with all you know, and learn new words/phrases as situations dictate, etc. to build on the excellent foundation you have. Accept that you'll make mistakes, and know that a lot of native speakers are actually quite patient with "new" speakers. Yes, exceptions exist, but I imagine those people are unpleasant in other areas of their lives, too; i.e., it's not you! :)

The TL;DR of this: you know far more than you're giving yourself credit for. Be gentle with yourself, accepting of mistakes, and know you'll do far better than you think.

14ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

beekysky 9 6 5

Perfectionism is the curse of many a language learner. This is one reason that people speak foreign languages better when drunk: they simply stop caring about making mistakes. Think about an average conversation in a native language and how many times people forget a name or a word or use "thingamajig". People make mistakes in language use all the time. In my opinion, if you are being understood, then you're fine.

(used to teach English as a Foreign Language)

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

emmilennia 13 4 3 3 3 2

Exactly! Yours is an important point. In a former life, I taught college English. Yet that doesn't mean my English usage is flawless - it isn't - or that I always have the appropriate word or phrase on hand - I don't. (I'm quite fond of iterations of "thingy" when a word or words won't come to me.) Conversations especially, which require thinking on the fly, can cause most of us to trip over our own tongues in whatever native language we speak. We shouldn't expect a foreign language to be any different.

(I used to work a lot with ESL students. It's very rewarding work, isn't it?)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

drkameleon 24 15 9 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 3

Awesome answer. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Angelastic 25 24 3

What you say about translating from Hebrew to English to German in your head is something that made me a bit skeptical of Duolingo. I learnt Japanese and Maori at school, taught in English by English native speakers (I'm also a native English speaker), translating a sentence or a word at a time and only having an actual conversation once a year in a dreaded oral exam. I even wrote some software to create random sentences in Japanese and English and test myself on translating them (I had to get the translation exactly right though, since it only came up with one version of the sentence in each language, not multiple like in Duolingo. It was like flashcards but for sentences randomly generated from known sentence structures and word lists and some rules for transforming words into their different forms.) I did well in exams and I enjoyed learning the languages but I have never had a conversation in either language with a native speaker, and I hardly remember anything now. But then, that was all before 1998.

When I learnt French, the class was taught in French (I'd read a book beforehand to get the basics) and I found it much better. Learning in the language itself, I could actually understand and speak French as it was, instead of translating it to or from English first and then understanding or saying it. I realised that constantly translating was the wrong way to do things; it discouraged fluency (it takes more time to translate something into another language than to just translate it to the 'language' of your brain to understand it) and make intrusions from English grammar more likely. Plus, all that switching between languages is tiring. It's also very useful to know how to ask questions about the language in the language, so you can ask native speakers even outside the classroom setting. So when I discovered Duolingo after I already knew French reasonably well, I used it sparingly, afraid it would get me into bad habits. I tested out of most of the tree after learning French in other ways. I passed my C1 exam recently.

Now I'm learning German, and I've had German classes taught in French and some taught in English (well, the teachers talked German a lot too, but would explain things in the other language if necessary), in a fairly conversational way. I don't feel like I understand enough to listen to podcasts or songs or read books very easily yet. I recently (15 days ago, as you can see) got back into using Duolingo, and have found it useful for practising various grammatical rules and words that we haven't gone over in class much, and which I probably wouldn't have the discipline to study every day otherwise. I think it's good in the early stages of language learning (I'm doing a B1 class but I didn't study much while doing A1 or A2, so I don't know all the grammar.) I like that it encourages listening and speaking as well as reading and writing, too. But once you're more fluent, I think it could be dangerous to go back to this sentence-by-sentence translation.

I'm using Duolingo for French again too, but since I've already completed the tree, I'm just doing the immersion. While it's still translation, the point is to first understand it in the original language, then figure out how to say it in English, rather than translating into English in your head in order to understand it. Plus there are more complex sentences and there's some longer reading and understanding and research needed to do it. In most cases I understand the French without effort, and I enjoy the challenge of finding the best way to express the same thing in English.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

95Shane 13 11 6 5 647

What a very interesting, detailed response. How exactly does one not translate? I completely agree with what you have said about how translating is tiring and slows things down. But overcoming that "translation" barrier seems quite challenging. Do you have any tips for someone learning a language to do this? Any practice techniques/methods?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

drkameleon 24 15 9 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 3

"Force" yourself to actually think in the language. I don't mean just reading, watching movies, talking with natives, etc. All these are perfect. But...

Force it into your everyday life, like in your (sub)conscious stream of thought. E.g. Instead of saying "I'll go to the kitchen", "say" it in... whichever-language-you're-practicing. Sounds funny? Not really. After a while, any language will suddenly feel really familiar and you will actually be thinking in the language.

Try it! ;-)

P.S. Of course the above requires a fair mastery of the grammar beforehand, so as not to end up "saying" things that do not make any sense.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

95Shane 13 11 6 5 647

Thanks for the tip :)

I don't think it sounds funny at all. That's quite a good suggestion. Definitely sounds like it will be intensive at first, constantly having to think about this and that. But I guess that's part of the learning process. Looks like I better start whipping up some common everyday phrases :D

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Angelastic 25 24 3

When you learn a new word in your native language, you learn what it means, not just that it's another word for something else. Say somebody tells you that 'grin' is another word for 'smile'. Maybe in the beginning you'll have to think, 'ah, they mean smile' whoever somebody says 'grin', but eventually you'll just know what 'grin' means. And let's say someone shows you a boot and tells you it is a boot. You then remember that that thing is a boot. You don't remember, 'a boot is a kind of shoe that goes up higher on the leg' and substitute that phrase in your head every time someone talks about a boot. You just know what a boot is. So try to think of the language you're learning the same way; attach the new word to the concept, not to your word for it. It may be that the closest word in your language doesn't even map to exactly the same concept.

As for strategies, well, I guess I first learnt this by being in a class that was taught in the language. There was not always time to translate what the teacher was saying; eventually I just had to understand it. But if you can't do that kind of course, try reading books or listening to podcasts or songs in the language, or watching movies in the language with subtitles in the same language (because you can sometimes understand writing more easily than speaking, and this way you will know the spelling if you need to pause to look something up, and alternative ways of saying things if the subtitles are abbreviated.) If you don't understand a word, try looking it up in a monolingual dictionary first (I think there are learners' dictionaries out there which intentionally have simpler definitions that learners of the language can understand, so you could try one of those), and only if you don't understand that, look it up in a translation dictionary. Try to stay in the language if you can, instead of going outside it and translating to your own language.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

95Shane 13 11 6 5 647

I found this very helpful. I will definitely be applying this to my language adventure.

I think I will apply that suggestion and practice it using Anki. I'll probably have a picture associated with the word and try to just drill it (i.e. associating the word with a concept, as you mentioned). Perhaps I'll have the "translation" (more like a definition, hence why I quoted it) in the target language (would of course, have to be very simple and to the point).

I completely understand what you were saying about subtitles. My course/book (with audio/CDs) has text for all the dialogues. I have trouble just listening; however, when I'm reading along with the dialogues, I seem to understand things very well. Which means, I probably should also start training myself to understand the dialogues at normal speed without reading along.

Cheers!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

AntoineLP 7

I totally agree with 95Shane question... Reading that you weren't able to speak with a native speaker sound frustrating to me.

So I will tell my point: I am from Madrid, where I began to study German. I reached an A2 level. So I decided to do an intensive course in München. The first day I could not remember any word, but at the end of the month I could make myself understandable for a German speaker, and also understand them a little bit. The thing is that all the words that didn't appear in my mouth at the beginning appeared at the end.

With Duolingo I HOPE will be the same. Doing exercises all the time to learn vocabulary. Then practise to reach this vocabulary in mind faster and have a normal conversation.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

malloryraymond 13 11 8 6 5 2

la cosa es que cuando alguien esta estudiando una idioma, es facil aprender. pero cuando TIENE QUE USAR las palabras, es dificil porque no puede decir "lo siento pero no quiero hablar en aleman." no hay otra opcion.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

moodswinger 23 16 13 62

Si ya tienes un nivel A2 de alemán, Duolingo no te va a valer de mucho, porque el curso, ahora mismo, te permite alcanzar un nivel A2. Quizá un nivel B1 en comprensión escrita. Esto está corroborado por los hablantes de alemán que han completado el árbol y tienen conocimientos del MCER. Desde luego, Duolingo no te prepara para la expresión oral ni escrita, o la interacción, y la comprensión oral tampoco es perfecta. Te recomiendo que pruebes con otro idioma, o que hagas Immersion. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BiaOliveir8 12 12 12 6 6 3 2 125

Man, all this comments said me what I needed to no more be stuck on the perfectionism. Thank you all

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

AyeletW15 16

wow well done! I would also like to learn Hebrew on duolingo because I am doing modern Hebrew GCSE and I think Duolingo would be a HUGE help!
(I was going to give YOU a lingot when I was reading your story but I noticed your comment at the end...)

13ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

banjolelegirl 17 9 8 6 3 27

I'd love to see a Hebrew course as well. My vote for that!

8ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

torhadas 12 9

I am speaking Hebrew as a native language and I would really like to help with this course!

1ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

Auragenerator 20 5 5 2

I am also fluent in Hebrew and would like to help with the course.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

catglasses 12 5

I'm having a hard time finishing the tree because of the time involved with the increased difficulty. I think I'm going to use your system of maintenance on week days and progression on weekends.
That's a great tip!

9ReplyGive Lingot11•2 years ago

JeffA2 25 17 13 11 8 1061

Congratulations, you've made great progress!

But I have to take issue with one thing. You say that you don't feel that you are ready to speak! There is no single activity that will be more helpful in learning a language than speaking. Being forced to produce the language in real time will get you farther than taking more classes (which doesn't mean you shouldn't also take classes).

The truth is that you certainly know more than you realize you do, and even if you make mistakes, pushing yourself with speaking will do you a lot of good. If your previous speaking partner was not patient enough, or was too advanced, I'd suggest you look for someone more suitable. But don't give up on it, and don't wait until you think you are perfect before you even try.

9ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

yeahbuddy34 17 11 11 9 8 8 8 3 3 2 2

I completely agree, making mistakes doesn't matter, it's actually really helpful throwing yourself into conversation, assuming you're not uncomfortable with whoever you're speaking with

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lolaphilologist 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 11 11 7 5 5 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 1465

I second what JeffA2 is saying emphatically. I think that many intelligent people find it much easier to master "reading knowledge" of a language because there is an unavoidable period of embarrassment, humiliation even as you tackle conversation skills. You just have to accept a few bumps in the road as you learn by making mistakes. I tell myself that I'm going to make 10,000 mistakes before I'm fluent, so you might as well dive in and make them if fluency is what you want. Best of luck!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

absolutely. I will give it another go soon enough.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ilwongy 16 15 14 14 14 7 6 6 5 5 2 1

so many philanthropists on duolingo, selflessly giving away their precious lingots, great to see

7ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

Spiritfire 16 14 11 10 7 6 5

Also, there are so many here giving away their precious time helping others. This site (and a couple of others - lang-8 for one) really provide some bright spots of human interaction.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

NathanLeee 14 6 5 4 4 2 2

Herzlichen Glückwunsch und gut gemacht! Sehr fleißig bist du auch!

6ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

jakhongirb 21 14 4 146

Congrats! I wish the tree could expand into more advanced levels for those who completed the tree.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Anton_Rich 12

Books are more suited for that, don't you think? I wish I were able to read Nietzsche in German right now :)))

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Nietzsche had an enormously huge vocabulary and is sometimes difficult to understand (even for German natives). I don't want to discourage you; it's a great aim to reach, but it's very tough to accomplish reading Nietzsche in German (and understanding him ;-)).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tcgriffin 19 18 16 15 9 7 5 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

Not that it would solve that problem, but maybe vocab for individual writers would be a good idea for a bonus skill.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

ALoUSyUseRnaME 25 25 16 9 5 5 4

Congrats! Have 5 lingots! (It's my tradition for people who complete their tree, so there's no stopping me) ^_^ Anyway, it's interesting to see that your certificate scores had decreased twice, and then made a big jump. I have also been experiencing things like that, my scores haven't really been getting any better... anyway, I hope I can improve sometime just like you... :)

5ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

FluffyUn1corn 8 6

Congrats! Still working on mine. Is taking a while. The tree looks sooooo long, don't know how I'll finish it :)

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

twitts123 18 7 7

Awesome work you accomplished! Keep going and never stop improving and learning! :)

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

ludwigzhou 25 25 15 11 10 10 7 6 6 6 5 4

Congratulations! I just started. I wish I could finish the German tree in a year

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

galaxy 16 6 2

Well done! Truly an inspiration. I want to go on an exchange to Germany at the end of the year so I really need to finish at least half the tree before December. Fingers crossed!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

moodswinger 23 16 13 62

Congratulations! I think Duolingo really doesn't prepare us for speaking. I recommend that you find a course that's based on the CEFR, since those tend to place a strong emphasis on not just speaking (to an audience), but also interaction. :) I wish you luck and hope you'll keep practicing. Maybe another language?

P.S. I have almost 500 lingots, so don't give me any! ;)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

robstar1a 14

Ich lerne Deutsch auch. Viel Spaß! Herzlichen Glückwunsch!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

luizdameerkat 5

258 day streak, that's impressive. I started duolingo 9 days ago, very intriguing app. Very good to see someone offer this type of help without taking your money.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Alireza_B 11 8

Nett!

What's that "Real world practice" button for?

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

AureliaUK 25 25 21 12 12 11 3

When you get to a certain point in each course, DL actively encourages you to start translating actual documents in the Immersion section. The "Real World Practice" button presents you with a [randomly selected?] document to have a go at. I suspect this happens at the point the system tells you that you can now read 50% of real documents.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ColinIR 10 3

Wow... does the golden owl only appear if the whole thing is golden?

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

Nope, the owl appears when you finish the tree, regardless of golden.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

im_benj 21 8

Congrats man.. I hope to reach in your level soon!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Ricardoesteves 14 10 7

Congratulations, now i leanr english but is not to easy for me, you are an example of dedication Bye

2ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

angelique2020 15 10 9 6 3 3 2

Congratulations on finishing the tree! I have yet to finish half, but I'm striving to finish the whole thing by the end of summer.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

IndiePotato 25 9 9 4 3 2 2

I'm going to give you a Lingot anyway.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

svechinsky 18 10 3 3

ל"סחטו א"ח I'm taking the german course too and I'm also a native Hebrew speaker. But I do think that we have an advantage over native English speakers since we have genders in Hebrew as well.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

PeterKiong 11

Great inspiration for me! I am going to learn it in less than a year! Thanks so much!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

RenataDeDeus 11

Gute gemacht!!! :) I started the german course this week and I am loving this app!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Ajna 25 8 7 831

Congrats :)!

Can I ask for some advice dealing with the most obnoxious parts, like adverb I, full of idiomatic phrases and quite challenging to master (=doing a 20/20 on timed)?

How did you get past them?

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

Practice makes perfect.. ;) Also, if you find them challenging, don't do timed practice.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ajna 25 8 7 831

I do timed practice PARTICULARLY when I find them challenging ;)

I guess that I would have not made it in more advanced lesson if I hadn't hammered my skill with them.

But thanks for the advice anyway :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Valentina0407a 8

very well done. I congratulate you because it is not easy.. People with many lingots, can you give me a lingot please??

2ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

Fazac 24 22 18 13 11 77

Nice work!

Slightly off topic, how did you take that screen shot of the entire tree? Looks awesome!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

I used a chrome extension called Webpage Screenshot, and edited the file later for privacy.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

luizdameerkat 5

I was thinking the same thing! please, do tell!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ajna 25 8 7 831

I guess with something like this, guys:

<http://awesomescreenshot.com/>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Avimelech 19 16 12 3 102

Firefox has a function built in at the command line to do a screenshot easily. Steps on Windows:

Shift+F2 to open the command line

Down in there type: screenshot filename.png --fullpage [enter]

It will be saved to your desktop.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

princess_sheerio 7 6

Watching EasyLanguages on YouTube is a good idea, since they ask native speakers simple questions and have the translations on the screen.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

CJKennington 12

CONGRATULATIONS! How do I get the "Real World Practice" link under my "Strengthen Skills" link? It is nonexistent.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KieranLillis 10 3

Congratulations!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

mavioz 10 6

Such commitment is the key to learn a language. Congratulations! By the way which course did you take? Can you share the link please?

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

I didn't take any course yet. Just met someone from Facebook.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hselcukozkan35 14 10 9 5 4

Congratulations !

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

xeno78 25 7

Congrats! My French learning journey has been slightly on-and-off because there were days when I completely gave up and stopped practicing. However, now I have decided to do at least a little bit of practice every day and maintain a streak (19 days so far). I have completed about half my tree, and hope to finish it before summer ends. Best of luck in your future endeavors! Cheers :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

philjemmett 13 6 5 5

It's great to see the entire tree glowing golden. That's a really inspiring sight to see to push me on to get that tree finished too! Well done!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

diamandog 12

Congrats that is awesome!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

SethFriday 9 6 6 5

Congratulations on finishing the tree, you definitely earned it with your hard work. I think the hardest part for all of us is taking what we've learned into spoken conversation, but sooner or later we will have to. Weiter so! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

nnamuuun 5

Wow..im only starting..can't wait till i become like you :))

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

MissEngland 17 9 8 6 5

That's something I can only dream of. I like your strategy of learning on the weekends, and "goldenizing up" on weekdays. Only recently have I started making my tree golden - it's great for my learning, as I sometimes have to keep going over certain skills. I'm just about to head into a great grammar section (adverbs, adjectives, verbs and future tense), so I think it'd be best to wait for the weekend. I enjoy speaking German a lot, and I do like to see if I can translate common spoken sentences into German as I say them in English. I tend not to be able to do the spoken exercises, mainly because it does not pick up my words correctly. I'm proud of my progress, but can't wait to finish that tree!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

saladism 16 2

Congratulations.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

djduolingoad 15 10 4

Gratz!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Anton_Rich 12

I'm intrigued to here from you about your speaking experience. I hope you will have more speaking practice.

P.S. Congrats!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

NazaninTamari 7 4

Herzlichen Glückwunsch und gut gemacht!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

freewneel 9

You are an inspiration to us all.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

AquaV1tae 7 5 2

Good job! I started the German tree and was immediately discouraged because of the hard, and extensive, article system. That's the only thing about German that bothers me. Other than capitalizing nouns.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

AureliaUK 25 25 21 12 12 11 3

There are offline courses in Tel Aviv:

<http://www.goethe.de/ins/il/lp/deindex.htm>

Or maybe you could consider taking an intensive/immersion course in Germany for a couple of weeks?

<http://www.goethe.de/ins/de/enindex.htm>

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

lInvader 14 4

i see that you bought with lingots the bonus skills. however i dont have anything about chirstmas that i can buy although i gave plenty of linglots. how did you acquire that skill?

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

It was available during Christmas. I also can't see it in the iPhone app, just the website.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lInvader 14 4

i can't find it on the website neither. and i'm feeling like i'm missing something valuable :/

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

hang tight till christmas and it will magically appear

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aldittli 14

Congratulations. I finished the tree in almost exactly a year. I tried to do one new lesson a day. I'm still working on getting everything golden. Don't give me any lingots. I have more than I'll ever be able to use. If you want to be able to speak it, you need to dive in and not worry about your mistakes. You'll make lots but that's how we learn.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

AndyBCFC 10

Congratulations! I admire anyone who can stick with something from start to finish. I had the initial excitement phase and got to level 3/4 when I first discovered duolingo, then returned just over three weeks ago, reset my level, and I'm making sure to keep the streak going now. Good luck improving your speaking, that's something I want to work on alongside duolingo.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

JenniferForJoy 14 8 2

You did it in under a year! Wow! I just started recently, and now I know what I have to look forward to with that golden tree. :) Hopefully I'll be able to see my own soon enough ^.^. Keep it golden!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

castro_alex0219 8

Wow thats amazing!!! would you say you can speak it close to fluently?

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

Definitely NOT! I can read it good enough and write it without mistakes - but I have a long way before I could speak it fluently. My guess is that my level of speaking is like a native 2 year old (which is not bad because I started learning only 260 days ago..)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rodrigoalvesv 10 9 5 5

Congratulations, Ben!

That must be very hard to keep up for such a long time. Did you use any other material beyond Duolingo's lessons?

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

Thanks Rodrigo! I subscribed to German word of the day rss feed, and that's about it..

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LullyLace 10 2

Wow, that's a pretty inspiring post! Not that I needed the motivation, because this site is so much fun to use and it gets me excited with how quickly I find myself picking up German, but it's still nice to hear a success story! Congratz, man!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Thijmen98 22 22 13 11 26

A whole tree in 258 days!? That's pretty fast, I think. What are you going to do now? Just translating German texts or maybe another language?

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

I'm going to continue and improve my German.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kayleeqaz 9

Great job, man!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

CommanderTiger 3

I would like to learn the extra lessons. Please send some Lingots my way!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

b_andi2004 10 9 7 3

Well, this is really amazing. The entire German tree in one year! As you described on your post, it was a hard work. I think you had to make a good plan and follow it every day. This is normally not so easy, there are always some other things which suddenly are important. Just continue this way!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

BeatOhio 5

Congratulations! I am just starting German on here. I am taking German all throughout high school and thought this would help cause High School German is well I'm not gonna learn a lot. I have a question though, are you a native English speaker? If so did you find it hard?

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

I am not a native English speaker, though I started learning it when I was 6 years old - 25 years ago.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Shulique 11 8 2

I finished about 40% of my German tree in the 21 days I've been playing. Was your pace similar? because although it has been slowing down in the last couple of days I don't think it will take somewhere around 240 days to finish it. אותה שיחקת הכבוד כל

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

תודה. It sounds like you're progressing a lot faster than me. I did have 1 week of intense German when my wife went on a trip. ;)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

randallsurles 15 14 13 12 8 2

That's awesome! I just started German, but what I'm really waiting for Dutch because I'm hoping to apply for a job there next year - I think they are similar.

congratulations again!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

possum404 20 6 5 2 2

Based on the comments here, there are several Hebrew speakers on Duolingo. So . . . when can we expect the Hebrew-English courses? :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Shulique 11 8 2

Different letters, completely different language (not even the slightest similarities between English and Hebrew like it has with Spanish, German etc.) So I doubt Duolingo would ever offer courses in Hebrew (and Japanese, Chinese and Arabic for that matter) - coming from a native Hebrew speaker.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

possum404 20 6 5 2 2

I don't know . . . they're working on a Russian course. Seems to me that would present those same objections. Different letters, completely different language that bears no relation to English, etc.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Shulique 11 8 2

Well, Russian is written with the Cyrillic alphabet, which is closer to the Latin alphabet than Hebrew alphabet. On both cases, I don't know how they could make it work because you first have to learn the letters so you could read basic words, and Duo doesn't give you any lessons like that. But who knows? :o Anyway, for me it's easier to learn German from English than from Hebrew because the two are very similar.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

there's a course in beta of English for Arabic speakers, so it's just a matter of time before the release the reverse course as well. And since Hebrew and Arabic are sister languages, my guess we could see a Hebrew course in beta in a matter of months (English for Hebrew speakers) Duolingo is releasing a new course every week.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

new.england.jess 25 24 4

Major kudos to you, sir!

You mentioned you had difficulty speaking German with a native - do you think that you need the offline course just to practice and gain confidence with speaking, or is duolingo weak in a specific component (for instance, understanding written words may be easy, but recalling which words you want to use when speaking may be difficult)? I ask because I'm trying to combine duolingo with various books and videos and I wonder how much failing to regularly speak the language will hold me back.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

arminmiry 9
you are the best

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

wordchemist 13 7 3
Congratulations and thank you very much for sharing your learning experience! It is inspiring!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Sisibrazz 7
Congratulations from bangkok!!! I restart my duolingo again 4 days ago, now i really hope that i can finish it!!! I will too start study in Goethe institut in some weeks, then i think Duolingo can help me with my vocabulary and with pronuciation. I use too other tools, it is Deutsche Welle <http://www.dw.de/aprender-alem%C3%A3o/s-2199> , really good!!! Weil ich deutsch sprechen will!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Sisibrazz 7
ohhh sorry people! it is only for portugueses speakers the site!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

klausw 14 4
awesome

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Vatsanshuman 19 7
You can try <http://app.wespeke.com/connect> for improving your communication skills in German. Hope this helps. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20
Looks promising! thanks for the tip.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lolpeace999 3
that is amazing

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

adpala 10 9 2
Congratulations! And, of course, it would be a great addition to add more speaking in the Duolingo repertoire. I find myself fascinated with the idea of complimenting Duolingo with another website to chat with people and exchange languages, because you can develop a real conversation without loosing too much time of your day, and these people often are native-speakers who can teach me more common expressions and show you a bit about the culture.

You should try that, and perhaps some of these new friends you will make can try to chat with you through skype or any other software in which you can improve your speaking.

Keep the good work! I hope I can put more time in Duolingo from now on! (:

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

jamie.wilk1 12

Good job! What an accomplishment!

Did you find that reading German is easier to understand than by listening?

I started 2 months ago and am really enjoying it. However, it seems that I understand when reading the phrases, but if I close my eyes and just listen, I cannot make out what is being said.

Luckily, I found a German social group in my city on Meetup, so I am going to try to attend some of the functions to practice.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

Reading is easier than listening because I do it in my head.. But if you want to learn to language you must dominate this skill as well, obviously.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Xydan 12 8

Thanks for the lingot. :P But seriously, awesome to hear that you've finished the whole tree. I'm not sure if I can even make it half way!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

invader4000 9

I'm trying to do the Italian tree in 6 months, which is my goal :)

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

EijiAhad 8

I hope I can finish the German tree as fast as you

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

azizove 5

Congratulation, and thank you for giving us an idea about your successful path.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

AhmadAliKarim 11 3 2

Gratulation! So what happen when we finish German?

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

mellenwix 21 13

Congratulations! I hope to do the same this summer. I am going to Austria for a year in September and I am trying to study this summer all I can to learn what I can before I leave. I have been trying a combination of Duolingo, Rosetta Stone, and reading German books and watching German movies. Very time intensive studies. Congratulations though! very exciting.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

JacinthPaul 9 2

Wonderfull!! and good to see you completing the whole tree!! Im gonna join you league soon :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

zonii 11 6 2 2

Thank you for sharing your experience. I feel a bit worried sometimes when it says, "now you can read 35% of real German," and then when I look at the text, I don't really understand much! Ha! BTW.. Do you have any websites to share that have helped you along the way? Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ali253171 7 5

fantastic it is i love duolingo my native language is persian(IRANIAN)and i know english and i found deutsch or german fantastic

0ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

ali253171 7 5

fantastic

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

ali253171 7 5

very good

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

hussein_961 17 5 2

ive found it very useful to surround myself with the german language completely by musik and movies and german speaking friends . ive still got a long way to go around 50 percent done . but due to my german speaking friends ive ranked as A2 so far which is great.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

dont_tread_on_me 11 11 8 7 6 4 2 2 2 2 2

Bro, that is awesome and very motivating. I'm trying to do the same right now with Polish, learning the words seem pretty hard though but I enjoy it. Anyway, good luck with all the other languages you might wanna learn in the future.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Aryamaan008 8 4 2 2 2

Hi, Congratulations! I hope that I also get one for Russian(just started though :P)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

noagreene-1 7

i think the way your progress is shown in the tests is super cool, it looks like you have worked very hard and deserve the golden dou, congrats!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

harryhos

hi

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

benklinger 24 11 4 20

sorry, hi doesn't qualify for a lingot. you'll have to do better than that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

64 What is the Incubator?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204979580-What-is-the-Incubator->

Duolingo's Incubator allows hundreds of volunteers to give life to new language courses. You can apply to join one of the teams of language enthusiasts who build and maintain courses. Like Duolingo, this inspiring community of contributors believes in free education for the world.

You may read more about contributing to this unparalleled project in the Terms and Conditions.

65 "My apartment is on the fourth floor."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3246807>

Translation: Mon appartement est au troisième étage.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

20 Comments

DianaM 22

I'm sorry, but this is just idiotic. I was born and raised in the States, and I still think this is silly. The fourth floor is the quatrième étage. Period. Whether that floor is three or four floors above the ground floor is different depending on cultural convention, but "fourth" is "quatrième", regardless. Pffft.

36ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

marcoiris1 20 19 11 9 9 8 8 3 2

Yeah, I'm kind of over the mods of this course. It seems like they are very pedantic. Floors are numbered differently in different buildings in the US. What's important is that "troisième" means "third" and it is EXTREMELY confusing to students in a course like Duolingo to expect a translation of "troisième étage" to "fourth floor".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TartanArmyDosh 24 19 6

well, that's a lot of Cp, as in the UK, the fourth floor is the fourth floor, same as here in France. Didn't realise this website was 'SO' USA oriented, till now...

14ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ariaflame 25 25 14 1342

It accepts fourth floor too. It's just got to pick one for the comment translation. Or rather it accepts third floor for troisième étage (I think)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EllenOConn2 16 8 4 2 1

its not just the US that speaks English!! I'm from Ireland and the 4th floor is the 4th floor!! Very annoying.

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Elize13 13 11

Surely this is about language and not cultural differences in floor numbering. Fourth cannot be third in any language.

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MrTurtle14 16 10 9 9 8 5

Why is a correct solution "au troisième étage"?

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

greenteagirl67 25 22 18 10

The floors are numbered differently in the US and in France. What Americans call the 1st floor is for them the ground floor; what we call the 2nd floor, they call the 1st. I agree, it's a little strange that Duo enforces this, but I can understand why that they do it so that people realize that if they ever do go to France, they have to be careful about how they talk about floor levels. :-) Does that answer your question?

21ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

royalhalo 25 25 25 25 25 1175

And it's really so unfair! In Tunisia I lived on the FOURTH floor, LOTS of stairs, but I had to say the third floor. It sounds so much less impressive. ;)

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KaitteKat 24 13 8

I'm in Canada and the first floor will often be called the ground floor, but the floor above it is always the second floor.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MrTurtle14 16 10 9 9 8 5

Oui! Complètement. Merci!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AdrianJosh 19 19 10 6 5

means floors are less than current floor in France?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FabioDiglio 19 17 12 95

fouth floor = troisieme etage ? O.o

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Loviken 20 10 3 3

Could you say: "mon appartement se trouve au troisième étage"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

davout 25 6

Yes - as an Irishman I'm pissed that I gave the 'incorrect' translation because this is designed for Americans. If you can't format a question that makes sense for all English speakers then remove it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

percyflage 22 18 10

Perhaps this should actually be a sentence like "Les etages peuvent avoir des nombres differents en les pays de la monde". (Please correct my French - I can't do accents)

This sentence and its multiple choice answers are silly and confusing.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Drachmas 18

In America the fourth floor is the fourth floor haha. This is blatantly incorrect.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mlindal 17 7 2

I think I get this although it still seems wrong.

The "rez de chaussée" is like the first floor, therefore 2nd floor is "premier etage"... and fourth floor is "troisieme etage"

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ariaflame 25 25 14 1342

Problem with different countries determining which floor it is that you walk in on ground level. In France and UK and Australia (mostly) that's the ground floor. Though my work place does have it differently, but then you can change floor numbers just by changing buildings without going up or down stairs there. I think it accepts both.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

66 "The early bird gets the worm."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2140382>

Translation: A quien madruga, Dios le ayuda.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

10 Comments

MaDhyan 25 9 8 2

'Early to bed and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise.'

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kinarich 20

Does anybody know the literal translation for this (this is my last question, and I've never seen it before)?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Saballama 15 10

God will help those who wake up early... not exactly figurative or an idiom, but whatever, it's easy to remember.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SamuelHalp 14

The only reason I got this as a multi choice question was because of the capitalisation of Dios after the comma.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

LexiBlakeley 16 2

that's using your eyes!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jagmicker 22

This was the very last question in the "no weak words". I thought this section was supposed to be a review, not an introduction of terms we have never heard of, and can't possibly translate! Time and again, the literal translation seems to have no relevance to the actual answer, so how in the world are we supposed to know this?! Seemingly, everytime I take this quiz, they come up with some NEW term like this on the last answer! As a student, it sucks, but I'm sure the instructors and the bot are enjoying punishing us!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Katjot 13

I think it might be because they added this phrase recently, because there were a few in the review that I hadn't seen before. If that's the case, then even though we'll get it wrong the first time around, it's nice to see they're constantly improving and adding more phrases.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LexiBlakeley 16 2

duolingo bot has sentience...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KenEvoy 21 10

Agree totally. They also seek over-literal english translations. Poorly taught section!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jimmybgood9 15

Again DL gets the English translation completely wrong. The correct answer is, "God helps those who help themselves."

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

67 "The check, please."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1146942>

Translation: La cuenta por favor.

13 years ago

Leave a new comment

31 Comments

David_AAA 18 17 16 15 15 14 7

In the UK "check" is only used for bank checks, in a restaurant we say "bill"

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CatMcCat 25 25 25 24 24 22 7 3 10

You don't spell it "cheque"? In Canada, the thing you write to promise money to someone else is a cheque (I can count on the fingers of one hand the number of times I've written a cheque in the last two years or more). I know people here do quite frequently call the restaurant bill "the check" (spelled that way, probably because of the US influence), but I've always called it "the bill".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaryMcC 20 3 2 2 1

Since when did British English use check as a noun at all? The word you are referring to is spelt cheque

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

David_AAA 18 17 16 15 15 14 7

Yes, I apologise for my stupid mistake, I don't know what I was thinking about. clearly : I didn't check the cheque when I paid the bill!

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

J9Z 25 7 6

Good discussion of an important phrase for travel. I really hope the next Bonus Lesson will be Useful Travel sentences or something like that!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kishoreholla 12

i have observed here in chile that they use el cheque for the check, never heard la cuenta. La cuenta is used for the bill in a restuarant. Any help?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rspreng 24

The bill in a restaurant (la cuenta) is commonly called 'the check.' Not the same as the check you get from a bank, or write to a pay a bill.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kishoreholla 12

Thank you. This is the problem with us for whom both are foreign languages. In india we call it as bill and nothing else.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FLchick 25 19 13 9 5 3 2 434

Furthermore, many Americans would just say "check, please" to their wait person.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cubeheater 25 568

Not in Canada

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CatMcCat 25 25 25 24 24 22 7 3 10

I'm Canadian, and I've heard people say, "Check, please", but it always sounds weird to me. Maybe the ones saying it are American, or have been Americanized. I just call it a bill.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lavmarx 15 15 13 13 12 9 9 6 6 6 4 3 2

I would never call "la cuenta" as "el cheque" from where I'm from "El cheque" is exclusively a check.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wardo1234 18

That's weird. I lived in Chile for a year and a half and I always hear/used "la cuenta" and never cheque. What region of Chile are you in?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tolby 13 10 7 2

El cheque and la cuenta can both be used interchangeably depending on where you are one may be used more frequently than others. Cuenta however refers to a bill and Cheque to a check.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GilesNunn 17 8 2 4

As a native English speaker from England, the word check as a noun in this context is used exclusively when asking for someone to check something eg. to check your luggage in customs. As such it has nothing to do with money.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Adina_atl 25 15

This was the very first thing I learned in Spanish! I'm so used to asking for La cuenta, por favor, that I've occasionally used it in the US to great confusion from the server.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lioninacoma 24 7 6 4 4

Go to SpanishDict.com and type in this phrase - all three translators render it as "The account, please." Not accepted here!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 2

<http://dictionary.reverso.net/spanish-english/cuenta>

<http://www.wordreference.com/es/en/translation.asp?spen=cuenta>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

VeronicaMe99954 11 2

In Puerto Rico we say cheque

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

carter.ag 13 9 7 6

Since there is no context, this sentence need not refer to a bill at a restaurant but also, potentially, to a situation where someone is writing you a check, but is being slow to pass it over. It seems funny that both scenarios would not be accepted...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 2

The kind of check that someone is writing you would be a different word in Spanish: "el cheque". This word only means "check" when that means "bill". <http://dictionary.reverso.net/english-spanish/check> <http://www.wordreference.com/es/en/translation.asp?spen=cuenta>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SvitlanaUdoenko 25 22 493

This was actually one of the first phrases I learned when I went to Mexico :) And here it's in the end of the tree... A very useful phrase, should be in the beginning.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

glowby 25 22 33

This phrase is much more important than Donde está el baño?, according to my ex.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CScubing 25 11 8 7 5 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 2 2

Even more important, mi amigo va a pagar.

3ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

meatmanek 14 11

"mi amigo va a pagar" -- "es" no es necesario

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

CScubing 25 11 8 7 5 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 2 2

Cheers. I have fixed it now.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Aperion89 16 12 8 3

My problem with this sentence is that it say "check" when it meant "bill" a check is what you pay a bill with they are not synonyms.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

A.BruceBor 21 4

Cheque,por favor. Should be correct also, el optional as an interjection.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

rebuuilt 19 10 4 4 2 150

it doesn't accept "porfa"

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

Christa627 16 9 4 98

How does this relate to the future tense?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

knickknacks12 14 3

I had to translate it from "La cuenta, por favor." And yet when I had to translate it from English to Spanish the same thing was marked wrong in favor of "cheque." Is this weird, or am I just making a mistake with something else?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

68 What are the longest and shortest trees on Duolingo?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/12532694>

Forzaltalia99 21 17 16 11 11 8 7 6 6 5 4 3 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 2

Just curious because Esperanto isn't nearly as big as the German or French course. Best answers receive lingots! Thanks (;

Give Lingot4

211 year ago

Leave a new comment

19 Comments

Pfiff 24 12 9 8

German is pretty long, yeah. I'm almost done... Anyway, Norwegian will soon have the most words and Esperanto is very short because they chopped off the last part of the course (jump to "Trimming the skill tree") in order to release it more quickly, but they want to extend it. I don't know how everything else measures up, though.

17ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

DuoFlash 25 13 9 7 4 2 2 2 489

The only thing I know is that the German tree is waaay longer than the Spanish one.

9ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

AbdullahAyub007 7

Check it out:No. of skills in each course ESPERANTO: 44 UKRAINIAN: 51 ITALIAN: 65 GERMAN: 121 FRENCH: 78 SPANISH: 61 PORTUGUESE: 69 DUTCH: 64 RUSSIAN: 78 SWEDISH: 66 IRISH: 64 TURKISH: 63 NORWEGIAN: 114 DANISH: 70 POLISH: 68 VIETNAMESE: 84 WELSH: 97

RESULT: GERMAN is the longest while ESPERANTO is the shortest!

Hand me over my lingots! :) Plz notify if mistakes found!

8ReplyGive Lingot16•8 months ago

Rhea1228 7 1

I give one to you! you really helped me!

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Erick9Hernandez6 19 12 6 6 5 225

have a lingot u deserve it :3

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Fantomius 25 25 25 25 14 13 12 12 7 7 7 6 606

RESULT: GERMAN is the longest while ESPERANTO is the shortest!

That's what I suspected, but I never took the time to verify.

Thanks for going through all the trouble to check!

I wonder, however, if what you said is still true today. (I'm writing this in February 2017.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

gingerninja3148 25 19 16 13 74

Esperanto has the shortest amount of skills but Turkish has the shortest amount of lessons. This is because a lot of Esperanto skills have 10 lessons where as the Turkish skills don't usually have a lot of lessons. I think the German tree is currently the longest although the new Norwegian tree will have the most words so it may soon become the longest tree.

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sjodni 19 18 16 7 3

Swedish is about average I think, GERMAN IS SO LONG IT'S REALLY KILLING ME, and the French tree certainly doesn't look too short either.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Nicolette1738 9 4

All I know is that Norwegian is quite long.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

anitrnwaju 20 16 9 9 8 8 7 7 7 7 7 6 5 5 4 3 3 2 1

In the languages I began to learn (from English : Danish, Dutch, Esperanto, Polish, Russian, Swedish, Turkish and from French : German and Italian), the shortest is Turkish (200 lessons) and the longest is German (459 lessons).

5ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

KierenMcCormack 25 25 25 12 12 12 11 11 11 10 10 8 7 6 6 738

the shortest one I have is the Spanish tree

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Shady_Hazem 15 12 10 10 10 7 6 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 3 2 2

I think the longest one is German and the shortest is Esperanto :D

10ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

CosmoKaiza 17 11 9 8 5 2

Ukrainian is pretty short too

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Shady_Hazem 15 12 10 10 10 7 6 5 5 5 4 4 4 3 2 2

But, I measured both of them and I discovered that Esperanto tree is the shortest one :D

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

French is long but i dont think it is as long as a few other courses, i know german has a bunch of lessons just about how to say "the" and its pretty long too

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bfoshizzle 25 13 12 10 7 7

If I remember correctly (perhaps I should practice German as I've really been slacking in that course), they have an entire skill on how to say "come(s) from Germany", so they are quite thorough.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

A.R.B. 25 12 11 2

It must be the German tree

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vidhya36 25 23 15 13 13

German is longest I met, although I am about to complete it, which became extra long with few more addition of trees in the middle. French is the next longest. Portuguese, Spanish and Italian are the shortest.

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

gregoriohombre 15 13 5

Most people in this thread were guessing it was either Norwegian or German (for English speakers). After counting the number of skills the two have, Norwegian has 116 skills and German has 122, (including bonuses). Compare this to say, Spanish, which has 63 skills (including bonuses). That said, this doesn't take into account the total number of lessons from all the different skills added up nor does it take into account the number of words learned from all the lessons.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

69 "The fish bites the mug."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/15062620>

Translation: Con cá cắn cái ca.

310 months ago

Leave a new comment

35 Comments

lumpydumpling 17 13 10 9 8 6 6 5 5 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 2

Wow, what a tongue twister! :D

57ReplyGive Lingot2•10 months ago

Kimichimi 9 2

This was one of my dad's favorites. So happy to see it in here.

17ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Albantar 14 11 10 8 8 6

awesome sentence! :D

17ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

TheDuoWarrior 12 319

Can someone explain the difference between Con and Cai? I believe it is because ca is an object and the other cá is a living things (fish)... but not sure...

8ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Albantar 14 11 10 8 8 6

Yes, con is the most common classifier for animals - including humans: con người

24ReplyGive Lingot1•10 months ago

[deactivated user]

cái is a common object classifier, while con is used for most animals.

6ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

stephen_dao 11 4 4

I'm Vietnamese myself and I have never heard of this phrase.

6ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

[deactivated user]

Well, we native English speakers don't say this either.

5ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

dd721411 12 10 8 7

Well, you've just done it! This is just an exercise to review what you have learned so far. The sentence makes so sense but it's grammatically correct.

Bạn vừa nghe đấy thôi! Đây chỉ là bài tập vận dụng những thứ bạn vừa học. Câu cú mang nghĩa hơi lạ nhưng nó đúng ngữ pháp.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Albantar 14 11 10 8 8 6

Many Duolingo courses incorporate such phrases that make no sense. It's "Duo humour" I guess. I'm sure many Vietnamese learners won't ever forget con cá, cắn and cái ca after this phrase! :D

5ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

dd721411 12 10 8 7

Defo! I had a really good laugh over that sentence.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

VPHAM01 5

Love this sentence!!

3ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

ItsLeAshton 25 25 16 15 12 7 7 6 6 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 4 4 3 3 2 2

Peter Piper Picked A Peck Of Pickled Con Ca Can Cai Cas!

2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

snapperdoozle 9 6 5 3

trời ơi!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

dd721411 12 10 8 7

OMG. This could be a wonderful pick-up line!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

snapperdoozle 9 6 5 3

When said, it almost sounds like "con cac can cai ca", or "the cock bites the mug".

-1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

dd721411 12 10 8 7

No, it does not. Due to the difference in tones between <cá c-...> (rising) and, sorry, <cặ c-...> (deep down), no misunderstanding would be made saying or hearing that part. Vietnamese writings without tone marks, on the other hand, may lead to misunderstanding as in your example "con cac can cai ca" -> "the cock/penis bites the mug" -> It's a monster! Run for your life!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

karennooyen 4

This is more messed up than "the fish eats the mug" -anthony and jason

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Nulponts 13 11 10 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

"cắn" was not accepted. Am I using an unusual input method? It looks the same to me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

dd721411 12 10 8 7

You can use "Unikey" to type proper Vietnamese. The Windows VN keyboard causes problems sometimes.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 2

The Vietnamese for Windows works fine for me: cắn. which is the a key then the 1 key not shifted and then the 8 key also not shifted. I tried zooming in but yours looked just like mine. However, if you use a different accent from a different language keyboard it won't recognize it even if it looks similar. <http://typingvietnamese.blogspot.com/p/typing-vietnamese-for-windows.html>

-1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

DiegoJaviUnlam 25 24 24 24 23 23 14 13 13 10 10 10 10 8 8 8 7 7 6 6 5 5 4 4 3 375

Sometimes I use the MS OS keyboard and when the sentences in Vietnamese are correct and exactly as the model answer, Duo shows the message "Almost correct!" (and when I begin the course many sentences were rejected and now they are accepted but not as fully correct). Then, using TELEX the sentence is fully correct.

I think I am not the only one with this problem. Anyways, I like to alternate the use of both systems. ;)

2ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Albantar 14 11 10 8 8 6

UniKey is what all of Vietnam uses so it's probably best to use that. It's an unintrusive little program that works very nicely. To type cắn, I just type cawns. For learners, this typing method also helps separate the tones from other diacritics, and reinforce the idea that the tone is a property of the whole word, and not just of that one vowel on which it happens to be written.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

kristen2210 10 4 2

haha strange phrases at the start but I finally realize the purpose of this lesson. nice work here guys

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Hannah1257 11 6 2

Say that 5 times fast.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

dd721411 12 10 8 7

You may bite your tongue by doing that :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Hannah1257 11 6 2

True maybe you shouldn't

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

EndMan92 6
weird sentence

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

hoolie86 14 12 10 8 4 4 3 3 2
i got a migraine trying to pronounce that

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 days ago

nguyenthao397 8 2
meaningless

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

cal.mark55 5 5
Horrible, horrible sentence

-10ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

dd721411 12 10 8 7
This is just an exercise to review what you have learned so far. The sentence makes so sense but it's grammatically correct. By getting such a bad impression of this sentence, you'll be remember it for a long time.

5ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

rmellor42 5
What I remember is your reply is incorrect ..."you' be remember it" is complete nonsense...like the sentence

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

dd721411 12 10 8 7
Thanks for pointing these errors out to me. My mind was not clear when I typed the comment above. I guess staying up late at 1 am trying to help learners of Vietnamese is not easy at all. :)

By the way, could you please help me correct my mistakes?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Hemsty2 3
I think you are doing a great job and am grateful for the chance to learn vietnamese - I will give friends from there a good laugh when I suggest they eat a mug rather than drink from it!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

70 – 89 of 912

[accessed March 9, 2017]

70 How to see the XP bar toward the next level (SOLVED)

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4921442>

Commons. 20 7

Duolingo has not removed the XP bar showing progress towards the next level. Here are the steps (you have to remove your daily goal though):

If you have a daily goal:

Change goal by clicking the wheel at the right.

Open F12 developer tools and change the value of the "data-goal" attribute in one of the radio inputs to the value 0. Select the input and click Save.

Complete a lesson or practice and you will see the bar on the left. It still doesn't show on the home page though.

If you don't have a daily goal, follow step 3.

Need more hacks? Post on my stream!

Give Lingot13

232 years ago

Leave a new comment

64 Comments

TheBryce 9 7 6 5 5

Maybe I'm blind, but where do you find "data-goal"?

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Commons. 20 7

To make it easier: right-click on the circle next to one of the options and click Inspect Element. You will see "<input name="daily_goal" type="radio" data-goal="[number]">" in the F12 tool. Then change [number] to 0. Afterwards, select that option and click save.

6ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

TheBryce 9 7 6 5 5

I should have read that more carefully, I was just opening the F12 tool and looking through all of that. :p

Anyways, thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Emily_Magee.02 9 4 3

I can't find the "<input name='daily_goal' type='radio' data-goal='[number]'" anywhere! is it on the left or right? because I can't find it!! please help! (sorry for the trouble!!)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

verq2909 17 7

Press CTRL + F on your keyboard to activate the search tool. Then just type in "data-goal" and it will be highlighted. Be sure to only change the value, not the text or it won't work :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Emily_Magee.02 9 4 3

It won't work, I tried it, and when I EDIT AS HTML it won't change it, I tried on a different computer and it did it, but it wouldn't save the changes! ;-(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CarlosJFort 16 7 5

If we use hacks to get back the progress bar, the Duolingo Team will think that removing it is a good idea and will keep the system without the progress bar. I think it's better to complain about the lack of the bar and do no hacking to get it back, so that they will see that the removal is a bad idea.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lucie.white 25 24 8 3 3

Wonderful fix until they (hopefully!) ditch the trainer! And fun to implement too! Thank you so much!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Iris_17 18 12 9 9 8 5

With me it did remove the coach function, but unfortunately it didn't bring back the xp-bar. Just the owl again with the invitation of setting a daily goal...

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Commons. 20 7

You have to complete a practice or lesson to see the bar on the "Lesson completed"/"Time's up"/"You beat the clock and got x answers correct" pane.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pablovimo 25 25 25 25 25 14

Hi! I tried to follow your instructions but I couldn't find anything called "radio input"...

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Commons. 20 7

Right click on the circle next to an option; click Inspect Element; find "<input name='daily_goal' type='radio' data-goal='[number]'" in the F12 tool.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pablovimo 25 25 25 25 14

I've done it and I changed to 0, but I still see the daily goal...

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Commons. 20 7

You selected the radio input you changed and clicked Save, right?

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

JHMcC 21

Where is the Save button? Was able to do everything except save the change. (Using Firefox - latest version)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JHMcC 21

Finally got it saved after multiple attempts. For some reason the "Save Changes" in the daily goal settings pane was ghosted out, and therefore couldn't save the zero setting. I'm not sure what I did to un-ghost the button to turn it green so I could save the changes.. Thanks! Nice hack.

So I have gotten rid of the goal setting and used the GreaseMonkey script to view the Progress Bar on the home page (as explained in another discussion topic "Bring back the XP levels").

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Commons. 20 7

Top right corner of the daily goal settings pane: Save Changes.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Konrad-Michal 15 14 13 11 9 4 1

I have Show drawer, Settings and Dock to main window at the top right corner and no Save Changes...

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Konrad-Michal 15 14 13 11 9 4 1

I got it! Thank you for your help very much!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

pablovimo 25 25 25 25 14

I've done it and I've practiced a lesson after it. As you said, I could see the XPbar of the level after finishing the lesson, but I still cannot see the general XP progress bar in the home page, where the daily goal still appears, asking me to select a daily skill which is pretty useless... Any way to return to the general XP progress bar? If a hacker like you can't do it, I guess it can't be done! Greetings from Buenos Aires...

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Commons. 20 7

Yes, Duolingo has removed the code to display the XP level and progress bar, so it's not so easy; it is beyond what I can do.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

CaptainPainway 16 13 6 5 5

Thank you! I knew I was close to reaching the next level but it was frustrating not knowing how close! This hack saved my sanity.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JacquiOB 19 13 12 10 8 7 6 6 6

Thank you! This works for me, it's so nice to be able to see the bar again.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

expertgeek 21 375

Have they changed something recently ? Clicking 'save changes' does nothing. The button stays green and I still have the sodding daily owl nonsense.

edit: using the script with the 'greasemonkey' add-on for firefox provided by th23x is working. See: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4889872> grab from: http://th23.net/wp-content/uploads/temp/th23_Duolingo.user.js.zip

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zakblak 22 7 6

I was just looking around and I saw this. Instead of setting my goal to 0 I used this trick to set it to 200! That will keep me motivated past a 50 XP goal.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Marido_de_Maru 13 2

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6428964> this is a thread that has a cool pop up link that shows everything about your progress and experience!!! Thanks to Usagiboy7 for letting me know!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

JohnReid8 10 8 7 6 5 4 4 4 3 3 3 2 2

Thanks, you just made my day.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZheGreatest 15 12 9 6 5

Hmm, I am lost on the second one, and on number three... I still can't see it

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZheGreatest 15 12 9 6 5

I am not able to remove the Daily Coach feature, I am very puzzled with this

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Commons. 20 7

See my comment above.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tliarch 23 23 23 22 12 10 4 2

how does one open F12 developer tools?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Commons. 20 7

The easiest way is to right click the option and click Inspect Element.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tliarch 23 23 23 22 12 10 4 2

I dont see a place where my daily goal is currently set for 1...so I dont know where to change that number to zero. In fact i dont even see a place where 'data-goal' is there in the Developer Tools.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Commons. 20 7

Right click on the circle next to an option; click Inspect Element; find "<input name='daily_goal' type='radio' data-goal='[number]'">" in the F12 tool.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tliarch 23 23 23 22 12 10 4 2

does it matter what browser one is using? I only see: ...

There is nothing about radio = there... no matter what part of it I am right clicking on

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pablovimo 25 25 25 25 25 14

Thanks to Dondanz, I could solve it all: if you use Google Chrome, download and install the free extension Tampermonkey, download the zip file th23_Duolingo.user.js.zip (posted by th23), don't bother unzipping it, go to Tampermonkey, Dashboard, Utilities and then import the zip file you have downloaded; after all that, just enable it, close the browser, open it again, log in Duolingo again and (God be with you as He was with me) there you are!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tliarch 23 23 23 22 12 10 4 2

that sounded like a lot of work, they should just bring back the bar.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pablovimo 25 25 25 25 25 14

Duolingo doesn't seem very much concerned by the time being. In the while, Dondanz gently explained me th23 solution and it really worked: I have the XP bar and the number of words. If you want, give me your e-mail and I'll send you de zip file as an attachment that you have to import through Tampermonkey, after having downloaded and installed this extension. Once I knew how to do it, it took me less than five minutes. Hugs from Buenos Aires! Pablo

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Commons. 20 7

You are on the change daily goal page, right?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pablovimo 25 25 25 25 25 14

Thanks to Dondanz, I could solve it all: if you use Google Chrome, download and install the free extension Tampermonkey, download the zip file th23_Duolingo.user.js.zip (posted by th23), don't bother unzipping it, go to Tampermonkey, Dashboard, Utilities and then import the zip file you have downloaded; after all that, just enable it, close the browser, open it again, log in Duolingo again and (God be with you as He was with me) there you are!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

tliarch 23 23 23 22 12 10 4 2

Also, what is a radio input? Lol. I have no idea.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pablovimo 25 25 25 25 25 14

By the way: I use Google Chrome... Hugs!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KallieMoe 11 3

How do I change it to 0?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Commons. 20 7

Double click the old value, then type 0.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KallieMoe 11 3

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pablovimo 25 25 25 25 25 14

Thanks to Dondanz, I could solve it all: if you use Google Chrome, download and install the free extension Tampermonkey, download the zip file th23_Duolingo.user.js.zip (posted by th23), don't bother unzipping it, go to Tampermonkey, Dashboard, Utilities and then import the zip file you have downloaded; after all that, just enable it, close the browser, open it again, log in Duolingo again and (God be with you as He was with me) there you are! I hope that will also help you, man!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Deutsch0114 25 22 6
Many thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ektrayel 15 5
Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Priya7 22 8 6 5 3
Thank you so much! I didn't know you could edit html on published websites...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Commons. 20 7
You aren't editing Duolingo's code, but rather your client copy; then the value of 0 is transferred to the Duo server when the form is submitted.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Priya7 22 8 6 5 3
That makes a little more sense... Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

xxbenzxx 9 8 6
I use an I-pad so I'm not sure what's going on but this will be useful when I use a PC

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

khutulun 12
Thank you so much!! I had accidentally turned the coach on one day while I was playing around with my settings, but I really missed the XP bar. This fix is really helpful and surprisingly easy as well (once I saw your post about opening the editor, that is)!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DelitaRaeWright 25 10 6 8
Wahoo I did it! Thank you!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JohnH-N 20 8 7 4 4 1

i see that this is old news now, but i can't get it to save the changed setting. The save button just stays green. Anything I can do?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pablovimo 25 25 25 25 25 14

I had solved the problem following dynamic puppy's instructions and it worked fine until two days ago. I have the same problem you have now. I can switch to zero, but I cannot save it. If you happen to solve it, please, please, please let me know. Regards from Buenos Aires. Pablo

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

expertgeek 21 375

it looks like this doesn't work anymore, but I have successfully got my XP bar back using the script provided by th23x with the 'greasemonkey' add-on for firefox. See:
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4889872> grab from: http://th23.net/wp-content/uploads//temp/th23_Duolingo.user.js.zip

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JohnReid8 10 8 7 6 5 4 4 4 3 3 3 2 2

How did you do this? I downloaded the zip file but I can't get the user script in to greasemonkey.

Edit: Never mind, I found something better.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

expertgeek 21 375

Tools Greasemonkey New User Script. What did you find that's better ? In fact if you extract the java script file and drag/drop onto firefox (any tab) it should automatically recognise it as a greasemonkey script and start the import for you..

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JohnReid8 10 8 7 6 5 4 4 4 3 3 3 2 2

A link that pops up when you click on it. I displays a)The total XP for each language, and b) The number of XP needed to reach the next level.

Instead of "better" I should have said "Easier to use" or something like that.

I found it on a comment on this thread that seems to have disappeared.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

SidahmedBi1 14

you can install this extension from the chrome webstore to make the progress bar reappear <https://chrome.google.com/webstore/detail/duolingo-xp-bar/dkknkcpgcaldcjpchgciginadhnapeh/related>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CleanRag1 2
I need a lingot hack

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

1497526 13 7 4 2
does it work on a mac? I can't seem to get it to work.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sp00ky_wagener 8 2 2 can someone tell me where the "save" and input are?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

71 Grammar: The Dutch Personal Pronouns (Subject vs. Object)

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3852773/Grammar-The-Dutch-Personal-Pronouns-Subject-vs-Object>

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2
Content

The personal pronouns in their subject forms
The uses of the subject personal pronouns
The personal pronouns in their object forms
The uses of the object personal pronouns
1. The personal pronouns in their subject forms

In Dutch, we use (what many Dutch grammarians conventionally refer to as) both stressed and unstressed personal pronouns (of which you can find a more in-depth explanation and discussion here). Anyways, we use both of these forms in spoken and written Dutch. It's been said that the unstressed pronouns are used more frequently than the stressed variants, but don't quote dear Team Dutch on that... Below you can find a table which includes the stressed and unstressed forms, or 'full' and 'reduced' forms (as some linguists prefer, see this discussion), of the personal pronouns:

Beware that the short forms 'k, ie are (generally speaking) not used in writing.

2. The uses of the subject personal pronouns

As is the case in English, the second person singular and the third person plural can denote an indefinite pronoun and in our case, these are the je and ze pronouns.

"Dat doe je toch niet!" = "You/One shouldn't do that!"

"Ze zeggen van wel." = "They say so."

On the one hand, some personal pronouns are suited for addressing the people that we know well. These are jij, je and jullie. People you would address with this form could be: family, friends, coworkers and kids.

On the other hand, we also have the formal personal pronoun u. We tend to use this pronoun when we intend to be polite (yes, really) and when addressing strangers. In formal contexts, this pronoun can be used for addressing one person or multiple individuals (in this sense, you could also regard u as the formal form of 'jullie', but 'u' is not used in this way very often).

"Gaaf u mee?" = "Will you go with/along?"

Lastly, when you are referring to an inanimate object, say a 'thing' or an 'idea', we use the pronoun 'het' or 'hij'. When you refer to a het word as a subject, you use het, and when referring to a de word as a subject, you use hij.

"Waar is het boek?" "Het ligt op de tafel." = "Where is the book?" "It is on the table."

"Waar staat de vaas?" "Hij staat in de hoek." = "Where is the vase?" "It is in the corner."

3. The personal pronouns in their object forms

In this case, beware that the short forms 'm, 'r/ 'dr and 't are (generally speaking) not used in writing.

4. The uses of the object personal pronouns

When it comes to referring to things, ideas or inanimate objects, we use het and hem. Again, when the word concerned is a het word, we use het. When it is a de word, we use hem.

"Heb je het lied gehoord?" "Nee, ik heb het niet gehoord." = "Have you heard the song?" "No, I have not heard it."

"Heb je de deur gesloten?" "Ja, ik heb hem gesloten." = "Have you closed the door?" "Yes, I have closed it."

The personal pronoun in the object form hen means 'them' and constitutes either the direct object in a sentence or is used after a preposition. It also refers to people.

"Jij hebt hen gezien?" = "You have seen them?"

"Ik geef het boek aan hen." = "I give the book to them."

Now, hun also means 'them' and this personal pronoun in the object form is used as an indirect object and one without a preposition. Likewise, hun also refers to people.

"Ik geef hun het boek." = "I give the book to them."

(Very) formal contexts excluded, ze (= them) can also be used instead of hen and hun, it referring to people, animals or objects. It is also used after a preposition.

"Wij hebben ze gezien." = "We have seen them."

"Jullie geven ze eten?" = "You give them food?"

"Ik doe dit niet voor ze." = "I do not do this for them."

Return to grammar overview!

Give Lingot4

332 years ago

Leave a new comment

3 Comments

dadamn 20

Shouldn't 4.3 be "Ik geef hun het boek." = "I give them the book." and not "I give the book to them"?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iRBiS 11

Can you tell me when would you use het /ɜ/? I know that we use het /ə/ to say "het is een kind (en niet een hond)" = "he/she is a child (and not a dog)" but would you use het /ɜ/ to say "het is het kind (en niet de hond) dat je hoort" = "it is the child (and not the dog) that you hear"? If yes, does the first or the second het have the /ɜ/ sound?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

InfamousDiaz 8 7 6 5 4

so I jumped here from Deutsch, and got one confusion: where's the Dative?! without Dative here, should I use the same method as in English by adding preposition+pronoun?!

b.v

-We can bring her to you

-Wij kunnen haar aan jou brengen

-Wir können dir sie bringen

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

72 "He sleeps on the top floor."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3522545>

Translation: Il dort au dernier étage.

12 years ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

revengest 21 13

I'm guessing here, but I think it would have to do with the understood meaning of the sentence versus the literal meaning.

Literally, this sentence would mean he sleeps directly on the top floor without a bed or something like that, but it is understood that his room, and bed, is on the top floor where he sleeps. I'm guessing in French, prepositions having to do with place such as dans, sur, sous, etc, must be literal. For example in English we say we speak in a language, but in French they use 'en' as opposed to 'dans'. They speak 'en' a language, since you are not literally in a language.

So, I guess 'au' is used to refer to the general place when you cannot use a preposition due to literal meaning. I hope that helped.

9ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

ogradybe 17 5 3 2

why does sur le dernier étage not work rather than au ?

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrankR95 20 9 7 6 6
I wrote that too

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wmlantern 20 14 7
Isn't "Il dort à l'étage supérieur" correct too?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

evatenn 23 14 7 3
I would like to know too. I used the wrong preposition (sur), but it would be good to know whether I at least got "l'étage supérieur" correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

n6zs 25 859
The noun "étage" is masculine, hidden in the abbreviation "l'étage". When preceded by the word "à", there is a mandatory contraction of à + le to form "au".

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wmlantern 20 14 7
Yes, but not when the noun that follows starts with a vowel. So it is "à l'étage" vs for instance "au boulot".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

n6zs 25 859
You're right. My error. Even though étage is masculine, à does not contract with l'. So even though the noun following à is masculine, it starts with a vowel and uses l', therefore no contraction.
http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/preposition_a.htm

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

73 New user FAQ
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1426103>

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
Welcome to Duolingo! Have a question? Here are some of the most common questions and answers: (PS you might want to bookmark this link, it will be buried under other posts soon.)

<h1>Please note, most of this information has been moved to the Duolingo Wiki (unofficial) and updated. Go here for the wiki: http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Duolingo_Wiki#Getting_Help</h1>
.

This is part of the Guide to Duolingo Guides series <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1278938>

NOTE: For those moving from the previous layout to the new layout, here is a small and useful FAQ to help get you situated to the new look and answer some questions:
<http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1538954>

TABLE OF CONTENTS:

1. Guidelines & Duolingo's Official Help page
2. Instructions - (including keyboard settings)
3. Features
4. Incubator/New Languages
5. Talk
6. Levels
7. Lingots
8. Streaks
9. Streak Freeze
10. Format
11. Screen Shots
12. Vocabulary
13. Grammar
14. Fluent
15. Translating
16. Immersion
17. You Can Now Read XX%
18. Resetting Your Tree
19. Mirror/Reverse Course
20. Retention
21. User Groups
22. FAQ Contributors

1. Alt text Where are the GUIDELINES? They are here: <http://www.duolingo.com/guidelines>
Where is the HELP link?* At the bottom of pages that don't have auto-scroll. Link:
<http://www.duolingo.com/help>

2. Alt text Where are all of the INSTRUCTIONS for navigating the website, reporting bugs, changing keyboard settings, navigating Immersion etc?, Here: <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1278938>

Please take a peek in this link before going any further. Then return using the link to the New User FAQ

3. Alt text Why do/don't I have x FEATURE? Either you are in a test (beta) group, or someone else is. Being assigned to a beta group happens automatically and usually it is random, but at other times you might be chosen if you log in and practice lessons regularly.

4. Alt text Where do I find out about/request NEW LANGUAGES:

Official Incubator Update: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1627314> (1/30/2014)

You can see what courses are being created right now and their estimated completion dates here <http://incubator.duolingo.com>.

If you don't see the course you want, go here and read this:

<http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1377701>.

Request new languages by going to your social networking sites and asking anyone who is fluent and bilingual to apply at <http://incubator.duolingo.com/apply>.

Folks have the best chance of getting their applications accepted if they can show familiarity with how Duolingo courses work and commitment to spending time doing a project on Duolingo. People can demonstrate both of these by making their way through a course that has already been created. Why is it hard to get an estimate on when a language will enter the Incubator?

<http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1568830>.

How does the Incubator work/What does it look like inside of the Incubator?

<http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1579388>

5. Alt text Where should I talk about this thing I want to TALK about? Here is a handy guide to various Duolingo forums: <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1254215>

6. Alt text What is the highest LEVEL? (currently) 25. Takes 30,000 points.

How many points between levels?

Larger image: <http://i.imgur.com/YUHJllk.png> Alt text

A question that is frequently asked and a caution:

Why is this course upping my levels in another course? The levels are based strictly on target language, not the starting one. So that means, for example, if you are learning French from English, you have a single French level, regardless of the language you learn it from.

What that also means is that if you delete or reset a course, if you have another course with the same target language, it will reset that course as well. Again, because you have a single French/target level, regardless of the language you learn it from and are resetting it.

7. Alt text How do LINGOTS work?: In layout 1: Go to your home page and go to "Lingot Store" scroll to the bottom for instructions. In layout 2: Go to your Home page, find Store tab near language tree tab. Once in your store tab, scroll all the way down for instructions.

8. Alt text How do STREAKS work?

There are 2 different kinds of streaks: Total streak and individual Language streak. Total Streak is the number of days in a row you have practice any language. Individual Language streak is the number of days in a row you have practiced a single language.

For every 10 days, you get 1 lingot. For example, since my streak is 130 days, I received 13 lingots. In 10 more days, I will receive 14 lingots.

If you are trying to extend your streak using Immersion, make sure you get 1 full point. Depending on what Tier you are on, you might only be getting 1/8 a point per sentence translated.

To extend your streak, you must gain at least one point before midnight. If you are working on a lesson, it must be finished before midnight to count, and you must be connected to the internet.

TIME ZONE Midnight is determined by the time zone you were in when you set up your account the very first time. Your account's time zone will not change if you move to a new time zone. It will still be your old time zone. <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1405994> ((however))The coin stacks (which don't exist on the beta layout) use your computer's current time zone.

If you encounter technical issues with it, make a post in the Troubleshooting forum.

9. Alt text How does STREAK FREEZE work?

The streak freeze only lasts for 24 hours. It can be bought at any time and will stay equipped until you miss a day. If you have bought a streak freeze, it will automatically activate if you miss a day. After that, you must buy a new one.

The streak freeze only works on your Overall Streak. Individual Language streaks will be set to zero. Apps only track language specific streaks. So, Streak Freeze doesn't work for them. If you use both the website and an App, it is possible that your streaks will differ if you've used a Streak Freeze on the website.

The streak freeze is proactive not retroactive. This means you must buy your streak freeze before you miss a day. You cannot buy it the next day. Once you lose your streak, it is gone.

<http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1254215>

.

10. Alt text How can I FORMAT my text posts <http://reddittext.com/> However, not all of it works on Duolingo. For an overview of what works:

http://www.reddit.com/r/duolingo/comments/1h9hvo/dowlingo_comment_formatting/ The tables... kinda work but mostly don't. In addition, some of these work with Duolingo <http://daringfireball.net/projects/markdown/syntax> (for embedded link among other things).

11. Alt text How do I post a SCREEN SHOT? This isn't a universal guide, but, it will be able to help some folks:

Option 1 Macs: Press $\text{⌘} + \text{shift} + 3$ to take a cap of the full screen or $\text{⌘} + \text{shift} + 4$ to select a section for a screenshot. Screenshots are saved to the desktop.

Option 2: You can use this Chrome extension: <https://chrome.google.com/webstore/detail/screen-capture-by-google/cpngackimfmofbokmjmljamhdncknpgm>

Option 3 Step 1: go to Immersion and if you see the problem area, go here and push the button shown.

Alt text

Step 2: Open your default paint program and page the print screen. Name file and save it. If you don't know how to do that or that doesn't work for you, go to <http://www.youtube.com> and look up "How to do print screen" and select the video that was made for your operating system.

Step 3: Do the print screen, then go to <http://imgur.com/> and press the button i've circled in red.

Alt text

Step 4: Select the file from when you did the print screen.

Alt text

Step 5: If you are on a windows computer, right click on the image, and select "Copy image location"

Alt text

(If you are on a mac, otherwise do what it says here <http://www.wikihow.com/Right-Click-on-a-Mac>)

Step 6: Now just type what has been circled in orange, replacing the words "Image URL" with the code you got from "Copy image location" in step five. Once you save your post, you should be able to see the image.

Alt text

12. Alt text Can I export/review my VOCABULARY?

Please note, the vocabulary tab is temporarily unavailable. Programmers are working to update it. You can export the vocabulary at your own risk by visiting:

Option 1: <http://www.duolingo.com/arekolek> and using their instructions.

Option 2: This JavaScript bookmarklet: <https://github.com/mrjogo/DuolingoVocabExporter>.

Option 3: Review what you missed in a lesson: <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1453573> _Is there a Vocabulary Tab Guide? Yes. <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1453744>

13. Alt text How can I find help with GRAMMAR? See Where to Discuss What on Duolingo <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1254215> and find the Mini forums Also, look around on Youtube for grammar tutorials.

14. Alt text Will I be FLUENT once I finish my tree? The language tree is designed to give you basic proficiency (not full fluency), IF you move everything the tree offers into your long term memory. Finishing a tree only means that you somehow inserted enough correct answers to finish it. You can try these strategies to move lessons to long term memory: Do a lesson, then practice until you are comfortable with the material. (I personally practice until I get 17-20 points 2 times in a row.) Move to next lesson in the skill set. Watch movies, read magazines, and have conversations (with other people or even just with yourself) in your target language. Start practicing in Immersion. See A Guide to Duolingo Guides for the Immersion Navigation Guide. <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1278938>

15. Alt text How can I get more practice TRANSLATING sentences into my target language? After finishing a course in your target language, for example: English to Spanish, try the reverse/mirror course Spanish to English.

16. Alt text How does IMMERSION work? <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1276245>

- When should I start using Immersion? There is no particular answer. You can wait until Duolingo invites you with the XX% message, or you can try it whenever you feel that you've learned enough words. And if you aren't ready to translate yet, you can just use Immersion as a reader with a built in (rough) translator.

17. Alt text What does THIS MESSAGE mean?/ You can now read XX% Alt text

.

This is a general message, that will only show up later in your tree. The percentage is probably not literal but rather a guesstimate. It assumes that you have moved everything (Grammar, idioms, vocabulary, and alternative ways of answering) that you've learned thus far into your long term memory. Read a CNN article and it might be closer to accurate than if you try to read an academic article full of vocabulary not covered in your tree..

This is the highest percentage you will ever see, as this message never says 100%

Disclaimer: I'm still learning about this feature myself. My answers are based on what other people have said in Discussions and so I might be misinformed.

18. Alt text What happens if I RESET a language on my account? .

You will lose your level and Streak for that language.

You will lose the points you earned working on the tree when you reset it.

You won't lose the lingots you earned.

NOTE that once you reset your tree, you can do the placement test. According to how well you do, you will be awarded points and levels.

See 6\ (Levels) for some VERY important information before resetting your tree if you have more than one course that shares a TARGET language, as it will affect your other course as well.

19. Alt text What happens to my points and levels if I take the MIRROR COURSE (and don't reset my level)? All of your previous points and levels will be available when you return. You just won't be able to see them.

20. Alt text User Groups

User groups are currently being designed and are on their way (1/18/2014)

Source 1: Luis (CEO & Co-Founder) <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1228010>

Source 2: kristinmc (Website Manager) <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1523182>

21. Alt text What is Duolingo's user RETENTION rate?

Retention rate was around 20% in 2012 (in the US, based on this video <http://youtu.be/e7aTabdZr5Q?t=24m>). Retention rates fluctuate by country, higher for some (like Mexico) and lower for others. If that figure holds, then out of the current (2013) 16 million users total (per Wikipedia <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Duolingo>) that would be about 3 million active users. This information is a guess based on the above video by Co-founder Luis Von Ahn. The video was filmed approximately Sep-Oct 2012, as Luis says at one point it's been "3-4 months since we launched.) This would potentially make these numbers out of date if retention has gone up or down.)

21. Alt text Contributors to this FAQ:

|856pm-----|

|CecilieO.-----|

|Dessamator-----|

|flandybandy-----|

|FrankySka-----|

|kassandra8286----|

|MystyrNile-----|

|Olimo-----|

|panda_richards----|

|Puddl3glum-----|

|raans-----|

|revdolphins-----|

|SORROUSH-----|

|SongbirdSandra---|
|stecchetto-----|
|Usagiboy7-----|
|votears-----|
| wazzie-----|

PS I will be routinely maintaining the comment section here to create a less overwhelming experience. Thank you everyone who helped me learn my way around Duolingo. Special thanks to Olimo, Dessamator, and Samsta. (And many more. These are just the names that came immediately to mind!)

Give Lingot42
1963 years ago

Leave a new comment
143 Comments

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
Adding this to the comments for now. I might add it to the body of the FAQ at a later date.

The levels go up when you earn points.. It's not related to how many new skills you learn (Basics 1 is a Skill. Inside of it are Lessons that you need to complete before you can continue into Phrases or Basics 2).

(This is for Spanish):

Alt text
<http://i.imgur.com/y8MYOFg.png>

Alt text
<http://i.imgur.com/LmCSbIK.png>

20ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

jeanprendiville 25 20 15 2
Simple and clear, it really helps the beginner

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cmhk15 10 2
What is "real world practice" under "strengthen skills"? I am learning Spanish from English and I don't have this.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2
Hit your home tab, and look to the far right and see it in green. It is right under the chart.

1ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

mochiturtle30 21 12 7 5 5 4 59

I'm guessing this button doesn't exist anymore? What was it exactly anyways?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jfGor 16 2 2

It is gone. Duo adds features and takes them away. Do you have the immersion Tab at the top? It was like immersion but it suggested articles that could be translated for your skill level (where you were on the tree, or words learned), not the levels given by XP.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mochiturtle30 21 12 7 5 5 4 59

Oh... that sounds fun. I wish it was still here.

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

SanaaBookstar 8 7

Do you know how to even access Immersion. Ive been looking all over

1Give Lingot•11 months ago

jfGor 16 2 2

@Sanaa211176, On the Spanish tree, if you have it at all, it will be the last tab at the top on the blue strip. It will follow the tab 'Discussion' Duo isn't supporting it any longer, so you may not have it. Many languages do not have it, but Spanish may have it but also my not for new users.

1Give Lingot•11 months ago

costick 15 5

t=If the "half-moon" strength graph to the left of the circle is not full, this means that this area "Basics 2, phrases, food, etc. " is not complete or you did not get everything correct. If I want to go back in and correct something, the program does not tell me which lesson I need to redo (which lesson is not 100% correct.) is there something I am missing that would tell me which lesson to redo?
.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Hi costick!

The meter only tells how strong the skill is, not if it is complete. Skills strength decays over time, even for skills where all lessons have been successfully completed in the past. This is to encourage Duolingoers to review. You can read more about this in the Wiki's article on Skill Strength.

2ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

SongbirdSandra 18

Awesome post! Please, make a comment, so I can give you some lingots. :-)

The only thing that I could add is a warning that lessons must be finished before midnight, in order to maintain a streak- otherwise the computer doesn't know that you're on Duolingo.

Thank you for adding it! :-)

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

avamcewenz 5 5 3
sjdbid

-1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

AyeletW15 16

i'm not sure if this exists already but it would also be very helpful if duolingo made a 'walk through' video or post of all the settings, and games and how everything works (immersion, skill tree, vocabulary, bogging, stream etc etc.) for example : I'm not sure what 'giving lingots' and the arrows at the bottom of comments mean?!?!?! Thanks and Danke

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
Hi ayeletwhite, thanks for your questions!

You'll find some of that in A Guide to Duolingo Guides. It's linked at the top of the FAQ. (I'll post the link here to save you some scrolling: <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1278938>) Some of the other things are not because they are generally picked up through observation and are not as frequently asked. If people ask though, it is not a bother to answer. ^_^

Here is how they work:

The Lingots are a type of currency that can be spent in the Lingot Store. So, if you feel that a Discussion post or comment has great value to you in some way, you can donate a lingot.

Up and down votes are one way to sort the spam from the most informative posts. Down votes send a discussion or a comment down towards the bottom of the conversation or in the Discussion forum. Up votes move them up. Some people use them like people use the "like" button on Facebook. "I agree ^" I disagree v" But that is less helpful than "most informative up", "least informative down."

I hope this has helped to clarify some things :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LindaHill 19

Being a new duoLinguist, I want to know the etiquette for leaving lingots. Guidelines, anybody? Also, and I am soooooo embarrassed to admit this, I was never interested in any blog, although I have used computers since 1986. DuoLinguo is the first site to capture my interest and make me want to blog, and I sincerely want to thank everyone who has made the site possible.

6ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

856pm 13 3

If you really like a comment, you can optionally leave a lingot. It's not considered rude to not leave a lingot, as the feature was just added recently. If you don't want to or can't leave a lingot, we all appreciate when somebody upvotes our post.

18ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Hi LindaHill, welcome to Duolingo!

Those aren't very common questions so I'll answer them here instead of in the FAQ. However, the Faux pas might get its own mini guide someday. But, I want to be careful not to make community members too nervous about making a mistake to enjoy the website. The reason the guides exist is to help, well, guide people to the answers they are looking for. But, everyone makes mistakes and that can be part of the learning process and the less shame one feels about an honest mistake, the more creatively they can approach their environment :)

Faux pas... I'd say the one's I've seen get the most complain in Immersion is using the "Looks bad" button for simple errors. This is usually because they haven't found the Immersion Community Guidelines (found in A Guide to Duolingo Guides linked at the top of the post). In second place would be giving a translation that already exists, instead of giving a boost to the first person who made that translation.

Faux pas for the forums: trying to have casual conversations in the General Discussion forum. That tends to get a lot of down votes.

5ReplyGive Lingot19•3 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

Where is your blog? Do you have a link to it? Is it about your journey of learning a second language? I never do any blogging but sometimes I read other people's when the subjects are of interest to me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LindaHill 19

DuoLinguo isn't a blog? Do you mean, do I have a webpage? No, I don't. I have thought about a Q & A blog about English grammar rules. I have studied them for over half my lifetime. I don't know how to set one up.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ricaloca 23 2

I'm wondering - could this be permanently linked on the menu bar under the help section? New users 10 days from now will not even see this discussion...

4ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Not at this time. The only "sticky" type feature is the Popular, New, and Most popular tabs in the main Discussion forum. But, those are all eons long. Other than that, the Staff give everyday users a lot of room to be creative, to share ideas, and to alter their approaches collectively. Even the guides in this collection have been altered several times. What you can do for now is bookmark this link and whenever relevant post it in a Discussion. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ricaloca 23 2

I wasn't talking about linking it in the Discussion area, but rather, under top toolbar under the "gear" icon where "help" is one of the three things you can choose ("help", "settings", "logout"). I've often wondered why the "help" section there is so meager. Why no FAQs there?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I don't have that answer.

I personally appreciate how the trial and error approach encourages an interactive community here. Guides are something the everyday person gets to be part of over and over again as well. I get to be part of a team for that. :)

It could be because Duolingo changes so often and there are so many different test groups running at the same time. After a while, that could culminate to cost a lot of money. I imagine with a website running more than 900 pages and 3 apps already costs a lot of money to run. DL gets translation contracts with two online news groups, and gets a handful of small commercial translation requests, but, they also have to pay the salaries of 30 staff.

Most of my guides are probably going to need a lot of work here in a few months because they will have lost a good deal of relevance. Seriously, this website never has a constant day in its life. It also gives people like me something to do. I've spent around 5 hours just on this FAQ alone.

It would be nice if they'd let us stick the temporary guides somewhere findable though. But, I don't want to lose the opportunity to be part of the creative process if they do that.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jeanprendiville 25 20 15 2

This may seem really stupid. I did the initial test, fine. Then every time I opened I pressed practise thinking this was the way to automatically move up the stream. After twenty days I was bored stiff and noticed that my word count hadn't increased and only then did the penny drop that I had to pursue modules on the stream. Maybe someone else is as dopey so perhaps it would help if it was spelled out initially.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@Jeanprendiville,

Oh no! I'm glad you decided to stick around. That does sound like a frustrating 20 days!

Because this is the first time I've heard of this, it doesn't warrant a section in the FAQ (it's not intended to be comprehensive, but rather only to work with the most frequent questions.) I appreciate you telling us about it though. This will help me to help others trouble shoot it in the future if I encounter it. :)

4Give Lingot•3 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 351

I had a similar experience. In fact, I wrote about it in another discussion thread (Am I a slow learner?). My hat is off to you for sticking with it for 20 days, though! I have to admit it didn't take me quite as long, but still those were some of the most mindboggling boring moments I've ever had. Looking back, it was a good thing I was studying German at the time! Fortunately, that experience is well behind me and I now see duolingo for the jewel that it is.

I think some of us might be more inclined to do things in an orderly fashion and not move ahead until given the appropriate signal to do so. I just wonder how many others out there who are like that experienced something similar but just haven't said anything.

Whenever I consider answering someone's question, I often take the time to try to figure out how far through the tree they've made it. Most of the time, they've made it through the first checkpoint, which indicates they know how the system works. I have to wonder how many don't figure it out, form a negative opinion of duolingo and what it has to offer, and then never return. I have a feeling those who leave and don't come back leave for other reasons, but it would definitely be interesting to know.

Anyway, thank you for sharing your experiences, jeanprendiville and Lee237911. Knowing at least a couple of others had the same experience, I don't feel so stupid about it anymore!

2Give Lingot•10 months ago

Lee237911 6

I had the same frustration. There was nothing obvious to indicate that I had completed what was under an icon and to indicate what I was to do next. When I looked through the "help" it seemed to assume that I already knew how to interpret the icons and other symbols.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 10
Must... register... 9000... accounts...to upvote

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

flandybandy 18 6 2

I feel that a general description of the streak freeze is missing. Something like: 'The streak freeze is used to let your streak continue even if you miss one day of work. It can be bought at any time and will stay equipped until you miss a day. The streak freeze is activated automatically the first time that you miss a day.'

I also think I remember someone who lost his streak because he tried to use multiple streak freezes in consecutive days. Cannot find the post anymore, but if this is still how it works, then I think the guide should also mention this.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Hi flandybandy! (cool sounding name btw). Thanks for the feedback. Some of the information on the streak freeze is located in the lingot store so I've left it out. But, I'll add some of the other stuff you mentioned. Thanks! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

flandybandy 18 6 2

Yeah, the main thing I thought was missing was the fact that the 'Streak freeze' stays "equipped" and is used automatically when you miss a day, since this was a big mystery to me before I decided to just try and buy one, so I am quite happy with the way you choose to incorporate this information :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

This is very useful Thanks

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@alexinIreland, Thanks! Have you checked out the wiki? It has the most updated information http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Duolingo_Wiki#Getting_Help (A few sections from here have yet to be added. But otherwise the wiki is the best place to go.) ^_^

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

What does this message mean?

I think most people would agree this isn't a great guesstimate. I personally think (and this is just speculation) that this number is based off of knowing all forms of the verbs learned. So, even if you've just learned present tense, the percentage is based off of knowing all tenses.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 13 13 12 8 1242

What does this message mean?

The first time I read I could read x% of all real Spanish articles, I directly went to elpais.com and was very disappointed. :(I guess you are right, it is based on articles inside Duolingo including all possible forms of words (plural, masculine, feminine, verbs in all forms, etc).

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Pandipolar83 5

Hola, No sé bien inglés y por eso, les hago dos preguntas en español. 1/¿No se puede aprender al mismo tiempo varios idiomas? En mi caso sólo serían dos, pero cuando eligi otro idioma, no veo mas lo que hice antes (en ingles por ejemplo). Y es triste. ¿No hay solucion?

2/ En la pagina "immersion" ¿sólo se puede traducir desde el español hacia el inglés? ¿no hacia otro idioma? De antemano, muchas gracias por las aclaraciones :) Que tengan un buen día :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Hola Pandipolar83,

Por favor, prueba esto:

Alt text

O si tienes esto

Alt text

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jay_Daniel 18 16 6 3

For the first question, you can switch between the languages available to learn very easily by clicking the dropdown menu represented by the flag, right next to the word "duo lingo" at the top left of the page. [Por la primera pregunta, se puede cambiar entre los idiomas disponibles muy facilmente por 'clicking' la bandera junta la palabra 'duolingo' en la enicima y izquierda de la pagina. No se una solucion por tu segunda pregunta] Good luck with your English [buena suerte con tu ingles]

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Ademas, La inmersión es un lugar para que nosotros traducimos artículos de la lengua que estamos aprendiendo, a la lengua que ya hablamos, como se indica en nuestra configuración.

Si cambia de idioma de estudio, puede cambiar los idiomas que usted utiliza en inmersión.

:)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 6

En respuesta a tu segundo pregunta:

Se puede traducir desde la idioma está aprendiendo y hasta la idioma desde que aprende. Por ejemplo: si tú estás aprendiendo el español desde el inglés, se puede traducir desde el español hasta el inglés, o si tú estás aprendiendo el francés desde el español, se debería lograr traducir desde el francés hasta el español. (Por el momento el curso español --> francés hay aún en el incubador, pero debería ser en beta pronto).

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@revdolphin, I've decided to wait until DL has decided what to do with the beta layout. Once that gets figured and these all get polished, then I'll put them through immersion for the other language forums. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 13 13 12 8 1242

@revdolphin: He, he, no secret language here... ;) Just kidding. I'd take me ages to write this down in Spanish. Kudos!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jay_Daniel 18 16 6 3

@usagi: Does buying the timed practices in the lingot store, or any other purchase, help you to achieve points more rapidly? (In other words, I think I can complete reviewing Spanish skills rapidly, and I want to know if it is worth my lingots to buy timed practice).

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wazzie 25 11

Yes! When you do a Timed Practice, you receive 1 point per correct answer (instead of having to answer 20 questions for 10 points). You usually get 20 questions per Timed Practice, so you can earn up to 20 points per practice. Also, you don't need to complete the Timed Practice to get points. Even if you are only able to get 1 point, you get to keep that 1 point (unlike the normal practice where if you fail on the last question, you don't get any credit). Because of this, the Timed Practice is also great for maintaining a streak. Seriously, Buy It Now!

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

raachkk 17 7

I know this is an ancient post, so idk if you'll see this. But I'm wondering: if I buy the timed practice, do I need to use it right away? Or is it more like the steak freeze where you can buy it then use it whenever you've got the time to?

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

wazzie 25 11

Once you buy a Timed Practice, you have it forever and can use it as many times as you want (unlimited use).

To use it, select Strengthen Skills as you normally would, and you will now see the option for "start timed practice"

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

raachkk 17 7

That's awesome! Thank you! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

msciwoj 24 5

"Midnight is determined by the time zone you were in when you set up your account the very first time. Your account's time zone will not change if you move to a new time zone. It will still be your old time zone."

It doesn't seem to be true... I set up my account while living in UK, now I am in Poland. When I write this comment, it is 00:18 in Poland, so it is 6th of January, but 23:18 in UK - still 5th of January. Even though, I have just managed to extend my streak, what shouldn't be possible, because there is still the same day in UK.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wazzie 25 11

Here is a link from as little as 5 days ago, so your guess is as good as mine :)

<http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1405994>

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

msciwoj could be part of a test group, because nothing has changed in how Time Zones work on Duolingo. I double checked.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Wisecookiesheet 16 8

I know this is late to the conversation, but I hope it does change - I have a 15 hour change in the upcoming future D:

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@Wisecookiesheet, I'm following the discussion, so I'll know when someone comments. So don't worry. (Unless Google tucks the message so I can't see it. Which, unfortunately does happen from time to time :P if that happens though, just leave a message on my Activity stream.)

My suggestion is that you go with the official statement, which is that the time zone for your account will not change with you. If you lose your streak while adhering to the official statement let staff know so they can fix your streak. You can make a post in the Troubleshooting forum, or by using the white Support tab on the left. ^_^

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Wisecookiesheet 16 8

Yeah, I know it hasn't been changed, just a hope for the future ^^ But I didn't know that Support could fix it so that makes me feel better, thanks! (A streak seems like a little thing to worry about, but it should be high before I travel haha)

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

Charlie2014a 8 2

This is a really great and much needed effort. I'm here less than a week and could have done with this a week ago. It's a great pity that it, or something like it is not an intrinsic part of the site. Bookmarking it is all very well for those of us who happen to see it now or before it is buried.. but what about all the new people who come along in two weeks time? I'm not sure that re-creating the comments section will do anything for that. In the absence of 'sticky posts', how about re-creating the FAQ as a new and hopefully updated posting periodically.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Re-posting Discussions is heavily frowned upon. Honestly, I made an FAQ a few months back and used it as a reference for this one. But, they are almost two different posts. I deleted the old one. I still had to do some thinking before posting this one. At a certain point, re-posting a discussion is considered spam, and spam can get an account deactivated. However, posting a link to a discussion is fine, so long as it is on topic. So, my plan is to drop this link in as many relevant places as possible and to encourage others to do the same.

Recently I had a conversation about why DL might be choosing not to stick the stick "A Guide to Duolingo Guides" <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1278938> at the entrance to the Main discussion area. I don't know for sure but, maybe that brainstorm holds the answers.

EDIT: the discussion must have happened elsewhere because I don't see it there.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Charlie2014a 8 2

I popped over to the guidelines and looked at the guidelines on spam. If what is written there is to be believed what I proposed you do is NOT spamming but that says nothing about any discussion being frowned upon and disapproved of in various ways by others. I asked a question in my first posting a few days back and I think it's fair to say that it was not only misunderstood but was heavily frowned upon by some despite the site guidelines that clearly state "Curiosity, questioning, and cultural understanding are something we celebrate. Be respectful of others and where they're coming from." But that's life on the 'net and I won't let that stop me contributing within the guidelines and in this case I wouldn't let it stop you and your fellow contributors with your great and genuinely helpful efforts.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I appreciate your high regard for my post, and for defending my actions should I choose to remake it in the future. ^_^ I feel very appreciated here.

The guidelines are intended to be very general, to convey the spirit of their intentions. As such, I am using spam in the general sense to convey clutter.

We've had some people make a post with an idea. It soon became buried by posts that had more up votes by the community. Not a week later, they posted it again, which pushed down other posts simply for its timing. You can imagine that this might clog the discussion forum if 3 million+ people continually re-posted their discussions. I try to set a good example by not following that pattern.

At the moment, I plan to rely on community efforts to promote this FAQ. If the community appreciates this, they will produce the effort needed to keep it relevant by posting a link to it in related discussions.

And if it is very very very loved, it will receive enough up votes to make it into the top-most visible page of the "Most Popular Posts" tab. Though, I would rather have people share the link when relevant, or both. ^_^

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 6

Just 1386 more up-votes needed... it wouldn't surprise me if you got there.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

I think you missed something. Every community has official and unofficial rules. Indeed every organization/group/environment breeds its own culture/tradition which will continue to function regardless of what the official guidelines say.

For example, in my limited time here, I have uncovered a few of the Duolingo community's norms. These include, downvoting threads/comments requesting a new language, downvoting people who start random discussions not directly linked to language learning or Duolingo, and generally always up-voting the staffs' posts. Especially if they contain useful information, and are placed in the general discussion.

Aside from that, Duolingo has generated what I would call fan-people, who will vehemently defend almost anything Duolingo does, no matter how strange it may be. There are also people that aside from moderators are held in high esteem by the community. These individuals are held in such a high esteem, that criticizing them may incur the wrath of all those who greatly appreciate their efforts.

There are other hidden cultural norms in Duolingo, you will learn them slowly but surely, given enough time.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Charlie2014a 8 2

I'm with you on that Dessamator, It reminds me of when I was younger and less foolish and used to visit yahoo chat rooms :). I'm here to learn Italian and help others along the way. I'm not very interested in these virtual cultures but I always try to follow my hosts guidelines as just another guest on their site.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

If the Story Challenge becomes a thing, here is the link.
<http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1578116>

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

New information added to #4. The inside process of what a team sees when it is creating a course in Incubator.

Many thanks to revdolphin for sending the link!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jack_Straka 6 3

how do you learn a language in beta???

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@Jack_Straka, just sign up for it like a regular course. got to <https://www.duolingo.com/settings/direction> and select the course from the list.

Also, for step by step instructions on how to change/add/remove courses when you don't have a direct link, check out the updated FAQ hosted on the Wiki Select the Lessons/courses tab and it will show you how to do all of that. ^_^

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jack_Straka 6 3

Thanks for the reply first of all! but i cant seem to find the learning Chinese from a English point of view @usagiboy7

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@Jack_Straka, that course is not available yet. The same team will begin building it once the English for Chinese speakers course is complete.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jack_Straka 6 3

thank you! this was never clearly stated anywhere i looked! now i have something to wait for. Any idea how long this could take? trying to decide if i should buy rosetta stone or simply move to china! this would be a much easier and cheaper choice

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@Jack_Straka

I don't have a time estimate. It depends on what our volunteer course builders are able to do and any technological challenges they might come up against. As for other programs, I recommend doing your research. Rosetta Stone is very expensive, but if you look into it and it suits your learning style and budget I wouldn't say not to.

For other options, a few users have recommended the resources recorded here:

http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Useful_links_for_learning_or_practicing_a_language_outside_of_Duolingo#Chinese

Also, FSI has a free Chinese course. (Those were created for military personnel a while back and posted online for anyone who wants to use them.) <http://fsi-language-courses.org/Content.php?page=Chinese> I haven't taken it so I can't say how up to date the material is.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Sophia10638 7 6

How do you share something with someone?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
How do you mean?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sophia10638 7 6
Never mind i got it thanks anyway! xD

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MeepDude 9
This is brilliant! Thanks for the hardwork.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

votears 16 9 6 5 5 3 3 3 3 2
Umm... I reset my French skill some weeks ago and lost all points(gold) relating to French

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
Ok, I am deleting suggestion posts, but will leave one post by each person in case anyone wants to gift you with lingots. If anyone feels strongly enough that they would like their post un-deleted, just let me know and I will put it back unless it breaches the guidelines. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1
[deleted]

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

anachron 22 9 2 2
This post is very helpful.

Let me test here if html anchoring works, it could be useful for linking directly to questions in the FAQ.

Edit: That's a no-go on anchors. The anchor was treated as a link and thus scrubbed from my post.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tariqnisarahmed 19 11 8 7 5
Should be rolled into the regular site faqs to keep them easily accessed. And maybe make FAQs a special category under discussion, like a language, but a category where anyone can comment but only modscan create new topics.

Good job!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 13 13 12 8 1242

This really grew to a really great FAQ! As for the last part (20), are you trying to make a table? If so and Duo does not filter: <https://github.com/adam-p/markdown-here/wiki/Markdown-Cheatsheet#wiki-tables>.

Anyway, you must've spend days to get this into shape. Now I feel that I didn't contribute that much to be mentioned at all. :)

Edit: You are on to Moderator of the Year at the very least!

Edit 2: not added in ...Duo does not filter it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Yeah, I was totally trying to make a table. As you can see, it has other ideas.. :P heh~

Re link, the first one with the dashes is what I tried. It has somehow, that I can't fathom, gone rather wonky on me. If the list gets much bigger, I'll go through that link and try the other strategies. :)

Every piece in that FAQ I picked up along the way. There were a lot more contributors than what I could remember from the last 114 days. A team effort, much like sand at a beach. We all put in our little grains and it culminated into something much bigger. You very much deserve to be on the list. As you can see, the comments section grew so big!! I decided only to delete stuff that ended up in the list. Some things aren't very common, but, if someone mosey's by with a less common question and doesn't find it in the FAQ, maybe they'll read in in the comments. I didn't keep your contributions deleted because they were minor, rather, they graduated. :) EDIT Re: Mod of Year, I am just a "baby mod" among titans. A lot of people laid important ground work before I even got here. But thank you for the appreciation :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 13 13 12 8 1242

C'mon, you're selling yourself short a bit. You have been contributing to this site and/or community quite a lot. Edit: And the year is still young... uh?

P.S. I tried about the table markdown thing. Not working... ;(

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Tenou_Haruka 13

[deleted]

Give Lingot25•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

[deleted]

Give Lingot•3 years ago

ayePete 24 12 8 7 6 5 3 3

What a great post! WOW. Bookmarking...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

knypek 14 7 3

I have a tip for iOS users. To take a screenshot, press the home button (the round one), then holding the home button press the power button. You will hear the shutter sound, and the screen will go white for a second. Then Your screenshot will appear in Your photos app.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I tracked down a nice little nibblet I'll be adding later: the language stats (words/sections/lessons amounts) <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1015809>

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rfarrar2 11

I have really liked the course, but have recently become VERY frustrated. Somebody HELP! Only rarely do my scores get recorded. It says I completed a lesson, but then doesn't record it, and I have to do it over and over. I definitely have wi-fi connections at all times for my iPhone 5, so that's not the issue. Checking the internet, I find others have noted this problem going back years, but no one on forums can find an answer. Furthermore, I have made many submissions to the company, and never get an answer. Not cool!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Hi rfarrar2,

That sounds frustrating! Your best chance is by submitting this to the Troubleshooting forum. You'll find the instructions here: <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1254215>

Good luck!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Format Testing

This code failed to work---> This should link to the FAQ with backslash Title code

This one worked ---> This should link to the FAQ without backslash, with title code

'[This should link to the FAQ]' '(<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1426103>' "FAQ")

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ElOtroMiqui 14 13 11 8 7 3 2 2 2
How do you do that?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ElOtroMiqui 14 13 11 8 7 3 2 2 2
Yay! I figured it out by myself.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

knos15 25 11 5 2 2
I have been trying to do that for the past hour. Let me try again Duolingo Yay! It works!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Samy1979 23 9 1170
I bought "timed practice" with lingots. How long does it last? When do i have to buy it again?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
You can use it forever. You don't have to purchase another one ^_^

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lynne.wales
English please. How do I get it back? I'm in Japanese and can't read what to click on.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
@lynne.wales

Go to your Home tab (the link in the blue bar that says ホーム)

Then, click this icon (except that it won't be the spanish flag like this one is) Alt text

From there, you will see a drop down list. Click on it and choose a course that you prefer that is written in English.

I hope this helps!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nahyeni 10 7
Hi guys I just want to ask

I am using my cellphone and I accidentally clicked to NEVER in the audio clip where we speak the whole sentence for that particular test and I am worried on how I can activate tgat audio test please help me

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Hi Nahyeni, in the blue bar at the top of your screen, hover over your username and select "Settings" from the drop down menu. You can turn your microphone back on from there. I hope that helps. Good luck!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Eric-chen813 10

I am a duolingo user on iphone, and I learn Spanish from English , but somehow it turns into Chinese version, is it possible to turn it back to English version?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Hi Eric-chen813, it is possible that this issue is occurring on your phone's end, rather than Duolingo. I am not familiar with the iPhone, but users have mentioned before that the language is displaying incorrectly. Usually, once they go into their phone settings and change it to English, that fixes it. If that doesn't work, I recommend contacting support through the white Support tab on the left, or making a post in the Troubleshooting forum.

To post to the Troubleshooting forum, you will first need to subscribe. Here are instructions for that: http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Where_to_Discuss_What_on_Duolingo_%28Unofficial%29#Subscribing_to_Discussion_Forums

I hope this helps!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Eric-chen813 10

Thank you so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MassDestruction 9

How do you make something where people can give you lingots?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

You give them a link to this convo and tell them to find your comment and give it lingots :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jesslvy 6 3

Why does streak only count for finished lessons? I started a lesson but midnight came by the third restart for one. Why can't it be effected by activeness rather than completion? Not everyone has time to be able to finish one within 24 hours, they might have 10 minutes on the train/bus ride home for work and they might get time late at night.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@Jesslv, Duolingo does a lot of research to maximize learning. The streak encourages users to Use Duolingo everyday in a way that helps them learn effectively. However, if you unable to complete 1 lesson per twenty-four hours, I would suggest using the Timed Practice feature. You gain 1 point for every answer you get correct. This is a good review tool. However, depending on which device you are using, streaks can differ. Here is a wiki page on how the various streaks work:
<http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Streak>

I hope this helps!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zibzibzi 13 9 55

I don't understand why my extended progress quiz has disappeared and is asking for me to pay 25 lingots again

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@zibzibzi, you should have the results of your progress quiz in your settings. See the drop down menu located through your username in the blue bar at the top of the screen. Also, it is asking for 25 lingots again because you can take it as often as you can purchase it. I hope this helps!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zibzibzi 13 9 55

Thank you very much

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

behrlich1946 15

I'll try to do some basics every dat Anat Ehrlich Jerusalem-Amsterdam

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Meepsymo 5 4

I forgot my password

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Have you tried resetting the password?

First, go to your settings by clicking on your username in the blue bar at the top of the page. Then click "password" so you can see what email you have connected with this account. That is because the next step is to sign out and click the "forgot my password" link. Duolingo will send an email to the one you connected to your account. That email will give you instructions for resetting your password. :)

Good luck!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LiFicreator45 14 6 5 5

I didn't really get how to do the screenshots

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Hi Mr.ama-zing, if those instructions didn't help, have you tried looking for instructions on YouTube?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

melissatanis 22

hi! So I was wondering if anyone else has encountered this. I use duolingo on my computer and on an app on my iphone and I was messing with my settings on my app and connected my duolingo to facebook to find friends. When I went back to the home on my app, my streak was gone and it showed only half of the lessons I had completed as being completed. It's as if it restored it to where I was at a month ago. When I logged onto my account on my computer, nothing was different. So I deleted the app, re-downloaded it and logged back into my account and my streak was still gone and the lessons weren't completed. How do I fix this? I want to be able to use the app on my phone but I don't want to have to go back through and do all the lessons again. I know I could test out, but I'm scared if I started doing that on my phone, it's going to mess up the account on my computer somehow and clear my streak and progress. Can anyone give advice?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I recommend posting this matter to the Troubleshooting forum. Here is what you'll need for making a post there:

http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Community_and_discussions_guide#Troubleshooting_forum If you search the same guide it will teach you how to subscribe to that forum so you can post to it. I hope this helps! I'm really glad that it was only the app and not the computer that experienced the glitch. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Androw_S 4

arabic keyboard

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I recommend going to the wiki <http://duolingo.wikia.com> and clicking the "More" icon. It will lead you to a list of several guides, among them is one for installing keyboards. It's a bit more complicated than I like. If you get overwhelmed, message http://www.duolingo.com/Seth_H Hopefully they are around this week. If not, I recommend seeing if there are any tutorials on Youtube. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Serena.Li 6 5 4

Hello, would you please reset or change my display name into English? Both my ipad app and webpage show a language that I know nothing about. I am completely blanked, and have no idea what to click and where to go. Please help, pleasssssse!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

First, log out. Then, on the log-in page you will see a Language Setting link at the top of the page, on the right side. WIKI instructions with a picture. Click image to magnify.

I hope this helps! If the issue is that you've signed up for a course with a base language you don't understand, you can change course using these WIKI instructions

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gt40mk2 9 8

Where can you see how many points you currently have in a language?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Try the Duocheck :)

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

gt40mk2 9 8

Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JananiAnbarasan 12

can i share a link to my progress on LinkedIn?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

scottwoodward 10 9 8

Duolingo thinks I'm Chinese and writes in Chinese. I can not get back to studying French or communicate the problem. I have told many people how great Duolingo is but I'm dead in the water!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wazzie 25 11

Use this link to get back to the right layout.
Click the link in the red box (inside the oval)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Thanks wazzie! If that doesn't work, sign out, go back to <http://www.duolingo.com> where there is a log in option. Look to the upper right corner. You'll see an option that says either "languages" or "site language". It's a drop down menu and will let you set the site language.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Karoline.klingen 4

To practice or study for the day what to I click? I have been clicking strengthen skills but I haven't received any new words in along time.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Hi Karoline.klingen, to get new words, you'll need to work on more skills. The practice button only reviews things you've already encountered through the skills, for the most part.

Return to the Home tab in the blue bar at the top of your screen. You'll need to complete every lesson in the available skills. (Skills are round icons with pictures, such as people or something representing what the skill is about, lessons are inside of those.) You will need to successfully complete all lessons inside of a skill in order for the next skill to unlock.

For you, I believe your next skill is Common Phrases, Lesson 1.

I hope that helps! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kingdave33 14 10 10 9 8 8 6 6 5 4 1

Why do I lose progress even when I'm on track? I get on track then the next day I still lost progress. That sucks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

"Progress" is too vague. I don't understand what you mean. Can you be more specific? What are you actually seeing happen?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kingdave33 14 10 10 9 8 8 6 6 5 4 1

Progress is when I complete a module or lesson. Then I come back the next day and that lesson and another one I already completed are no longer complete. Then I have to go back and finish them both again.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Ah, that sounds more like skill decay, when the skill goes from gold to another color. It is Duolingo's way of reminding you to review that skill. It's not a requirement, but it is good practice. You'll be able to advance without the skill being gold. When you peak at a word or get a question wrong, your skill strength goes down and those will change color more often.

The way to know that a lesson is complete is to look for the green checkmark. Once all of the lessons in a skill are complete, new units open. Your next lesson according to your users profile is showing me is Present Verbs, Lesson 3. EDIT: Ah, hrm... not sure which language that was for though...still learning how to read the users profile data.

I hope that helps!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kingdave33 14 10 10 9 8 8 6 6 5 4 1

Thanks! So if I'm on track every day and get all the questions right I won't lose my progress right? But if I complete the lessons and get some wrong then I'll lose my progress the next day? Sooooo frustrating. I've been doing the same lessons over and over for more than a week!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Cass458161 11 6

HELP!!!!!! I'M DESPERATE!!!! I'm a Spanish speaker and I really wanted to learn Korean but there was no SPA-KO course available so I chose the KO-ENG course instead. It's been really useful, actually. The thing is that now I can't change the language I speak anywhere since it's all in Korean!! The emails I receive and duolingo.com are in korean and I can't change it because I don't understand. :(MAYDAY S.O.S (Sorry for been stupid...)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wazzie 25 11

This link will get you back to the Spanish - English course.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Cass458161 11 6

Thank you! It worked! You're such a good person ^^

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wazzie 25 11

Awesome! Glad you are back on track!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ejm_etherwork 25 12 7 7

How handy is this? Thank you for putting this together, Usagiboy7. I hope that DuoL points new users to it. I'd love to see this FAQ linked on the top bar that says "home immersion discussion vocabulary mobile"

(testing the formatting - italic - ^exponential - ###header3 -~~strike through~~) edit: I guess I have misread the formatting section. C'est la vie....

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wazzie 25 11

You read it correctly, but not all of those formatting options are available in Duolingo.

Here is a link that I bookmarked a while back with the formatting options.

http://www.reddit.com/r/duolingo/comments/1h9hvo/dowlingo_comment_formatting/

@Usagiboy I don't know if you want to consider changing the formatting link to the above (or maybe just explain all the formatting options don't work).

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Do you have the new beta layout or the main layout?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wazzie 25 11

Main layout. Does exponential and strike through work for you?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Main layout = 90% of accounts still use it. Is the version previous to the beta version I'm testing right now with 10% of users.

I lost the old numbered lists.

Alt text

Strikethrough and exponential also do not work.

Alt text'

Thanks for the link, I've added it!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

74 Do I need the internet to use Duolingo?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204567584-Do-I-need-the-internet-to-use-Duolingo->

Do I need the internet to use Duolingo?

Yes and no. If you are accessing Duolingo via the web, you need to be connected to the internet.

If you have a mobile device, we have offline mode for our Android and iOS apps, which allows you to access a handful of lessons without internet or wifi connectivity. However, not all of your lessons are available to you when in offline mode. You'll need to connect to the Internet for those lessons to be recorded and count towards your daily progress.

75 The difference between bebe/bebo/bebes is confusing me?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3709>

jessgrace 6 3

Give Lingot

34 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

Clevinger 15

Bebo - I drink. Bebe - You (formal, as in "Usted bebe")/He/She drinks. Bebes - You (familiar, as in "Tú bebes") drink. Beben - They drink. Bebemos - We drink.

22ReplyGive Lingot6•4 years ago

PaulR33d 7

I was struggling with this and this really made more sense than the rest. Thank you. I was struggling with formal and informal and how to address a male or female.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GeorgeT 25 14 13

supplement this site w/ StudySpanish.com ... lots of real, simple answers there to Q's like this

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

tedstone100 25 14 6 4 1

He, she, you (usted) drink/I drink/you (tu) drink

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Elephant127 2

Bebo is I drink Bebe is you (formal) drink and he/she drinks bebes is you (familiar) drink, and Beben is we drink

0ReplyGive Lingot4•3 months ago

76 what is the difference between "eres" and "es" ??.....

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4676676>

lalalaiq7 3

Give Lingot1

62 years ago

Leave a new comment

11 Comments

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

Eres and es are different conjugations of the same verb, ser. The form es is used with él, ella or usted (he, she or the formal you that you would use with people who are not friends or family). The form eres is used with tú (the informal or familiar word for you that you would use with friends and family). See this conjugation chart for more details.

cGlua29kb3Vn

26ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZainabOraby 10

Very helpful. Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SimoneStomeo 25 25 25 18 1160

'eres' is 'are' of the second singular person= you are 'es' is 'is' of third singular person=she/he/it is

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rootyjr 22 5

"Singular" not "singolar".

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rootyjr 22 5

Not to be offensive. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SimoneStomeo 25 25 25 18 1160

ajaja you are right :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lalalaiq7 3

i thought so thanx!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iamthebeauty 8

thanks a lot pinkodougi was quite confused but now the confusion is clear.. :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MCAR06 6

I just did basic course 2 and it seemed to pair es only with masculine and eres only with feminine. Are they interchangeable or do you use formal for masculine words and informal for feminine words?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rootyjr 22 5

es means "is" eres means "you are"

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

77 Please Scrap the Fluency Shield

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/9200505>

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

I've made a post about the fluency shield before. Loads of other people also have. So I apologise up front if this thread seems spammish. I just want the good folks at Duolingo to know how I (we?) feel.

PLEASE SCRAP THE FLUENCY SHIELD.

It doesn't actually seem to tell us anything useful. It doesn't seem to relate to your language progress in any meaningful way.

The old "You can now read XX% of all real written LANGUAGE" worked better.

Give Lingot43

1871 year ago

Leave a new comment

89 Comments

KevanSF 25 25 25 25 25 16 16 14 13 11 10 8 7 7 6 6 6 5 5 4 4 4 4 3 2 7 11

I love Duolingo and use it every day and am very thankful it exists and appreciate greatly all the work that the employees and volunteers have done and continue to do to make it a great place to learn languages.

I do not wish to appear negative about Duo in any way, but I would like to voice a suggestion to the powers that be—

Many of us here are linguists, and most of us love languages and words. Words have meaning and should be used accurately. A language learning site should be especially attentive to use words correctly, particularly words that pertain to language learning.

That said, Duo is not using "fluency" and "immersion" correctly.

The basic definition of "fluency" from the dictionary:

"the quality or condition of being fluent, in particular.

<pre>the ability to speak or write a foreign language easily and accurately. the ability to express oneself easily and articulately." </pre>

Nothing we do on Duo can measure our ability to speak or write easily and accurately, nor to express ourselves easily and articulately. We are translating sentences, almost always fairly literally, and also listening to sentences in the target language and transcribing them. We are not generating sentences, either written or verbal. Also, fluency is an ability. One either possesses an ability or one does not. I question whether someone can have 44% of an ability. Could someone have 44% of the ability to safely and correctly perform a brain surgery?

In short, I feel that Duo is misusing the word "fluency," and should come up with a different measurement label.

Duo's use of "immersion" also bugs me because it is inaccurate. If you are taking an "immersion" class in a language, say French, only French is used in the class. The teacher says "hello, students" in French, picks up a book and says "this is a book" in French, etc etc. No English is used. By contrast, Duo's "immersion" is not immersion at all. It is translation.

(Basic dictionary definition of "immersion" as it pertains to language learning.)

"a method of teaching a foreign language by the exclusive use of that language, usually at a special school."

75ReplyGive Lingot17•1 year ago

m.tastic 25 13 11 11 8 6 5 5 2

They should rename "Immersion" to "Translations". They say it in the URL.

28ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

jacobras 23 11 8 7

It used to be named "Translations", that's probably why it's still in the URL.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Guilelmo 25 10 10 6 12 16

This is no spam but seems perfectly reasonable to me. Having a so-called fluency of 60% in Italian I nonetheless am not really able to talk fluently. So this should be replaced by some progress helper like a watch that measures your time spent on learning (which might be a stronger motivation anyway). So - have a lingot or two for well placed criticism.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Have to agree. If they are going to have such a thing then there ought to be a test that accurately measures one's fluency, if such a thing is possible. The fluency shield is misleading and confusing especially to new users. Ban the Shield!

37ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

ChrisZamenhof 9 5

There is no way to determine a user's fluency in a language with a few written questions.

17ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

beadspitter 17 6

I would agree, in that for me it's become deadspace on my screen. I don't look at it, I don't use it, I just scroll around it as meaningless. It's essentially a blank spot. As such, it doesn't especially upset me, but I'd just as soon the space was used for something I cared about.

21ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

Ditto.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KyledeIPue 10 10 6 5 5 4 3 3 2 2

I agree. For example, I can read and get the basic idea of something in Portuguese but I cannot understand anything in spoken Iberian/European Portuguese. I tried listening to a newscast but I only could identify a single word "amanha" (tomorrow). Esperanto lacks a fluency shield I believe.

Also, your thread didn't look like spam at all.

20ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

golicar 25 25 22 11 6

I am a native Portuguese speaker (Brazilian) and I tell you, if you're studying Brazilian Portuguese, you're definitely going to have a lot of trouble understanding the European one. Even we Brazilians have sort of a hard time understanding it at times. I know that's not the point of your comment or of the discussion as a whole, but I thought it would be worth saying. I suggest you focus either on Brazilian or European portuguese, for learning both at once might be arduous.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IAmJon 25 15 9 4

I saw some people being interviewed in French with written subtitles on the bottom of the screen yesterday. Like you, I understood about one word. This is despite being on Duo for about 2 years and having 61% on the shield. The shield really is meaningless. Still it is really disheartening to still be struggling with spoken French after all this time.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aminowrimo 22 11 9 8 6 6

I can understand most of what is said on TV when it's subtitled, and sometimes when it isn't. But, I've been using Duo for French for 2.5 years, on and off, I listen to a ton of French music, and I'm currently in France and have been using the language intensively for 4-7 hours a day for the past week. Before this, I could understand much more slowly. The Duo shield says I am at 58% fluency. I don't understand how it counts this!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lolaphilologist 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 11 11 7 5 5 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 1466

Whereas I lived in France, am fluent enough to understand most spoken French, finished my tree a long time ago and don't always practice it on Duolingo, but my shield says 43% fluent. I agree, it's a useless measure.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

F572D297 10 9 2

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DasEinhorn 25 25 25 18 17 14 12 12 10 8 7 4 3

Is there a way to make that permanent? Whenever I refresh, it comes back.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jofish999 12 8 7 5 2 2

You can remove the whole box, every time you visit the page, by getting a browser extension. Just google "[your browser] custom javascript extension"

Then the code you want to add is:

```
<pre>var e = document.getElementsByClassName("fluency-container");
e[0].parentNode.parentNode.removeChild(e[0].parentNode); </pre>
```

This will always remove the entire white box within which the dreaded Fluency Shield is held, even if you refresh the page, and even if you restart your browser.

N.B. A good cjs extension for chrome: <https://chrome.google.com/webstore/detail/custom-javascript-for-web/poakhlngfciodnhlhghgnaaelnpjljja>

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

trawetsxela 7 6 5 4 4

Sure. Grab my Userscript here -> <http://bit.ly/1JrHyn8>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

no.name.42 25 25 25 14 13 10 10 8 7 7 5 4 3 3 912

Is it still an A/B test? if so then they will decide off of their data. If it's not an A/B test anymore and everyone has, then I don't think they'll change it because of a few forum posts. They have whatever criteria that they have and it doesn't seem to include what people say in the discussions.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

m.tastic 25 13 11 11 8 6 5 5 2

It's not an A/B test anymore.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

That sucks.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Susanna35 25 20 17

I didn't think it was, because I wasn't in the testing phase. Maybe they think it looks nice. But it's meaningless. Doesn't bother me that much, though, because it doesn't really interfere with my learning.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

golicar 25 25 22 11 6

What is A/B supposed to mean?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

sometimes called split testing is comparing two versions of a web page to see which one performs better. You compare two web pages by showing the two variants (let's call them A and B) to similar visitors at the same time. The one that gives a better conversion rate, wins!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

golicar 25 25 22 11 6

Thanks for the explanation!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

you are welcome :)

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

Aghork 9

It seems to be an A/B test because I do not have the shield. Or it applies only to certain languages and Swedish is not one of them (I reset all the progress on the others, to have less distractions and concentrate better on swedish). I have searched the whole site but no shields or fluency indicators. I find by the way that I am missing the "Words" tab. Is it gone for good? I really would like to have it back...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

no.name.42 25 25 25 14 13 10 10 8 7 7 5 4 3 3 912

There is no "fluency shield" or "words tab" at the moment for Swedish.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

OrangeJulius3 9 2

Irish does not have a Fluency Shield!

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Ah, the luck of the Irish.

39ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

klgregonis 24 23 23 22 20 17 17 16 14 11 10 3 3 3 2 448

I would agree. I haven't even finished either the Portuguese from Spanish or the Portuguese from English trees, and they are respectively showing my fluency at 53 and 48 percent. I can really only manage anything in Portuguese by thinking of the Spanish, then converting it to Portuguese. Meanwhile, my completed English from Spanish tree is only at 52 percent (due mostly to errors in SPANISH grammar), while my Spanish from English is at 56 percent. Totally meaningless.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

trawetsxela 7 6 5 4 4

Have it removed my friend. Utilize my userscript -> <http://bit.ly/1JrHyn8>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

m.tastic 25 13 11 11 8 6 5 5 2

100 lingots to the first person who makes a userscript removing the fluency badge.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1154

You can get rid of it with Adblock Plus by labelling it as an ad.

19ReplyGive Lingot27•1 year ago

m.tastic 25 13 11 11 8 6 5 5 2

25 lingots for that trick :)

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1154

Oooh, thanks! If I would remember who mentioned it on here a few days ago, I would forward them to that user. As it is, I'll just keep distributing them to unsuspecting users and especially anyone who even vaguely supports a Finnish course. ;-)

8ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

FlynnCowan 5 5 4

I support a Finnish course! I love Finnish! Until then, Mondly is a good resource, you have to pay, but just use the code: MONDLY and it's free!

4ReplyGive Lingot10•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

I just found it where to put that code. just click shop in the top row a pop up window will open, look down left side there enter you code there. check here my screenshot

<http://s7.postimg.org/ny8zi86a3/Clipboard01.jpg>

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1154

Haha, sure, you can have some lingots! I've had a look at Mondly (French and Russian), and was not particularly impressed. But I see why you would start using it for a language that isn't on Duolingo yet, such as Afrikaans.

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

Jonathangrant00 25 10 10 7 7 5 5 3 2

I tried this but I couldn't find where to put the code in.

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

FlynnCowan 5 5 4

In fact, Afrikaans is exactly what I am using Mondly for! I too believe it is not as good as many other sources, but it's the best free one for Afrikaans that I found.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1154

I know, I commented on that other thread you started :-)

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

jklingen 22 9 9 7 6

This is a sign that we don't have enough things to use our ridiculous number of lingots on...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

m.tastic 25 13 11 11 8 6 5 5 2

Or a sign that I have way too many lingots... :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

What a nice program, thanks!

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Phiznlil 23 9

Oh yes: options -> add filter duolingo.com###icon.icon-fluency-score

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jofish999 12 8 7 5 2 2

You can remove the whole box, every time you visit the page, by getting a browser extension. Just google "[your browser] custom javascript extension"

Then the code you want to add is:

```
var e = document.getElementsByClassName("fluency-container");
e[0].parentNode.parentNode.removeChild(e[0].parentNode);
```

This will always remove the entire white box within which the dreaded Fluency Shield is held, even if you refresh the page, and even if you restart your browser.

N.B. A good cjs extension for chrome: <https://chrome.google.com/webstore/detail/custom-javascript-for-web/poakhIngfciodnhlhghnaaelnpljija>

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

Nice. I'll give one lingot, tho. :-D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

trawetsxela 7 6 5 4 4

Just seeing your comment mate. I know we're way past that 100 lingots sweepstake and there's the adblock work-around but, since you mentioned "userscript", here you go - <http://bit.ly/1JrHyn8>

0ReplyGive Lingot100•1 year ago

m.tastic 25 13 11 11 8 6 5 5 2

You just got 100 lingots :D Nice job!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

trawetsxela 7 6 5 4 4

Thanks a lot man! When you have the time, you can also check out my latest userscript. It allows you to refund items purchased from the Lingot store -> <http://bit.ly/1U2IrxS>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

m.tastic 25 13 11 11 8 6 5 5 2

Nice :) Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FlynnCowan 5 5 4

I kinda like it... I can brag to my friends that I'm a whole 2% fluent in German

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

But bragging used to be better under the old system where I was 70 something %. Now I'm 55 :'-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Elizabeth261736 16 15 14 7 2

I'd rather see them make other improvements rather than take time to remove this.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

Agreed. But it wouldn't take long to remove it. And remember: they wasted time adding this in the first place. :-)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

StrapsOption 23 17 14 14 11 11 8 8 8 6 5 5 3 3 2 2 2

I agree, I don't think it's at all sensible at all. I still like the progress bar for the levels the most. Even if the levels don't make that much sense, I find it's much better motivation than the fluency shield. The points-per-day graph is good too.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68
Definitely agree with you there.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlphabetBoy123 15 6 4 4 3 3 2
I agree! :D I don't want to be misled with the shield, it's not accurate. I agree, it's useless.

Hope they decide to take it out soon. :D

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tessroselli 19
I can see how the fluency shield could act as an encouragement - but only if it actually works! It does not seem to logically connect to one's progress. Mine started on 57%, and then gave me a fanfare and raised to 58%. That spurred me on to immediately do one more exercise - which I completed to gold - only for the shield to promptly return to 57%.
This exact same sequence has now happened THREE times. Make it work or get rid - because as it stands it is counterproductive and only produces frustration.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68
Absolutely my point... if it worked. Sadly, it doesn't seem to make any sense whatsoever. The old system was better.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aiigsh 22 9 8
I have finished my spanish tree twice. Level 21 in Spanish. Fluency 4 % . The top third (hardest) is golden

I am not yet half way through the reverse tree. Level 9. Fluency 10 % Most lessons on just one strength bar. I wish it would go away or be more accurate. Taking the advice to ignore it.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AndrewViceroy 25 788
I noticed my Spanish Fluency shield went down from 57% to 54% suddenly last week. At one point, before I had finished my tree (I finished my tree several months ago), it was in the low 70s. It keeps going down. I was getting behind with my exercises last week, so I went through and totally caught up by doing all 30ish exercises over two days . Then I also went in and did some translations. Then I retook the 25 lingot "Spanish Quiz" and went up from a 3.96 (5 months ago) to a 4.41. In every case, I am faster (on the speed timings) and more accurate than ever. And yet... my Fluency shield is still at 54%!! It didn't budge after all that! What do I have to do to raise it higher?? It makes no sense. According to the Spanish Quiz, I should be at about 88%.

Here's a question: I often speed through the catch-up exercises and don't take the time to use punctuation and/or special characters with accents and tildes, etc., because it still gives me the points--is that what is effecting the Fluency percentage? Is there anywhere where they describe how it is actually determined?

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

My point exactly. The fluency shield doesn't seem to relate to anything.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vrait 16 8 4 2 2 2

While it may not be accurate, it does give incentive to gold skills. I actually like it being there.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

Honestly, it doesn't give incentive. Whether 15 of my circles are not gold, or all are (bearing in mind I've completed the tree), it doesn't actually make a difference. It often goes DOWN when more are gold!!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AndrewViceroy 25 788

That's what I'm not understanding. Why does it keep going down the more I do and do better?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SteveLando 22 18 17 16 14 12 11 10 10 10 9 9 8 8 8 8 7 6 6 6 5 5 3 3

I fully agree

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

puppychoo 17

the fluency shield doesn't really tell you how fluent you are in spanish, because we all know the truths of our own fluencies. So ya i agree, Bring down the fluency shield!!!!!!!!!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Maclomhair 24 19 12 4 2 2 833

Perhaps it should simply be changed to "Course Completion"? Which is what it presumably is.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

StrapsOption 23 17 14 14 11 11 8 8 8 6 5 5 3 3 2 2 2

It actually takes into account how 'golded-up' one's tree is. For example, I'm finished my German tree, but a lot of it is not gold, so it's telling me I'm only 40% fluent.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

I only have a few units of my Portuguese tree done, and it is 45%. I have the whole Spanish tree done, it's 55%. Even when both are fully gold. ???

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

StrapsOption 23 17 14 14 11 11 8 8 8 6 5 5 3 3 2 2 2

Well if that's what's going on, I have no idea what their system is.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

It's definitely not crystal clear.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

So long as "course completion" means how many WORDS as well as modules you've done. Good idea.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

could not agree more , 100 agree with you. old one was much better

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

Cheers for the moral support!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Greeting from India :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mrisse 17 11

I guess it's appropriate now to write in ALL CAPS, our demands to the duolingo team.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Goran12 22 8 2

I don't understand what either of the two metrics means. "You can now read XX% of all real written LANGUAGE" mimicked to mean something, though with that few words we learn in the tree, very few real articles (or articles here) could be completely translated, definitely less than the percentage given. In real translation you can deduce other words' meaning out of context, but this is hard to measure, knowing every word in the article is what I would expect.

I agree with KevanSF that the terms like "immersion" and "fluency" are used terribly by Duolingo. However, I'd suggest just renaming this metrics to something like "You have mastered XX% of LANGUAGE tree". I don't have much time for Duolingo nowadays so I usually do just a single timed practice a day, but decrease of the percentage in the shield really made me practice more today. The old percentage was useless at this kind of motivation (it motivated to make new lessons and learn more words instead). One summarized number motivates more than tens of skill statuses, especially when you have to make a lot of scrolling to see the deeper ones.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TaraMc4 15 9

In truth I don't care about how accurate the naming of the shield is, I care that it is blimmin demoralising. I've completed about a third of the tree, I regold every day, I average 50 points a day and maybe get 4 or 5 wrong out of a potential 100 questions, I'm so set on learning and fixing the learning I've only progressed one section in the last 6 weeks preferring to review weak areas and yet some how I've watched my "fluency" drop systematically from 39% to 7% since the shield went active. I've just subscribed to babel for a year and it might be less "fun" but at least I don't feel like I am going backward.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Eddie_Sammon 18 4 4 4 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 3

Surely the concept of a fluency shield is good, it just needs improving?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

Maybe. But please see other comments in this thread which refer to the misuse of the term "fluency".

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pmagnuson 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 23 20 16 16 14 13 12 12 11 11 5 5 1220

Fluency shields should indeed be scrapped, because they do not mean anything. DL is very good in many ways - silly gimmicks that naysayers can point at as obviously meaningless are counter productive.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MKTanksley 20 14 5 3

It's actually really irritating, because every couple days/weeks it will tell me "You've achieved 54% fluency!!" and then the next day it's back to 53% again. It's worthless and hard to ignore. If Duolingo doesn't get rid of it, they should at least make it minimizable/hideable via the settings.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

What you said!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MmeHibou1 12 3

I agree with these comments about the definition of fluency and immersion/ translation etc and also with all the appreciation of the practice and help this site gives for improving mastery of languages - really, truly appreciated.

It is FRUSTRATING to have done loads of practice, got 4.4/5 of the test that you can take for 25 lingots, and then not to see any improvement in the overall score on the shield (whatever you want to call the shield).

HOW CAN I IMPROVE THE SCORE BY THE SHIELD ?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

Hey, guy(s)! Thank you so much for giving me three lingots!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 11 5 68

Wow!! 35 Lingots!! I am honoured. Thank you, Muchas gracias, Tack så mycket!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ForeverBlu1 11

What's the maximum Spanish learners can get

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

78 "You are young. I on the other hand am very old."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/726007>

Translation: Du bist jung. Ich bin hingegen sehr alt.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

36 Comments

madcido 15 12 10 8

Any difference between hingegen and jedoch?

16ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

XoooOverdose 18

I don't think so.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Timberhawk 25 25 24 20 6 1304

Would "dagegen" work as well?

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Calendel 13 11 5 3

It didn't work with me, but I want to know the reason...

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Gurkish 10 9
Also want to know

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gweneviev 13 10 10 5 5
I am surprised the third option works. I'd rather think "dagegen" would. why does it not work...?

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Scholastica0527 14 11 6 1
My sense is that "dagegen" conveys more of a sense of an opposing point, which is not the meaning here.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

schnek 18 12 2
My answer was accepted: Du bist jung. Ich bin andererseits sehr alt

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

appu.panic 10
How about "auf der anderen Seite"? I have heard native Germans use that phrase. Is it applicable here?

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BravoByte 16 12 11 11 10 2 20
yes

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

hansimahri 4
It's wrong because there is no corresponding word for "selbst" in the English sentence

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FisherLiz 18 13
Does that make it a wrong sentence in German outside Duo? I put it in because I thought the emphasis in the English suggested it - we do not use the word in this way, but imply it in either the voice, or by pausing slightly around the phrase "on the other hand". I try to translate what I think is being implied as much as word-for-word. I keep losing hearts too, so I should learn by this experience, perhaps.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AsafH 24 10 9

Would dennoch work here instead of hingegen?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ramzuiv 13 10 5

Warum ist "Jedoch" nicht gut?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FisherLiz 18 13

I tried to use this lesson, & put "Hingegen bin ich selbst sehr alt" and lost a heart for the "selbst". Is it wrong, or have I missed the point somewhere?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Scholastica0527 14 11 6 1

As in English, I think, the "selbst" is superfluous here because "I" doesn't need to be emphasized. "I myself..." doesn't make sense in the context.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

HerrBurg 24 4 1

I used the following. Ich bin jung abdererseits bin ich sehr alt. It was accepted.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

katekalinskaya 12 5

I'm not sure it is correct to say in English "I on the other hand am very old". To my mind, it should be "I am on the other hand...". Native speakers, please comment on this word order.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nezurec 20 9 3 2

As a native speaker of American English, I'd say the most common word order would be "On the other hand, I am very old." Neither of yours are really wrong, but both sound a bit formal, maybe even old-fashioned, especially the second one.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

katekalinskaya 12 5

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JohnOtis 15

Yes that is okay I believe. I probably use the first format more often.

I, on the other hand, am not very good with commas or semi colons. So don't ask me about all the rules governing them, cause I just tend to 'wing it'. My wife says there is a movement away from (over) using them, to my great relief....

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

katekalinskaya 12 5
Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EdBrown3 11 8 6 3
"I, on the other hand, am very old." Not only is it very good english, but the commas are necessary

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DanLoder 10 8 5
Wrote ich bin.. got wrong. . Told to use bin ich.. aren't these the same?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElpisIsrael 21 14 9
Why was "Sie sind" not accepted?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AsafH 24 10 9
If you mean "Sie sind jung. Ich bin hingegen sehr alt." was not accepted, that would be a mistake.
Please report it if you come to it again.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ihangiu 22 8 421
Shouldn't "Ihr seid jung. Ich bin dagegen ganz alt." be accepted?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gweneviev 13 10 10 5 5
i think so too

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Uberling 25 11 648
The owl dinged me for using ganz instead of sehr. Why was I wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AsafH 24 10 9
Check this out.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Uberling 25 11 648
Nice. Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Titchymitch 15 6 4 4 3 276

Why is the word order "I am however very old"? Can you also say "Hingegen, ich bin sehr alt"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gweneviev 13 10 10 5 5

no, the structure is wrong. it doesnt work like in the english where exclamations are separated with a comma. here, it has to be a "Nebensatz". so it should be "Hingegen bin ich sehr alt" or "ich bin hingegen sehr alt"

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

TelijeeL 25 23 18 14 13 11 11 10 6 6 4 2 2 2 416

Kann man nicht "Du bist jung. In Gegenteil, ich bin sehr alt." sagen?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

notstarboard 16

How is "Sie sind jung" correct here? Is "Sie" not used for elders and superiors? It makes no sense to me that someone who is so much older than the person they're talking to would use "Sie".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

G.HopperSw 17 14 12 6 3 3

Why not "andererseits?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

79 "The dawn of tomorrow"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/217482/The-dawn-of-tomorrow>

Translation: La madrugada de mañana

14 years ago

Leave a new comment

90 Comments

vandermonde 14

"The dawn of tomorrow" is a very strange thing to say. "Tomorrow at dawn" would be more natural in English. This goes for any other part of a day too; don't say "The noon of tomorrow" or "The night of tomorrow" because no one talks like that.

45ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

THeNeeno 10 2

I would agree that this isn't something you'll say often, but it isn't exactly the same thing as saying "tomorrow at dawn" (which is arguably something you'll say more often). "The dawn of tomorrow will usher in a new era..." or some other flowery sentence like that makes perfect sense in English, although it won't be said often. "Tomorrow at dawn" would not really fit that sentence.

36ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gato65 12

Exactly. Some flowery sentence they use in speeches. The dawn of tomorrow is the dawn of a new day! (epic redundancy there but ignore that...) :)

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

fnowacki 16 11 10 5

My (humble) guess is that "Tomorrow at dawn" would be better translated as "Mañana en la madrugada". Would that be correct?

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cstobler 8

Or could it be: "Mañana a madrugada"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Highways 16 16 16 16 14 14 3 3

Esa frase no tiene sentido. That tense has no sense. Better: "Mañana de madrugada"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

loek_tonnaer 22 10 1

My guess would have been "Mañana por la madrugada". Does that make sense, you reckon?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Highways 16 16 16 16 14 14 3 3

Chronologically:

Mañana de madrugada.

Mañana al alba.

Mañana por la mañana.

Mañana a/al mediodía.

Mañana por la tarde.

Mañana por la noche.

Mañana a medianoche.

Why? I don't know, but it is so ;-)

25Give Lingot7•1 year ago

Highways 16 16 16 16 14 14 3 3

The difference between «madrugada» and «alba» is that this last one is located at the end of the «madrugada», is the short lapse of time between when you can distinguish the sun light, but the Sun hasn't yet raised over the horizon and the time when you really can see the sun dish. I hope to have made it clear, or perhaps I have done it more obscure to understand.

6Give Lingot2•9 months ago

loek_tonnaer 22 10 1

Awesome, thanks! Have a lingot. ;) So really a difference between madrugada and alba?

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

tessbee 24 16 60

Thanks, Highways (for the chronological periods of tomorrow)! That is very helpful. Have to go and look up alba now. :) Have a lingot before I go.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Highways 16 16 16 16 14 14 3 3

Thanks! «Alba» is the short period when the Sun 'awakes' and goes up the horizon.

1Give Lingot•9 months ago

Revan12200 7 3

I agree (I'm from England)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DeanG6 20 12 9 2 9

There is a song that goes, "this is the dawning of the age of aquarius....." but that's different from saying dawn of.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Adam57 12 3

9 to 5ers anthem?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KarimHosein 10

5th Dimension Band (almost said 7th Extension Band) ;-)

"When the moon is in the Seventh House And Jupiter lies with Mars Then peace will guide the planets And love will steer the stars!"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

FoxShepard 17 248

Not only is it an odd sentence, I'm not sure what it has to do with animals. :-) It really belongs in the Time lesson, not the Animals lesson.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

mahaniok 10

why not "de la mañana"?

13ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

rspreng 24

That would be "in/of the morning."

20ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

DuoTongue 10 4

I just read in another thread that "la mañana" means "tomorrow" (with "tomorrow morning" being "mañana de la mañana") and "el mañana" means "the future." Is that right? In any case, it apparently wouldn't mean I have to always tack a definitive article in front of "mañana"... would it?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

droma 21 34

I believe that "mañana" = tomorrow

"la mañana" = the morning

"por la mañana" = in the morning

"mañana por la mañana" = tomorrow morning

23ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EhsanKarimi 12 9 8 6 5 4

Tomorrow morning is "mañana POR la mañana"

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

ehsankarimi- you're right, mañana por la mañana

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

THeneeno 10 2

No, you misunderstood or they got it wrong. "La mañana" is "the morning" "mañana" is "tomorrow" "Tomorrow morning" is "mañana de la mañana" precisely because mañana(tomorrow) + de (of or in) + la mañana (the morning)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Pika72 10 9

I thought dawn in Spanish was "alba". I never heard madrugada before! Does anyone know?

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AndreasWitnstein 25 17 15 12 12 9 8 5

Yes, "dawn" is best translated as 'alba' or 'amanecer'. But 'madrugada' is often translated as "dawn" because English doesn't have a word for it: 'madrugada' ordinarily refers to the time between midnight and dawn, sometimes called "the wee hours".

38ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tstone2077 11

I've always heard "la madrugada" refer to the middle of the night. never dawn.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

THeNeeno 10 2

"la madrugada" is everything after midnight until the day breaks, so there is no single word equivalent in English. This is why it gets translated as dawn. Alba is more the equivalent of the English word dawn, but dawn is the closest one word equivalent to madrugada.

20ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Pika72 10 9

Oh, I see. Thank you so much! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sra_Baird 9 2

El alba, la aurora , la madrugada, la alborada are some of the terms use to refer to the dawn.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Liz467932 9

I didn't use alba and used one of the words it suggested and then in marked me wrong and said I should have used alba!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

shinypurplepants 8

Why does it list other translations for 'dawn' if it doesn't accept them?

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OliviaWagn 8

I used "clarea" from the list given for "dawn". This was the first time I've seen dawn in any of my exercises so I had no idea it wasn't acceptable.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

myusernameiserk 11

I did the same thing. The only thing I can find online for "clarea" is that it is the 3rd person singular form of the verb "clarear" meaning "to lighten" or "to make clear." I can see how that could relate to dawn, but i didn't find any evidence of "clarea" being a noun. Could anyone clarify this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mitaine56 15 6

shiny- because you have to choose the correct answer among the hints

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

onlinealterego 22 15 10 4 2 2 836
Why is alba incorrect?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AndreasWitnstein 25 17 15 12 12 9 8 5

The word "dawn" in this phrase (as opposed to just "dawn tomorrow") is being used figuratively, meaning "the beginning of the new era". In English, the synonyms "daybreak" and "sunrise" aren't used in this figurative sense. Similarly, in Spanish, while 'la madrugada' and 'el amanecer' are often used in this figurative sense, 'la alba' isn't. It's just idiomatic.

24ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

onlinealterego 22 15 10 4 2 2 836
Great explanation, thank you! I had no clue.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

xainie02 13
So what does 'la clarea' mean then?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Liedchronism 13 9 9 8 2
How poetic.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

khonkhortisan 13 6 3

La madrugada de mañana - The dawn of tomorrow Dawn means the first appearance of light in the sky before sunrise. With the meaning of dawn used in "dawn of the century", similar to "to begin", "the dawn of tomorrow" can also mean "the beginning of tomorrow". Correcting for English's way of showing ownership (the way of showing ownership of english), this sentence should be translated "Tomorrow's dawn", or just use an adjective, "Dawn tomorrow".

I shall play a word game, where I swap the meanings of "tomorrow" and "the sun": "The dawn of light" is repetitive. "The dawn of tomorrow" could mean the first appearance of tomorrow in the sky before tomorrowise: I see tomorrow light up the trees, and when I see tomorrow rise above the horizon, I know it is no longer today, but the Sun.

P.S. If you're on Earth, you can see the sunrise and moonrise. If you're on the moon, you can see the sunrise and earthrise. Sorry if my comment is a little weird, I must've caught it from the translation. If it doesn't make sense yet, think of "the dawn of moonlight".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NorthPlant 6

I have heard a lot of Latinos say " mañana por la mañana." For tomorrow morning... should that be right here?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Aditina 7 6 5 4

"Mañana por la mañana is correct, but in another sense. For example: "Mañana por la mañana compraré pan" (Tomorrow at morning i'll but bread) but, "el amanecer de mañana será muy bonito" (The dawn of tomorrow will be pretty)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Squeaky_Pigs 10

This would make an awesome movie title.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EugeneTiffany 25 12 1

Stumbled on two more answers on duolingo.

The dawn of the morning. El amanecer de la mañana.

At the dawn of morning. Al alba de la mañana.

The latter didn't work, here, so reported it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ecaria 7

Poetic!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jeanang 12

El alba de mañana??

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Highways 16 16 16 16 14 14 3 3

Mañana al alba.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jrx1509 15

Alba needs to be accepted for this translation.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EllieOnza 14 3

I said "no se" and the mic picked it up as "La madrugada de manana"!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ScottBrownRN 8

Why is it wrong to say "La madrugada de la mañana." Is it because I am being redundant using "la"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EllieOnza 14 3

That's what I said!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pramudyawisnu 11

never learn this sentence before, but suddenly it appeared in the practice session.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sponner 13

When you hover on the word "dawn" it gives de madrugada as an answer, so I wrote "la de madrugada de manana" which is wrong, can anybody tell me why the "de" was wrong.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MlleBaeten 10 10

I used another definition for this same reason - the definitions make it sound like you can only use "madrugada" as part of a phrase beginning with "de".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

faith46 23 22 20 17 16 14 11 11 2 92

It sounds like the title of a modern science TV show!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MaryWatson5 10

What is the difference between alborada and madrugada?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Highways 16 16 16 16 14 14 3 3

Madrugada: Tiempo posterior a la medianoche y anterior al amanecer. Alba, alborada: Primera luz del día antes de salir el Sol.

That is, 'madrugada' is a bigger lapse of time than 'el alba' o 'la alborada'. 'La madrugada' goes through some hours, and 'el alba' only extends for a few minutes.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Antorix 10 10 8 2

I wrote "el alba" and was wrong, the site says "la alba." But doesn't the rule require to put "el" if the following word starts with "a"? And I well remember that in the initial exercise it was "el alba", not "la alba." But now it's somehow a mistake, why?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

loek_tonnaer 22 10 1

I'm quite sure that is just DuoLingo messing up. I'm quite certain it should be "el alba" indeed. Note however that the rule only applies to words that start with a STRESSED "a". ;) El alba, el agua, la avenida.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

88xavien88 13

Im haveing a heck of a time with when to use " del" " de la" " and "de"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarkNeff727 25 738

and its duolingos fault unfortunately... in all my research i have found that it is accepted to say "la madrugada DEL mañana", even the movie with tom cruise Edge of tomorrow, in spanish the title is Al filo del mañana. so, it makes you wonder dont it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

JodyMcCulley 12

El amancer is also dawn or daybreak according to the dictionary.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kakaowinka 10 7 4 2

I am not from England. Could somebody explain what "the dawn of tomorrow" means exactly? Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DuoTongue 10 4

Dawn = the end of night and the rising of the sun Tomorrow = the day after this current day "The dawn of tomorrow" - sunrise tomorrow

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

THeNeeno 10 2

Dawn is the moment you first see light (daybreak) but before the sunrise (when you actually see the sun).

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kakaowinka 10 7 4 2

Thanks a lot!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

THeNeeno 10 2

The dawn of tomorrow can be either literal (that moment tomorrow when you first see light but before you actually see the sun) or figurative (the symbolic beginning of). Dawn is literally that moment. It is when the day breaks, so the beginning of the day, so figuratively the beginning of anything (the dawn of civilization for example)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DeanG6 20 12 9 2 9

I said "de la mañana" and lost a heart. :-(

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sralena 16

alborada or amanecer better translate as dawn in my opinion. I live in Mexico and here it is called alborada

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LEERICHA 11 6

La madrugada de mañana was marked correct! Interesting...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EllieOnza 14 3

Why is it wrong to say "La madrugada de la manana"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Highways 16 16 16 16 14 14 3 3

Madrugada is the lapse of time between the midnight and the dawn, that time correspond with the night. You are saying something similar to 'The night of the morning? Do you understand? ;-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ratul_isfaque 8

dawn = Aurora, isn't it?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ViticellaV 21 11 10 8 7 7 6

No. An Aurora forms when charged particles from the sun hits earths magnetosphere during a solar flare. Dawn is early sunrise.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

laol12 11 5

thats so deep

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KeeganKraemer 8 3

Isn't this the correct way of saying 'the dawn of tomorrow'? "el amanecer de mañana"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SenorOily 14

I thought it was about the sunrise not the early hours.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DoreenRail 18 11 4

I'm frustrated by not being able to move on in the program at times

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Nancy511639 13

Let us go to the next lesson

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

JayDub1984 11

It sounds like the title of a Spanish soap opera!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Gomer_Pyle 13 7 186

This sounds like a sci-fi movie or book name.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Mrs-N-Uzumaki 20 281

Sounds like the title of a zombie apocalypse film.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Bahalam 24 16 12 10 8 8 7 7 2 400

Couldn't this be Mañana por la madrugada like Mañana por la noche?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Fav2Contessa 13

The owl is telling me that the word for dawn is alba. What is the difference between alba and madrugada?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Skittlesthewolf 10 3

Angelic chorus

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

leahlowens 10

alba is also a word for dawn

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 days ago

80 "You're as beautiful as the sun."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1414810>

Translation: Sei bella come il sole.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

9 Comments

Drewsberry 10 9 7 3 2 2

... insofar as extended direct exposure can result in permanent eye damage unless necessary precautions are taken.

16ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

12Aurora34 22

Isn't "as beautiful as" translated as "tanto bella quanto"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AvatarKorra 7

I'm assuming that the sentence is not translated exactly, so that "sei bella come il sole" means roughly "you're beautiful like the sun", which is pretty much the same as "you're as beautiful as the sun", the only difference being the like/as, but both are similies. (I'm basing this on Spanish, which is my first language, because "you're beautiful like the sun" would be "eres/sos bella como el sol".)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Juan.Seraf 7 7 3

A mi me confunde bastante porque español tambien es mi lenguaje materno y no soy tan bueno en inglés.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

drkerzen4 20 19 17 14 7 3 99

Is not 'beautiful' a male adjective too?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PeterBleds 17 3 2

Since adjectives must agree with the noun in gender, beautiful could only be a male adjectives when you add the masculine ending to make it "bello." With that said, when it comes to translating Italian to English, you don't typically call a man "beautiful," do you? So that's why when we translate say "Ciao, bello" we assume it's a man (masculine ending), and thus we translate it to "Hello, handsome!" I hope I answered your question... :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Tim_B 24 6 292

Why is this not lo sole? I thought you put lo before words beginning with s or z.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

12Aurora34 22

Lo is used before words beginning with "s" and another consonant, for example, "lo sbaglio."

7ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

CheriPassell 12 7 6

così...come should have been accepted in my opinion

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

81 Days of the week in Spanish

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8138>

m4r73n 12 2

Monday: lunes

Tuesday: martes

Wednesday: miércoles

Thursday: jueves

Friday: viernes

Saturday: sábado

Sunday: domingo

Give Lingot1

3674 years ago

Leave a new comment

23 Comments

Belboz99 17 16 6 6 5

Here's a bit of mnemonic for Monday:

Monday... think "moon" En español, think "lunes", similar luna, the Moon!

Lunar eclipse, moon eclipse, lunes, day of moon!

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NetziKat 11 7 3

Week days come from Roman Mithology and can help you remember them or at least learn other words. Lunes - Luna (Moon) Martes - Marte (Mars) Miercoles - Mercurio (Mercury) Jueves - Jupiter (Jupiter) Viernes - Venus (Venus)

Saturday and Sunday have different roots, but if you are interested: Domingo - (Lord's Day -From latin) Sabado- (Sabbath -Hebrew)

35ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Belboz99 17 16 6 6 5

Yeah, I had suspected that when I had first learned lunes is Monday, and found a great article which gives more insight and detail on about.com:

http://spanish.about.com/od/historyofspanish/a/names_of_days.htm

It's also interesting that English weekday names were also originated from Roman Gods, but many of them substituted for Norse Gods which had similar traits. That's why Thor, God of Lightning, is used instead of Jupiter, who was the Roman God of lightning. Thursday is therefore Thor's day. English also keeps Saturday as "Saturn's Day" and Sunday as "Day of the Sun."

Dan O.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

magickit 14

New moon the twilight movie I saw stickers in Spain when this came out luna nueva - I won't forget it!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sir_Sohail 7

Thanks for the mnemonic...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Callowkid 9

it even works in English "moonday" Monday!

Very nice tip!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kennie 10

Thanks! There are some word clusters that are easier to learn as clusters: days of the week, months of the year, etc.

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

ddeckman 12 4

In high school, I learned the days of the week to the tune of the Addams Family song. Great concept, really helped a lot, but was soooooooo hard to try to get unstuck from your head

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gregory0126 13

can you teach me the song?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ddeckman 12 4

If you've ever watched the Addams family, the theme song to that show you can sing the days to, "es lunes, es martes, es miercoles, es jueves, es Viernes es sabado y luego es domingo days of the week" then do the little snap thing after it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

sbayldon 24 9 9 6

It is good to take some the lessons twice if not all days or months were included. The lessons change every time so you will learn them all plus other new words.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

novel_daniel 16

Monday es lunes. Thanks! That doesn't seem to be in the lessons. Also, there are mistakes on duolingo, like referring to some nouns as singular when they're plural and vice versa. There should be a dispute menu so beta users can submit corrections, and vote for or against the corrections.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

rspreng 24

"Correctness" should not be put up to a vote among learners of a new, to them, language. Just sayin'

4ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

novel_daniel 16

Neither software engineers nor linguists are infallible. In fact, the best encourage criticism.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

dholman 12 10

I'd still rather trust the opinions of a group of people who know the language than a group of people who are trying to learn it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

novel_daniel 16

Sometimes their opinions are incomplete; I have half a dozen e-mails from the Duolingo team that say they have accepted new translations. Each time they thank me for my contribution and say "please keep it up".

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dholman 12 10

Contributions and suggestions should definitely be welcome, but I'd still rather leave the final vote to the professionals! But glad they're receptive to other ideas.

2Give Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

joatca 11 11 3

Well, there's the "Still think you're right?" link at the bottom.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

yincrash 10 5

Monday was in my lesson. They probably don't include every day in everybody's lesson.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

wwang.1 11

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

joliebisous 25 6 6 844

Lunes, martes, miercoles, jueves, viernes, sabado, domingo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DarciChidd 5

aren't the days of the week in Spanish all ready on duolingo?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

82 How do I turn the microphone back on? I turned it off an now I want it back :(
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1852131>

FrenchAddict7 22

Give Lingot

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

2 Comments

Hohenems 25 25 18 14 13 12 11 11 8 7

Same way you turned it off. Settings (under your name), then turn on the microphone.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Thanks :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

83 "The woman eats the apple."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/213060>

Translation: La donna mangia la mela.

04 years ago

Leave a new comment
39 Comments

asdeqwxc14 7 6
First one for me, "The women eats the boy."

19ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

xox1592009 2
Meh, close enough

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Hypernova642 6
duolingo has lots of canibals

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

scorpia015 9 6 6 5 2
One of mine means "The woman eats the woman." CANNABILISM

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

carrie.c.n 8
He he he no

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

snowdrop2 16 10 9 9
why isn't Il donna mangia la mela accepted as well as the above.....lost a heart :(

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1129
Because the article must agree in gender and number with the noun. "Donna" is singular and feminine, so it requires the singular feminine article "la".

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

snowdrop2 16 10 9 9
Thank you Rae.F

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jon150
I think it is because "il" would be masculine, and it should be "la" as the noun "donna" is feminine.
Hope that helped:)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

snowdrop2 16 10 9 9
Yes it did, thank you :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lingofredrik 6
La mela - easy to forget!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cusally 2
I thought that the object came before the verb is that not the case or does it change?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

marziotta 17 15 12 11 10 7 2 2 148
Italian is pretty flexible regarding the position of the words, but if you stick to the same position of English it's not a problem. In this case, anyway, it would be complicated to move the object... you should say something like

"La mela la mangia la donna."

Stick to Subject Verb Object structure, it's easier. :D

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Semut 7 3 2
it's almost similar to French, isn't it ? like Un dan Una. La, l' and others

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Pedro_Aredes 9 5 3 2
Mangia=Manges, and here we go

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1129
Well, the languages are related.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

carrie.c.n 8
[deleted]

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

carrie.c.n 8
Correct

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RLO2 9 5 2 1

Why is the first one incorrect, why is an apple specifically feminine?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DgoHdz 7

Thats just how some nouns are in spanish, italian and french, usually if it ends with an "a" its feminine and if it ends with an "o" its masculine :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Pedro_Aredes 9 5 3 2

Portuguese too

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lukewr12 7 7 6 3 2 2

the A's generally go with feminine, and the O's go with masculine, just think of the noun and whether it something more feminine or masculine, if you get confused by words

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BrianHuffman13 3 2

La donna mangia la donna? That was the first option

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrancescoV534851 3

Spanish and italian are kinda related

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1129

More than just "kinda". They both came from Latin, along with French, Portuguese, Romanian, and a few others.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gabriela607308 3

Yes. Also, for Spanish speakers I think it's easier to learn this languages, since most words are similar

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarcelloNo3 7

The woman eats the woman..

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

johnmarine3 2

Mangia would be pasr tense ? Eats present tense. Yes?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1129

Everything is present tense right now. Past tense comes later in the tree.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

johnmarine3 2

Reposting, mangi as in eats, eating, present tense. Ate an apple mangia would past tense. Yes,? No.?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1129

No.

Right now, everything is present tense. Past tense comes later in the tree.

io mangio = I eat

tu mangi = you eat

lui/lei mangia = he/she eats noi mangiamo = we eat

voi mangiate = you eat

loro mangiano = they eat

Past tense would look like this:

io ho mangiato = I ate

tu hai mangiato = you ate lui/lei ha mangiato = he/she ate noi abbiamo mangiato = we ate voi avete mangiato = you ate loro hanno mangiato = they ate

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RadhamesNa 5

Thank you all for all the feedback even though I didn't make any comments

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Evangeline720221 2

"La donna mangia la mela."

I got this one wrong because I didn't use the word "la" between mangia and mela. How does the second "la" act in the sentence/what does it mean?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 days ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1129

La = the

donna = woman mangia = eats
la = the mela = apple

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 days ago

industryfatcat 13 7 7 4 2
[deleted]

-1Give Lingot•2 years ago

carrie.c.n 8
Keep me posted on the man who was just a bit of time to you later today or tomorrow morning ragazza mangia un ragazzo beve L'acqua bolle the man who was just a bit of time to the bread and I can do that to you later today re the book is a Apple store and I can do re the chocolate chip cookies and I can do that to you later today or tomorrow morning!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GoldenNola 3
Are you serious? I typed, "le" instead of, "la."

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

jamesmundy2 7
I love tbis thing

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

84 What is the difference between ils and elles?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/41854>

Reefy 9 7

Is if for a group of men and a group of women? What if it is a combined group?

Give Lingot1
04 years ago

Leave a new comment
6 Comments

Fleur5 12 3 2
"Elles" - women, "ils" - men. If there are both men and women, you use "ils".

7ReplyGive Lingot1•4 years ago

Humbaz 15 11 11 4 124
Merci!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

Note that in French all the nouns have genders. "La voiture" (the car) is feminine, so "they" for "cars" would be "elles". And so on.

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

For a combined group of any things or people you would use "ils" if you need a pronoun. A group dogs can be just "chiens" if it does not matter if they are feminine or masculine, but if it does matter, you would say, like, "les chiens et les chiennes".

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Reefy 9 7

So would it work the same for other things? Like a group of male and female dogs would be chiens? As in all combined groups are automatically masculine?

Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Reefy 9 7

OK. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

85 Grammar: The Dutch Alphabet & Pronunciation
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3732990>

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

Content

The Dutch alphabet

Dutch pronunciation

Vowels and Diphthongs

Consonants

1. The Dutch alphabet

Our modern Dutch alphabet simply consists of the 26 letters of the 'ISO basic Latin alphabet'. We have about five vowels and twenty-one consonants. Whereas the letter E/e is the most frequently used letter in our language, the letters Q and X are used least frequently.

Here you can find two introductory videos, part 1 and part 2.

So, the Dutch alphabet has 26 letters - just like in English. In fact, you don't have to learn any new letters! Hurrah!

2. Dutch pronunciation

However, as with any new language, there are going to be quite a few differences and peculiarities in pronunciation. Some letters are simply pronounced differently, and there can be combinations that may throw you for a loop. Don't worry, we're here to help!

3.Vowels and Diphthongs

The way Dutch vowels sound depends on whether they are in open or closed syllables.

A syllable is closed if it is in a consonant sandwich (e.g. "bed") and open if not (e.g. "ga").

Instead of trying to explain the English equivalents of each vowel sound, it may be easier to check out this website.

In Dutch, in addition to the vowels "a", "e", "i", "o", "u", and "y", there are a number of diphthongs.

"oe" sounds like the "oo" in "tooth"

"eu" sounds like the "ay" in day with rounded lips, or like the "eu" in the French word "feu"

"ei/ij": these sounds are like a combination of "eh" and "ee", similar to the "ay" in "day"

"ui" is tricky, but can be described as a short "a" sound followed by a "u" sound. It is difficult to explain and understand in words, so listening and practicing to the audio in the link below can help.

"uw" is a long Dutch "u" sound with a slight "w" sound

"ou" and "au" sound similar to the "ou" in "loud"

"aai" sounds like a long "a" sound followed by a long "i"

"eeuw" long "e" sound followed by the "uw" diphthong from above

"ooi" long "o" sound followed by a long "i"

"oei" combination of "oe" and "ie" ("ie" is pronounced the same as a long "i")

"ieuw" long "ie" followed by "uw"

Here is a link to some audio for diphthongs

4. Consonants

The consonants in Dutch – b, c, d, f, g, h, j, k, l, m, n, p, q, r, s, t, v, w, x, z – are not too different from the consonants in English. You also have "ch", "ck", "ng", "nj", "sch", "sj" and "tj".

The major differences are the "g", "j", "r", and "w".

"g"

The "g" sound is not found in English. It sounds akin to coughing up a loogie, but I'd like to think it's quite a bit more elegant.

The sound is made when air passes through an opening made in the back of the throat where the tongue and uvula (the dangly thing in the back of your mouth) meet. This is around the same area where your tongue and the roof of your mouth meet when making the English "g" sound.

If you are familiar with German pronunciation, the Dutch "g" sound is like the "ch" sound in the word "Dach".

Check out this great video for an explanation.

In some foreign words, the "g" is pronounced as it is in the language the word was borrowed from.

"j"

The "j" sound in Dutch is straightforward – it is essentially the "y" sound as in the English word "you". . "r"

Then there's the "r" in Dutch. There are several ways of pronouncing it. How should you pronounce it?

The first option is to roll your "r" using the tip of your tongue. Some people even just tap it instead of doing a sustained roll.

Another option is a more guttural "r", once again using the uvula as with the "g" sound. It can be quite difficult to roll your r's using this method, but with a lot of practice it can be learned.

Both of these "r" sounds come at the beginning or middle of words and sometimes at the end, but a lot of Dutch people pronounce the "r" kind of like an American "r" at the end of a word.

For a live clarification, check out another video from the same helpful Youtube user.

"w"

The Dutch "w" is not pronounced exactly like "w" in English, nor like a "v" sound.

The "w" in Dutch is actually called a "labiodental approximant" (ooh fancy!).

It is a bit like pronouncing the English "w" while having your teeth in lips in the same position as when pronouncing the English consonant "v".

Video explanation

Consonant combos!

A quick explanation of "ch", "ck", "ng", "nj", "sch", "sj" and "tj".

"ch" is pronounced like the Dutch "g"

"ck" is pronounced as a "k" sound

"ng" is like the "ng" in the English "sing"

"nj" is kind of like the "n" in "onion" or for you language buffs out there like the Spanish "ñ"

"sch" is often a combination of "s" and "ch" (as a "g" sound), but can also be pronounced as an "s" at the end of a word, for example "fantastisch"

"sj" is pronounced like the English "sh" sound

"tj" is pronounced like the English "ch" sound, but softer

Return to Grammar Overview!

Give Lingot17

962 years ago

Leave a new comment

47 Comments

CJ.Dennis 25 12 9 8 8 8 7 7 369

I notice in some words like "operatie" the "t" is pronounced as /ts/. Would you explain this please?

Also, regarding "r", most American accents are rhotic, which means they always pronounce "r". However, in other countries non-rhotic accents are common, such as in Australia where it is universal. Australians neither pronounce nor even hear "r" unless it is followed by a vowel. So if an American says "car" /kar/, an Australian will hear it as /ka/ and say it the same way. "car alarm" /kar alarm/ becomes /ka ɾalam/ to an Australian. The /r/ moves from "car" to the start of "alarm". Instead of being pronounced, the "r" changes the quality of the preceding vowel. Unfortunately, because of this the last part of the explanation of "r" in this topic is of no help for people with non-rhotic accents!

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TheGandalf 23 8 6 5 5 5 4 4 2 2
Mooi!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

oppikoppi 13 13 12 12 11 9 6 3 3
Just my two cents on my Flemish pronunciation, but I pronounce 'aai' (and 'ooi') as 'aaj', not 'aa-ie', and 'eeuw' as 'ee-w', not 'ee-uw' (same for 'ieuw'). Also 'ou' sounds more like 'ohw' in English for me and my 'w' is just like the English 'w'.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LupoMikti 19 16 14 11 9 9 9 7 5 5 5 4 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 30
I finally figured out how to pronounce "ui" (at least closer than what I was before).

First, in IPA terms: I start with the diphthong /aɪ/ and both round and velarize it. That's how I get the closest sound.

For those that don't know the IPA, a "velarized open front unrounded vowel" is closest to an English long i (as in the word "like"). Make that sound and hold it, and while doing that try and round your lips into the shape of an O. It shouldn't be too small, but you should notice right away that the sound changes just by changing the shape of your mouth.

Thanks a bunch for putting all these grammar threads up! They've been a huge help.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

buffalump21 25 11 6 5 3 2
Thanks so much for this.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

saschambaer 12 6 5 5 4
If ij isn't considered a letter, then why do we need to capitalize the j as well? It would've kinda made sense if it were just one letter (didn't it originate in ÿ or something?)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rhynn 22 18 12 4 3
Because it's the exception to the rule :) I have to admit I can't really find a good answer to the question. I did find a relation to characters like the œ, which is also often written as oe but still capitalised as one.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Wicketd 11 10 9 9 5 3 2

This is because it's a digraph, a combination of two letters, but not necessary a letter in itself. It's considered a letter by most people, but isn't technically. In fact, in Flanders it's not uncommon to see 'Ij' instead of 'IJ' (IJzer <> Ijzer).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NickM98 15 12 10 10 6

Yeah... just when I was starting to get the sounds for English, Italian and French properly.

A doubt - is "g" pronounced like Spanish g in "trigo", like Spanish j in "Juan" or is it different?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rhynn 22 18 12 4 3

It's closest to the j in Juan. It's not exactly the same and may sound quite different depending on which part of the country you're in (soft g in the south, hard g in the north), but it's a good starting point for learning the pronunciation!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

xMerrie 21 17 16 15 11 11 10 4 3 1

Ah, you forgot to put 'au' in the list of diphthongs. (For those who don't know what it sounds like, don't worry. It's pronounced the same as 'ou'.) ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

Thanks Merrie (and Narion for replying as well, I did indeed overlook this post). ^^"

I've added "au". :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

narion_k 23 8 7 26

Thanks! I was looking for this! I hope it can be added to the list of diphthongs in the original post.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

pmm123 25 25 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 13 12 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 1108

Is it just my imagination, or do vowels sound a little different when followed immediately by an "r"? I'm thinking of words like "vader," "bord," "haar," or "aardbei." Or maybe it's the "r" that sounds different. I can't really tell, but something sounds different! ;-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lievevonken 10 7 7 5

The "aa" sounds the same (compare "haar" and "aap"). And there's a difference between the "o" in "bord" and the "o" in "bomen", for example, the first one is pronounced short, the second long. But that has to do with the number of (the same) consonants a vowel is followed by and it's place in a word and not the "r". Apart from that I don't know any differences!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

guupi 13 13 12 12 12 12 11 10 8 8 5 5 4 2 2 2 2

Is there a softer g/ch sound, for example at the end of a word (like grappig), like in the German "ich", "Küche"? Or do you always pronounce it like in the German "Dach"? I believe in Belgium the g sound is generally softer, but how about the Netherlands? And are there occasions where you pronounce "st" and "sp" like sht/shp as is the case in German Start, Sport, sprechen (which you pronounce Shtart, Shport, shprechen)? I think I heard spreken being said as shpreken didn't I? Thanks for your help! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lievevonken 10 7 7 5

In the southern part of the Netherlands people mostly use dialects which sound like German, which might explain what you heard, but it's not common!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZelvaCZ 15 14 14 12 11 11 10 10 9 8 7 7 6 6 5 5 5 4 4 2 103

Bedankt!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gypsybird 12 11 6 4 2

I find the computerized voice seems to pronounce the "a" in "sap" as "aa". Is it just me, is this a glitch or is this how it's supposed to be pronounced? I would have expected the "a" in this word to sound like the "a" in "man", not as in "maan".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lievevonken 10 7 7 5

The 'a' in 'sap' is pronounced like the 'a' in 'man', I don't know what the computerised voice sounds like!

1ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

gypsybird 12 11 6 4 2

I tried with another voice, the one on this site: <http://demo.acapela-group.com>

The 'a' in 'sap' is pronounced like the 'a' in 'man' with this voice. Phew! :)

Thanks for your comment, lievevonken.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

WarmFoothills 11 10 7 7 6 6 2 2

The Dutch word man, not the English one.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MystyrNile 14 8 7 5 4 3

"eeuw" and "ieuw" transcribe triphthongs, not diphthongs.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Poppy195430 6

Thank You!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

YDawe 12

Can I pronounce the 'z' as 'c' like in the German word 'Zeit'?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LupoMikti 19 16 14 11 9 9 9 7 5 5 5 4 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 30

I don't think so. As far as I've heard and researched, z is pronounced only as a z in Dutch. Also, just a little bit of useful info for you, German z is pronounced as the affricate "ts," not c.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

YDawe 12

Thank you very much! It'll be hard to break a habit. And thanks for the correction too. I'm Hungarian and in my language 'ts' is 'c' and 'ts' is like 'ci' in 'Ciao' or 'ch' in 'chapter'. =D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LupoMikti 19 16 14 11 9 9 9 7 5 5 5 4 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 30

No problem! And I find the differences in pronunciation between languages fascinating, so thanks for clarifying what those sound like in Hungarian. If "c" in Hungarian is sounded as "ts" then you might have been pronouncing the German "z" correctly this whole time :) No need to break any habits.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ScottishScones 6 6 5 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 2

In a lot of the words, it sounds like the z is pronounced like the J in je (french) or the z in the english word pleasure. And to me, the s sounds like a sh, as it would be in english.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

LupoMikti 19 16 14 11 9 9 9 7 5 5 5 4 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 30

Ah, I see. From what I can quickly research about Dutch phonology, /s/ and /z/ are often retracted by Netherlandic speakers (so they become /ɣ/ and /ʒ/) which sound similar to /j/ and /ʒ/ (the sounds you described). Which I find very interesting because I can't think of anything that would cause such retraction, especially given all of the Germanic sound laws that have affected each Germanic language. Perhaps somewhere down the line in the history of Dutch this became common. I'll have to look into it more later.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

guupi 13 13 12 12 12 12 11 10 8 8 5 5 4 2 2 2 2

Well actually there are some German dialects where s becomes sh, like Swabian. Mostly southern German dialects

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

LupoMikti 19 16 14 11 9 9 9 7 5 5 5 4 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 30

Ah, you're right! I don't know how I forgot that /j/ was an actual allophone of /s/ in German. One need only look at words that have [st] or [sp] in a syllable. Now the retracted sounds make a little bit more sense, but there is still research to be had.

0Give Lingot•1 week ago

substate 23 22 10 8 973

"Ui" is still the most difficult for me, I still pronounce it too much like I would with "ou"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ghalwash 11 10 8 6 5 5

Thank you, this is very helpful :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Andy.Linde 17 7

A doubt with the pronunciation of "Z" - In Zijn, for example, is the Z pronounced more like the Z in Zoo or more like the SI in Asian? The digital voice on Duo seems to say both.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

When 'zijn' is concerned, pronouncing the 'z' as in zoo seems to be the standard, though of course this differs per region and dialect.

Here you can find a man reading aloud pieces of Dutch text. See 'De uitvreter', paragraph 2, for an example of how 'zijn' can be pronounced (click the sound icon).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Andy.Linde 17 7

Thanks for that Lavinae :) That helps a lot.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

QueenKatie05

I have already commented in the first part of the Grammar Overview. Once again, thank you for this has been very helpful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

birdie555_ 13 8 7 2

Nederlands is plezier, maar moeilijk. Dank u voor dit geleiden!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Olga451165 17 14 11

Is it just me, or are there also two "L" sounds?

Hard L - like in "lang"/"laat"/"geloven"

And soft "L" - like in "blij"/"liefde "

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Susande 17 13 12 11 240

Various sounds are pronounced a bit stronger/harder or weaker/softer, depending on the sounds before and after them, but I wouldn't go as far as calling that different sounds. If I'm not mistaken this difference is bigger for consonants than for vowels.

For instance the examples you give, the l in blij is indeed pronounced less clearly, but still the same sound if you ask me. All the others are pronounced quite clearly (they are all the first sound of a syllable).

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Olga451165 17 14 11

Ok, I'll keep an ear out.. In my native language there are 2 L's.. so I thought maybe it's the case in dutch as well.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jacques513140 11 11 6

Excellent work.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Dzheym007 7 6 6 4 3 2

Heel erg bedankt!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

LanguagesL9 14 14 12 12 10 10 10 9 13

Thank you so much for this!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

lex_vdh 12 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 8 7 4 3 2 2

I still wonder how some Dutch or Belgian people pronounce words like "schrijven" with an r-trill. I can only imagine leaving out a sound and pronounce it like "srijven" or something like that. Could a native speaker explain (best with a link to some sound samples)? Thanks! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

lex_vdh 12 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 8 7 4 3 2 2

I've been ransacking the internet for about 15 min, then I wrote this post, and the next link on the Google result list gives me all the answers. :D Just as I thought, the ch is not pronounced in "schr".

<http://www.heardutchhere.net/DutchPronunciation.html#SCHR>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

86 FAQ (Golden Owl Hall of Fame)

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4147663>

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

Here is the new GOHOF thread, as the other one simply became too cluttered.

I am asked these questions nearly every week, so here they are--and their answers, of course, as well as a few other things.

How do I sign up?: You can only sign up by posting in the GOHOF thread and commenting the number of trees you have earned, as well as the order (if you remember).

How do I get a trophy?: You must finish all the skills in any Duolingo course. I do not ask for proof, so I respectfully request that you not post any trophy pictures, as the thread will slow down.

What if I have multiple English trophies?: It would simply be too much to customize every "English from X" trophy, so I only count English trophies once.

Do I have to post every time I get a trophy?: Yes, because I delete posts from that week to keep the thread clean for you all.

Can I congratulate trophy earners in the thread?: I prefer that you post on their stream/celebratory discussion, because the posts add up on my end.

Does having a trophy from my native language count?: Yes. A tree is a trophy is a golden owl. If you don't want that trophy on the list, don't mention it in your comment.

What if I spot an error in an entry, either a typo or incorrect trophy?: Comment on my stream and I'll resolve the issue. Do not comment in the thread.

And if my question isn't on this list....: Then post on my stream. Be sure it's not, though. ;)

Facts

The GOHOF began in August 2014 as a petition to Duolingo to add acknowledgements of finished courses to user profiles, and since then, almost 400 people have joined the list.

There are, on average, seven new members a week.

739 Golden Owls have been recorded as of January 3rd, 2015.

The distribution as follows:

Imgur

Give Lingot115

1602 years ago

3 CommentsThis discussion is locked.

Birdexplorers 25 25 25 25 25 24 13 11 11 11 11 2 2 2 1406

Hello from sunny Port Vila, Vanuatu.

I have 10 owls so far and these were done in the following order: (1) Spanish, (2) German, (3) Italian, (4) French, (5) Portuguese, (6) English from Spanish, (7) English from German, (8) English from French, (9) English from Italian, (10) English from Portuguese.

Soon I will also have 3 more: Polish from English, French from Spanish, Portuguese from Spanish.

50Give Lingot5•2 years ago

bjarkehs 12 10 6 4

I'm done!

7Give Lingot2•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Hey Alexis! Could you add the Irish trophy next to my name? I will include a screenshot in case you haven't seen it yet.

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

87 Is the "v" pronounced as a "b"?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/43094>

rafagarc 15 9 9 3 2

I once learned to pronounce the "v" always as if it were a "b". A Cuban teacher I had for a few classes would say that there's really no phonetic distinction. Listening to the audio here, though, I notice that the "v" really sounds like the English "v". Is it a matter of regional accent? Which form is really the correct one?

Give Lingot

24 years ago

Leave a new comment

9 Comments

geometry 19 18 14 13 8 7 367

In nearly all dialects, both letters represent the same phoneme - that is, in nearly all dialects, the only difference between the words "barra" and "vara" is the trill in the r. Both b and v are pronounced using a sound that is not used in English, called a bilabial approximant. This sound is produced like an English v, but while the English v is produced by touching your upper teeth to your lower lip, the bilabial approximant is produced by touching your upper lip to your lower lip - like what you would do to pronounce an English b, except that an English b is a stop, not an approximant.

There may be a few very isolated, regional dialects that preserve a distinction between b and v - that difference existed in older versions of Spanish, and it still exists in Portuguese, though not in Catalan or Galician or Aragonese.

4ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

siebolt 22 21 16 15 7

I once got dressed down by a Columbian woman, because I pronounced some words as I hear them in Spain: "ciudad" with the lisp at the beginning <thiudad> "jueve" as <xuebe> (x as in Greek). I learned from it, that Southern America and Spain have some different pronounciations and I get the impression that DuoLingo prefers Southern American.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

rafagarc 15 9 9 3 2

Thanks, Jaree. I think I can hear the sound in my mind. But should I pronounce the "v" in this "weak" way too? In other words: is the "b" pronounced the same way as the "v", after all?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

JareeZy 19 12 11 11 8 8 7

here, maybe that helps you: http://www.studyspanish.com/pronunciation/letter_bv.htm

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

SuperSammyC 14 3

in latin america yes

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Gumbee 24

My Colombian friends pronounce them both the same (as a soft b sound) but distinguish them when spelling, by saying "b larga" (b) and "b pequena" (v).

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

kelvinma13 24 16 9

I learned in school "be corta"(short b) for v and "be larga"(long b) for b.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

madalena1996 8

it think of it as a mixture of both a b and a v this way you get the right balance. hope this is helpfull.
:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

mcintyd1 20 9

In everyday Spanish, b and v are normally pronounced the same. When preceded by a vowel or another "soft" consonant (and not after a pause), the b/v is "soft" (a fricative) with voiced air passing between the lips (just like the "v" in English but with the lips almost touching each other rather than the upper front teeth and the lower lip of the English "v"). Otherwise, pronounce like a "b" in English. However, probably as French has traditionally been the cool language, Spanish speakers have tried to imitate the difference between "b" and "v" (same in French as in English), so you may hear the English "v" pronunciation for any "b/v" in Spanish. I do hear this in the spoken Spanish in the lessons. So, it is tricky for native English speakers !

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

88 Finish the tree quickly or thoroughly?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2229978>

kylmark 7 2

What seems to be the most effective way of finishing ones tree? Personally, I'm doing one group of lessons a day, so for example, I'll do Basics 1 on monday, Basics 2 on tuesday and so on.. That gives me about 76 days to complete the entire tree. If I add some repetition every now and then I could see myself completing the tree in under 100 days. However, I have seen that some people finish their tree in a couple of weeks! It seems impossible to actually learn everything in such a short time. So, what's better? Power through or chip away slowly?

Give Lingot

292 years ago

Leave a new comment

46 Comments

junair 21 11

from my experience "thoroughly" is better. Finishing the tree should not be an end in itself. What is the use of shallow knowledge of a language?

49ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pctrollbreath 25 11 9 2 2 1453

I had a similar start, and if you are like me and this is your first experience of learning a language, then you are being hopelessly unrealistic.

Thoroughly is the only way.

"some repetition every now and then" does not work because to progress beyond the second checkpoint or so you really have to have a solid grounding in the previous lessons. This is from experience. I thought I was doing really well, until I realised that I couldn't get any further. At that point, I'll admit, I was very close to packing the whole thing in, but what I actually did was start back at the beginning again and work through every lesson again, more slowly.

I've found that the best way for me to learn is to quickly work through a group of 5 to 10 skills, and then make sure that I can keep them (as well as all the previous skills) consistently gold before progressing on to the next group.

To succeed you can't just do "some repetition", you have GOT to fully buy into the underlying principle of Duo-Lingo which is Spaced Repetition:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Spaced_repetition

Spaced Repetition not only the basis of learning on duo-lingo and means that if you not constantly repeating you are wasting your time, it also actually works.

Get everything gold. When it stops being gold, as soon as you can, go back and make it gold. Don't even think of going forward until you have made every skill that you should already know gold.

21ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EntropyMan 22 12 10 8 2

On the Pimsleur language CDs from Simon & Schuster, they recommend moving ahead to the next lesson when one has mastered about 80% of the material. They are trying to balance thoroughness with maintaining momentum and the enthusiasm created by learning new material. Sometimes, a previous point becomes clear when the student advances a bit. Most of us might be more comfortable setting the bar a little higher before moving on, but it is probably a good idea for the long haul not to get overly perfectionist, but maintain that momentum.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

d.batta 23 15 14 11 11 8 5 2 41

In my opinion it depends on your background: if you have already a general knowledge of all the lessons, there's no problem in finishing quickly the tree; if you use DL as the main device to learn a new language, it should be better to go more slowly and regularly testify your actual skills.

18ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DaleFavier 21 15 9 8 4

I think you can really trust the design, here -- it's fine to go as fast as you feel like -- also fine to go slow and really nail things down. The tree will deteriorate (go back to colors from the gold) as time goes by, and you'll need to go back and review to keep it gold -- it won't let you just run ahead forever. So keep your streak running and do whatever makes you happy! You really can't go wrong.

14ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

midgic 15 10 8 8 2

I'm going through the tree quite quickly but then I'm going to go back and review everything again. To me, this feels like a more natural way to learn a language.

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Prost.mate 6 4

Yeah, I sit and "break down" the ideas from time to time, but i will go back over again and really "perfect" it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dudly 21 17 9 2 2

I just want to say -- I was on Duolingo primarily for learning German. To me, going through the tree quick was important: I had my trip to Germany planned, and I wanted to have as much knowledge as possible, even if I could not pretend that it was solidly implanted knowledge. For me, in casual conversations, if I understood the general meaning of what people told me, it was good enough to go on, and to figure things out. There is very little useful in the beginning of the tree: I used to tell people 'Das Kind trinkt Öl' as a joke when they asked if I knew their language, and not much else. Have to say, much of the more interesting stuff is further down the tree-- and this is why I kept going the same way as fast as I could down the tree after I came back from Europe. After all, I had another trip coming a few months away!

Now that I've come back from Germany and I feel like I can have small conversations (despite the pausing, repeating and sometimes miming or looking stuff up in my lil' dictionary, a conversation still counts as a conversation for me!), I feel like I've understood most of the general important things -- structure, prepositions, useful words that can shape a sentence... Say it this way, it's like doing a puzzle and starting with doing the corners and frame and most obvious bits. Now, I do the inside. Now, I go back and strengthen skills and try to golden skills (it feels so long to do!) and only learn new lessons every now and then.

Spanish, though, I started learning not too long ago, and I have no reason to speed through the tree, so I'm taking my time and learning slowly but surely. In the end, the way you study really should be chosen not on what people say, but on what would be the best way to achieve your short and long term goals, no? And, it should be fun, let's not forget the fun! :)

10ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

geotho80 6 6 6

I think that you should complete new excersises as fast as is natural but regularly go back over old ones

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DaleFavier 21 15 9 8 4

Really learning a language (that you're not immersed in all the time) is a longer process than most of us are willing to accept at first. You're going to forget pretty much everything, several times, and learn it again. Getting everything into long-term, easily-accessible memory takes many years. When you "forget" something, it's not gone, it's just vanished under the surface of your mind. It's still there somewhere, and it's going to make "learning" it the second (third, fourth, fifth) time easier. Might as well get used to the process now :-)

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KDNP 11 8 5 4

I've been pondering this same question and just changed my approach. I finished the set of 9 lessons of Adjectives: Predicative 2 and admitted that I was guessing at words and genders far more often than I should be. So, I've forbidden myself to move further along the tree until I've gotten the current vocabulary and adjective/article endings through my thick skull.

My current plan is to not skip a day of practice (until I'm out of cell and WiFi range for a few days in June, at least), but if I'm so busy that I only do a timed practice to keep my streak alive, life will go on. I reformatted the vocabulary covered up to now -- skimmed from the very helpful list by pinkodoug that is available here: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1967687> -- into a format I can study offline. I gave that vocabulary list to my German friend/conversation partner, too. I've been using a bunch of useful videos to drill in the rules about endings. Strengthen Your Skills exercises are my friends now.

While Duolingo isn't my only language learning resource (also videos, books, a friend, movies, music, lots of websites, yada yada yada), I feel that there is a motivational gamification benefit from the thrill of rushing through the tree and making progress, but that it's a hollow victory without pausing to make sure the material has really been assimilated.

5ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

Athenicuber 8 6

The people who finish in a couple of weeks probably already have some experience and lots of time on their hands.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pmm123 25 25 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 13 12 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 1108

This is a very interesting question. I'm using DL to review three languages which I've already studied for some time, and to finally make some progress with two languages I had attempted to learn in the past, but never made much progress.

I began using DuoLingo with the iOS app, where lessons tend to be much easier than their counterparts online. Also, because the app feels a lot more like a game, I was motivated to go as fast as I could. So I went fast!

I know that some people think it's bad to go fast, but for me, it was helpful in these ways:

For the three languages I was reviewing, it gave me a fun way to improve my skills, without having to spend hours and hours of paper and pencil review. I also ended up spending quite a bit of time researching some detailed points of grammar and usage which I hadn't mastered before.

For the two new languages, I was able to get a good enough feel for their structure that I was able to start reading newspaper articles and other real-life texts. Of course I need a dictionary, but I'm not floundering with sentence structure. I wasn't stuck at a basic level for weeks, with nothing but variations on simple sentences like "Ich bin ein Mann" and "Er trinkt Wasser."

Now that I've reached a level where I can read (with a dictionary) and even understand some of what I hear in movies, I am spending much more time reviewing on DuoLingo. I'm mainly using the online version because it's more challenging and I learn more, plus the comments for each item are very helpful. My goal is to be able to choose any lesson I have already finished, and to be able to complete it without looking at the hints more than once or twice (usually just for spelling). So I am going a lot more slowly with those lessons.

As others have said, the design causes your lessons to deteriorate over time, so you have to review just to keep them at full strength.

I think it depends on your goals, your prior knowledge of the language, and your own personal learning style. Ultimately, learning a language requires a lot of time and work, and many people who use traditional methods just give up because they feel that they are not making any progress. DL offers a way to overcome that initial hurdle.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DaleFavier 21 15 9 8 4

Bravo. Yes, really, the limiting factor is not how you do it, but whether you do it. Stay motivated and keep doing it, and you'll learn the language. If it's too boring or too frustrating, you'll stop. You have to find your own sweet spot!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pmm123 25 25 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 13 12 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 1108

"If it's too boring or too frustrating, you'll stop. You have to find your own sweet spot!"

I agree completely, and that was exactly what happened to me before with a couple languages I studied on my own. I worked slowly and carefully, but I never made it past the basics.

The rapid early progress that is possible with DL motivated me to keep going the way that no other program has done.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SuperSwipe 22 21 16 13 11 10 9 5 5 4 2

I'd say go at whatever pace you feel is best - and that in combination with talking to natives and getting immersed and used to hearing and speaking the language as much as possible. Now that kind of rate should totally be possible, in addition to doing other things on the side.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sabisteb 24 23 15 14 12 12 1078

It depends on your way of learning. Everyone is different slow steps and perfect details or lots of data and a rough overview and then go back to polish the details.

I'm the type for quick and dirty first. Then I go back for the details as I need more information to get a grip on the tiny little details. I have no chance to understand details in the beginning, to me they come later, with more words and a broader overview, in the beginning they elude me. I can't practice (with) things I already know, as I then lose interest fast and get bored. So I seek other ways and use multiple methods and sources.

So my method for duolingo is 4 lessons if i understand what I am doing (i can't learn by heart, no chance, I have to understand what I am doing). 1 lesson, if I don't get it till I get it. Worked fine with french, took me 115 days. I was lazy in italian, only on lesson each day or strenngthening, if I didn't like to learn something new, so I'm through half of the tree now. I started the french routine of 4 lessons with italian today (+ Assimil book 1) , so in about 3 months I could be through and I will switch then to adesso (<http://www.adesso-online.de/>) and ebooks.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jake.klost 8

Did you finish all of the French in 115 days? How well would you say that you understand the language? I'm just curious if I'm going too fast as well.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sabisteb 24 23 15 14 12 12 1078

I understand it now well enough to read Jules Verne. écoute is already boring. I only miss some idioms and 5-10 words per site. Duolingo is missing lots of idioms. Those I learn with the second Assimil book.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jake.klost 8

Cool! I just started a couple weeks ago, but I am loving it! I think it's time to get a dictionary and look into some easy beginner books to get some practice other than just the cooky duolingo sentences. Good luck!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sabisteb 24 23 15 14 12 12 1078

The assimil courses are very complementary to duolingo. Alone they don't work as good as with duolingo. If you are from Germany, you can buy those: <http://www.ecoute.de/>

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jake.klost 8

I'm actually from America, but I found the assimil courses for native English speakers. Thanks for the idea!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

curlyeric 22 13 12 8 7 3

Either. Honestly at that speed you will find the decay nearly impossible to keep up with unless you are spending many hours a day in review. Personally once you get through about 1/2 of the tree I find that speed rather than keeping it gold is more effective since I could spend quality time immersing myself in actual content in the language.

That said, getting and keeping the tree golden was also difficult but worthwhile goal after I finished the tree.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CNDragn 10 9

Im going for thorough.. I don't move on to the next lesson until I can get through the one Im on with all my hearts. That way I know the material before moving on. I took a break from Duolingo, and so now have been going back through all the lessons Ive already done as a refresher before moving on. The nice thing is, even though it has been a few months, I'm able to get through 3-4 lessons a day because I still remember most of the work, while when I first started, it would take me a day to do one lesson, sometimes 2 days. But I think its worth it, since even the worst lessons that had me frustrated, I am able to get through without much problems this time around. So the constant repeating of the lessons did help me retain the info.

My goal is to learn a language, not get through the tree as fast as possible. I'm more excited to read updates about people who were able to hold a conversation, no matter how small, with someone, read a book or watch a movie in their target language and be able to understand (which Ive seen happen before they've even finished their tree) than about someone who finished the tree in a couple weeks with no sign of actually being able to use it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Yinyangrunner 13 11 9 4
I second that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

evilmeow 25 2

I suggest you take the time and research the grammatical concepts that Duolingo doesn't introduce to you. Yes, basics 1 is pretty easy, and so are the lessons immediately after it, but once you get to adjective endings and adverbs, doing one group a day would just be too much.

I've been putting off the last 3 lesson groups in my tree because I know that I don't have 100% knowledge of the rest of the tree and I rather practice when it's needed than finish the tree and have it be a meaningless achievement.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 682

I believe most people finishing the tree so fast already have a good knowledge of the language they're studying with Duolingo. That's my case with English (from French, my native language). I finished the tree in 3 weeks, lazily, but I'm already fully fluent, so no big deal.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

moz. 25 25 10 6 5 4 2

This was the case for me with French. I'm bilingual but rusty on the written grammar as I haven't used it since high school. I used the "test out" feature on basically every lesson and finished in about a week. German took me probably 4 months total, but I had a huge break through the summer and fall of 2013.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nathansk8s 20 15 12 11

the tree builds on what you "known" so if you don't really have the words from your current lessons in your head then the next can and will be more difficult. There is a curve based off of research to how well you can remember something you just learned. After 42 hours this curve pretty much goes straight down. So there has to be some repetition involved if you truly want to learn it and put it in your long term memory instead of your short term. That being said I do a new lesson every three days. The other two days I use to study what I just learned. This gives me a progressing feeling but at the same time makes me feel like I'm not rushing through it. It takes 6 to 8 months depending on the course to do it this way. I think that quality comes before quantity. If you can't use the first 50 words you learned what would allow you to use the 1700 words at the end of the course better? Of course you would have more words but these exercises also teach you sentence structure indirectly. It takes time for the brain to get used to the new syntax of another language along with the new words and sounds. This is a delicate process that shouldn't be rushed. It of course is up to the learner to decide what is best for them though. Viel Glück! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Oliwia 20 19 17 14 12 8 1

I'm going thoroughly, and honestly, way slower than you. I like being fully comfortable with the previous lessons before moving on, which for me means making sure I understand the lesson (though I might still make mistakes) before I do the next group of lessons.

Actually, I recently had a few occasions to speak German, and I can tell you I can't speak German. I understand a bit, if the person talks directly to me and not too fast, but I can't respond. Considering the amount of DE->EN translations we have in Duo, it's not really surprising... But that's not good enough for me, so as soon as I finish the EN->DE tree, I'll do the reverse one, in a hope it might actually make me form my own sentences. The "regular" tree is just a light introduction to the language for me. (But that doesn't mean I don't take it seriously and I don't spend a lot of time reviewing :-); so just imagine how poor my German would be if I didn't even try to do it "seriously"...))

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Garri 17 15 14 12 12 11

I've been plowing through a skill each day and lately its started to seem like its a bit too much to memorize. I'd say slowly is the way to go.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PortugueseHeart 14 7 6

For me, going through the tree thoroughly works better.

At first, I was going fast and furious. And that worked perfectly fine since I was just starting my Portuguese tree and simply learning new vocab. But whenever I got to the Verb and the Preposition section, I hit a wall. There were so many verbs and I went through them so quickly that I couldn't remember any of them. Same with the prepositions. So for several days, I refused to do a new lesson until I felt comfortable. Now I take things more slowly and review more often, doing about 2-3 new lessons a day depending on how comfortable I am with the material.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jeanneordarc 17 11 6 5

Thoroughly without a doubt!!!! If you do it quickly without reviewing then at the end all you'll know is the last couple groups you did. Personally, I forget things easily, so I have to double back often. Sometimes I'll just drop everything and redo all the lessons from the start (and I mean from the VERY start). It slows me down a lot, but it makes sure I never forget my colors/adjectives/food/animals/possesives/clothing/verbs/question words/whatever!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rwtwm 20 2

I started the German tree at the beginning of my streak (so a little over three months) and am about 2/3rds of the way through the tree. I use the 'strengthen skills' button incredibly liberally, perhaps doing on average about 5 strengthening lessons for each one exercise (not skill) that I learn. As a result I have never had a skill (other than the bonus skills) slip below gold once completed, and even then I sometimes nip back up the tree and revise a skill that may be giving me a little trouble. As a rule, if I fail a new exercise on words outside the new skill, I go back and strengthen a few more time before trying again.

If that would be the right thing for anyone else depends on what they want from Duo I guess. My goal is to be fluent, and I do not have a deadline for this. If you are more interested in getting an overview of the language, or perhaps are using Duo as a supplement to a college or other formal course then just darting through might be right for you. If you want fluency, that doesn't come without hard work, and loads of practice (at least from what I hear!). Whichever you decide, good luck!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iron_bun 25 24 8 5 1090
I would say thoroughly.

I crashed through the early Spanish lessons because I was in a hurry and I thought they were pretty easy, but then I was completely stumped by the first past tense lesson because I hadn't properly learned the present tense of verbs that lesson gives you in the past tense. In order to stop the impossible-to-me past tense from mucking up my practice, I ended up resetting my Spanish tree and testing out some lessons to get me up to a level I found manageable.

Also, it looks to me like you can complete a lesson without seeing everything it has to teach you, so I like to review a few times to make sure I've squeezed everything out of it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Yinyangrunner 13 11 9 4
Whaaaat? Who finishes their tree in a couple of weeks?! I definitely wouldn't be able to do that and learn everything properly myself. Some of the lessons are faster but generally speaking, I end up doing a fair amount of research and making flashcards and reading discussions and writing questions and so on so that getting through each piece of the tree really takes some time. I am happier though because I feel confident before moving on to the next unit. My ultimate goal is not to finish my tree but to gain some fluency in German.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kylmark 7 2
I read a post by someone who finished their spanish tree in nine days, however they had studied the language before. I tried going through a skill a day on my german tree a while ago, but after a while it became too complicated to just plow through several lessons in a row.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pmm123 25 25 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 13 12 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 1108
"after a while it became too complicated to just plow through several lessons in a row."

I think that happens in any self-paced learning program at some point. The great thing about DuoLingo is that you can make really fast progress at the beginning, so that you'll have the momentum to keep on going even when it starts to get difficult. At least that's how it has worked for me.

I'm going back over the earlier German lessons and I have a much better understanding of them than I did the first time through. But if the pace of the lessons had been the usual slow, deliberate pace of some language learning programs, I probably wouldn't have stuck with it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Cello66 12 6

In my mind thorough learning is better than speedy learning. Though a few people are endowed with the ability to thoroughly and speedily assimilate, retain and regurgitate knowledge - no problems! By the way, I loathe such people! ;-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

WilbPorter1 24 4

I usually do lessons during the week, often redoing particular ones. On weekends I go back over previous stuff. Not sure it's working that well.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

logan5201 14

Slow and steady wins the race. I'd say take your time with it. People underestimate review but it is very easy to forget new words. I wouldn't go so slow your barely making progress. But also not so fast you can barely remember it all. You gotta find that right balance that fits you

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JorgePolan3 6

I had some erratic experience with my language but it served me to go threw the first lessons rather quickly. I got confident and stopped for a while. No that my skills are down I can't get them back up and wish I would have taken my time. I guess that what would help is to practice out of Dou for at least some time during the week but the most important thing is to continue. I is a lot harder when you have to go back. The most important thing is not the speed but constantly trying to think in the language that you are studying.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pdquinn1 25 4 169

I have been plodding along now for ten months. I am halfway through level 14 and get discouraged sometimes but if I were to rush through it I don't think I would get much out of it.

There is lots of good advice in this thread but the most common comment is each is different and everyone learns at their own pace whether it be fast, slow or somewhere in between. The important thing is to keep on it and do what works for you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pmm123 25 25 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 13 12 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 1108

"the most common comment is each is different and everyone learns at their own pace whether it be fast, slow or somewhere in between. The important thing is to keep on it and do what works for you."

Exactly right. I have slowed down a lot just in the past few days, and have finally started spending more time with the immersion translations. At my level, extreme speed is not an option with translation, but you really learn a lot about the language you are learning, as well as your own language.

I still like to power through a few lessons for a change of pace, though.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cobra990 7

Since this is my first time with German, I am moving fairly slowly. I completed basics 1 the first day, Phrases the second, and am only doing 1 level of each of the basic 2 per day. After I complete that level, I go and strengthen skills until I am consistently not losing any hearts. I feel that this gives me better comprehension and better retention.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

89 THE TRUTH ABOUT "CINCO DE MAYO"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2880342>

Daemeion 12

Well today's "Cinco de Mayo" so here's a few facts that people should know about this Mexican Holiday!

The biggest Misconception about Cinco de Mayo:

The most common misconception is that "Cinco de Mayo" is the day Mexico Celebrates it's independence. No, Wrong! Actually Mexico Celebrates it's independence on September 16.

The Truth about "Cinco de Mayo!"

Cinco de Mayo, meaning "the Fifth of May," is a Mexican Holiday celebrating the Battle of Puebla, which took place on May 5, 1862. In 1861, France sent a massive army to invade Mexico, as they wanted to collect on some war debts. The French army was much larger, better trained and equipped than the Mexicans struggling to defend the road to Mexico City. It rolled through Mexico until it reached Puebla, where the Mexicans made a valiant stand, and, against all logic, won a huge victory. It was short-lived, as the French army regrouped and continued; eventually taking Mexico City, but the euphoria of an unlikely victory against overwhelming odds is remembered every May fifth.

Another fact is that "Cinco de Mayo" is more widely celebrated in America than it actually is in Mexico, haha, crazy huh?

My Source:

<http://latinamericanhistory.about.com/od/thehistoryofmexico/p/10cincodemayobasics.htm>

Give Lingot4

322 years ago

Leave a new comment

25 Comments

rspreng 24

This was during the US Civil War. France had hopes of gaining greater influence in Mexico so it could assist the Confederacy by providing a way for European goods to be transported past the Union naval blockade and exchanged with the South, where nearly all manufactured goods (like sewing needles) became very scarce during the war. The Mexican victory was regarded as a significant 'win' for the Union. Today the holiday is popular in the US, very much driven by the marketing of the folks that sell tequila and cerveza. :) The largest Cinco de Mayo celebration is in Los Angeles, CA.

16ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

Jonathan.Huggins 12 11 10 7 7 7

I remember receiving some long-winded email explaining how on the sunken Titanic there was a large shipment of mayonnaise destined for New York then Mexico City and that deprived Mexicans honored this lost shipment as the 'sinko de mayo'. A horrible pun indeed :(

14ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

dequo 15 9 6 5 2

Classic joke... I may have told it about 10-15 times today. I just found this online in case anyone was curious: Sinko de Mayo is truly a day to celebrate. Few people have come to know the "true" story of the origin of Sinko de Mayo. It is my pleasure to set the record straight. A little known fact is that back in 1912, Hellmann's mayonnaise was manufactured in England. In fact, the Titanic was carrying 12,000 jars of the condiment scheduled for delivery in Vera Cruz, Mexico, which was to be the next port of call for the great ship after its stop in New York. This would have been the largest single shipment of mayonnaise ever delivered to Mexico but as we know, the great ship did not make it to New York. The ship hit an iceberg and sank and the cargo was forever lost. The people of Mexico, who were crazy about mayonnaise and were eagerly awaiting its delivery, were disconsolate at the loss. Their anguish was so great, that they declared a National Day of Mourning which they still observe to this day. The National Day of Mourning occurs each year on May 5th and is known, of course as Sinko de Mayo. Go out on this day grab a couple of slices of Wonderbread and a jar of Hellman's mayonnaise and have a party.

8ReplyGive Lingot4•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

ravalentis 25 7 5

lol, I was just about to post that joke because I have heard it too. In fact, I did post it. Then I actually looked at the rest of the discussion! :P

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Terrapod 13 8 4 2

People didn't know this?

5ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

JoshuaBowers 24 22 14 106

I didn't, and neither did my friend from Mexico. Both of us had assumed it was Mexican Independence Day. Neither do I know what is being celebrated on Boxing Day, or Rosh Hashanah.

Thank you to the Daemeion for the knowledge :)

3ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

mangledmatt 16

Considering it's become an American holiday, no, the rest of the world probably does not know this. Myself included.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Dreamer71 12 5

I did know about the origins of Cinco de Mayo, but I attribute that to having grown up in the Greater Los Angeles Empire.

In my humble little world, however, I've compared Cinco de Mayo to St. Patrick's Day for a few reasons:

1. Both days have become, in the US, a day to celebrate ancestry.

2. Both days have more significance to the US than they do to their original countries.

Ok, so some people just look at them as excuses to have a few beers, but I look at it as a celebration of who we all are. Irish-American history and Mexican-American history ARE American history. The world is a better place when we celebrate our commonalities, not our differences.

Of course, I've said many times that I'll celebrate anyone's holidays if it involves good food. :D

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

abc123mt 5

Cinco de Mayo is my birthday <3

3ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

Daemeion 12

Happy Late Birthday!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ravalentis 25 7 5

Happy birthday!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

LukeThomas7 11 6 3

Happy birthday!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Alternia 15 10 6 6 5 3 3 3 2 2 815

My history teacher actually showed us that article today. It's interesting how the American media portrays the holiday.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

ZheGreatest 15 12 9 6 5

ha! I finally know somebody whom also knew this! weird huh? I wish I could actually express this to my class (like you did in this discussion) :)

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Finnmark 9

Almost every time I read an informational article of Cinco de Mayo, they always say quite clearly that Cinco de Mayo is not revolution day.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

changolc
that is crazy !

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

I always loved the fact that Cinco de Mayo is a Mexican-American holiday, which celebrates their contribution to the United States. It's not "us vs. them"--it's "all of us together."

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

psionpete 25 21 15 15 14 6 5 4 3 1147

Well it looks like us v them if you consider them as the Confederates and the French!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Jonathan.Huggins 12 11 10 7 7 7

On a serious note, I also remember hearing that the Monroe Doctrine, which was a foreign policy declaration about the further colonization of Latin America by European powers could not be enforced by the US during the Civil War. Here is a passage from the wikipedia article:
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Monroe_Doctrine

"In 1862, French forces under Napoleon III invaded and conquered Mexico, giving the country to Austrian-born Emperor Maximilian. Americans proclaimed this as a violation of "The Doctrine," but were unable to intervene because of the American Civil War. This marked the first time the Monroe Doctrine was widely referred to as a "doctrine." After the civil war came to an end, the U.S. brought troops down to the Rio Grande in hopes of pressuring the French government to end its occupation. Mexican nationalists eventually captured the Emperor and executed him, reasserting Mexico's independence."

And why did they invade in the first place? On July 17, 1861 Benito Juárez told Mexico's main creditors: England, Spain, and France that it could not repay its debts. Three months later on October 31, 1861 those three signed the Treaty of London in order to exert collective force on Mexico in order to receive payment. Spanish fleets arrived in Veracruz on December 8, 1861, but the British and Spanish decided to cease their involvement once they found out France's real intentions to conquer Mexico. On April 8, 1862 they decided to withdraw and the last British and Spanish troops left on April 24, 1862. This left the French alone in their campaign to move on from Veracruz to Puebla (May 5, 1862) and to later seize Mexico City (June 7, 1863). This seems to be a historical repeat of Hernán Cortés' initial defeat when attacking Tenochtitlan in 1519, then his later triumph 2 years later in 1521. It took the French another year after their defeat at Puebla to finally take Mexico City. Source: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/French_intervention_in_Mexico

Unfortunately, there is a "we told you so" part about the French intervention. In 1859, the McLane-Ocampo Treaty failed to pass in the "bitterly divided Senate" (sound too familiar?). This potential agreement between the US and Mexico would have relieved some of the financial burden of Juárez's government and would have kept Mexico's European creditors out of Mexico. A disappointed James Buchanan, made these remarks on December 3, 1860:

"European governments would have been deprived of all pretext to interfere in the territorial and domestic concerns of Mexico. We should have thus been relieved from the obligation of resisting, even by force, should this become necessary, any attempt of these governments to deprive our neighboring republic of portions of her territory, a duty from which we could not shrink without abandoning the traditional and established policy of the American people."

Source:http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/French_intervention_in_Mexico

I've been living in Mexico City for the past 5 years. There isn't really any celebration at all in the capital. It is a day off from public school, though. In offices and banks it isn't really a day off, though this year many people took advantage of making an extended weekend because of the holiday on Thursday, May 1 (International Labor Day). In the State and city of Puebla, the Battle of Puebla is obviously a source of pride for people there. The Mexican general who defended Puebla, Ignacio Zaragoza, was honored with his image as well as the Cathedral of Puebla on the former 500-peso bank notes, which following the Bank of Mexico's decision in 2010 have since been replaced by the images of Diego Rivera and Frida Kahlo. (Perhaps French tourists to Mexico were offended just like they were when they used to arrive at Waterloo train station in London) Source (Zaragoza/Cathedral):<http://1.bp.blogspot.com/-i8YNXAOFm-A/TxsauOTw4KI/AAAAAAAAAGI/2e2gDXNM0FA/s1600/21624122.jpg> Source (Diego/Frida):<http://wandamann.typepad.com/.a/6a00e553bc02c9883301348691f5a7970c-pi>

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

dreamspeaker 5
happy cinco de mayo

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Karina_Sol 19 9 6 2 2
De echo en mexico no es una gran festividad, pero aca en Estados Unidos lo celebran en grande!!
Just marketing! Lol

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Daemeion 12
Haha, sí!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

skykadet 7
My whole life is a LIE!!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Diggabyte 22 12 8 6 6 5 2

I'm pretty sure that it's celebrated in america just to give people an excuse to get drunk, most people here don't even know why cinco de mayo is celebrated, yet they celebrate it

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

90 – 108 of 912

[accessed March 9, 2017]

90 french words the sound the same, how do you differentiate?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/328756>

elliott.anderson 8 4

i'm new and i'm really struggling with words like leur vs leurs

notre vs non verre vs vert

lion vs l'huile

il vs ils

mes vs mais sale vs seul

pain vs pomme

a vs au

couleur vs que leur

and so forth and so on, often i can reason out by the gender or the words around it and take a guess, but i'd like to be able to actually hear these subtleties....

Give Lingot

13 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

phea 25 24

Well English has its homophones as well, e.g. too/two/to or but/butt. For the most part you can infer the word with the context like in the sentence "Mes chaussures sont noires" using "mine" instead of "but". Others you have to clue in on the gender for example pain vs pomme where one is masculine and the other is feminine. The hardest part for someone new to french is differentiating between il and ils as you need to know how verbs are conjugated, which Duolingo does not teach. For example if you hear: "Ils ont des chaussures", the clue to use "ils" instead of "il" is the word "ont" which is the conjugated verb "avoir" or "to have".

Unfortunately this means you have to memorize and learn verb conjugation tables and this means doing drills. Here's avoir for you:

J'ai

Tu as

Il/Elle a

Nous avons

Vous avez

Ils/Elles ont

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

runciblehat 18 5

A lot of them actually do sound the same, and have to be inferred from context, as with English (your/you're, to/two/too). However, with a lot of them there are genuine vowel sounds you're not hearing. (Except "notre" and "pomme", which always have a final consonant sound that you must not be hearing.) I recommend listening to these periodically to try to pick up on vowel differences:

<http://www.prononcer.net/category/in-english/minimal-pairs>

"Minimal pairs" are pairs of words in a language that are as close as possible but differ in only a single sound. Listening to them together is useful for learning to hear the distinctions that native-speakers use.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Andrew8510 9

leur vs leurs sounds the same.

il vs ils sound the same.

mes vs mais sound the same.

For the rest I suggest Google translator, paste them there and click the loudspeaker button.

I also suggest you study thoroughly all the rules and exceptions of french pronunciation. Youtube has very useful videos on this, and Google also shows some good results about it.

http://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=french+pronunciation

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RoniG 15

I listen to the context. Then I make sure the sentence makes sense. Verre sounds like vert but it must be "verre de vin rouge". "Vert de vin" makes no sense.

"mais, oui" sounds right, so it can't be "mes oui" (doesn't make sense).

Also if I hear sont or ont in the sentence, I'll know that the pronouns are plural and not singular.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

malar376 9 5

leurs et leur = verre et vert = il et ils = mes et mais =

the others are different

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

91 Le passé composé: the explanation of how to choose the auxiliary verb

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3950898>

TheMotley 11 10 9 2

The passé composé is the most common French past tense, therefore you'll need it every time you want to write in the past.

Luckily, you only have two auxiliary verbs to pick up from (avoir and être) but how to choose?

Firstly, most of French verbs use the auxiliary verb avoir, whilst the auxiliary être is used in some particular cases.

e.g.

J'ai fait mes devoirs (I did me homework)

Elles ont gagné le match (They won the game)

But when to use the auxiliary être?

In most of the cases, the auxiliary verb être is used with pronominal verbs (se taire, se laver, se rencontrer, s'aimer...etc) and action verbs (sortir, entrer, aller, revenir, tomber...etc).

e.g.

Hier, Je ne suis pas allé à l'école (Yesterday, I didn't go to school)

Il s'est lavé les mains avant de manger (He washed his hands before eating)

! With the auxiliary être, the conjugated verb accords with the gender and type of the phrase subject.

e.g.

Elles sont allées à l'école (They went to school)

Vous vous êtes levés . (You woke up)

! All transitive verbs use avoir as auxiliary verb. Some verbs that generally use être can be transitive in some cases and the most common example for that is the verb tomber.

e.g.

transitive: Il a tombé sa veste (He dropped his jacket)

intransitive: La nuit est tombée (The night fell)

I hope this was helpful.

Give Lingot5
272 years ago

Leave a new comment
25 Comments

adrienne58 25 8 3

A French teacher told me once - with passé compose, use etre for: "The comings and goings, the ups and downs, and the beginnings and endings of life".

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheMotley 11 10 9 2
That's right!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SDPhil 13 11 10 6 5 3 2 63

DR & MRS VANDERTRAMP is a popular mnemonic that I use for remembering the "être" verbs.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aaron-mendonca 22 19 18 12
(Devenir Revenir

Monter Rester Sortir

Venir Aller Naître Descendre Entrer Rentrer Tomber Retourner Arriver Mourir Partir)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheMotley 11 10 9 2

Actually, Passer and Descendre depend on the context. And also tomber, but I've explained it in the thread.

e.g.1

Je suis passé chez toi hier soir, mais tu n'étais pas là.

J'ai passé mon temps sur l'ordinateur.

e.g.2

Je suis descendu à la cave pour chercher une bonne bouteille.

J'ai descendu les escaliers à toute vitesse, j'ai bien failli tomber.

<h1>Bon courage!</h1>

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MarshaClarke 13 5

Passer?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aaron-mendonca 22 19 18 12

Yup passer is in there as well, I believe.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DanielZhao1 14

I don't know how much this might help, but here's how I remember which verbs take être:

The ~16 verbs that every French student should memorize, below. I remember them as ADVENT + the opposite of each, in addition to retourner, and derivatives of any of these:

A: arriver (arrive) + partir (leave)

D: descendre (descend) + monter (go up)

V: venir (come) + aller (go)

E: entrer (enter) + sortir (go out)

N: naître (born) + mourir (die)

T: tomber (fall) + rester (stay)

Retourner (return)]

Derivatives:

rentrer (reenter) revenir (come back) devenir (become) parvenir (reach/achieve)

Notice that each of the ADVENT verbs has an opposite, which helps in memorization; additionally, by "derivative", I mean any verb that stems from the original verb (so revenir, devenir, parvenir are all derivatives of "venir").

Any reflexive verb that indicates an action being done your one's own body — also known as pronominal verbs. (i.e. se lever, se laver, etc.)

Reciprocal verbs or any verb that is made reciprocal (e.g. ourselves, yourselves) by adding a reciprocal pronoun.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JeandAlembert 10 8 18

That was super. Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheMotley 11 10 9 2
You're welcome! I try :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

suesieb 23 19 14 13 10 3 2 2
Merci!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheMotley 11 10 9 2
je t'en prie :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

patman174 11 5 4
I'm trying to find out- what do they mean when they say that aller can't be transitive. Je suis allé au collège. How is this transitive when it clearly has an object?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

refusenick 25 19 779
Very helpful, thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheMotley 11 10 9 2
you're welcome :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Erkte 18 15 15 11 9 8 5 1013
Good, but I'd just like to know: is there any difference in the choice of auxiliaries in french and in italian? It would simplify my mental patterns quite a lot :/

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Persephone14 5
They are quite similar and the superman vs cats mnemonic for italian uses a lot of the same words as french (italian version obviously). A big difference though is that être takes avoir in french but takes essere in italian

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Erkte 18 15 15 11 9 8 5 1013

Merci, mais je ne connais pas cette système mnémorique que tu dis. Selon wikipédia (version italienne) l'usage de les verbes auxiliaires est quasiment le même dans les deux langues, mais avec ces exceptions:

les verbes être, coûter, durer, manquer, plaire, vivre

les auxiliaires modals

qui exigent avoir en français (au lieu de essere en italien). Spero che ci sia qualche italiano talmente pazzo da studiare il francese attraverso l'inglese cui possa interessare l'informazione!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheMotley 11 10 9 2

Sorry, I don't speak Italian I can't help you with that :s you seem to be a Southern Italian though, aren't you? :p

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Erkte 18 15 15 11 9 8 5 1013

How do you know that? You're giving me the creeps :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheMotley 11 10 9 2

I think I am a psychic! Beware! x)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

prky 25 18 1229

I should know this, but what's a transitive verb?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheMotley 11 10 9 2

A transitive verb in French is a verb that requires one or more direct objects. This contrasts with intransitive verbs, which do not require objects.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

prky 25 18 1229

Merci!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheMotley 11 10 9 2

je t'en prie :) (de rien is also valid)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

92 "The best is the enemy of the good."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1301001>

Translation: Le mieux est l'ennemi du bien.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

16 Comments

LauraBacker 17 13 13 10 9 7 6 6 4 3 2 2

What does this mean? In either language?

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

simulacre 15 5 5

"The best is the enemy of the good" - I think there are multiple possible interpretations. Here are two that come to my mind, the first being the one that I think was originally intended:

(1) "Don't be a perfectionist." If you go after the best, you won't get anything done. Trying to do the best prevents you to do anything at all, including the good. In this sense "the best is the enemy of the good."

(2) Ethical/political interpretation. If you set your ethical (and political) standards too high, if you want people to be ethically "the best" (i.e. "completely pure"), which is something that doesn't exist, you will view and treat everybody as evil, even those people that are good: the idea of "the best" (which is only ideal) becomes the enemy of the good (which is real, already existing). In short, it is a critique of ethical and political ideals, which can make more evil than good (think of the 20th century).

It is a wonderful phrase, because it is saying that (a) "the best" is not real, it can only be ideal, and that (b) "the best" as ideal has negative effects on the real. This relation between "the best" and "the good" is interesting because it shows that the most of something (superlative) can contradict that something. There is no "pure" something, something as such without what it is not (the best is supposed to be the good without the bad).

23ReplyGive Lingot3•3 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Your nb1 is the usual interpretation.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kmburkezoo 12 6 5

Yeah, I use "perfect is the enemy of good," or the my family's phrase, "sometimes done is better than perfect."

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Markle0 14 8 5 3

I've always heard it given as advice: "Don't let perfect become the enemy of good" and it means don't waste time on diminishing returns. It parallels the 80/20 rule: The first 80% takes 20% of the time, the last 20% takes 80% of the time.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LauraBacker 17 13 13 10 9 7 6 6 4 3 2 2

Thank you! I understand now :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TQA236 15 11 6 3

it means that we must find some mistakes, sth that we do not do well to make it better, to achieve the best. If all the things are ok, no thing to change, we can't reach the best. That what I understand this sentence

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Cloudcatcher 13 12

I have only ever heard the English expression "Good is enemy of the best" Meaning once something is ok, people give up trying to make it better. "Best is the enemy of good" is new to me, although I can see that also making sense.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

insanekiki 17 2 2

'bon' is no good here? Why is that?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Basilious 12 5 2

"Bon" indicates that something is beautiful; "bien" indicates that something is well done and good or fine. That's why we say, "Je suis bien" when we want to say: "I am fine".

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 307

I would rather say that "bon" is an adjective, and that in this sentence, "the good" (noun) translates to another noun: (le) "bien".

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

insanekiki 17 2 2

Trés bien! Merci beaucoup!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dadexter 25 25 4

Mieux in my dictionary is better, where meilluer is best?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

adjective: bon (bonne/bons/bonnes)- meilleur (meilleure/meilleurs/meilleures)- le meilleur (la meilleure/les meilleurs/les meilleures) = good - better - the best adverb: bien - mieux - le mieux = well/good - better - the best

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

dadexter 25 25 4

Thanks, it is just that my dictionary (Larousse Francais Anglais) shows meilleur as best also so there seems to be some inconsistency.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ariaflame 25 25 14 1342

mieux or meilleur are both roughly equivalent to 'better' putting the 'le' in front of them changes the 'better' to 'best'.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

93 Difference between e and y

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3696264>

MatthewNeitz 9 7 7

What is the difference between e and y in spanish?

Give Lingot2

642 years ago

Leave a new comment

29 Comments

Lavmarx 15 15 13 13 12 9 9 6 6 4 3 2

They are the same, you use e when the following word starts with i or a y that sounds like an i. For all other cases use y. Also since H is silent it also works on most words that start with H.

María e Isabel not María y Isabel

Español e inglés not Español y inglés

Carlos e Yvonne not Carlos y Yvonne

You will find u and o too and they both mean or, you use u when the following word starts with an O.

Marcos u Orlando not Marcos o Orlando

55ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

louis1010 9 6 3 2

and are they both pronounced the same?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kathylapan 7 3 2

It is like a and an in English.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ellaanazha 6

this was actually so helpful

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Lavmarx 15 15 13 13 12 9 9 6 6 6 4 3 2
Nope, e is pronounced as the e in perro.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vwlj 25 11 7 6 18
No, not pronounced the same. The reason (I guess) that different words are used is so that you're not saying Juan ee ee sabel, etc. BTW, legitimate questions (as the one from the original poster and from louis1010) are fine with me; irrelevant nonsense, not.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

french909 14 8 7 4
This was actually very helpful!

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Mrs.Parris 9 1
This was super helpful! Thanks so much! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

PopTartTastic 9 9 7 7 6 6 5 4
Also, before I upvoted this, it had -1 votes. Please stop downvoting honest questions. It's frustrating for them and for us.

24ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

amigo_abi 24
Honesty pays.

Respect the power of speaking truth.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 1
Well, honestly, people could just use the search or google it, which takes significantly less time on a simple topic like this.

-19ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RachaelJoh7 12 11
Actually, I googled it and this page was the top result.

23ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

french909 14 8 7 4
Yeah, same.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

MabKnight14 8 6 1

Part of Duolingo is so that we can discuss the language together as learners. It's not a waste of time because we're helping each other understand something, just as we would in a classroom.

18ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

[+] 5 hidden comments

PopTartTastic 9 9 7 7 6 6 5 4

"Y" is always used, except with the following word starts with the "i" sound (iglesia, hijo). In those cases, use the "e".

Hijo e hija. Español e inglés.

Similarly, "or" is translated to "o" or "u". "U" is only used when the following words starts with the "o" sound. (ojo, hoy).

Nariz u oreja. Ayer u hoy.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Julian_L. 10 6 6

When the next word begins with «i» or «hi» (except in words like «hierro»), the «Y» is replaced with the «E».

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

Yep, the exception is that you don't use "e" when the next word starts with hie-. "Hierro" (iron), "hielo" (ice), "hierba" (grass), and "hiedra" (ivy) all use "y" (not "e") despite starting with an "i" sound.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CasanovaJoel 8

They are the same but use 'e' when an 'i' sound follows for example, 'padre e hijo' . Flows better like 'an egg instead of a egg'.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

94 "We look at the menu."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/644171>

Translation: Nosotros miramos el menú.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

60 Comments

Athalia2 15 3

The Spanish sentence literally says "We look the menu." Why does it not need the adverb "at"?

30ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rspreng 24

mirar means 'to look at' The Spanish literally says 'to look at' ;) Same with buscar = to look for

114ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

okiol 10

English has that too, for example 'observe' or 'view' could mean 'look at' in certain contexts

27ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

jpmyers15 14 2

Thanks that helps. I was thinking the same thing as Athalia2

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Fluent2B 23

It's just one of those verbs with a "built in" preposition.

42ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

rmcgwn 21

Very efficient these built-ins

28ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

trentonrerker 12 6 6 5 5 3

You can use a preposition actually. If you talk about direction: Mirar al suelo Mirar al cielo Mirar al costado If you talk about people: Mirar a Juana Mirar a Pedro Mirar a Duque

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

trentonrerker 12 6 6 5 5 3

You can use a preposition actually. If you talk about direction: Mirar al suelo Mirar al cielo Mirar al costado If you talk about people: Mirar a Juana Mirar a Pedro Mirar a Duque

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

logane616 13 5 1

porgue espanol es loco

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rmcgwn 21

I checked out the dictionary and it turns out mirar is unusual. It shows 'look at' etc as an transitive verb and then later on as a second definition it is 'look' as a intransitive verb. That would explain why in some cases we add a preposition and other times not. With a transitive verb it must have an object. "look at" is an incomplete thought. But 'look' can stand on its own. Curious stuff.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

THeneeno 10 2

Right. You can say things like 'It looks crooked' or "Look, I don't know why you..." in Spanish with 'mirar'. It doesn't always have to mean 'to look at.'

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JamonSerrano 13 7 2

Carta should be accepted as a translation for a menu

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LeslieRBelasco 6 2

I agree. In Spain, they do not use menu, only la carta.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CyanJoke 10

Why not "Miramos al menu"?

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

catcampion 20 11 6

Because, "al" is a contraction of a + el, and you do not use a after mirar in this instance - simply, miramos el menu.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

blackleather 11 10

interestingly... in spanish "mirar" is "to look at" and in japanese "miru" is "to look".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

grippygecko 11 2

Yeah I noticed that. I wondered if the Japanese was a loan word from the Spanish, like pan meaning western style bread is a loan from Italian.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

blackleather 11 10

I doubt it considering that western style bread is a relatively new concept compared to 'looking', you know?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

grippygecko 11 2

I know. But you also find many words in Japanese that are similarly basic terms that now have a loanword option that is becoming more frequently used. I have noticed this from watching anime. You find "Sankyu" for thank you becoming more frequent compared to "arigato". Compare also "daimondo" and "kon gou" for diamond.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

robofam 20 2

too bad mira also means "look", not always "look at" there goes that preposition theory!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

johnoe 16 12 11

What's the difference between nosotros and nosotras?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rmcgwn 21

Nosotros (masculine) Nosotras (feminine)

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jdkellen 14

Why are there two answers?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LeslieRBelasco 6 2

because the verb "ver" is to view and "mirar" to look at. They are used synonymous in Spain.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

OrchidBlack 20 19 18 17 17 14 14 10 10 10 8 6 4 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 954

So i guess buscamos would mean to look for a menu while miramos means to look at a menu?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

buscamos has another meaning. buscar= when you have lost the menu , you can look for it, so you use buscar. here they're just looking at the menu, the menu isn't lost, so they look at it, or they read it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

THeNeeno 10 2

Buscar is 'to search for', which sometimes gets stated as 'to look for' in English.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zzxj 16 13 10 9 8 6 2

What's the difference between ver and mirar, especially in LA Spanish?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

THeNeeno 10 2

It depends on the situation. Ver and mirar are the Spanish verbs used to say what we mean when we say to look, to see, and to watch in English. Usually, ver is closer to see and mirar is closer to look.

Usually only one of them is correct in a given situation, but it isn't necessarily the one we'd expect when we think about the English way of saying it. Here is a better simplified explanation than I'll be able to give.

http://spanish.about.com/od/usingparticularverbs/qt/ver_mirar.htm

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DebraBaker1 10 4 3 2

It tells me that "look at" is estudio. When I used estudiamos, it said that I was wrong. I know estudiar means to study, but since they mean similar things, why would it tell me to write that and then say I'm wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Athalia2 15 3

Yes, "estudiar" can mean "to look at" in the way we might say "I studied the menu" in English. However, DL tends to prefer the most literal translation possible, which for "look at" would require "mirar." For future reference, DL's dictionary hints appear to provide only generic, common translation options, not necessarily suggestions for the particular sentence. Sometimes you'll notice only one--or even none--of the given translations are suitable. You might send DL a comment at the bottom of the question, suggesting that they adjust the hints on the phrase "look at."

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DebraBaker1 10 4 3 2

thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cowboy2014 9 5

No matter what answer i pick it is wrong

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BenKnowsSpanish 8

I nosotras used when it's a "we" as in a group of women? If there is one man in the group does it become nosotros?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Athalia2 15 3

Correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GreenWolfGo 7

why does one of the correct answers have a "nosoTRAS" and then have a "la"? someone please help me out here.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Athalia2 15 3

If you're referring to the option I think you are, "nosotros/as" is not related to the "la." The former is the subject, the pronoun "we," and it may be masculine for a male or mixed-gender group, or feminine for an all-female group. The article "el" or "la" ("the") modifies and matches the gender of the noun that follows it: "el menú" or "la carta."

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DenizAteoglu 17

Why not miramos al menú instead of miramos el menú?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tanmaytikekar 13 3 2

Doesnt mirar need 'a'?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

zzxj 16 13 10 9 8 6 2

The 'personal a' in Spanish precedes a direct object when the object refers to a person or pet.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TracyS221 24 7 6 3 99

Following - there's no "follow" button on this version!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SyamkumarR 24 23 7 4 29

Can we use 'Miramos al menu' as well without altering the meaning ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MoTheMunch 8

Why is it NOT WORKING

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Kim537007 17

is miramos as correct as leemos?

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Athalia2 15 3

Leemos is not the most direct translation here. It's the difference between "we look at the menu" and "we read the menu" in English. Reading involves looking at and comprehending words, whereas one might look at words without reading them, or look at or review pictures, etc.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

duoitalliano 20 14 14 161

From all of the comments so far, I see that "a" is not necessary in the translation. However, would it be wrong to use it? "Nosotros miramos AL menú"

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

I_Am_Norah 7

here it says leemos and I got it right. It must be a "nosotros" version of lee

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

alq5528

gh

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Mineblox1978 8

WHY IS THE WORD NOSOTRAS EVEN MEAN WITH THE SENTENCE NOSOTRAS IN FEMININE AND NOT MASCULINE

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

THeneeno 10 2

A. No need to yell.

B. If 'nosotras' was in this sentence, it is because a female was referring to her group which consisted entirely of females. We (a group of females). It matched the gender of the speaker and her group, not the gender of the menu. It wouldn't make sense for 'We' to match the menu instead of matching 'us'.

C. I'm assuming I understood the intention of your question. It makes no sense as phrased.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dj63010 20 113

I don't understand why nosotras is used here. I see no indication anything in this sentence is feminine.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dj63010 20 113

I don't understand why nosotras is used here. I see no indication anything in this sentence is feminine.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zzxj 16 13 10 9 8 6 2

It could just as well be nosotros. There wouldn't be any indication, other than seeing that everyone in "we" is female.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

THeneeno 10 2

If 'nosotras' is in the sentence, it is absolutely clear what is feminine in the sentence: the group of females for which the speaker (a female herself) is speaking.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

95 "The grapes are red."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/569398/The-grapes-are-red>

Translation: Les grains de raisin sont rouges.

03 years ago

50 CommentsThis discussion is locked.

surascot 12 11 2

why isn't it les raisins sont rouge?

161Give Lingot4•3 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Un grain de raisin avec des pépins = one grape with seeds

Une grappe de raisin / du raisin = grapes

Un raisin sec / Un grain de raisin sec = a raisin

Des raisins secs = raisins

51Give Lingot13•7 months ago

jamierain 8

(STUDENT QUESTION)

Hmm. Im not sure if I'm correct here so please do correct me if I'm wrong. But just to further clarify the translation to english further for someone new such as myself.. (I'm doing this because I can't tell if you're making a literal translation or just a general of what it means.

Un grain de raisin avec des pépins= "A grape with some seeds." (Grain not being taken literal for an actual grain that chickens eat, but a single tiny thing. Singular. Being one grape.)

Une grappe de raisin = "A group/cluster of grapes." Many but countable.

Un raisin sec / Un grain de raisin sec = "A dry grape." / "A grain of dry raisins."

-raisin sec = The FULL term for a raisin

-raisin= the term for grape

Des raisins secs= Raisins (in the English form, plural)

So when the sample said: "Les grains de raisin sont rouges." It uses grains as in many grapes.

I hope this is right. If someone can chime in and clarify. I think you did good with that but I'm questioning if your translation was a general one and not a literal to English. I really like taking my time with these things and breaking them down so I feel I learn instead of just memorize. Thanks for helping and reading! I hope I did a good thing!

3Give Lingot•5 months ago

marky-mark 11 9 2

The adjective (rouge) becomes plural in French when the noun (raisins) is plural. So it is: Le raisin est rouge (singular) Les raisins sont rouges (plural). Note that the definite article (les), the noun (raisins), the verb (sont) and the adjective (rouges) all change when the sentence changes from singular to plural. Good question, because in English we don't have plural adjectives this way (the grape is red, the grapes are red).

41Give Lingot5•3 years ago

mussels 12 5 4

I think rouge/rouges was just a typo on surascoot's part, and the crux of her question was that if you translated "the grapes are red" with "les raisins" instead of "le raisin", Duolingo marked it wrong.

In my case, I got the proper adjective matching ("Les raisins sont rouges") and still got it wrong, with the message that it should have been "Le raisin."

78Give Lingot•3 years ago

VagueVogue 13 4 3 3 13

Yes, it's confusing, but the French translate 'grapes' the same way we say 'rice'. For instance, in English you always say "the rice is white." Even though in that sentence you are referring to more than one grain of rice, it's still written as "the rice IS white", not "the rices are white." The same goes for grape in French. It's LE RAISIN EST rouge, which, like "the rice is white", is automatically referring to more than one grape, I believe.

412Give Lingot24•3 years ago

mussels 12 5 4

That's a terrific analogy. Thanks so much!

47Give Lingot•3 years ago

Mary-luvs-French 7

D'accord. Merci beaucoup.

2Give Lingot•7 months ago

SagnikC 15 13 7 6

Rice isn't countable in the same sense grapes are, unless you're being very technical. You can jolly well eat one grape, but eating one grain of rice is unheard of, unless you're making a reference to the famous instance in lore when Krishna ate a grain of rice and thereby satiated the whole world!

3Give Lingot•5 months ago

TaylorSylvia 11 10

We have plural/single adjectives in English, which are confusing to many people such as deer/deer, sheep/sheep, elk/elk.

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Sierrajeff 14 14 53

True - but that's just the noun form... i.e. in English we would say "the deer is big" or "the deer are big" - with the verb matching the plural situation, even though the noun is unchanged.

2Give Lingot•8 months ago

KaputCantus 7 6 2

but its plural, tbh this doesnt make any sense. for one, the answer never says anything about "sont" it uses "est", and it says "grapes" the english s meaning plural, so why is it not plural in french? cause as far as i see, an s at the end of a word makes it plural in french also. So i still dont understand how "the grapes are red" is translated the same thing for plural and singular.

-1Give Lingot•7 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Some English plural words translate to a singular French word and vice versa.

grapes = le raisin / une grappe de raisin pants/trousers/jeans = un pantalon / un jean furniture = les meubles

clothing = les vêtements

5Give Lingot3•7 months ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

JDK1000 22 1123

[deleted]

Give Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

BaileeCello 7 6 2

But grapes was plural. Why not raisins? Help. D:

7Give Lingot•3 years ago

bullywoolyarns 8

I totally get it. In my world you are right. It is supposed to be an accurate translation of the English sentence which clearly is plural. Oh well...c'est la vie.

2Give Lingot•3 years ago

FonmaEssie 20 4

Oui mais c'est pas comme ça en france. The french we speak outside france is really different when you come to france or really study french you'll find out that they are different translations for just one word. It's more complicated than english

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

MrHazard 19 19 6 3

The grapes/rice explanation made above by GoogleAntiTrust is best. "Le raisin est rouge," is indeed translated correctly to the English "The grapes are red." If you want to refer to one grape, you can say, "un grain de raisin" ("a grape").

7Give Lingot•3 years ago

SimonThompson1 11 3

DuoLingo lists TWO correct answers: (this is a cut & paste)

Correct solutions: Les grains de raisin sont rouges., Le raisin est rouge.

My answer was Le raisin est rouge. But it was marked incorrect??!! I don't understand that my answer was marked incorrect, but one of the correct answers is Le raisin est rouge.

2Give Lingot•7 months ago

LauraShile 16 11

It's because the instructions say, "Mark all correct translations." So marking one is incorrect is there is more than one correct answer.

3Give Lingot1•7 months ago

SimonThompson1 11 3

Ah ha! A comprehension error. You're absolutely right. And I often type the English translation, even though the questions says "type what you hear in French". Then I wonder why my answer is marked incorrect. Thanks.

0Give Lingot•7 months ago

aishafreestyle 7

I'm sorry but nobody says "grain de raisin"...

2Give Lingot•7 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Why not?

1Give Lingot•7 months ago

aishafreestyle 7

French was my first language and in common conversation everyone just says raisin. (I am on this website to keep up my vocab as I moved and don't have many people to practice with anymore)

1Give Lingot•7 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Cette année, le raisin est très beau; Passe-moi le raisin; J'ai acheté deux grappes de raisin; Il faut mettre quelques grains de raisin... everything is possible in French, as you probably remember! :-)

1Give Lingot1•7 months ago

mindyvt 17 11

duo has been referring to grapes as 'le raisin'...why in this question is it suddenly 'les grains de raisin'...I don't think I've seen this expression before?? "The grains of grape?"

2Give Lingot•6 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

"grapes" is a collective word in plural that refers to "le raisin" or individual "grains de raisin".

If you take a look at the pics provided above, you will understand.

3Give Lingot•6 months ago

Luminescen1 11

It is the same with me. I have not seen "les grains de raisin" before. So I got it wrong...Is 'grains of grape' the exact translation... This isn't making much sense to me.

1Give Lingot•4 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Why don't you read the numerous answers already given and take a look at the pictures?

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

Manwathiel97 17 2 369

Ok, so I understand the translation but I don't know why Duolingo said it like this. They asked me a question I never learned! I was taught "Le raisin sont rouges" and then I got this question wrong because they wanted me to say something I hadn't been taught yet.

1Give Lingot•5 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

"Le (singular) raisin (singular) sont (plural) rouges (plural)" is an impossible construction.

Please read the rest of the thread, many explanations have already been given.

1Give Lingot•5 months ago

AnimalQuee1 8 1

I clicked on "Les grains de raisin sont rouges" and it said I was wrong! It's right! I'm 100% sure!

0Give Lingot•6 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

You probably forgot to also click on "le raisin est rouge".

0Give Lingot•6 months ago

BBHOOD 9

Les grains des raisins sont rouge? I don't understand

0Give Lingot•5 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Les grains de raisin sont rouges.

Please read the whole thread.

0Give Lingot•5 months ago

bxth_pineapple 5

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•5 months ago

MelisaMcCu 14 2

I remembered that raisin is plural but le wasn't available as an option so I chose, "Les raisin sont rouges". It corrected me with, "Les grains des raisin sont rouge". If raisin is already plural, why would you use grains des raisins? I thought the grain part was for referring to one raisin.

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

Cat-Lay 10 28

It said the grapes are red, why don't we use sont?

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

For a change, the French for "grapes" is a collective and singular noun.

the grapes are red = le raisin est rouge.

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

Cat-Lay 10 28

Oh! I get it now. It's like rice? In English, you say: the rice is nice. Even if you are meaning thousands and hundreds of rice. Thanks

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

"le riz" is collective and singular as well.

"un grain de riz" is a grain of rice.

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

rosdenton17 10

I thought grains were seeds. not the whole fruit. so the grapes are red is not the same thing as the grape seeds are red?

-1Give Lingot•7 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Please take a look at the above pictures and you will understand what are respectively "un grain" (grape) and "un pépin" (seed).

0Give Lingot•7 months ago

96 In many Spanish songs, the letter 's' at the end is dropped.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3592387>

DogacanCol 13 10 8

This has been bugging me for a while. I started listening to the songs in my old mp3, and I found some Spanish songs. Then I noticed that the letter 's' is dropped at the end of many words. I am wondering if this is normal in some countries, or is it a slang in songs to rhyme? Here are some examples, you can listen to them with the lyrics in front of you:

Daddy Yankee - Gasolina

J Balvin - Tranquila

Don Omar - Danza Kuduro

Shakira - Rabiosa (Spanish Version)

Give Lingot

62 years ago

Leave a new comment

22 Comments

AlejoPF 12 9 8 7 6 4 3 2

Daddy Yankee, Don Omar and Shakira are Caribbeans, and people from there tend to drop the 's' in some words. J Balvin do not drop the 's' when he speak, he actually pronounce the 's' like a Spaniard (strongly). The songs you said are a kind of caribbean music, the 2 first ones are reggaeton, and the last ones are something related. Singing like that give some "flavour" to the songs (the case of J Balvin and Shakira).

People from almost all latin american coastal areas and southern Spain drop the 's' when they speak, so speak that way is pretty normal.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Denfisksson 21 8 3 2 2

Even though this is not a music website, I can't resist and I must say that those songs are horrible (both to listen to and to practise listening). Apart of the maleness of their songs, their pronunciation is the worst example you can find out there. If you really want to practise your Spanish throughout songs, there are much better things to listen to.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DogacanCol 13 10 8

As I said, these are the songs I was listening to like 2-3 years ago, I found them in my old iPod :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

futureholder 11 9 6 3

This is the funny thing about language, the change of standard Spanish is clearly seen. In different regions a simple sentence is pronounced and said different ways. Argentina: Shí, vos querés ir á lá pláyá? O no? Caribbean: Sí, (tú) quieles il a la playa? Chile: Shí, (tú) qu' i' ala playa po? Ono po? Standard Spanish: Sí, quieres ir a la playa? O no?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

panamicua 25 22 17 13 13 12 8 6 6 3 3

This is one of the defining features of Caribbean Spanish (Puerto Rico, Cuba and DR), and is prevalent enough to happen in formal contexts as well (Here is a video of the former governor of PR doing it fairly often, with words such as agrade'co (agradezco), mil quiniento' (mil quinientos) e'taba (estaba), do' mil nueve (dos mil nueve): <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JpCtYHGvdio>). So while it may seem peculiar at first, it is a perfectly valid accent within the Spanish-speaking world (very similar to how in British English, the letter r is dropped at the end of a syllable).

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlejoPF 12 9 8 7 6 4 3 2

Caribbean Spanish also includes Panama, northern Colombia and Venezuela. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mohrchen 16 6 5

It happened to me that after some days in Cuba I said: "Hablo un pocito de'pañol". You absorb this one really fast. ;-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rocko2012 25 7 3 1450

A native Spanish speaker mentioned once that in informal speech the "s" is sometimes dropped. I think the example given was "animale" vs "animales". Both mean the plural.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

schiaffino89 8 7

As a native spanish speaker I would encourage you all to NEVER drop the S at the end of a word, it is never correct to drop it when you are writing, and when speaking it is way better to pronounce it, it makes your spanish more clear and understandable.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rspreng 24

Speakers of all languages sometimes drop letters, and in Spanish it occurs in some countries more than others. Musicians often mangle lyrics and pronunciation, for a variety of reasons.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ferrobattuto 25 22 17 6 5 3

Dropping or "eating" the final "s" varies from country to country (Mexico and Cuba) and sometimes even from regions in the same country (Mexico City and Veracruz or Tabasco) In places where the final "s" is pronounced, in general, the perception is that people who drop the final "s" are ignorant. Perhaps something similar to Americans from the Northeast hearing a southern accent. Like I said, this is a generalization, and not meant to offend anyone.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

girlmarauders 20 11 6

As said, most Carribean Spanish drops final 's's or swallows the 's's within words. Dominican Spanish, especially in rural area, can do this to an extreme and you'll notice it in most Carribean Spanish music genres (e.g. reggeton, bachata, merengue). (In rural Dominican Republic, for example, pescado is often pronouced "pe-cau"!)

Try listening to some different music from all over the Spanish speaking world and you'll soon begin to notice the difference in accents. My suggestions would be: El Cuarteto De Nos (Uruguayan rock band), No Te Va Gustar (also Uruguayan, also rock), Calle 13 (probably most well known Carribean hip hop group, would hesitate to call them reggeton) Frank Reyes (Dominican Bachata artist, huge in Latin America), Romeo Santos (Bachata artist, american) Aventura (One of the most famous Bachata groups) Zacarías Ferreira (Dominican bachata artist)

(I lived in the Dominican Republic, I love bachata)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DogacanCol 13 10 8

Thank you, I am downloading some of them right now :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mohrchen 16 6 5

You should add that Romeo Santos is the lead singer of Aventura. ;-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

girlmarauders 20 11 6

)): was! why no more music for ageeeess Aventura??? (apparently they are on "pause")):)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pillowtibers 15 10

Singing is an art, so the words are usually going to sound a little different in a song than they would in a conversation. I don't know who you typically listen to, but turn on any music radio and listen to the pronunciation of the words in the music of your native language. For example, consider how an English-speaking singer would say "baby". (It's totally not pronounced "baby.") Also, those are all pop songs you've listed, so you can expect those singers to worry a lot more about sounding current than correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

crlight 21 13 12 12 11 9 7

My Spanish teacher is Cuban and she says that the majority of Cubans drop S's.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

slogger 25 23 22 20 14 1171

Yes. One of my best friends in High School was from Cuba. His family dropped S's, especially final ones, just about all of the time, it seemed. Also, I attended a history lecture with my friend when he went off to college, and the professor, who was also Cuban, dropped S's too, even in so formal a situation--Carlo' Quinto, etc.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mohrchen 16 6 5

If I'm not completely wrong: Danza Kuduro is not spanish, it's the brazilian version of portuguese. Google the lyrics and you will se that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

schiaffino89 8 7

Well the lyrics don't make much sense but it is spanish mixed with portuguese, although I do believe there are some words in another language.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

1174641116 6

The "s" perhaps is dropped to make the song rhyme, or sound, better. I have taught all levels of Spanish, (1 - 4) and I can tell you that it doesn't happen when you speak the language. In the Caribbean they have a different accent. For instance; instead of colorado (red), they say colorá, but that's as much as dropping letters in Spanish goes. BTW if you are a well educated person, you should pronounce the words completely. Hope that helps!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlejoPF 12 9 8 7 6 4 3 2

Besides the Caribbean, that happens for example in Lima, Seville, Guayaquil, Buenos Aires, Santiago, Panama City, etc... (Speaking formally and informally)

About the education, it's an stereotype... You can hear Presidents, Governors (as Panamicua said), Judges, Singers, Actors, Writers, Teachers, Reporters (watch CNN en Español), many people of different educational and economic levels dropping the 's'. Very similar to how in British English, the letter r is dropped at the end of a syllable (as Panamicua said, again).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

97 "Neither the boy nor the girl?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1103394>

Translation: Ni le garçon, ni la fille ?

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

27 Comments

daveremy 14

I thought you could translate this: "Ne le garçon, ni la fille". This is wrong?

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ThanKwee 22 20 20 16 9 1

That's wrong. If you wanted to say, "Not the boy" it would be "Pas le garçon".

18ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

daveremy 14

I was thinking of this construction "ne... ni... ni neither... nor" like talked about on this page:

http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/conjunctions_3.htm. But perhaps it is not appropriate here because there is no verb?

From that page: Il ne mange ni la viande ni les légumes. He eats neither meat nor vegetables. Viande and légumes are both foods (nouns).

Note that for the negative coordinating conjunction ne... ni... ni, the word ne goes in front of the verb, just like the ne in other negative structures.

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ThanKwee 22 20 20 16 9 1

That's right. There is no verb. Placing "ne" in front of a noun like you proposed above is not done.

19ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

caroAD 11 10

Is it any rule for the usage of commas in this kind of sentences?

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

You don't need a comma before the second "ni", but you might need commas with a longer list.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mydogrocks05 8 8 8 2

i did it without commas and it worked

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

iridessence 9 7 4

I wrote "Pas le garçon, ni la fille" but it was wrong. I get that it's technical but would this be incorrect in general?

3ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

mydogrocks05 8 8 8 2

it depends on the sentence

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Dmitry_Arch 15 14 14 13 9 6

Il faut accepter aussi la traduction "ni le gars, ni la fille", n'est-ce pas?

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Non, "boy" est un "garçon". Un "gars" est familier et serait "a guy" en anglais.

4ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Dmitry_Arch 15 14 14 13 9 6

Donc, on ne dit pas "gars" en parlant d'un enfant?

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Pas en bon français, non.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•11 months ago

SamuelKrue 10

In english wouldnt you say Neither the boy OR the girl?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

thulaswathi 12 2

no in English we say " neither the boy NOR the girl "

12ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 2

No, the negative version would be "Neither the boy nor the girl" which means none of those two and is the only correct answer. The positive "one or the other" version would be "Either the boy or the girl" with the last positive possibility being "Both the boy and the girl". Having a choice is not negative.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amelie135 14 14 13 11 11 9 9 6 3
[deleted]

Give Lingot•1 year ago

CatherineStock 15 10 1
Why not la jeune fille?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

unique52 10 3
That would be, "The young girl."

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

YasmineYusuf 8 7 4
Can we say "Ne plus le garçon, ni la fille?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7
"ne plus" would be "no more".

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

98 What is the best way to use the progress quiz as a learning tool?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3360278/What-is-the-best-way-to-use-the-progress-quiz-as-a-learning-tool>

Jeanette525 8 6
Hello,

I think having a progress quiz to measure how far we've come is a great idea. However, I just have a few questions about it that would help me utilize the information.

- 1.) Why is the score given out of 5 instead of as a percentage or out of the total number of questions?
- 2.) How are the questions chosen? Do people further along in their trees or further in levels get harder questions?
- 3.) Should a person be able to get a perfect score by the time they finish the tree?

- 4.) How do we know if our score is at, above, or below average for where we are on the tree?
- 5.) Do we get partial credit if we translate the majority of a sentence correctly? For example, the vast majority of questions I got had one word I had forgotten or hadn't learned yet, but I could translate the rest of the sentence. My low score hints that no partial credit is given but it'd be nice to know for sure.
- 6.) Are there different questions every time we take the test?
- 7.) Is there a way to be able to review correct/incorrect answers after we finish so we can learn from our mistakes?

All in all, I like the idea of having a progress quiz but I'm just not sure how to use it as a learning tool. It doesn't give me any feedback except for the score out of 5, and I'm not entirely sure what that means either. Any response is greatly appreciated, and as always, thanks for your hard work making this site!

Give Lingot12
1252 years ago

Leave a new comment
45 Comments

rspreng 24

It is strictly a test of your language competence. It is not adjusted to your level, and all you get is a score -- no explanation or comparisons, just a score based on how well you have done, what you know. It is 5/5 because, well, that is what it is. ;) It is like taking the SAT, GRE, ACT, and so on. A native speaker that knows their own language pretty well should easily get a 5/5. As a learning tool it tells you how far along you are, measured against a high standard; it does not tell you well you have done 'so far.' Some beginners have taken the test and complained they were asked a whole bunch of questions that they knew nothing about, which should not be a shock. The test is like a 'comprehensive final exam' and covers everything. If you take it every, say, two months, your scores should improve if you study consistently. Just 'finishing the tree' does not mean you'll get a 5, just as 'finishing a semester' of any subject does not mean you know all the information in the class. ;)

82ReplyGive Lingot13•2 years ago

Jeanette525 8 6

So a 5 is equivalent to fluency? I understand that it's just a test of language competence but I wish there were more explanations and comparisons involved so that I could use the data I'm being given. For example, tests such as the ACT will give you break-downs by subject and tell you your percentile as compared to other test-takers. It would be nice to have something like that.

11ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

revdolphins 25 17 10 6 6

No, a 5 is not equivalent to fluency. A 5 means that you have internalized the content on Duolingo. That's a fraction of the vocabulary that a fluent speaker has, but a firm grasp of the grammatical structures of the language that you can use to build your vocabulary by actively using the language.

70ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

HappyEvilSlosh 25 23 21 20 13 11 10 9 8 7 4 2 2 4

> That's a fraction of the vocabulary that a fluent speaker has

Some extra relevant information for some context: estimates of the number of words a native speaker uses regularly places it at around 10,000. Of course this is ignoring not always easy questions like what qualifies as a word? so it's only an estimate. Someone who works in a technical field can use up to 20,000. I'm ... say 2/3rds through the German tree and have 853 words.

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

skellious 12 7 7 6 6 6 4 3 3 3 2 2 2

that seems a very high number. from what i've read it's nearer 2000 words in daily use for a person in English.

17ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LittleCatz 12 9 5 4 3

It's something like 2,000-3,000 words will get you through 90% of most daily conversations. That's the "point of diminishing returns". You should focus your early learning on the most common words as they will give you by far the most benefit. I think Duolingo is pretty good about that.

30Give Lingot•1 year ago

Ansa211 8 6

It really is so that to cover the next 20% you have to learn several times as many words as to cover the first 80%! The reason is that the most common words cover large portions of texts - for example, the most common word in English is "the", which covers about 4-6% of all words in any given text. If all words were as common as "the", it would be enough to learn 20-25 words and you would understand everything :-D

The 2000th most common word is "waste", which covers about 0.004% of American English texts. So even if all the remaining words in the language were as common as the 2000th word, you still would have to learn additional 5000 to cover the remaining 20% of texts. But, tragically for us learners, the remaining words are even less common, so it takes learning even more than additional 5000 words... :-{

I took the order of the most common words and I estimated the percentage from the COHA corpus:
<http://www.wordfrequency.info/free.asp?s=y>

17Give Lingot2•6 months ago

Altrosas 12 4 2

That's what I've heard as well. The wikipedia article on polyglotism says: "It is estimated that the most frequently used 2000 words—in all or most of their multiple senses—cover approximately seventy-five to eighty percent of a general text in English and other European languages." If that's true it seems unlikely that it would take another 8,000 words to make up the other 20 - 25 percent of most general texts.

2Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Jeanette525 8 6

So it is testing your progress out of what Duolingo offers rather than your progress overall in the language?

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

revdolphins 25 17 10 6 6

While Duolingo has countless strengths and is the most fabulous language learning tool I have ever encountered, it does have its weaknesses. Those include the ability to teach and assess conversational skills. The developers have stated in the past that this is something they would like to improve on, but at the moment it is not something that is offered in the course and it is not something that they assess in the quiz or in the formal (and more comprehensive) language test that they offer for $20 on Android.

16ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

revdolphins 25 17 10 6 6

<https://testcenter.duolingo.com/>

1Give Lingot•10 months ago

smokerising 16 9 2

What 20$ test on android?

0Give Lingot•10 months ago

rspreng 24

5/5 is not 'fluency,' whatever that may mean :). It means you got an "A" in Duolingo, but that does not mean 'fluency.'

13ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RabbitsRabbits 10 6

Duolingo has courses to get you to at most a pre-intermediate level. Called "A2"

A0 is beginner B1 is intermediate C2 is fluency.

3ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

SoongJiaLiang 15 6 6 5 4 3 3

Nicely said I agree

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

revdolphins 25 17 10 6 6

I have taken the quiz six times (four in English --> Spanish; one in Spanish --> English; and one in Vietnamese --> English). I agree with just about everything rspreng said and I'll try to answer your questions as best I can.

1) See rspreng's response.

2) The test does seem to take your competence into account, based not on your progress through the tree, but on your responses to the earlier questions in the quiz. When I took the quiz for the Vietnamese --> English course while I was still at level 1 in the course, I noticed that the questions got progressively easier, and by the end of the quiz all of the questions were from what I later discovered were just Basics 1 and Basics 2. Contrast that with the final time I took the English --> Spanish quiz, in which the questions got progressively harder until by the end I was seeing questions that I remembered as having been from lessons at the very end of the tree.

3) I did not get a perfect score until well after I finished the tree. Review is important.

4) I don't know that this is a norm-referenced test. I would suggest just dividing the number of lessons you've completed so far by the total number of lessons in the tree and multiplying by 5 to get an estimate of how well you should do on the quiz, but don't be worried if your calculation is way off from your performance on the quiz.

5) That would seem to be the case. I'm fairly certain that I did not answer a single question correctly in the Vietnamese --> English quiz, but I managed to squeak out a 0.26/5.

6) My times taking the quiz have been too far spaced to say with 100% certainty, but if you see my answer to #2 it seems pretty clear that there are.

7) No.

My general rule was to take the test every five levels until I scored 5/5, but I may modify that for the Vietnamese course since I am moving so rapidly through it. I know some people take it every month, some people take it every time they pass a checkpoint, and some people take it whenever they're bored or feel like getting rid of some lingots.

26ReplyGive Lingot4•2 years ago

Brian_Bullard 12 11

do you need to pay the 25 lingots each time you take the quiz

16ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lrtward 25 25 8 157

Yes.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

m3. 15

:(Good to know. I won't be taking it then!

6ReplyGive Lingot12•2 years ago

sbeecroft 20 12 10 9 9 9 378

In the end, the lingots really aren't good for anything except buying quizzes. Especially if you're stacking up the lingots by e.g. doing a lesson every day, completing your +5 wager every week, etc. you'll soon have more lingots than you'll know what to do with.

40ReplyGive Lingot14•2 years ago

Jorihag 15 6

Quite ironic that you get 11 lingots for saying you don't know what to do with lingots

24Give Lingot3•5 months ago

Jeanette525 8 6

Thanks for your answer! Based on what you said for #2, I think I understand how questions are given. I've taken tests before where if you get one right, they give you a harder question, and if you get one wrong, you get an easier question. Basically a method to zero in on your skill level.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 351

I'm glad you took the time to comment, revdolphin. It makes me want to share one of my own experiences with the Progress Quiz. I recently took one for Spanish, and much to my surprise, I got every single test question right. As I waited patiently for duolingo to tell me what my score was, expecting a 5/5, I was somewhat disappointed to see that I had only received a score of 3.77.

The only thing I can conceive of that this could be attributed to is the fact that I have not completed the tree. I have about 10 branches/52 lessons remaining, which means I've completed all but 15% of the course. It wouldn't take too long to finish out the tree, but I'm focusing on refreshing my tree right now. (I spent about 10 days with Spanish when I first discovered duolingo and only recently have I returned to it.) When I do complete the tree, I will be curious to see if I get a 5/5 on the Progress Quiz (assuming I get them all correct). Time will tell.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

LarsHogberg 24 22 20 14 11 10 4 469

How can you know that you "got every single question right"?

3ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 351

Good question. I just knew. To be honest, I'm not quite sure how it works, but doesn't the system let you know if you get an answer wrong? Either way, the quiz was so easy for me, I would have been shocked had I gotten any of them wrong. For example, when you see $1 + 1 = ?$, you know the answer is 2. You don't need someone to tell you that "2" is the correct answer. Even if someone were to tell you differently, you'd probably have a difference of opinion. I'm not saying the quiz was that easy, but I'm usually very hard and critical of myself when it comes to assessing my level with something and I feel rather confident that I knew the answers to that quiz not just well, but really well. Now, going back to what I wrote earlier, I can see why you may have posed the question. I wrote much to my surprise, I got every single test question right

I wrote that because I wasn't expecting the test to be that easy for me. In other words, I wasn't expecting to feel that confident with the answers that were presented to me. Now, if you know something I don't, for example, these tests don't let you know what you got right and what you got wrong, then I suppose it's rather difficult to assess your performance with them.

Nevertheless, you ask a good question. I'm tempted to blow 25 lingots to purposely try to get the answers wrong, just to see what happens, but doing so would mess with my stats and at 25 lingots a pop, I think I can live without knowing whether or not duolingo considered my answers correct. Now, if I get to the end of the tree and then take a progress quiz and feel as confident as I did last time that I answered the questions correctly, I may not be so willing to blow 25 lingots on such tests. I have faith in duolingo, though.

If I do any more research, I'll be sure to let you know of my findings, and if anyone reading this has something more substantive or definitive to say on this topic, please post a comment.

Again good question, LarsHogberg. Thank you for asking it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

LarsHogberg 24 22 20 14 11 10 4 469

No, the system doesn't let you know if you answered correctly or not. But ok, then I know, I was just wondering if I've missed something :) and thanks for your answer

3ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

jahernandez920 25 24

I have the same comments about feedback. You cannot tell what your mistake was. Did you forget an accent mark, get the tense wrong, make a type or just completely blow it!

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

shirki 15 12 9 3 102

Does the test take accent marks into account? That seems out of character, given that duolingo doesn't actually consider missing accent marks as errors during lessons. That should at least be stated clearly in the test explanation!

6ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

vm.moraes 22 628

I took the test 3times, the last one I thought I was better than the previous ones and my score was lower.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

simone-0924 11 4

I am pretty sure the test is mostly based on how much of the tree you have unlocked and how full the "memory bars" of each unit are. I speak Italian daily and took the test sat next to my native Italian boyfriend (who confirmed my answers) and still achieved 1.9 I did it twice to check exactly what it meant and I still only achieved around a 1.9 (I am half way though the tree)

4ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

rocky1638 12 6

Is the progress quiz reusable? Is it a one time purchase of 25 lingots?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dumoc

No.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

moon__unit 16

you will need to pay for every use. 25 lingots per quiz.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

haileyhailhail 17 8 4

Hey, so today I took the test for the second time. The first time i took it (about 7 months ago) I had gone through French 2 at university. That time, i got a 2.7. Today (after having changed my major to french and becoming a pretty fluid speaker and being almost done with French 4) I got a 5/5. I am only about 3/4 of the way done with my tree but i haven't really been keeping up with it. I know I've bypassed almost everything on the remaining part of the tree in my classes. It was interesting to see such an improvement on the score though.

2ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

haileyhailhail 17 8 4

I'd also like to add that comparing my first attempt to my second attempt, it seems that the quiz DOES take your competence into account in the sense that the phrases got harder and harder or longer. The first time i took it, the phrases didn't get very hard probably because i was making quite a few mistakes.

1ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 351

Thank you for posting your comment, haileyhailhail. Based off of your comments and those of revdolphin's, combined with my own experiences, clearly the scoring methods are a bit esoteric. Oh well. There's more to life than a test score and if it is something that could use some improvement, I have faith that duolingo will at least look into it, correct it, or perhaps even improve upon the assessment tools it currently offers its users.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

matfran2001 22 21 21 20 18 16 16 15 14 12 7 6 6 6 531

I think it tests you out of what Duolingo offers you. I have done it several times in different languages. I got 5.00/5.00 in English, Spanish, Italian and French. My "real" level in each of those four languages is C1-C2 in English and Spanish, maybe B1 in Italian and possibly A1-A2 in French.

According to my own experience, you can get 5.00/5.00 if you answer correctly 70% (or more) of the questions.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•10 months ago

FleraEvan 9 3

Wow. This has just reminded me of how nice and non-judgemental the Duolingo community is. Thank you for the help, everyone. It's very much appreciated :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

SueGibb8 14

I think I've got it. A month ago - level 11, ADVERB module - took the quiz. Was very disheartened to see 1.26/5.00. Started from the beginning again. Today, I took the test for a second time, KNOWING I'd worked very hard at remembering all that I'd learned up til now. By question 4, I was asked questions - 4 in a row - that had words I'd never seen. As I presumed previously that I'd not get any scoring for partially right answers, I decided to 'Skip' those four questions. After that, everything was very easy - far too easy, I guess because I finished with most everything correct (or so I feel) and a score of - I'm embarrassed to type of 0.62/5.00. I have many lingots so will try test again later this week, once I've had a chance to lick my wounds. I WILL NOT skip any questions as I'm certain this is what caused my downfall.

Question... Has anyone ever counted the number of questions given? I will do so this next go-round.

Yes, Evan, with very few exceptions, everyone here is VERY NICE. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

FleraEvan 9 3

That is most certainly true. Also, good luck with your next test :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

jfernatt 22 8

Great topic. I'm eager to hear the answers to your questions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

seandodson 25 5 735

Yes I would find this really useful too

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kimo578 13

I got 5.00/5,0 what does it mean? Please answer me. Thanks

-72ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rspreng 24

Read the posts above.

26ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CynthiaUkawu 10 4

16ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

99 "I ask the same question."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4273443>

Translation: Yo hago la misma pregunta.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

94 Comments

nonnybaby 18

Why isn't "yo pregunto. ..." correct?

50ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

daisytuck 20 9 5 5

Yo pregunto la mismo pregunta.....

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Herb13 25 5

Daisy and all others wanting to use "pregunto," please see ma5ticore excellent explanation (well below this) for using "hago" instead. I know it's a pain, but very often reading the entire discussion forums leads to illumination.

18ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

JRTheJAM 25 11 10 9 5 96

Maybe pregunto is not the preferred form, but it is accepted by DL now (May 2015)

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lafe55 21 15 2

It is not yet May, 2015. Today is April 3, 2015. But in my reading of Spanish, I see preguntar used to mean ask a question, not always by any means is "hacer la pregunta" what is used in written Spanish.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JRTheJAM 25 11 10 9 5 96

Whoops, my bad. I meant March but somehow lost track of the letters 'r', 'c' and 'h'. Must be why I screw some of my lessons ;)

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

ygjose 6 6 5 4

preguntar una pregunta, do you think it is so weird when you read it?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zhuu1 14

Yes it is...

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kazmax1 17 2

I wrote, "Yo pregunto la misma pregunta" and it was accepted.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

OakBeam 11 2

not by me. when i hovered my pointer over the the word "ask", to be translated it even suggested pregunto but it never accepted the translation with it. ??????????

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

costyn 15 11 6
The tips for this were terrible

34ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jellylava 25 6 5 1077
Did you comment. DL appreciates suggestions for changes. I am going to comment now. 2014-10-06

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JadeSteffe1 23 2
I'm guessing you mean report?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

spanish-lady 14
yo pregunto la misma pregunta - marked incorrect - why?

19ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

ljaksdv 10
Because unfortunately, DuoLingo is an imperfect computer program. Your translation is correct, and this is definitely not the first time Duo has been wrong. Report the questions at the bottom-left of the screen.

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nsill 9 8 3 2
I think it is because saying i question the same question is incorrect. hago meaning ask is the write way due to the translation. Hago itself was marked wrong but i do not know why. im honestly just guessing

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ljaksdv 10
Not quite, because "preguntar" is a verb meaning "to ask" and the first-person possessive form (The "I __" form) is "pregunto."

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gerrard23 11 11 10 9 4 3 29
Seems its fixed now

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kazmax1 17 2
I wrote, "Yo pregunto la misma pregunta" and it was marked correct. 4th Nov.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

Herb13 25 5

So, I have the same question? Not I ask the same question? I get the similarity, but is "hago" the verb of choice by native Latin American speakers?

13ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ma5ticore 13 10 7 5

Yes, 'hacer preguntas' is a correct translation for 'to ask questions'. Not a native speaker though.

17ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Herb13 25 5

Thanks. Hacer preguntas=to ask questions. I would love a native speaker to weigh in on this. Is this idiomatic? Literally, hacer preguntas = to make questions, correct? I can see the idiomatic "jump" to "ask questions," but I'm just curious about this, and it seems others are too.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ma5ticore 13 10 7 5

Sorry, it took me long to respond. It is idiomatic for sure. When it comes to asking questions, you use hacer preguntas. When it's about asking of something/somebody, you use preguntar. El profesor me hace preguntas sobre America Latina - the professor asks me questions about Latin America. Él me pregunta de ti - he asks me about you.

127ReplyGive Lingot13•2 years ago

jellylava 25 6 5 1077

Your explanation makes a good deal of sense but DL doesn't seem to be teaching us this correct way when it supplies a hint that one should use pregunto - and yet, it goes ahead and marks it incorrect as it should be.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mattogucci 21 11 3

very helpful explanation, thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Royalflame 17 4 3

Good explanation. So its like one is where the question is about the person being questioned and the other is when you ask someone about something else(not about the person being questioned)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jasmondixon270 12

Lo pillo

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mistakenolive 11 6 3 2

I just put hago instead of yo hago and got it wrong. Why is the yo necessary here?

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tj1983 25 21 18 7 5 903

It's accepted now

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vdrcima 8 6

La misma pregunta! I rarely put the subject before but this is the first time it's marked wrong -.-

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

catwoman1212 22

Why does misma come first?

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Autumnal1979 15 14 13 9 8 7 6 3 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Its one of those adjectives that come first.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ljaksdv 10

Isn't the adjective supposed to come after the noun? As in, "Yo hago la pregunta misma"?

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LelandSun 15 14 13 11 10 9 8 8 7 177

I had the same question, and I was wondering whether "la pregunta misma" might have a different meaning. So, I typed both into Google translate, and it says "la misma pregunta" means "the same question" and "la pregunta misma" means "the question itself". Would a native speaker please confirm this distinction?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

99butcher99 11

why not pido pido la misma pregunta? wrong translation for pido?

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chloew1989 14 4 2

Pido = I ask for

Like asking for a glass of water or something.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

99butcher99 11

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

andreadahab 16 6

I also wrote ' pregunto ' - why should it be wrong?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lafe55 21 15 2

Very well explained also by Libertad54 toward the end of this thread. It seems that it is not necessarily exactly wrong but sounds awkward so it is not used by native speakers. I guess for the same reason we would not say "I question the same question," even though we would say "I question your answer."

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TimCzarkow 15

Anyone?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lrtward 25 25 8 157

Well explained by ma5ticore elsewhere in this discussion.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GBbbbbbb 11

This is idiomatic. Yo hago la misma pregunta is the correct translation but not understood literally. There are a lot of spanish idiomatic expressions that use the verb hacer.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EugeneTiffany 25 12 1

"hacer" is clearly an all-purpose verb that has to do with doing stuff.

Verb: do, make, ask, lumber, perpetrate, take on, pull, wet, create, build, level, compose, emit, put out, work, work out, throw, fabricate, generate, give, pay, commit, perform, punch, force, form, cause, bind, act, drive, be, drop, poke, set off, lean, put forward, make up, turn out, render, advance, bring, bring in, carry out.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mbgerlach 11 11 10

Yo pregunto lo mismo?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hypek 13 8 8

Lol, i wrote "hago la misma pregunta" and it said i missed a word. Since when the "yo" is necessary?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Joshdharris 12 10 7 4

It shouldn't be. If that was the only reason you got it wrong then report it and Duolingo will eventually correct it

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hypek 13 8 8

Hi hypek,

You suggested "Hago la misma pregunta" as a translation for "I ask the same question." We now accept this translation. :)

Thanks for the contribution, please keep it up!

jenna_swiss from Duolingo

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lamujerasincera 9 3

Just learned the difference between pedir and preguntar.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rygy82 13 11 4

Why can't i use cuestión? What's the difference between cuestión and pregunta?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SFJuan 19 5

In English, question can mean:

a sentence, phrase, or gesture that seeks information through a reply: I have a question about the movie. In Spanish, this meaning of question translates to pregunta.

a subject, point, matter or issue that is under discussion or open to controversy: The question of paternity was never discussed. In Spanish, this meaning of question translates to cuestión.

In this exercise, question has the first meaning, so pregunta is the correct translation.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Autumnal1979 15 14 13 9 8 7 6 3 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Pregunta is a regular question and cuestion is like you are questioning someone or something like you have doubts about it. Thats the way I have always heard it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Turbulentbeauty 16 1

I hadn't heard of "cuestión" before now, so I looked online and found several forums, and a Spanish Dictionary. From what I can see " cuestión" is more formal and serious than "pregunta." So perhaps in business you may say "Pregunto la misma cuestión," but it would be taken more sternly like you have doubt and concern. That seems to go along with other DL commenters mentioning this is more interrogative. I also saw that "cuestión" can be used like "matter" or "issue" as in, "es una cuestión de fe."

And as most people on here have mentioned, "Hago la misma pregunta" is very casual and common.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

keta023 18 9 5 4

Why not "la pregunta misma"? As usual adjectives come after noun, no?

2ReplyGive Lingot2•3 months ago

Niko2445 13

ma5ticore, why is "hace" in your example sentence 'El profesor me hace preguntas sobre America Latina - the professor asks me questions about Latin America.'?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ma5ticore 13 10 7 5

Hello Niko. I'm not sure if I got your question right. I used "hace", because it is a third-person singular simple present form of the verb "hacer". And if you ask, why I used this very word "hace" (and not "pregunta" for example), please see my explanation above.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Niko2445 13

I apologize, I read it wrong. I was thinking "preguntas" was "pregunto". I was wonder why you were using two form of "asking". Thanks. I will give you a lingot.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

yuridado 18 8

so hacer means to ask, to do , to make. ?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SFJuan 19 5

Hacer doesn't generally mean to ask. Hacer is idiomatic in this case, and it's probably better to think of Ella hace una pregunta as She does a question or She makes a question. That's just how this is said in Spanish.

Preguntar: to ask someone something. Ella le pregunta algo a la maestra, She asks the teacher something.

Pedir: to ask for something (request). Ella pide una computadora, She asks for a computer.

Hacer: idiomatic do/make a question means ask a question. Ella hace una pregunta, She makes/does a question, She asks a question.

15ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

Herb13 25 5

Great contribution to my Spanish language education, SFJuan. You have summarized several comments in this discussion and and expanded on one in particular: perdir. Muchas gracias!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Autumna1979 15 14 13 9 8 7 6 3 3 2 2 2 2 2

You meant pedir?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HagueAndrew 11

I agree. Sometimes in formal English we MAKE questions, which implies an element of construction. We certainly put questions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

camomma9552 25

It would have been nice had I known about the HAGO.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EugeneTiffany 25 12 1

If one knows something in advance of its introduction one doesn't then need the introduction.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Turbulentbeauty 16 1

Do you use the app versus desktop site? I noticed on desktop there are tips before I start a lesson. The app doesn't show these, so it's more "on the go" learning.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

dankeschlampe 16 14 7

no kidding... great introduction

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lafe55 21 15 2

now accepts Pregunto la misma pregunta. 12/13/14 I answered that way but thought it sounded funny so read the discussion and I am glad I did because now DL is apparently accepting an incorrect answer on this

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Turbulentbeauty 16 1

It's not incorrect, just less common.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

JhannaF 14 1

Why would the adjective not follow the noun? (e.g. Yo hago la pregunta misma.)

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

TONYANDERS2 15

the definition of each word was there on the same page if i touched the word yet istill got it wrong, say what.....

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lrtward 25 25 8 157

It's like looking a word up in a dictionary. You see several meanings and pick the one that works best in the sentence given. Not all of the definitions will work in every context.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

royalt213 13 13

I don't remember seeing "hago." Does anyone else?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Turbulentbeauty 16 1

Me either, but I think it's because I use the app mostly. When you use the desktop site there are tips before you start the lesson. On the app you just learn as you go.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

hoopa123 22

I find it interesting that when I enter certain words into Google Translate like "ask", it comes back "pido" and "make" comes back as "hago"...

It makes you wonder what exactly are we learning here..

It gets very frustrating when certain things catch you by surprise. You go research them and get something entirely different. ..

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lafe55 21 15 2

You will find answers to your questions (no pun intended) by reading this discussion. Often things are explained here that cannot be learned simply by doing the exercises on DL. Another suggestion for you: try Spanishdict.com and put in the whole phrase rather than word by word in Google Translate. Google Translate is giving you the translation "pedir" which means "to ask for". As explained nicely by SFJuan above, in Spanish you say "make a question" if you translate literally. That is why "hago" which means "I make" and is the 1st person singular of "hacer" = to make or to do, is coming back "make" from google translate. On Spanishdict.com, you won't usually get a correct translation of a single word which is a conjugated verb as is the case with "hago" but if you put in the whole phrase it will translate in the right tense. As a matter of fact, if you ask it to translate "I ask the same question" Spanishdict.com will give you exactly the translation given here and give you more confidence in what you are learning here.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BatShtCrazy 12

"Pregunto el mismo pregunta", it marked it wrong due to the fact that apparently I didn't use the feminine tense. Question, How the heck am I supposed to know whether or not it's masculine or feminine when there is no gender distinguished? This constantly happens to me throughout the lessons and it doesn't seem to be addressed often. Is there some sort of syntax rule that I'm not following?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lafe55 21 15 2

The word pregunta in this sentence is a noun. Like all Spanish nouns it has a gender. Like most (but not all) Spanish nouns ending in "a", this is a feminine noun. You HAVE to use the feminine forms of articles and adjectives and determiners with all feminine nouns, and vice versa for all masculine nouns. I hope this helps. DL tries to help us learn the correct gender with each new noun introduced- but it is hard to always remember to use them correctly, especially at first.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GregK88 15 12 12 92

"Pongo la misma pregunta" wasn't accepted. Could someone give some input?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Libertad54 25 25 25 25 9 5 3 2 2 897

"Preguntar" is "hacer una pregunta" it is not the same that "poner" ¿dónde la pones? where do you put it? You "make" the question when you ask a question. We don't say "preguntar una pregunta" because it sounds repetitive, so: Ask = preguntar and "ask a question" = "hacer una pregunta" because it sounds better than "preguntar una pregunta" We never put the questions (where?), no las ponemos, las hacemos. You asked that question a month ago, but as nobody answered it, I've tried.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lafe55 21 15 2

Your English has become perfect! Congratulations and thanks for your input into these discussions.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Libertad54 25 25 25 25 9 5 3 2 2 897

Do you really think I have improved? Thank you anyway. I find interesting these discussions because they make me think about language. I spend most of the time in translation though and corrections from native people are very helpful in that section. You seem to have improved in Spanish too, and give very good advice to other people.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ParkHan 19

Hacer una pregunta...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sarah_ahles 12

I wrote "Pido la misma pregunta," is that incorrect?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Irondrngntp 9

I wrote, "Pido la misma pregunta". Is this not correct?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Turbulentbeauty 16 1

Apparently "pido" means "ask for" more often than "ask,"

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

jksaddington 14 5

I moused over 'ask' and it didn't show hago as an option to use, only pregunto.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

OrlieDPrez 15 15 15 14 6

'Yo pregunto lo mismo' should be accepted as a correct translation but it was marked wrong.

Frustrating.....! :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

opposomiac 12 8 2

Why is it "misma pregunta", not "pregunta misma"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

LelandSun 15 14 13 11 10 9 8 8 7 177

I found that "pregunta misma" has a different meaning. See my earlier posting above. (I know this thread is very long to sort through, but that is all the more reason not to clutter it further.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

SheepLikeOnions 10

why is is pregunto when most of the words in the sentence are feminine? (la)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

LelandSun 15 14 13 11 10 9 8 8 7 177

Appearing in some of the discussions on this thread, "pregunto" is not a noun but a verb -- "preguntar" conjugated for first person singular, present tense. "Pregunta", on the other hand, is indeed a feminine noun. It turns out that the idiomatic verb to use with the noun "pregunta" for this translation is "hago" and not "pregunto".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

hoopa123 22

Google Translate states:

"Pido a la misma pregunta" or "I ask the same question"

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lafe55 21 15 2

That says "I ask for to the same question" I don't think that would make any sense in Spanish. The general consensus seems to be that Google Translate is not helpful.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

100 What is the difference between Un and Une in French?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/15461056>

traket999 4

Can you please tell me the answer.

Give Lingot

310 months ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

See the TipsNote of the very first skill (click on the link) of the French tree. It's well explained there.

4ReplyGive Lingot6•10 months ago

MasterZsword 20 5 3 3

Un is used for words that are masculine (un chien, un manteau, un chocolat, etc.), while une is used for feminine words (une chemise, une cravate, etc.).

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

PolyglotCiro 25 25 25 25 14 13 13 12 11 11 9 4 34

Un is masculine and une is feminine.

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Kangourex 25 15 10 5 4 36

"Un" and "Une" are pronouns, they are neither masculine nor feminine.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Among the different things that un(e) can be in French, the most frequent use is the one where they are indefinite articles. And un is the masculine singular form of the indefinite article while une is the feminine singular form.

un can be:

-masculine singular form of the indef. article

an indefinite pronoun

an invariable noun

a numeral (cardinal) adjective

an adjective

une can be:

-feminine singular form of the indef. article

an indefinite pronoun

a numeral (cardinal) adjective

an adjective

a (feminine) noun

So, depending on the meaning, yes they can be masculine or feminine. ;)

The OP being working on the first lesson, they are very very likely talking about the indefinite article use for which un is the masculine form and une is the feminine form.

3ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Kangourex 25 15 10 5 4 36

I prefer "feminine singular form" than "feminine".

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

champaz3 3

the masculine is un and the feminine is une

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

lovepink4ever1 2

lol dont worry i dont understand that stuff too like le and la what is the difference

-1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

101 "The shark is eating a dolphin."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1332586>

Translation: Le requin mange un dauphin.

23 years ago

Leave a new comment

14 Comments

Benfoxgear 7 7 4

RIP dolphin

160ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mr_Roboto96 20 19 19 7

Believe it or not, dolphins are actually known for attacking and killing sharks!

85ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ewurabena2 9
Are you sure?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rockerbox0 20 9 9 7 5 4 587

It's true, since dolphins usually travel in groups, if one is threatened by a shark, the rest will often attack the shark together and beat it with their snouts and maneuver themselves away if the shark tries to attack them, because they are much more agile. Dolphins can kill a shark by puncturing its belly.

34ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jemmapellemma 8 5 5 3 3

Also sharks are not the only ones with teeth! Many dolphins have permanent tooth-scrape and bite scars from other dolphins as a result of how they socialize, live together, and compete with each other. If you ever have the chance to feel just how tough a dolphin's skin is and/or see their tooth scars up close, you might gain a new appreciation for dolphin teeth. Growing up in south Florida I always heard that even one-on-one a bottlenose dolphin would likely defeat a shark, not only because it is WAY more agile, but because it is vastly more intelligent than any shark. The same people said that in addition to body-ramming, dolphins attack the shark's gills because they are large, exposed, and crucial for the shark to continue fighting. Also remember that as pack-hunting mammals dolphins have the time and restraint to play and practice-fight (like wolves) whereas most sharks, even those that group together, will do no such thing.

24ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BradshawJoshua 17 13 13 5 22

That's why sharks usually go after animals that are alone. They know there's strength in numbers.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

elainegaleon 6

When to use manger, manges & manger?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Greeny_bear 11 4

Mange just means 'eat', but it's only used when you say 'Je' (I). Manges also just means 'eat', but it is only used when you say 'Tu' (You) Manger is the infinitive and means 'to eat', which can be used in this example like this: 'J'aime manger du poisson' (I like to eat fish)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bellaholli1 7 3

couldn't it be: Le requin EST manger un dauphin???

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

n6zs 25 859

No. Since French does not have a Present Continuous verb tense, the conjugation of "il mange" may be either "he eats" or "he is eating". There is no "est" ever used in the way you suggest.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

LuisFranci14265 7

Mmm... Do you know when should I use "en train de"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

n6zs 25 859

The expression "en train de" is used in French when you want to emphasize that the action is taking place at this very moment. So "le requin est en train de manger un dauphin" means that it is happening right now.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

JesusLivesInMe 9

It pained me to write this. Duo just gets more and more gruesome as I go along. :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

Calvin861215 4

my 2 year old started to cry after this

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

102 Level at the end of the course?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/213257>

LittleStormer 11 9 6 6

I'm kinda new here, and i'd like to hear about someone who finished (or almost) a course. How is your level at the end? Thank you !

Give Lingot

34 years ago

Leave a new comment

14 Comments

DongerBanks 16 15

It's been discussed a few times before. The general consensus is that someone who has finished the course will have a very good introductory grounding (particularly when it comes to the reading and writing side of things) but will be far from conversationally fluent. You should have a decent vocabulary and a good understanding of the grammar.

If you want to become conversationally fluent, you should try and take what opportunities you can find to talk to native speakers. You can do that online using websites like <http://www.verbling.com> and <http://www.livemocha.com>

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

LittleStormer 11 9 6 6

Thank you !

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

De_Ithaca 21 11 10 8 4 4 3 2

[Argh. I must remember not to press "Follow Discussion" while composing a comment—My previous comments, not having been posted before touching the follow button, were completely erased.] I finished Spanish today (at level 16 for those who count that) and I also took a couple comprehension tests at Quia.com, the National Spanish Exams:

<http://www.nationalspanishexam.org/index.php/exam-preparation/past-examinations> They are multiple choice reading and listening comprehension exams, where I read realistic passages or listened to realistic but clearly, slowly enunciated conversations and then answered tough questions about the passages—The kind of thing anyone can get a few wrong even if they understand completely. I took the easiest level "Proficiency" exam and got 98% right. Then I took the most difficult "Proficiency" exam and got 70%. Knowing French and Italian beforehand helped me get through Duolingo's Spanish for sure, also helped me with parts of the exams that contained phrases not found in Duolingo's program. Completing Duolingo has left me feeling like I can speak slowly, probably too slowly for most listeners' comfort, and I can comprehend if people speak like they would speak to a child or person hard of hearing. Despite Duolingo's limited scope of vocabulary (especially verbs in various tenses), I plan to return here to practice, because knowing a few things very well might be a good framework for the future.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

BonjourMelissa 15 4

Thanks for asking this question! I have been wondering the same thing...

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

marziotta 17 15 12 11 10 7 2 2 148

I would be curious as well... :D Anyway, I think the most of the people review and translate as well, boosting up their level. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

ruinchristmas 23 19 6 4 156

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•4 years ago

LittleStormer 11 9 6 6

I was thinking about the level in real life actually... Like, fluent or intermediate !

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Gcoid 21 13 13 10 6 5 4

From all the previous threads on this the general consensus is that you'll be at B1 level in the european framework which means basic conversations which to me means you'll have the language ability of a 4 year old but that's a good jumping off point, I think. Translations and talking to natives over the internet will very quickly boost that.

4ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

LittleStormer 11 9 6 6

Thanks ! I started to learn italian because i have several italian friends so i already can begin to practice! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

raythine 7 5

So would that be equivalent to around one semester of classes?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Gcoid 21 13 13 10 6 5 4

I think so but I'm no where near finished myself.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

cathyr19355 15 8

What if your priority is not conversational fluency but reading fluency? Does anyone have recommendations as to how to proceed after completing the Duolingo course?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

garrettowne 25 25 14 11 2 2 1427

I will Spanish finished today and am early in level 15.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

johnwalterruiz 15 14 13 13 13 5 690

Hi, there. I finished the "skills tree" (as they called it) when I was in level 11, so I got a golden owl statue. Then I saw a message saying that I could continue studying, that means practicing/reviewing previous lessons so I could reach level 12. In fact, I did continue studying and today I reached level 12. That means you can keep on studying, but that is kind of making me bored. I think it is a good thing to start learning a new language as well.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

103 The second person plural in Spanish

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/87>

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 467

In Latin America, the pronoun for the second person plural ("you all" in English) is "ustedes". In Spain it's "vosotros". The two pronouns are synonyms, but they change the way verbs are conjugated with them. For example, the conjugation of the verb "comer" (to eat) in Latin America is "ustedes comen", and in Spain it's "vosotros coméis".

Give Lingot

985 years ago

Leave a new comment

71 Comments

gray.fox 10 2

Incorrect because in Spain we still use both. It just depends who you are talking to, with respect to an elder, to someone formal etc. Or to someone just normally.

Ustedes = Vosotros, however vosotros is used informally (the same as tú = you) and ustedes is used formally (the same as usted = you).

That is their only difference in Spain, nobody really uses

28ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

JoelLituma 13 4

En latino América Usamos Ustedes, yo que sepa no he escuchado a un español usar demasiado el termino Ustedes (POCOS SON LOS CASOS). En España solo usan Vosotros , En cambio nosotros en latinoamérica bajo cualquier caso sea formal o informal Es "Ustedes". PD: Soy de Latinoamérica , pero conozco a muchos españoles que usan solamente "vosotros " Por razón de que SE SIENTEN VIEJOS CUANDO LES TRATAN DE USTED, hahahahaha que acomplejados que son los españoles

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

VerissimoFeijoo 15

Te equivocas. Es lógico y no se trata de complejos. USTED, USTEDES lo usamos siempre con todas las personas mayores que no conocemos, dependiendo de la edad que tenga quien la usa. Una persona de 50 años usará siempre el USTED con una persona desconocida de 80 años o más y ésta a su vez le tratará de TÚ. Si tú tienes 25 años y un niño de 10 ó 13 años se te acerca y te pregunta: "¿Tiene usted hora?" ¿Cómo te quedas?. Una Ley no escrita determina que el USTED es obligatorio usarlo con toda persona que tenga un título universitario, independientemente de la edad que tenga, con los oficiales de las fuerzas armadas, con los policías. Y es de buena educación usarlo con personas desconocidas que ya tengan cierta edad. Y es muy recomendable usarlo siempre, en un principio, con un cliente de cualquier edad. Etc., etc., etc.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JoelLituma 13 4

Mmmm.. Pues bueno como dije antes pocos han de ser los casos , A menos acá en Ecuador la gente que es de España trata de Tú y Vosotros a Cualquier persona,por eso lo dije, Pero Bueno en Fin No he ido a España como para comprobarlo, Pero vivo con una persona que ha estado un Buen tiempo por allá, y me ha contado acerca de ese tipo de tratamiento hacia las personas mayores, pero también tiene sentido lo que dices...

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

comolaluna 5

Efectivamente, es de buena educación usar el "usted o ustedes" con quien no se conoce o es una persona de cierta edad. Es preferible que la otra persona nos diga "por favor, tutéame, que me haces muy mayor con el usted", a usar el tú/vosotros de entrada y que la persona en cuestión se moleste por falta de respeto o educación. Por otra parte, en Canarias se utiliza siempre el "ustedes".

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Moo 8 7 5

Maybe there should be options for Spanish (Latin America) and Spanish (Spain). I'm sure there must be plenty of people wanting to learn each, and it shouldn't be that difficult to implement if they are mostly the same. It would be even better if they shared things like questions, points, etc.

16ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

cjlorch 11

Hope this helps from somebody who is also not a native Spanish speaker: from what I remember from my teacher, if you are not sure which form to use in a given situation it would be better to use ustedes. Using ustedes instead of vosotros/vosotras in my understanding is akin to saying "you all" instead of "y'all." It's funny to note that vosotros is appropriate in certain places and social situations, similar to y'all. Here's clarification from a Wikipedia article:
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Spanish_verbs#Second_person

I am from the northeast U.S. where local people rarely use y'all unless you're pretending to be a cowboy. Since moving to the South I often say y'all without realizing it! As a social comparison I'd think somebody speaking English as a second language would prefer to use "you all" more often to avoid misjudging a social situation. It would be awkward and inappropriate to meet a group of doctors or judges and say "Y'ALL WANNA GO GIT SOME GRUB?"

9ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Peddler931 11 8

Other than your cowboy imitation, I don't think any English speaker outside the US would say you all or y'all except to stress that he is referring to the whole group of you rather than a subgroup, in which case "all" would be stressed. E.g. Are you all going to the movie? Ustedes is formal and Vosotros is informal, but both are proper Spanish. Vosotros is well-understood by Latin Americans even though they rarely use it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

nickveale 5 4

In Missouri, "y'all" seems to be a very common phrase, mostly in rural communities.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

GoDiegoGo69 3

whats up y'all

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

brclement 13 4 2 2

Although I am given to understand that in certain Latin American countries Vosotros is used as singular.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

in some Latin American countries, there is the use of 'vos' instead of 'tu'. both being singular.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

waterlily5 10 8

Let's face it "y'all" is not good English. I'm a Westerner (AZ originally now Colorado). It really isn't used in the West except for transplants from more Southern States.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hankitkin 5

A cowboy? LOL. Just so those outside the US will understand, "y'all" is primarily a Southern U.S. regionalism, not a Western (cowboy) one. And even more interesting, "y'all" is used as a singular in the South, with the plural being "all y'all." I went out on a limb and asked once--and have had this confirmed multiple times by friends from that area. I know, it doesn't sound like this could possibly be, but ask someone from, say, Arkansas.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rocko2012 25 7 3 1450

"Y'all" being singular or plural may vary in the Southern US, but In Texas for example I only hear and use it as the plural and would say "you" if it was one person.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

I agree with rocko. I've lived in the South east all my life. Ya'll is NEVER singular. I hear people on TV use it in the singular when they are trying to do fake southern accents. We say 'you' in the singular, and it is considered inappropriate to use 'ya'll' when talking to ONE person.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RubyDawg 14

Having been raised in the South, and lived elsewhere, I have long been puzzled about why people think "y'all" could ever be singular.

I have noticed (and I do this myself sometimes) that one may address a person as y'all in a question like "how are y'all doing?" but that means "how are you and your family/friends/people you care about doing?" It is contextual.

"All of y'all" may be used to emphasize that every last person in the referenced group is included, to avoid ambiguity, but I think that borders on being slangy, especially if pronounced "all-a-y'all."

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

AATucker 15 5

Same here - I've only ever heard "y'all" been used for the plural (I grew up in Texas and that's consistent with my experience across the South, but could certainly vary by location). "All y'all" is of course redundant, but I've heard it be used to emphasize that it's a large group or something.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Tinknj 6

In Pennsylvania, (Pittsburgh area, which is western part of the state but not quite central USA), "y'uns" is said instead of "y'all". When I visit family, they might ask, "Y'uns want to go get some ice cream?" I don't know how much of the country uses this expression but I like to hear comments. Is it a strictly local usage?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

I have heard it in some parts of Tennessee/

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RubyDawg 14

I have heard this in western NC where I grew up, too. Every side of my family settled in NC but in different parts so my grandparents had different NC accents...within the larger body of NC accents, I definitely think of "y'uns" as being a marker for the mountains/foothills.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

IEatsRainbowz 11

I'm from the North-East side of Pennsylvania and have never head that phrase so it may very well be regional.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

timelord2102 10 10 5

Hi gray.fox. You say, that in Spain both forms are used. OK. But can "Ustedes" be used instead of "Vosotros" also when it is meant informally as it seems to be the case in Latin America? For example: "Ustedes son niños" sounds formally although it is obviously informally.. would that then be "Vosotros sois niños" in Spain?

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Skapata 13 12 12 8 6 4 4 2 59

Perhaps the speaker is their teacher.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gray.fox 10 2

Hey timelord2102. Yeah it would be Vosotros sois niños over here, but anywhere to be honest, unless in latin america they use Ustedes more than Vosotros? I have a Colombian friend over here who would use both when he speaks. Also if you want to sound more natural, normally the article isn't used, for example 'yo, tú, el, ella, vosotros, nosotros, ellos, ellas, usted, ustedes'. So it would just be 'sois niños'.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

BarracksOL 9

Hello Grey Fox. So what you want to say is you generally avoid pronouns while talking spanish right? So is this protocol is also applicable when writing in spanish?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

compotrigo 18 10 9 8 8 2

I have a thing to say (but first, sorry for my bad English, I studied French at school -I was good learning French-, just now i'm learning English with Duolingo!): in some places in Spain we use 'ustedes' exactly like others use 'vosotros'. I am a Spanish native speaker from Western Andalusia. Here we have a, very partucular, different way to pronounce. The souds are different from the standard Spanish, but I think, our natural grammar is better most of the time. However, in this part of Spain is common to use 'ustedes' and conjugate the verb like when 'vosotros' is used.

In standard Spanish:

"Vosotros sois niños" / "Ustedes son niños".

In western Andalusian:

"Ustedes sois niños".

This use of 'ustedes' is wrong according the standard rules of Spanish, but it is often used in a register vulgar and colloquial language in this zone.

I think, also, maybe in Latin American they use 'ustedes' because the colonial activity was performed by Andalusians, at that time, Huelva, Seville, Cádiz... were important interchange place.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

That is an interesting bit of history to know. We have the same in English where the non standard is heard so much on television, radio and music, some people do not know the standard rules of English grammar. Some how we are still able to understand each other.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

catstongue 6 5 4 3

"You all" is not the standard second person plural in English. "You" is. "All" is added to emphasize the plural if it isn't clear from context. It's just one way to do that. "All of you" is another. Even in the Southern United States, where "you all" is used nearly all the time, I think it's understood that "all" is not part of the pronoun.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

timelord2102 10 10 5

The project has been developed in US and the most Spanish speakers can be found in Latin America, so I would not wonder about the missing "vosotros". As far as I have learned it (Michel Thomas methodology) the "Ustedes" form can be used formally and informally in Latin America but it is in both cases used as a 3rd person plural thus involving the ending "n" like for "ellos" and "ellas".

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

eccampbell 4 4

I thought I was learning European Spanish!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

compotrigo 18 10 9 8 8 2

I'm Spanish. I can assure that Duolingo don't learn european Spanish. But I think it is normal: the languages are owned by their speakers. The biggest Spanish speaker people number in the world is in Mexico, not Spain. In addition, the Duolingo creator is latin-american.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

What part of Spain are you from? You are correct in that Duolingo' teaches' Latin American Spanish but I believe you would not have trouble understanding the Latin Americans. Many Spaniards like you say they can understand Mexican Spanish as well as other countries in all the Latin American countries, Learners on this site should not have problems understanding each other. At least that is what many people on here say and I really think the Latin American speakers of Spanish will be able to understand you and vice versa rather it be Colombian or Mexican or what ever

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Peddler931 11 8

I would agree. People from the US and Canada understand British English, though there are a few differences in pronunciation, vocabulary, and phraseology. It is the same with Québécois and people from France.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pichldom 11 10 3

Me too... How big is the difference here? If it is big, learning Latin Spanish would be useless for me, because there isn't big probability that I would ever visit Latin America. But I will probably go to Spain/Canary Islands/Mallorca again some time and I would like to learn European Spanish.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Peddler931 11 8

Latin American and European Spanish are very similar, like British and American English. You might run into an unfamiliar word but there is no significant impairment to understanding.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

waterlily5 10 8

Yes and no. I have had no problem with understanding spanish in Spain and Mexico, but Colombia is a different story.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

VerissimoFeijoo 15

No, but Spanish people from Spain will understand you perfectly if, some day, you are able to learn to speak Spanish from Duolingo.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

timelord2102 10 10 5

Thanks gray.fox.. It's good to have a native speaker on board who helps out. About the pronouns.. I was using a CD course and in one of the lessons the teacher says "Don't be a Yo-Yo" to stress the typical usage of the verbs without pronouns :).

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

gray.fox 10 2

No problem! timelord2102, although I'm not a native speaker haha, I'm English but live in Madrid! :) Yeah to be honest, my spanish teacher in England said that nobody ever uses the articles, which is half true, because from time to time people do tend to slip them in sometimes! Anything else you want to know, I'd be happy to help, just ask! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

brclement 13 4 2 2

By articles do you mean pronouns? It seems that Spanish uses articles (el, la, los, las, un, una) more than English (the, a, an).

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

I think he does. I have heard others say article instead of pronoun. I don't know why.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gray.fox 10 2

cjlorch - You wouldn't ever use Nosotros instead of Ustedes or vice versa? Nosotros means 'we', don't you mean Vosotros?

Also vosotros is not as bad as saying "y'all", its just about respect that's all, its the same as French with 'Tu vs Vous', and in France they ALWAYS use the vous form of the verb for someone they don't know or is older than them, if you were to use the tu form, it would be considered extremely disrespectful. The thing is Spanish isn't like that, the usted form is pretty much disregarded now, I never hear it anymore, I've been living in Madrid for nearly a year now and not once have I heard Usted. So it may just depend on the region of where you are from.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

SubEffect 11 4

Interesting discussion. I'm a complete beginner (from the UK) and it's useful to know that the pronoun is often left out - it alters how much emphasis I'll focus on learning verbs without the pronoun, like "lees un libro" instead of "yo lees un libro!". Thanks guys.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

compotrigo 18 10 9 8 8 2

There is another interesting question. In Argentina, they use the pronoun "vos" and they conjugate the verb in a different way. Standard Spanish: "tú eres", Argentina's dialect: "vos sos". Standard: "tú quieres", Argentinian: "vos querés"... Tú amas/vos amás, tú juegas/vos jugás, tú meriendas/vos merendás, tú peinas/vos peinás...

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Roguex_1979 4

I thought Ustedes was formal, and vosotros was informal...

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

yes you are correct

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hamzaattaj 3

can we say vosotros for men and vosotras for women like Nosotros/Nosotras ??

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

compotrigo 18 10 9 8 8 2

Yes, "vosotros" is for men and "vosotras" is for women.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TheThunder 9

So as usted carries conjugations of él and ella ; in same way ustedes will carry conjugations of ellos and ellas . right?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

compotrigo 18 10 9 8 8 2

Exact!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rachopertrat 13 13 8

I'm still a bit confused, so basically they mean the same thing but they are just conjugated differently, and are used in different places?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

catcampion 20 11 6

Ustedes = you (plural); vosotros/as = you (plural, informal) The only risk I see in learning only ustedes (which is used globally) is you might be speaking inappropriately formally while in Spain!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

xarcofago 8

es que en España utilizan mucho el voseo. pero las dos palabras son iguales como tú dices son sinónimas es lo que hace diferente la pronunciación de diferentes sitios como lo es argentina, España etc.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LindaHill 19

I was taught that the pronoun is used before the verb in order to make clear whether a male or female is being referenced. I was also taught that the pronoun is sometimes used for emphasis. There is a similar rule in English: the pronoun ALWAYS refers to the noun immediately preceding it. In the example, "His father told Joe that he was going to walk the dog," the "he" refers to Joe, not to the father. For clarity and ease of understanding, many native English writers often phrase the sentence these ways: "His father told Joe to walk the dog," or "Joe's father said that he would walk the dog."

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Cascador 8 7

I'm only a beginner, but I read that "usted" and "ustedes" in Spain is marked as formal way of saying 'you', so its correct in both, Spain and Latin America. The difference is, that Spanish people are more direct, probably that's why they have version with 'vosotros'. Latin Americans are more polite it seems :)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 years ago

[+] 4 hidden comments

bamboopoem 11 6 2

@Cascador, I have the same question here. I wonder whether they actually use "ustedes" at all. Anyone can help here? Thanks!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 years ago

Gijs 10

Luis, it's interesting for Duolingo might teach us moreover Latin American instead of Spanish. Thanks for the comment!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 years ago

canary5 12 8 6

I don't understand why 'usted and ustedes' are not conjugated in the second person if they mean 'you' singular and plural, respectively. Why are they conjugated in the third person? It's sooo confusing!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

compotrigo 18 10 9 8 8 2

Don't worry canary5, native Spanish speakers in our times generally use "tú". New generations say "tú" most of the times.

Exactly Peddler931! If you speak to a friend, you say: "are you ready?" (in second person); but if you speak to the Pope, you say: "is your excellency ready?" (in third person). And in Spanish is the same thing: "¿Cómo te encuentras?" > "¿Cómo se encuentra su excelencia?"; "Me alegro de verte" > "me alegro de ver a su ilustrísima"; "¿Qué opinas?" > "¿Qué opina su señoría?".

"Su señoría", "su excelencia", "su ilustrísima"... are forms to use the third person.

In Spanish, we show respect for others not only saying "usted" instead "tú", but also switching second person to third person.

In old Spanish the King used the "plural mayestático" (mayestic plural). "Yo soy el rey" > "Nos somos el rey"

The king used to talk about himself in first person of plural. Others used to talk to the King also in plural: "Tú eres el rey" > "Vos sois el rey".

In our times, most of writers use "plural de modestia". When a book author write in that book in first person: "pienso que" > "pensamos que"; "creo" > "creemos"; "como he dicho anteriormente" > "como hemos dicho anteriormente".

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

canary5 12 8 6

Thanks....I think I understand?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Peddler931 11 8

It is comparable to English when someone uses "your excellency" in diplomatic language. Usted originated from vuestra merced or "your mercy".

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

VerissimoFeijoo 15

@Luis: Not exactly. In Latin America they speak the Spanish inherited from Spain about 500, 400, 300, 200 years ago. "Vosotros/as" is not the same as "Ustedes". But in English is the same: "You". "You" has 19 different words in Spanish. "Vosotros/as" in Spain is used with friends, children, family. "Usted" and "Ustedes" is used with people to whom respect is due. It is a Matter of "Respect".

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

VerissimoFeijoo 15

Just remember all of you: YOU in Spanish has 19 diferent words. 5 are subjects: Tú, Usted, Vosotros, Vosotras, Ustedes. All the others are compliments.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

104 How do you hear the difference between third person singular and third person plural?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1864330>

bbwriter 7

I can't hear the difference. Any pointers would be appreciated.

Give Lingot

43 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

NicholasProietti 14 9

Take for example: 'Ils mangent' and 'Il mange'

You cannot hear the difference between the third person singular and plural since both are pronounced the same way. To clarify how many people, you have to rely mainly on context.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Only 1st group verbs (infinitive in -er except aller) would pose problem, since there is indeed no sound difference between singular and plural il/ils and elle/elles.

In cases where the verb starts with a vowel, the Voice is kind enough to mark the Z liaison in plural (ils aiment = il-Z-em).

In some cases, there is another word in the sentence that can give you a clue: a possessive adjective, for example (singular son/sa/ses vs plural leur/leurs).

If not, Duolingo accepts both versions.

If they don't, you may report it.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bbwriter 7

We aren't given the context on Duolingo. So when Duolingo says my singular third person answer is wrong because it wants third person plural it's not my fault!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

curlyeric 22 13 12 8 7 3

Listen again to the full speed audio, more often than not you are missing the cue. If there is truly no difference and no context then duo should accept both (and usually does).

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

curlyeric 22 13 12 8 7 3

Only the regular speed audio has liaisons which are necessary to differentiate ils écrivent from il écrit. I believe that duo will accept either in cases where neither context nor liaisons provide a difference. (typo corrected, thanks!)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hallucinant 13 10 2
and "il écrit" would be even better :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JasonMonday 10 8

Because "il" and "ils" are both pronounced the same, you can only tell the difference when they are followed by a vowel sound. If followed by a vowel sound, "ils" will sound the normally-silent S on the end and flow into the following word. i.e. ils écrivent.

Otherwise, it's just context, which we don't have here normally. At least as far as in the lessons I've reached.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

105 The Level Progress Bar is Gone ---BUT... There is Hope!

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4907447>

ZheGreatest 15 12 9 6 5

Many people are adding posts in the discussion are about the disappearance of the progress bar, I had decided to look for something that told the amount of exp/xp per level, yes, I managed to find something that is very helpful, for those who enjoyed the progress bar, and have grown very used to it: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1358479> I really hope this helps everyone, go ahead and write them down if you'd like! ^^~It is my Pleasure to Help you guys! :) Edit: Although this does not tell anyone how much exp/xp you have left it should be pretty understanding!

Give Lingot6

202 years ago

Leave a new comment

16 Comments

ZheGreatest 15 12 9 6 5

1 - 60 → 60

2 - 60 → 120

3 - 80 → 200

4 - 100 → 300

5 - 150 → 450

6 - 300 → 750

7 - 375 → 1,125

8 - 525 → 1,650

9 - 600 → 2,250

10 - 750 → 3,000

11 - 900 → 3,900

12 - 1,000 → 4,900

13 - 1,100 → 6,000

14 - 1,500 → 7,500

15 - 1,500 → 9,000

16 - 1,500 → 10,500

17 - 1,500 → 12,000

18 - 1,500 → 13,500

19 - 1,500 → 15,000

20 - 2,000 → 17,000

21 - 2,000 → 19,000

22 - 3,500 → 22,500

23 - 3,500 → 26,000

24 - 4,000 → 30,000 ---This is in the top comment incase you probably don't feel like clicking a link ;)

26ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HankGunderson 11 10 6 4 3 3 2

Wait how can level two end at 120 but level three begins at 80?

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TheBryce 9 7 6 5 5

I was actually looking for that earlier!

Gives Virtual Hug

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZheGreatest 15 12 9 6 5

You're welcome :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bibeaults 22 9 7 6

Just an FYI to anyone reading who is scratching their head and wonder how this is helpful since you have no idea what your overall XP is. As far as I can tell if you are in this A/B group that has the mandatory coach and the missing progress bar AND you have no friends on Duolingo, then there is no way to figure out what your XP is. Not that I could find anyway. I started following a moderator for the language I am in to see if that would help and it does. I had no idea what a Leaderboard was. It tracks your progress against other people and shows your weekly, monthly and all time XP. And it keeps them straight PER LANGUAGE. :) The coach seems to be tracking my progress across languages which is not helpful.

Actually, I'm not sure the Leaderboard is per language. Oh well.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

A/B group that has the mandatory coach and the missing progress bar AND you have no friends on Duolingo, then there is no way to figure out what your XP is

Yes, you can. It's on your profile by the language icons.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bibeaults 22 9 7 6

Not sure how to post an image. If I go to the drop down by my username and select my profile, I see language icons on the right under my streak. They have the numbers for my levels inside them. No other information is there.

Hopefully that is just a bug for me and not others. I started following someone and can get it from my Leaderboard now though, so I am happy.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlmostExMonoglot 19 6 2 92

It's also in this table over at the Unofficial wiki. Someone mentioned that your total experience points were in your profile, however, I don't have the new coach feature so I can't confirm that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

The Coach feature is for half of those that have the new design, and I can confirm that total XP does show up on profiles.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bibeaults 22 9 7 6

Total XP is not on my profile.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

That would mean you are in Group B (old design), because the totals are there for Group A.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bibeaults 22 9 7 6

Ah, this is confusing. Well anyone who is in my boat, which I guess is Group B with coach, follow someone and you can find your XPs that way.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

I don't see how you have Coach but not the new design with the XP on the profiles..they must have divvied up the test groups differently this time around...

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

tinnmel 25 25 7 283

I have my account and an account for my kids. On my account, I have the progress bar, no coach, and the total XP show on my profile. On my kids account, they have the coach, no progress bar, and their total XP does not show up on their profile. They are not following anyone, so there is no leaderboard. The only time they can see their points is after a lesson, the progress bar will be displayed until they hit continue.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Goran12 22 8 2

Do you mean the week/month/total points of me and my friends, below the coach? This is quite good for those learning just one language, but lame for everyone else, since you can't see you totals per language.

I have the coach and I can't find any other place showing my XP total.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

moibii 20

I used to see my XP on my profile after coach showed up, but now I don't see it anymore. Now I open up my mobile app if I want to check my XP. (I seldom use the mobile app for studying.) 残念ですね。I don't see why the XP progress bar and daily goal couldn't coexist.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

106 Difference between 'de' and 'het'

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1458348>

Arthurva 25 23 13 12 11 8 7 6 4 102

I do not get the difference between 'de' and 'het' - when does one use 'de' and when does one use 'het'? Is there a rule that I do not understand or is it a matter of 'getting the feel' which to use?

(Ik had het liever in het Nederlands gevraagd maar dat werd te moeilijk- sorry)

Give Lingot

53 years ago

Leave a new comment

36 Comments

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

That's a very good question. :)

'Het' is used as an article for 'neutral(ly gendered) words and 'de' for either masculine or feminine words. There are a few rules which can help you remember which of the two is to be used, but there is a decent amount of exceptions as well:

~ About 65% of the words have the article 'de'

~ 'De' is always used for the plural, for professions and for people, for vegetables, fruits, trees and plants, names of mountains and rivers

~ 'De' is also used for the words ending with -ie,- ij, -heid, -teit,-a, -nis, -st, -schap, -de, -te, -iek, -ica, -theek, -iteit, -tuur, -stuur, -sis, -xis, -tis, -ade, -ide, -ode, -ude, -age, -ine, -se, -ea

~ 'Het' is always used for a diminutive and for words consisting of two syllables and starting with be-, ge-, ver-, ont-

~ 'Het' is always used for languages, names of metals, words ending with -isme, -ment and for words derived from verbs.

This is a link to a blog which explains the difference as well: <http://blogs.transparent.com/dutch/de-or-het-knowing-when-to-use-which/>.

37ReplyGive Lingot31•3 years ago

SaxyLady 25 10 9 1393

WOW thanks for this insight into tips for identifying noun gender. :) But I noticed you said "de" is used for people. Would "meisje" be an exception since everytime I've had to translate "the girl" it was "het meisje?"

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

louis.vang 25 21 19 17 15 13 11 10 7 7 7 7 5 5 5 4 4 4 3 3 2 2

the woman = de vrouw the girl = het meisje, because it is diminutive (verkleinwoord) When a word ends with -je or -tje its always 'het':

het meisje de vriend - het vriendje de jongen - het jongetje de school - het schooltje

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

JeroenAV 21 10 4 2

There is another exeption: the child = het kind

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JaneEmily 17 8

This is going to be so helpful for me :) Just started learning the difference between definite articles in the textbook I'm learning Dutch from, and they're a little vague about what rules apply to which article so this is a huge help! Written it down in my little learning notebook so that I can always easily refer back to it if I'm unsure:)

Thanks a bunch Lavinae! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

shangtsung123 3 2 2

Why is 'Het' used before meisje then? :/

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JeroenAV 21 10 4 2

Because, like louis.vang wrote above: "it is a diminutive (verkleinwoord). When a word ends with -je or -tje its always 'het'." That makes it an exception to the rule that says people always get 'de'.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Giubilator 17 6

Thanks for that post, but ... why should one translate 'het water' (I've found several translations like that)? Is that an exception or I'm wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Are you under the impression that there are precise rules for gender? That is not true. Gender is essentially arbitrary, and water happens to be a het word.

You must learn the gender of each noun separately. The rules described by Lavinae are just rules of thumb that make it easier for certain classes of nouns. None of them applies to water anyway, and even if one did, Lavinae has made it clear that there are plenty of exceptions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Giubilator 17 6

It's just what I'm writing johaquila ... btw thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GlenM 25 21 14 11 7 724

Dankie Lavinae, dit het my presies drie minute geneem om dit te leer. :) Soos u kan sien, ek ken Afrikaans taamlik goed. In geval u dit nie weet nie, is Afrikaans Suid-Afrikaanse Nederlands wat sy oorsprong gehad het in die dae van Jan van Riebeeck. Naby genoeg aan Flaams.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

YHamiri 6 6 3 37

Thank you very much this opened my mind way more than the closed nordic systems :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Heylok 6 2 11
Thanks for the tip!

0ReplyGive Lingot•yesterday

Jack.Elliot 25 25 25 25 21 13 10 10 9 9 8 5 3 2 2 1270
I have been meaning to ask this question but thought I would wait until I learned some more lessons. Lavinae has now given more than enough to digest and it is brilliant. I will have to print it up and put it on the wall.

Hungarian has now started and I did the first lesson but it is Dutch that is the fun language for me to do and learn

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

qaa2 17 13 10 4
Thanks Lavinae, I also had this question - it is good to see an explanation!

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

louis.vang 25 21 19 17 15 13 11 10 7 7 7 5 5 4 4 3 3 2 2
En opnieuw komt de vraag om het geslacht van een woord aan te duiden in de woordenlijsten... en eventueel in kleur in de zinnen.... Natuurlijk is dat voor het internationale forum en is slechts één van de vele wensen.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Arthurva 25 23 13 12 11 8 7 6 4 102
Dat is een goede idee.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

emak02 18 10 8 8 6 5 4 19
*een goed idee

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

M132T003C 23 19 19 18 17 16 14 12 12 10 10 9 9 9 8 8 6 6 6 3 3 2 2 1228
I've noticed that words that are noticeably similar to their German counterparts (I'd say "derived from German" but that may not be true in all cases) generally have the same gender between the two languages, that helps me to remember the genders of a few words.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Susande 17 13 12 11 240
Dutch and German have the same origin so one is not derived from the other (e.g. see the coloured table here http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Germanic_languages), but yes Dutch and German are quite closely related. So if you know a word in only one of the languages, it often is a good guess to try it in the other.

Indeed in quite some cases, gender is the same in both languages e.g. diminutives in Dutch and German are the same (always n). Also it may help in some other cases (especially from German to Dutch as German has both m and f, Dutch has them combined). But take care, it's not always the case (e.g. de auto, das Auto, het socialisme, der Sozialismus). I'm not sure to what extent the genders are equal.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

When the words are the same, the gender is usually the same as well. Though yes, there are exceptions that one needs to remember.

The main problem for me as a German is that very often the words are not the same. In most cases the Dutch word is a cognate of a German word that is pretty antiquated or means something slightly different. In other cases it is actually French or a cognate of an English word. The case when the Dutch word is exactly the same as the German word is sufficiently rare that I have trouble remembering them in many cases. (I can't think of a Dutch word and it doesn't occur to me that this might be because the German word does the job.)

I think words for 4-wheeled transport are somewhat illustrative. I will give them in the format "Dutch singular, plural = German singular, plural (English cognate)".

de wagen, de wagens = der Wagen, die Wagen (wagon)

de kar, de karren = der/die Karre(n), die Karren (car, cart)

het automobiel, de automobielen = das Automobil, die Automobile (automobile)

de auto, de auto's = das Auto, die Autos (auto)

First, you can see how similar the West Germanic languages really are. The cognates are very easy to recognise and mean basically the same things. German der/die maps to Dutch de, and German das maps to Dutch het. Everything maps to English the. German plural endings also seem to map to Dutch plural endings. Where the German plural has no extra ending or ends in -s, Dutch has an -s. Where the German plural ends in -n or -e, Dutch has -en.

The most common word for car today in Dutch/German is auto/Auto. This word also exists in English, though only in American English - possibly due to Dutch and German influence!

Auto is derived from automobile as an abbreviation. In English the issue of gender does not arise. Dutch seems to have chosen the most common gender, which is also the gender of the other related words. So it is de auto. German does not have a most common gender, and in German, the gender situation for the related words is not so clear. So German took the gender of the original word: das Automobil, hence das Auto. This is how languages diverge, though in this case it's only temporary because Dutch is clearly about to merge all genders.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Writingsuus 9 8 7 4 3

De and Het is one of the difficult parts of Dutch. That and the whole d/t/dt thing. Even Dutch people struggle with it ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Susande 17 13 12 11 240

I think (being Dutch with foreign friends with various levels of Dutch) de and het isn't the most difficult part. You just have to learn the gender of the words and the situations in which they affect other words (deze/dit, die/dat, inflection of adjectives), declension has a difficulty similar to French or Spanish if you ask me and is WAY easier than German for instance, but yes if you only know English I can imagine you struggle with this...as you will with lots of languages, at least I don't know any language that is as easy as English in this respect.

The d/t/dt thing in Dutch is horrible, you're totally right in saying Dutch people struggle with it. And I imagine that learning strong and irregular verb conjugations also is a big hurdle (they are common...and there are a lot of different ones). Another hard part is pronunciation and hearing the difference between "eu" "ui" "ij/ei" "au/ou", if Dutch learners are a bit off with their pronunciation of these, I found that it's hard for me to understand them. One positive thing about pronunciation: there's no need to worry about the "g" or "r" (hard g and rolling r). Pronouncing them differently than most Dutch do, only make you sound foreign and doesn't create any communication problem. Besides, there are big differences between native speakers as well, Flemish and many accents and dialects don't have the hard "g".

Another tricky thing might be the apparent chaos in word order and usage of tenses, there are many options to choose from, a lot of them are fine, but then there are some that just don't work. I'm glad Dutch is my mother tongue and I had to learn the English word order and tenses instead of the other way around. ;)

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

qaa2 17 13 10 4

Thanks - it gives me comfort to know that it is really fairly complicated - and not just me!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Me, I'm glad German is my mother tongue and I had to learn the English word order instead of the other way round. I guess it's just natural, but I still find it surprising how the word order in Dutch is almost always the totally bizarre one of my native language. It's so counterintuitive that a foreign language might do things so similarly, that when translating English to Dutch I often lose hearts because I forget to translate a sentence to German first in order to see what weirdness in word order to expect.

I guess the same applies to tenses, though I haven't seen much of them yet.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Susande 17 13 12 11 240

That's a clear bonus indeed, and you're right about the tenses "ik heb het geprobeerd" (ich habe es probiert), "ik zou het kunnen doen" (ich würde es können machen), "we gaan het doen" (wir gehen es machen), "dat zal gaan" (das werde gehen). Very similar in Dutch and German and different in English. Only "gaan" (gehen) is stretching it a bit too much probably, we use it in all cases where "to go" is used in English and also to form the future tense.

And there are more tricky situations where it's really helpful to know German when learning Dutch:

when to use "toch" -> when "doch" is used in German when to use "niet" or "geen" and in what position in the sentence -> same as "nicht" and "kein" in German any kind of vocabulary, just 'Dutchify' the German word, you have a good chance of either getting it (almost) right, saying something that people will understand or saying a bit old-fashioned word that people will also understand

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Thanks for that last point! I guessed it might be like that, but it's encouraging to have your confirmation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

royvdm 10 5 2 2

nope no one does btw im dutch hoi iedereen ik ben de coole jongen

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Haestings 11 9 7 6 4 2

I had the same question as Arthurva, glad to see it's been answered so well! Thanks, it helps a lot since I'm trying to reverse engineer the tree (I only speak English)!

It's really neat seeing the similarities between German (I've done a bit of the English>German tree on duolingo so I recognise a few words here and there) and sometimes English with a lot of the Dutch words, sometimes if it is a simple sentence with the right vocabulary used, I can read it without trouble, since it is so similar to English (or has a couple words very similar to German words I know). (ex. Arthurva's reply to louis.vang: Dat is een goede idee, I had no trouble understanding that without knowing Dutch).

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Susande 17 13 12 11 240

Good luck with that, it will take some time before the English>Dutch course becomes available.. I imagine you really need some help with the grammar in that case, here are 2 links that might help:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dutch_grammar

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dutch_orthography#Morphological_alternations

FYI "Dat is een goede idee" is not 100% correct, it should be "goed" instead of "goede". The adjective "goede" is used for masculine/feminine nouns (both definite "de" and indefinite "een") and for neuter nouns when definite: "het" (the same applies to all adjectives, e.g.: leuke, mooie, rode, interessante). For indefinite neuter nouns like the example there is no extra "e" in the adjective. So it is "een goed/leuk/mooi/rood/interessant idee"

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

That example is actually tricky because both the original French word idée and the corresponding German word Idee are feminine for all uses. But it's one of those Dutch words that change gender according to use. Both genders appear in dictionaries, sometimes without explanation.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Susande 17 13 12 11 240

You're right, but as you can see by my reaction, de idee is so uncommon that I as a native speaker perceive it as incorrect.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RileyTy0 3

I still don't get the rule, there are many words in the dutch language that don't end with je and still use het. For example, "Het kind."

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

The first rule of grammatical genders is: There are no rules. Dutch speakers use de with some words and het with others just like English speakers put -s at the end of most verbs to mark third person singular, but don't do that for some of the most important verbs. Just like English speakers form plurals with -s in some cases and in much more complicated ways for some of the most frequently used nouns (from the point of view of a farmer: child, sheep, ox, tooth, ...).

If it helps, think of common gender nouns as the regular ones and of neuter gender nouns as the irregular ones. There is no strict rule in English as to which nouns have (ir)regular plurals - because this is subject to change and our use of language is just a snapshot of a long, slow evolution. E.g., brethren was once the only correct plural of brother. Then, in a slow process, brothers gradually became the normal plural and brethren became an antiquated one used only in special situations. Soon it will be gone completely. In much the same way and for very similar reasons, there are no strict rules for grammatical gender.

However, there are statistical rules of the form: Nouns with certain properties usually have this or that gender. There is absolutely no such rule the other way round, i.e. there is absolutely no property shared by all (or even most) common gender nouns, or shared by all (or most) neuter gender nouns. The rule about diminutives is one of the few rules of this kind that have (almost) no exception: Diminutives are neuter gender. Period. Even if it's illogical and may appear impolite. But of course there are countless other reasons why a word might be neuter gender, including pure accident.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RileyTy0 3

Thanks! You really explained it well.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

royvdm 10 5 2 2

then you can use "kindje" if you want then remove "je"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

107 What's the difference between "manges" and "mange"?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/63355>

Lucy211 8 4 2

And between "boit" and "bois"?

Give Lingot

34 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

mikeybarnes 13 5 3 3 2

In French verbs are conjugated differently depending on whom the subject is. We do this for verbs in English too.

For example, in English, the verb 'to read' is conjugated as such;

I read

You read

He/She/It reads

We read

They read.

Notice how the verb changed from 'read' to 'reads' when the subject of the verb is he/she/it?

More obviously, think of the verb 'to be'. In French this is être. In English, it is conjugated as such;

I am

Your are

He/she/it is

We are

They are

Again, you wouldn't say "they is going out" or "I are going out", you'd say "they are going out" and "I am going out". So this is conjugation in a nut shell.

In French there are three different types of regular verbs. They all end in either -re, -er or -ir and the reason they are called regular verbs is that they are all conjugated following the same pattern.

Regular -re verbs (manger, penser, aimer) all conjugate the same way, regular -er verbs all conjugate the same way as do regular -ir verbs.

You just need to learn the verb conjugations for each of these three types of verbs, and for each subject.

Let's take an example from your question and conjugate the French verb for 'to eat', which is manger. (Note, manger ends in -er, and is therefore a -er verb).

Je mange = I eat

Tu manges = You eat

Il/elle/on mange = He/she/it eats

Nous mangeons = We eat

Vous mangez = You (formal) eat

Ils/elles mangent = He/she/they (plural) eat.

I know it can be scary at first, but honestly it's not all that bad. You'll get used to it by using duolingo, but if you want more practice just good 'French conjugation exercises' and go to town on them. The BBC has a very good sub-site for GCSE French, this page in particular might help you out;
<http://www.bbc.co.uk/schools/gcsebitesize/french/grammar/verbsf/presenttenserev1.shtml>

18ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

NatikaDeColores 6

Thank you, this is really helpful

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MaryamHussain 8 5

Thank you very much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

josh_sabate 2

Really really helpful

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Anish992496 5

that helped alot

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

108 "The cat is eating the mouse."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/411856>

Translation: Le chat mange la souris.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

61 Comments

dudeki 5 3

So how do you approach the gender issue in a sentence without any context? Isn't it a bit too harsh to expect someone to know the gender of a particular animal without prior knowledge?

25ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

camanokunz 13 2

This has nothing to do with the gender of the animal. It's the gender of the noun. Cat is a masculine noun, and mouse is a feminine noun. However, if you want to specify that the cat is feminine in French, the word would be "la chatte." Le chien becomes la chienne. So I suppose you have context :)

19ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NGHill 5

I think he's talking about the mouse. That was the only part of the sentence I didn't know, and when I hovered over "the" before "mouse" the first translation was "le," so I assumed it was the one that applied here. Of course, that was wrong.

5ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

KaraLily 15 8 6 6 4

I think you use the default le chat unless you know the cat is female. In this case you can use whichever gender you want.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

justin.tes 6

Still haven't heard an sufficient answer to your question.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LadyOra 22 12 9 5 838

Because many languages, French included, have grammatical genders for everything. How doesn't it confuse you even more that a book is a "he" and a dress is a "she"? It simply has to have a grammatical gender. Nobody is expected to know the gender of the individual animal: in fact, as KaraLily has said already, you are expected not to know and to use the default gender. You only change it if you, in fact, do know.

3ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Elitelman 22

Actually don't confuse this with things that have word for both genders, like humans and some animals such as cats, dogs or cows. Yes for those whenever not specified you assume it's the male, but this is not extendible to everything. For instance "table" is always feminine, so is "souris" and "gare". In fact, as mentioned in above comments, Nouns' gender is harder to figure out than animals' which was the point here.

3ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Obstructor 6 6 2

Hey look a sentence I would actually use! Good on you Duolingo.

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Benfoxgear 7 7 4

haha yeah so true

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

A_Baby_Kangaroo 10 7

hehehe... Did you guys see "The shark is eating the dolphin"?

10ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

AstroTheNomer 11 10 7 7 7 4 3 28

did you see "he is eating a whale"?

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

A_Baby_Kangaroo 10 7

=P There was also, "He lives in an apple" =P

16ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

bowser0001 7 3

And "He eats a spider"

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

torchic62 5

Lol i didn't see that one!

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

allhailbready 6

bear grills makes these lol

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

Kaley100 5

I saw that, 1_4M_M3

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kaley100 5

But I didn't see the apple one

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AgnesOnshus 11 6 2
i got "he eats a butterfly" once xD

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

UneJamKuqEZi 15 12 12 11 7 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2
Looks like Tom caught Jerry...

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lepkem 12 10 7 4
omg you love languages intensely

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

badcorvus 9 7 6 4
poor mouse :(

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jerrill 9
Why is souris feminine? Since it ends with a consonant (other than -ion or -son), it seems like it should be masculine.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fairlynxx 11 6 6 5 5 4 2
I don't understand it either.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SnowyLake 8
Because French doesn't need your logic ;P (and it's not like English is much better...)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

girly43 18 8
Um, wow. the mouse is being eaten.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EllaMarisol 9 8
Poor mouse!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dawson81702 4 3
Something is not eating an Apple for once.. XD

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NakajimaMegami 10 7 6 6 4
WHISKERS!! NOO!! D:

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pedroljesus 8
every mouse is feminine now? what?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Elitelman 22
It's not the mouse, the animal, that is feminine here, it's the word "souris"; Every noun in French has a gender.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ashlynxcx 11
You do NOT need to know the gender of the animals. Since you are given no context, it does not matter if you use the feminine or masculine version of cat and mouse.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BlueberrySkittle 12
I continue to use "le/la" instead of "un/une" and vice versa.. I've probably said this before too...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dolphincrazy 6
I believe you'll get better as you learn. Cheer up and smile!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eidetteing 7
how do you make a feminine noun (e.g. souris) into a masculine noun? and is there a general rule on how to "feminize" a masc. noun? only chienne and chatte are introduced

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ronCYA 6
"Le souris mâle"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Elitelman 22
Actually, "La souris male"

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

The_100th_Dog 11
Maybe that will be introduced later in French.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

John__Doe 19 12

And my last question is the cat and the mouse, we are talking about Tom and Jerry; the next second, we got this... DL I hate you

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lilyxing2014 9 3

There are two of the same answers on this thing and both of them are the right one

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Raquelftw1 11 7 6 6 5

Finally an animal who isn't eating an apple.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

The_100th_Dog 11

or orange

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mary.Shields 9 8

How lovely I'm sure x-(

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sierra9904 10

The boy is eating a mouse! Its not like I really need to know that

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Elitelman 22

Not the boy, but the cat

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eddie.x 15

lol

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eddie.x 15

its the answer

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bebexo22 8

Is this tom and jerry

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Roxybury 9 2
ikr

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

bebexo22 8
yo i got 47 lingots

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

AsmaButt1 11
I was right

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

talial332435 7
How do u know if a word is masculine or feminine?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

LadyOra 22 12 9 5 838
Basically, you have to learn it. You'll get to recognize some patterns - some endings are usually associated with a certain grammatical gender - but even there there can be exceptions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

DougyD 10
why la souris, could I not use une souris?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

oolonthe great 8 3
if you say "une souris" that will mean "the cat is eating A mouse" which is different from "the cat is eating THE mouse"

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fairlynxx 11 6 6 5 5 4 2
"La souris" = "the mouse" "Une souris" = "a mouse" Hope I helped! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mariaalexia 8
bella is braindead

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dejiah.cau 7 2

why not " le chat est mange la souris" ????? the cat "is" eating the mouse!!! GRRR

-5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

oolonthegreat 8 3

It just doesn't work like that :D If you want to say "the cat is eating the mouse" you can say "le chat mange la souris" or you can say "le chat est en train de manger la souris" (which is obviously more long and boring.) In French there is no exact counterpart of the English "Present Continuous" tense,they use only "Present Simple."

8ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ashlynxcx 11

This helped, thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

109 – 128 of 912

[accessed March 9, 2017]

109 What is the difference between "mit", "zu" and "bei"? They all seem to mean "with"
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/15291>

Hania 13 11 7 7

They all mean "with" in the following sentences : -"Die Großeltern sind bei der Familie." ; -"Die Beziehung zu dem Kind ist schlecht" -"Der Lehrer lernt mit dem Großvater". ==>How do I know which one to use?

Give Lingot

144 years ago

Leave a new comment

3 Comments

shu 20 19 10 9 9 8 7 2

"mit" is really the best translation for English "with": "mit" is used for sentences like "Ich lerne mit meinem Bruder".

"bei" doesn't have a direct translation in English, though if you speak French, it's equivalent to "chez". "Bei Johann" means "at Johann's", e.g. "Wir essen bei Johann" -- "We're eating at Johann's [house]". "Die Großeltern sind bei der Familie" gives a sense (to me) that the grandparents in question are visiting the family.

for the phrase "Die Beziehung zu dem Kind ist schlecht", it's a little trickier. "Beziehung" comes from the verb "beziehen", which means "to relate". When we speak of something relating in English, we would usually say "relating to that", rather than "relating with that". I think this is a case where the English word "relationship" takes the preposition "with", but the German word "Beziehung" takes "zu" (to).

I hope this helps!

63ReplyGive Lingot3•4 years ago

wataya 25 25 25 25 25 23 20 10 9 9 5 1159

what shu said. In addition to that: You should never learn prepositions out of context. You just can't translate them word by word. In every language there are verbs that force certain prepositions to be used. So whether 'with' is translated as 'mit', 'bei', depends strongly on the verb it is used with. I recommend to always learn new verbs along with the prepositions they usually go with. To make the perils of missing context obvious: If you just learn 'with = mit oder bei', you can't distinguish between 'schlafen bei' (to sleep at someone's place) and 'schlafen mit' (to have sexual intercourse with sb.).

53ReplyGive Lingot2•4 years ago

Jellywolf 16

I agree with shu and wataya that you need to look at the context for these prepositions. If it helps, I've always thought of "mit" as "being with", "bei" as "close by", and "zu" as "to".

9ReplyGive Lingot1•4 years ago

110 The passive voice in Italian

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2756480>

quindi quindi 14

There don't seem to be any exercises on the passive voice in Italian. I've looked into this a bit, and it seems a lot more complicated than in English (or French, from what I remember from school).

Don't know if Duolingo do requests, but here it goes!

Give Lingot1

112 years ago

Leave a new comment

15 Comments

mmseiple 23 13 12 12 3

The passive voice is when your subject receives the action of the verb. It is contrasted with the active voice, where the subject does the action. For example:

Active: The girl eats the ice cream. ("Girl" is the subject and does the action of eating.)

Passive: The ice cream is eaten by the girl. ("Ice cream" is the subject and receives the action of eating.)

The passive voice isn't used as much in Romance languages (at least the ones I've studied) as in English, so it tends to be one of the last topics presented in traditional textbooks. In Italian there are two passive forms, based on whether there is an agent (someone doing the action) in the sentence.

First you have the passive voice proper, constructed with "essere" or sometimes "venire." This is generally used when there is an agent. This is nowhere near as common as in English as the passive voice with "to be." It is formed in the following way:

PASSIVE SUBJECT (receiving the action of the verb) + ESSERE/VENIRE + PAST PARTICIPLE + DA + AGENT (person doing the action)

So the active sentence, "La ragazza mangia il gelato," becomes, "Il gelato è mangiato dalla ragazza."

Both the verb and the participle agree with the passive subject. So, "La ragazza mangia le torte," becomes, "Le torte sono mangiate dalla ragazza."

This can work in any tense by simply changing the tense of "essere" or "venire":

La ragazza ha mangiato il gelato. - Il gelato è stato mangiato dalla ragazza. (Note the double participle here. Both must agree with the passive subject.)

La ragazza mangerà il gelato. - Il gelato sarà mangiato dalla ragazza.

The other form is the passive "si" (si passivante). This is more common than the passive with "essere" or "venire," and is used when there is no agent. If there is an agent in the sentence, this form cannot be used. The general form is:

SI + VERB (third person singular or plural, agreeing with the passive subject) + PASSIVE SUBJECT

For example: Si vende il latte qui, or Si vendono i libri. Sometimes the subject can be placed before the verb: Il latte si vende qui.

This can also be used in any verb tense:

Nel Ottocento, si vendeva il latte qui.

L'anno prossimo si venderà il latte qui.

14ReplyGive Lingot15•2 years ago

ferrimed 15 9 7 3

Yes, you are right. In the romance languages isn't of much use. And I don't think it is very useful in real life when you are learning a foreign language if you pretend to communicate as a first goal. I know a few people who just gave up learning English as a result of those teachers who thought that mastering the passive voice was so important, when they were just beginning to be able to communicate with simple sentences.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

itastudent 15 14 10 9 1

The funny thing is that I actually learned that passive is less used in English than in Italian. Lol.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mmseiple 23 13 12 12 3

Really? I've always heard the opposite. In my own personal observations, the passive voice with the verb "to be" and the participle is used much more often in English in speech, so that might be where that statement comes from. This structure is usually one of the last things taught in Spanish/Italian classes here in the US. The passive "si" is very common in Italian, and the corresponding structure is in Spanish as well, so I'm not sure how that figures in. In Spanish classes at least it's taught much earlier.

In formal writing, it's exactly the opposite. In English we're taught to avoid passive forms, but in academic writing in Romance languages they're encouraged (again, in my experience, which doesn't extend to them all). This drives my poor students in Spanish composition classes crazy, haha. (And me as well when I had to transition from writing all of my papers in Spanish to writing my dissertation in English.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

itastudent 15 14 10 9 1

Maybe I read something about writing in English, that's why I remembered that. I didn't really notice in which language it's more frequent, although the "si" form in Italian actually eliminates the need to use the passive form in Italian in many situations (but actually the "si" form is already a passive form).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mmseiple 23 13 12 12 3

Yeah, I would group the two together. I'm not sure that there's a huge difference in usage if the "si" form is included, despite what the grammar books say. The difference in the "to be + participle" form, though, is noticeable. Beginning language students coming from English tend to overuse these forms when they write compositions, and it sounds unnatural. At least in my experience with my own students (in Spanish, where the usage is pretty similar to Italian).

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

yogagirl777 25 18 14 13 12 5

La dignità non si può comprare.

Thank you thank you! I've been trying to figure this one out for a week.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FrankieValli 9

Thank-you so much! It finally makes sense now :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

quindiquindi 14

Hi everyone, thanks for your comments. I agree that the passive is used less than in English. However, working in Italy I hear the "si + verb" construction a lot, so it seems strange that Duolingo completely ignores this. Also, the idea that the passive voice could be constructed with "venire" was a complete surprise to me! Finally, even if the passive voice is used less in English, it might be useful to see how the passive voice in English might be best translated into Italian, even if the most natural translation uses the active voice.

I want to stress, however, that I don't wish to be critical of Duolingo, which is generally awesome :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

quindiquindi 14

Also, sometimes I feel that "si+verb" is best translated into English by the pronoun "one". E.g.

"si fa"-> "one makes" or "one does". (As well as the passive translation "it is done")

Do people agree with this? Or am I just confusing the thread!?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mmseiple 23 13 12 12 3

Duolingo doesn't completely ignore the passive/impersonal "si" construction, as it does appear in some of the lessons. It just isn't given its own section. It could certainly be emphasized more, though.

As for it being translated as "one," yes, this is true, especially because there is some overlap between this structure and the impersonal "si." I was debating on whether to include the impersonal here, but it probably should be mentioned, so I'll talk about it here.

The impersonal "si" (si impersonale) is formed much like the passive, but it does not have a direct object/passive subject attached to the verb. Thus your structure is the following:

SI + VERB (third person singular)

For example: Si mangia bene qui.

This form is a little strange in that if it has an adjective, the adjective is masculine plural, despite the fact that the verb is singular: Quando si è giovani, si studia molto.

With a reflexive verb, "ci" is added to avoid confusion, for example:

Ci si veste prima di fare colazione.

It's not always easy to tell these apart, and you'll find that some grammar explanations don't make any distinction at all.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

robertOn 24 14 4 4 42

A good summary. When reading Italian texts (as I am starting to do) I do see a lot of the "si + verb" construction. Reading these comments has just made me realise that it isn't so odd, it is similar to the passive commonly used in English. So regardless of anything else I've already learnt something actually useful in this thread!

(And I agree that the description by @mmseiple is very good, it was written after my question)

(And finally, nicely put about Duolingo. It is awesome and it's good to make a distinction between things that could be better and criticism of things that are actually wrong).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RB2205 11 9

Just a heads-up that "venire" can only be used in the passive voice in non-compound tenses (ie, passato prossimo or the trapassato prossimo/remoto).

"Andare" can also be used in the passive tense to express an obligation though, again, only in non-compound tenses, for example:

Il prosecco va bevuto fresco - Prosecco should be drunk cold

L'aspirina va presa a stomaco pieno - Aspirin should be taken on a full stomach

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

robertOn 24 14 4 4 42

Can you (or anyone) else say a little more about what the passive voice is? I don't know what I am missing yet...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

quindiquindi 14

I think the description by mmseiple on this thread is very good...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

111 "The girls read a newspaper."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/689894>

Translation: Les filles lisent un journal.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

35 Comments

MichiruEll 13

Because in french the plural determinant do not have a gender. "The" (plural) is always "les". Plural "a" (which does not exist in English) is always "des". Hope this helped.

31ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

XFnG 4

Merci ,

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sins.devil 3

It does. Thanx. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

miasaysciao 10

"Lisont" was actually not a typo; I was just dead wrong. holds onto 2nd heart for dear life

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dsjduo 4 3

Funny! :-D

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

q8ieng 8

In this voice thing it says "Les filles lisent un journal" without pronouncing the "t" at the end of "lisent"

BUT, in google translator it does!

Which is the correct version?

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pearlworld 9 7

The proper pronunciation is "leez". The "nt" is silent.

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

q8ieng 8
Merci beaucoup

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DiproS 4
Isn't this one of those optional liaisons?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dandarprox 7 4
Why is "Les filles" and no "Las filles" ,It's feminine plural doesn't it?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gal.verlic 6 6
There is no Las in french there is only les

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mohamed1327 13 5 3 3
You're confusing Spanish with French. "Las" as plural for "the" only exists in Spanish.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Oldnewkevin 12 6 6 3
Why is "les jeunes filles" not acceptable for girls? Is my French somewhat dated or too textbook?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dsjduo 4 3
"Les filles jeunes" would be French for the YOUNG girls. The question only asked for the girls.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Potluckvadveld 8 6
Could I possibly put 'Elles' as referring to the girls rather than 'Les filles'? If not, why?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NatPat 11
Elles means they, but feminine. It could be referring to any group of feminine objects, not just girls.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

grazieas 5
Why can't I write "les filles lisent le journal"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

KillerBunny13 8 4

That would be saying that they read "the" journal/newspaper, and not "a" journal/newspaper.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

grazieas 5

Merci!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

taya10101 9 5

I wrote 'lison' instead.. I can't remember what the difference was :/ and when do I use 'lis'? or did i just make that up?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dukla18 14 10

Je lis, tu lis, il/elle lit. Nous lisons, vous lisez, ils/elles lisent. So your 'lison' comes from "we read/we are reading" and is misspelt :)

For all beginners, in this case of this verb you are even lucky the form ils lisent [il leez] has a pronunciation difference from singular form il lis [il li]. There are verbs like travailler=to work, where il travaille (he works) has the same pronunciation as ils travaillent (they work) [il trava'y]-not sure how to spell pronunciation though, not a native speaker (of either french or english). But you will all figure out, don't lose hope and work hard. French is very nice both as a language and as kissing respectively :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AliceHadley 8 2

I do not understand why it is un they are females shouldn't it be une?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dannii613 4

Un is for journal

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

qafroz 9

When do i use lisons and lisent

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dukla18 14 10

Nous lisons = we read Vous lisez = you (plural/formal) read Ils lisent = they read

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

I couldn't find the verb of "lisent". Pls help! Is it "livre"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dannii613 4

Use an online " becherelle" it is ment to conjugate verbs.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

faizasultana 6 5

it is lire

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hello_eyeball 14 7

When are u supposed to use the other words for read?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RichardPer935827 5

This many versions of read.... No wonder most people stick to English lol.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dunner13 5

I thought you would have to use "une" instead of "un" when talking about girls? Or am i wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JhilPatel1

it is wrong:(((

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Conqueror Elmo 16 2

[deleted]

-1Give Lingot•3 years ago

dukla18 14 10

Les filles boivent des journaux. Is that the sentence you got?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jacob Beecher 5

who caress ss

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

112 What's the difference between meu, meus and minha?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/197766>

RJMCE1 18 14 7 2 366

What's the difference between meu, meus and minha? Also, how do you make different form of the verb 'to have' (it seems to be irregular to all the others)?

Give Lingot

54 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

erudis 25 14 10 4 1347

Meu = My (singular masculine)

Meus = My (plural masculine)

Minha = My (singular feminine)

Minhas = My (plural feminine)

"Ter" is not the only irregular verb in Portuguese, but you can see its conjugation here:

<http://www.conjuga-me.net/verbo-ter>

17ReplyGive Lingot1•4 years ago

Vilermont 10 5

Perfect answer.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Gebunko 14 8 6 3 3

I see your streak, how long have you been doing Duolingo?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

erudis 25 14 10 4 1347

About a year and a half I think, almost right after it launched. Though I was on and off for the first five months or so.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Nidashahzadi 8 6 2

thanks very good answer i think i dont need to search about this anymore

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

113 "This guy does not play in the same league as you, believe me!"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7469051>

Translation: Ce type ne t'arrive pas à la cheville, crois-moi !

01 year ago

Leave a new comment

70 Comments

movcharov 9 8 6

This idiom was INTRODUCED to me during the TEST.... NEVER before.... How bad is that!?!

52ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mere_des_chats 20

Not bad at all. Learning isn't always by first being spoon-fed answers. Ask that infant learning to speak how many of the new words he hears were introduced to him before. Organic learning means learning from mistakes. And sometimes that is the most effective way to master things.

19ReplyGive Lingot10•12 months ago

Leamonde 11 2

I mean, sure, but I can understand being taken aback when you're told that the test will be with words you've already learned, and then it throws something at you with 90% being new vocabulary.

15ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Idioms and proverbs are optional here. The sentences are not related to the usual discipline of showing only words you have already learned and you have not learned all grammar yet, by far. This is why I do not recommend to take these optional skills before all basics have been digested. At level 6, it is probably too early, unless you do it slowly and with external resources to help.

4ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Leamonde 11 2

I appreciate your concern and have been doing just as you've suggested for a while now. Language learning isn't anything new to me, and I was just offering an explanation for movcharov's indignation. I understand why you wouldn't recommend it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

TheTastyWord 14

Exactly! For me, half the fun when getting a new phrase (especially an idiom like this one) is trying to figure out, from the literal meaning, what the equivalent idiomatic expression can be in English (and Spanish, since it's one of my languages). :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Lauranut 13 9 8

But there is no way you could figure out the answer here if you didn't already know it. I translated the phrase literally and wasn't even close.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

mere_des_chats 20

That was precisely my point. You don't always learn by figuring the answer out. Sometimes you learn by getting an exercise completely wrong, and that can actually be a blessing in disguise because you might retain it better.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Romancier 16

Am I missing something on Duolingo!? Is there a tutorial for each section? I find a good number of sections contain only tests (which is fine, I do learn from test taking) as in there isn't an instructional lesson given. Very curious if I'm not seeing a button somewhere.

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

mere_des_chats 20

It took me a long time to know there were "lessons" too. At the start of every section of the tree, before you begin the exercises, is an introduction to that section with some information that will help you with the exercises. It is under the heading "Tips & Notes". You need to be on a PC or using the browser and then scroll down to see it. Here's an example:

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/fr/Basics-1>

3ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

There's also currently an A/B test for removing them, so if you're one of the unlucky people who doesn't have them you might need to create another account to get them.

6ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

ripcurlgirl 25 25 4 4 3 4 18

That's insanity. This website would be useless without them.

5ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

I know.... Fortunately they seem to have ended it now and decided to keep them.

4Give Lingot•9 months ago

JacquiKennedy 22 2

Please what is an A/B test?

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

Basically, you have two groups, A and B. A is the control group, where everything is normal. B is the test group. Some condition is changed for group B. The difference in behaviour, results, whatever, between the two groups is used to decide what to do with whatever was being tested. If you want a bit more detail than that, this page might help you. :-)

5Give Lingot•11 months ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

It might be that that lesson doesn't have Tips and Notes yet. Not all of them do. But you can try external resources if there's something you don't understand, or you can always ask on the forum. About setting up a new account, you can only have one account with the same email address, you would need to create another, though you could set it up to forward to your current one.

4Give Lingot•11 months ago

JacquiKennedy 22 2

thank you. I used to have Tips and Notes and now I don't, say for the pluperfect. If I try to set up a new account it says it already exists. My earlier lessons did have tips and notes. Is there anyway to get this back. I must be in the test group.

3Give Lingot•11 months ago

GrahamTaylor1 15

I have lessons (Tips and Notes) on my PC but not my tablet.

3ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

5clothilde7 25 9 9

Good that you mention it, Graham! Two of us are using Duo in our home before traveling. We each use a different medium, pc, and smart phone. There are fewer tips and helps on the smart phone; we figured it had to do with the size of the screen.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

JanHearne 25 320

I have come to the decision that there are certain things I will never say in French. This is one of them, along with "Is it hot in here, or is it just you?"

24ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Madame-patate 13 11 10 1

Pfuahahaha the second sentence made my day !

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JanHearne 25 320

It is an actual Duolingo sentence you find under Flirting. I laughed so hard when I saw it. There is no point in my life I would have used that. I'm glad it made your day. It had a similar effect on mine.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

omgrog 14 14

How do you get to that idiom from something like "this guy does not reach your ankle" ? It's very weird

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Deloraen 15 15 15 10 9

It's idiomatic :) When you say in french that somebody isn't reaching somebody else's ankle, it means that this somebody is waaaaaaay less beautiful/clever/nice/whatever than that somebody else :)

17ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

omgrog 14 14

Yes I get that, but when you say "He's out of your league" you can mean it in both positive and negative term, eg: either you are way better than him or he's far better than you. It depends on the context. In this sentence the meaning looks to me as if it will always be "you are better than him".

So how would you get the negative meaning using the same idiom? Is it not possible?

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Deloraen 15 15 15 10 9

Ok, got it.Indeed, here it will always mean that you're the best one. If you want to say that he is the best one, you would simply invert: "tu ne lui arrives pas à la cheville".

22ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

omgrog 14 14

Fine enough, thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Neco_Coneco 22 21 16 16 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 5 5 4 4 3 44

Clever! <3

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Romancier 16

Native English speaker here. "He's out of your league" is only used when the "he" is superior. To refer to the "he" as being inferior, you'd say, "he's not in your league." There is no deviation from this. "Out of" strictly indicates higher location in this expression.

11ReplyGive Lingot1•11 months ago

mere_des_chats 20

"Out of your league" means "way above you; too good/expense/advanced for you; way better than you". It does not ever mean something is beneath you.

4ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

TheTastyWord 14

In Spanish: ne pas arriver à la cheville de quelqu'un = no llegarle ni a los tobillos (a alguien)

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

5clothilde7 25 9 9

Interesante, no?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Antonsa 22 7 6 12

"This guy does not measure up to you" is the closest I can get to making sense of this phrase in English. The phrase "not playing in the same league" is generally reserved for sports or big business.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

samer.sati 20

'You're way too good for him/her' Or 'You're out of his league' Or 'You deserve much better'

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nancythesinger 18

could someone write this as a word for word translation to make it easier to write out?

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GScottOliver 23 21 19 9 577

Transliterating the French into English, we get "This guy does not reach the ankle [on you], believe me."

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MaurDL 15 12 8

The literal translation of the English is "Ce gars ne joue pas dans la même ligue que toi, crois-moi."

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lorcy7901 17 14 6

I don't understand, why is there a t' before arrive

2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

"la cheville" is a body part.

When it comes to body parts, instead of saying "arrive à ta cheville", the French use an indirect pronoun and change the possessive for a definite article: "t'arrive à la cheville".

Therefore, "t'" stands for "te" = "to you" in this case.

6ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

MaurDL 15 12 8

Hey Sitesurf, could you explain the origins of this saying in French? How does "this does not happen to you at the ankle" come to mean someone not being your equal?

Merci.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

It is not about "happening", but "reaching" the ankle line. In other words, the guy is very small.

3ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

MaurDL 15 12 8

Ooooh, okay, that makes sense. Merci beaucoup!

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Colendro 15

Please, please, pleaaaaase, give people a hint for gender-specific mistakes before you mark a tryout as wrong... Just a little icon that appears to say "mind the genders" or something...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

inferior 18 2 4

Just for fun_ Google translates it as :This does not happen to you in the ankle, believe me! LOL!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

NotJulie 18 17 3

Why is it wrong to use the "vous" form here? as in ... "Ce type ne t'arrive pas à la cheville, croyez-moi"!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

inferior 18 2 4

Because you have first used Tu form in the sentence with "...t'arrive..." (a contraction of TU form with the verb starting from a vowel). Had you written "....ne vous arrive..." your translation would have been correct. I hope it is helpful.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NotJulie 18 17 3

Ah, ... oui! Of course, and thanks. It's so easy to miss the obvious when learning a new language!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Daleswords 23 19 12 332

What about "Cet type ne vous arrive pas à la cheville, croyez-moi !". This seems to be exactly what you're describing, but was marked wrong. any ideas?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

mere_des_chats 20

You never use cet before a masculine noun that does not start with a vowel.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

SMNJacque 12 7 2 2

;-. Disregarding that, was it wrong to use the "vous" form in this idiom, or does it have to be the informal "tu" for "you"?

I got this wrong by choosing to use the "vous" form, as "Ce type ne vous arrive pas à la cheville, croyez-moi !"

Is it the "arrive" part? To my understanding, that verb is tied with the noun "ce type."

The only difference was switching out "t'arrive" and "crois," so I don't understand what the problem is.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

"Ce type ne vous arrive pas à la cheville, croyez-moi" is correct and accepted.

Was it an MCQ, where 3 options were offered?

0Give Lingot•2 months ago

SMNJacque 12 7 2 2

I think it was the MCQ... I might be wrong because I just realized on another MCQ, I misread "chevaux" for cheveux."

0Give Lingot•2 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

These MCQs can be extremely deceptive because we tend to make a quick choice and thereby miss tricky spelling errors.

0Give Lingot•2 months ago

NedDetroit 19 17 15

Why is "Ce type ne t'arrive pas à la cheville, crois moi!" marked wrong? Is the trait d'union absolutely critical? If so, why? I don't recall any explanation?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pamtime22 16 3

Idioms are the hardest to learn for me. I need to make little notes and tape them up everywhere! Lol!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jbrown19203 22 12 2

I thought cet preceded a noun and ce a verb. Please can you clarify the rule for me. Thank you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

mere_des_chats 20

There are two kinds of ce: the demonstrative adjective that precedes masculine singular nouns and the demonstrative pronoun that stands in the place of a noun and can mean "this", "that" or "it" if followed by est or "these", "those" or "they" if followed by sont:

Ce chapeau est beau = this/that hat is beautiful

In this^ sentence, ce functions as an adjective.

C'est un beau chapeau = this/that/it is a beautiful hat

Ce sont de beaux chapeaux = these/those/they are beautiful hats

In these^ two sentences, ce functions as a demonstrative pronoun.

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

JacquiKennedy 22 2

Thank you MDC for demonstrating the grammar. In addition is it correct that "cet" is the pronoun used before a masculine noun beginning with a vowel?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

mere_des_chats 20

Yes, that is correct: cet is, indeed, used before a masculine noun beginning with a vowel.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

jbrown19203 22 12 2

Thank you, at the time I had forgotten this and thought that cet was for all masculine nouns.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

PierreGaud1 21 16 11

The shorter English version is "He's not in your league."

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Derek424717 16 16 7 7 68

why can't I have "Ce type ne joue pas dans la même cour comme tu, crois-moi."? "comme tu" was marked incorrect...

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

mere_des_chats 20

First of all, this is an idiomatic expression so I don't think you can substitute words like you have. Besides "league" does not mean the same thing as "courtyard" so even if you could substitute words, you have changed the sentence. Second, it would be "comme toi". You always use the stressed pronoun after a preposition.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

lisa440647 9

So hard, had to copy onto paper!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

flo243030 11 10 8 7 2

Does this English idiom mean that "you" are far better ? Is it possible that the guy is far better? In French you can say "vous ne jouez pas dans la même catégorie" which doesn't imply that one or another is better, but that there's such a huge difference you can't even compare.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

TaraPratt2 13 18

If you're doing this through the smartphone app, try it on your computer. It makes a world of difference.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

MaryLouise675919 22 10 7 3 45

not sure my translation should be accepted should ligue be accepted?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

AIA7KI 20 15 10 9 2 78

I felt like that "believe me" at the end was coming from President Trump. Now I won't forget it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Eve130371 9 5

This one has taken me so long to memorize. Anyone have any suggestions?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

DebbieR7 11 8

Took a wild guess and was right! Phew

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

114 I can't access my account or reset my password!

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204738034-I-can-t-access-my-account-or-reset-my-password->

WARNING: Recently, there have been two issues that have locked people out of their accounts:

a) The "too many requests" issue usually appears when you are using unendorsed userscripts. Try deactivating them or accessing your account from a different browser.

b) If you join a Duolingo classroom, your teacher can access and modify all your account information. Please do not join a classroom of a person you do not know, and check with people you do know if they are indeed inviting you to a classroom, or if they are being impersonated. Duolingo cannot take responsibility for changes made to your account if you join a classroom and lose progress. If you know of someone who is abusing their teacher status, please send detailed information (who invited you, the name of the classroom, their username, links and screenshots) to our abuse channel. We will take action on users found abusing the teacher privileges maliciously.

If the above cases do not apply, keep reading:

If you forgot your password or cannot reset it—possibly because you are not receiving Duolingo emails—please follow these steps:

0. Before you start, if you are having loading errors or random slowness, please check the article "Is Duolingo down right now?" to see if we are experiencing server issues.

1. Try to login to Duolingo.com, select "Forgot password." We will send you an email with instructions to the address associated to your account. (This will be the email you used when you first signed up. If you signed up via Google or Facebook, the email will be sent to the email address associated to that account.)

2. If you did not receive an email, check your email's spam folder to see if the message is there. Make sure you don't have Duolingo marked as spam!

Please note: if your account was created with an incorrect or invalid email, we will not be able to recover your password. You will need to create a new account with a valid email address.

3. If you have tried all of the above and something seems to be blocking Duolingo emails, send us a bug report (make sure you select "I cannot access my account" from the drop-down menu). We can then try to clear blocks that may exist on our end.

115 What's the difference between euer, ihr, and dein?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/41500>

DanishFlipper 13 5 2

I've getting a little confused. :/

Give Lingot

44 years ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

Infourme 15 10

euer can mean yours (plural) as in "this is your (=y'all's ^^) car" = "das ist euer auto". euer is the possessive pronoun for the second person plural (when you talk to a group of people and say to them that they have such and such, then you'd use euer).

ihr has several meanings. the most important one is: you (informal plural, and outdated formal singular (nowadays formal singular is "Sie")). ihr basically means y'all. it can also be the female singular possessive pronoun as in "her house" = "ihr haus" dein is informal singular possessive, as in "your house" = "dein haus".

hope that's not too confusing

9ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

joshkim88 17 4

But there's also deine and ihre?? can someone help with that?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ahmedwm2 14 2

that depends on the noun coming after the possessive pronoun. If it's feminine then it's "ihre" or "deine" and if it's masculine then it's "Ihr" or "dein"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Chuczek 6

dein - your ihr - her euer - your (plural)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Kelvin277452 9 12

Ihr actually has four meanings Ihr:(formal) your Ihr: you(plural), hers , theirs

<http://www.fluentu.com/german/blog/german-ihr/>

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 days ago

DanishFlipper 13 5 2

Thank you very much. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Kelvin277452 9 12

<http://www.fluentu.com/german/blog/german-ihr/>

Ihr: (formal) your ihr: you (plural), hers, theirs

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 days ago

Kelvin277452 9 12

<http://blogs.transparent.com/german/mein-dein-sein-ihr-etc-german-possessive-pronouns-in-the-nominative-case/>

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 days ago

116 "Look out the window."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/893511>

Translation: Mira por la ventana.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

9 Comments

lesliewilman 25 25 25 16 11 10 8 2 68

"Out of the window" is more usual in British English". Or "through the window", "in at the window" if you're looking in. I've never heard "out the window" except in American films or TV.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

zwalt00 23 10 5

"Look out the window" and "look through the window" are the most common ways to say it in America.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lesliewilman 25 25 25 16 11 10 8 2 68

It could get complicated, as I suspect "por" would be used if I stood outside the house and said, "Mira por la ventana," to see if there was anyone inside. "Look in the window" would suggest a shop window, but the Spanish would be "el escaparate" or "la vitrina".

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gjdenheijer 25 4 1055

How can "Mira por la ventana." be correct? It should really be "mire", I'd say.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Aljoja 25 8 500

Mira is used for tú in affirmative commands and mire is used for usted.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

steck11 13

How can mira por la ventana be correct, and miran por la ventana not be?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

"Mira" is the informal command and would be used only with "tú". "Miran" would be used for "they" or "you" plural and is not a command. "Miran por la ventana." means "They look out the window". If you want to make it a command you would have to use "Miren".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

steck11 13

Thank you for this explanation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

De nada. :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

117 What are the main differences between standard and Swiss German?
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8362039>

melanieislegend 10 7

My three closest friends are german and swiss. I'm learning standard german but I'd like to know if swiss german is dramatically different or if I'd be able to understand and communicate with him to a reasonable degree.

Give Lingot

71 year ago

Leave a new comment

13 Comments

SimoneBa 15 13 9 97

All Swiss Germans understand Standard German (Hochdeutsch) and most speak it, though with a Swiss accent, of course. Once they use their dialect, you will not understand much (if anything at all), even if you're a native German speaker like me. And every town/valley's dialect is different.

Anyway, you should not have any trouble communicating with them in Hochdeutsch. They can teach you some fun Swiss German expressions and words :)

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tnel1 13 12 11 10 6

May I ask, when Germans greet each other do they use "zusammen" or "miteinand" after "Hallo" like the Swiss do with "Grüezi zusammen" or "Grüezi miteinand"? I really like that structure - the "zusammen" and "miteinand" - they feel like "little grammatical hugs" that bring the multiple people you are addressing together, but maybe that is just my BIG imagination. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pseudocreobotra 14 6 6 6 5

It's not uncommon to use "Hallo zusammen!" or "Hallo miteinander!" if you address a group in a colloquial setting =)

6ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

tnel1 13 12 11 10 6

Oh thanks. I was just wondering because the German person I was hanging out with last weekend told me the opposite - that German's don't tend to do that like the Swiss do (and he's German), but I wasn't so sure. Maybe he mean something else.....hmmmm. Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SimoneBa 15 13 9 97

You might like this: <https://lovinglanguage.wordpress.com/2014/07/05/i-love-schwyzertuutsch-lessons-on-learning-a-minority-dialect/>

and this

<https://lovinglanguage.wordpress.com/2014/06/28/schwyzertuutsch-ech-ha-di-garn-will-the-swiss-allow-me-to-love-their-language/>

4ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

tnel1 13 12 11 10 6

Oh thanks very much for those links! Very insightful! :)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

pseudocreobotra 14 6 6 6 5

Hmm... Maybe it depends on the region and personal preferences? It's not like everyone does it all the time but I use it occasionally and I am pretty sure that I also encountered other Germans who use it! Especially when there are too many persons to greet each one individually (like a class or a chat room).

Even as a native German, you usually only know a tiny share of everything that can be considered German. There are so many different mentalities and subcultures and language usage reflects this ^^

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

tnel1 13 12 11 10 6

Good points! :) Although this person is German he has a preference for Switzerland, though not necessarily the language. :) I love using all the Swiss greetings and it's always tricky, but fun, have to change it all up for trips to Southern Germany.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

pseudocreobotra 14 6 6 6 5

The Swiss variety of German definitely has its charm (well, most German varieties are interesting to me!).

Did you also see this "quiz" posted by sakasiru in your Martin Luther discussion?

<http://www.spiegel.de/wissenschaft/mensch/dialekte-quiz-wo-spricht-man-so-wie-sie-a-1030362.html> It's fascinating how they can guess your location by just the words you use. Obviously it doesn't work as nice for non-native speakers but it's still fun to look at all these different expressions for the same simple things.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

smilljas 25 21 21 13 3 53

I made that quiz and I was told in the end that I come from a place I have never heard of 200 km away from the place where I really grew up... ^^

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

pseudocreobotra 14 6 6 6 5

Well, it depends whether they actually speak Swiss German (which is a group of Alemannic dialects) or Swiss Standard German (which is one of the official languages of Switzerland and). I'll assume that you actually meant Swiss Standard German.

Able to understand and communicate... Definitely! Think of it a bit like British and American English or European and Mexican Spanish... Or European and Canadian French... It's different, yes, but people usually still understand each other unless they deliberately try to avoid any common ground and use the heaviest accent that they can produce ;)

Anyway, almost no-one in Germany truly speaks Standard German either. But it's the common ground that everyone understands even when they use a dialect themselves.

The spelling is a bit different and there are a few other words... Grammar is mostly the same though. The pronunciation might appear to be a bit weird compared to Standard German but you'll get used to it in no time. And when you encounter words unique to Swiss German... Just ask for an explanation =)

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tnel1 13 12 11 10 6

How far along are you with German? If they don't mind, it might be fun to ask your friends if they can speak to you in each of the languages and then you could hear the difference. For me Swiss German swings a bit more in it's sound and the diminutives they add at the end of some words give it a certain sweetness. The greetings the Swiss use (which is the most Swiss I usually hear) are also different than other areas. I am in Switzerland, but the amount of Standard German classes they offer far surpasses the number of Swiss German classes. Within Swiss German there are lots of dialects that reflect the various communities in the regions here. I have been in situations where I can understand a little, but perhaps they are just speaking Standard German and the accent is still there. I have been in other situations where it is totally impossible to understand. I only have a couple of years of German so far though. But most of the Germans I know say they can't really understand it and it's even a bit odd for their ears. One big difference is there is no preterite indicative, but there is more: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Swiss_German

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

thwain 22 17 9 4 4 25

I like the following site: <http://www.eldrid.ch/swgerman.htm> .

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

118 Completed the French tree in 60 days

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8215155>

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

I set a goal to go around Duolingo's French world in 60 days. I didn't test out and didn't "cheat" but I did learn French as a child and have studied it twice in (expensive) Paris language schools as an adult.

I'd like to thank Duolingo and especially @Sitesurf who was basically my source for French grammar throughout the course. I'm following other French resources on my Twitter at:

@adamlgring @AdamLGRing (same id as DuoLingo)

Here are the four questions I wanted answered, when I started out, from people who had completed the French tree. All IMO:

What will Duo teach you? (best first)

To read, write, spell, and translate French <-> English.

Most of the active vocab and most of the French sentence constructions.

Duo automatically reteaches you words you haven't fully learned (a huge time saver over other methods).

Grammar depending on how much you read on the website.

To listen to French and discern words/phrases that sound similar.

A good start to speaking French (if you use the mic).
Pronunciation not so much and oral conversations not at all.
Duo should be a major part of your free French language learning mix.
Advice for those starting Duo:
Strengthen skills, always, and don't cheat - keep that tree gold - it makes everything easier.
Supplement Duo, change all device languages to French, and do all your hobbies in French (eg watch French films with English subs).
There is often a clever reason Duo does things in a certain way - don't fight it!
Avoid the overly popular documents in "Immersion" and ignore when someone edits your translation until you are on translation tier 4.

List of my most efficient/useful resources to complement Duolingo:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=d0yGdNEWdn0#t=345> - must watch, how to learn language efficiently, with science, from a guy who is not trying to sell you anything :)

BASICS . . . drill basics like these until they're second nature

<http://www.omniglot.com/writing/french.htm> - alphabet

<http://www.fourmilab.ch/francais/gender.html> - memorise gender endings

<http://www.laits.utexas.edu/fi/vp> - verb conjugation tester

TOOLS . . .

<http://www.memrise.com/> - flashcards (or use ANKI)

<http://www.wordreference.com/> - best French/English dictionary

<http://www.reverso.net> - just say NO to Google translate

<http://french.about.com/> - great explanations of French grammar

SPEAK, LISTEN, AND CONVERSE . . .

Duolingo forums :)

French audiobooks and bi-lingual books (for when you get to the past tenses in Duo).

<http://www.thefrenchexperiment.com/stories/> - great native speakers read.

<http://www.newsinslowfrench.com/> - podcast called "News in Slow French".

<http://frenchsounds.com/> - the perfect antidote to poor pronunciation.

<http://www.france24.com/fr/video> - live news.

<http://www.commeunefrancaise.com/blog/> - and youtube in general.

http://www.audiofrench.com/verbs/verbes_index.htm - native recordings.

<http://www.michelthomas.co.uk/> Michel Thomas tapes (well worth the $100) - learn to construct spoken French very fast, follow his directions exactly (use the PAUSE button!).

<http://en-us.wespeke.com> - Get a language partner / mentor ASAP, or live the dream in Paris like me :)

What I will do next:

Continue improving French using other resources but with daily Duo-revision.

I think completing the tree gives people a really good base in French and they really should continue developing French rather than move onto another language (or do both?!?!).

UPDATE July 2016: @Angelfrenchlover of <http://frenchlover.org/> pointed out

<https://www.italki.com> to me which is a great way to share your new language and get one on one teaching! (see: <http://frenchlover.org/articles-1/bestonlinetools>)

UPDATE Nov 2016: I have tried many other language learning apps and have been discussing language learning with CELTA trained teachers and professors. One interesting approach is "Extensive Reading" and I found several white papers by language scholars that were fascinating to read. I still come back to work on my reverse tree in Duolingo and lurk the forums :)

UPDATE Dec 2016: A fun thing I am doing now is listening to French songs on YouTube with both English and French subtitles. The idea is to find a song you like from this playlist and repeat it until you don't need the subtitles. Then you can even try singing it :)

https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PLYkyj_5Phkqqj9oUkzPgNdxfxhl62_HRX

UPDATE Jan 2017: Finished the reverse course, "Learn English - I know French" at level 12 with 3,900 XP - I wouldn't exactly recommend it as it didn't motivate me as much. However, see the advice, at the bottom of this thread, from @Thomas.Heiss for a better way to do the reverse tree. I suppose the initial exercise is good (all instructions are in French) but all spoken words are in English (not useful) and some of the answers you easily write just in English after hearing English! The start of the lesson is harder where most responses are typed in French then the end of the lesson you type more English and just have to recognize what the French sentence is. It is interesting to see what the French learn when they learn English. I am back to French at level 18 and 13,000 XP.

See below in the comments for even more tips . . .

Thanks to everyone on the site - awesome people - catch up with me on my Twitter in Paris
@AdamLGRing - <http://twitter.com/AdamLGRing>

Give Lingot55
931 year ago

Leave a new comment
67 Comments

jpk6 20 10 410
Awesome achievement! Thanks for giving back to the DL community with some very useful advice.

8ReplyGive Lingot10•1 year ago

[deactivated user]
Another thing that I do is listen to Disney songs in French. So pretty :D

Thank you for the resources! Or shall I say, Merci! xD

8ReplyGive Lingot16•1 year ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5
So can you give advice on how you can do that - in a legal way. Sorry I am that little bit old, and I do not have an apple phone, and have lived through the era when iTunes on windows like devices was a virus that reset all sorts of things that stopped all sorts of other things working. (I do not know if it is any different today - but sometimes I live in cloudy Linda Land - where all sorts of things are possible.
;)

So I think I am asking - how do you correctly and legally purchase disney songs in french - ideally that have a visual with subtitles in BOTH English AND French ?

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

AussieCraig 25 15 9 454
Use youtube Linda, there are many out there if you add "with french and english subtitles" or "avec paroles francais/anglaise". e.g <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KI7MiuXiHDA>

1ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

Yep, I sure do know that youtube is the place to look. I have looked and I have not found - so that is why I threw the question out ;) Thanks also for the comment :) And that is a LOVELY one you have found !

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

AussieCraig 25 15 9 454

My 7 year old daughter reads it and says.."Those are not the words!" LOL

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Hmm... Yeah, I pretty much just use YouTube. Everything is normally 'fan-dubbed', which, as you probably know, means someone used another language to cover the song. That normally means that you can't sell it... D: But I'm pretty sure iTunes is OK, although I've actually never used it. xD There is also YouTube MP3. I've never used this either. Hehehe Maybe Amazon could have it? Gotta be careful about bootleg though.. :(

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

I am going to bookmark this for whoever may ask for tips!
All my best wishes!

5ReplyGive Lingot15•1 year ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Grâce à vous sans cesse !

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Taloua 25 25 25 25 820

Great accomplishments !! Congrats and Good luck !!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

languagelover0 25 25 24 23 20 13 8

Congratulations! Have 10 lingots!

2ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

Pons 18

Congrats, and best of luck on improving your french :) Also, what a fantastic bunch of resources, thank you! I have not heard of some of these before, which is great.

It would be nice if something like this was sticky'd. I would have loved to have seen a list like this when I first found out about the forum.

2ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

1999Josh 21 11 10 8

Félicitations! Merci beaucoup pour les conseils! Duolingo m'a aussi aidé avec apprendre le français. Prévoyez-vous de faire quelque chose avec la langue française?

2ReplyGive Lingot9•1 year ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Oui, c'est ce qui m'a incité !

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

El_Gusano 25 25 15 12 7 6 5 5 5 5 2 412

Congrats on the achievement! I have bookmarked the links as I plan on using them soon. I keep forgetting what words are masc/fem but it seems I should first remember that table! Easy peasy! So that's going to help. I also finished the tree, but I am still working on improving. Thanks to you, much easier!

2ReplyGive Lingot12•1 year ago

toussaintlou 17 13 13 12 7 6

I keep hearing that Michael Thomas is a great resource, but when I see videos of his on Youtube... they aren't what I expect. Is there a specific tape set you are using? Thanks in advance for you answer.

2ReplyGive Lingot14•1 year ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

<http://www.michelthomas.co.uk/> - the iTunes downloads are the most convenient (not free) but the booklet that comes with the CDs is handy. The foundation course will get you creating and speaking French very quickly, I would start with just that. Try the free sample and you will know if it suits you - you will ruin it if you don't PAUSE and answer yourself at each beep the FIRST time through. I've tried many of the other audio learning methods and they are also good (especially those with native speakers). Michel is not a French.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

Yes I have heard quite a few people say that he as an 'accent' that is not french (and thus it complicates things when what you have learned sounds strange and it makes it hard for native french speakers to understand you ...). But so many people have also recommended his course. I can not speak from exposure - only third hand knowledge :)

However through out france there ARE different dialects - just as with any language. And in them is also embedded certain cultural nuances which enrichen our human lives and history and view of the world - that is constantly under danger of being lost to the globalizing of communications forever ... So if you are going to learn french as an outsider - Parisian French is the one I would suggest to try to focus on - but just be aware - diversity is also a rich goal to aspire to (ps edited just to improve my spelling and sentence structure)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Summed it up better than I could, thanks :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tara312 19 19 8 6 24

Amazing resource, thank you so much, just exactly what I need now to solidify my French. Do you have a blog somewhere about your sweet life in France?

2ReplyGive Lingot18•1 year ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Ha, bonne idée ! But, I don't have the time for that.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Carolyn250 25 25 24 1212

Great advice! Félicitations!

2ReplyGive Lingot20•1 year ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

WAY TO GO AdamLGRing ! What an amazing achievement ! May you keep kicking goals and adding to life and sharing resources - making the community stronger and smarter ! I will add a link in my Learning loom to here as well. THANK YOU for sharing ! And helping humanity talk between themselves - regardless of language ! :)

2ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Thanks Linda - your Learning Loom should of made the cut to my "best-of" links :)

Cheers for all your grammarific efforts on the forums.

2ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

Thank you Adam for this kind comment. Sorry I have not picked it up until now. I am currently reviewing things and creating new lists in preparation for "another cut" reshuffle of my references, and preparing to help the French learners from Arabic first language.

Thanks for this great discussion you have been instrumental in creating here :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

You should write a book :) I've been doing a lot of things outside Duo - real French with real people at real French places!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

Of in to that direction of the world in 4ish weeks (again). Hopefully my head clears by then. It is a flying visit this time - but enough time to touch base with those we know. In 2017 - then - there will be a different story ;) . And also hopefully by then - I will be have gone much further down my French story. Gosh I would love to touch base with you about your journey - it sounds fascinating :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bjornne 11 11 7 6 6

Wow, thanks for links, awesome pages, have a lingot! ... and congrats!

1ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

ILoveFrench30 25 5

Felicitations! 60 days seems so quick to me, wow!

1ReplyGive Lingot6•1 year ago

HakeemEvrenoglu 21 19 18 17 17 16 16 12 8 6 6 3 2 2 725

Nice one! Congratz!

1ReplyGive Lingot9•1 year ago

Maria123Vargaz 22 10 8 6 32

Congratulations and thanks for the learning suggestions!

1ReplyGive Lingot10•1 year ago

anthgrl 25 15

Congrats on finishing the tree, and thank you so much for all of those links! I'm three skills away from my own golden owl, and I will definitely check out all of your suggestions. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot13•1 year ago

WillB_OU 18 18

Thank you! I knew some of these sites, but not others, they should prove very helpful. Merci beaucoup.

1ReplyGive Lingot16•1 year ago

mksellars 9

Those links are incredibly helpful tools thanks for sharing!!

1ReplyGive Lingot17•1 year ago

Flashka_anna 10

thank you very much for useful advice and links!

1ReplyGive Lingot19•1 year ago

cziglerdonat 19 15 7 3
Great summary

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Phan_Tam 9 4
merci bcp

1ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

giantsboy 7
good job:) I just started. any edvise

1ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Sure. Have a good look around the web site, there are multiple ways to train your French. Here is my daily "training" program (I take A LOT of notes because I am a NERD) - adjust this to suit your own style:

A TRAINING REGIMEN FOR DUOLINGO

The latest Duolingo English to French tree has around 80 "skills" (each with one or more lessons inside) which you should be able to complete in 150 days (around 5 months). Allow for 30 days of delays, rest, or other French learning and you can allow for a 6 month time-frame. You should have one day off a week and a weekend off a month when intensely learning French (buy a streak freeze). Do the French test for 25 lingots once a week and you will see your progress. Use the streak to count your number of days of practice and set goals for yourself.

How Duolingo works:

The online version keeps asking questions until you get enough of them right (if you get the first 20/20, approx, questions correct then you will be done).

The iPad / iPhone version used to make you start all over if you get 4 or 5 questions wrong before getting 20 right (you could buy an extra heart). Now it is like the website (I, and others, have deliberately not updated our app because of this).

EACH DAY – one strengthen and one flash card review, one new skill (multiple lessons), max of 3 timed strengthens, strengthen until all gold, other exercises if you have more time:

+ Set the coach to 30XP goal (three lessons completed) – no doing translation to gain easy XP before you do your 30xp worth of lessons.

+ iPad/iPhone: One Strengthen.

+ One general strengthen exercise (not timed). This is twenty questions chosen from old lessons you may be starting to forget. Do this on the iPad so you can also practice random sentences from different lessons.

+ POSSIBLE ONLINE BUG: It seems the website doesn't always use your weakest words and "skills" for strengthen – try the app or if on the website use the flash card feature. Online general strengthen is still a good exercise online until you are getting everything right all the time.

+ By the time you reach the last checkpoint you will be doing mostly review/strengthening to keep all the old skills in your head!

Online: FLASH CARD REVIEW.

Look on the website under Words-Review Flashcards – no audio is given sadly. Do this:

+ One session only (too many will weaken a lot of words).

- + You must get everything right about the word otherwise say you got it wrong. Note that some very few of the Duolingo answers are actually wrong, so if you know it is wrong, good for you!
- + Say it out loud with a sample sentence “veux” you would say “je veux” for “I want”.
- + You can study the word list by rolling over the french word and can order the list from the weakest words, types of words (verbs, noun, adjective, adverb . . .) or the words you have not practised for the longest time.

Online: One New Skill (multiple lessons – later when going gets tough one new lesson).

- + A brand new skill – your choice, have fun.
- + Complete the entire skill until past the 2nd checkpoint.
- + Before the first checkpoint complete the whole tier if it has multiple skills.
- + Read the notes quickly, if you don't understand yet, don't worry.
- + The mic is off but you should repeat EVERYTIME she says a French phrase.
- + Don't try too hard to remember but take a moment after getting a question wrong to see what the correct answer is.
- + You will get a bunch wrong, and even feel a little cheated, but this doesn't matter – keep going till you start getting them right:

You are here to learn FRENCH – it doesn't matter if you know another English phrase that should be accepted (however if you know the French is wrong, report it).

The pronunciation MAY sometimes be bad/buggy but also it is how French is said – the questions are deliberately chosen to show you how similar sounding words can trip you up. Repeat the speech in turtle mode and think about the logic of the sentence. Don't complain, remember how she said it for next time (you will meet plenty of French speakers with much worse pronunciation who talk fast and drop sounds they shouldn't).

NOTE: Our brains automatically filter out foreign sounds, or make them try to fit sounds we know, so you may swear a word was pronounced wrongly but after you learn it you will now be able to hear it.

French grammar has many exceptions: be happy you found a new exception! Learning french is all about learning those exceptions and many lessons will focus on them, since you must know them.

You learn when you MAKE MISTAKES not when you get everything right. If you are marked wrong and don't understand why, check the discussions (only available online) – @Sitesurf or someone will give good advice (just be careful some people don't know what they are talking about!)

Once you complete the lessons go back and read the notes more thoroughly – you should understand it all now.

Online: Max of 3 timed strengthens. You can unlock timed strengthening with lingots. Hit the “Strengthen Skills” general strengthening button (or the one within a skill) and the timed option will be available. Try to get to the end of the timed session – you have 3 tries. This is to work on your speed. Don't review what you got wrong and use the roll-over tips to help if needed. As soon as you “win” you can stop, or if you fail 3 times in a row drop out to the last stage of training.

iPad / iPhone: Strengthening to Gold.

NOTE: The app is easier than the website so if you need more challenging material use the website.

Relax and enjoy and take your time, really get your pronunciation right. Look at discussions (but don't post) and lookup French dictionaries and Reverso to hear a different pronunciation. Now you can pick a specific lesson that is no longer gold and strengthen it. Pick your favourites first, the ones more relevant to you. If you prefer you can do general and let Duolingo pick your weakest words. Make any 3 lessons gold and you're done or when you run out of study time – this should pretty much keep all your lessons gold most of the time! If your tree is already gold you can skip this or do one general untimed strengthen.

BUT, I WANT TO DO MOAR !!!

If you still have more study time you can of course do more – if it starts not being fun and you are going backwards (getting tired and frustrated) it is time to stop. Duolingo is a little weak on general vocab, speaking, and memorisation – so you can use flash cards like Anki on your computer (or online now) and the site memrise to work on vocab and memorisation. Do little chunks as you will get bored and you can only remember so much a day (thus you need to start day one, and do over 6 months).

+ <https://ankiweb.net/shared/decks/french> – the full list of Anki decks - grab only 5 star or 4.5 star smart cards (you should only have a handful of decks, keep only your favs – content that is relevant to you will be learned easier, it's science!)

+ <https://ankiweb.net/shared/info/1035339398> – linguistic glue, great to memorise!

+ <http://www.fourmilab.ch/francais/glue.html> - source of linguistic glue, you will use all these, memorise them!

+ <https://ankiweb.net/shared/info/2803610639> – image to French deck - learning French using English is ok but images without English is much better – again it is science (especially for those that are visual people). This deck is free whereas Rosetta Stone (great image to French software) is $$$.

+ I recently found an image to French app for free (so far) on the iPad, loving it - it is called "iLang Basic French" search the app store for "Learn French", by Greg Vick, or you can use this "download" link http://telecharger.cnet.com/Learn-French-iLang/3000-20415_4-75583975.html which will take you to iTunes. If the app crashes your device, as with any app, close down all open apps then reboot your device and open only that app (this solves memory issues on your perhaps older device).

+ <http://www.memrise.com/course/77958/learn-basic-french/>

+ For speaking pay for the Michel Thomas French tapes – great method IF YOU FOLLOW HIS DIRECTIONS EXACTLY (pause the GRUD DAMN tape – you're not special!)

+ As a reward do a fun French activity in an area you may not of touched on today (like watch a French TV show with subs, read a bilingual book, read a French comic book, interact on French discussion boards, do some Duolingo translations, Skype a French friend to chat).

If your concern is with keeping your tree "gold" (you are probably the person to whom collecting lingots and showing off your streak is important, so be it, it is "gamified!") then the following tips will help – however, you should be focused on the actual learning of a real language you can use in the real world!

<http://gregreflects.blogspot.fr/2014/09/duolingo-language-learning-as-game.html>

From Greg's article: « The short, answer, though, is do three skill-specific strengthens per day. Never do a general strengthen unless all skills are already gold. Never do timed practice, and never use hints. Regild from the bottom up if you're still comfortable with the language (e.g. you just finished the tree). Regild from the top down if you're effectively starting over. How long it takes will depend on how decayed the tree is and how well you do the exercises. As little as a month. Maybe as much as three or four if all skills are at one bar. »

The problem with binge-reviewing is that you end up so sick of Duolingo that you don't want to touch it for days. Many people just skip long sentences when reviewing (not great – got to allow for people to be people when using these systems). Some review is essential, you only get a random sample of the available sentences to learn each time through a lesson (the science of these types of memorisation methods say that you can only put about five, approx, new concepts in your brain at a time...)

BONUS: For reading this far - Yabla, great game watching French videos with subs in English AND French.

<https://french.yabla.com/> - it really helps to be able to see the native speaker's mouth when they are talking (drill the bunch of free sample videos).

8ReplyGive Lingot6•1 year ago

jehanne-louise 16

I just tried Yabla. I think it will be a great way to tune up my listening skills, with all the options for help if needed. Thanks for the tip!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

jennifer_cole 13 8

Wow! This is exhaustive, and very helpful. Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Thanks, but you haven't seen the truly exhaustive list of le héros (aspirated "h", still not sounded, but you don't contract the "le" and "la" with an aspirated "h") of this website:

@toussaintlou's exhaustive list

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nephraun 5

Merci beaucoup!

1ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

jehanne-louise 16

Félicitations! And thanks so much for the tips and the list of resources.

1ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

Alexandre-Verri 10 6

thanks, worths a lingot.

1ReplyGive Lingot6•1 year ago

RunningFrog 19 12 8

Congratulations!

1ReplyGive Lingot7•1 year ago

Kendallkeauty 10

Thanks for posting this! Definitely a huge help to me!!! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot8•1 year ago

cassie.lyn 14

Thank you for the great tips!!

1ReplyGive Lingot9•1 year ago

AAA_Andrew 5

Good accomplishment, you are a total inspiration, I hope I get that good eventually!

1ReplyGive Lingot10•1 year ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

You will - "I sense great power in this one." ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

giantsboy 7

thanks a lot :) here is a lingot

1ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

Scratching1 11

WOW.

1ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

camus_femme 8

Thanks for all the resources!

I'm curious, do you feel that you're approaching fluency?

1ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Definitely, but fluency is a sliding scale. I had already been taught in high-school so Duolingo filled in the gaps. I can carry on conversations now (as long as I'm not in a noisy place, then I have trouble with oral comprehension, but that is becoming true for me in English sadly) but that is also thanks to Michel Thomas (for creating speech) and a lot of other listening exercises (best are native speakers where you can see their mouths). So my French is useful now living in Paris, which is the main priority for me.

I think you will be able to read most French and write French (slowly but with good spelling) at the end of the Duolingo tree, it just will take longer than 60 days (I've read 6 months is a good time-frame and gives you time to include oral development from other sources). The listening is really the only thing you can't cram and it must be done steadily over a decent period of time. People swear by "News in Slow French" and I see why (also youtube, movies, with subs - anything where you can replay it multiple times till you really hear each word).

Extra is another winner (like Friends but for learning French):

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nV6SDDlc60g> (sub button bottom right)

and shows how working with FRENCH subs and French audio can work quite well for distinguishing the words you know you know you know!!!

This one is clever and entertaining but adults only. The French is nice and slow and simple, which is what you need starting out, and the subs are HUGE!

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VerCN2daYGQindex=48list=PL5357F089480D091F>

EDIT: Final tip - keep up the daily practice, even just an hour of immersion, or your new language will slip!

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Phan_Tam 9 4

merci beaucoup

1ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

frenchlover.org 12 9 7 7 5 4 2

Thanks you so much for quoting me :) And thanks again for this amazing list of resources. It's a real gold mine :)

1ReplyGive Lingot3•8 months ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Thanks Angel, high praise from someone like you with such qualifications in French!

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

UPDATE Nov 2016: I have tried many other language learning apps and have been discussing language learning with CELTA trained teachers and professors. One interesting approach is "Extensive Reading" and I found several white papers by language scholars that were fascinating to read. I still come back to work on my reverse tree in Duolingo and lurk the forums :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

n6zs 25 859

Hi, Adam. So proud of your accomplishments. You have amassed a lot of wisdom in how to learn. Thanks for sharing! I have read about 6-7 of Marcel Pagnol's books (just finished "Les Marchands de Gloire"). Hope to return to Paris one day. Best to you!

1ReplyGive Lingot4•3 months ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Thanks, I remember chatting with you before. You give a lot of good advice under various questions. Look me up when you come to Paris, next. "Extensive Reading" says to read a book a week, that is easy for you, and that you are interested in: logic being that harder and harder books become easy. Lingvist has at least part of that covered in their reading section.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

A fun thing I am doing now is listening to French songs on YouTube with both English and French subtitles. The idea is to find a song you like from this playlist and repeat it until you don't need the subtitles. Then you can even try singing it:

https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PLYkyj_5Phkqqj9oUkzPgNdufxhl62_HRX

I'm also following various French resources on my twitter at @AdamLGRing (same id as Duolingo)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

sandeepa2 15 14 14 12 8 6 726

Wow ! Hearty Congratulations and thanks for the amazing links. With the Duolingo and other practice, how well are you able to follow / converse with people in French at Paris. Any plans for the DELF / DALF Certification. Wish you all the best. Merci Beaucoup

0ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Thanks, and congrats on your streak! All together, I am able to live a French life and communicate - but Duolingo alone would not achieve that.

2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Jan 2017 - Happy New Year! And I finally finished the reverse tree (learning English as though I know French). It took ages because I was busy using other tools and wasn't as engaging as the normal way. I finished English at level 12 with 3,900 XP - I now return to my level 18 and 13,000 XP in French and I have a very un-golden tree to fix!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Thomas.Heiss 11 10 10 131

Reading your intro update from January 2017: Adam you did it simply wrong! Sorry, please re-start again :-)

For a reverse tree firstly you have to TURN OFF the speaker in your settings!
Otherwise you will get all those annoying English listen excercises which you are complaining about (I also would do so ;)).

Secondly you really really need to install the reverse tree enhancer user script or the more customizable script variant: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/19654789> I posted about it in 1-2 other threads already, but the basics are that it will use GoogleTTS to read all the French sentences and give you French audio (L1 source language French, which DuoLingo itself does not).

Of course the goal is to omit all English (listen) excercises with the DuoLingo auto intro voice of each English question.

For my Portuguese to English / German reverse tree I find that from time to time I still have to give EN/DE multiple choice or select list box answers.

Yes, this is annoying too. But I am not sure if there is a workaround to skip those excercises that. There would be prompt that you should be given multi-choice/select box L1 source (French) lessons, instead of the L2 target language.

I may checkout the new reverse tree script, I read about somewhere (now try to find that again which the crappy DuoLingo discussion forums!), which was announced on the forum previously, which seem to allow you a little bit more customization.

1ReplyGive Lingot10•1 month ago

AdamLGRing 19 12 83

Hi Thomas, thanks for this - good advice. I was not aware of this option ;) I'll include a note for others to use this method when they want to use the reverse tree.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Thomas.Heiss 11 10 10 131

Found it again.

More customizable user script variant "Duolingo tree enhancer" by Camilo:
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/19654789>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

119 "He cooks in the kitchen."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/245986>

Translation: Lui cucina nella cucina.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

50 Comments

mbisson 25 5 45

Does anyone know if there is an (explainable) intangible difference between "Lui cucina nella cucina" and "Lui cucina in cucina" (and what that difference is, of course)? Like maybe "nella cucina" evokes the thought of a specific room in the house, whereas "in cucina" makes one think about just the place where food gets made.

Of course I'm overthinking things :) but I'm curious...

16ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 4

mbisson, use "in cucina" and "in bagno" after the verb essere, to indicate where something is. Otherwise use the articulated preposition. Don't worry too much about it though.

48ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Nano-rama 9 8

in + il = nel in + la = nella in + l' = nell' in + i = nei in + le = nelle in + gli = negli in + lo = nello

38ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mbisson 25 5 45

My question isn't so much 'what is nella?' but rather in this instance, does "nella cucina" have a different feel than "in cucina" to the Italian ear (and of course, what is that difference)?

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

OP313 11 10

I suppose the understanding depends on whether you are using it as a verb or as a noun/place.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

AlbertoBeber 12 11 7

Le due espressioni sono equivalenti, anche se è senz'altro più usata quella senza articolo; si usa invece sempre con l'articolo quando viene identificata (nella mia, nella vostra, ecc.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

fastnracey 16 8 8 6

I do not understand your post, Nano-rama.

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Yulia_Shch 14 9 7 3

What was told me by a native speaker is that: 1) in + definite article + place is old-fashioned usage though people would understand you 2) now "in + definite article + place" basically means "to be in the place but not to use it for its purpose". Example: "la mucca è nella cucina" = the cow is in the kitchen but alive and instead of being in the meadows) As you can see, the usage of a definite article in cases like this one has nothing in common with the usage of it in english, it does not mean a definite place, here, definite kitchen

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Keldorai 9 7 6 3 2 2

"In cucina" is literally "In Kitchen" and naturally, if you weren't speaking in the abstract you would want an article to define Cucina. Similarly, there's another question that says "Credo in lui"; You would not say "I believe in the him". It's technically idiomatic, but similar from English to Italian.

You totally could say "In cucina" but it's more abstract and poetic.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Andreafigoli90 14 11 10 9 9 7 3 3

In a "sloppy/fast" talk you can say both ways, it does not matter. but "in cucina" it means either 1)in a kitchen that you give for granted or 2) a generic kitchen.. 1) we are at home and i tell you " puoi andare in cucina a prendere il pane?" .. it is obvious I mean the kitchen of our home, it is the other room of this home. 2) we want to buy a treadmill, i ask you "Dove lo vuoi mettere?" you say " in cucina" and I answer "ma uno in cucina non ci mette un treadmill" it means none puts a treadmill in his kitchen, neither mine nor others'. If I use " nella cucina" is used either for a 3)generic topic or 4) a kitchen that is not granted: 3) the same example of point 2) 4) I have a huge house with 3 kitchens, and i tell "vai nella cucina del piano di sopra"

2ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Carmine51 14

The prompt was, "He cooks in the kitchen." So, how can "Cucina nella cucina" be an acceptable response since it does not clearly state "He"? I find DuoLingo to be somewhat inconsistent on this point.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 4

I am sure Duo accepts "lui cucina nella cucina" as a possible answer. However, as I already explained above, if you didn't know who it was cooking in the kitchen, you'd use his name. Once everybody knows who is cooking, it's enough to say "cucina nella cucina." An Italian would include the word "lui" or "lei" only if they had to clarify when there was a disagreement. To try to let you imagine how that would sound in English, you'd say HE cooks (or is cooking) in the kitchen. And with those caps I mean that the word HE is stressed by the voice. I hope that helps.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mcbarge 16 11 3 2 1

JAIRA. i was marked correct with 'lui cucina nella cucina'

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 4

Yes, I expected they would, Mcbarger.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 4

P.S. This is actually a classic example of one of Duolingo's weak points: lack of context. It really does sound strange when just one sentence is thrown at you like that -- and it's hard to explain the reason why a native speaker would use that translation... If, on the other hand, there were some development of a short story or of a paragraph, you might be able to understand better why it's not necessary to say "lui." Again, it's not wrong to say it, but it does change the emphasis.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

OpabiniaSr 14 7

I've learned that this language is very context based (if that makes sense. I'm not sure if you see what I'm saying). "Cucina" by itself doesn't apply to one gender.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lynnich 25 15 1025

Why can't I say lui cuoce nella cucina, I thought cuocere (sorry haven't got accent on my computer) means to cook.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 4

Lynnich, that would mean that he himself was cooking, not cooking something. Yikes!

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lynnich 25 15 1025

Well, I am often burning myself in the kitchen, maybe she was too?? Thank you for your help!

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 4

'Cucinare' is usually to prepare and cook foods (a transitive verb) whereas 'cuocere' is more the cooking process. It's usually used as an intransitive verb, meaning the action is contained within the subject, not passed onto something else. However, cuocere is sometimes, albeit rarely, used transitively as well. It doesn't have an accent. I take it from your question that Duo marked you wrong on it? Yeah, if you say 'lui cuoce nella cucina' what comes to my mind is a guy in the kitchen dying of heat. Maybe it's a hot day and he's using the oven too.

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mkljohnson 14 10 7 6 6 5 4 4 2

I'm confused previously "Lavoro sulla cucina" Meant both I work in the kitchen and on the kitchen, and here it doesn't? Can someone explain please?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

marziotta 17 15 12 11 10 7 2 2 148

You have to think the prepositions as connected to the verb, not to the noun.

"Lavorare su un'attività" (To work on an activity)

"Lavorare in un posto" (To work in a place)

"Cucinare in un posto" (To cook in a place)

(It could be "Cucinare sui fornelli" To cook on the stoves, but you are physically into the kitchen, you would never say in English "I cook on the stoves", would you?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ContrapuntalAnt 18 8 6

"To cook on the stove" is correct English, if rare - you wouldn't bother saying this unless you were stressing it was the stove you were cooking on as opposed to cooking in the microwave/on the grill etc.

You definitely wouldn't say "wok on the kitchen" though, unless you were doing repairs/building on the room itself.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Don_Abramo 12 9 7 5

"Lavora" could also mean that they are cleaning, fixing the plumbing, repairing something, etc.

"Cucina", on the other hand is very specific, it means "cook".

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hwvdoorn 16 11 9 6

marziotta, your explanation was very helpful

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

KarenColle 20 15

I agree. I liked marziotta's direction to think about some of these bothersome prepositions as being connected to the verb, rather than the noun.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

elisabethh4 9

Why is " Lui cuochi nella cucina" wrong? Cuochi was given as one definition of "cooks" in the examples.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bipollack 18 15 14 12 11

cuochi is the masculine plural noun, ie 'cooks' as in the people who cook.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ju91th 10

why not 'cuoce nella cucina'?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OlderThanRome 23 14 14 12 10 5 5 4 2 9

Why is "Cucina alla cucina" wrong? In another question, "alla cucina" in place of "nella cucina" was fine.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mbisson 25 5 45

Remember that there's not a 1:1 relationship between prepositions (et al.) in English:Italian. Here "alla cucina" means "at the kitchen" not "in the kitchen." This is also a special case where you can say "in cucina" to mean the same. What is the other sentence you encountered (where "alla" works for "in the")?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FabGabW 6

Please can someone explain why "Cuoco nella cucina" isn't accepted?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Guillhez 17 16 11 9 8 8 8 7

"Il Cuoco" means "The Cook", as is the person who cooks. "La Cucina" means "The Kitchen" and "cucina" is the third person singular present of the verb cucinare equivalent of english "he/she/it cooks"

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kiah.abbot 8

How do I say she cooks in the kitchen.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 4

Kiah, it will still be "cucina nella cucina." If, for some reason, you want to emphasize that "SHE cooks in the kitchen, then you would say "lei cucina nella cucina." (In normal contexts the pronoun would not be necessary. If we hadn't established who we were talking about, you'd use her name).

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bertha.lit 8 8 5

I don't understand why I don't need a masculine ending "cucino" for "he cooks." In Spanish we change verb endings.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ValeriePenka 8

Because the verb cucinare is conjugated so that he cooks and she cooks uses the same ending, which is "a" for the third person singular - no difference for masculine or feminine.

If you were using an adjective modifying a noun, it would have to agree in gender and number with the noun. For example, il libro nero versus la mucca nera.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BeadedKat 13 1

Why does it say "cucina nella cucina" as a correct answer? Is that not cook in the kitchen? Where does it say HE?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jean_Vu 15 10 7 6 5 4

Stupid question, when do you know to use "nel" and "al", do you have to memorize the use of each?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

thalia0712 24 16 12 5 2 570

Now really... This is about 20th sentence in a row about kitchen! Is that really the only household word DL can teach me?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

brianduenez 9 9 9 8 4 4 4

when do I use gli? I know la is (F) and il & lo are (M) but when do I use (N) the?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

phmigotto 11 11 8 4 2

Lui cucina nella cucina nella cucina nella cucina nella cucina nella cucina nella cucina nella cucina nella cucina.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

atikonium 10 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2

I wrote "cucina nella polla" because I read "He cooks in the chicken" AYY LMAO

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CarolynSmi13 11 9 6 3

Why is 'il cucina nella cucina' wrong in this context when I was given it to transcribe a few questions ago?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sharkbbb 19 16 666

il cucina nella cucina = the kitchen in the kitchen

Although it should be "La cucina nella cucina" in order to be ... (hmmm) ... correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ginalea27 15

"Egli cuochi in cucina" is also correct but it was marked wrong for me!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sharkbbb 19 16 666

Egli cuochi in cucina = He chefs in the kitchen

Noun

cuoco = male cook

cuoca = female cook

cuochi = cooks (male or mixed/unknown) cuoche = female cooks

Verb

(io) cucino = I cook

(tu) cucini = you cook (singular)

(lui/lei) cucina = he/she cooks

(noi) cuciniamo = we cook

(voi) cucinate = you cook (plural)

(loro) cucinano = they cook

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

kacongdon 12 7

Why can't i use cuocha instead of cucina as the verb here?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mercede777 16 113

lui cuoce in la cucina

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

morgy752780 11

Lui cuochi nella cucina? (thought it looked good).... I'm having trouble with masculine versus feminine also....

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

120 "Practice makes the master."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/312418>

Translation: La práctica hace al maestro.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

13 Comments

red_kevin_h 15

I'm guessing this is parallel to the English phrase, "Practice makes perfect"?

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 3

Yes, but this translation is a lot less good than "practice makes perfect", I think they put it to help us, but in my opinion they should only accept "practice makes perfect", because with this story of "masters" people are confused.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

WimXL 25 25 20 18 15 470

hace al maestro - makes to the master instead of hace el? or is typical use in Spanish?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ago 15 7 5 4

It's the personal "a" at work, used before any and all persons that are the object of an action.

28ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

learnTACO32 25

"...al Maestro" is correct but "...a La Maestra" is not. Is the word "Master" only translated as a masculine noun in Spanish? Thanks

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Melita2 16 14 5

learnTACO32, I think this must be a saying, but I sure do like your translation!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

TACO and Melita: Yes, it is a saying and, yes, Spanish is masculine-oriented. It is changing slowly to be more gender-neutral, but I am sure it will be many years before the old sayings are changed. It just wouldn't sound right to say "La práctica hace el maestro o la maestra". :-)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chrisgosselin92 15

The sentence says "practice makes the master" so I used "practica..."

Why does it require it to be "La practica"? That would be "The practice makes the master" and that is a slightly different sentence.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TilEulenspiegel 12

I think this is a case of a noun being "used in a general sense."

<http://www.spanishdict.com/topics/show/5>

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

chrisgosselin92 15

Ahh thank you for your reply.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

roozimmer 12 2

Could it be similar to the implied "that" sometimes dropped from English sentences such as: I hope (that) this works?

This is what I assumed after getting it wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chrisgosselin92 15

"[I would hope THAT] the practice makes the master." (or whatever clause makes sense for the first part of the sentence).

Seems correct, maybe a native speaker can chime in?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Revolutionnaire 18 16 16 5 2

why is "el maestro" wrong? Only "al maestro"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

121 The app and site don't sync! It's very frustrating

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1762725>

oriwissn 13 11 8 8

Give Lingot30

83 years ago

Leave a new comment

38 Comments

oriwissn 13 11 8 8

When I do lessons offline on the app, for the past three times, it doesn't show my progress on the site. In addition, when I want to progress to the next lessons on the app, it says that duolingo couldn't connect.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

laurara11 15 7

Same thing happening to me now (2 years after oriwissn commented). I did some lessons offline in the app, and then when I checked on the computer they weren't registered. I logged into the app online and it still shows I completed the lessons I did offline, but it won't synch online. So in the app it shows I've done 1/3 of a topic, online it's 0/3.

4ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

ksekanto 9 9 9 6

Hey, I see the messages are pretty old here, and there's just been a new app update... However, it didn't help in my case. The android app is frozen and doesn't show the progress I make on the website. Tried restarting the app, re-installing the app, logging out and in both in the app and on the website - no result. Help!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DeanDouglas 19 12

This kind of incompetence is a joke and duolingo's silence in the matter is unacceptable

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

martinos74 13 12 9

same here, please help as this is driving me crazy!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bannvol 22 12 10

Same here the app on my iphone is not syncing with the online version. I just lost a 16 day streak on the app, and only 7 days were on the desktop version. It was close to midnight and I went to my desktop to keep up my streak and I continue to have a streak on my desktop (missing 7 days), but now on my app I lost all 16 days on track because they do not sync. Please help!!!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

laurara11 15 7

Yup, streaks really help me stay motivated but some days when I'm busy I can't login to my PC... I wish I could do stuff in the app and keep my score :(

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

NatalieVas 20

Well, I can see that this issue, at least for me, has not been resolved. The App and Online versions show different progress in particular when it comes to revision: the App and the PC versions want me to practice different things. Given that I do most of my practice on the PC, it is the App that is lagging behind. I have searched for a way to sync the two in Settings, but it just doesn't exist...

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Steffieweed 7

I don't know why Duolingo's software team don't just fix this. It would be so easy...

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

aku77 20 15 9 565

My streak on android is also different from what the website shows and I know how it happened. They went out of sync when my streak freeze jumped in. My streak was kept on the site but was zeroed on android and they are out of sync since then. But only in the side bar. If I go to my profile on android it displays the same streak value as the website.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

marssy 13 12 11 6 4

When the lingots and the store were introduced we also modified the way we count the streaks. Streaks are no longer language dependent meaning you have a streak for each language, and a site streak. The wager is based on your site streak so is the streak guard. Currently, we only display the language streak in the app. Eventually we will display the site streak too. Sorry if it is a bit confusing. We are working on communicating this better to our users.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kiaseven 19 6 2

Hi, the same thing is happening for me after a recent update. I'll complete a lesson and it will show 10/10 lessons complete and start the next lesson. However, when I open it later, it will have reverted me to 8/10. This happens when I am offline (on the subway). When I am back online, it seems to have preserved my lessons but then later, reverts the progress. It's frustrating because it used to work fine before a recent update.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DeniseSpro 2

I have the app installed on my phone (Motorola Droid X) and a Samsung MP3 player. I can do lessons but they don't 'sync' the lessons completed with the desktop.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MimiM. 25 8

Hi! I have experienced the same sync problems about a week ago. I have progressed within the new skills (namely Gerund and Future in Italian) using my notebook, but the progress was not shown in my Android app. I have cleared cache, force stopped app etc., but with no success. So effectively, I cannot progress toward the end of my tree on Android, unless I repeat the missing parts of the skills every time I change the device

When strengthening a particular skill or skills in general, though, the progress is synchronised correctly. Also, the grand total of XP is always in sync, as far as I noticed, even though a part of it is gained from Immersion. Only new skills seem to be a problem.

I hope this problem will be addressed really soon, at it IS annoying, truth to be told :).

Thank you for the otherwise excellent app and excellent idea behind it!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

skyechilton 9

Same for me. iOS 8.1. Newest version of the app. I can work offline with the newest modules but when I come back online it resets back to where I was when I was last online.

The interesting thing is that it does keep my XP from offline work. Just not the completion of any modules.

I tried restarting the app but nothing changed. It seems to be syncing because it updates my offline XP. It just doesn't sync the modules.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jerhinesmith 15

I had a very similar issue -- to the point where I couldn't even sign in on the app. I'm pretty sure the app doesn't sync/login over cellular, as once I got home and switched to wifi, I was able to login and everything synced. Hopefully that will help someone else.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Joubarc 14 4

I just had a very annoying syncing issue and lost a streak because of it. However, what happened to me may shed some insights on the bug itself, so here goes: I was on a 10+ days streak using mainly the site. On Friday, I used the android app, but while not connected. I made 70xp until the app had no more preloaded content ready (that's another very annoying thing, by the way). So far, so good. Saturday I just used the site, and didn't really pay attention to the xp or streak. Right now, on Sunday, I used the site again, but this time I noticed my streak has been interrupted and is missing a day - Friday. Realizing that day I had been on the app, I thought it made sense and would be fixed by syncing; so I connect my phone to Internet and start the app. To my surprise, the streak is not fixed - which prompted me to search and I found this thread. However, here is the interesting part: nothing I did could fix the issue and give me my Friday xp and repair the streak; so I gave up and started a lesson. As I finished it, the site gave me the usual 10xp, and showed me my progress so far for the day: 80xp! So the app DID sync the received xp, but didn't attribute it for Friday (correct), but for today instead (incorrect) since that's when I sync'ed. Hope this helps fixing the issue somehow.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Clara982166 9

Hi, I'm new to Duolingo and just found that my Android and laptop aren't syncing either! Very frustrating...

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

mr.1009 14 10 9 8 2

Syncing from app to site still not ok (Android app, 3.37.2, dec. 2016): finished lessons on app appeared open on site and streak not up-to-date.

Reopening the app did not force a sync. Refreshing site neither (duh). Doing new lessons on the app or the site didn't help either. Logged out from the app and logged in again: the lessons that I already had finished on the app appeared open again on the app (so my changes weren't saved on the app and I lost progress).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

kat328570 21 146

My phone has one identity and my computer has a totally different ones different levels different competence . how do I get them to sync?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 days ago

kristinemc 16 9 7 4 2

What is not syncing for you? :)

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mr.1009 14 10 9 8 2

The finished lessons on the app appeared open on site and streak not up-to-date.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

MuhammadSRashed 14 14 13 10 10 6 6 6 5 5 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 723

Hi, Kristin My XP froze for some days, i wasn't able to notice the reason for that. And the streak on the Android app is not the same on site, and for each language. Sorry but one more issue is that the "English for Arabic speakers" course is not available on the app; Almost the only course. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

122 "The descent is deep."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3322258>

Translation: El descenso es profundo.

12 years ago

Leave a new comment

34 Comments

mwollaeger 13 7 6

How are descents deep and not, say, steep?

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nWnIJ 15 3

steep means it goes both forward and down. deep doesn't have to include forward.

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Melarish 16 15 14 12 12 11 9 8 4 3 2

Probably means "goes a long way down".

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rogercchristie 21 20 15 8 675
Ah! Deep sea diving.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Claytonator 10
I thought 'profundo' related more to deep concepts, as in 'profound'. Can it also be used for literal things which are deep - as in the opposite of shallow?

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

droma 21 34
Claytonator -- "profundo" can indeed refer to "deep" as in "deep water" or even "a deep sleep", etc

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

simpsongeorge 14 5
profound does mean this in english too (more of an archaic meaning). I wonder why alto was not accepted, i though it was used to describe depth of water previously?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Si_Robertson 18 5 2
WHAT DOES THIS MEAN!?!?!?!?!?!?!? WHAT DO ANY OF THESE MEAN???!!!?!?!? in general I know sports pretty well but none of these are making sense to me!!!!!!!

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Woodman70 22 208
Scuba diving has shallow regular or steep descents, all requiring different techniques.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Si_Robertson 18 5 2
So would a deep decent be the same as a steep descent?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sguykayak 19 1
A steep descent in physics, rappelling/spelunking, parachuting or flying refers to angle, not rate or depth (aka 'deep'). It's been 20 years since my scuba cert so I'm not sure about current lingo there. So, I guess it depends on what sport this thread is referring to - I can think of dozens of candidates, but I'm guessing the author was referring to something more common - water related. :-)

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Woodman70 22 208
Not necessarily, but you can still think of a steep descent is going deep.

Steep is the "rate" of descent, a.k.a. mas rapido, different weights and O2 mixture.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Katzenperson 14 9 9 8 8 7 5 5 4 4 30

These sound like Commonwealth or British terminology, rather than American. That may be the problem for some of us. If you are not familiar with sport(s) outside the USA, these are alien.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

[+] 4 hidden comments

sguykayak 19 1

I thought the sport was rock climbing, rappelling, or spelunking, but I guess it's referring to diving, either scuba or free diving?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sdoijsdfoiugj 12 5 4 4 3

What's wrong with "alto"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kpferdeort 22 20 19 18 15 13 12 11 9 8 7 5 5 5 4 3 2 9

Alto means "high".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ehsan_Mehmed 25 21 20 17 15 15 12 11 10 10 10 10 8 8 7 6 6 5 5 5 4 3 2 49

And also "tall"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

randygannaway 10 5 3

why would this reject "el descenso es hondo"? I thought it also meant deep.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rspreng 24

My dictionary says hondo = profundo. But Duo has its own. less than complete, dictionary.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

guelen13 12 11

It could be right.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KellyKochanski 17 8

How is this sentence related to sports?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JerryKness 22 12 7 4 4 2 397

The sport is underwater diving, usually using scuba gear.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jcmurphy77 21 7 5 2

It offers hondo as an alternative answer

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AdamLarge 17 11 8 6 5 4 2

Hondo?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Jackie947772 18 26

I am confused as it did not give profundo as an option onlu hondo

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

jbflanman 23 22 10 9 4 3 817

Where did "hondo" come from? I have only seen "profundo" for "deep".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Woodman70 22 208

Hondo and profundo are synonyms. Duo knows you have only seen 'profundo' and is now giving you a new word. If you use the web version you can select the 'Words' subpage and see what you are strong on, and what you aren't.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

jbflanman 23 22 10 9 4 3 817

Hmm, just looked at the Words list you mentioned. "Profundo" is listed as last practiced 1 month ago but "hondo" isn't listed at all. List, sorted alphabetically, goes from "hombros" straight to "hongos". Since I've completed the tree twice and refreshed it completely a few times, I would think I would have been shown the word before now. Oh, well. Live and learn...

Thanks for the pointer to the Words list.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

thomnord 21 20 20 7 6 5 10

How about 'el descenso es fondo' e.g. al fondo?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

123 Warning! What to do if you accidentally change the learning language.....

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3318634>

BritBlue 12 7 6 4 2

Yesterday I somehow managed to change my learning language to Arabic and then Chinese when having a little look around the site, luckily I was able to navigate around enough to post a help message and was able to change everything back into English with the help of some very nice people!

I thought I would put some basic instructions up in case it happens to anyone else (it seems to have happened to a few people! haha)

Link to original thread for more details: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3314090>

1 Hover over the username (for me this was the only thing in English so might be a good place to start)

2 Click on the second section down (this takes you into Settings) N/B I am not sure if this is the same in Arabic, Chinese etc see ceae and allintolearning's posts on original thread

3 Click on the second section down in the smaller white box (the profile box - there should also be second larger white box on the screen to confirm that you are in the right place!) This should take you into the learning language section

4 Click on the drop down menu and pick one of the 'I want to learn to Spanish/French' etc or the 'I want to learn Spanish, I speak English' basically anything in English and hopefully this should get you back! Edit: Shortcut to this step with thanks to stew!! <https://www.duolingo.com/settings/direction>

If anyone thinks I've made a mistake let me know :)

Give Lingot40
772 years ago

Leave a new comment
108 Comments

stwel 17 16 15 13 13 12 11 7 6 6 5 5 5 3 3 2 2 2 2
Or you can go to step 4 directly : <https://www.duolingo.com/settings/direction>.

19ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 3
Cool shortcut!

On the original thread, bchan had a different shortcut to learn Spanish for English speakers.

Yours can be easily changed if someone wants a different language from English. Of course, once in English you can change or add any other available option easily enough.

Say, blue2687 were the discussions all written in Arabic and Chinese too? I don't think that I tried to read discussions when I crossed over to an unknown script. I suppose we should save these pages to our favorites.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BritBlue 12 7 6 4 2

The discussions were in English (although I had to write from the right to the left which was a bit weird) I put the link to the original thread above if you want to have a look :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 3

Yes, I met you there earlier; but, as I was coming from English, I wasn't sure if you were seeing the same thing exactly. That is cool, for how else could you have escaped. I should have known that we can type in any form in the discussions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BritBlue 12 7 6 4 2

Just looked at your username, I remember you now :) Yes for some reason it was in English, maybe it automatically takes to you the threads that are in the language you type? If you type in Arabic maybe it takes you to the Arabic speaking threads.....

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BritBlue 12 7 6 4 2

Took me a few goes to actually post anything though as I was just randomly clicking Arabic buttons to try and post something! lol When we were in the discussion all the buttons etc were still in Arabic, I just kept clicking on the green one to post....

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

BillDe 13 10 7 5 3 3 2

I did this intentionally. Since there is no English to Arabic course, I figured I knew enough Arabic to learn more by doing the Arabic to English course. This worked fine, BUT: 1) It was extremely difficult to figure out how to get back to English. (Thanks for that answer.) 2) Duolingo doesn't remember my work as a speaker of a different language. All of my work in different languages is gone when I'm in Arabic. And my Arabic is gone when I'm in English. ?????

0Give Lingot•7 months ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

Here is another post on how to change courses, languages"

This one show you quite a few ways to do it with pictures as examples as well.

Thank you so much for putting this post up :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Kollberg 4 3

Thanks for this! Was in Dutch for 3 days

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SeldenDeem 3

Even though I have studied Arabic, it's pretty rusty. The one critical thing missing from this post is to click on the GREEN "Save changes" button ABOVE the learning language menu. In most languages, this button will be above and to the right, but with a left to right language, it's above and to the left of the learning language menu. I kept expecting the Save changes button to be anywhere but above the menu, hence 24 hours to get out of this trap.

I had to use Google Translate to decrypt the button texts — a dictionary of classical Arabic isn't much help with 21st century online terminology.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jess_kf 11 8 6 2
Thank you so much!

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Charlie359 13 3
thank you so much for this!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NIKO-168 3 2 2
Help! Everything is in korean and I don't understand anything. Can I change the duolingo page language to English again?? (I am refering to the language of the page, not the ones I want to learn)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

george362569 8 3 65
The directions various people posted may work for you, but didn't for me. Duolingo changes over time, and the steps might depend on your phone (Android, iPhone) and if you are using the web browser. Here's what I did: 1. Create a new Duolingo account in English using another email address. 2. Log into that account in one browser. 3. Log into my main Duolingo account in another browser. 4. Carefully navigate to the "settings" in both accounts. Basically, use your new account as a guide, then do the same thing on your original account. The menu items are typically in the same positions. Change the language to English on both accounts and you should be set. Lastly, for me, my mobile app was correct the next time it was launched.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

truemi 25 12 6 6 5 1
If you change your learning language (say, if I changed mine from English to French) and take a course from that language, will your progress in your current course (in this case, English) be erased?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BritBlue 12 7 6 4 2
Hi Truemi, well when I finally managed to change back to English the 'English for Arabic' speaker's course that I somehow enrolled for was listed with my other Spanish, French etc for English speakers courses, however I promptly removed it for fear it might get me again lol So I think you can swap native languages without your course/progress being erased (the whole ordeal didn't affect my levels) but please double check before you do anything - I don't want to be responsible for you losing any of your hard work! :) Hope that helped!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BritBlue 12 7 6 4 2

It might be an idea to set up another account and set up that account in French and keep your current one in English if you want to be on the safe side.... :)

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1154

There's no need for multiple accounts. You can swap between base languages as often as you like. I do it probably several times in an average day, swapping from the Eng-->Fre course to "learning English" through the Fre-->Eng course.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BritBlue 12 7 6 4 2

Great! Is there a FAQ's section? I've been wondering about a few things but can't seem to find much info, unless I'm missing it as I only joined a few days ago....

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 3

Osagiboy lists a Wiki to help with this in this discussion:

https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5416008\$comment_id=5417114

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

truemi 25 12 6 6 5 1

All right, thanks. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Okspamish 2

Thank you @britblue & @stwel!! Never missed English this badly, haha.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PineKnee 15 12

THANK YOU!!!!!! I so needed this...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jenifar2016 3

Thanks!! This helped me so so much!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jessen123 5 4

Thank you so much!! This was really helpful!! I was super stuck and I thought I would've had to restart my progress, but thanks to you I don't.

Once again, thank you!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jessen123 5 4

Thank you so much!! Very helpful!! I was stuck in a rough situation and thought i would've had to restart!! Once again, thANKS

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ipodgirl45 7 6

Thank you so much I really appreciate your help! I thought that my doulingo was going to stay like that forever! I shall give you an lingot in reward! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TansyMagiz 11

THANK YOU SO MUCH !! -hugs hugs hugs - ~Tansy

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

superseller 9

It worked - gracias!

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

neilcarr 18

Mine has turned Greek...at least that's what it looks like.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

LACKMANLaurie 13

Thank goodness this post exist!!!! I'm a Cadet Teacher and when students don't sign out people change the language and I couldn't figure it out!

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

adamcroft3 6

thanks so much

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

hvalli 7 6 6 5 42

Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Symone_0702 5

make sure you press save

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

kala129620

I am having trouble with getting mine back to English. I don't remember what language I clicked on. Google translate isn't helping much. Help. I'm using an iPhone. So how would I go about doing it from my phone. Or can I do it from the website? Thank you

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

LisaKendell 13

Thank you so much. I've been tearing my hair out for a while now trying to fix this.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

SusanE.0 2

It worked fantastically! Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

YannireNT 8

I did it and it worked. It reset me back to zero though but I don't care. The structures in French are similar to the structures in Spanish, I was getting confused translating from English to French.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

NachCount 6

omg thanks!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Xfodude 6

Thank you so much!

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

isabellmoss 9 4 2

you did not say that the little weight box was on the side, i was looking forever to find it and was getting upset because i am a long way on german and i do not want to start over, but thx overall

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

katie.schadler 7

Oh my gosh! THANK YOU SO MUCH! I WAS REALLY STRUGGLING.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

claudio59480 6

Unfortunately I couldn't find a way to change the language to my native language (Spanish) . What I made was logged out and choose a new profile with my iPhone language in Spanish.

Unfortunately may the language attached to our profile can not be changed for us. For that reason a make a new profile.

Duolingo team may fix these issues.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•6 months ago

ZoeRoberts14 3

this worked thanks so much i looked at so many websites and videos thanks

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

RedAshSilver 6 6

thank you soooooooooooooooooooooooooooooo much, i made this mistake in spanish class in school and it was a big joke. i couldn't get this undone for almost 2 years

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

SpreaficoE 5

That was so helpful! I have been trying to change my settings since last year! Yay!

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Raven1390 14

OMG! You saved my life! I was messing around and accidentally changed mine to Japanese! Thank you!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

KavitaH 11 2 2

Thanks so much!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

TillLindemann69 8 2

Oh my god, thank you soo much, i accidently put my language in japanese, lol.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Valhalla300 13 8 6 6 5 4 1

Thanks Britblue.... I was getting really pissed off because I was afraid they had a blunder in the way they programmed this. I was able to get back to all my original courses. I think DuoLingo really needs to modify this because it is a terrible setup. I was just trying to see if I could look at their English course because occasionally I have questions about grammar that I can't find online. Of course the only way to see an English course if you are an English speaker, is to change the language so you can see it as one of the course options. I never thought it would be this messed up to try to get back... :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Wh1t3F4lc0n777 15 10 6 5 3 2 2 2

Thx A billion times!!!!!!!!!!!!!!1

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

ginhonpeptink 3
Thank you helped so much

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

AnyadeLucia

I need some help with changing the language that you read to sign out and view your profile. I speak english, but all I read right now is Ukrainian. Please help me change the language that I am not learning!! Thanks:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 3
<https://www.duolingo.com/course/es/en/Learn-Spanish-Online> Just click on the white encircled button with white text and Poof! You are back in English. If you did not want to learn Spanish from English, click on the words "All Courses" on the top left of the picture. and choose the one you want. This link was given to us during a different discussion by bchan, a moderator.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

DiamondDamsfly 7 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2
Thanks a lot helped so much! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mswilddaisy

This was very helpful. Here's an additional example. Let's say you want to learn French and suddenly your page is in vietnamese. When you follow these steps, do not chose French as the Language you want to learn in English. Chose something else to learn in English, (remember to save using the green button) then you can change it back to French after your page updates to english. Good Luck.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JohnOuelle1 4
Awesome!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lahiale 9 8 8 6
Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

countryred 18 32

what happened to me: my own language change d to russian and I can not change it back. I followed your steps too and nothing changed , all my hard work gone!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 3

What is your original language? <https://www.duolingo.com/settings/direction> At this site, click on the button written in blue on white with a blue circle around it and you will see a list of all the languages Duolingo has to offer printed in the language to be learned from, pick one you understand in your language or one you already know and click on it. Then click on the button which is usually on the top right printed in white words on Green which is "Save changes" written in whatever language you happen to be in now. Then you will be in the base language that you have chosen. Please remember that you just cannot see your other work, it is not gone. It is waiting for you to return to your other base language.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

countryred 18 32
thank you very much or merci beau coup!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 3
Vous êtes bienvenue.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SeldenDeem 3
Unless it's a language with a right to left writing system (like Arabic), in which case, the green button moves to top LEFT.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 3
Yes, you are correct! At least it is still green and near the top, thank you for catching that!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

slmUSA 9 5
OMGosh, thanks! I was stuck on Chinese, too. ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cpatschke 15 3 2
THANK-YOU... I was stuck on this and was not getting an answer back from Duolingo. This was a GREAT help!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Barrrb 9
Thank you, I was stuck on russian

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sjvoubve 8
thx. so much I changed mines to ukrainsh and I had no idea what to do .

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Skuronto 5 2

thank you soooooo much! i accidentally changed it to Hungarian and tried for 3 days to change it back

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Cathie8 22 7 5 7

Help, this is not working for me I am still stuck in Chinese

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PopcornGif 8

Omg thx so much! This reeeeeeeally helped me! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

brennaughfey 11 4 2

I don't think you've made a mistake... but your suggestions didn't work for me! I did all you said but I'm stuck in Arabic so I can't tell what to do on the last step!! Help! :) trinam60@gmail.com

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Leiska107 7 5 2

Thank you very much! I gave you a lingot.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PeterSubra1 8 5 5 2

THANK YOU SO MUCH!!!!!! T__T

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mawnar 4

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bongani2m 6 3

Thanks that is helpful.. I nearly had to learn Chinese just to figure how to change back to English :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Devilini 11 8 5

I thought it was some kind of weird immersion thing. I did learn something - I geef you 2 lingot ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

geraldinfla 25 9 6 2 2

Thank you so much for the instructions. I was in Japanese as my base language. Have an awesome day!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GabrielDayot 16 10 9 8 7 6 4 4 2 2

Thanks for this and here's a lingot.. I was so nervous when I clicked Japanese (just for fun). I thought my Spanish, Swedish and German courses were deleted. Thanks again.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gingerninja3148 25 19 16 13 74

Thank you so much! I selected to do the English for German speakers course and suddenly I couldn't see any of my other languages and I had no idea how to change back. I nearly had a heart attack until I saw this post.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Friesia 15 10 8 99

Thank you so much! I was so bummed with myself when I couldn't read a thing...now all fixed thanks to you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

judibjordan 12 5

Did not work

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jennesy 17 15 14 13 9 8 8 5 2 2 4

THANK YOU SO MUCH! I changed my settings into Chinese like a dummy. I know no Chinese. Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KatarinaZebarina 18 10 9 4 12

Thank you so much, this was so helpful in solving a crisis :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alexandra279260 4

I accidentally changed it to a different language like I can't get back to my original account. I am really confused and am struggling! Someone please help!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

LivviLivs 6

Still didn't work on mine... unfortunately it's still in Chinese!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

myrois 12 3
You are a life saver.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Laura271897 12 11 10 10 10 6 5 5 4 3
Thank you so much for this, I accidentally changed my language to Greek and was suddenly so confused. Kind of ironic considering this is a language learning website, haha.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

peytonnaomi 7
THAAANK YOOUU everything was in Japanese and I thought I was gonna have to make a new account haha

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

roygo217 3 2 2 2
Thank you....it worked!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Janice174094 3
You saved my butt, I was stuck in all Korean text for the longest time! Thank you!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lynette77777 13
Thanks so much for posting. I was learning french and all of a sudden I was stuck in Portuguese. Ha Ha. Thanks so much for your help.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GerardDolan
Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cpersinwilson 20 6 4 2 5 11
Thanks for this. I accidentally changed my language to Chinese and that was a real struggle to try to fix. This advice helped!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ellie.hanks 7 1
Omg thank you so much, I literally changed my language to Greek and I had no idea what to do.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kevinwithers 7

EVERYTHING is in Arabic. The only thing I can do is change my picture. I tried deleting the app and downloading it again but nothing changed

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SilverRosePetals 23 19 14 12 10 71
Thank you so so much, that helped a ton!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Nicolas-Manaois 2
thx for the link now my friends are giving me lingots because i did give lingots too thx for idea it help me alot

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mieren47 8 5
And the last step, after the ones listed by BritBlue above - 5 Don't click on the green button. Instead click on the script (mine when I got stuck in Arabic didn't even look like a button and the the script was green) slightly above and to the left (or right, depending on what language you're stuck in) to save changes.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

geenpaniek 12 2
help i did this, but how do i confirm. I think my base language might be greek or something judging from the characters. Not sure how i" ever get back te this thread to read the answer though... :(Ive gone to the settings/ direction. Chosen a few language i speak (i know english) but my base language continues to be russian or greek or something i really do not understand

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1154
Can you hover over the round flag next to your round picture (or where your picture would be had you added one), which are to the left of your user name in the top menu? So left of your streak flame? Since I'm learning multiple languages, I get a whole list of languages when I do that, you might get only one, but at the bottom there is a row of text that doesn't have a round flag next to it. Click on that, and you should get to the page where you can choose courses, with a drop down menu on the top right where you have to choose a language you know. If you are in Russian, English will be called английский or по.английски, depending on the phrasing. Then pick the course you want, and be sure to click the oval "button" with text in it under the name of the course, next to the picture, to actually switch to it.

I'm posting this on your stream as well, in case you can't see it here. I have to say your user name clashes funnily with your current predicament. :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

george362569 8 3 65
The directions various people posted may work for you, but didn't for me. Duolingo changes over time, and the steps might depend on your phone (Android, iPhone) and if you are using the web browser. Here's what I did: 1. Create a new Duoling account in English using another email address. 2. Log into that account in one browser. 3. Log into my main Duolingo account in another browser. 4. Carefully navigate to the "settings" in both accounts. Basically, use your new account as a guide, then do the same thing on your original account. The menu items are typically in the same positions. Change the language to English on both accounts and you should be set. Lastly, for me, my mobile app was correct the next time it was launched.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

susan391776 13 5

Thank you. This happened to me and I realized I had no way to contact DuoLingo. Your solution was perfect.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

DougSandlin 16 90

VERY helpful - have a lingot - and thanks!! I accidentally changed it to Hindi, which, fortunately my partner speaks - but your explanation still made the fix MUCH easier.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Ridley-C 12 6 3 3 3 66

Merci beaucoup!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

pasnon 9 3

THANK YOU! lol I was stuck in Hindi for a while there :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

dreh_schultz 6 1

it brought me to languages in English but it treated it like i knew English and Greek (my friends turned it to Greek as a prank) but the main site language was still greek:(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

noelle435 5 5 4 3 1

Thank you soooo much.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

124 Unable to advance to the next lessons

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/9124958>

FreakWhorf 14 7

I'm trying to get to Present and Demonstrative tense lessons for French but keep getting this error message that says "could not connect to duolingo. Please start session again"

Give Lingot2

11 year ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

pumbo1 12 10

For those who encounter the same problem - try to sign out and login again. Click 'Profile' -> 'Settings' -> 'Sign out', and then login. It worked for me.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gbannoff 6 6

After being unable to use Duolingo on my iPhone for several days, your advice worked. Thank you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

If the problem persists, I recommend messaging bchan. Be sure to mention what operating system and browser you're using. (For example, I'm using Windows7, Chrome.) Until then, try emptying your browser, Checking to see if your computer needs to do any updates, then signing out and signing back in and trying the lesson over. Also, be sure that your internet connection is stable.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FreakWhorf 14 7

I realized I neglected to mention- I'm using the duolingo app.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

It sounds like an internet connection problem to me. But, I'm not a tech. You'll still need to let bchan know more about what you're using, as each app is a little different and the problem could have different causes. So, if it is a phone app, which phone. If you know what version of the app you have that would be great too. If it's a tablet, what version and make. That kind of stuff. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jenelah 8

I can't advance to the next level = adjectives, tenses etc have tried 2 days

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I just checked your stats and it says your next skill is Colors, Lesson 1. Try this link for me: <https://www.duolingo.com/skill/fr/Colors> If that doesn't work, then just go to your Home tab and click on the Colors skill icon. It should open for you. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aymn7 4

I'm also suffer from the the same problem on IOS app.However I could log to the website and work without problems which means the connectivity is OK

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

125 How can I skip the basics?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204641974-How-can-I-skip-the-basics->

If you have previous experience with a language and feel that lessons are too easy, there are several ways to advance more quickly, skipping ahead by unlocking grayed out skills and lessons.

1. Take a placement test. This option is available the first time you start a new language tree to make sure you are placed in a spot that isn't too easy for you.
2. To test out of individual skills (e.g. Basics 1), press the button in the top right corner of any skill page that says "Test out of this skill." If you can pass this test, you will instantly learn the skill.
3. If you would rather test out of many skills at once, you can click on the checkpoints (keyholes) found throughout your skill tree on the home page. Passing this test will unlock all skills in the tree up to that point.

126 What are levels?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/209669946-What-are-levels->

When you learn on Duolingo, you earn points and "level up." The XP levels you get in each language course correspond directly to how many XP (points) you earned while doing that course. You earn points by practicing and successfully completing lessons.

XP levels do not correspond to language proficiency or skill, but it does reflect effort and time spent. The Fluency Score, however, does reflect skill according how you have been performing on Duolingo. Learn more about that here.

Levels are displayed on your profile and near your avatar in forum discussions, next to the flag icon of the language you are learning.

The maximum level you can reach is 25.

How to see your level

To see your level on the website, go to "Your Profile", under your avatar:

Duolingo My Profile

Your levels will show up on the column on the right hand side, under "languages". You can also see your total points and how far you have to go to reach the next level.

Duolingo My Level

127 Grammar: Jij vs. Je / Zij vs. Ze / Wij vs. We

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3734337>

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

As the title suggests, this grammar explanation thread concerns the difference (in use) between marked and unmarked pronouns. This is really about the difference in Dutch between the pronouns that receive emphasis, and those that do not.

The marked and unmarked pronouns

Thusly, we have several pronouns which have a marked/stressed and a standard, unmarked form. These are the ones we're talking about:

As you may have guessed, the Ik (= I), Hij (= he), and Jullie (= You, plural) forms do not have both a marked and an unmarked version.

When we, the Dutch, feel like emphasizing an inanimate entity, a 'thing', which we address with 'het' or 'hij' (it) and 'ze' (they), then we choose to use a demonstrative pronoun.

Anecdote: Interestingly, there's a difference between the Dutch spoken in the Netherlands and that spoken in Flanders (Flemish) in this respect. Flemish, in fact, uses 'ze' for the inanimate feminine nouns. In contrast, in the Netherlands, inanimate entities, or things, are not described as being feminine and generally approached with either the 'it' pronoun or the masculine 'hij'.

So when do we use marked pronouns?

Yes, this distinction between different pronouns is not for naught. It actually has a function. We use marked pronouns when we want to emphasize the pronoun. Generally speaking, you'll use one version or the other depending on the situation you are in. However, in speech there are cases in which an unmarked pronoun fits better than a marked pronoun, and vice versa. You'll get a feeling for this by learning the language. Also remember not to stress an unmarked pronoun and note this: we use unmarked pronouns more frequently than their marked versions.

How do we emphasize the pronoun?

Obviously, we first use the right version: zij, or ze, wij, or we, and jij, or je.

However, when we give emphasis to the pronoun we increase our pitch

We also tend to increase our volume, ever so slightly

In addition, the word is also pronounced 'longer' (its duration is stretched in comparison to that of the unmarked pronoun). Thus, in contrast, when you're using an unmarked pronoun, you should emphasize another part of the sentence (instead of the pronoun).

Examples

Jij vs. Je (marked vs. Unmarked)

"Jij moet dat doen." = "You have to do that" (that's you, and not me!)

"Je moet dat doen." = "You have to do that" (in order to...)

Zij vs. Ze (marked vs. Unmarked)

"Zij wil vandaag zwemmen." = "She wants to swim today." (but I don't....)

"Ze wil vandaag zwemmen." = "She wants to swim today."

Dat vs. Het (marked vs. Unmarked)

"Dat klopt niet." = "That is not correct". (something specific is incorrect).

"Het klopt niet." = "It is not correct". (something in general is incorrect).

Deze/die vs. Hij (marked vs. Unmarked)

"Deze geeft licht" = "This one gives light".

"Hij geeft licht" = "It gives light".

Wij vs. we (marked vs. Unmarked)

“Wij komen niet.” = “We are not coming.” (but the others are...)

“We komen niet.” = “We are not coming.”

Zij vs. Ze (marked vs. Unmarked)

“Zij luisteren nooit naar ons.” = “They never listen to us.” (talking about a group in specific)

“Ze luisteren nooit naar ons.” = “They never listen to us.” (talking about some group in general)

Deze/die vs. Ze (inanimate entities/things)

“Deze horen daar niet bij.” = “These ones do not belong with that.”

“Ze horen daar niet bij.” = “They do not belong with that.”

Return to Grammar Overview!

Give Lingot64

2472 years ago

Leave a new comment

81 Comments

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

This may be the conventional way of explaining the difference, but it appears to me that at least for jij/je, zij/ze, wij/we it is misleading. For example, Google Books has almost twice as many hits for "wij zijn" as for "we zijn". This wouldn't make sense if wij were just the stressed/emphasised/marked version of we. Stressed, emphasised and marked are relatively precise linguistic terms which in the majority of uses of wij obviously don't apply.

There is what I consider a much clearer explanation here, in German, from a native Dutch speaker. She refers to the variants as full and reduced and explains that the full version can be either stressed or unstressed, but the reduced version can only be used when the pronoun is unstressed. She also explains that there is a bias towards the full forms in the written language and towards the reduced forms in the spoken language.

This is completely logical as the reduced versions are what comes out naturally when you pronounce the full versions sloppily. This helps to predict/remember some usage distinctions that would otherwise be arbitrary:

Why can't the reduced versions be stressed? - Because stress is incompatible with sloppy pronunciation.

Why can the full versions be unstressed? - Because careful pronunciation doesn't imply stress.

Why is there a preference for the full versions in writing, and an extremely strong one in older literature? - Because the full versions can be thought of (or at least were once thought of) as 'more correct' in the same fuzzy sense in which some native English speakers think of it as 'more correct' than it's.

Why can some of the reduced versions also stand for more than one pronoun? - Because sloppy pronunciation can make two different words such as jij and jouw sound the same.

PS: When I came back to add a reference to some linguistic literature, I found that this post at -1 with no comments. I think that's bad form. If I am wrong I would love to get an explanation why I am wrong. It's hard to learn from a downvote.

I don't know how to search for literature on Dutch linguistics systematically. Here are quotations from what I found with my unsystematic search:

Marlies van der Velde, The asymmetry of Dutch weak pronouns. This paper is only about object pronouns. (The present post by Lavinae is about subject pronouns.) Still it's interesting to note the terminology she uses: "Dutch has two series of pronouns: a series of full forms (strong pronouns) and a series of reduced forms. The status of these reduced forms is the subject of some debate." Frank van Eynde, On the notion 'minor preposition'. "Like French and Italian, Dutch has two types of personal pronouns: the full or tonic ones and the reduced ones [...]. The most conspicuous difference between the two types is a phonological one: while the full pronouns can be stressed, the reduced ones cannot. [...] Next to the phonological and syntactic differences there is also a semantic one. Whereas the full pronouns are always used as the argument of some predicate, be it a verb, a preposition or an adjective, the reduced ones can also be used in positions which are not assigned any semantic role. In other words, the reduced forms may have semantically vacuous uses, whereas the full forms are always referential."

To sum this up, linguists refer to the two kinds of pronouns as full and reduced, or as major and minor, and it appears they have good reasons for this choice of terminology.

77ReplyGive Lingot10•2 years ago

wataya 25 25 25 25 25 25 23 20 10 9 9 5 1159

Thanks, these are some really interesting points and probably worth considering. But please be patient with Team Dutch :) They are all very busy right now. And the choice between a more precise terminology and a commonly (as far as the Dutch language teaching community is concerned, if I understand Lavinae correctly) established terminology, is certainly not an easy one.

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

I didn't demand any immediate action, did I? And I am sure I wouldn't have used so many words if I understood the situation better myself. I'm just learning the language, and while doing so I realised that what may well be the conventional way of teaching the two kinds of pronouns wasn't so helpful. I realised that because I did the reverse course before, where it wasn't explained, and at the time I found the extremely helpful and linguistically sound explanation on buurtaal.de. (English for Dutch speakers came out before Dutch for English speakers; as a speaker of German and English I found it a fast and efficient way to learn Dutch.)

4ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

Ikamjh 22 16 10 5

This reminds me of how my grandfather (who doesn't speak any dutch) speaks English... He always puts a ton of emphasis to show these same things pretty much... I think people usually put some emphasis, but he especially puts a lot.

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DEtben 8 7

This is interesting - but in the app it asks me to translate but without context or inflection. How am I supposed to know? I often feel like its a 50/50 guess.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Often both versions are correct. If you feel that the personal pronoun probably isn't stressed in English, then it probably isn't stressed in Dutch either. In this case you have free choice in principle, but should prefer the more casual je or ze because native speakers normally prefer it in this situation. But if the personal pronoun is stressed in English, then it's probably stressed in Dutch as well. Since you can't stress je or ze, you must use jij or zij.

If you are confused and you just want to make sure not to make a mistake: Whenever je/ze is possible, jij/zij is also possible, so by always choosing jij/zij you are on the safe side.

Except that je can also mean jou[w] (your), in which case obviously it would be a mistake to use jij. By the way, that's another trick: If you can't decide whether it should be jou or jouw, you can just use je instead.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DETben 8 7

I understand that, but the app marks it incorrect is my point. It will say to translate a simple declarative sentence but if i use the wrong pronoun it marks it incorrect - even though there isn't enough information for me to make an informed decision.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8
Can you give an example?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DETben 8 7

Sure. I will say 'Translate "She drinks milk."

I will put "Ze drinkt melk."

But it will mark it incorrect because it wanted "Zij drinkt melk."

Something like this has happened a few times.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lizavazquez 3

Same here !

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Maybe whatever method was used to ensure that je is always accepted instead of jij and that we is accepted instead of wij doesn't work for ze instead of zij: If it's automatic, then maybe it wasn't implemented. If it is done by hand, maybe it wasn't done as systematically as for the other pairs.

I verified with Onze Taal that ze can always be used instead of unstressed zij, whether it is used as a plural pronoun or as a feminine singular pronoun.

Next time this happens, please report the additional correct answer with the form provided.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

OmaJennie 11 10 9

Maybe it's because Duo reads this sentence as: SHE drinks milk, rather than as She drinks MILK.

0Give Lingot•9 months ago

Simius 19 10 5 5

That is definitely not supposed to happen. If you can provide a screenshot, that could be very helpful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MentalPinball 15 13 11 11 8 7 2 1

I've had this very same thing today and almost every day since I started the course /I think about a week ago)...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

El2theK 25 18 11 11 10 7 5 4 3

With translation exercises or listening exercises? In a listening exercise only one is correct as there's a difference in pronunciation.

4Give Lingot•1 year ago

DETben 8 7

I haven't run across it again. But if I do I will take a screenshot.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

psmuppet 10 4

Yes, this also happened for me yesterday and I hadn't read about ze/zij yet so I was very confused about why I was wrong. I will take a screen shot if it happens again! :)

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

Dank je wel!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BritBlue 12 7 6 4 2

Dank u!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lull0000 12 9

Greetings all.

So I'm wondering how frequently the emphasized pronouns are used in Dutch compared to English. In English, it doesn't seem like emphasizing nouns and pronouns is all that frequent, unless you're trying to make a point or something, but I gather that it must be quite a bit more frequent in Dutch than in English if there's a whole set of pronouns devoted to it. Any thoughts?

Thank you!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

It is very frequent in Dutch. The fact that one of the pronouns is marked and the other unmarked is useful in poetic contexts, in literature and other cases of written Dutch and when you want to get a specific message (with emphasis) across in a conversational context (also for the sake of clarity).

Generally speaking, however, in spoken Dutch we sometimes use one of the two because of their (un)marked nature, but (I personally have to admit that) we also just use either form, without giving it much thought. Whereas the distinction is certainly there and at times very useful, in practice it often disappears (it being of no concern) and these personal pronouns are used interchangeably. :)

I'm a native speaker so I rarely put much conscious thought into my use of marked vs. unmarked pronouns. I only really think about which pronoun I use when I want to get a specific message across, which emphasizes a particular individual. For instance: "Zij heeft dat gedaan" (= she has done it (it wasn't me)). This happens about less than once a week. :)

In sum: Yes, marked pronouns are used very frequently. Even though the distinction can be usefully used for clarification purposes and the use of one pronoun over the other does make a difference (in certain situations), the marked and unmarked pronouns are also very much used interchangeably.

18ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

I am quite unhappy about your 'marked'/'unmarked' terminology. Where does it come from?

'Marked' has a (somewhat) precise linguistic definition, see e.g. the Wikipedia article on markedness. Your doubtless correct statement that the full/major/tonic pronouns are used very frequently, even though the reduced/minor pronouns are often preferred, basically contradicts your terminology. If something is very frequent it can't be marked.

The definition of markedness depends on context. To say that jij is marked in a specific context and je is unmarked in that context implies that one would expect je to be used, and if someone uses jij instead people consciously take note of the fact. This may be true in many contexts, but there are frequent contexts in which either is perfectly normal, and there are also frequent contexts in which jij is not only unmarked but is in fact required, since je isn't just marked but is outright wrong. Nobody chooses je when they want to stress it. Even when not stressing the first word in "Jij met je eeuwige gezeur", nobody would replace it by je. And, I suppose (this is the only example I made up on my own), nobody would reply to the question "Wie ben ik?" by saying je rather than jij.

Je being so reduced in applicability in comparison to jij, if there is an objective measure of markedness (i.e. independent of context), then it seems to be je that is marked, and jij that is unmarked, because jij is a normal full pronoun like those in most Indoeuropean languages, whereas there are special rules for when je is allowed.

The 'emphasized'/'unemphasized' terminology isn't better, either, since very often jij is not actually emphasized at all.

-3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

Johaquila, I understand that you don't agree with the terminology, but your arguments and words are a bit excessive.

My use of this terminology is based on how language courses teach Dutch, recognized courses such as those provided by IntertaaL and Klare Taal! and as referred to on language reference forums. In fact, the company I work for also teaches pronouns this way. Now I understand that a number of linguists may see this differently. This is however how, indeed, these pronouns are conventionally taught. Besides that, our students are not all linguists and complicating a matter unnecessarily does not aid understanding.

I repeat: I'm willing to look into your material and reflect on it, but you do need to give me some time to do so.

12ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Sorry if I have given you the impression that I'm in a hurry. I am certainly not. The reason I have commented so much about this - yes, in retrospect it may well be excessive - is that I slowly learned about the connections while answering other learners' questions as best I could. My comments reflect the various iterations of my understanding.

I believe it is not at all rare that the terminology used in education is far from optimal. There is of course a benefit to being consistent with other courses. On the other hand there is also a benefit to not abusing the terminology of linguistic researchers, and most importantly to not confusing learners by, e.g., first implying that jij is always stressed and then somehow taking it back. I am not accusing you of that, but there does seem to be some widespread confusion in this area. (This confusion is normal. It always happens when a language has special features that don't exist in certain more prestigious languages. E.g. it explains the confusion about English will and shall, or about the so-called split infinitive. These don't exist in Latin, so the old grammarians couldn't simply copy ideas from Latin grammars, as they normally did.) The line covering this topic in the first lesson is not misleading, or at most a tiny little bit: "Je, ze and we are un-emphasized forms of jij, zij and wij." Some learners may be inclined to believe that consequently jij, zij and wij are emphasized forms, but logically it doesn't follow.

PS: Maybe I am suffering from a déformation professionnelle. For me as a mathematician, it is normal to be objectively wrong on occasion and to be told by others when that happens. And it is normal for me to immediately point it out when I think someone else is wrong.

In this case it isn't even so much about wrong or false as it is about comprehensible explanations, another thing very dear to mathematicians. In the culture that I am coming from, when someone can think of a more comprehensible explanation of some phenomenon than the seminar speaker, it's perfectly normal to immediately address the audience. It is also normal to then, occasionally, be told by the speaker why one is wrong, after all, and things can't be explained so simply.

Let me add that at least for me the urge to contribute in this way is much greater if the seminar talk, or in this case the language course, is excellent. And to the extent that I have seen it, this course is really outstanding. Please don't take anything I have written as complaining. I didn't mean it that way.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

My understanding is that it's not so much about emphasis, but really about clear and non-sloppy pronunciation. This corresponds to not using a contraction in English when you could. Normally it doesn't matter whether you use a contraction or not, but obviously you can't stress a word when you have contracted its syllable away. Similarly, you never pronounce an emphasised word sloppily, e.g. replacing the clear ie/ay sound of jij by the neutral schwa sound of je.

Maybe Dutch is a bit further advanced on the path towards a grammatical difference between two words jij and je as opposed to just a phonetic phenomenon making the vowel of English is optionally disappear if it's unstressed. But I don't think you can make any mistakes by just ignoring this and thinking of English contractions as a perfect analogy.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cassecou 16 14 7 7 7 7 6 6 2 2

Dank u wel!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LinoBordin 14 12 11 10 8 8 2 2

Jij "rock"!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

charmedankiet 12 4 3 2

Love the Dutch!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Senor_dan 20 17 9 8 7 6 4

Really great explanation. Dank u!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BadgerBarton 11 7 6 6 3

Dank U!!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Guy_Bailey 11 10 9 6 4

Dank u wel!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sims_gr8 20 6 6
Dank u!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Thalass 17 8
Dank u zeer!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PopTartTastic 9 9 7 7 6 6 5 4

I have a few questions concerning other pronouns. What is the difference between: 1. Dit and Dat?
2. Deze and Die? 3. U and Jij/Je?

Thank you in advance.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8 dit en dat: this and that deze en die: these and those (but die also has other meanings)

u, jullie en jij: you (polite singular and plural), you (informal plural) and thou (informal singular)

The last explanation only makes sense when read in Early Modern English, the language of the King James Bible. (And even then it's obviously not perfect, as you was ambiguous even then.) Thou was the familiar form of address for a single person. You was originally just the plural version of thou, what in Dutch is jullie. Then people started to address single people in the plural when they wanted to be polite. In Dutch, it was more common to say something like your honour, which over time was abbreviated to u.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PopTartTastic 9 9 7 7 6 6 5 4
Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OmaJennie 11 10 9

Sorry, but "thou" used to be (and still is by some peoples) used in very intimate situations, like "du". So when you read your King James Bible, remember to read the "thee's, thou's, thy's, and thine's" as though the writer/speaker is speaking directly to you on a personal level. 'You' in the KJV is not a confusion; rather, it is a distinction between personal and less personal (but not necessarily impersonal) communication.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

KdPomi 15 12 12 11 9

You are correct, more precisely the usage of Kings James mirrors the Hebrew, with 'thou' used for the Hebrew 'ata' & 'at' (את & אתה) which are the singular versions of you/thou for males and females respectively, while 'you' is restricted to translating the Hebrew 'atem' & 'aten' (אתם & אתך) which are the plural versions (again, masc. & fem.) of 'ata' & 'at' and are never translated by 'thou.'

I still use the old 2nd person singular, but almost only in writing and only to my children. I do still occasionally fall into a use of it that was more common in my 1950s rural childhood, which is to use it when directly cursing someone, but do try not to! Anyway, it is usually behind the closed windows of my car, so no harm no foul.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

ErikBoyle 15 14 10 3 3 2 546

The KJV was published in 1611 and even then it was stylistically conservative or even out of date. This was a time (see: Shakespeare) when you and thou contrasted in formality, but set the clock back a couple hundred years or so to account for the translators' conservatism, and you reach a time when you was not uniformly established as the singular formal pronoun and thou was possible for any level of formality. Thus the translators often erred on dividing thou and you only by plurality, not formality. Any intimacy one tries to read into the use of thou in the KJV is mostly a historical accident resulting from our later conception of what we believe thou was supposed to mean.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

NOR5K 15 9 8 6 6

In Basics, because I just started Dutch today, one sentence is "Zij is een meisje en ik ben een jongen". Is the "zij" a "zij" because it's like "SHE is a girl, and I'm not"? Maybe it's just a stupid sentence. Maybe I just need more experience with Dutch. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

coforidan 5

Is there a way to stress the male pronoun "he"? Why is there only one way of saying "he" (hij) versus two ways of saying "she" (ze, zij)? Thank you in advance!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

If you want to stress hij, just stress it like you would do in English. The other, 'stressed', pronouns wij, jij, zij aren't stressed, either, unless you actually do stress them the way you do in English. The terminology used in this course is misleading. Wij, jij, zij aren't stresséd, they are stressáble. That is, if you want to stress one of the unstresséd and unstressáble pronouns we, je, ze, you have to replace it by wij, jij or zij.

This is much like contractions in English. If English were taught like Dutch, a learner of English might ask why there is no way to stress nothing, whereas you can stress n't by replacing it by not. The obvious answer is that not isn't actually automatically stressed and that the real difference is that it's impossible to stress n't because it has no vowel. So instead of "No, it isn't!" you say "No, it is not!" (This argument is slightly problematic because the contracted not in isn't is in practice often stressed by moving the stress to the vowel i, i.e. by stressing is. Logically this makes little sense, though. It's just a workaround.)

Similarly, we, je, ze are the result of replacing the (variable but) clear ij sound in wij, jij, zij by a neutral schwa sound. As to why this doesn't work for hij - I don't really know for sure, but there is a number of plausible explanations:

To me (as a native German speaker), he, pronounced in the Dutch way, feels slightly strange to pronounce. The consonant h is quite different from w, j, z, and saying he feels a little bit like pronouncing only the vowel. Somehow it doesn't feel like a full word. If Dutch speakers feel the same way, it makes sense that they always pronounce hij in full.

He is just an aspirated e and the aspiration is easy to miss. And the point of e instead of ij is precisely that it's short, unstressed, indefinite - in fact, almost absent. This is probably just the explanation of my feelings about this (non-)word.

The modern Dutch pronouns are the result of merging pronouns in different cases. Maybe there was a case for which wij sounded a bit like we, one for which jij sounded a bit like je, and one for which zij sounded a bit like ze - but none for which hij sounded a bit like he.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Aleksandreign 14 14

I do not understand when to use die and when deze as the stressed subject pronoun for an object in 3rd person plural.

You used deze. Here: <http://www.dutchgrammar.com/en/?n=Pronouns.ps02> only an example with die is given.

Die staan je heel goed.

It seems to me that an English sentence "THEY look very good on you" could be translated either way.

The same goes for the the stressed pronouns in 3rd person singular.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Gymnastical 16 16 11 11 10 9 6 6 3

That got me frustrated too. I found the answer on onzetaal.nl/taaladvies and took notes on it. It's in Dutch but I used Google Translate. To save you the strain, here are the notes I took.

In general, when referring to a de-word or plural, "deze" is this and "die" is that In general, when referring to a het-word or something unspecified, "Dit" is this and "dat" is that Deze and dit can refer to something with a nearby point of origin. Die and dat are further away.

Obviously there are exceptions as we all know by now there are for everything in Dutch but I hope this helped and if you have any questions just ask.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jessmis 8 6

why does "ze wil" not have a 't'. all the conjugation charts show that it should be stem+t for ze/zij

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

It's an irregularity that demonstrates how closely English and Dutch are related: The English modal will, which once was an ordinary verb with the same meaning that the Dutch verb willen still has (compare derivations such as [last] will, wilful or even the construction to will someone to do something) has it as well! If it were regular, you would hear sentences such as "she wills come" in English. In Dutch, "ze wilt komen" sounds just as wrong. (Of course the meanings of both sentences are no longer the same.)

It's a general phenomenon of language change that frequently used words tend to preserve irregularities much longer than rarely used words. These irregularities are usually remnants from an earlier stage of the language when totally different grammatical rules existed. (The English irregular plurals such as children, feet etc. are good examples. Most affect frequently used words, and these types of forming the plural are still somewhat alive in Dutch and German. And of course the extremely irregular English auxiliaries be and have.)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ErikBoyle 15 14 10 3 3 2 546

This is somewhat related to another interesting feature in language evolution: productivity. (I know this is going to be somewhat off-topic, but I wanted to mention it.) Productivity defines whether or not a process, such as verb conjugation, is used by speakers in forming new words. For example, the overwhelming majority of newly coined verbs in English take the weak conjugation of -ed for the past tense and past participle (so that text becomes texted and email becomes emailed), rather than the strong conjugation of a vowel change in the past tense and sometimes -en for the past participle. This has become the case because it is unambiguous and regular, and thus recognizable.

So, as you say, the irregularities only continue to exist in words that are relatively common and old, because speakers continue to recognize them as derivations of the relevant base form. It not immediately apparent that stadia is the plural form of stadium without some knowledge of Latin, so the native English plural form -s has produced the more common stadiums. But speakers nonetheless understand that am, is, are, was, and were are all forms of the verb to be because they are so entrenched in common Standard English usage that no one would try to say "he bees" instead.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lewiscranston 25 25 17 11
Bedankt!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Katalane90 17 10 10 8 3
Dank je !!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JudithL1 11 10 7 5 2
Just started Dutch, thought that was weird. Now you compare it with "dat/dez", it makes sense.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rainnefox 7 6 5 5 2

Thank you very much for explaining this! I'm only starting to get the hang of it and this just makes it some much easier to understand!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

anfescobargi 17 6 3 2

That helped a lot! Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

slemire_meows 10 4

Oh, I get it now. So an unmarked word would be like a normal conversation and you might use the marked when you want to get a point across, like in an argument? Or like a marked pronoun is the equivalent of a bolded english word?

Also, do you have to capitalize any of the pronouns (like you have to capitalize the formal "you" {Sie} in German)?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rachellanehart 4

Thank you, this has been bothering me for some time now.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gymnastical 16 16 11 11 10 9 6 6 3

ik bedank jij voor deze post. waarom is het delen niet door Duolingo?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ErikHeras

Thanks a lot!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EnglishDragon89 7

I am having problems knowing when to use ze or zij for she and they. Can someone help make this more clear?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Gymnastical 16 16 11 11 10 9 6 6 3

You simply do it just like that. Just ensure you have the right verb conjugation

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lornahalbert 5

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rootale 10 6 3 3

This was helpful, thanks!

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tempting100 18 7 4 4 3 454

what does it mean by unstressed/unmarked and stressed/marked?

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

Hi :)

Unstressed/unmarked = without emphasis

Stressed/marked = with emphasis

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ChristianP366577 10 10 6 6 6 6 5 3 2

Afrikaans is so much easier in terms of verb conjugation

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

smiling_maria 11 8

In Belgium I've heard the rules are a bit easier as well..

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Elardus 9 7 4

Agreed. I just told and could prove that to an Australian friend who's trying to learn Afrikaans how much easier it is than either the Spanish !!! or German that I am trying to master. Dutch is certainly more complicated than Afrikaans though nothing like the Latin languages or German. Pity the pronunciation of Afrikaans is difficult for English speakers otherwise it would be a walk in the park. Like the sentence 'My pen is in my warm hand', which is identical in writing in both E and A though sounds quite different.

OReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

mauquie 8 4

Thanks this is so helpful!!

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

OmaJennie 11 10 9

Thank you, Lavinae. The one thing I will remember from all of this is your sentence: "We use marked pronouns when we want to emphasize the pronoun.". That's a huge help!

OReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

neolinguo 19 18 7 5 859

Thank you! This is helpful. But...here on Duolingo, I simply cannot hear the difference between je/jij and ze/zij. What do I do?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

El2theK 25 18 11 11 10 7 5 4 3

Listen to different examples and from that get used to the difference in pronunciation.

E.g.

Je - <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3733131>

Jij - <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3738274>

Ze - <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3734533>

Zij - <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3732750>

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

In the web version of Duolingo, always use the slow voice in a dictation. The fast voice generally pronounces jij as je and zij as ze.

I am afraid if you only have access to the fast voice, you will have to guess. Or you can switch off dictations.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

El2theK 25 18 11 11 10 7 5 4 3

In the examples I provided there is a clear difference in pronunciation, also at the normal speed.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Indeed. There are worlds between this and the automatic voice.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

pianoman7412 9 7 7 4 3 2 2 2

This is a very great comment. Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

81cheney 13 13 2 236

Would ze and zijn only refer to all female groups in the example?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Not at all. Zij/ze is the only third person plural pronoun regardless of gender. In particular, it's also used for exclusively male groups.

Fun fact: There was a point in the history of Dutch and German when for many words you could choose between masculine and feminine genders, with a difference of meaning unrelated to male/female. For concrete individual things people used masculine gender, and for abstract things and groups of things treated as a collective, people used feminine gender. So one function of feminine gender was as a collective plural!

Once you know this, having a single word serving both as the 3rd person singular feminine pronoun and as the 3rd person plural pronoun for all genders doesn't appear so arbitrary any more.

4ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Ayisha36 14 9

I always love running into you on a thread. You give just the sort of explanations and etymologies that I need to understand the language as a complex, living thing. I'm impressed by your ability to explain Dutch in English when you're a native German speaker! You certainly write English better than most native English/Americans. Thanks for all your comments on this thread--the nuances make a big difference for my understanding. Not everyone wants to bother with them when learning a new language, but for me, as someone with a pretty good grasp of my native tongue, an imperfectly understood linguistic rule just doesn't stick--I need to understand how words are used in practice, and what the stories are behind them, in order for them to have a permanent, usable place in my brain. I don't want to have toddler-Dutch all my life; I want to be able to say complex and nuanced things. Thanks for your help.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

KdPomi 15 12 12 11 9

For English speakers that use collapsed interrogatives in /dʒ-/ their distribution may help clarify the difference. For non-IPA users, /dʒ/ is the initial sound of 'just' and 'gin.' /ə/ is the final sound of 'sofa' and /u/ means the sound of 'ou' in you.

First, what I'm referring to. Many (most?) English speakers collapse the sequence 'Did you . . .?' in normal speech to /dʒu/ or /dʒə/, the first being mildly stressed and the latter unstressed. These speakers will in normal speech only render 'did' separately if highly stressed.

If this is you, keep following:

When "Did you go?" is /dʒu go?/ it corresponds to 'Ben jij gegaan?'

When "Did you go?" is /dʒə go?/ it corresponds to 'Ben je gegaan?'

Note that the second one is far more common in our spoken idiom, just as its counterpart in Dutch, because in second person addresses the role of the addressee is generally well known. The barrier for the Anglo is to render in writing a distinction only made in speech. If you can recognize this in your own tongue you have half the battle won.

 If you are a Canadian or Pacific Coast 'u' fronter, you have a tiny extra hurdle, as the vowel in 'je' being rounded and front, closely resembles the /u/ of /dʒu go?/ which comes out [dʒu go?] or even /dʒy go?/ if it comes after a slew of front vowels or palatals. 'Je' may sound a lot like the way you say 'you' in English. It may sound familiarish, but your native speech has no unstressed rounded vowels and that may make you overestimate it. The quicker you learn to round the unstressed vowel of Dutch the quicker your ear will peg it for what it is when you hear it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

sdennis78 12 7 6

Thank you Lavinae, it is much clear now :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

BrianYoung18 17 4 2 297

Yes, but the exercises score ze/zij wrong if the 'wrong one' is used implying they are not interchangeable.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

ErikBoyle 15 14 10 3 3 2 546

Only in listening exercises where you have to use the same one as the voice.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Carsten2016 9 6

What about "je" vs "u" and "jou" vs "u" ...? I would be very happy if somebody can give some nice examples which one of the two is to be used. For sure in the exercises I do not see the difference between formal and not formal. Eg. the sentence "You do not know me." By my understanding it could be translated as "Je kent mij niet." but as well as "U kent mij niet" ...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

128 what is the difference between Bevi and Bevete
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3192995>

LordZero2 7

I just got to this lesson and they both mean the same thing from what it is telling me.... Can someone explain the difference?

Give Lingot

22 years ago

Leave a new comment

6 Comments

AernJardos 14 9 9 8 4 2 4

Italian distinctly separates out you singular from you plural. In American English this can be done with you versus all of you (or all you all/all y'all down South). Note: it can be done, it just isn't done as often. English typically uses you for both one person, and a whole bunch of people. But, in Italian they are always seperated. So tu bevi is you (just one person) drink. While voi bevete is all of you (a whole group) drink.

<http://www.wordreference.com/conj/ItVerbs.aspx?v=bere> has the conjugation of the verb bere (to drink).

Io bevo - I drink

Tu bevi - you singular drink

Lui/lei beve - he/she drinks

Noi beviamo - we drink

Voi bevete - all of you drink

Loro bevono - they drink

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

To summarise AernJardos perfect answer;

Bevi is saying 'you drink' to a single person, whereas Bevete is saying 'You (all) drink' to a crowd, :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LordZero2 7

ty

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AernJardos 14 9 9 8 4 2 4

You're welcome. Best of luck to you with the Italian! In bocca al lupo! :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

Isn't 'In bocca al lupo' just one of the best expressions, DL, or elsewhere has taught us. I enjoy teaching this to friends, who are amazed at the phrase! (It's a little more interesting than our English 'Break a leg;')

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

robert0n 24 14 4 4 42

I agree! It is directly equivalent but a bit more exciting.

"Ho una fame da lupo" is great phrase too. I wonder if there are any more phrases with wolf in them in Italian?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

129 – 148 of 912

[accessed March 9, 2017]

129 "I am the best."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1093879>

Translation: Yo soy la mejor.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

43 Comments

jansson.samuel 11 8 3

There seems to be some confusion on "lo" here. "lo" is neutrum, and can't be used together with masculine or feminine words. It is instead used to form abstract nouns.

Example: Lo mío es tuyo. What's mine is yours.

Here, "what's mine" is an abstract noun as it doesn't refer to any specific thing, but rather to an undefined group of things.

At least that's my understanding of it.

29ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

stridog 10

Ok. So, when I hovered over "best", the translation was "lo mejor." But when I entered this, I was marked wrong??? Someone please explain.. Thanks

18ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tessbee 24 16 60

"Mejor" alone (without el/la/lo) means "better". To say "THE best" you need the article (el mejor/la mejor/lo mejor). In this case here, "el mejor" and "la mejor" both work because the Subject is Yo which is a person, so Yo could be a male or a female. The "lo" is used when the "thing" that is the best is an idea, an essence, etc. that is neutral. As someone said below, "Lo mejor" can mean "The best thing...", where the "thing" here is unknown. Did I make things even muddier? :)

38ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

BakinToast 13 10 8 6

So... ¿Eso es lo mejor, aunque soy el/la mejor?

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tessbee 24 16 60

Yes

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tessbee 24 16 60

The hover gives lo mejor because it doesn't specify gender. But when you have your Subject the article before mejor changes accordingly.

Please, also note that not all the given translations in the hover work; just that one or some of them work/s for specific contexts. Sometimes the needed meaning for the sentence we're working on isn't even there (it's just computer-generated). Think of a dictionary entry: when you look up a word many meanings are given but typically, each only works for different contexts, and sometimes we have to conjugate them when they're verbs. Happy learning, all! Language is fun! :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

melmej 10

I need to know too...difference between el and lo?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jjcthorpe 25 5

I think that if the sentence was referring to the best "something" ie actor, ingeniero, etc it would be "el mejor..." but because it is just "the best" full stop it is indefinite and therefore "lo mejor". I know in this example it is "LA mejor" but I don't understand why "lo" is not accepted.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dangelocar1 13

By lo mejor they mean "the best" not just best. I think its one of those expressions/idioms.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alback-isback 17 13 6 6 4 1

in english they always say "the best" not just best

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jackstewart2 23

I think that in the sentence, "I am" is the subject and verb, ("soy" with "yo soy" for emphasis), but not the object. To use "lo" I think that you need an object. Like "The car is the best." In this sentence the car is both the subject and an object. Maybe someone knows this better than myself. It just seemed to me that there is a slight difference between "bragging" about oneself and talking about something else.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

drgrimy 9

"mejora" doesn't exactly mean the feminine version of the word, instead it means more like "amelioration". You use mejor for both genders.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lyndrison 20

Why is lo mejor incorrect??

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nikimj 20

Please, could someone explain if "lo mejor" means "the best" why the translation for "I'm the best" isn't "yo soy lo mejor"? Why we have to use "el" or "la" instead of "lo"?

And if I would like to say "Peach is the best fruit", what I should use? "El durazno es la mejor fruta", I gess, but I'm not sure.

Could you give a whole sentence as an example, where "lo mejor" used? I mean literally "lo".

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

doug.weino 15 8

Is estoy acceptable?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tessbee 24 16 60

@ doug.weino: Can't be "estoy" because being "the best" is describing characteristic, and 'descriptions' of characteristic fall under "ser" and not "estar" "Estar" is for describing conditions or temporal state, like health, emotion.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Greglhnen 22 10 3

if you got better after being sick

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

trunketti 16

How can La and El both work for this word? Is it a trans gender word? lol

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Andro0 21 11 8 7

i think it just goes with gender without changing endings to conform..

yo soy el mejor - (man)

yo soy la mejor - (woman)

26ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

trunketti 16

Okay, thank you.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LiesVanRompae 18

Wouldn't "la mejora be better"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TooCrucial 12

Why is "estoy el mejor" wrong?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tessbee 24 16 60

Because "(el) mejor" is describing a characteristic, and we have to use "ser" when we're Describing something's/someone's characteristic.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

paul502 13 8

How about "Yo estoy enfermo." I regard that as just as descriptive as el mejor. But we use estar because enfermo is (hopefully) a temporary situation. How about, "Yo estuve el mejor estudiante ayer, pero hoy no." for example?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tessbee 24 16 60

Thanks for your post, Paul. I'm sorry if my old post appeared just too simplistic while I was trying to answer the question at hand. (I've since edited it a bit for clarification purposes.) But this is how I understand all this:

When we describe something's or someone's characteristic we use "ser", and we use "estar" for states of being/conditions. And the thing about "permanence" vs "being temporary" of something that we've been told only works for health and appearance, that's why this 'guide' often confuses us than helps us. "State/condition" and "characteristic" are important keys to deciding whether to use "ser" or "estar" when it comes to describing things. And that's where "estar enfermo" fits in. Although there are times when these two can be interchanged, that would depend on the speaker's personal opinion of the thing being described. So, for example, one could say, "El café es bueno" or, "¡Este café está horrible!" where the former describes coffee in general; the latter describes one's own opinion of a certain coffee. Or one could say, "La manzana es verde" or "La manzana está verde", again, the former describing the apple's characteristic - its green color, the latter, its state of being unripe.

The sentence, "Yo estuve el mejor estudiante ayer, pero hoy no.", I'm sorry, but I wouldn't go for "estuve" on that one since it states a specific (completed) period in the past (ayer) in which I would use "fue". But even if I wanted to express something like, "I used to be (was) the best student but not anymore" I'd still use "era" (ser) rather than "estaba" (estar) since I'm still describing my characteristic as being a good, the best, student. But, that's just me. I'm probably wrong, too, since I'm but a student.

And as I've said, this is just how I understand this, so it's very possible that I screw up here somewhere, and anybody who corrects me would really be appreciated. (Sorry for this very lengthy reply, Paul.)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

paul502 13 8

Thanks for your reply Tessbee. The whole estar/ser question is truly a can of worms for non-native speakers. Your statement that you would not care for the sentence, "Yo estuve el mejor estudiante ayer, pero hoy no," opens up a second can of worms. My excellent "flesh and blood" Spanish teacher (Mexican) is training me that when one specifies a specific time, that mainly affects whether one should use the preterito or indicativo pasado. Since both estar and ser have both tenses available, I chose the preterito form of estar in my example to accommodate the specific time and completion factor.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

espian2 10

Why not 'soy mejores'?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tessbee 24 16 60

Because "soy" is I am (Subject: I --> singular), and "mejores" is a plural form used for Plural Subjects).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allalla 11 11

Naega jeil jal naga.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

chou_wang 24 63

Lo mejor is an adverb, according to my dictionary

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jwmckey 10

Picked the right answer and was marked wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mirrored 17 7 5

Why not lo mejor...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ArunavaC 14 6 3

When you hover over "best", you're given "venzo" as an option. When I say "Soy venzo", I am marked wrong. Is it because it should have been "Soy el venzo" or because "venzo" does not apply here?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

richard.mo20 16 7

Thznks to dfgrimy on " mejora"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

brunolrt 8 8 3

I just learned from other site that 'lo' is neutral and 'el/la' are used for nouns not adjectives. For adjectives we have to use 'lo' .. am I wrong ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Chen_dElet 22 15 245

Can some native Spanish speakers give a clear explanation why "lo mejor" won't work here? Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Shamrock14 16 5 4

OK, maybe they changed it, but as far as I know, when you are translating from Spanish to English the "la/el" is not put in. But then when I translated vise versa, the "el/la" was required. Am I missing something?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

paul502 13 8

It seems that in Spanish, generalized conceptual nouns (liberty, security, etc.) are preceded with a definite article while they are always omitted in English. This is true to the point that the lack of omission in an English translation has become a humorous mode of parody. However, for specific nouns that are not generalized concepts (the books, an airplane, etc.), the articles are retained when translated into English. That is the rule I try to follow.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rachyb638 9

But that's just my opinion...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kayllama 11 4

I wanna be the very best, like no one ever was...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

skambie 7 3

I put one of the correct answers and it counted it wrong, anyone know what's happening?

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

MichaelFar417547 23 7

Mike, Why is estoy not accepted. The expression may relate to a current win (say) sporting achiev. May not won next time!.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Syrus02 9 1

bebo should be an answer for all us puerto ricans out here on this.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

130 "Right in the bull's eyes!"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1314980>

Translation: Na mosca!

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

Phobic 14 4 2

I'm an American English-speaker. I'd say, "Bullseye!" No need for "Right in the..." The older variants "bull's-eye" and "bull's eye" are also correct but I rarely see them in use. "Bull's eyes," with more than one eye, is not correct.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

austin.and 9 7

I think this translation is suppose to be...ready...right in the "BULLSEYE" LOL as in darts...

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gnignel 11 11 9

what does it mean?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

vivisaurus 17 15 13 9 7 5 4 1341

Literally, on the fly, shorter version of "acertar na mosca" (hit the fly), a notoriously difficult target, even harder than hitting the bullseye. =)

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Paulenrique 21 15 13 10 8

you got it at the exact point/meaning, you got it right although it was difficult.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GuerraAmanda 15 12 3

Also, "mosca" is the center of a dart chart

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TikTalk2000 11 9 7 6

it's BULLSEYE (compound word)

BOI is a 'steer' not a 'bull'

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

131 Grammar: De/Het/Een

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3732938/Grammar-De-Het-Een>

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

The 3 articles

In Dutch, there are three articles: een (= 'a(n)'), the indefinite article, and the definite articles de and het (= 'the').

We use de for singular masculine or feminine nouns and het with singular neuter nouns. We tend to refer to these nouns as either de words or het words. For plural nouns, we always use de.

Examples:

The woman = De vrouw

The man = De man

The child = Het kind

The men/women/children = De mannen/vrouwen/kinderen

Dutch speakers actually never tend to think about the gender of words. Rather than knowing whether a word is originally feminine or masculine, the only distinction that has to be remembered is the difference between the de words and het words. This is because whether or not we're dealing with a de word or het word has grammatical consequences (in terms of possessives, question words, demonstratives, adjectives and even relative pronouns). This is why when you learn a new noun, it is very important that you memorize whether it is a de or het word.

Rules for helping you remember when to use 'de' or 'het'

These are rules which may help you remember which article to use, but unfortunately there are tons of exceptions to these rules as well:

De-words:

About 75% of the words have the article de and about 25% of the words are thus het words.

'De' is always used for the plural

'De' is always used for professions: 'de kok' (the chef), 'de bewaker' (the guard)

'De' tends to be used for people with an identified gender, such as: 'de vader' (the father), 'de dochter' (the daughter).

'De' is also used for vegetables, fruits, trees and plants, names of mountains and rivers

Furthermore, 'de' is also used for the words ending with -ie, -ij, -heid, -teit, -a, -nis, -st, -schap, -de, -te, -iek, -ica, -theek, -iteit, -tuur, -stuur, -sis, -xis, -tis, -ade, -ide, -ode, -ude, -age, -ine, -se, -ea, -esse. Finally, 'de' is used for written-out numbers and letters: 'de drie' (the three); 'de a' (the a).

Het-words

'Het' is always used for a diminutive

'Het' is also always used for words consisting of two syllables and starting with be-, ge-, ver-, ont-

'Het' is always used for languages, names of metals, words ending with -isme, -ment and for words derived from verbs.

'Het' is used for names of compass points: 'het noorden' (the North).

'Het' is also used for the gerund: 'het zwemmen' (swimming), 'het dansen' (dancing), etc.

'Het' is used for names of sports and games: 'het schaken' (chess), 'het voetbal' (football)

Links for Practice/Overview

De or het? Overview of articles of the words featured in our course + link to memrise course for practice

Dutch vs. German articles

Return to Grammar Overview!

Give Lingot91

3272 years ago

Leave a new comment

98 Comments

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

Oh, blimey, German is really helpful here – the typical neuter gender noun groups almost coincide.

40ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

anfyddiwr 10 8 2 2

I studied German in school and I find it incredibly helpful in understanding Dutch in general. The trouble is that because they're often very similar, my brain likes to default to its German dictionary. Either I mix up the words that are very close (trink vs drink) or if I don't remember the Dutch word at all, my brain supplies the German equivalent, which is not helpful.

That said, I find Dutch a lot easier overall.

20ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JudithL1 11 10 7 5 2

And many, many dutch words are very similar in German (paard-Pferd, kind-Kind, vrouw-Frau, neushoorn-Nashorn, menu-Menü (does not mean the same)). In this cases the gender is always the same as in German. (That's why I love learning Dutch so much, German is my mother tongue.)

15ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Dutch gender is not always the same as German gender, just very often. Exceptions include de auto = das Auto, het idee = die Idee.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JudithL1 11 10 7 5 2

Thanks, I realized that afterwards, when I saw "het andwoord" and "het landschap". (I've just started the Dutch tree)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wrongstar 12 10 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2

Wait, there are such rules in German? Any links or tips? I'm not aware of this!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Just follow the links at the end of this about.com article.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wrongstar 12 10 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2

Thanks. :) As a speaker of a language with no articles, I always feel lost.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

Adjective forms also depend heavily on the gender in German, so watch out.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alex.Essilfie 25 25 13 12 3 958

Which language is that which has no articles? I'd like to find out more about it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FogPop 25 25 23 3 2 1042

See: <http://wals.info/feature/37A#2/25.5/148.2> for 198 languages with no definite or indefinite article.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Lenkvist 23 22 17 14 13 12 12 11 10 7 7 1

Isn't "het" also used for nouns that were created from verbs? Het eten, het drinken, het schaken, het zwemmen...

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lagiacrux 8 5

Not necessarily. Het meisje, Het water etc. etc.

Edit: Complete mistake, I read his comment wrong.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lenkvist 23 22 17 14 13 12 12 11 10 7 7 1

I think you misunderstood my question. I'll repeat it in Dutch if you'd like.

Mijn vraag was:

Wordt "het" niet ook gebruikt voor zelfstandig naamwoorden die van werkwoorden afgeleid zijn?

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lagiacrux 8 5

Oh yeah yeah of course. I understand now. -- I read it wrong, sorry.

7ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

To those commenting on the need to introduce and learn nouns with their articles,

I've taken your points in mind, read your arguments and we have forwarded your feedback (both frequently and over a long period of time). :)

The idea to now introduce new nouns with the articles, with images, has been planned for a long time.

It is officially on the planning.

Staff, or rather the developers, will be working on it.

As this debate has been resolved and since giving you an explanation of the article which needs to be used is the actual purpose of this thread, I've removed the comments focusing on the previous debate.

You have been heard and it will be implemented.

As I'm not staff, I can't give you an ETA for this feature. ^^

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Asfodela 16 15 10 9 9 8 8 8 7 6 3 3 3 2 15

Muchísimas gracias :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dhariyash 11 4

This site might also help in learning Dutch grammar.

<http://www.dutchgrammar.com/en/?n=Grammar.DutchGrammar>

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sew0023 11 8 4 3 2

Why is it "het meisje" if meisje is girl?

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

"Het meisje" is what we call a diminutive, a word which provides some indication of a concept's or object's smallness in quantity or quality, but is also used for showing endearment.

Other examples:

"Het jongetje" = The (little) boy

"Het koninkje" = The (little king)

"Schatje" = Dear/Little treasure

When a word ends with -je, -pje, -tje, -etje, or -kje, it's safe to say that you are indeed dealing with a diminutive. There will be a grammar thread about this up soon, but for the time being you can also find basic information about the diminutive here, at the beginning of the associated skill lessons.

Note: "Het meisje" is the Dutch equivalent for the German "Das Mädchen". As you can see, this word is also gender neutral, whereas "Die Frau" is of course a feminine noun.

19ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dieter.loo 12 11 10 9 8 5 2

Actually meisje is not a diminutive. The word 'de/het meis' does not exist.

-4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Nowadays people no longer think of meisje as the diminutive of maagd/meid, but that's definitely how the word arose. As far as I know, all etymological dictionaries agree about this.

According to the Dutch Wikipedia, the word meis does actually exist as a neologism -- a back formation from meisje that is probably motivated by the fact that most modern speakers no longer recognise meid as the base word.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

Because gender in grammar and gender in humans/other animals are different things.

The use of 'gender', 'masculine', 'feminine', 'neuter' in grammar is purely an old convention: grammatical genders could just as well have been called 'Nominal Agreement Groups 1, 2 and 3'.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

shanidewit 13 8 8

Yes, this should help me. I speak Dutch for years and I have problems with my de and het and I hope that Duolingo can help me more soon! Thank you!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ruball 15 14

oh dear, I have no chance then, I have just started Dutch!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BasCostBudde 14 12 11 11 8 7 4 107

No comparing. One person happily learns verbs, another genders, a third proverbs... Listen and talk. Children do that too.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Anhonime 11 8 4 2 2

and how do you address "de" nouns without knowing their grammatical gender? you use hij or zij?

e. g. : "I eat an apple. It (the apple) is red. " -> "Ik eet een appel. " Hij OR Zij "(de appel) is root. "?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

We use 'hij' for de words and 'het' (as a pronoun) and 'hij' for het words, unless when a de word has a clear feminine grammatical gender (because then 'zij' will be used).

"Ik eet de appel. Hij is rood." = I eat the apple. It is red.

"Ik zie het paard. (Hij/)Het eet gras." = I see the horse. It eats grass.

"Hij aait de hond. Hij houdt daarvan." = He pets the dog. It likes that.

"Zij opent het slot. (Hij/)Het is open." = She opens the lock. It is open.

Beware: 'Hij' is not really correct for referring to het words also (one would, f.i., not refer to 'het water', an abstract entity, as 'hij'...). However, it is featured in spoken Dutch. If you want to be safe, I would only use het for referring to het words. :)

Insights from this pronoun thread may be of interest (especially the anecdote about the Flemish use of 'zij' for addressing concepts and words that are in NL Dutch considered to be gender neutral).

14ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Rso17 12 11 10 3 2 2

An example where you have to refer to "zij":

"De regering neemt maatregelen. Zij moet haar burgers beschermen." = The government takes measures. It must protect its citizens.

"De Tweede Kamer heeft haar besluit genomen. Zij zullen wapens gebruiken." = The house of representatives has taken its decision. It will use weapons.

Briefly said, one also refers to "zij" in special occasions and old Dutch words. So, not only the Flemish refer to "zij". Dutch do it as well.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JudithL1 11 10 7 5 2

Now, I am confused. Does this mean that my weird example sentence "Dat is melk, zij is niet rood." is wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dmfarley 10 9 4

See now, since those are bodies of multiple people, I would just think the "zij" is more of a "they". This is done more in British English than American English. Teams are referred to as plurals, even when they are a singular noun.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Carolind 14 11 11 10 10 5

Lavinae, would you consider including this comment on the main body of this thread or making a thread about the use of pronouns in general? I have been asking around about this and only accidentally found this explanation. I find it too important to be lost down here. Thanks for considering

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JudithL1 11 10 7 5 2

But what about: "Dat is melk, zij is niet rood." (please correct me if that sentence is wrong)

AFAIK melk is feminine. (At least it is in German) With your distinction into het and non-het only one would not know that zij is correct here. (Is it? I'm guessing)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Wikipedia explains how it works. In standard (northern) Dutch, hij has replaced zij except for words that have natural gender. Milk doesn't have natural gender, so it's referred to as hij. Only Flemish still uses zij as generally as German does, so Flemish still has three genders.

Standard Dutch as taught in this course: Dat is melk, hij is wit.

Flemish: Dat is melk, zij is wit.

Both variants: Dat is een man, hij is oud. Dat is een vrouw, zij is oud. Dat is een meisje, het is jong.

Dat is een appel, hij is rood.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

JudithL1 11 10 7 5 2

Thank you very much. I am very new to this, and my German mother tongue gives me strange instincts on how to handle Dutch. Those instincts are however not always correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IsaSoulie 10 4 2

As a native Dutch (Flemish) speaker it sounds very strange to say "hij" or "zij" when you're talking about milk. I would say "ze", e.g. "Dat is melk, ze is wit".

When referring to "een meisje" it also makes more sense to use the feminine word "zij", because you know the girl is female: "Dat is een meisje, zij is jong."

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Turtle492 20 16 16 6 3 14

Thanks, this is really helpful. I love the randomness of 'names of metals'.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mehranf95 14

I get mixed up over the animals... why for example we have de kat, de hond, de beer and then suddenly we have het paard? is there any rules for animals as well?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

I'm afraid not.

The only pointers I can give you are that:

young animals are usually 'het' words animals with a recognized gender, say 'de merrie' (= the mare), 'de reu' (= the male dog), tend to be 'de' words as in all cases, the majority of these words are also 'de' words

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RubenFGDS 14 9 8 8

What about "Het paard"?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

casper3142 18 12 7

You write that 'de' is used for people, but the word 'kind' (child) takes 'het'. Why is this?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

I've rephrased it in the original post. :)

The most likely reason for 'kind' having the 'het' article is that 'child', in itself, does not have an identified gender and can thus either be a girl or a boy. Hence it is seen as a neuter.

The information I've given above really consists of guidelines only though. You may also want to see 'het kind' as an exception to the rule that people receive a 'de' article. In some cases, we just don't know why, but our use of 'het' for child does coincide with the German 'Das Kind'. :)

7ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

casper3142 18 12 7

Thanks, I find the exceptions quite annoying!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ajpthree 16 15 15 15 15 14 13 13 12 10 10 6 6 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 1002

haha don't we all? :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

UnitarioRe 12 9

But when Kin is in its plura... The word that we have to add is De Het kind - De Kinderen... I think, if I read well. I'm ok!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vasilsmarkov 18 16 4 2

Here you can look for the correct articles of the words: <http://www.welklidwoord.nl/>

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Lenkvist 23 22 17 14 13 12 12 11 10 7 7 1

It might be better to not mention "-schap" for "de". Het landschap, het waterschap, het schap in de supermarkt.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JudithL1 11 10 7 5 2
[deleted]

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

gypsybird 12 11 6 4 2
Isn't sheep "schaap"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JudithL1 11 10 7 5 2
I was confused and too stupid to interpret landschap correctly. Therefore I deleted my comment.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gypsybird 12 11 6 4 2
Oh it's definitely not stupid... :) I did find it funny the first time I saw the "-schap" suffix... I, too, thought it meant sheep, until I re-read the word for sheep a few times and noticed it's written differently and, more importantly, pronounced very differently (aa vs a).

Now when I count sheep to fall asleep, I try to do it in Dutch... Except the ch's and g's wake me up... ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

JudithL1 11 10 7 5 2
My mother tongue is German, so I should be used to the ch's and g's. BTW. landschap in German is Landschaft - I have no excuse.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8
Yes, -schap is funny if you think of it as -schaap. But the German and English equivalents are almost as funny: -schaft (as if from Schaft = shaft, pole) and -ship.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

BillA1016
Wonderful explanation! Thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Prado39 25 25 24 22 12 10 8 3
Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

loveangela31 15 12 8 6 12

Thanks team, this is super helpful!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

anelz 25 23 145

I am having trouble working out the rule for when to use words like hard versus harde and klein versus kleine.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lagiacrux 8 5

If the adjective does not precede the noun, you leave the adjective as it is (De jurk is klein, Het paard is klein). If the adjective DOES precede the noun, you generally add -e on the end (De kleine jurk, Het kleine paard). The exception to this, is when it is a neuter noun, and it is also preceded by the indefinite article (Een klein paard, NOT Een kleine paard, as paard is neuter (HET paard)).

Non-neuter nouns do not observe this (Een kleine jurk).

I hope I explained it well enough (If I made a mistake, can somebody correct me?)

Source: <https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Adjective-Basics>

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

anelz 25 23 145

Yes, thanks. Also see: http://www.dutchgrammar.com/_word_docs/Adjectiva_Wim_Voortman.doc

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

UnitarioRe 12 9

I was reading all the comments, to see if I find out one who was talking about this item!!!!!!!!!!!! Dank je wel!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pw00ds 12 10 9 8 6 5 4 2 2

Rule #5 for de words should be approached with caution, it doesn't apply in many cases. For example: het genie, het waterschap, het landschap, het bestuur, etc

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HollyShade 8 7 5 5 3

I recently got Duolingo on my phone, and I have been working my way through the Dutch course. On the app, it doesn't have any place for discussion or any explanations, if there is I haven't seen it, and now I wish I went onto the website because all of the questions I had have been answered. Now I kind of feel like an idiot for not looking it up. Dank je.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

QueenKatie05

Thank you for this post. I am trying to learn Dutch for my own uses, and while I am only just starting out, I find the grammar sort of confusing (like when to use "de" and "het"). This helps very much, and I will be reading through the rest of the Grammar Overview.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MandyTyler 25 614

What an excellent article, and the link to the Memrise was really helpful! Thank you so much :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lindz93 8 4 2

Awesome explanation, thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

From everything I've seen, the words that are masculine/feminine in German tend to be "de" words in Dutch, and neuter German words tend to be "het" words. But before I succumb to the compulsion to go on autopilot with genders -- is this always true? Or just with cognates? How about loan words, which are often wild cards regarding pronunciation?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

It's not a strict rule, just statistical correlation. Necessarily, since even within Germany we can't always agree on the genders of some nouns. E.g., a recent acquisition from French is the word Crêpe. As a German word it needs a gender. In this case there are two obvious rules that might apply: (1) In French, the gender is feminine (la crêpe), so let's use that in German as well. (2) A Crêpe is just a kind of pancake, so let's make the word masculine like der Pfannkuchen. Currently the two genders are battling it out. It's correct either way according to the Duden.

Dutch has often taken different decisions in such cases, and in an annoying number of cases Dutch uses sometimes one gender and sometimes the other depending on meaning. E.g., idee is common gender (corresponding to its being feminine both in French and in German), but only in the rare case that it's used as a philosophical concept. In all other cases it's neuter gender. A different example is Antwort, which in German perversely is feminine even though Wort is neuter, whereas in Dutch antwoord is neuter like woord, as it should be. (That Antwort is feminine would make sense if it started as an abbreviation of Beantwortung, which has the same meaning and is feminine like all words ending in -ung.)

That said, (in my experience as a learner) in more than 90% of cases, a German word and its cognate in Flemish have the same gender, and its Dutch gender is neuter if it's neuter in Flemish and common if it's masculine or feminine in Flemish.

Otherwise, you can make an educated guess on a noun's gender based on its gender in the original language if it's a loanword, based on other words from the same category, based on other words with the same ending, and if all else fails based on the fact that in Dutch, common gender is twice as common as neuter gender due to the merger of masculine and feminine.

For instance, take the hypothetical African fruit karapotatie. As most Dutch speakers don't know the original language of this word, its gender there (if the original language even has something sufficiently similar) won't help us. But most fruits are common gender and most words ending in -tie are also common gender (actually originally feminine in both cases). So it is almost certainly de karapotatie.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Thanks! That's quite interesting.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Persikov 19 11 2

When you say that you use het with gerund, I am curious because with rare exceptions, English does not use an article at all with gerunds.

So, the English sentence "He enjoys swimming and dancing" -- in Dutch would that be "Hij enjoyt het zwemmen en het dansen" or just "Hij enjoyt zwemmen en dansen."? (obviously "enjoyt" is a joke)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

The translation that Bill gives is actually fine. ;)

The gerund may receive the article 'het' when:

it is the subject of the sentence.

the gerund is used in the genitive and dative cases (for/of swimming; for/of dancing/etc) it comes after certain prepositions (in/tijdens/bij/over/door).

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BillofKempsey 25 16 15 14 10 6 2 2 504

Google Translate gives "Hij houdt van zwemmen en dansen". Not that GT is any great authority :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dieter.loo 12 11 10 9 8 5 2

Actually I would say instinctively precisely this. :-) In this case Google Translate nails it (for once...)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mizdebski 11 4

Well explained. Thanks!. Cannot wait for exercises .

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Deb_Johnson 8 4

Thank you! This is exactly the set of definitions I needed.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

StefanoSolgreno 17 16 14 11 11 10 8 7 7 7 5 2 2

Is there a website where you can search for dutch words and it will tell whether the word is "de" or "het"? I have searched, but without result.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gypsybird 12 11 6 4 2

Try the Vandel dictionary <http://www.vandale.nl> You will see "het" or "de" along with a definition or a translation depending on what you choose (NL-NL or NL-EN)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

StefanoSolgreno 17 16 14 11 11 10 8 7 7 7 5 2 2

Thank you so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mirkkaaa 8

This was also linked earlier in the comments! <http://www.welklidwoord.nl/> Just type in the Dutch word and it'll tell you which one you need.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

UnitarioRe 12 9

<http://www.welklidwoord.nl/> this website is really helpful!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

heimaey 25 25 25 19 13 12 11 11 9 7 4 889

This was extremely helpful thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

morag101 9 7

this does give a little guidance which helps

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jazzybard 12 11 8 6 6 6

I just was told I filled in "Ik heb het ____ bord" incorrectly using "zwaar", and it told me "Ik heb het zware bord." was the correct answer. I thought "het" nouns took the version of the adjective with no "e" on the end? It wouldn't let me click on the discuss button, so I reported it as an error--I'm not entirely sure it is now. I'm confused!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

The exception for het words is really tricky. It only applies if there is no definite article or demonstrative. In particular, when the definite article het is there, reminding you of the exception, it doesn't apply.

het zware bord
een zwaar bord
1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jazzybard 12 11 8 6 6 6
Why did nobody tell me before? I lost all my hearts on that one. That seems a little cruel to teach that way. Thank you very much for clarifying though! I'm sure you've saved me much, much more future frustration.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

UnitarioRe 12 9
Sr. Jazzybard, I was in the same Dilema, I had to read all the discussion in Duolingo's page, I needed this solution to avoid crash my head against keyboard at all momento When I tried to think...WHAT IS THE CORRECT ANSWER, but finally, We got it!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

saschalieb.de 12
I started 1.Jan.2014.godine. to the course "Duolingo". Right now, 26.Nov.2014 at 00:30 I did the last exercise. And as far as I can see, I came to the 12 level. THANK YOU, greeting creators course Duolingo Sincerely and warmly Sascha Knezevich Podgorica - MONTENEGRO

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wongphu 14
Rule 3 for de words: "De is always used for professions" has at least one counter example: het fotomodel, someone who pose for photographs as a profession. Are there other professions which use het instead of de?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hcarpach 6 3
Great article. I still have some doubts:

You say "'De' is also used for vegetables, fruits, trees and plants, names of mountains and rivers", but then, why is it "Het sap" instead of "De sap"? like "De melk". Or why is it "Het ei" or "Het fruit" instead of "De ei" or "De fruit" like "De sinaasappel" or "De kaas"?

How can I know when to really use De or Het without memorizing the list?

Bedankt!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8
You can't. All rules are just there to make it easier to memorise the list. It's easier to remember 10 rules, 50 exceptions and 400 genders to which no rules apply than to memorise 1000 genders without any rules. (The numbers are just for illustration, but they are perhaps not totally unrealistic.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DebastoP 18 18 13 10 5 5 3 2
Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BasCostBudde 14 12 11 11 8 7 4 107
-ing will take 'de' too.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RickExpat 8
Dutch schoolchildren simply memorize which nouns are 'het' and which are 'de' -- mostly from repetitive hearing and usage. They don't go through all these rules and their "tons of exceptions" for each grammatical encounter. That seems best for me as well, as daunting as it seems at times. Ditto with spelling.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

minhwhf 6
very helpful! Thanks so much

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dr.GoodKiller 3
So I can use 'De' instead of 'Het' in, Het meisje.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8
No, you can't use de with meisje. Meisje is a diminutive and therefore unambiguously a het word (neuter gender word). You can only use het in front of it: het meisje, not de meisje.

This used to mean that the personal pronoun used for a person who you referred to as het meisje would also have had to be het. (Selection of personal pronouns by grammatical gender.) This is still standard practice in Flemish, but in Northern Dutch it is more common to select the personal pronouns based on natural sex/gender.

Here is how this works in practice (if I have understood everything correctly - my native language is German):

Northern Dutch (works like English): Kun je het meisje zien? Zij is nog heel jong en gaat nog niet naar school. Ik geloof zij kan nog niet lezen.

Flemish (works like German): Kun je het meisje zien? Het is nog heel jong en gaat nog niet naar school. Ik geloof zij kan nog niet lezen.

Both varieties of Dutch agree about the article, and both agree that it is weird to refer to a person as it and therefore switch to using the personal pronoun he or she sooner or later, provided that it's clear which of the two to use. (As is the case for meisje, but not for kind unless we have a specific child in mind.)

The difference is that typical Northern Dutch speakers switch to she immediately whereas typical Flemish speakers wait until the original reference to the person by a het word is almost forgotten and the knowledge of the person's natural sex/gender prevails. This happens at an essentially random point; switching in the third sentence is just an example of what can happen. Here is another example:

Flemish (2nd example): Kun je het meisje zien? [The girl waves. Speaker waves back.] Zij is nog heel jong en gaat nog niet naar school. Ik geloof zij kan nog niet lezen.

Here, non-verbal communication between the first and second sentences makes it natural for the Flemish speaker to pragmatically refer to the person by zij instead of referring to the het word meisje bij het. At the other extreme, in formal writing it is normal not to switch at all. If a company is referred to as de compagnie in a contract, then in Flemish, even 100 pages later you should expect it to be still referred to as zij.

Here we are getting a glimpse into the past of English. It used to work much like Flemish. (Yes, Old English nouns had gender: the man, the woman but that child.) Northern Dutch shows us how it is possible for native speakers of a language to gradually forget the genders of nouns in the course of a few centuries.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Dr.GoodKiller 3

Thanks for your help.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Mrins4 14 9 8 8 7 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 5

The word for girl has an identified gender, but still uses het. Are there anymore exceptions?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

PjotrBos 11 4

The reason for this exception is actually another 'rule'. Dutch has a special suffix to express smallness (a diminutive): -je. Dog = hond and therefore small dog = hondje. The dutch word for girl, 'meisje' is actually such a word, but the root 'meid' or 'meis' is rarely or never used. As a rule these diminutives or 'verkleinwoordjes' only get 'het' as article.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

132 "Stop the clutter" Does this warning make anyone else wary about posting questions?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/822443>

letter_s 25 25 25 25 24 10

Whenever I have a question about an answer I usually go to the comments. Now I am met by this statement. " Stop the clutter. Please do not report mistakes here and read the comments below before posting" I feel that this is the way I learn here and we are basically not being encouraged to ask about our mistakes. Many people may be nervous about posting. How do you feel? Does this warning comment prevent you from asking a question?

Give Lingot10

73 years ago

Leave a new comment
10 Comments

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

No, I think it's great they put this message back.

No reason to be nervous, the message just asks to not report error here.

You can ask questions, all the questions you want (that haven't already been answered in the actual discussion), ask if what you think to be an error is really one before reporting it (best thing to do ;)), ask for precisions about something already asked but that you still don't understand perfectly (or at all) etc...

The main reason, IMO, for this message is to avoid having reports in the sentence discussion pages, because it's not the place for them but most of all, I believe, because by using the Report a Problem button (or the Support button) it'll contact Duolingo Team directly, when a report-post in a sentence discussion page could be not seen by Duolingo...

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Daniel-in-BC 19

I have seen literally more than 100 comments on a discussion page and many times the same question is repeated over and over again. A helpful person answered the question earlier, but still people ask. All DL is asking is that you first read the comments to see if your question has already been answered.

I just wish there were a way to consolidate in those situations because I just give up scrolling at some point.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Hohenems 25 25 18 14 13 12 11 11 8 7

Moderators delete redundancy and inane comments when they come across them. 100 comments on a page suggests that a moderator just hasn't been there yet.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pont 25 23 18 16 9 5 100

No. The warning says (1) don't report mistakes here and (2) read the comments before posting. Nowhere does it tell you not to post a comment.

I regard this warning as a service to new, nervous users. Consider the scenarios:

(1) Warning retained. New user sees warning, reads existing comments, and finds that their question is answered -- goes back to lesson, or posts a useful addition to the answer. All is sweetness and light.

(2) Warning removed. New user dives in and posts a comment without reading the discussion, repeating a question which has already been asked 29 times on same forum. New user gets five angry replies from cranky users telling them to read the discussion first, is taken aback by this aggressive response, feels that DL users are a mean and unfriendly bunch. "How was I meant to know I had to read the discussion first?" Runs away to Memrise, is never seen again.

I prefer scenario (1). Similar scenarios exist for the "don't report mistakes here" injunction.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rspreng 24

If you read the comments first you may not need to ask a question.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

letter_s 25 25 25 25 24 10

Yes, that's true and I usually do. But the comments are where I find the most information here. People are very helpful. I am just hoping that this does not prevent people from asking questions.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Vinnatan 19 17 12 12 11 11 10 9 8 7 7 6

No, not really. A lot of people used to post "Such-and-such should be accepted as a correct answer! Why isn't it?" and then there would be many people telling them to report the mistake. Hopefully it encourages people to report the mistake where Duo staff can see it and not complain in the comments. If someone has a grammatical question, it's perfectly fine to ask about it and a lot of people do.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Viaggiatore 25 13 5 2

I hope it doesn't discourage questions, but there is a lot of repetition.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

letter_s 25 25 25 25 24 10

Thanks for your comments. I for one have felt that this was not encouraging questions. I suppose that people who are not inclined to comment will not make a comment here. I do hope they ask questions as many things are explained there. To tell the truth, when I first saw this admonition, I did feel like going elsewhere, where it was more welcoming. But I want to learn and need to ask questions, so I will continue to do so and I hope others will.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

_Klaus 9 7

Duolingo should have an attached forum where people can relax and chat. Ideally, Duolingo would provide free coffee and fried owls.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

133 Differences between ES and EST?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/888662>

Doroshenko 10 2

Give Lingot3

73 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

espace13 25 7 2 1275

es is used when using you (informal) So if you are saying 'you are', it is 'tu es' (unless you are talking formally in which case it is (Vous êtes) Think of it as the equivalent of 'are' when you are talking to one person who you know well

est is basically the French equivalent of the English word 'is' so you use it if you are saying 'he is' (Il est) or 'she is' (elle est)

I recommend you learn the conjugations of the verb être (to be) if you haven't already as this will help you a lot:

Je suis - I am

Tu es - You are

Il/Elle est - He/She is

Nous sommes - We are

Vous êtes - You (plural or formal) are

Ils/Elles sont - They are

Hope this helps!

EDIT: Changed informal to formal :)

15ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

anomalocaris 20 15

I think you meant to type "formal" for the Vous conjugation. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

espace13 25 7 2 1275

Thanks! Sorry!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GageShriver 3

Just started learning again. 11% through and this was a huge confusion for me. Thanks!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

simone.22 7

Thanks forgot this for a second!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

134 "She listens to the radio in the morning."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/353624>

Translation: Ela ouve rádio pela manhã.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

27 Comments

togobr 11

Por que não: She listens radio in the morning? seria a mesma coisa?

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

IgorAlmeida11 13 10

O verbo "listen" no sentido de ouvir (e não no de prestar atenção) pede o "to". Então é sempre listen to.

ex: me ouça = listen to me

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

alexandre.lohn 9 8 7 5 3

Poderia ser "Ela escuta AO rádio..." também não?

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Deividson 12

tbm pus isso, visto que qem escuta esculta a algo; a o radio

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Giusepe23 8

Também coloquei ao rádio.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

M.arcia 8

Gente, mas nós não ouvimos A algo. Nós ouvimos algo, apenas. Nós ouvimos rádio, não AO rádio. Aqui acho que está bem claro, não?

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AlexX 5

psé

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

antlane 24 22 18 82

escutar não pede preposição, é um verbo transitivo direto, como eu escuto você, eu escutei uma sinfonia.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

carlosanbjunior 11

"to" deve ser usado com verbos no infinitivo? qual é o verbo no infinitivo nesta frase?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Isa.belle 10 2

o último comentário desse site dá uma explicado no porque do uso do "to"

<http://www.englishexperts.com.br/forum/por-que-se-usa-o-to-em-listen-to-music-t11322.html>

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MaFrank 11

Nem sempre é possível traduzir literalmente, haja vista que o inglês possui outra estrutura.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RodrigoPro4 21 2

To?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

antlane 24 22 18 82

esse verbo já vem com o to e esse to aparece antes de qualquer coisa que se ouve - to listen to (<http://pt.bab.la/dicionario/ingles-portugues/listen-to>)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

anamoisinho 13 5 4 3 1

Essa pronúncia dessa mulher, vou te contar rsrs

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

morgan0099 12 2

tambem concordo mas no meu caso eu só escrevi o que eu escutei

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Angelaber 7

ela ouve o rádio durante a manhã. (in the/durante a) era uma das opções

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

danilo.deb2 11

Também fiquei em dúvida quanto ao TO, em quais vermos eu preciso usar ele? Tem alguma regra?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

antlane 24 22 18 82

a regra é conhecer verbo por verbo, como você deve ter feito no português. Aqui vai para você uma página de gramática onde se estuda REGÊNCIA (VERB + PREPOSITION) : Verb+ to - TALK TO - Who was that man you were talking to? Listen TO - We spent the evening Listening to music. (not listening music) apologise TO somebody (for ...) They apologised to me for what happened. (not They apologised me)// explain something TO somebody " Can you explain this word to me? (not explain me this word) explain I describe (to somebody) what/how/why ... I explained to them why I was worried. (not I explained them) Let me describe to you what I saw. (not Let me describe you) We do not use to with these verbs:phone I call I email I text somebody ~ I called the airline to cancel my flight. (not called to the airline) but write (a letter) to somebody answer somebody/something J He refused to answer my question. (not answer to my question) but reply to an email I a letter etc. ask somebody - Can I ask you a question? (not ask to you) thank somebody (for something) He thanked me fo r helping him. (not He thanked to me) Verb + at Look I stare I glance AT ... , have a Look I take a Look AT ... Why are you Looking at me like that? laugh AT ... I look stupid with t his haircut. Everybody will Laugh at me. aim I point (something) AT ... , shoot I fire (a gun) AT ... Don't point that kn ife at me. Ifs dangerous. We saw someone with a gun shooting at birds, but he didn't hit any. Some verbs can be followed by at or to, with a difference in meaning. For example: shout AT somebody (when you are angry) He got very angry and started shouting at me. shout TO somebody (so that they can hear you) He shouted to me from the other side of the street. throw someth ing AT somebody/something (in order to hit them) Somebody threw an egg at the minister. throw something TO somebody (for somebody to catch) Lisa shouted 'Catch!' and threw t he keys to me from the window.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Flavi10 15

Por que "TO THE RADIO" alguém pode me ajudar?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

antlane 24 22 18 82

esse to é uma exigência do verbo to listen - To listen to. Como o verbo escutar não pede nenhuma preposição em português, nós estranhamos. Outros verbos que exigem to: apologise to- I apologise to him for my mistake./ belong to - This coat belongs to Flavia./ Complain to (reclamar) - We complained to the manager of the restaurant about the food./happen to - A strange thing happened to me the other day./write to - Sorry I haven't written to you for such a long time./ prefer something/someone to - I prefer tea to coffee./ invite someone to - Have you been invited to any parties recently? (editado de uma gramática, claro)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Flavi10 15

obrigada

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jsousasomague 20

"Ela ouve rádio nas manhãs" e "Ela ouve radio de manhã" ambas as frases têm o mesmo significado

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jaderson259980 18 7 52

Sei que listen e hear significam ouvir,mas um é ouvir prestando atenção e o outro é ouvir distraidamente. Qual é qual?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

italotoffolo 13 7 4 3

Para quem está em dúvida em relação a aceitação da tradução: "Ela ouve ao rádio pela manhã."

O verbo "ouvir", no sentido de "escutar", é transitivo direto, isto é, não precisa ser sucedido de preposição (no caso, "ao") para ligar-se ao complemento. Quem ouve, simplesmente "ouve algo" ou "ouve alguém", e não "ouve a algo" ou "ouve a alguém".

Já no caso de "ouvir" ter o sentido de "prestar atenção", ele é intransitivo, isto é, não precisa de complemento para ter seu sentido completamente determinado, como no exemplo: "Pode falar, que eu ouço."

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

DanielMari679881 16 2

In the = de

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

135 "It is almost twice the size."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/393690>

Translation: Es casi el doble de grande.

13 years ago

Leave a new comment

69 Comments

mslinda6357 19 48

yes, why do we need el if it doesn't translate.

32ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rmcgwn 21

I decided to look into this more and I think I found the answer. El doble is article noun which I didn't see initially. And we know nouns as subject need articles. I found this reference It's a masculine noun. el doble - twice as much

8 es el doble de 4 - 8 is twice 4

es el doble de ancho - it's twice as wide es el doble de alto que su hijo - he's twice as tall as his son

gana el doble que yo - she earns twice as much as I do, she earns double what I do el doble de gente - twice as many people tiene el doble de habitantes - it has double o twice the number of inhabitants

As for why 'de grande' I can comment now on 'de'. I found this link that I think helps us Characteristics: When an object or person has characteristics (including contents or what something is made of) that are stated as a noun or infinitive, de is often used to show the relationship. It generally is not possible in Spanish, as it is in English, to use nouns as adjectives.

What I still don't know is why 'grande'? I think we need a native spanish speaker to explain. I couldn't find any idiom for this phrase so I will keep looking.

156ReplyGive Lingot14•3 years ago

Kroneaux 10 8 7

About "twice", as you say, we use "EL doble" because it's a noun so it needs an article, and "el doble DE" because "de" is the bridge to what we are talking about.

About why it is "grande", here's a simple answer from a native speaker: usually in Spanish, when we talk about the size, we talk about how big (cuán grande) the object is. Hope it helps :)

25ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

marchgo 11 5
thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 days ago

sheridend 12

TY, rmcgwn. Very helpful. I also do not know why we did not use tamaño.

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

KCachike 23 6 2

I used tamaño and it was accepted. It was this exact sentence: es casi el doble del tamaño.

13ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

CreMark 22 14 13 12 7 7 268

and why not "es de tamaño casi doble"?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dontwanttohave 9

As far as I know tamaño is used for the size of the shoes only.

-12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Kroneaux 10 8 7

In Mexico "tamaño" is always size. But the "size of clothes" (including shoes) is "talla".

12ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Roger_Burke 24 5

Look at the definitions of "grande," the second one is large. We often say "twice as large" which is the same as "doble de grande."

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rmcgwn 21

Grande= Size doesn't seem like the most appropriate. Others here have given much better ideas. If the solution had been twice as large I could agree.

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

brbert02 14 8 8 6

Perhaps the English answer ought to be changed rather than the Spanish

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

WildSage 22 20 18 17 16 13 10 8 8 6 6 4 3 3 2 2 504

Yes. This would have been easier to understand if they had said twice as large.

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

marchgo 11 5

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 days ago

levelledout 25 6 5

Spanish uses more definite articles than English so sometimes we have to add in the definite article. How to know when to do this? This is the best I've found so far:

http://spanish.about.com/od/adjectives/a/intro_def_art.htm If you read that it will tell you that definite articles are used for abstract concepts. "Double" is an abstract concept so I'm guessing this may be why.

Why use "grande"? "Grande" means big/large so "It is almost twice as big/large". Which is the same as "It is almost twice the size. Why not use tamaño? That's just the way they say it I guess, presuming Duo isn't missing a translation.

Why use "de"? When we say in English "It is the size of an egg" why do we use "of"? Because we do! In Spanish they also use de/of for size but more consistently I think.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runningtaters 24 8 7 7 3

i think you mean transliterate in which case think of it as "It is almost the double of the size."

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nihongo_papi 14 5

Nope, transliteration is something totally different.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Sharon_Kay 21 415

'de' and 'el' seem to be thrown in to sentences at random. When I put them in, they're wrong, and when I don't it's wrong. Nine months of doing this every night and I don't have a clue.

7ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Josefina314 12 4 4 4

I can see that it seems random. But you DO have a clue. That's why you're noticing! All I can say is, you'll get used to it. It'll come to you. :) Just be grateful you're an English-speaker learning Spanish and not a Spanish-speaker learning English. THEN you'd be in trouble. Es casi el doble de grande literally means It's almost the double of size/bigness. Eventually, that sort of phrasing will come to you. If you're able, watch some spanish-language t.v. or youtube with captions on. (The captions won't always be right, just like they're not in English, but it'll help.) Replay and replay things you almost understand until you can hear it. Replay things that are interestingly phrased. It helps. ¡Buena suerte!

8ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

Also remember when two nouns that are linked, de is used. This can't be translated word for word from Spanish. Like Josefina314 said doble is a noun so you insert 'el' meaning 'the' it is using grande meaning bigness/size.. The Spanish Disc says that 'grande' can be a noun. It would have been better had Duo chosen to say 'double' instead of 'twice'.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KarmaCrisis 19

I feel the EXACT same way. All the little articles are what makes Spanish so damn difficult at times.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

barnsy 20

why is "es casi doble la talla" not correct

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bkofman 19 10 8 6 3

I think it needs 'el' before doble

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Kroneaux 10 8 7

"Doble" is a noun (so as "talla"), so it has to have an article.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HelenWende1 22 6 3

In Mexico, do people use "talla" or "tamaño" more frequently when they are talking about clothing? (En México, dice la gente "talla" o "tamaño" con más frecuencia cuándo hablan de la ropa?) I hope these sentences are correct... I need to practice conversation. (Espero que estas frases son correctas... Necesito practicar conversación).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Josefina314 12 4 4 4

I know, right? Practicing conversation is the most important. It's about communication. Your sentences aren't totally correct, but I won't correct them here - you know why? Because I can totally understand you. Details will come later.

And for clothing size, I'd go with talla. For shoes, número. For other stuff, like a house or a car, tamaño.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Kroneaux 10 8 7

As @Josefina314 says, for clothing size, we say "talla", but when talking about shoes, it's "número".

Your sentences are almost correct, just some details (frecuencia, "estas" frases [femenine noun], correctas, I need=necesito). With that level you can talk to a native speaker :D

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

HelenWende1 22 6 3

Thank you very much! This helps me to remember the grammar and spelling. Muchas gracias! Esto me ayuda a recordar la gramática y la ortografía.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cbuntschuh 23 7 6

why isn't doble del tamaño correct?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

@ cbuntschuh, I am assuming that you meant 'Es casi el doble del tamaño, and it worked for me. I guess it would literally translate 'it is almost the double of the size' . I ran ' Es casi el doble de grande' through a translator and it came back with 'It is almost twice as big'.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Roger_Burke 24 5

Could be the spelling of "tamano"

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Andrew506191 18 11

Yeah! I wanna know too

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

morelangs 12 4 2
tAmaño

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tjackson95602 11
Colby college also has excersises to help with this type spanish colby college

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jb4292 14 7 2 2
Thanks for the additional resources!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Roger_Burke 24 5
Would "Es casi el tamano doble" work?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Kroneaux 10 8 7
First, "tamano" doesn't exists, you need "ñ" ;) Then, if you interchange the order of the words, the phrase makes no sense. It would sound as weird as "It is almost size the double".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HelenWende1 22 6 3
I put 'es casi dos veces el tamaño" and it was accepted. Edit: it looks like this is incorrect. Duo should have marked me wrong. Dos veces is used in the contest of "it happened two times. It is not used in the context of "two times the size."

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talca 25 12
Do you know if there is a different meaning between la talla and el tamaño? I think they are important words to know.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dontwanttohave 9
Here is a very good explanation from vimdex:
<http://forum.wordreference.com/showthread.php?t=1155975>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talca 25 12
Thanks. And isn't it interesting that the DL official answer includes neither word? I think a better translation is: It is almost twice as large.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rmcgwn 21
[deleted]

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

ryd3rj4ck 9
It looks like "doble" is seen as a noun, so it would have to be something like "He is the double of his size". I found this link helpful? <http://www.studyspanish.com/lessons/inequal.htm>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RayRude 15 2
Anyone have any grammatical insight into why "casi" can't appear at the end? I put mine there and it was squashed. I've heard native spanish speakers do this on occasion. I'm still getting my grips on adverbial phrasing and subject location — it's backwards from english in a number of cases, and not in others. So I'd appreciate some thought here.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Josefina314 12 4 4 4
If I were teaching English, I'd tell someone not to use "almost" at the end of a sentence, too, BUT that doesn't mean that as a native speaker I don't sometimes throw one in there, especially as an afterthought. "I've got this Spanish-stuff down ... almost." :) lol.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AndroidUserS3 15
I think that when they say "grande" in this sense it means big or large as in size... Like "the TV is twice as big as that TV"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chaolan77 10
De grande means size??

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Josefina314 12 4 4 4
Why does "el doble de talla" not work?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

seelian 25 9 3 3 2 503
why it is not "Es casi el doble de tamaño"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jpodd1 13 4
instead of grande, could the word "talle" we used?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JuevesHuevos 15

Probably not. "Talle" seems to mean "large" only in the sense of a clothing size.

<http://www.wordreference.com/es/en/translation.asp?spen=talle>

<http://www.spanishdict.com/translate/talle>

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hearangheo1 11 5

Why is "es casi el dos veces del tamaño" wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JuevesHuevos 15

Veces means "times" only in the sense of occasions/moments in time. NOT physical size.

Dos veces means twice like "at two points in time" - as in "I have been to that restaurant two times/twice" or "I have already seen that movie twice/two times"

<http://www.spanishdict.com/translate/vez>

Vez is just for time.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HelenWende1 22 6 3

I put "es casi dos veces el tamaño" (not del, which is what hearangheo1 had written) and was marked Correct. Should I report it? You are saying "veces" must not be used in this way, correct? Or are there exceptions?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JuevesHuevos 15

I'm not aware of any exceptions - I do not think "vez/veces" should be used in this way

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rogercchristie 21 20 16 8 676

I too used "Es casi dos veces el tamaño". DL said it is correct, and my translator gives the same sentence.

Ah! That's why I struggled to find it in the dictionary. Veces is the plural of vez (thanks JH) ... vez is time, veces is times.

Sure enough, dos veces is twice or two times (so "twice the size seems OK"), but una vez is once or one time. You wouldn't say "one time the size" in English.

Ok, I'm convinced that my translator is no cleverer than I am! I've reported it as an error.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mortisimago 25 14 810
straight to the idiom bin

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Deco1988 18 15 32
"Son casi dos veces el tamaño" is wrong. Why? Isn't "son" more appropriate than "es" in this context?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rogercchristie 21 20 16 8 676
In any case, Deco1988, dos veces is wrong. It means twice as in two times as in on two occasions. (veces is the plural of vez which means time). Look up the page for lots more detailed discussion.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

jb4292 14 7 2 2
I second this. "Veces" cannot be used for multiplicative purposes (as in "two times five" or "two times this size").

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Josefina314 12 4 4 4
"Son" is a verb for a plural subject. The subject is "it," which is singular.

Your sentence means, "They are almost twice the size."

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Deco1988 18 15 32
Hmm ... not quite ... "son" refers to "dos veces", i.e. plural ... so why "es"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Josefina314 12 4 4 4
If "son" refers to "dos veces," then you are translating a sentence different from the one Duolingo wants you to translate.

Son: they are casi: almost dos veces: two times

It isn't supposed to be the times that "are." It is supposed to be a general "it" that "is."
There is NO SUBJECT expressed in the sentence that Duolingo wants you to translate. We don't know what "it" is, but "It" is the subject, and it is singular. Like jfGor says, in English we wouldn't say "It are."

Anyway, good luck! I hope this helps, but if it doesn't, heck! I'd say, just move on. :) Sometimes, coming back later clears things up like magic.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Deco1988 18 15 32

Anyway, thanks for trying to help!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jfGor 16 2 2

In English, one would say It (singular subject of the sentence) is twice the size, or double the size. We would not say 'It are' that is why 'son' is wrong.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lauren168310 12

Why didn't it accept "Es casi doble la talla"? It corrected doble and replaced it with "dos veces" Why wasn't doble accepted??

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rogercchristie 21 20 16 8 676

"Es casi el doble de talla" should be accepted. If not, please report it.

The silly "dos veces" error was reported over a year ago and should have been eliminated by now. Please report that too.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

136 What is the differences between "Dich" and "Sie" "Euch"?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4664180>

BloodyChale 11 10 9 6 5 4 3 3

The Title explains every thing.

Give Lingot

42 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

Siebenundzwanzig 14 9 4 2 2

Dich = accusative, singular, informal.

Sie = accusative/infinitive, singular/plural, formal. (sorry if "infinitive" is the wrong term for that; I can't remember if it's correct)

Euch = Accusative, plural, informal.

Ich liebe euch.

Ich liebe dich.

Ich liebe Sie/sie.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BloodyChale 11 10 9 6 5 4 3 3

Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OlegCherka 6 2

It's a bit hard to explain. I speak Russian so it's easy for me to understand because it's very similar to how it is in Russian.

Sie is the easiest to explain, it's a plural form of you. English doesn't have it because you address one person and many people as you. Also you can use Sie as a polite way of addressing an elder or a stranger. Russian has the exact same thing, with the plural form of you being also used as a polite way of addressing people.

Russian also has an accusative form of you (Du) that's similar to Dich and Euch, it's harder to explain since they don't exist in English. I can try to find a technical explanation of the grammar but it will probably not make any sense to either of us even if I understand it because of it's similarity to Russian..

I'll take a whack at it and try to explain, the sentence "I love you" won't translate well to German if done literally "Ich liebe du". It's "ich liebe dich, from how I understand it, when you're doing something to a person, whether you're loving him, giving him a sandwich or hitting him with a pipe, you address him as "Dich" and not "Du". If you see him doing one of those to you, you address him as "Du".

Euch is the plural form of Dich. So it can be a plural "I love you", you love a group of people.

Hope that was helpful.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KernelDragon 16 11 284

If you know the archaic forms (Shakespeare, King James version of the Bible) of you in English: Du is like thou, and dich is like thee: Thou hast been naughty, but I love thee still.

Ihr is like ye (but only in the nominative), euch is like you (but only as accusative).

To remember that "ye" (used to be) nominative: I note that in the King James version of the bible, "thank you" means what you would think it means, but "thank ye" is a command for you to thank some one.

Also, a famous quotation concerning Easter: "Why seek ye the living among the dead?" (from Luke 24:5)

If you slur du, dich, Ihr, and euch just right, you (almost) get the corresponding English forms! (You get "thoo" instead of "thou," but you gotta admit that's close: you can see how "thou" could evolve over time.)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sweilan1 13 5

The explanation for "Sie" was close. "Sie" is both plural and singular.

"Sie" is formal, not polite form. Let's say you and a friend decide to go out for dinner. You would be using the Du-form because she is your friend. But let's say you go some place posh. Since your environment is so formal and elegant, you decide to be super polite and address your friend with "Sie". What you've actually done is tell your friend that you do not consider said person to be a friend any longer and wish to only think of him as a stranger.

Sometimes in an office, co-workers will address each other with "Sie", but when they are off the clock they switch to "Du". During working hours, they wish to be more professional instead of "buddies". But out of the others, they can go to a Kneipe and have a beer or two and socialize.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OlegCherka 6 2

That's exactly what I said, except the last part at work, wasn't aware of that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BloodyChale 11 10 9 6 5 4 3 3

Thanks, super helpful and makes sense. Also i am learning Russian, i think this will clear up some problems in the Russian language i will encounter.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

137 The Case for Norwegian

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5545287>

eriicaaa 19 11 7 7 6 6 3

AKA: THE COMPLETION OF THE TRIO

Now that there are two Scandinavian languages in Beta (congrats teams Danish & Swedish!), there's plenty of room in the Incubator for a third, so I'd like to (try to) persuade you all that you want to learn Norwegian, and that it should be one of the next languages in the Incubator.

"Why learn Norwegian?" you might ask. Well...

Reason 1: You want to visit Norway. (I'm trying out some hypnosis tactics here)

And if you have a few minutes, I highly recommend you check out this time-lapse video:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Scxs7L0vhZ4#t=313>

If those pictures made you want to visit Norway, now you have a reason to learn Norwegian! If not, read on...

Reason 2: It's pretty easy to learn.

You know how, in Spanish, there are all those conjugations for verbs depending on the person/thing doing it? (yo hablo, tú hablas, Ud./él/ella habla, etc.) Well, Norwegian doesn't have that! It's just conjugation for the tense of the verb and that's it! You can say: jeg snakker, du snakker, han snakker, hun snakker, Bob snakker, en katt snakker, etc.!

Also, the vocabulary is similar to English since it is a Germanic language.

For example:

hallo | hello

mann | man

dør | door

Still not convinced? (sighs and rolls eyes)

Reason 3: Mutual Intelligibility

(data from this site: http://www.academia.edu/4064493/Some_Scientific_Intelligibility_Studies)

As you will be able to see from the following data, Norwegian is the best “in-between” language as far as mutual intelligibility with the other two Scandinavian languages. So, if you only want to learn one Scandinavian language, Norwegian is your best bet because you will be able to understand the most of the other two.

Norwegians

understand 88% of the spoken Swedish language and understand 73% of the spoken Danish language.

Swedes

understand 48% of the spoken Norwegian language and understand 23% of the spoken Danish language.

Danes

understand 69% of the spoken Norwegian language and understand 43% of the spoken Swedish language.

Norwegians

understand 89% of the written Swedish language and understand 93% of the written Danish language.

Swedes

understand 86% of the written Norwegian language and understand 69% of the written Danish language.

Danes

understand 89% of the written Norwegian language and understand 69% of the written Swedish language.

Pretty cool, right? (say yes)

If you're still not convinced, or if you just want to hear some Norwegian, check out this song in Norwegian by Siri Nilsen: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HT3GuRQuV48>

PS-- Just want to add that this post is not meant to be read in a demanding way. When I say I want Norwegian in the Incubator, what I mean is "It would be nice to have a Norwegian course on here, but I get that the Duolingo team is currently working on a bunch of other cool stuff (like the rumored Windows app), so maybe when they are done with that they could consider getting a team together for a Norwegian course."

Ok, I'm done ranting now.

Ha det! •_•

Give Lingot18
1372 years ago

Leave a new comment
64 Comments

SkillsInPills 7 5 2

I'm sure that whoever applied for the Norwegian course will be approved soon. I mean how can you only have two of the three Scadinavian languages? They're kind of a package deal, you know? Also, I hope the entire Germanic branch will eventually be on here.

16ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Martin_Yo 25 22 17 305

You inspired me too much... I want to live in Norway so badly now that i watched the video, I can't wait for the course!

16ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eriicaaa 19 11 7 7 6 6 3

I feel ya, when I first watched the video I just stared at the screen like

16ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Birdexplorers 25 25 25 25 25 24 13 11 11 11 11 2 2 2 1407

In your 'snakker' list, you forgot 'trollet snakker'. Troll tense is the most important!! Another reason for learning Norwegian is that communing with Norwegian trolls is much more fun than modern day internet trolls.

11ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

tonywangtj 25 23 23 15 13 12 12 11 8 6 2 2 2 1308

I have been waiting for a Norwegian/Bokmål course ever since the first day I started using Duolingo. I am hesitant to learn Danish and Swedish because, like what you said, Norwegian is like Danish spoken in Swedish; the best "in-between-er" to start with for a Scandinavian language.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fveldig 14 13 13 12 11 8 5 3 194

Why wait? You'll definitively get a good head start if you start with Danish or Swedish now, and then start with Norwegian later!

I think a good comparison is that written Norwegian and Danish are similar, while the spoken languages tend to differ somewhat wildly from each other with some pretty crazy dialects. Although spoken Norwegian and Swedish are probably more similar than spoken Norwegian and Danish. So while you'll get an understanding of the other languages, they can still be challenging to understand by only knowing one of them. This is true as some TV-series from the other Scandinavian languages are popular in all of Scandinavia, thus a lot of people are exposed to all the different languages at some point.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tonywangtj 25 23 23 15 13 12 12 11 8 6 2 2 2 1308

See, thats the thing they are all quite similar in their respective ways.. I am afraid that when I started learning Norwegian I will get mixed up with the others. By the way I have already started learning basic Norwegian using Memrise ;)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

3IRIK 18 14 6 3

I'm in the exact same boat as you. I'm using Memrise for norsk but I would die for some duo.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lusofono 25 19 18 13 6 5

I'm surprised you said nothing about the rich literary heritage of the country. The main reason I'd want to learn Norwegian is to read novels and plays by Norwegian writers. If I were immortal, I'd try to knock off Knut Hamsun and Henrik Ibsen in the original, and that's just for starters.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maxwellkg7 25 18 13 12 11 11 10 9 9 8 6 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2

I'm with you all the way. I've wanted to read Hunger in Norwegian forever

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rhythmixed 13 10 9 8 6

Now I want to learn Norwegian!

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Danijel_M 22 6 123

Me too! :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Yoruji 11 10 7 7 6 4 4 2 2

And while we're doing the Nordic languages anyway, Icelandic and/or Old Norse would be awesome

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eriicaaa 19 11 7 7 6 6 3

Yes! But only after we get Norwegian. :P

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Yoruji 11 10 7 7 6 4 4 2 2

Exactly. :P

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

earthkissed 23 10 9 8 8 7 6 5 5 4

i wanted norwegian to be on duolingo, that would be my first choice in scandinavian languages.
great song you posted too btw.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Luke_5.1991 22 18 15 14 14 13 12 12 11 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 5 5 5 4 4 1

I made this post six months ago. What's funny is that all the talk about Norwegian was what got the other Scandinavian courses developed in the first place. It's a shame it hasn't happened yet, of course, but my hopes... remain low that it will happen soon. I'm a pessimist by nature.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Danijel_M 22 6 123

That would be great! Serbian should be one of the next languages (as a South Slavic language). :)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

het_aapje 25 23 11 11 10 8 7

YES! Serbian Norwegian should definitely be added next * prays *

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

I hope Serbian will be here! I want to contribute in making this course :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Matt_DasDerDie 13 12

Serbian would be awesome. I've only been exposed to the language and culture very slightly but would love to learn more.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

I sent e mail asking for making this course, but I still haven't got reply. Hopefully, soon I will :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Danijel_M 22 6 123

I've already sent an e-mail for contributor and I've got the answer recently. I'm sorry if I have some mistakes, English is not my native language. :)

В е ћ сам послао имејл за контрибутора и добио сам одговор недавно. Жао ми је ако имам неке грешке, енглески ми није матерњи језик. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

I sta su ti odgovorili? Hoce li biti uskoro kurs srpskog? :)

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Danijel_M 22 6 123

Ne sećam se baš dobro, ali znam da je pisalo nešto da oni svakog dana primaju puno tih prijava za kontributore i da će se potruditi da u budućnosti naprave što više kurseva. Ne verujem da će srpski biti uskoro, sigurno ne pre norveškog, finskog i dr.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

An-Si10 14 10 4 3

I want to contribute in making Serbian course, too! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Luko. 16 14 13 3

I think you convinced me, such a pity, because of you I'll have to wait the course...

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NOR5K 15 9 8 6 6

:P Once I saw Danish and Swedish in the Incubator, I got pumped for Norwegian. But then when Danish got Beta, and Swedish was getting closer to done with the pre-Beta, I got worried that Norwegian wouldn't be added at all. Decided that, until Norwegian was added to DuoLingo, I'd casually use Mango Languages for Norwegian. But just recently I decided it's not worth it until I can use DuoLingo, so I stopped and am now doing German until Norwegian is out. :P

Can't wait for Norsk!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

adri_f 20 18 14 12 10 8 5 5 5 4 3 2 2 2

I would definitely try a Norwegian course out, so I hope they'll add it soon. Norway is really a place I'd like to visit, the picture you posted are amazing! :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

quis_lib_duo 25 25 25 25 14 9 6 6 3 2 1216

Takk for den flotte artikkelen. Det er jeg helt enig i!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TrishaWilken 10 3

I very much agree! I would love to learn Norwegian AND go there on an extended vacation!!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ToasterPickins 10 7 144

I completely agree. Norway was by far the coolest country I've even been to.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alan_Roberts 15 4

Another vote for Norwegian from me please! Finished a basic Pimsleur course and now I'm stuck on how to proceed.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PhilipReese 7 7 7 7 7

There's always NTNU's course. I'm doing that along with Pimsleur right now!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Nice post ericcaaa, can't tell you how nice it would be to not have all those conjugations =)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 3

Danish and Swedish are like that too - about the conjugations.

Of course, I want to visit Norway too.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 1

I like Swedish more

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

eriicaaa 19 11 7 7 6 6 3

Well now that Swedish is in Beta it's time for Norwegian to shine :-) But maybe someday I'll learn all three Scandinavian languages

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GeniusJack 25 25 20 16 14 14 13 13 11 10 9 9 8 6 2

Good job! :-) I made a similar post to this a couple months ago:

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4393397>

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eriicaaa 19 11 7 7 6 6 3

Nice! :-) I wonder why I didn't see that sooner, I practically hunt down any Scandinavia-related posts on Duolingo and I somehow missed that one.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GeniusJack 25 25 20 16 14 14 13 13 11 10 9 9 8 6 2
Thanks! I like your post a lot too! :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alternia 15 10 6 6 5 3 3 3 2 2 8 16
I wish Norwegian was added first then. I like Danish, but I wouldn't have started taking it if it hadn't been released first. I don't mind though, it's pretty fun and easy so far.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cowlowl 19 11 9 8 8 6 4 2
Hopefully some Norwegians will apply to make a course before too long. I know I'd at least try it out, and to be honest, probably do it. I found myself watching Ylvis videos on YT when I was supposed to be finding stuff in Danish.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

3IRIK 18 14 6 3
A lot of people have actually applied it's just Duolingo staff are still waiting for other language courses to improve first. Tis a shame...

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cowlowl 19 11 9 8 8 6 4 2
:/ Well, hopefully one day...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Reckless-Light 8 2
I would love to have Norwegian on here! Being of Norwegian ancestry makes me long to know the language

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ajpthree 16 15 15 15 15 14 13 13 12 10 10 6 6 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 1002
I like you.

I don't know why, I just do.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eriicaaa 19 11 7 7 6 6 3
Cats.

Both our profile pics are cats. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

ajpthree 16 15 15 15 15 14 13 13 12 10 10 6 6 6 5 5 5 3 3 2 2 1002

haha yeah I hadn't thought of that... I think it was all the really awesome info in your post, the fact that you want to learn norsk - I've been waiting to learn swedish for a long time, but I started dutch & danish (since they were available first), & I am in LOVE with all three of those now (german too, but to a lesser degree). so now that I have all this info from your post, I REALLY wanna learn norsk (I already did want to learn it, but now even more so) kitties.

:D :D :D

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

snrailing 23 18 15 9 7

Yes! Amazing! Brilliant! Duolingo Norwegian would rock my world! I didn't even follow any of the links and I still want to learn Norwegian. Only problem: I don't speak Norwegian yet. Sigh. :(These are the times that I realize that life is far from fair. ;D

2ReplyGive Lingot22•2 years ago

CosmoKaiza 17 11 9 8 5

Good job for the arguments ! I want to learn it now because it seems easy.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ChukyBlairBass 22 7 7 6 4 1

No need to convince me. I'm really looking forward for that day comes!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dr_Patriot 8 7

You have inspired me as well with this. Hopefully some hard-working bilinguals will make themselves known and start this. The mutual intelligibility is what got me.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Wonderboy6 25 14 8

Every Norwegian i've ever met have flawless English - native fluency, more so than ive ever seen from any other country, so for me unless i was going to spend a lot of time in norway i wouldn't see the point, not trying to discourage people just making you aware ^^

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eriiaaa 19 11 7 7 6 6 3

Shh... I like speaking Norwegian so don't tell them I speak English :P

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

3IRIK 18 14 6 3

Living there, getting a job and having friends there all require Norwegian knowledge though. But yes, if you wanted to just visit you don't need it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HelenCarlsson 22 18 18 18 15 15 12 856
And "great" is "grejt" :)!

Is the first picture from Lofoten by the way?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Luke_5.1991 22 18 15 14 14 13 12 12 11 9 8 8 7 7 6 5 5 5 4 4 1
"Greit" actually means "okay." "Great" would be "flott" or "kjempebra."

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HelenCarlsson 22 18 18 18 15 15 12 856
Oh, I see! I need a course in Norwegian :).

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eriicaaa 19 11 7 7 6 6 3
Yup. It's in Reine, Lofoten.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HelenCarlsson 22 18 18 18 15 15 12 856
It's lovely!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jayway223 23 16 15 10 9 9
At first the only Scandinavian language that I wanted to learn was Swedish... You have made me want to learn Norwegian. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Topolski 19 8
You got me convinced! I'd need to learn German if it's a Germanic language, or at least comprehend it better than I do now... good thing I'm already learning it!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

het_aapje 25 23 11 11 10 8 7
Hopefully the staff and Norwegian speakers will see this!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

138 Grammar: The Dutch present simple
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3762671>
Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

Content

The conjugation of verbs in the present tense (present simple)

The irregular verbs in the present tense (present simple)

Functions of the present simple

1. The conjugation of verbs in the present tense (present simple)

How does the conjugation of the regular verbs in the present tense work?

The first person singular is formed by the stem of the infinitive – 'en'.

The second person singular receives the suffix -t, added to the stem. However, if the personal pronoun comes after the conjugated verb, inversion occurs and this suffix is dropped.

Example: "Loop jij vandaag niet?" = "Are you not walking today?"

For the plural forms, the first, second and third person, -en or in some cases -n is added to the stem of the word. As a student of Dutch, this is where you'll catch a break: these forms are all simply the same as the infinitive!

2. The irregular verbs in the present tense (present simple)

These are the verbs which are conjugated irregularly in the present tense (present simple):

hebben = to have kunnen = to be able to/can mogen = may/to be allowed to willen = to want

zijn = to be zullen = will

Of these irregular verbs, zijn (to be) and hebben (= to have) are used the most frequently and feature as both auxiliary and main verbs. These are the conjugations of the two verbs:

Note!: "U heeft" is also an accepted, a correct, conjugation of 'hebben'. Thus, for the formal you form, the formal second person singular, both heeft and hebt can be used. I am not putting this in the scheme above because it is easier to learn 'u hebt' as the standard form conjugation, 'u' being a second person singular pronoun. However, in principle, both forms are ok and can be used.

3. Functions of the present simple

First, we use the present simple when an action or event is taking place right at this moment, now. For example: "Hij leert Nederlands." (= He is studying Dutch). This individual is said to be studying right now.

When an action or event is going to take place in the future. Note that therefore the present simple can also be used in some of the cases that English uses the future tense. Example: "Morgen eten wij kaas." (= Tomorrow we are going to be eating cheese).

When a general truth is put forward. For instance: "Nederlanders dragen klompen" (= The Dutch wear clogs).

Return to grammar overview!

Give Lingot2

312 years ago

Leave a new comment

23 Comments

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

So future and present are the same. Good to know!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

There's also a separate future tense, but you may come across the present simple being used for denoting a future action or event. :)

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

I'll keep that in mind! Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jjd1123 16 15 13 8 8 7 6 6 5 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2

Did you mean to say that "u heeft" is also acceptable? Because "u hebt" seems to be the "normal" form, and you later go on to say that "both heeft and hebt can be used" for "u". Or am I misunderstanding something?

But I think that these grammar explanation are really a great thing. I haven't come across anything like it for any of the other courses that I tried so far.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

Edit: Yes, you are very right, that's what I meant. Thanks for letting me know about that typo. :)

Both u hebt and u heeft are correct forms.

This means that when you're speaking or writing Dutch, using either form is fine.

U hebt is a frequently used form and may make more sense to learners, since 'u' is a second person singular we are talking about. Yet, u heeft is a little bit more common. :)

The fact that both forms can be used for 'u' probably has something to do with the origins of the pronoun 'u', for which there are two theories (Dutch source). It may either have something to do with the cases that Dutch used to have centuries ago, or with 'u' being derived from 'Uwe Edelheid' ('You noble one').

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NickM98 15 12 10 10 6

I think what they meant is that you mistyped, it should say that "u heeft" is also acceptable.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

Ah right. I hope the note is clearer now. :)

Thanks for the clarification. ^^

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gypsybird 12 11 6 4 2

On this page, you give "U hebt" in the chart, saying this will be easier to learn, while mentioning that "U heeft" is OK too and actually more common.

But when we start the "Basics 2" lesson in the Dutch tree, in the tips and notes section, we see the form "U heeft" without any alternatives or any further explanation. I know both are accepted, but perhaps it would be better to emphasize the same form on both pages ("U hebt" here and in the tips notes of Basics 2)?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NickM98 15 12 10 10 6

Are those all the irregular verbs, or are there more?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

Those are the only verbs with an irregular simple present conjugation. :)

These also tend to be the verbs that are irregularly conjugated in other tenses.

There may be other verbs which have exceptions in their conjugation, but those I'd have to search for. For now, these verbs are the only irregular ones which really need to be learned. :)

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NickM98 15 12 10 10 6

Yay! No irregular verbs, or at least not as many as in French :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Simius 19 10 5 5

In fact, the verb used here as an example of regular verbs (lopen) is irregular in the past tense! I think the amount of irregular verbs in Dutch is of a similar proportion as in English. So don't get too comfortable...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 3

Would someone please create a section on separable verbs?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

UnitarioRe 12 9

It is good to know this before to follow studying Dutch, but when I am going to talk in the Future, Do I use a Particle?...As in English, e.g. I WILL eat cheese? Dutch: Morgen eten wij kaas? where is the particle in it? or it is like: I go to eat cheese tomorrow?....

It seems simple but...It is not. Instead, WE HAVE TO PRACTICE!

Pardon voor mijn Engels, Ik spreek geen goed Engels.

P.D. I wanna know when I have to NIET in Nederlands!!!!

Alsjeblijft!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BeckyCarr 25 926

Please do correct any of these if I'm wrong!

The phrase "Morgen eten wij kaas" is all in the present tense, and implies "Tomorrow we eat cheese." I think with the phrase "I WILL eat cheese" you have to switch the word order after your main verb...

I want to eat cheese = Ik wil kaas eten.

I can eat cheese = Ik kan kaas eten.

I am going to eat cheese = Ik ga kaas eten.

I will eat cheese = Ik zal kaas eten.

(I try to remember the verb "zullen" as "shall" in English)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

akais1818 5 2 2

Thank you for this! i couldn't see the conjugation pattern for the life of me!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PiesInTheSky 20 8 5 2 2

I'm a bit confused with the "U" form of conjugation. Does it always follow the 3rd person singular? (with regular and irregular verbs) I never know how to conjugate it! Thanks :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lavinae 25 25 20 13 12 12 11 8 7 7 7 3 3 2

Hi Marie! :)

'U' is the formal version of the second person, and though it can refer to one person or multiple people, it always takes the second person singular for verb conjugation.

So you'll get: U loopt / U slaapt/ U rent.

Perhaps thinking of the word 'alstusblijft' helps: als het u blijft. <-- 'blieven' is an archaic verb but as you can see it is in the singular form! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PiesInTheSky 20 8 5 2 2

Ok, this clears things up for me. Thank you very much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SiobhanWray 10 8 8 6

Wat betekent "blieven" in het Engels?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

andreja011 11

"Morgen eten wij kaas", why is it not "Morgen wij eten kaas"? Would that be wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

jjd1123 16 15 13 8 8 7 6 6 5 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2

See the grammar notes on Dutch word order. The short answer is that the finite verb has to always be in the second position in Dutch. Therefore, if the first position of your sentence is already occupied by an adverbial of time like "morgen" ("tomorrow"), the finite verb (in this example "eten") has to follow directly afterwards. "Morgen wij eten kaas." would be wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

andreja011 11

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

139 Change the Streak

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8605476>

Posted 1 year ago by [deactivated user]

I got this idea after reading the post below this one entitled "streak loss" by nannaibear. The loss of a streak in excess of 200 days is annoying at least and devastating to many. I would like to suggest a different streak.

Instead of consecutive days which means having to sign in and work each 24 hours how about we just keep track of the number of days a person actually signed in and worked? Shouldn't that be just as important? I know it is better to put in some effort each day but to expect a person to be chained to their computer or other device is asking too much. So, let us say you work steady for 100 days and then go on vacation and miss a week. When you come back your account says you have a streak of 100 days and you go on from there instead of starting at zero again. No longer would a person have to buy a streak freeze which is only good for a day, anyway. Besides, a streak freeze is ridiculous. You either have a continuous streak or you do not.

I think my suggestion would go over well. People would no longer be penalized for having missed a day or more, having forgotten to buy a streak freeze, having their internet service go down, being sick, etc. Instead, we could all be happy that we had worked diligently for a good number of days showing our devotion to learning our target language.

I presently have 457 days in my streak and have never used a streak freeze. Does that mean I am more conscientious than someone who has worked 500 days but only shows a streak of 200 because he missed a day? I don't think so. I welcome your comments.

Give Lingot1

301 year ago

Leave a new comment

62 Comments

Octal 21

The problem with that is, it then becomes closer to a general measurement of how much effort you've put into the site. Which is good, but that is exactly what XP does already. The idea behind the streak is that you retain your learning much better if you keep at it at a regular basis. For example, someone who practices every day for 30 days is going to have a better grasp on the subject than someone who practices one day a week for 30 weeks.

I do agree that missing 2 days just once and having it kill your streak does feel extreme. What if you had a streak "hourglass". When you practice, your XP gets added to the top and each day you lose XP. When it runs out, you lose your streak. An example might be 5 XP per day. It might also need to be harder to add XP to the top as it gets fuller, as it should become harder to give yourself a larger and larger buffer (If you need to skip an entire week, it should require a lot of work)

29ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Probably even more important than a daily "workout" with your target language would be how much effort you put into that workout. Someone who does one exercise a day versus someone who does five exercises every two days would make an interesting study. My money would be on the one doing the five exercises.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Loopulk 15

That's a poor comparison. Both are pretty consistent, though one a bit more consistent than the other.

You're failing to realize that one is 250% the amount of work than the other... It's a unequal comparison.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

The point was to show that people can achieve long streaks with minimal amount of work whereas someone who puts in even more work but misses a day here and there will achieve a better outcome.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Loopulk 15

Oh true true.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1259

Every metric is problematic when you draw invalid conclusions from it. I see what you're getting at, but I don't think this is a problem with the streak so much as it is a problem with people seeing a high number next to a name and thinking "ooh, this guy knows what's up!". Unfortunately, you've got that same problem with every statistic on the site.

You see this same kind of thing in the baseball world all the time, with people criticizing "simple" statistics like batting average, hits, and homeruns in favor of metrics like OPS, WHIP, etc. The fact that the metric doesn't tell the "whole story" doesn't make a bad metric, it just means we need to be more careful about how we value it.

As long as we recognize the statistics for what they are (and what they're not), it's not a problem.

10ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Octal 21

Well I don't think anyone looks at someone's streak as a good measure of their ability in a language. I think it is mainly useful as part of the gamification theme that Duo is trying for. It exists as a goal and therefor some people like to strive for it.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1259

That's a good point. I didn't make it very clear in my initial post, but I meant to convey that we read extra value into our own streak number, rather than the streak number of other users. We see the big number next to our names and think generally "wow, big number, I'm awesome". This leads us to the incorrect "small number, I suck" demotivating thought when we lose a streak.

It's all about keeping the streak in perspective, realizing what it signifies and not giving it more value than it deserves.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElleLingot 3

It's easy to be flippant about streaks when you have a 773 one... how about an experiment - just for fun mind - lose your streak deliberately and then post back about how it affects your motivation to continue on Duo(!)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1259

Don't confuse my statements that the streak carries too much value with me not assigning any value to it. The streak is definitely meaningful, and as you've noticed from the number, I value mine highly. When I lose it (due to an illness, natural disaster, vacation, what have you), there's no doubt I'll be sad about it (I'm only human). But it's not an indicator of skill level, and I'm not on the site to increase my streak number, I'm here to learn languages. After a short break, I'm sure I'll be right back here, continuing my studies.

That said, I do agree that the streak as it is now isn't perfect - the instant change from having a large streak to nothing is very jarring. I don't think the solution is to change how the streak is tallied though. The idea I like most to help this issue is a historical "high water mark" on your account that keeps track of your longest streak. Such an idea would alleviate some of the pain from losing your longest streak, while maintaining what makes the streak useful in the first place (ie. the fact that it enforces daily practice).

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElleLingot 3

Mmmm but that defeats the point of the streak then doesn't it? If you don't 'really' lose it, there would be nothing to motivate anyone to maintain it.

I see the value of the streaks, it certainly helps people to study every day but then when they're lost, the opposite effect kicks in. Duo needs something that will require people to study every day to maintain but won't be too devastating if it's lost.

I like Busuu's idea of a language garden (whereby completing lessons builds it up). Duo could modify this idea by letting people choose between a garden, spaceship, theme park etc. and completing lessons builds up your environment and each day you miss, wear and tear takes place on your items until they 'break' and need replacing. You could save up enough streak points to buy a "lifetime guarantee" on your items which would basically be 100 streak points per item. Considering you would have like a gazillion things in this environment, using your streak points (or Lingots) would just mean you didn't have to start from utter scratch if you had to leave Duo for a while.

Or they could mimic the tamigotchi things (spelling?!) whereby you have to do lessons to keep your chosen pet alive.

I do think there are much more creative, fun and fairer ways to motivate people to learn every day but I'm happy with the current site.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1259

Mmmm but that defeats the point of the streak then doesn't it? If you don't 'really' lose it, there would be nothing to motivate anyone to maintain it.

No, I don't think so. You'd still lose your current streak, but there'd be a second "longest streak ever" value shown somewhere on the profile which would stick around as a historical record, as an acknowledgement of your past achievement.

With respect to the "language garden", hourglass, and other similar ideas, I can understand the appeal. Under systems like those, missing a day would certainly be less demotivating. My issue with those systems is that they diminish what I see as the primary motivation the current streak provides. Look at it this way, when I'm deciding whether to log on to Duolingo tomorrow, which one of these two thoughts do you think will be going through my mind?

"I want to see my streak go from 773 to 774"

"I don't want to see my streak go all the way back to 0."

Option #2, right? That strict punishment that you (and others in this thread) want to remove, is in fact the real motivating factor. Replacing the punishment of a lost streak with a lesser punishment of a slightly decayed garden (or a slightly less-full hourglass, or a decremented streak number, take your pick) would, in my eyes, lead to a situation where users start thinking "Eh..I don't feel like practicing today. I'll get on tomorrow" rather than "Ah nuts, still have to do my Duolingo today. Let's get it over with...". Though the second thoughts are clearly less enjoyable in the moment, it's hard to deny that they're more motivating AND more in line with the purpose of the site (learning).

I suppose I look at the situation through a lens of "what's more motivating?" rather than "what's less demotivating?". Regular practice is critical for language learning, and I wouldn't want to see a system implemented that removes (or diminishes) the urgency to get on every day.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

I think the problem, as pointed out in nannaibear's post, is the psychological effect which leads to diminished motivation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1259

The diminished motivation for a loss of streak is closely related to my initial point that we tend to read too much into the streak value. We see the value get higher and higher and instead of thinking "I've gone a long time without missing a day", we think "high number = awesome" which of course implies "low number = horrible". If we keep it in perspective and realize that the streak isn't trying to tell us anything about our language talent, the loss of streak shouldn't be demotivating.

Another point that I neglected to make in my initial post is that if we were to switch to a system that only increased, we'd lose a big motivator too. For me, the biggest motivation from the streak is not the big number, but rather the threat that I'd lose "status" if I miss a day. That's powerful, and a big reason why I continue to log on every day. Without the threat of losing my streak progress, what stops me from saying "eh, let's take a day off"?

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

"... the loss of streak shouldn't be demotivating." True, it shouldn't but humans being humans, it is. I do agree with the second point. "...I'd lose "status" if I miss a day." is very true: humans being humans, again.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vcel10 25 22 11 6 896

... "we tend to read too much into the streak value"

And that's it. That's where I stop and just have fun with learning and experiencing languages.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElleLingot 3

...while maintaining a 420-day streak...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

remoonline 25 20 13

Well, you are ignoring the amount of work put in and just looking at the streak count. If someone genuinely enjoys the learning process, a long streak will naturally follow.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

Faeryeye 25 25 25 25 9 2 737

I think both would be nice. Maybe just the streak on the top bar and the other in the profile. I'd even be interested in seeing how many sessions I had logged on for.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tj1983 25 21 18 7 5 903

How about adding the max streak obtained, as well as the current streak? A high-water mark, so to speak. So when the streak does eventually go, you still keep your virtual trophy, as well as a goal for next time.

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Roman_Knight 15 9 6 4 2

I can get behind this. I lost a 60 day streak before and I know it may not seem like much but for some reason I just felt like the world came tumbling down around me. Haha.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

superkakapo 8 5

:D I'm with you TattooedTaino! I was so happy about finally starting to learn Swedish and was working so diligently, already imagining the day when I'd have a huge streak. Of course because seeing a big number over there is awesome, but also because I thought "wow, with a number lilke that it must mean I'll be speaking some good Swedish" :D I'm a newbie so my streak was just 6 and when I lost it I was like "oh nooooooooo". Awesome number minus 6 hehe. But this is all good fun, don't change the streak! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SussexSoleil 25 10

The streak should operate something like a leaky bucket. Keep filling the bucket and the level will rise. Stop filling the bucket regularly and the level will fall. So:

Duolingo Activity = Streak + 1 Day

Duolingo Inactivity = Streak - (Number of Days inactive)

It is a better analogy of how the brain works and retains information, rather than sudden death for missing a single day.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rspreng 24

I agree with you: "You either have a continuous streak or you do not." I see a streak on Duo like a streak of doing daily exercise. I either do it, or I don't. The reason I don't is of no consequence (sick, lazy, whatever) but I do not have the option of paying a fee and saying that I actually did not miss a day. ;) So I'd say leave things as they are, but drop the streak freeze.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tj1983 25 21 18 7 5 903

I like the streak freeze as sort of a technical mulligan. It took me months to "figure out" what constituted a completed lesson and a 24 hour time frame, before my streak started to accumulate. People get caught up in time zone changes, flights delayed, lessons get interrupted, connections get dropped. That said, it should probably be a LOT more expensive, and maybe it should just buy you a few extra hours.

What might be more helpful is, say at midnight, instead of just burning the streak freeze, it could text you a single translation for one point. You text the answer back within an hour or two, get your 1 XP, and continue your streak. Or just make the streak freeze unavailable for repurchase until another lesson is completed. One way or another, this forces you to get some practice, which is really what the streak is about.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Maybe one should lose a percentage of their lingots whenever they lose their streaks, that would actually be a nice A/B test of negative reinforcement. :)

Anyway, I do agree that the streak freeze is pointless and kind of cheating. A person with enough lingots could probably come in everyday and buy a streak freeze everyday for a week or so, and not do anything meaningful or work, as the OP suggests.

If one ever worries more about losing their streak than about learning, then one has really missed the point of Duolingo.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

There may be those who put too much stock in the streak. One should see it for what it is, just another form of reinforcement.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

If that's true, then there's no need to change it. Although, it'd be interesting to watch if losing the streak also meant losing a few thousand XP. I'm sure that would create an amazing outcry for weeks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

"If that's true, then there's no need to change it."

Apparently that is how the staff at duolingo thinks as they have removed motivator after motivator. Motivators are obviously important judging from the number of posts that have appeared in the last several months.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Yes, the streak freeze should go.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

.Blaze. 9 6 2

Why should Duolingo change streaks? If you could have a streak and it stayed the same after who knows how long of inactivity than what would be the point of a streak? If Duolingo changed the streak like you said they should, what would be the point of double or nothing? What would the point of lingots be?

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Actually, the term "streak" should be changed to "active days" or something like that. Motivation would come from increasing this number and not having to worry about losing it as with the current streak. Double or nothing could still be used for short term streaks as it is now and finally, what is the point of lingots anyway? They are basically useless. Maybe duolingo should list how many lingots everyone has as a new motivator. That would be rather like a rich guy flashing his money. We all know how well money works as a motivator.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

.Blaze. 9 6 2

I guess.... But what would the point of currency be if there was only a few things to buy?

And if the streak was changed to active days people could stay off for as long as they wanted, so why would anyone make a change like that on a language learning website?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

You would get credit for the work you did. If accumulating a large number is important to you, do the work and the numbers will add up.

The whole point is to not make it so difficult for people who want to do the work but for one reason or another are not able to such as lack of internet access, illness, vacations, etc.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

b.trout-unicorn 7

My highest streak was 6 and i got so mad when i missed one day i can't believe people have gotten a 500 day streak! (congrats to those who have!)

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

b.trout-unicorn 7

(btw in your second sentence it says "loss of steak" instead of "loss of streak")

:D

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Thanks! Freezing a steak is not good, either! lol

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TysonHolman 7 2

I like steak

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

b.trout-unicorn 7
me to!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

b.trout-unicorn 7
only if it is cooked, because steak freeze does not sound good! :D:D:D:D:D

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TysonHolman 7 2
or does it! I SAW YOU EATING FROZEN STEAK THE OTHER DAY

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

b.trout-unicorn 7
first off no you didn't, second it doesn't taste good unless you are a carnivore (just stating the facts.)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

vcel10 25 22 11 6 896
Devastating . . . I don't know about that.
"but to expect a person . . . is asking too much" - No one is expected to keep a streak of 10 days let alone 500 days.
Here's my quick 2 cents, a streak is all about self-perception. I would prefer the site developers work on improving the courses before tackling any issues with a streak. I personally think a streak is clear cut and simple. If you miss a day, you lose it.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]
"If you miss a day, you lose it." Easy to say but past posts have shown that many take it seriously and when lost many have considered quitting. Learning a foreign language is tough. Little motivators like a streak are just ways of helping get through the process.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vcel10 25 22 11 6 896
Past posts have shown that there are a lot of people upset about Klingon, but we don't know the stats concerning those who are for or against the addition of that language. The same can be said for the importance of the streaks considering the number (thousands or millions?) of users on Duolingo. We don't know the numbers.

I think "la racha diaria" is a little motivator that helps but is not essential. Many people including myself have quit or put off learning a language (or any subject) for various reasons. It happens often and is expected.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

m.tastic 25 13 11 11 8 6 5 5 2

There should be a "longest streak" number in my opinion, but nothing more than that.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElleLingot 3

I disagree with removing the streak freeze. Given how utterly useless it is in terms of holidays, illnesses etc. I have come to the conclusion that Duo introduced this as a way to pre-empt technical problems and/or genuine emergencies whereby you have one whole day (well, nearly two) to get back on track / make arrangements.

Also consider that if you have time to log in every day to purchase another SF, chances are you have time to do a quick basic lesson to get 1 exp point.

There was another discussion where people were complaining that the coach settings lost them their streaks and I wondered why so many people seemed to have not equipped a streak freeze for just such a circumstance.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nkn15 17 7

I used to do a streak, but the most I got was 10 days. I stopped trying a while ago. I really don't like feeling an obligation to go on Duolingo every day. This is probably different for people with phones, laptops, etc. In my opinion, it is easier to learn at your own pace. Having a bigger streak doesn't really mean you're working harder.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nannaibear 19 9 14

There are some very interesting ideas here and it is also interesting to hear how others feel. When I first started with duo I was obsessed almost, but the withdrawal of the heart motivator, when i was in sight of finishing, lessened the joy and i fell to just one lesson a day. True the lingot/streak/heart mean little, but for me, I worked hard to keep my hearts, researching an answer and, I think therefore, learning more. The new lesson format may work with the streak. Add one if you do it, lose one if you dont. This seems a fairer representation, it is harsh to lose a large streak because you are too ill for example. I suppose we all react in different ways, but this is a great community and a great product. Good Luck to you all with your chosen language(s)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ilmarien 25 25 25 15 14 13 2 11

I don't think a streak is even necessarily a good indicator of how much continuous work you've put into a language. I've got a 275 day streak, but my highest number right now in any individual language is 43, and that's only because I'm motivated to get my Portuguese into decent shape by September. I'm obsessively committed to Spanish, but I don't practice it regularly here, so I was spending 3 days on Italian, then a day on German, then playing around with Turkish or Swedish or whatever else was shiniest at any given moment. I really wish there were a better way to account for streaks in multiple languages, since you could have a long one and yet be committed to nothing individually.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tj1983 25 21 18 7 5 903

PSA: Duolingo now/recently has a very nice mobile web site, which makes it very easy to go on and check status or purchase a streak freeze from your phone.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pawscuddles 14 7 6 6 3 2

People of Duolingo are either optimistic or pessimistic. A glass half full or a glass half empty.

Solution: Put up an optimisitic or pessimistic option haha

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BrandonMcC13 18 10 3 396

I know this is an old thread but I was bitten again by thinking something worked when it didn't. duolingo's connections and "midnight" setup is garbage. I hate that there is no notification about dropping connections and am thinking about finding something different. motivation is just crushed every time the app screws up and loses streaks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElleLingot 3

Why didn't you have a streak freeze equipped?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BrandonMcC13 18 10 3 396

i thought i did. apparently i had a connection problem yesterday when i was using the app but i didn't realize it. i think i'll just have to start only using the website.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nannaibear 19 9 14

the first time i got caught out with the 11pm thing and the app store on my tablet app didnt sell the freeze so the 2nd 11pm thing lost it for me :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nannaibear 19 9 14

I have followed this thread from the start, and am motivated to comment again due to a recent commenter reminding me, and also having built up to 157 days again ,after losing my 260 plus streak because the cut off came at 11pm not midnight, I lost it again because i did not get my reminder email. It is now perhaps four weeks since i did a lesson. The first time in about 18 months I have not done some spanish. There must be a better way. To be punished so severely for missing one lesson (for the second time) has just stopped me doing spanish. And while logically, I am a grown up and it means nothing to have a large streak, actually, without consciously deciding so, it has so unmotivated me I have given up. I do like the idea of building up some number adding 1 for each day practised and removing one for each day missed. This 'punishment' seems to more accurately reflect the crime and allows for holidays, illness, power cuts etc without destroying moral and motivation completely. Feliz año nuevo peeps, at least the season means there is a good chance I will start again :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GringoUruguayo 15

Is there any way to restore a lost streak? I cannot find any contact email, or anything other than the forum. I've read most of the comments, and there are many varying opinions about what a streak means and putting too much emphasis on it, but the fact remains that losing one is demoralizing and causes less motivation to continue.

I had a family emergency yesterday and forgot to do my lesson or use the freeze, and didn't realize it till this morning. Subsequently, I lost my ~145 day streak (after doing the same thing last fall and losing a ~90 day streak). Now, if I skip today, who cares? I am less motivated, period. The same thing happened last time, and it took me over two weeks to get motivated again. Now, you can call me what you want, but the fact remains that having a decent streak IS a motivator to continue every day, and losing one IS a demotivator. Solution? Grace and mercy instead of justice, have a way to renew a lost streak.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

KyleeMichael13 14 10 2

I agree with you 100%, the idea that we can practice everyday is simply unreasonable.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Seala0 25 2

I like your suggestion of the site just keeping track of the days you logon and met your XP goal. Last week I lost my 119 day streak due to a confusion about an internet connection. It was my first day of vacation and I made my family wait while I did my lessons to get my daily XP points before we went out for a day at an amusement park. I finished the lessons for the needed XP points but I did not realize I was not connected to the internet. The next day when I connected to the internet for that day's Duolingo lessons I got the XP points from the day before and realized I had just lost my 119 day streak.

I also feel a streak freeze is ridiculous and will not use it. You either have a continuous streak or you don't have a continuous day streak.

I now have a 7 day streak despite being on the site now for 126 days straight. I guess the important thing I am trying to get out of the site is learning a new language and not how many days in a row I signed in.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElleLingot 3

Some people need the streak to motivate them. In cases like yours, where people genuinely did a lesson, why should they lose their streak/motivator because of a technical fault or error? Any motivator Duo chooses to use must have built-in redundancies. A one-day placeholder is fine.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AdinAvritt 16 3 2

I like the hourglass idea posted at the top of this conversation. I am doing this program with a children's learning group and I will tell you that "devastation" is a good word to explain the loss of a streak. And truth be told, adults still operate under many of the same learning principles as children. There is nothing wrong with recognizing the truth of how we are motivated and how our egos are impacted. It would be wonderful to improve the motivational aspects of the program.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

140 Is turtle the same as tortoise in Spanish?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/41639>

Justafollower 15 8

I was wondering if there was a major difference between the two.

Give Lingot

384 years ago

Leave a new comment

3 Comments

tayjes16 17 4 4 3 2

Tortoises live on land and turtles live in the sea, but are in the same biological order, Testudines. Generally they are both just called "tortugas", but if you want to be specific, a turtle can be called "tortuga de mar" ("mar" being the word for sea) or "tortuga marina" (as jstenson suggested above), and a tortoise can be called "tortuga de tierra" ("tierra" being the word for land).

7ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

jstenson 7 3

Tortuga equals tortoise, tortuga marina (in more technical terms) equals turtle, in the end just use the latin taxonomy.

4ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

OleGuy 6

There is similar confusion in English... Small 'tortoises' are also referred to as turtles - the box turtle, for example

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

141 "The cat drinks its milk."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/166892>

Translation: Il gatto beve il suo latte.

04 years ago

Leave a new comment

33 Comments

Jeaninel 17 1

Why not " il gatto beve il proprio latte"?

22ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MirvekaesV 12

i have the same qestion

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

grainemhaol 15 8 35

Me too!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

yuriSVB 11 10 9 8 8

Maybe (only a guess) this is for 'proprio' is specifically for 'its own milk'. Eventhough the meaning would be same.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

grainemhaol 15 8 35

Thanks, I think you are right! Looking at it again, I can see the difference in the interpretation i.e. 'il suo' meaning 'the milk that belongs to him' whereas 'il proprio latte' might mean literally the milk that he produces (if he wasn't a male cat, that is!)

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

artz2712 13 9 9 3 1

According to this logic, the man from another exercise produces cats :)

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

yuriSVB 11 10 9 8 8

I actually haven't noticed this ambiguity.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

LoreAl1 9 6

Yes, but since this app translate child "ragazzo"(boy) it should be correct

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

artz2712 13 9 9 3 1

I assume that Italian animals can't own anything, like if they were inanimate.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jacqueline.hill 8

When do you use suo vs. Il suo?

14ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rrinunes 12 11 6

Good question. I have the same doubt.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Vietata 14 12 11 11 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 57

Why is 'latte' masculine -it catches me out every time. :(

14ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Fjompeji 21 11 6 6 6 479

Nouns ending with e in singular can be both masculine or feminine :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RaviOnline 20 9 9 793

Also notice why "la gatta beve il suo latte" is correct as well.

Possessive adjectives (like suo here) agree in gender (and number) with the noun possessed (the milk) and not the one possessing it (the cat).

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Briguy84 15 8 6

I was wondering this because I got this wrong! Is it because the subject is not the car but rather the milk?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RaviOnline 20 9 9 793

No, the subject is still the cat, not the milk. It's that "suo" is an adjective used to describe masculine nouns like latte. Whether the noun is a subject or an object doesn't matter.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

apathyaddict 11 10 3

I don't think it's fair to ask us to compose this type of sentence when there is no process or explanation for the placement of the possessive article in the sentence.

4ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

strages 10 10 9 2

i think we have to co-op with trial and error i'm afraid... a separate section on duolingo that explains grammatica practices would be nice!

13ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

memoi 15 10 8

I know French, but even so Italian is in between the two. I understand saying 'la mienne' / 'il mio' but in French you don't say 'il suo' or 'il nostro'.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

KadeDeLacy 8
Why not le sue?

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mspat4a 9 2
Because it's "il latte" not "le latte".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Pollycracker 7
I thought that if you use il in the beginning, you dont have to add it again. So "il gatto beve suo latte" was not correct? Why

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

artz2712 13 9 9 3 1
Two nouns = two articles

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BrunAnimas 21 18 13 9 8 7 6 6 6 6 5 3 3 14
How in earth will I know if it's gatto or gatta!?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BilboBaggins0135 3
Gatto=male cat. Gatta=female cat

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LoreAl1 9 6
We usually use gatto

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

weiss100 12 3
We not "la gatta beve il sua(!) latte" gatta is feminine. Or is sue masculine because of latte? Or is it always sue regardless of gender?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vajankle 12 1
Because the possessive pronoun is determined by the object being owned, not the subject doing the owning.

Also, sue is feminine and suo is masculine, but I don't think sua is anything at all...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Briguy84 15 8 6

suo = singular male, sua = singular female, suoi = plural male, sue = plural female, iirc

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LlamaLuverLizzy 5 2

I'm mixing Italian with Spanish

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

BossMatt10 11 10 2

When does the article need to be included before the direct object? It seems like sometimes it is and sometimes it isn't and I'm not sure what the rule is.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

arnasPalia 10 19

Why is "Il gatto beve suo latte" wrong? How do you know when to write "the" if the english version doesnt have it

0ReplyGive Lingot•yesterday

142 The Most Useful Spanish Cognates

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5508808>

CliffJonesJr 13 9 9 8 7 7 7 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 63

I rediscovered a really cool site today (well, cool if you're a language nerd, which I'll assume you are): Cognates.org. You can paste in English text, and it'll highlight words that have matching counterparts in the major Romance languages (Spanish, Portuguese, French, and Italian).

It also has several word lists with the cognates pulled out. Just the kind of data I like. What I've put together for you guys is a list of all the cognates that occur in both Michael West's General Service List and in the Core Vocabulary of Voice of America's Special English. This adds up to 330 words that should be pretty basic.

accept = aceptar

accident = accidente accuse = acusar

act = actuar

actor = actor

admit = admitir agency = agencia agriculture = agricultura

air = aire airplane = aeroplano

animal = animal appear = aparecer

approve = aprobar

arms (weapons) = armas arrest = arrestar

art = arte baby = bebé

balance = balance bank = banco bar = bar base = base block = bloque border = borde bottle = botella calm = calma camera = cámara capital = capital car = carro case = caso cause = causa center = centro century = centuria ceremony = ceremonia chance = chance circle = círculo clear = claro coast = costa coffee = café collect = coleccionar colony = colonia color = color combine = combinar command = comandar committee = comité
common = común company = compañía compete = competir
complete = completar condition = condición connect = conectar contain = contener continue = continuar control = control
copy = copiar correct = correcto cost = costo creature = criatura crime = crimen criminal = criminal cross = cruz custom = costumbre dance = danzar
day = día decide = decidir declare = declarar defend = defender demand = demandar depend = depender

describe = describir desert = desierto destroy = destruir different = diferente difficult = difícil direct = directo
disappear = desaparecer discover = descubrir discuss = discutir distance = distancia divide = dividir doctor = doctor dollar = dólar
during = durante education = educación effect = efecto effort = esfuerzo elect = electo employ = emplear enemy = enemigo engineer = ingeniero enter = entrar equal = igual especially = especialmente event = evento exact = exacto examine = examinar example = ejemplo
excellent = excelente except = excepto excuse = excusa exercise = ejercicio exist = existir
experience = experiencia experiment = experimento explode = explotar explore = explorar express = expreso extend = extender
extra = extra extreme = extremo false = falso family = familia film = film finish = finalizar firm = firma flower = flor force = fuerza fresh = fresco fruit = fruta funeral = funeral future = futuro gas = gas

general = general govern = gobernar grain = grano group = grupo guard = guardia history = historia honest = honesto honor = honor
hospital = hospital hotel = hotel hour = hora human = humano idea = idea
imagine = imaginar immediate = inmediato important = importante
in = en include = incluir increase = incrementar industry = industria influence = influencia inform = informar insect = insecto instrument = instrumento insult = insultar interest = interés interfere = interferir international = internacional invent = inventar invite = invitar island = isla limit = límite line = línea liquid = líquido list = lista
literature = literatura local = local manufacture = manufacturar map = mapa
march (parade) = marchar material = material
May = mayo medical = médico medicine = medicina member = miembro memory = memoria message = mensaje metal = metal mine (excavation) = mina

mineral = mineral minister = ministro minute = minuto model = modelo
moderate = moderado modern = moderno moral = moral mountain = montaña move = mover much = mucho
music = música mystery = misterio nation = nación native = nativo nature = naturaleza necessary = necesario no = no
north = norte not = no note = nota number = número obey = obedecer object = objeto observe = observar ocean = océano offer = oferta office = oficina official = oficial on = en operate = operar opinion = opinión opposite = opuesto or = o order = orden organize = organizar paint = pintar paper = papel pardon = perdón part = parte pass = pasar passenger = pasajero past = pasado patient = paciente perfect = perfecto permanent = permanente permit = permitir person = persona piece = pieza plan = plan plant = planta poem = poema

police = policía politics = política popular = popular population = población position = posición possess = poseer possible = posible postpone = posponer present = presente president = presidente prevent = prevenir
price = precio prison = prisión private = privado problem = problema produce = producir profession = profesión program = programa progress = progreso property = propiedad propose = proponer prove = probar public = público pure = puro quality = calidad quiet = quieto
race (ethnicity) = raza radio = radio rare = raro real = real reason = razón reasonable = razonable receive = recibir recent = reciente reduce = reducir religion = religión repair = reparar repeat = repetir report = reporte represent = representar resist = resistir responsible = responsable result = resultado retire = retirar return = retorno rich = rico
rob = robar rock = rock roll = rollo ruin = ruina sacrifice = sacrificio

salt = sal satisfy = satisfacer science = ciencia
second = segundo secret = secreto separate = separar serious = serio serve = servir service = servicio severe = severo shock = shock
show (event) = show silence = silencio simple = simple situation = situación social = social solid = sólido space = espacio special = especial spirit = espíritu sport = deporte
state = estado station = estación story = historia suffer = sufrir
sugar = azúcar suggest = sugerir support = soporte
suppose = suponer surprise = sorpresa suspect = sospechoso sympathy = simpatía system = sistema
tea = té telephone = teléfono temperature = temperatura terrible = terrible theater = teatro total = total train = tren trap = trampa treat (deal with) = tratar tribe = tribu tube = tubo unite = unir universe = universo university = universidad urge = urgir urgent = urgente use = usar usual = usual valley = valle value = valor victory = victoria violence = violencia visit = visitar vote = votar

zero = cero

Can you think of any other Spanish-English cognates that are useful enough to belong on a short list like this? Please post your suggestions in a comment. Off the top of my head, class/clase, document/documento, favorite/favorito, language/lenguaje, menu/menú, and park/parque would be good.

If you like this kind of thing, check out my website for more!

Give Lingot49
172 years ago

Leave a new comment
26 Comments

annaannaannan 23 21 12 21

cognates are part of the concept of language transfer, which lies behind the excellent free language courses available at <http://www.language-transfer.org/#!/courses/cez4> . i have no affiliation, i just use them alongside duo. i actually wish i'd done their spanish course before i found duo, rather than vice versa.

6ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

CliffJonesJr 13 9 9 8 7 7 7 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 63

Thanks for the link! Interesting stuff. And free is always nice.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vcel10 25 22 11 6 897

Cognates are useful, but if you're already familiar with the English for words like "simple" or "secreto" then you don't need to memorize them, you already know. Conversely I would suggest being aware of the false-friends or false cognates like actual, arena, dirección. etc

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

CliffJonesJr 13 9 9 8 7 7 7 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 63

These words may be more or less comprehensible the first time you encounter them, but you actually do need to memorize them if you want to be able to use them. It's just really easy to do, so you don't have to put the same amount of effort into it that you would for a normal vocabulary list.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talca 25 12
el condón = condom

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vcel10 25 22 11 6 897

I'll put a little effort to use them speaking or writing, but little to no effort required for listening and reading.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

barbareed 12 3 2

A list of common false cognates would be super useful.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vcel10 25 22 11 6 897

List of false friends . . . click the link.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

wynrich 24 21 14 10 101

Interesting, thanks! One thing about cognates is sometimes you think that how to form a cognate would be obvious when it is not. For example: "competition" is "competencia" (not "competición") or "to react" is "reaccionar" (not "reactar") or "calculation" is "cálculo". My favorite website for learning vocabulary is memrise and, for example, in the top 5000 words course (<http://www.memrise.com/course/1288/first-5000-words-of-spanish/>), there exist many many cognates formed in the obvious way ("education" = "educación"). But some of these weird ones pop up and can throw you. Plus, you still have to memorize genders and endings such as "a", vs. "o". It's not obvious that "quiet" would be "quieto" and "note" would be "nota" or that "perdón" is masculine but "razón" is feminine. But, I agree, even though some details have to be memorized or practiced a lot, cognates help quickly build a vocabulary. And they sure make it easy to read things as long as you know the false cognates.

3ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 352

Plus, just learning a cognate for a word won't tell you if that's really the word native speakers use most frequently. The word "educación" is a good example. You can use it and others, especially those who speak English, will probably know what you mean, but after examining a couple of different sources, it appears that native Spanish speakers are far more likely to use "educativo" instead of "educación."

In a way, relying on the cognate is something of a form of Spanglish. It might be a good way to get you thinking and speaking in Spanish, but then again, it might also be forming bad habits that could be tough to break later. I guess it just depends on how good or exact you want your Spanish to be and how good you are at replacing old information with new if you should find out that the word you learned for something makes you sound like a non-native.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•9 months ago

sainio 21 20 19 17 15 14 12 12

A note about your example: "educativo" is an adjective, and shouldn't be used to replace "educación," which is a noun. Generally speaking, "educativo" means "educational," but it would be translated as "education" in situations in which English uses "education" as an adjective ("the education system").

I do agree with the underlying premise that there isn't a perfect correspondence between "education" and "educación." Depending on where you are and what you're talking about, "educación" might mean something more like "manners" or "upbringing." Also depending on the region and context, a Spanish speaker might be more likely to use "formación" or "enseñanza" or "pedagogía" in a sentence in which an English speaker would use "education." (I should note that those three words aren't synonyms: they mean different things, but those meanings can all be covered by "education" in English.)

2ReplyGive Lingot2•9 months ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 352

You're right, sainio. I was confusing education with educational. Good catch and I'm glad you caught it so quickly! I'm giving you a lingot for your speed, knowledge of Spanish, and willingness to correct someone when they're wrong. ¡Bravo!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Grandmumm 25 25 14 12 12 12 12 12 9 7 7 5 924
Interesting!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Geo430 21 10

... which means interesante, another cognate.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Wonderboy6 25 14 8

rentar should be in there ^^

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Raininglingots 18 9 1068

Ok here goes, a lot of clicking... there are you first set of 20 lingots, more coming

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CliffJonesJr 13 9 9 8 7 7 7 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 63

Awesome, thank you! You almost made me want to give you a lingot to show my appreciation. :^P

By the way, if you want to see my other posts, I link to the major ones from CliffJonesJr.com.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Raininglingots 18 9 1068

Here are even more lingots...

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CliffJonesJr 13 9 9 8 7 7 7 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 63
Thanks!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot30•2 years ago

Raininglingots 18 9 1068
No problem, expect more tomorrow :D

Edit: Here are 30 i'm feeling generous today :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mibbles.me 9 9 9 8 8 7 6 4 3
Wow! This is really useful. :) Here is a list of German/English cognates I found interesting.
<http://docslide.us/embed/1300-german-english-cognates.html>

2ReplyGive Lingot5•9 months ago

CliffJonesJr 13 9 9 8 7 7 7 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 63
Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

IsaiahGardner_ 19
I thought airplane was "Avion"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12
"Aeroplano" and "avión" are the same thing ([air]plane).

<http://forum.wordreference.com/showthread.php?t=1555123>

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Geo430 21 10
The two that pop into my head first are bilingue (bilingual) and pinguino (penguin). The u in both bilingue and pinguino have two dots over them (umlaut?), but I don't know how to type them onto here.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12
How to Type Spanish Letters and Accents.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

143 Why put nicht at the end?
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1227291>

SillyLion 14 7

I'm sure this has been talked about a lot, but I didn't find anything. I'm a native English speaker, so this is kind of confusing to me why I put nicht at the end of a sentence instead of right after what it's talking about.

e.g. ich kenne die Ente nicht - why wouldn't it be ich nicht kenne die Ente?

I always find myself typing in the correct response, and then I see nicht at the end and have to go back and change it. I hope my question makes sense. Thanks for your help!

Give Lingot
33 years ago

Leave a new comment
13 Comments

sakasiru 22 11 9

You normally put the nicht in front of whatever word you want to negate, unless it's the verb:

Nicht ich habe dich gestern gesehen. (It was not me who saw you yesterday)

Ich habe nicht dich gestern gesehen. (It was not you whom I saw yesterday)

Ich habe dich nicht gestern gesehen. (It was not yesterday when I saw you)

But:

Ich habe dich gestern nicht gesehen. (I did not see you yesterday)

You may know that the verb always wants to be put at the second place in the sentence. Putting the nicht in front of it would disturb this pattern, so you need to put it somewhere else. Putting it after the verb doesn't work either, because then it would refer to the next word in line (see above).

So all you can do if you want to negate the verb (and the action of the sentence) is to put it at the very end. If you have other verbs in the sentence that you also put at the end, you can actually put the nicht in front of them:

Ich habe dich gestern nicht gesehen.

If you do not have other verb parts, the nicht ends up at the very end:

Ich sehe dich nicht.

5ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

niceliz 25 6 3 2 2

For your example sentence, "nicht" can't go between "ich" and "kenne" because, in normal sentences like that, the verb has to be in the second position ("nicht" took that place in your sentence, maybe "Nicht ich" would be okay since they can take up the first position together).

You can actually put "nicht" in different places in a sentence, depending on what you want to negate. This website explains it pretty well and has exercises at the end if you want to practice:
<http://www.nthuleen.com/teach/grammar/negationexpl.html>

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 10
Having pondered your question, I must say, that I know the answer not.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sebas 22 21 16 15 8 7 6 5 2 2
It can be used for great effect.

"Ich kenne die Ente,..." (Wow, he knows the duck!) ", die Du erwähnt hast und die anscheinend unter Ornithologen als Zeitungsentente bekannt ist,.... (At last! That duck won't escape me anymore.)..."nicht."(Oh no! what!)

in contrast to

"I don't kn..." (Thanks, bye!)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

thevlookup 13 3 2
I thought they spoke a bit like Yoda. I know the duck not. xD

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

voidlogic 17
If you are a native English speaker I'm sure you realize you can do the same in English. Have you not read much Shakespeare? While people on Duolingo will say it is archaic English, I hear people say things like "I know not" in conversations all the time...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 10
I think we should bring it back into everyday usage, you and I. Do you not?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

voidlogic 17
You would be surprised, it is still. When I go to coffee shops, etc I like to study the language used by people. The other day I heard: "I doont kneow why (h)ee said dat" "Ya, I know't not."

I always laugh when "Wie geht es Ihnen?" is translated as "How are you?" when where I live you are far more likely to actually have someone ask: "How goes it", you even sometimes hear: "How goes it for you".

I feel like Duo often marks literal translations of German wrong, when the literal translation is what people where I live I actually say.

Ja is another example. Again where I live you will hear 10 "Yas" for every "Yes".

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 10

It's a very interesting thing yes. People don't give English credit for how flexible it can be. I found an old book in our university library recently (I live in Plymouth, UK) that showed the local Westcountry dialect as it was before it levelled about 100 years ago, and it was essentially as close as you could get the the ancient Anglo-Saxon version of English in modern times. That itself was practically a dialect of German.

That said, I think 'How are you' is just the most generic equivalent phrase that could be found. 'round 'ere, people say 'How's you, alright?', or the informal form 'alright', or even just a clipped 'reet?', and if we have to talk to someone from out of town, we say 'owayoo?'

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

zippzopp 13

Just thought of one, interesting as I didn't think of any cases in english like that till after reading comments, but one you can hear every now and then is "I think not".

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MystyrNile 14 8 7 5 4 3

In the Germanic languages (including English), not (or whatever the negative particle is) goes AFTER the verb or clause it negates. "I know the duck not" and "I know not the duck" are proper English, if a bit dated, but "I not know the duck" is wrong in English, and in German.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 10

Luckily, we have the word 'do' which we can use to shoehorn it in there: "I do not know the duck"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MystyrNile 14 8 7 5 4 3

Even then, Not is negating Do, while Know could be considered to be "inside" the Do.

I wonder if people in the 18th century would get confused these days and think everyone was being extra emphatic with most of their negative statements.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

التنكير والتعريف أدوات الإنجليزية؛ لقواعد تفصيلي شرح 144

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5210954>

Awwami 17 10

و البسيط المضارع و to be الفعل دروس مراجعة أولا يجب جيد بشكل الدرس لفهم .عليكم السلام
هنا الفهرس في لها الرجوع يمكن التتي و المستمر

<h1> The definite and indefinite articles</h1>

الاسم تجعل التي هي التعريف أدوات عام بشكل و .تعريف أداة هي THE و تنكير اداتهما A/AN الأدوات معروف غير أي 'نكرة' تجعله التي هي التنكير أدوات و السامع و المتحدث عند معروف أي 'معرفة' عنه المتحدث

و تنكير أداتا A/AN كون معرفة بعد حتى ولذلك ، أخرى إلى لغة من الأدوات هذه استخدام طريقة تختلف و :الاختلافات تلك أسباب أهم فمن .الإنجليزية والعربية بين للترجمة ذلك يكفي لا تعريف أداة THE

يقول كعندما ما شيء تعيين هو الأولى اثنتان؛ بل واحدة وظيفة "الـ" التعريف لأداة ليس العربية في أ. يوم كل إليها يذهب التي المدرسة يقصد أنه كلامه من فسلفهم "المدرسة من للتو أتيت" الصغير أخوك لك اليوم ذاك أخرى مدرسة إلى ذهب كان إن تسألته قد و !مدرسة أي ذهنك؛ إلى لتبادر "مدرسة من أتيت" لك قال فلو يشربون الأطفال" أو "طائر النسر" تقول كعندما التعميم هي الثانية الوظيفة و ، نكرة اسم استخدم لأنه الأطفال و النسر عموم بل بعينهم أطفال لا و عينه حد في نسر هنا المقصود فلا "الحليب .الإنجليزية في المستمر و البسيط المضارع في الأدوات استخدام اختلاف ب. المعدودة غير و الجمع و المفردة الأسماء مع استخدامها اختلاف ج.

بقواعد نبداً (أ) الفقرة من التعميم معنى و (التعيين/التحديد) معنى معرفة وبعد التبسيط لمحاولة و بخطوة خطوة تدريجية

يمكن فلا التحديد أو التعيين هي و فقط واحدة وظيفة لها و The هي الإنجليزية في التعريف أداة ١. ليمكن و .العموم في الحليب و الأطفال نعني كنا إن The باستخدام "الحليب يشربون الأطفال" ترجمة بغرض المعدودة غير و المعدودة و الجمع و المفردة الأسماء من الأسماء أنواع جميع عموماً تسبق أن The التحديد.

بين فرق هناك ليس و .التعميم هي الثانية و التنكير هي الأولى :وظيفتان لها an أو a التنكير أداة ٢. بينهما الفرق لاحقاً سنوضح و المعنى حيث من الأداتين

تسبق لا أنها يعني ذلك .غيرها تسبق لا و فقط المفردة الأسماء تسبق أن يجب a/an التنكير أدوات ٣. معدود غير أو جمع إما فهو بإحداها يسبق لم اسم أي أن أيضاً يعني و ، معدودة الغير الأسماء أو المجموعة الأسماء

بأداة الاسم يُسبق لا -معدود غير اسم أو جمع اسم على للتعميم أو لتنكير ٤. متى إذا وظيفتان له المعدودية غير أو الجمع بسبب غيابها أو A/AN التنكير أدوات أن طالما الآن السؤال و تطبيق و ، الجملة معنى من ذلك نعرف الجواب؛ و ، التعميم يفيد متى و التنكير يفيد ذلك أن نعرف وهي؛ قاعدة أول في ذلك

المضارع كون بديهي شبه هذا و ، المستمر المضارع في التنكير غالباً يفيد غيابها أو التنكير أدوات ١. ذلك أمثلة و ، الحاضر الوقت عن يتحدث المستمر

I am eating an apple (الآن) تفاحة أكل أنا
He is drinking juice (الآن) عصيراً يشرب هو
A dog is eating my food (الآن) طعامي كلب ياكل
We are drinking apple juice (الآن) تفاح عصير نشرب نحن

الاسم جعل هي فيه للتعميم طريقة أشهر و دائماً ليس لكن 'التعميم' على يدل ما غالباً البسيط المضارع ٢. أو جمع اسم فلتنكير ، كالجمع تعامل معدودة الغير الأسماء و (العربية في ذلك مثل و) الجمع صيغة في "بعض" حرفياً تعني التي و الاسم قبل some التبعض كلمة نستخدم معدود غير اسم

الجمع؛ على أمثلة

We eat apples (العموم تقييد) التفاح نأكل نحن

We eat some apples (لا) التفاح بعض/تفاحاً نأكل نحن

Men always fight (العموم تقييد) دائماً يتشاجرون الرجال

Some men always fight (العموم تقييد لا) دائماً يتشاجرون [الرجال بعض/رجالاً إن]

معدود؛ الغير على أمثلة

I drink juice (العموم تقييد) العصير أشرب أنا

(العموم تفييد لا) عصير أشرب أنا I drink some juice

(العموم تفييد) البيضاء الشوكولاتة أكل أنا I eat white chocolate

(العموم تفييد لا) الشوكولاتة بعض / شوكولاتة أكل أنا I eat some chocolate

تُفيد فيها التنكير أدوات - ثابتة عادة أو حقيقة على البسيط المضارع في تدل التي الجملة أيضا 3.
:التعميم

الجزر تأكل الأرانب Rabbits eat carrots

الجزر يأكل الأرنب A rabbit eats carrots

الحليب يشربون الأطفال Children drink milk

الحليب يشرب الطفل A child drinks milk

أيضا؛ العربية اللغة في ذلك مثل و) ، الفاعل ليس لكن و به المفعول جمع يجب ما غالبا و :ملاحظة الجملة تسـتقيم لن و ، جمعه يمكن لا المعدود غير أن ملاحظة مع ، (الجزر يأكل الأرنب / الجزر تأكل الأرانب
البسيط المضارع في الجملة بقاء مع به المفعول جمع بدون الغالب في

A dog is an animal حيوان الكلب

An eagle is a bird طائر النسـر

A ball is a toy لعبة الكرة

Water is liquid ائلس الماء

من مانع لا لكن و السابقة الجمل في كما للتعميم (TO BE) جمل في الخبر و المبتدأ جمع يجب لا و :ملاحظة كالتالي؛ ذلك

Dogs are animals حيوانات الكلاب

Eagles are birds طيور النسـر

حقيقة؛ على تدل لا جمل على أمثلة

A ball is on the table إن كرة الطاولة على

ليلة كل منزلي إلى يتسـللون [الرجال بعض/رجالا إن] (Some) men sneak into my house every night

:إضافية ملاحظات

يُحدد ما أما .المعنى حيث من بينهما فرق لا أي الأدواتـن كلا على ينطبق سبق ما جميع :an و a بين الفرق
الأداة أن يقال ما عادة و ، الكلمة تلك من الأول الحرف يُنطق كيف تحديداً و ، تتبعهما التي الكلمة فهو أيهما استخدام
المبتدئة الكلمات تتبع a الأداة و a, e, i, o, u الخمسة العلة حروف بأحد تبدأ التي الكلمات تتبع an و الخمسة الحروف لقاعدة كثيرة استثنأت لوجود ذلك و الأشمل هي النطق قاعدة لكن .الحروف باقي من بأي
لأن العربية في الألف يقابل بما نطقها يبدأ التي الأسماء قبل an نستخدم أننا هو الحقيقي الفرق
متتـابعين ألفين نطق فيصعب كالألف تنطق a الأداة

أسماء :منها ، تعريف أداة إلى تحتاج لا و الإنجليزية في ذاتيا معرفة تكون التي الأسماء بعض هناك
غيرها و الشوارع و المدن و الدول و الأيام و الشهور

.قادم درس في المعدودة غير الأسماء تعداد كيفية شرح سيتم

فتعني 'the apples' أما 'the apples' أو 'apples' تعني قد 'التفاح' :عملي بشكل و باختصار الأخير في
'some apples' أو 'apples' تعني 'تفاح' لكن 'تفاح' أو 'التفاح' تعني قد 'apples' أيضا .فقط 'التفاح'
يحدد ما هو معناها و الجملة سياق بل دائما جائز ذلك أن بشـكلين يترجم أن يمكن اسماً أن يعني لا و .فحسب سابقاً شرحنا كما

أنصحكم و النقاط لكثرة مرة من أكثر الموضوع بمراجعة أنصحكم لكني .الأسئلة طرح في تترددوا لا
الخطأ سبب لتعرفوا الأدوات يخص بشيء التدريبات في تخطوون عندما بمراجعتـه

Give Lingot90

1082 years ago

Leave a new comment

302 Comments

MnesBlue 12

النعىة؟ بالصفة التتكير أو التعريف أدوات علاقة ما توضيح أن أرجو
:هنا الدروس أحد من مثالين المحددة؟ المعينة الأشياء مع عدمها من الأدوات استخدام في القياسية القاعدة وماهي
العالية الهمة هذه على جزيلاً وشكراً الفرق؟ فما، المنهج عليّ شوشا مثالين هذين It's pork -- It's a pork --
101ReplyGive Lingot17•1 year ago

maha511 9
الفرق ايش بعرف انا حتى يجاوب احد ليت ي

10ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

hayder_1988 3
بشو الفرق ايش

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Maged2005 6
اصدقاء اريد

8ReplyGive Lingot1•12 months ago

mmedoo 4
i

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

MOHAMEDSAMAH 10
الحروف لقاعدة كثيرة استثناءات لوجود ذلك و الأشمل هي النطق عدتها ، المعنى حيث من بينهم افرق لا الخمسة

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]
وعلى !خنزير لحم ٢ قول يمكننا فلا معدود غير الخنزير فالحم ،المعنى صحيحة غير it's a pork :جملة
استخدامها عليك ويجب الأصح هي it's meat/pork/bread :جمل النقيض

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MnesBlue 12
المشاركة على شكراً

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Bassamz 15 274
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ahmedamro2014 5
hello bassma

0ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

Bassamz 15 274
hello

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

Mohammad763277 4
احسنت

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rub722 6
اعرف ابا وانا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

khaledalgradi 3
خنزير لحم pork معنى

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

MnesBlue 12
الآن حتى مفيدة إجابة يوجد لا

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nasma29 5
مادرسـت بحياتي فأنا الموقع عل للتعرف بالسعادة أشعر ولكن أفهم أن أحاول أني مع جزيلـا شكرا
المواصلة على بحفز فهذا المعلومة عرض في الرائعة طريقتكم على شكرا قلبي كل من الانجليزية

29ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

MahmoudFouad1 3
D: مثلك وانا والله فعلا

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ArroneSniper 8
معسكر تحيا

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rokaana55 5
كدا الموضوع واحب انجليزية ادرس مرة اول كمان وانا

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

ibrahimzain1995 4
العافية يعطيكم مشكورين ... بعد وانا والله ايه

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

FaroukZeino 21 14 943

(": كعادتك رائع مجهود ،لك شكراً

12ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Awwami 17 10

عفوا

7ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

ELmSter1 14 9

كي أيضا بالعربية الأمثلة تترجم ان اتمنى الكثير فيه أجهل لازلت المهم الدرس هذا الشرح على راشك الفهم يسهل

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Awwami 17 10

السؤال يمكنك واضح غير شيء هناك بقي إن و ، جديد من الدرس مراجعة يمكنك .الجميل جميع ترجمة تمت

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ELmSter1 14 9

لك شكرا

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

khaledalgradi 3

اسبانيه و فرنسيه بلغه دولينجو من المتخرج وليد خالد اخوكم معكم

5ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

K.al 2

اسبانيه او فرنسيه لغته ما شخصا يقوله ما وتفهم الان النطق تجيد هل تخرجك بحسب اعرف ممكن

-1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

xabdo2abdox 7

الرائع الشرح هذا على شكرا

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MahmoudFouad1 3

عمرك وبعدها لك التصحيح ويتم تخطأ ونك الممارسه شيء افضل القواعد يدرس او يراجع محدث : نصيحه انك المهم غلط او صح وجاوب الدرس على ادخل .. الحفظ مش الممارسه لازم اللغه لاعت لمتتبع ال هتتسى ما قواعد على بتحتوى انها والميزه كالمه جمل حفظ : جدا مهمه حاجه وكمان (: نظرى تقرا مش عملى هتتعلم ♥ للجميع وبالتوفيق تمارس وتبدء محادثه مواقع على والدخول ,جاهزه وكلمات

4ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

duolingomanal 6

للجمع قابل/ مفرد اسم أي قبل (a) she says: but my teacher gave us a base, I think I understood now, صوتي بحرف يبدأ لا صوتي بحرف يبدأ /للجمع قابل/ مفرد اسم أي قبل (an) صوتي بحرف يبدأ لا

but you says: hmmm, now.....I don't now..... where the problem? بأداة الاسم يُسبق لا -معدود غير اسم أو جمع اسم على للتعميم أو لتأكيد .

3ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

Awwami 17 10

If you concentrate, you would see that I'm basically saying; "a" and "an" are NOT used with plural nouns... , and your teacher is saying: "a" and "an" are used with singular nouns... . So we're saying the same thing, only differently.

But I'm also providing context where 'a' and 'an' are used to give different meanings.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

duolingomanal 6

Oh. yes, I think your right. Thanks

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DEtt12 9 2 2 2

الشرح على شكر

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Arnos007 8

و التعريف أدوات تترجم لم لماذا : وهي العنوان في ملاحظة لدي ،الموقع في مجهودك على لك جزيل شكر
الموضوع اسم معرفة للمتعلّم بالنسبة سهل سيكون أنه أظن الإنجليزية؟ باللغة التذكير
ملاحظتي تقبل أرجو ،العنوان ترجمة حتى الدرس معنا فهم في إارتباك شعرت لأنني ،بالإنجليزية
،شكرا . الله وفقك عملك في الاستمرارية لك وأتمنى جميل درسك بصرحة

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ShifaMohma 5

ان اتمنى ولكن القراءه مرات بتعدد افهمه لعلى الاختصار من الا افهمه لم صعب ولكنه سهل الموضوع
فيه يجعله عليه الترجمة دخول لان اسهل يكون الفهم لعل مترجمه غير بالانجليزيه نسخه هذ من تجعله تشنت

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ismaelali1990 5

thanks a lot

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mqamrh 4

شكرا كثير

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Yousif_Barbar 15

>3 رائع مجهود .. لك شكر ااااا

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sensorsaso 5

thanx

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

al3ndaleeb 9 3

الان الصورة اتضحت احسنت

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mofeda 7

thanks

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

oussama-skakni 8

فيكم الله براك

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ozilsaid 5

جزىلا شكرا

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alilmamy 7

ما كل استوعب وان معي الحماس يستمر ان أتمنى هكذا حياتي في ادرس لم فأنا توصف لا بسعادة اشعر لكم جزىلا شكرا قبل من اعرفه اني لو تمنيت رهيب موقع انه ادرسه

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AyaElsayed5 6

شكرا ^_^

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ahmedamro2014 5

hello bassamz

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

fatima1033 4

thanks

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lidyalily 10 3

thank you

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IslameHodai 3
thanks for your effort

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mahmoud558627 8
ing و نضع متي

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ayaashrafgalal 7
thanks alot

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CheikhAbda1 7
قيم درس ،شكرا

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Abdu-3li 11
شكراً.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Waheedyehia 4
(^_^) ... شكرا , المواصله على يحفز فهذا المعلومة عرض في الرائعة طريقتكم على شكرا

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago norhano 2

احبيته

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]
شكرا و اولاد جمع boys اما ولد مفرد boy 2 رقم القاعدة اما انت لاشارة يستخدم you مثل ثانيه قواعد في خالد معكم

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EyadNader0 4
العربية اللغة في زيادة في بس حلو الصراحة

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hanane.dakhouch 6 4 الفرق اشرحوا فضلكم من أجل

uRrl12 3
والبسيط السهل التوضيح علي شكراً

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

A1Salem 8
Thanks Awwami

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

alouma80 6
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HamzaHamza01 3
thanks good effort .

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mohammedahmed7 8 6
شكراً

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MohammadZiad 5
muchas gracias

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Darling_Nona 3
المجهود هذا علي لكم شكراً

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MostafaElzagawee 8
قيم درس شكراً

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zakare 5
جداً جميل

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

abooodi123
thanku

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

abooodi123
شكراً

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mona_Taha 4
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Essa13 7 6
The لـ اكثر توضيح ممكن .. شكراً

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mr_yassin7 12
شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aitlhajhasnae 5
لك جزيلاً شكراً

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

osamaelbwady 5
الشرح في ماهر لانك جزيلاً شكراً اشكرك

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mohmed123
المهم الموضوع هذا كتبت التي الانامل عاشت

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EmanPretty 6
جزيلاً شكراً ... امكن اذا واحده جملة في مختصر شرح ممكن

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

demraouiyouness 3
العالم في موقع أفضل الموقع هذا إن

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

demraouiyouness 3
MostafaElzagawee يا معك أتكلم أن أريد أنا

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Merooooz1 4
؟(Was , Were) زى الدروس باقى شرح فين

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

m_aly91188 7 4
شكراً

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

momenhaj 14 3
thanks ...for your efforts :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Siderh 9
شكراً

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EslamYounes 4
جدا شكراً

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mohja93 11 9
[deleted]

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

obada20 8 5 9
اللغات لتعليم موقع

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

dalia_aljubory 5
thanx

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eltantawy93 5
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

abdenmourkolea 15
شكراً

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tarek2016 3
خيراً الله جزاكم

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

redaeljhad 6

Thanx

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Famo15385 8

جدا رائع

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

noura-dana 6

لکم شکرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

islam_helles 4

thank you .

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

layankosa 4

ولم العصير وترجمتها the juice تضع لم لماذا العصير اشرب ان معدودة الغير الامثلة من الاول المثال في the ؟

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

maha511 9

قاعده هذه الجملة في the يضع لازم مو دائما (ال) لها تضيف معدوده الغير بالاسماء معدود غير العصير

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

layankosa 4

لك وشكرا اكثر الدرس تختصر ممكن

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rehammaher 9

الأمام والى أستفدت كثير شكرا عنجد شكرا شكرا شكرا شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mai_mima 11

خيرًا الله جزاك لك شكرًا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aniso.tidj 10

الدرس على شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

M_Mohamed 11

thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

abdelaziz.allam 10
thaks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ahmed.majed 3
مكتفة ومعلوماته جدا رائعا درس

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

menaelsehsahy 6
الرائع الشرح لهذا جزيل شكر

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

abbasbenhaoued 7
فيــــــــك الله بارك شكر

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Gacemseyf 6 6
الإعادة فهمه يتطلب شكر

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AbdalHakeemTi 5
الشرح هذا على شكر

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TtCG1 4
الانجليزي أفهم بدات أحس جميل موقع الصراحة

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

maha511 9
حسناتهم موازين في ويجعله يسعدهم الله انا حتى

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

elmehdibouchrit 5
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

thh1992 20 25
صعب الدرس هذا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

الجميل الموضوع على جزيل شكر

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

^^ شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

المتابعة على فيك الله بارك

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

جدا وفادني الروعة في قمة الموقع صراحة شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

شقيق شبيئي انه

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

شکرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

شکرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

رأبنا انعمون انتم

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

moyseer 7

thanx

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nagep_fady-1998. 7
thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

walaamobark 3
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ranemoo 6
شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cantik2 8 4
Hi .Im a new member here.....thank you very much for your great efforts.....I want to learn English and Turkish. can I do that in the page or each language has its page?.....

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Fathy1234 10
thanks

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MohammedBarnawi 3
i am new member , i hope to communicating with you to devolopment my languge in speaking and grammer and listening and writting .Thanks for any eforts which to do it

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

atheer_179 10
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

3Asem.ob 6
thank you for all

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

23OUFJ 4
كثيرا شكرا شكرا شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mohamed_shehab 9

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AnaElmazlwmAhmed 6

لکم شکرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

faysaldje 7

thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nadyaagomaa 11

خیرا الله جزاك

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

simochmran 3

شکرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

saraadel5 3

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

21Hatoon 6

جزیلا شکرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kreem_sharrad 6

thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

poulafr-mesak 3

شکرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SNNOM 8

.برکاتہ و الله رحمة و السلام علیکم و

! القلب من لك جزیلاً شكراً أخي خیراً جُزیت

" بدون تَأْتِي قد لأنها أو ؟ معدودة أنها العلم مع " الفواكه " و " الفاكهة " تعني " Fruit " كلمة لَمْ ، سُؤال لديّ حسناً ؟ صحيح معناها و الجُمْلَة سياق حسب أي ؟ " فواكه " تعني كلاها فروتز أو فروت أن أي ؟ فواكه بمعني " إس

. المتواضع سُوالي فهمت قد أنك أتمنى و أنتظرِكَ ، لك شكراً و

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Awwami 17 10

Fruit is expensive here. سنقول "هنا غالية الفاكهة" لقول مثلاً . معدودة غير غالباً في هي Fruit كلمة

الفواكه كل و البرتقال أحب" مثلاً . الفواكه من محددة أنواع لعدة تشير عندما s بإضافة أحياناً تجمع لكنها
"I like oranges and all citrus fruits" تعني "الحمضية".

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

SNNOM 8

. لكم شكراً خيراً جزيتم ،فهمت حسناً

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lilokataloni 6 2

thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

karinakoka 4

صدقة لدي يكون ان فضلكم من جميلة انجليزية اللغة

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

IbrahimMansor 15

تعلمها في وممتع فعلن جميله هي

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nadyaagomaa 11

للغاية مبسط شرح جميل

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

taktakat 6

THANK YOU FOR THES

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

surasaad2 7

.لجهودكم شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AHmd.MHmod 11 3

thank you verey much ^_^

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Chaimachaimouma 5

كثيرا أفهم لم فأنا التتكير أداة أكثر تشرح أن الممكن من هل ولكن الجيد الشرح هذا على شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EmanMohamed8 6

جدا شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AsmaaEmam2013 4

some فائدة ما اذا رجال تعني men كان اذا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EssamAhmed8 4

الجميع اجل من تفعلوه الذي المجهود علي لكم شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nadyaagomaa 11

رائع الشرح

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

salmmommn 4

Thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

777MOHAMMED 20

a استخدم متي باختصار

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kadertito7 7 6

شكر الف..... رائع موقع

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MedoEssam0 2

؟ صح هتتغير مش معناها الجملة استخدمها مش او التتكير ادوات استخدمت لو انا يعني فاهم مش

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kariman.ahmad 7

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

imanebertale 4

العربية اللغة اعلم انني كما ذلك لكم واقدر شكرا رائع مجهود هذا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ahmed.bebo_5777 3

اكتر تطور في ويارب ده الرايع المجهود على شكر

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

totamostafa1 6

الشرح على شكر

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

m.eisa22 6

thank you شكر

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

roromaissa 6 2

thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rZ1n 7

Thank you very much

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

dhibiwarda 15 7

Thancks Very nace

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bRL6WsC1 2

؟ فلماذا !! الأساسيات الى رجعتى أو اصل لكى اليوم فتحت وعندما " 3 المضارع:الأفعال " الى وصلت
" 3 المضارع:الأفعال " وهو واتابعه عليه ماتوقفت الى أعود كى الحل وماهو

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

zinebmakoudi 4

thanks you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eZzma 5

(" ويسـتفيد يقرأ الكل أن وأتمنى.. لك شكر

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kinanzizou 8

واحدة وظيفة ام وظيفتان لديها هى the الأول المثال في التوضيح ارجو

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eZzma 5

يمكن فلا التحديد أو التعيين هي و "" فقط واحدة وظيفة "" لها و The هي الإنجليزية في التعريف أداة ١. لا يمكن و. العموم في الحليب و الأطفال نعني كنا إن The باستخدام "الحليب يشربون الأطفال" ترجمة بغرض المعدودة غير و المعدودة و الجمع و المفردة الأسماء من الأسماء أنواع جميع عموما تسبق أن The التحديد.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kinanzizou 8

وظيفتين ذاكرين الاولى الملاحظة في انه الملاحظة تمت اذا مكتوب كان بس الرد على كتير شكرًا واحدة وظيفة لها ان كتب وبعدها theلل

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eZzma 5

.. " واحدة وظيفة" لها الإنجليزية للغة اما theلـ "وظيفتين" لها العربية للغة في

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sadeam12 2

شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mennaashraf4 2

thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ahmedamro2014 5

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

musaab-103 5

؟؟ ممكن صف اريد

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

chaimahamini 5

رائع من اكثر والموقع. مفيد الدرس هذا شكرًا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mohamedami473673 3

جيد

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NaeemOdeh 3

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Saleh.14 8

الرائع التوضيح هذا على جزيلاً شكراً.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dr.AhmedIsmail 6

طفلٌ: تُترجم المفروض؟؟؟ مش؟ نكرة أداة "A" إن م "اللبن يشرب الطفل" ترجمناها ليه A child drinks milk اللبن يشرب طفلاً إن - اللبـن يشرب.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hadeer.sayd 10

ايضاً العموم تقييد التنكير ادوات البسيط المضارع في

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

sasa_mohamed0 5

كثيره اشياء اتعلمت الروعه غايه فى الموقع شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AboGhalyAh 4

Thank you :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amjed92altai 4

جهد من بذلت ما على اشكرك

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ahmedalkok 8

لمجهودك وشكرا خيرا الله جزاك

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mahmoud.alhayek 6

thanks ^_^

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

adelboukhalifa 5

أخي شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

alsohagy.alnasry 5

فيك الله بارك

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JamalHd1 3
عليكم سلام

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

saleh521 6
وكافي وافي شرح لك شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RomiraJunb 6
thanx so much

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hishamho 8
very nice thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

goneadms0 10
المستمر و البسيط المضارع علي اكثر التعرف في ارغب

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HalaAli7 14
المجهود هذا على لكم شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tahar86 5
جميعا لكم شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ayoubmohammadi 10
المساعدة المرجو بالتفصيل اعرف لم the في مشكلة ادي عايكم السلام

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

zekra388 8
واخرة دنيا يسعدك الله شكر

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

abdoali16 11
الأرنب A rabbit eats carrots الجزر تأكل الأرانب Rabbits eat carrots التوضيح منكم أرجو عليكم السلام
هل الحليب يشرب الطفل A child drinks milk الحليب يشربون الأطفال Children drink milk الجزر يأكل
معناها التنكير أدوات فيها يوجد لا التي الجملة و للتعميم معناها التنكير أدوات فيها التي الجملة ؟ لتتكيرل

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tahagth 5
thank's

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ghaloumi 6
شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

smahkhaled 5
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mokhtaria2 10 5
لكم شاكرة جد أنا الفكرة ابصال في تنجح لأنها الدروس هذه على عثرت لأنني مسرورة جد حقيقة أنا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

osamanasem 3
للتوضيح شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MehmoudEzamrrani 5 3
الطعام درس فضلك من

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

qassim34 7
nice the leve

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aboubakr-15 8 5
thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]
!ممتاز شرح

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

moona26 6 3
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aboyoussef_9 4
الوافى للشرح شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mahmoudkhelifa0 2
وغيرهم والتتويين للهمزة بالنسبة النحوية الاخطاء موضوع يشوف الموقع عن المسؤول ممكن سمحتم لو

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]
exellent excellent exellet duolingo

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SemooStark 6
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

1005871651 6
thank you very much

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

younissayed 7
المجهود هذا على الخير كل الله جزاكم

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ohoud2015 6
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

khaledalgradi 3
وبركاته الله ورحمة عليكم السلام

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

khaledalgradi 3
انجليزيه مصطلحات اخذ بدات الانجليزي و

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

BadreddineNAJI 3
hi all

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

.iraq 6
لكم شكرا جدا جميل موقع عليكم سلام

magedali80 9 4

تُفيد فيها التنكير أدوات - ثابتة عادة أو حقيقة على البسيط المضارع في تدل التي الجملة أيضا
:التعميم
مفهومة غير

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

sahal14 10

اصدقاء اريد

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

MastouriAziz 6

أصدقاء نكونوا أن أتمنى و جزيلًا شكر و (٨٨) !! كثير أفدتني لقد

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

ugHy4 6

ممتاز شرح

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

mohamed_gerbade 6

فردى بشكل القواعد هذه تطبيق في صعوبة هناك يضل ولكن افهمها حدا علي منها كل

للفعل s ال نضع الفرد وعند ، للاسم للارنب S نضيف الجمع في 3 رقم في لماذا في عندي لبس وهناك الاكل .

شكرا الاخير وفي ، لي بالنسب يوم ثالث وهذا التعلم في جديد لازلت لانني يمكن كثير لبس لدي يوجد
لكم تحياتي ، للمساعدة والمحاولة لتوضيح

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

mohamed_gerbade 6

الدرس موضوع خارج سؤال ممكن

ال حرفين هناك الحرف بعد ويكون الكلمة يتوسط عندما الكلمات من الكثير في g ال حرف ينطق لا لماذا
ht

Figth :- المثال سبيل علي

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Sultan11113 6

انجليزي بفهم العربي مافهمت

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

a_samer 3

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

khaledRadwan96 10

خير!!!!!!!!!!!!!! الله جزاك

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

MiuU11 6

كثير كلام هناك شينا افهم لم

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Cabtai1 6

au نكتب مفهائى ولو au منكتبشئى الف فيها قبلها الى الكلمه لو يعنى الف بمعنا تنطق ايه يعنى
دى النقطه يفهمنى حد ايه ولا

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

mohammednkn 11 7

للعوم انها العلم مع the ال اسخدمنا لماذا(A street sweeper sweeps the trash)نقول عندما

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

DEtt12 9 2 2 2

معينة قمامة يقصد الجملة هذه في لانه معرفة القمامة theالقمامة تعريف اداة the trash

1ReplyGive Lingot1•7 months ago

mohammednkn 11 7

معينة قمامة وليس عام يشكل القمامة يقصد بالعكس

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

DEtt12 9 2 2 2

علما زدني اللهم

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

SafaaSaid0 8

ممتاذ

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

tmrd.a1998 11

Thank you, good lesten

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

hsnm3d 6

thank you doulingo

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

raouanerehioui 5

شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

brihmatabdelheq 4

ليسـاعدوني اصدقاء اريد جدا رائع موقع

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

hebamosallam 5

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

ammarjdied 7

...بالجميع غلا و هلا

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

moadeandro 5 4

رائع موقع لتأمين مجهوداتكم كل على شكرا

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

nooralaati 5

الملكيه هي هل the cat eats the bird تعني ماذا ال الجملة هذي في

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

ahmedsalama7979 9

nice

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

ww99ww 3

الفاضل اخي رائع شرح

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

bilelal 6

أقصد معدودة الغير الأسماء تعني ماذا.....معدودة الغير بالأسماء يقصد ما فهم استطع لم أنا حتى
????????,.....معدود الغير الأسم أعرف كيف

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

bouti24 6

<http://st-takla.org/learn-languages/english/lessons/nouns/countable-non-countable-nouns.html>

هنا معدودة والغير المعدودة للاسماء شرح ستجد

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Saadam0 5

شكرا الانكليزية،و اللغة في الشرح يكون ان يجب

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

youseefotman 7

good

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

musab11000 5

Thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

12HT 7

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

roaba2020 6

الرب بارككم جدا رائع

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

doOody1422 4

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

sona.meshaal 5

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Mohamedabuobayda 7

Very very useful ...thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ibrahimmoussa000 7

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ammarr11 5

جديد فجر ام الجديد الفجر يتلاشى new dawn fades :التالية العبارة معنى ما سؤال جميعاً مرحباً
لماذا؟ و معرفة أم نكرة هي هل يتلاشى

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Yswr3 6
Beutiful

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

dr.hayamkh1 20 16
thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

hannadj 4
واقبلونني ابعثولي ارجوكم اصدقاء اريد

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Odah15 3
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

ells4 11 35
وبارك والاحترام التفدير البرنامج هذا على العاملين ويستحق المبذولة جهودكم نشكر جدا عرائ برنامج اللغة يخص ما لبرنامج هذا مثل يوجد وهل التركيبة اللغة تعلم في برنامج يصدر ان ونتمنى بكم الله تحياتي مع النمط وبنقس التركيبة

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

gasimkarl 12
hello good job

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Yassiineoo 7
thank you so much

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

adndn2 4
وتصحيح النطق لاتعلم انجليزي معاهم اتحدث اصدقاء اريد والمبسط الجميل الشرح على شكرا المعلومات

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

WAIEL89 6
THANK YOU DUOLINGO SIDE FOR ALL HELP TO ANY PEOPLE IN ANY PLESCHE

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tariksaila 7
لماذا؟ . ينطق لا كان إن . fruit كلمة في r حرف ينطق هل

-2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

wafaasaad2 5
حرف ينطق r

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

mostafahesham0 3
حرف ينطق r

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

145 Grammar: Adjectives

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3888221>

Kai_E. 25 23 20 12 4 3

Content

Adjectives and definite articles (het/de)

Adjectives and indefinite articles (een)

Adjectives with no article

Predicate adjectives

Unchanging adjectives

Adjectives used on their own

Oh dear. All these articles to remember and now we have to figure out how they affect adjectives??

Don't worry dear users. Here is an explanation for you that might just help.

Adjectives and definite articles

If an adjective comes before a noun with a definite article ("de" or "het"), it usually gets the ending -e.

An -e is also added if there is a demonstrative or possessive pronoun instead of a definite article

deze oude hond - this old dog dit oude huis - this old house

mijn oude hond - my old dog

mijn oude huis - my old house

Adjectives and indefinite articles

If the indefinite article "een" comes before a het-word in the singular, then the adjective does not get the -e ending.

If it comes before a de-word, it does get the ending.

The following words act like "een" in that the adjective does not get an ending when preceded by them and if the noun being described is a het-word:

geen: Dat is geen groot huis. (That is not a big house.)

elk: Elk zwart pak is duur. (Every black suit is expensive.)
genoeg: Wij hebben genoeg koud water. (We have enough cold water.)
ieder: Ieder klein meisje draagt een rok. (Every little girl is wearing a skirt.)
veel: Ik koop veel lekker bier. (I am buying a lot of tasty beer.)
wat: Zij eet wat nieuw brood. (She is eating some new bread.)
weinig: De kinderen eten weinig vers fruit. (The children do not eat much fresh fruit.)
welk: Welk oud boek leest hij? (Which old book is he reading?)
zo'n: Dat is zo'n groot dier! (That is such a big animal!)

zulk: Ze hebben altijd zulk lekker brood. (They always have such tasty bread.)

Adjectives with no article

If no article at all comes before a het-word, then the adjective does not get the -e ending either.

If no article comes before a de-word, it does get the ending.

Predicate adjectives

Put simply, predicate adjectives are adjectives that follow a linking verb like "to be" that describe the subject.

The adjective "green" in "The ball is green." is a predicate adjective.

In Dutch, predicate adjectives don't get any ending.

Het huis is groot.
De hond is groot.
De honden zijn duur.
Unchanging adjectives

Some adjectives don't get any ending.

These include:

+adjectives ending in -en (this includes participles of verbs acting as adjectives that end in -en) + eigen: mijn eigen hond (my own dog) + tevreden: de tevreden katten (the satisfied cats) + gebroken:
de gebroken lamp (the broken lamp) + open: het open boek (the open book) + opgewonden: de opgewonden kinderen (the excited children)

Material adjectives with -en

gouden: de gouden spiegel (the golden mirror) houten: de houten stoel (the wooden chair) zilveren: het zilveren kettinkje (the silver necklace)

And a few without -en

plastic: een plastic zak (a plastic bag) rubber: een rubber schoen (a rubber shoe) Adjectives ending in -a or an unstressed -e prima: een prima kans (an excellent opportunity) roze: een roze jurk (a pink dress)

Adjectives with ordinal numbers in the first part tweedehands: een tweedehands auto (a second-hand car)

derderangs: derderangs producten (third-rate products)

rechter (right) and linker (left) are not inflected:

de rechter table (the right table)

de linker foto (the left photo)

NOTE: if the fact that a noun is “left” or “right” is considered a fixed attribute, then “linker” and “rechter” are usually connected to the noun.

de linkerhand (the left hand)

de rechterkant (the right side)

Adjectives used on their own

It is also possible to use adjectives independently, which means that they don't have to be used in direct association with a noun.

There are two instances where this occurs:

the adjective can be used as a noun itself if the noun it refers to has already been mentioned:

Welke hoed wil je hebben, de rode of de witte? (Which hat do you want, the red one or the white one?)

if the adjective is used in combination with the words iets (something), niets (nothing), veel (much), wat (something), allerlei (all kinds of), wat voor (what kind of), genoeg (enough), or weinig (not much/little), then an -s is added to the end.

Ik heb iets leuks gekocht. (I bought something nice).

Hij heeft ons veel interessants verteld. (He told us a lot of interesting things.)

Return to grammar overview!

Give Lingot65

1602 years ago

Leave a new comment

30 Comments

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

I've been waiting for this one, KaiEngle. Thanks!

18ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nagy-istvan 13 10 8 4 3

I tried to simplify.

The adjective does not get the -e ending: - if it is predicate adjective, - if [het-word in singular] is indefinite, not concrete (no article or before sg het-word is een, geen, ieder,...)

In all other cases the adjective get the -e ending.

It is good?

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Susande 17 13 12 11 241

Yes that's it, shortest explanation I've seen. :)

There are a few exceptions, see the "Unchanging adjectives" section here (scroll down a bit):
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3888221>

But if you remember what you just wrote, you're good.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nagy-istvan 13 10 8 4 3

Thanks your answer. I did read it.

All page of the 'Overview of grammar explanations' is very helpful.

Maar dat is lang en ik ben langzaam.:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Whle_ 6 6 6 3

Could you perhaps write something on understanding compound nouns? I'm applying my Dutch to writing and reading but struggle with understanding what they mean, and how to form them (and when too.) Dankjewel!

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jolynnedougherty 25 19 14 8 5 41

Thank you KaiEngle and Dutch team for writing these great guides to help us along the way. They are so useful. I especially appreciate all the information on the page before we click on a lesson. It really helps.

5ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

libby3 25 6 6 19

Thank you, this was exactly what I needed! I think I will still be stuck on adjectives for a long time, but this does clarify it.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

arvin.k 19 12 12 10 9 7 5 2

thank you, you keep me motivated!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PopTartTastic 9 9 7 7 6 6 5 4

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 3

When you say a "het" word, do you mean just when it is singular? Help us out with this lesson where both "veel" and "vele" are accepted with "boeken" with no article. We are given the English to translate "I have many books." "Ik heb veel boeken." or "Ik heb vele boeken."
<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Indefinite-Pronouns/2>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mouaiimaarten 11 10 10 9 2

Dutch words are either common or neuter. Common words have 'de' as the definitive article, while neuter words have 'het' as the definitive article. Plural words always have 'de' however. (de man -> de mannen; het meisje -> de meisjes) To simplify it: most adjectives before a noun get an -e attached to it, except when it is a singular neuter noun with an indefinite article (een mooi meisje)

The difference between "ik heb veel boeken" and "ik heb vele boeken" is very subtle. with 'veel boeken' you refer to the many books as a whole, while with 'vele boeken' there's more emphasis on the individual books. However in everyday speech the difference is not that important.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 3

So both are acceptable? I thought according to your first paragraph that it would be "veel boek" but "vele boeken". Of course, that doesn't make more sense to have this particular word "veel" with a singular word at all. According to your second paragraph it looks like "Ik heb veel boeken" would mean "I have a lot of books." and "Ik heb vele boeken" would mean "I have many books."

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Hashem15 14 103

Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gmalf12 14 7 7 5 2

Very useful!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ianavlp 12 8 5 15

Thanks for this!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

anu1217 19 12 10 4 4 311

So is "kind" a het or de word? I thought it was a de word, but I saw "Het zwakke kind" in a lesson.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mouaiimaarten 11 10 10 9 2

It's a het word. So it is indeed "Het zwakke kind". A nice site for looking up whether something is a de or a het word is <http://www.welklidwoord.nl/>

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

anu1217 19 12 10 4 4 3 11

Dankuwel! Also, would "Een zwak kind" be correct?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BinzNakama 6

Correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tamkin3 13 2

thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

o587594 6

in this case "the adjective can be used as a noun itself if the noun it refers to has already been mentioned" we don't add anything to the adjective,right?!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nels_on 14 12 11 11 11 9 7 7 6 2

THANKS

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

-Beyond- 13 13 9

Thanks. Sadly, this is gonna take a while to remember.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

priscillajy 9 8 6

I noticed that the comments have been dead for about 7 months but I was wondering where I could find practice for this topic. It really trips me up so I want to find worksheets/quizzes or anything really that would help me practice.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Norman180095 8

Why in the lessons do they sometimes use we and sometimes wij? I always seem to get marked down for using the wrong one.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

InfamousDiaz 8 7 6 5 4

Misschien U zoekt dit artikel op: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3734337>

geen dank nodig :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

SiobhanWray 10 8 8 6

This makes everything so much clearer! Dank u wel!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

naela.omar 11 7

Oh dear...that's a lot! But thanks for the detailed explanation.

Do you have suggestions on how I can manage to remember all that? A specific way to practice?

How bad would it sound if I write with the wrong spelling? I mean, if I want to get along with learning dutch, how would it look like if I am good at other stuff but not this

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

146 Error in transmission

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3207347>

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1192

I had come across this interesting (mis) communication story in my previous life. Thought you too might find it enjoyable! Also, if the language of each subsequent transmission were to change, this could have got even funnier :)

Prior to the email era, a CEO of a company sends a memo to invite his staff to witness a solar eclipse. His message is passed down the hierarchy and gets distorted at each level.

Memo from CEO to the VP:

Today at 11 o'clock, there will be a total eclipse of the Sun. This is when the Sun disappears behind the Moon for two minutes. As this is something that cannot be seen every day, employees will be allowed to come and watch the eclipse from the parking lot. Staff should meet in the lot at ten to eleven, when I will deliver a short speech introducing the eclipse, and giving some background information. Safety goggles will be made available at a small cost.

Memo from the VP to the Production Manager:

Today at ten to eleven, all staff should meet in the car park. This will be followed by a total eclipse of the Sun, which will appear for two minutes. For a moderate cost, this will be made safe with goggles. The CEO will deliver a short speech beforehand to give us some information. This is not something that can be seen everyday.

Memo from the Production Manager to the Floor Manager:

The CEO will today deliver a short speech to make the Sun disappear for two minutes in the form of an eclipse. This is something that cannot be seen every day, so staff will meet in the car park at ten or eleven. This will be safe, if you pay a moderate cost.

Memo from the Floor Manager to the Supervisor:

Ten or eleven staff are to go to the car park, where the CEO will eclipse the Sun for two minutes. This doesn't happen every day. It will be safe, and as usual it will cost you.

Memo from the Supervisor to his staff:

Some staff will go to the car park today to see the CEO disappear. It is a pity, this doesn't happen everyday.

Give Lingot2
272 years ago

Leave a new comment
4 Comments

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

This is very funny (haha). Distorted messages are the core of human civilization in my opinion, and also partly (or mainly) the reason for much conflict that exists. This oft happens when one is an L2 speaker and also because people often change stories when they re-tell it (sometimes unconsciously), so one can only wonder how much of history is fact or fiction.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1192

Yes, you can see the reflection of biases being applied as this message travels down the path. :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Yes it is also because people don't really pay that much attention when they hear something. They may sometimes block out things that don't interest them and focus on things they want.

It reminds me of something that happened during my high schools days:

A boy was insulting another female colleague in Portuguese (but this was an English speaking school), although the girl understood the insult. So the young lady got upset and complained to the teacher. The teacher reprimanded the boy, and said he shouldn't use such language. The teacher then turned to the girl, and asked her what "language does he speak", and the girl answered with the exact wording of the insult. She assumed that the teacher was asking for that word rather than the language the boy used.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tbvjshqk017 22 22

So, this is basically what's happening on the internet on a daily basis.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

147 Sometimes I can't open the comments.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8461053>

Matt92HUN 11 10 10 10 10 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 320

I click on it and nothing happens, it happened on 2 computers and my phone even.

Give Lingot

211 year ago

Leave a new comment

43 Comments

Multitaal 25 24 23 959

I run into this problem every day with the exercises, not with the fora. It is rather annoying.

Everything works fine, then in the middle of an exercise suddenly the comments do not open. During the remainder of that exercise I cannot access the comments. When I start the next exercise I can open comments again.

10ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Oh, I never noticed this problem. I sometimes have to leave the exercise alone then come back minutes later to have the comments to open, but as far as now I always were able to open them from the exercises.

@Matt92HUN: your problem is form the exercises or is it from the fora and mail notifications?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Matt92HUN 11 10 10 10 10 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 320

What he said, the exercises.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Ok.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Matt92HUN 11 10 10 10 10 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 320

Just remembered Chrome's about to stop supporting NPAPI based plugins (like Java, of MS Silverlight), that could be part of the problem. The official suggestion is to get sites to switch to HTML5, but I don't know how they expect all sites to do that by autumn.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Good to know. Thx!

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

BoostedAnimal123 9 3 22

On the one hand, you don't have to use chrome. On the other hand. It was about time devs start migrating their stuff from deprecated plugins to html5.

0Give Lingot•2 weeks ago

wstockall 24 20 16 14 3 3 1076

I have also had this problem. It can be extremely frustrating if it happens on one of the early questions.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

In such cases, you can still open another tab, go to the forum of the course then search the sentence discussion by typing in the search-engine the exact sentence (with space(s), dot(s), coma(s), etc.) of the exercise between quote marks.

For example if the exercise is to translate Je mange une pomme., type in the search engine "Je mange une pomme."

It'd be better that the button always work, but at least this workaround will avoid frustration. ;)

6ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

The same here, it's unfortunately a known problem.

EDITION:

We are, in fact not talking about the same thing, sorry.

See answer to Multitaal (and to rocko2012).

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Matt92HUN 11 10 10 10 10 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 320

Thanks, good to know I'm not the only one.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

You even receive mail notifications for the discussion pages but can't open them.

It means that you can't open them while other users can. Or it could be that they can't be opened from the fora (with the URL) but that one can see them from the exercises.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

steven.jam 24 9 6 3

I'm sorry I'm reviving this thread from the dead, but this problem still occurs on a regular basis for me and it's really quite annoying.

7ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

az_p 23 9 4

I would really like a status report from the staff about this... it's actually the most frustrating thing for me about using Duolingo. If you haven't already, please file a bug report too.

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

Indeed, the more we will be to fill a bug report, and the more chance they'll look into it in priority. For those who report it, don't hesitate to put in your report a link to the present discussion but also to this discussion where more tests/details are done and thus:

can help showing to Duo that we're all reporting the same issue can help Duo understanding the issue.

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

az_p 23 9 4

I am also experiencing this bug, in the German tree for English speakers. It is very frustrating, as in the later levels there is no introduction to the topic given, and all the advice and explanations are in the comments.

Rarely does the problem occur at the first sentence. But often at some point in the lesson, the comments box will just not open anymore until a new lesson begins.

I am using Internet Explorer 11, which is actually super reliable otherwise.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

az_p 23 9 4

Can anyone tell me if this page opens, for example? It will not for me, even in different browser sessions, despite saying it has four comments: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1451518>

Or these ones:

-- <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3565830>

-- <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3158023>

-- <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3236840>

[EDIT: Hahaha there are so many more... :(]

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

It doesn't for me neither.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

renebartel 10 8

I know this is old, but these still don't open for me.

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

zagadka314 11 8

This happens to me randomly and it is so annoying

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

rocko2012 25 7 3 1450

If you click on the icon too fast it screws up. You have to wait till the page mostly loads. If it does screw up reload the page and try again. You might have to exit the web browser and try again.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

For some sentence discussion pages, even after a lot of tries from different computers, different IPs, different Duo accounts and at different times, it doesn't load.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rocko2012 25 7 3 1450

Oh I see I was talking about messages. I have never had problems with viewing the comments. I use firefox 37

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Interesting.

Could you try to open this sentence discussion? To see if the bug is even weirder that I thought. ;)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

There is some sort of javascript error preventing the page from loading properly. Also looking at the code, it seems that the particular page doesn't have any comments to display.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Yep, I notified Duo quite a long time ago about the bug...

I discovered some of these pages when receiving a mail notification for them, so for sure they have comment. ;)

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

wataya 25 25 25 25 25 25 23 20 10 9 9 5 1159

@jrikhal: Interesting. For me it shows "has_comment":false". /comments/COMMENTID returns the JSON data of the comment. Therein you can find the sentence-ID of the sentence the comment is linked to.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

wataya 25 25 25 25 25 23 20 10 9 9 5 1159

@jrikhal: to add to what Dessamator said: The corresponding sentence to the discussion you linked to is also explicitly marked as having no comments.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

@Wataya: Not sure to get it. In the link you gave, I read "has_comment":true.

Also, how do you find the a0547f84db69810ff37d313c7ec9d567 identifier?

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Oh, always the same thing: adding s to the "category" returns the JSON data. Good to know.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

I just found this post again, due to the recent Duolingo QA, and didn't even realize my comments were here.

Looking a bit into it, makes this seems to be a clear problem in either the json that is created or in the JQuery / javascript library that Duolingo uses to parse and read the JSON.

Specifically, it isn't returning the proper output so Duolingo's code can't process it and render the comments.

The code is somewhere around here:

<https://d7mj4aqfscim2.cloudfront.net/proxy/js2/5abf1ba9ca58ee835822-duolingo.js> line 16730

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

it isn't returning the proper output

Which is probably what Duo has to investigate or have to fix if they already investigated as I hope and think it's the case after so much reports from the website but also from forums mods and course contributors directly from their tools.

So my (very personal) guess is that Duo just didn't yet take the time to fix it.

1Give Lingot•3 months ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

So my (very personal) guess is that Duo just didn't yet take the time to fix it.

More like they haven't even taken the time to review the bug report. If it is actually a problem with an external library, it is easy enough to fix by either updating it (if it is possible) or using an alternate library, or writing their own.

Part of the problem is in fact in their code, they don't test properly if the variables they use actually have content (aren't null).

Generally speaking though, regardless of whether they choose to fix it the very least they make it fallback to a page showing some user friendly error instead of a blank page.

Anyway, it is easy enough to build a simpler userscript that will parse the json and show some of the sentence discussion as simple text, without all the flags, and such.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

Part of the problem is in fact in their code, they don't test properly if the variables they use actually have content (aren't null).

they make it fallback to a page showing some user friendly error instead of a blank page.

If they're about to spent time on doing that, better IMO they actually spent the same time on fixing the reason why those discussions that do have content show as if they didn't.

1Give Lingot•3 months ago

Melarish 16 15 14 12 12 11 9 8 4 3 2

It seems to have changed to a 404 page now. Not particularly 'user-friendly' but if something's changed, maybe it means they're working on it?

0Give Lingot•1 month ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

> If they're about to spent time on doing that, better IMO they actually spent the same time on fixing the reason why those discussions that do have content show as if they didn't.

Not really, it is something called defensive programming. You protect your code from possible errors (even if it doesn't work), and it is always easier than digging up the code and fixing the bug itself:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Defensive_programming

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

rocko2012 25 7 3 1450

I can't open it. It is blank except for the upper and lower headers.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

Ok, so in a sense I'm reassured: you have the same problem to open some sentence discussions. ;)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

az_p 23 9 4

Here's a new twist: I was trying the workaround of searching for the sentence in the discussion forum, when I found a sentence that does not appear in the search - "Ein Keller muss da sein". Is there any non-bug reason I should expect this to happen? Can anyone else find that page?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

I can't.

But nobody can since apparently (I checked from the incubator) no-one ever commented on this exercise (in DE for EN speakers course), so it's not the same case than the others exercise discussions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

az_p 23 9 4

Well, I'd comment if the comments opened! :P

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

blueredcat 12

Chiming in to say that this bug affects me too

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

BoostedAnimal123 9 3 22

Still the same issue. Shouldn't be a huge challenge to create an Idempotent function to pop up a window in 2017. It's the current year after all.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

148 What's the difference between "Prego" and "Per favore"?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2859727>

AntonioMatheus1 7 6 4

because both the word "Prego" as the phrase "per favore" mean please. What situations to use one or the other? is there any difference?

Give Lingot

22 years ago

Leave a new comment

4 Comments

itastudent 15 14 10 9

I want to add to the previous comments that sometimes "prego" can also be translated as "please". I feel this could be an example:

Prego, si accomodi (Please have a seat)

The reasons for this are two:

"prego" is used when you offer something to someone, and in this case you are offering a seat to someone;

prego is often used when you want to allow someone to do something, that is what you do in that sentence.

About this second meaning, I need to say that "prego" is also used when you allow someone to go ahead of you. Usually, at least in the US, people say just "go ahead!".

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

asintoto 14 9 9

Per favore = please, Prego = you are welcome / no problem

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CtrlZED 20 8 5 4 8

Just a note on definitions in addition to the above comments,

"Prego" is actually the first person singular of the verb "Pregare", which means literally "to pray" (io prego, tu preghi, etc). So it does not literally mean "Thank You", or "You're Welcome", but it is used idiomatically in those contexts. English used to use "pray in a similar way" (e.g. "Pray, tell"), but it has largely fallen into disuse in modern English.

"Per favore", on the other hand, more literally translates to something like, "As a favour", which is pretty much the same as "please".

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AntonioMatheus1 7 6 4

I thank you very much for your help, really all the reviews were very informative on the subject, helped me a lot in studying, thanks for everything and God bless you all!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

149 – 167 of 912

[accessed March 9, 2017]

149 "Sorry, where is the bathroom?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/233887>

Translation: Com licença, onde é o banheiro?

14 years ago

Leave a new comment

23 Comments

ebraga14 16

The comments in each are teaching me as much as the lessons

13ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

samosborn88 11

sorry in this sentence is closer to "excuse me" which is why it wants com licença. but what would i say if i already bumped into you or something, what would i say after the fact. Italian uses scusa for both before and after this situation, and sometimes for i am sorry too. what would you say afterwards in brasil?

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Paulenrique 21 15 13 10 8

We normally say "desculpa", but you can also hear "me desculpa, desculpe-me, perdão, me perdoe" (pardon me). Then the other person says: "magina" (in my region)

17ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

samosborn88 11

haha i was confused for a second. (in my region) isnt the translation, youre saying where you live people say "magina" but is the correct word "imagina"?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Paulenrique 21 15 13 10 8

Yeah, in my region people say "magina". The correct surely is "imagina", but we say just /magina/....ok.. you wont have to imagine anything.... just another different way to say: "no problem" (weird....)

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

a.vickers 25 17 9 8 7

Another thought. If I wanted to ask you where you are from, would I use ser as you can't change where you come from? If I then wanted to ask where you are going, would I use estar because your destination could change?

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Paulenrique 21 15 13 10 8

Yep, you got the point. Where are you? - onde você está? - (now, at the present moment)... where are you from? - de onde você é?... where are you going? - onde você está indo? - (now)

11ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

DannyLights 17 12 11 2

Isn't "quarto de banho" also an acceptable translation for bathroom, at least in Portuguese from Portugal? It marked it wrong for me, but I'm sure I've seen this in a outrigger travel book before.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

djeidot 14 8 7 2 2

Yes, it is perfectly acceptable, it feels more polite (and, I would add, more posh). "Casa de banho" is just more common

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

a.vickers 25 17 9 8 7

I thought the word onde always takes the verb estar rather than ser? It certainly does in Spanish.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Paulenrique 21 15 13 10 8

No, it doesn't. We surely say onde é when we ask for locations of places, spots. Onde fica is also frequently used. Onde está would be for locations of belongings, example "onde está meu livro?", or for things that "move/ can change place", example "where is the dog?" - "onde está o cachorro?" If it's understood "at the present moment", as quoted in this sentence, use está. The bathroom is supposed to be all the time at the same place, so you use the verb ser, onde é o banheiro. Got it?

27ReplyGive Lingot2•4 years ago

djeidot 14 8 7 2 2

Adding to Paulenrique's answer, if you asked "onde está o banheiro?" it would seem like "where did you put the bathroom?"

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Paulenrique 21 15 13 10 8

A friend invites you to go to his favorite restaurant, one you've never been to. Before your meal, you ask him where the restrooms are. After listening to his directions, you go to look for it. Your friend notices it takes a long time for you to come back and decide to see where you are. When he finds you and you're angry for not finding the restrooms, you say "onde está o banheiro?"

6ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

KTkee-EnglishEng 25 11 6 6 6

Would you always say bathroom not toilet?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

djeidot 14 8 7 2 2

In Portuguese, yes, if you say something like "I'm going to the toilet" or "Where is the toilet?" you will always say the word "banheiro" aka bathroom. We only refer to the toilet when talking about the toilet itself, or sitting on the toilet (whose translation in Brazilian Portuguese is "privada" if I'm not mistaken). Saying "privada" instead of "banheiro" when you're asking to go to the toilet is not polite.

4Give Lingot•2 years ago

KTkee-EnglishEng 25 11 6 6 6

That would make them like Americans then as they say bathroom, whereas Britons say toilet.

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Jdm249 9

Portuguese is actually more consistent with the permanent vs. temporary distinction between ser/estar than Spanish in this way.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

a.vickers 25 17 9 8 7

Very helpful . Thanks. A

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

KTkee-EnglishEng 25 11 6 6 6

Would desculpe and desculpa both be acceptable here? What's the difference between desculpe and desculpa?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Paulenrique 21 15 13 10 8

none, one is conjugated for tu and other for você.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ellie.Lkl 20

Where I live in Brazil I hear people say just 'licença' without the 'com'. So I put 'Licença, onde fica o banheiro?' but it marked it as wrong. Is this an acceptable way to say it?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

djeidot 14 8 7 2 2

I don't think so. "Licença" without "com" is just a colloquial abbreviation. You can say it, but you should never write it. "Com licença" is the correct form.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Quixotic22 24 11 78

"lamento, onde é o banheiro?" ??

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

150 What would you say is the hardest part about learning French?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4717205>

naomi_cat 10 3

I think memorizing genders and having to form sentences differently is very difficult.

What do YOU think is the hardest part about learning French?

Give Lingot

72 years ago

Leave a new comment

22 Comments

Mariana.Fortes 15

Listening for sure... They just talk crazy fast

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KansasBurri 7 3 1

The spelling and pronunciation differences between the conditional, one word future and imparfait are hard to get right, as well as knowing the difference between knowing when to use the imparfait instead of the P.C.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sophie18 14 8 5

I think learning how to conjugate verbs, especially irregular verbs is the hardest thing

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

naomi_cat 10 3

That too.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ivanka_ps 24 12 12 11 11 6 4 4 3

At first it was the pronunciation of different groups of vowels (like "oi", "eau", "eaux", "ai"), and how they didn't pronounce the last letters of most words. Later, I got used to the pronunciation, but now when I write in French, I use to drop some letters unconsciously (for example: I write "la rob" instead of "la robe" and so on).

Oh, it also used to cause me trouble "la négation" (ne pas, ne rien, ne jamais...)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jolynnedougherty 25 19 14 8 5 41

For me, it's definitely learning which prepositions go with which verb.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Resonance2001 15 11 10 5

Perhaps the spelling. There are many accented letters in French and when I write, I sometimes have to look up certain words to make sure I have used the correct accent. I even had to write a program to help me with that. Verb conjugation is not too difficult as there are four tenses that are not used in the spoken language. If you are interested, I have started a verb conjugation video series <http://youtu.be/aGy0mbCJ0ug>

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

-TashaJ- 25 11 6

For me, it's the subjunctive. I just can't seem to get it right :|

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

earthkissed 23 10 9 8 8 7 6 5 5 4

i find prenominal verbs (i think thats the term... the verbs with se in front) difficult... not the conjugations, but when putting se in front of the verb changes the meaning of it altogether.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ALoUSyUseRnaME 25 25 16 9 5 5 4

I'll just have to say everything. The pronunciation can be tricky, the grammar is pretty hard, and the genders can sometimes be pretty hard, but sometimes you might be able to guess the gender pretty easily. Once you get a good grip on the language and ready to move on, you kind of start having the genders naturally popping into your head.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rough_Pathway 13

Definitely pronunciation, but that might change the further I get into French.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ReidHT 25 15 8 7 6 5 2

Learning all the conjugations for every tense, pronunciation, masculine and feminine nouns, and a bunch of other things. But I still love it :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

perfect-disaster 25 20 11 10 6 5 4

I think the different types of conjugations you have to memorize (and the ever-so-precise placement of words) is the most difficult for me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KrazyKaderKat 25 11 9 4

move this to French.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EliYazdi 22 17 17 11 10 8 8 7 5 5 5 2

Not necessarily, it could be useful for people who are not learning French right now, but intend to in the future.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jillianimal 22 22 7 2

They could still subscribe to the French tab then.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EliYazdi 22 17 17 11 10 8 8 7 5 5 2

Good point.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

vvkrastev 25 25 25 25 24 16 15 15 15 12 9 8 8 8 8 8 6 6 5 4 4 3 3 2 1178

Spelling/pronunciation and sentence structure. Sentence construction is just different enough from English and the other Romance languages to really trip you up.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

septiros 13 10 7 6

Listening comprehension pronunciation (hardest parts). And also many words sound alike, such: Le pomme & les pommes, they sound alike if they are pronounced fast.

I think the grammar is as same as Italian, Spanish and Portuguese.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Crugcot 9 4

Pronunciation and listening, but that's not an excuse to not stop learning

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Ashley_Parrott 10

conjugating verbs definitely!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

151 Hebrew Time #8 - The Hebrew Vowels!

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7253301>

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3

Hello everyone!

! לְכֹלֶם שְׁלֹום

Shalom lekulam!

Welcome to Hebrew Time #8! For those of us who are joining now – Hebrew Time is a series of weekly posts about the Hebrew language, Israel, and the Jewish people.

You can see the previous post here

Before we start, you also might want to go over Hebrew Time #3, where we learned about the Hebrew alphabet.

So sit down, relax, and enjoy the lesson!

As you probably noticed, when I wrote “Shalom lekulam”, it looked different from what you’ve met so far.

This brings us to today’s topic – by popular demand, it is about the Hebrew Vowels (Nikud).

Before we learn how to use Nikud, we will give some background information on this system.

Introduction (and a little bit of history)

The Hebrew Vowels (Nikud) are a system of lines and dots that are placed in different positions around letters in Hebrew. In contrast to European languages, Hebrew vowels are not determined by letters, but by these lines and dots. This vowel system is typical to Semitic languages. The Modern Hebrew vowels are based on an ancient system called “Nikud Taberni” which is the method of vowels used in the Jewish bible.

Today in Israel, children learn Nikud in 1st grade together with the Hebrew letters, but the majority of everyday Hebrew is written without them and you are expected to eventually be able to read without them. There can be several different kinds of nikud for each kind of vowel sound, but it is not expected to be able to know which one to use when – these days they are purely for reading purposes. The Hebrew vowels are used today when defining new words, in places where the word would otherwise be ambiguous, in the bible and in some books (usually children books).

The Hebrew Vowels

In contrast to English, which uses around 13 different vowel sounds (depending on where you are from), Hebrew only has 5 distinct vowel sounds:

“a” as in “cat”

“e” as in “bed”

“i” as in “eep”

“o” as in “bog”

“u” as in “toot”

Remember that when we write that something is pronounced “do”, what we mean is that it is pronounced like “do” in “dog”, not “do” in “doe” or “do”.

The other important thing to know is that in Hebrew, most syllables follow a consonant-vowel (e.g. “ba”) or consonant-vowel-consonant (e.g. “bag”) form. Some are vowel-consonant (e.g. “ag”, but the point is that clusters of consonants (e.g. the one-syllable word “thrift” which is ccvcc) are almost non-existent. Bearing that in mind... let’s learn the Hebrew vowels!

We will use the Letter “א” (alef) to carry the vowel.

Shva

The shva is a vowel that is used a lot in Hebrew.

It looks like this:

אְ

This vowel has two pronunciations.

It can be pronounced as “e” or as a letter with no vowel.

For example:

שְׁ - She / Sh

מֶ - Me / Mm

רֶ - Re / Rr

The “e” form is usually found at the start of a word.

Chirik

Chirik looks like this:

אִ

It’s short like “i” but sounds much more like “ee”.

For example:

שִׁ - Shi

יִ - Vi

רִ - Ri

Tsira and Segol

These vowels in the modern Hebrew sound pretty much the same.

The big difference between them was in ancient Hebrew.

They look like this:

Tsira – אִי

Segol – אֶ

It pronounced like the letter “e” in English.

For example:

שֵׁ/שֶׁ - She

גֵּ/גֶּ - Ge

לֵּ/לֶ - Le

Kamatz and Patach

These vowels in the modern Hebrew sound pretty much the same.

The big different between them was in the ancient Hebrew.

They look like this:

Kamatz – אָ

Patach – אַ

Both pronounced as "a".

For example:

שָׁ/שֶׂ - Sha

רָ/רֶ - Ra

בָּ/בֶ – Ba

(note: in some cases the patach is pronounced as “o”).

Cholam chaser Cholam Chaser looks like this:

אֹ

It sounds like the letter “o” in English.

For example:

רֹ - Ro

דֹּ - Do

גֹּ – Go

Cholam Maleh

This vowel is used only on the letter “i” (vav)

It looks like this:

י

It sounds like “o” in English.

When we use a Cholem Maleh, the letter “i” operates as a vowel letter (like in English).

For example:

יב - Bo (this is the Hebrew for “In him”)

יל - Lo (this is the Hebrew word for “to him”)

יא - O (this is the Hebrew word for “or”)

Kubutz

The Kubutz looks like this:

יְ

It sounds like the letter “u” in English.

For example:

יב - Bu

יל - Lu

יה - Hu

Shuruk

This vowel is used only on the letter “i” (vav).

It looks like this:

יִ

It sounds like “u” in English.

When we use the Shuruk, the letter “i” operates as a vowel letter (like in English).

For example:

יב - Bu

נו - Nu (noise of impatience in Hebrew!)

ר - Ru

Dagesh (in Hebrew it means “emphasis”)

Fitting to its name, the Dagesh emphasizes the letter.

ת

(we used the letter "Taf" for this example)

We have already discussed the letters that have special changes when they are emphasized in the alphabet Hebrew Time #3 (you can see the link for it above). With nikud, you use a dot in the middle of the letter to signify emphasis. There are only six letters that can use this emphasis, although some of these letters no longer have differences in pronunciation between the emphasized and non-emphasized forms in modern Hebrew – for example, “ג” , “ד” and “ת” can use emphasis but are pronounced the same with or without emphasis.

For letters that do change their pronunciation, the emphasis makes the “plosive” version of the consonant (which is the one you make with your lips or throat that you can’t sustain e.g. “b”, for example you can make the noise vvvvvvvv but not bbbbbb).

Examples:

פ - p (without Dagesh we read it “f”)

כ - k (without Dagesh we read it “ch” - like in “Bach”)

ב - b (without Dagesh we read it “v”)

A little rule - when the letters “ב” , “ג” , “ד” , “כ” , “פ” and “ת” come at the beginning of a word, they will be always emphasized. If they come at the middle or end, they usually won’t be.

Shin and Sin

We also use nikud to make changes to the letter “ש” (Shin).

Shin - שׁ

When using this vowel, the letter “שׁ” is pronounced as “sh”.

Sin - שׂ

When using this vowel, the letter “שׂ” is pronounced as “s”.

The Chataf

The Chataf is two dots that look like the Shva which are placed next to another vowel, and has the effect of shortening the vowel.

We use the Chataf with the Segol, Patach and Kamatz (you can also use it with Chirik, but we won't teach you about it because it used very rarely).

Chataf Segol - אָ

Chataf Patach - אַ

Chataf Kamatz - אֲ

The Chataf Kamatz is pronounced as "o".

That's it! You now know how to "Le'naked" (לְנִקֵּד) - it means that now you know how to use vowels.

We can't finish without telling you:

להתראות!

See you later!

That was the seventh Hebrew Time, thanks for joining us! Hooray!

Join our facebook group here!

Support the future Hebrew for English speakers course so we will be able to work on it!

Thanks MaeMcA for helping me write this post!

That's it!

! טוב לילה

Layla Tov ! (Good night)

Give Lingot2
212 years ago

Leave a new comment
23 Comments

Morrofe 14 11 9 3 2

מקרה בכל. אמיתי עברית קורס לעשות יאפשרו שכבר הלוואי! טובה עבודה! באתר ישראלים שיש לראות יפה
(: חחח אגב דרך בפייסבוק לקבוצה הצטרפתי! הכבוד כל

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AmirLFC 17 16 12 11 3 441
...ידעתי שלא דברים פה יש! טובה עבודה

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Brina431719 23 17 11 6 5 831

A bit belatedly but thank you to both of you for creating this very difficult post. Coming from a background of Biblical Hebrew I have found myself having to re-learn a bit to adjust, but other than the tsayreh/segol and possibly the chirik, most vowel sounds are the same. My problem, which you kind of answered with the comment that nikkud is added in children's books, is that I wouldn't know a word like ילדה is pronounced 'yalda' unless I'd seen the nikkud or heard someone say it first. I'm guessing that's quite a common thing though?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaeMcA 20 8 4

Thanks! Without spoiling too much I just wanted to say: sit tight and hopefully this week's post might help....:)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Brina431719 23 17 11 6 5 831

Ooh exciting! Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alex_tv80 12 11 10 10 9 8 7 6 5 4

עכשיו בקר לנו יש

(Is this a correct sentence ?)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3

Do you mean: "it's morning now"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alex_tv80 12 11 10 10 9 8 7 6 5 4

To be precise I mean "it's morning now in our place "

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3

In that case the translation is: "אצלנו בוקר עכשיו"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alex_tv80 12 11 10 10 9 8 7 6 5 4

Oh! Really! I should think more Russian-style.)))

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alex_tv80 12 11 10 10 9 8 7 6 5 4

And why is there the 'yod' letter in the word 'עכשיו' if there is nothing like 'i' sound in this word?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3
In this word the "yod" is silent.

OGive Lingot•2 years ago

SladeJWilson 7
Hebrew's on Duolingo?

OReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 9 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 6
Not yet, but we hope it will be eventually!

OReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

loolitay 13 11 6 2
Wow, this one must have been really hard to make. Great job guys! However, I think some of the transliteration might be kind of ambiguous, leading to mispronunciations. For example, when you say that something sounds like the letter "u", it's unclear whether you mean the "uh" (as in but) sound or "oo" (as in boot) sound. So the lovely word of וּלִיטַי may be pronounced by a learner as "nuh"! Does anyone else feel this way? Either way, this was a really good lesson.

OReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaeMcA 20 8 4
Due to a mis-communication, the first version of this post that went up didn't include the bit about how the vowels actually sound, among other things! If you checked the post too early (our bad), you may not have seen it:) That should all be explained now.

OReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

loolitay 13 11 6 2
Oh good! I'm glad to hear it. Though I still think there are some ambiguities-- like when you say that one of the vowels sounds like "e", it is unclear whether you mean that it's pronounced "ee" or "eh", (as in the name of the letter vs. the sound of the letter), which means that for the following examples it was unclear whether it would be pronounced "shee", "gee", and "lee" or "sheh", "geh", and "leh". Maybe it's just me but I was a little worried that those who hadn't learned nikud before would go for the wrong possible pronunciation. Maybe it would help if you put words with those sounds as examples, and linked to pronunciations like you did on the last Hebrew Time. That would eradicate any ambiguities.

OReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaeMcA 20 8 4
Hmm, I thought I'd made it clear that anytime we wrote "e" we meant "e as in bed" but maybe that wasn't clear enough...Will try and clear that up this week...

OReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

loolitay 13 11 6 2
Awesome!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaeMcA 20 8 4

Have adopted IPA in this week's post. Hopefully that should clear everything up....)

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

ClemeyTime 6 5 3

I have a question, how do I know which vowel goes in between the consonants? For example, the word for girl only has consonants, but how do I know that there are a's in between yldh?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3

You know it from the vowels: יֵדָהּ

As you can see there is "kamats" in the letter "yod" which pronounced as: "ya", and "patach" in the letter "dalet" which pronounced as: "da". Yalda.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ClemeyTime 6 5 3

Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

152 "Wie man in den Wald hineinruft, so schallt es heraus. "

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1296465>

Translation: What goes around, comes around.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

13 Comments

lwithero 11 6 6 4 3 2

Can we get some information on these idioms? They're so different from the English translation that some background info would help to translate..

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Kai_E. 25 23 20 12 4 3

Rough literal translation is "When you shout into the woods it echos back." Hope that helps with understanding how it corresponds to "What goes around, comes around."

22ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lwithero 11 6 6 4 3 2

Ah, right on. That makes sense! Thank you.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

danielley22 11 9 4 4

yes thanks i was really lost

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AsafH 24 10 9

Take this with a grain of salt: How one shouts into the forest, it echoes back.

Wie man - How does/like one in den Wald - accusative, into the forest hinein-ruft - hinein=in, ruft= shout/call so - Like this

schallt es - it echoes

heraus - out of [the forest] (in the direction of the speaker)

20ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lwithero 11 6 6 4 3 2

Exactly what I was looking for! Danke!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

I believe we're all blind here. Idoms are idioms, every language has their own.

We will never know until we see it.

The idea with this one, I believe it is to say that everything you do comes back to you.

Brazilian Portuguese: tudo o que vai volta.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Erikman 22 9 5 5 3 2 2

It took a little while to grasp the meaning and how it is the equivalent to the English one. But imagine someone learning English hears the phrase, 'what goes around comes around.' I know what it's supposed to mean, but the sentence itself never made any sense to me.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ivaylo_Ivanov 9

I would never guess the meaning of this :(... Probably I just need to memorise it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jaye16 25 25 25 13 6 3 2 163
Love this new skill.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

taap3 14

Does anyone know why the accusative case is used for "in den Wald"? I was expecting it to be dative as there is no motion. (I heard the rule that 'in' takes the accusative if there is some kind of motion, but takes the dative when it is used for location)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Erikman 22 9 5 5 3 2 2

The way it is worded it means that the person is outside the forest and yelling into it. The person may not be moving but his voice is going from outside the forest to inside the forest. If the dative was used it would mean that the person was in the woods so the sound of his voice stayed within the forest.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

taap3 14

Thanks, that makes a lot of sense :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

153 What is the highest current streak, and highest all time streak on Duolingo?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1934336>

RooPuddin 25 19 14 12 11 8 1283

As in the discussion title. Does anybody know? Personally, I'm aiming to for 10 years in a row.

Give Lingot11

393 years ago

Leave a new comment

117 Comments

bren 22 6 4 1170

We sadly didn't have the streak feature when the site started. It's really awesome to see people have streaks of 6+ months!

22ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

omarecd 10 7 6

Hello Bren, would it be possible to see where I am with the current strike I have ? For instance:

With strike of 1 day I am on the top 60% users. With strike of 5 days I am on the top 70% users. With strike of 10 days I am on the top 80% users...

It would be nice to know where compared with the other people, I think I could be quite encouraging :)

19ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

janatxy 12 7

I think Duolingo's ide behind this is self improvement rather than competition. You can motivate yourself by following people with high levels and streaks, but leaderboard kinda stuff would only harm the original philosophy of Duolingo:) Have a good day!

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FrancaEllerman 11 8

I agree. Duolingo by default keeps on emailing me whenever one of my friends passes me by skill points. And it's by DEFAULT! Motivation shouldn't be for competition. It would be cool, but still...

2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

comcb 12 11 7 7 7 5 4 2 2

you can turn those notifications off in your settings...

3ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

FrancaEllerman 11 8

I already did. I just thought it was a little sad that it was by default.

1Give Lingot•7 months ago

Gabe_2.0.9 18 5 4 2 147

true.

0Give Lingot•3 months ago

Jefi08 25 22 9 6 2 91

I can't believe you have a streak of 500+ days! Like, I thought mine was long hah

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

__jayjay92_ 10 3

well you have 579 now :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

FrancaEllerman 11 8

And now 660

3ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

AviMehra1 14 11 4 2 30

735

3ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

dperrtr 21 15 13 392

Something bad happened...

5Give Lingot•2 months ago

Typo3000 14 2 136
1194

1Give Lingot•3 months ago

Tolerating 15 14 14 11 11 9 8 8 7 7 5 5 4 4 4 3 3 2
Just want to say you now have a 666 day streak :) pretty awesome stuff right there man! Keep it up!

2ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

dumsted 10 10 4
now you have a 2 day streak!! what happened?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

xkingconduitx 25 6 6 2 2
And now you have a 701 day streak, great job, that's dedication right there

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

NikitaHills1 11 6 4 2
10....

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

lovetronica 14 13 10 10 9 9 6 6 5 4 2 2 2 100 40 :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

VigelingoWolf 18 17 16 14 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 3 3 3 2 23 24 more days until you have a 3 year streak!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JuniorPolyglot 11 11 10 6 200
he just lost it:(

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Jefi08 25 22 9 6 2 91
Ahahah, yeah. It's a little sad, but I guess this is what might happen when you're dependent on having a wifi connection to keep the streak going :p

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Devilnis 23 4 3 2 326

Dude that's a bummer! Sorry for your loss :(

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

FrankySka 25 23 16 14 14 10 8 1345

there has been a one year streak reported in the discussion - this has been a while back, so the person might be at 400 days or so by now. :)

edit 409! <https://www.duolingo.com/johnarnold> - not sure it is the longest, but the longest I know of!

good inspiration for the two of us, eh? :-)

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RooPuddin 25 19 14 12 11 8 1283

Pretty impressive.

200+ club woo!

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wombatua 25 25 14 13 13 12 12 11 7 5 3 1381
269 here.

10ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

SoccercatShek 6

667 day streak? Impressive. :^D I'm still working on getting to a 5-day streak. -_-

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CameronAvocado 13 11 8 8 8

And now look at these gods line up. QQ

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FrankySka 25 23 16 14 14 10 8 1345

yay :-) welcome to the club, hehe !

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

WeiDeTaiwan 20 14 12

I am in, too :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Thatguy1011 5 5

Not any more

7Give Lingot•1 year ago

Thatguy1011 5 5
But now 910! How do you do it?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

xkingconduitx 25 6 6 2 2
And now a 1182, impressive

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

omarecd 10 7 6
+7 club ?? :)

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrankySka 25 23 16 14 14 10 8 1345
woo!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

D_O_M_O 25 9 9 6 4
yeahhh im in this club too :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dperrtr 21 15 13 392
I'm on that club too... but for some reason, you didn't wait for the others :D good luck

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

hotarukomorebi 11 7 5
As a person who discovered duolingo three days ago: WOW. That gives me motivation ^^

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

omarecd 10 7 6
I discovered 7 days ago :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hotarukomorebi 11 7 5
good luck! keep that streak going :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SteveSmyth 8
You guys gave up on the streaks :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CameronAvocado 13 11 8 8 8
lkr lol

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

gerfboy 20 12 11 9 8 8 5 4 2 2 1288
Looks like today johnarnold is at 589! Wow. I'm just about to break a year!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

assasinsweed 3
cool

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

husseinelhajj22 21 13 10 7
Well look at yourself now! :D good luck!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flashyash 9 3
I just checked the streak on johnarnold and he has about 1246 days in a row!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

revdolphins 25 17 10 6 7
Duolingo went public on June 19, 2012. If there's anybody who has kept a streak since day one they would be at 612 days right now. I wonder if they were tracking streaks for the six months it was in beta before that?

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

D_O_M_O 25 9 9 6 4
lol im only at 38... you guys are doing great.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrankySka 25 23 16 14 14 10 8 1345
well, you know, every single one of us was at 38 at some point ;-)

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ricaloca 23 2
Or even more than once! I lost my streak on vacation with no internet & had to start over :(

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CameronAvocado 13 11 8 8 8
If you're on mobile it saves all the lessons you are currently learning offline. I think, don't quote me on that. Also buy a streak freeze, although that's only 1 day.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ayoung101 20 8 1131

not all of us. i started 23 days ago...and have a streak of 23 days. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

FrankySka 25 23 16 14 14 10 8 1345

I meant all of us-who-have-a-200-day-streak) - we also all had a 23 day streak at some point, so you are on the right track ;)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FarnworthPatrick 25 19 6 6 831

Today you have a 1000 day streak so you certainly where doing something right!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

omarecd 10 7 6

I will some day !! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ewan2169 12 10 3 34

i think that duolingo is the best website EVER for learning languages i i also rekon that it should not stop

3ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

GeorgiaCake13 14

200 days!

2ReplyGive Lingot6•1 year ago

SavRoyal101 3

.-. im disapointing myself

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

You'll get there :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SavRoyal101 3

yeah maybe in the summer not in school though

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

lkr. School takes up so much time that I only get about an hour to practice after school

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SavRoyal101 3

sadly its true hey add me on my other account if you want its called savroyal

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Ok I will :DD

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

Lrein 18 9

omg!! im doing good to go for a week!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jonathan.s75 14 13 13 9 7 1

Bunch of people wigh over 700, and I have a one day streak

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NikitaHills1 11 6 4 2

you have a 1 day streak now lmao

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Funky_Puppy 15 7 6 3 3

The largest streak I have ever seen is 916 days, by wombatua.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TomasToo 14 13 3 3

johnarnold is even further :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

gosantaclara 25 1226

791 here!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

thinkmac 19 15 15 2 1308

Great job!

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

JoshuaRemigius 12 10 8 6 3 2

Wow, 1113 .. That's very inspirational consistency mate!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

thinkmac 19 15 15 2 1308

Thanks! Keep up with the good work!

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

SzeAndr 22 15 10

Has anybody passed the 500 already?;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RooPuddin 25 19 14 12 11 8 1283

yup :-)

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2933824>

you should check in there yourself!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

SzeAndr 22 15 10

Thank you for the link!:) It is a very motivating list!:P

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ayoung101 20 8 1131

so speaking of long streaks, i'm at 593 today...but i just finished a lesson, and i was at 593 yesterday too. i don't know why the streak didn't go up. i'm a bit worried i won't get credit...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ayoung101 20 8 1131

ok...that's weird. in this post, it says 594, but at the top of the page it says 593. i might have found a glitch, duolingo!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CameronAvocado 13 11 8 8 8

Right now it says you have 600

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

__jayjay92_ 10 3

now it says 809

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ColinChung1 14 4 2

you all have amazingly high streak!i only have a 63 day streak and 74 lingots. 😊

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

McPeLover 6

I"V SEEN A 1000 DAY STREAK ONCE OMG

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mdb71169 25 1117

I'm currently sitting at 752 It's really not that hard. Only takes 5 minutes a day to keep a streak going and learn a little something. I usually review 3 or 4 things a day and learn one new thing. Just keep plugging away

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JamieRandall1 20 108

Hello mdb71169

I see that you have a great streak of 783 (at the time of writing! HA!). Well done. How is your German? Could you (Have you) rock(ed) up to Germany and confidently communicate(d) there?

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

mdb71169 25 1117

I am by no means fluent, but I am pretty confident that if I got dumped in a city in the middle of Germany where only German was spoken, I could get by well enough. My reading comprehension is really good, but when I speak I still have to think it out first. Same goes for listening to someone else. If they slow it down I can usually get it on the first shot. My dad grew up in Germany and I have dinner with him once a week and we speak a little German. My biggest aid was movies. I am a huge movie buff. Start watching films like "Das Boot" or "Aguirre: Wrath of God" and you'll be surprised how much of the dialog makes gets across. Also audiobooks. The Harry Potter books, in German, are a bitch, but you learn a lot. Best advice I can give is just do it every day. I have found that by doing as little as ten minutes a day, it sticks. I usually review 1 or 2 completed modules and do one part of another. Because I spend so much time reviewing, it sticks. And don't move on to new concepts until you understand the one you are doing. I was never in a hurry to learn. Hope that helps.

5ReplyGive Lingot3•11 months ago

actlax 24 21 14 1032

same question, how's your German? I ended up learning 3 languages at once for about 30 exp a day which I find almost useless...

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

mdb71169 25 1117

I would say my German is "OK". Not awful, not great. I can make myself understood, but I am sure I still sound like an idiot most of the time. The real key is to speak it. A LOT. Immersion is still the fastest way to get it down. Find a person, or a group of people, who speak fluent German and spend time with them speaking nothing but German. That will accelerate learning so much you won't believe it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Minecraft182 10

I have 61 day but I have not missed a day since I started

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

pasta_and_stuff 16 4 139

anybody in the 100+ club

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

mdb71169 25 1117

806 as of today...

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

pasta_and_stuff 16 4 139

100 really isn't that much is it..

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

mdb71169 25 1117

I had to get to 100 first LOL

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

pasta_and_stuff 16 4 139

that's true :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

AAananchenko 25 22 22 4

I'm almost 600. it would be a bit longer if only i had not lost a streak of 50+ days because of time zones while I was on vacation almost two years ago. The next time I travelled very far last year I froze the streak for one day because I was not sure if the Internet would be available.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

foqus555 16

I have to learn the art of freezing my streaks. Up to only 6, again, for about the fifth time.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Jake405879 8

probably not me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

CScubing 25 11 8 7 5 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 2 2 1

I am following rocko2012. His/Her day streak is 1187.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

vanna478651 13

U guys are very inspiring, it makes me want to practice more often. but even though streaks are cool, don't let that take away from you learning your language. Have a good day! PS I'm on a 28 day streak! ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

garrettowne 25 25 14 11 2 2 1428

I think I might be in the top 10.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

JoshuaRemigius 12 10 8 6 3 2

Well, yours is pretty much the highest I've ever seen. Crazy levels of dedication and consistency! Good on ya.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

MichaelMcV2 14 12 10 2

I'm glad to know that. I'm at 852 That puts you well over a year past me. I'll stop obsessing now. :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

jazmynking 11

I thought I was doing pretty well at 41 days. Well, you guys put me to shame.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

JamieRandall1 20 108

I was on a 168 day streak until I had a 5 day field camp in Svalbard a few weeks ago... i.e. no internet, no 3/4G... R.I.P. my reward of 17 Lingots at 170 days :(...well, the grind continues afresh! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

catherinezic 7

Oh That sucks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Chunky_skunk 15 7 4 2

hi you funny

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

catherinezic 7

Wow!!!!!!!!!!!! 10 years!!!!!!!!!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

regenvogel7 25 7 1159

By my reckoning Duolingo start date was 30 November 2011 so 1 819 is the most number of days anyone can have on a streak to date.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

catherinezic 7

Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Devilnis 23 4 3 2 326

Someone in a post up top said the streak feature was not available in the earliest days of DL, so presumably it'd be something a little less than that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

MosesDahleBrown 14 3 135

ya ns

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Kriz84 24 1349

I've been asking myself the same thing. But if I see that I've been lazy only constantly practicing Spanish, I feel kinda bad...

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

prinskorv 12 1

I always thought my 7 day streak was impressive hahahaha :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

jimnice 23 20 18 9 8 8 7 6 5 5 952

Seems that the streak hall of fame lists have disappeared. A shame really; even though our purpose of accessing Duo should be language improvement and not competition, streak comparison added a bit of fun to the process. Now that there are no lists to record streaks, I think I will probably try to hit 1000 -- just because it is a nice even number -- and then not to be concerned about losing it.

I am actually more bummed out in seeing the immersion section go, as it seemed to be one of the best ways to reinforce what you have otherwise learned.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

Beavis18 5

wow you have more than 1000 day streak

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 days ago

theflash789 4

916, by wombatua

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

regenvogel7 25 7 1159
Dr Who has 1053

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

KateMac805 8 6
I saw people with over 1,000 day streaks. Ten years is almost four thousand days.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Haggra 12 10 9 6 6 3
Nice math.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

154 "The colors of the flag are red and white."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/484309>

Translation: Los colores de la bandera son rojo y blanco.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment
37 Comments

acart07 14 2 4

Why is are the colors masculine in this case? The flag is a feminine object and in this sentence we are describing (i.e. using adjectives) the attributes of the flag. If we said "una bandera roja" it would be grammatically correct to use the feminine so why is it correct to use masculine form in the example above?

43ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Gismon 16 3

I'm guessing it's because the colours are described separately from the object. Here you've got the flag, what are it's colours? Red and white, and when stated on their own they always hold the masculine form.

20ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

minanim 11

In my opinion in this sentence we are determining the colors. Since colors are masculine and plural (los colores) why we don't use the plural for rojos y blancos

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

riversallen 9 5
because one single color is red and the other one color is white

6ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

swingophelia 14

See below - the colors are functioning here as nouns, not adjectives.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Snoue 14

how can that be? they are obviously describing the flag

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Veekhr 19 18 15 14 11 6 5

The adjectives are describing the colors, not the flag. Strike out de la bandera entirely and it starts to make more sense: "Los colores son rojo y blanco." versus "La bandera es roja y blanca."

30ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mrs.McKinney 16 3 62

no, he's wrong. They are not nouns, they are still adjectives but they are describing the colors (masculine) and not the flag (fem.).

-5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PanchoCocinero 14 6 2

Really nouns. As in " I like that red," or " That is a bright white."

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

daisytuck 20 9 5 6

I believe it's because the subject of the statement is the colours of the flag (los colores - male) not the flag itself, which makes the adjective male. Please do let me know if I'm wrong as I'm basing my learning on this assumption!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mistyp 17 7 4

Is it because "of the flag" is a prepositional phrase? Do we always ignore the prepositional phrase for the gender of what it is referencing?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bslake 12 4 4

Why is it not rojos and blancos if the adjectives refer to the colors (plural)?

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tedsmoker 20 3

I thought I was so clever for remembering to match my adjectives (rojos, blancos) with their noun (colores) and I got it wrong too. Perhaps technically we are right, (the colors are reds and whites), but now we've learned something.

18ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sweeny99 14

Yep! I fell for that one too!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

swingophelia 14

While the words "rojo" and "blanco" can function as adjectives, they can also function as nouns, as their corresponding words can in English. That is their function here (nouns), and as such, they have just one form: "rojo" and "blanco".

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AaronTovo 20

Because it is listing each color separately. If it were talking about the collection of colors as a whole then the adjectives would be plural. Or if the flag consisted of nothing but shades of red then we could say "Los colores de la bandera son rojos".

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

swingophelia 14

See below.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Punkicoleman 11

Colors "are" sure makes them sound plural to me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

zeunysos 11 3

They are collectively plural, just like saying "He and I are going to the store". He is, I am, but because more than one person is named, the verb is plural (we are).

Try reversing the "is" relationship if that helps clarify: "red and white are the colors of the flag".

Or try checking it with plurals: "The colors are reds and whites" would mean several different shades of red and white, which is different from a single shade of each.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alibax 17 13 10

They are plural "los colores son...."

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PanchoCocinero 14 6 2

Los colores son oscuros. (Adj)son azul y verde (Nouns)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

M.donohue 19 10

I keep making the mistake of saying "del" instead of "de la". can someone explain the difference and why I am wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

aidan8 25 9 5 5 3

bandera is feminine therefore it's "de la". It's "del" for masculine nouns - think of it as an abbreviated "de el" but don't ever say de el it is always del.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

e-z-duz-it 10

I missed it also, but I believe it would be like saying "What are your school's colors?" "Red and white." The usage would be singular for the colors even though there are more than one color. You wouldn't say my school's colors are reds and whites.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

adamsrow 22 6

Each of the colors on a singular non-direct object, they are rojo y blanco. So, while the colors are not referring to the flag (singular) they are referring to individual colors on the spectrum, i.e. red and white. Yikes. Doubt I'll ever be able to keep that straight. I want a 'permission to mangle your language-free card.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bodwistev 21 18 12 9 913

i think that if you listen to english speakers mangle their own language then you would obviously be accepted for being less than perfect in your newly learned language !

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lisaandtim 25 8 5 2

The correct term is "Predicate adjective". Since I am a native English speaker I am speaking English rules. Maybe idiomatically in Spanish they act like nouns, but in English we refer to adjectives in the predicate as predicate adjectives. In English if diagrammed it would show they modify the word colors. Following the rules of Spanish we've been taught it should be "rojos y blancos", so unless this is idiomatic, it's incorrect grammar.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tejano 25 25 11 11 8 2 1

You make a good point about predicate adjectives, but I don't believe either "red and white" or "rojo y blanco" are predicate adjectives.

In my opinion, they are predicate nominatives.

Part of the difficulty of this sentence is that exactly the same words, "red" and "white," (and all the other colors) can function either as adjectives or as nouns. Clearly, if we say, "This is a blue flag,"

"This is a red flag," or "We have a red, white and blue flag," the indicated colors are being used as adjectives.

On the other hand, when we look at colors we do have names for them. Those names are nouns, as they are in these statements:

Red symbolizes strong emotion.

Green represents nature.

Blue is the color of the sky and of the sea.

Purple can represent royalty or nobility.

So, in the title of that old song, "Black is the color of my true love's hair." the subject (the word, "black") is a noun, and if we change the order of the sentence to "The color of my true love's hair is black," then "black" becomes not a predicate adjective, but a predicate nominative.

Same, or similar, thing here: If the order of "The colors [of the flag] are red and white" is reversed to read "Red and white are the colors [of the flag]," then it becomes easier to see that "red and white," now functioning as a compound (plural) subject, must be acting as nouns. In the original they were a compound predicate nominative, also nouns.

In Spanish, as nouns in their own right, rojo and blanco don't have to agree with either the gender or the plurality of colores, but the verb does have to agree with them because they are combined into that two-element, compound (plural) predicate nominative (or subject, as the case may be.)

Therefore, "Los colores de la bandera son rojo y blanco" is, grammatically, perfectly correct.

Predicate adjective? That would occur if a non-ambiguous adjective were used, such as "The colors [. . .] are faded," or "The colors [. . .] are bright," etc., or as Veekhr points out above, rather than naming colors as colors, the color word refers directly back to a thing described: "The flag is red," "La bandera es roja."

(Please forgive the length of this.)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hassansen 13 9 8 7 6 5 5 2

Los colores de la bandera son rojo y blanco : bandera merah putih : Indonesia.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

frpmacc 12 9 2

It is funny because Stepan Bandera is a well-known person, and his flag was red-black.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kikocaranto 21 17 15

Why "son" and not "están"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hughcparker 21 18 14 424

Están would refer to place.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SoloBure 20 16 20

I spoke with a friend that speaks Spanish. She confirmed that it's not to do with nouns or adjectives. In this case we are talking about the colours NOT the flag, thus the colours are masculine. If we said "The flag is red and white" then it would be "Los colores de la bandere son roja y blanca" because we are directly talking about the flag. Slight difference and it caught me out too, but hope this clears it up. :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tejano 25 25 11 11 8 2 1

See this link, <http://civwiki.wikifoundry.com/page/La+Bandera+de+Espa%C3%B1a> , fourth line:

"La bandera tiene tres rayas horizontales y los colores de la bandera de España son rojo e amarillo. "

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Juanitawhite 22

I'm going to my teacher because red and white are defiantly describing the colors, not the flags. Just diagram the sentence. It seems obvious there is either a mistake or an idiom at work here

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EdgarDuenas1 8

i used google translate and got it wrong that means that duolingo does not work good

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

155 What is the highest possible level?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1316260>

saraellerose91 24 21 19 11 7 6

Is there a maximum level that you can attain, or can you just keep on going forever as you add points?

PS: DUOLINGO IS AMAZING AND I LOVE YOU GUYS SO MUCH, THANK-YOU FOR THE SITE!

Give Lingot11

1463 years ago

Leave a new comment

117 Comments

EinStudent 10 8 6 6 5

The highest I've seen is 25.

34ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 7

Yes, that is the highest possible level. You can continue earning XP beyond that point, but you won't level up anymore.

38ReplyGive Lingot6•3 years ago

Hoja.de.Arce 25 25 14 7 6

I just hit level 26, but it won't display—I still display as level 25! Oh, well—there goes my motivation!

31ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

aisling-taibhse 14 12 8 7 6 2 2

Hey, now you can start revising through a second language! So, you're level twenty five (or twenty six) in one, why not use that language to learn another? That way you revise not just the one you finished the tree on, but you build up another language. And it would be a great way to train your brain not to think in English in your target languages.

I'm planning on doing that with German and French when I have leveled up to them. (Wish there was a way for folks to show what they are doing, but the option is there, and I think it's pretty stellar.)

71ReplyGive Lingot16•1 year ago

Hoja.de.Arce 25 25 14 7 6

Well, I am also doing German as well (level 18 so far), but the point I was trying to get at was that I was using Duolingo to build up my Spanish, and now I've hit the ceiling with Duo. I wasn't using Duolingo as an end in itself, but as a tool to achieve a particular end.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

aisling-taibhse 14 12 8 7 6 2 2

Ah, I see. Sorry I misunderstood.

Yes, it's a shame - Duolingo offer a free course that gets you up to the equivalent of a first year at university, from what I've read. It would be great if, in future, they could offer more, but I don't know how practical that is given they are doing it for free. I have no idea how they fund themselves!

I am still planning on doing a revision tree in dual foreign languages at some point, to cement my fluency and stop me thinking in English. Though I hope to 'test out' on the lower levels.

I don't suppose anyone knows if Duolingo are planning further levels?

18ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

Becky270365 15

Watch that TED talk to understand how it's funded. Great story.

7ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

MasonAksamit 23 11 9 5

Actually if you would like to get credit for a first year in university. I used mostly Duolingo for a CLEP exam in German, and once I completed the tree. It's $80 for the test but can get you 12 college credit hours

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

marxr87 9 2

Bit late, but have you tried going from Spanish to English?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

MsHannahMatthau 8 6 6 5

Just a heads up, the French course is SO full of mistakes! I am fluent (grew up in Francophone schools) and I've counted over a hundred mistakes in less than the first half!

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

marinambAA 25 11 11 10 9 7 7 6 6 6 3 178

I am a native speaker of a few languages and noticed it as well. However, if we all report what we see, it gets fixed. We are all humans, so we should try to provide feedback and help them improve it. I noticed it with Russian and Ukrainian and have reported it every time I saw a problem.

14ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

leap29 23

Would you mind reminding me the best way to report a problem, so that it is read by the duolingo team? Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

marinambAA 25 11 11 10 9 7 7 6 6 6 3 178

When I notice a problem while answering the question, at the bottom you have a button to report a problem and you can explain what the problem is. So you have to do it while answering question (which obviously will take some time during the process), but they do make corrections and Duolingo improves.

1Give Lingot1•3 months ago

JamesNg98b 11 10 8 5

You could either report the mistakes or even better, apply to be the course moderator so you could fix it yourself if you think you are professional in both languages

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ashtonmchale 13 4 3 2

Oh wow... :o You should contact Duolingo and let them know.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

bolsonera 7 6 6 3

could you make a list of the most notorious errors, please? Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot1•6 months ago

jzw112 16 14 13 11 10 2 2

Excellent idea

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Susanna10025 25 25 25 15 11 11 5 5 3 164

This is a super idea! Thank you. Susan

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

isaacwpeters 24 4

I'd love to do french and spanish (I'm currently level 24 on spanish now) anyways, they are practically the same. half the time i read something in french and go like "this is a spanish sentence!" then i read one word that i have no clue what it is and im like "THOSE DARN ITALIAN AND FRENCH GUYS DID IT AGIN!!!!!! >:{"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

beritdef 11 7 6 5

very interesting

0ReplyGive Lingot•yesterday

SamohtSMA 25 25 15 1197

I hit it today too! How weird, all this discussion of lowering points earned for reviewing strong skills and then they add a new level, if only in a test. I took the screen shot to keep it as a real award. Hehe

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jerryshadrick 9 7 5 3

right lol

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

djentosaur 10 6 5

After reaching such a high level how would you rate your ability to speak to a native? I'm trying to figure out if this site is really worth using or should i move on to other things after a certain level of proficiency.

22ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

katiem415 16 9 8 5

Duolingo will not make you anywhere close to fluent but it will provide you with enough of a basic understanding of grammar and vocabulary to be able to go on and improve your language through reading, watching tv, etc

34ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

MattyMan129 11

true

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Vuxter 12

Yes, the limited number of lessons will only get you so far, and TV and Radio should help. But if you're already "hooked" on Duolingo, consider using the "Immersion" portion of the site.

Not sure how many people know this, but Duolingo was invented while searching for a system that will motivate already bilingual people to translate the Internet content (like Wikipedia) to other languages without a pay. That's why using Duolingo is free. I started using Duolingo after watching this TED video. Amazing.

https://www.ted.com/talks/luis_von_ahn_massive_scale_online_collaboration?language=en

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JuniorSuarez1 19 6 1

so did I, and I have been learning french since December 2015 just just over 3 months and i think is good for what it is, a fun way to strengthen your grammar.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

MsHannahMatthau 8 6 6 5

Just a heads up, the French course is SO full of mistakes! I am fluent (grew up in Francophone schools) and I've counted over a hundred mistakes in less than the first half!

-5ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

UmaObasi 24 14 9 8 2

Could you make a list of the most notorious errors, please? Thanks.

Don't just find errors, provide solutions. Duo is for free. Contribute in making it better!

7ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Grizli88 14 9

Wow!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

basia 16 13 9 7 7 7 6 6 2

Me to

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

WouterC 15 12 11

You shouldn't rely just on Duolingo. To really learn your language, you have to actively use what you learnt in context. And do that regularly. See also my post below.

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vrowley 18 3 232

Just my 2 cents. Duolingo is awesome, but a long way from immersion. In an attempt to get as close as I can to immersion without leaving the country, I augment Duolingo with the following: I'm listening to Pimsleur audiobooks which complement the Duolingo progressions really well. (However, my neighbors must think I'm insane mumbling in Spanish as I walk my dog). I also use

Audible audiobooks and Kindle eBooks that are available in Spanish. Sometimes (e.g. "Journey to the Center of the Earth") they have the same book in both formats so I can listen and read at the same time. I watched the mini-series "Destinos" (See <https://learner.org/series/destinos/>). YouTube has the "Extra!" sitcom and many other videos in Spanish. Don't stop there. You can play "Trivia Crack" on iPhone and Android in Spanish. Internet radio (e.g. SiriusXM, Google Play, iTunes, etc) has radio channels in Spanish. Oh, and there are a lot of native speakers where I live, so when I feel brave, I say to shopkeepers, "Habla español? Yo estudio español. Puede ayudarme? Tiene tiempo?" My end goal is to watch "The Time Between" on NetFlix without subtitles. :-D Buen suerte!

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

roman_nyc 15

I use the same all-around approach. Works well.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Porett 3 3

I got a kick out of our post-speaking while walking the dog

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

jflyd012 14 8 3

what do you mean by 'rating ability to speak to a native?'

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ann822668 15 15 6 6 2

waow, was just reviewing your posts and looking at how much knowledge you had gainer/refreshed - in particular, looking at how many languages each person is taking on - great work!... but... it is fun...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gregeliason 12 27

Have you checked out News In Slow Spanish? I think it's pretty great, but it's above my current level. It's a pay site, but I think it's only about $15 per month. My problem has been that there is a huge jump from this level of learning in Duolingo to actual, functional conversation in Spanish or to watching movies in Spanish. News In Slow Spanish is still beyond me (I'm level 10 in duo lingo now) but I think it's a good next step. I like it because you can hear a new story and then listen to it again while reading the text. It's a big jump from here, but seems like another good step between beginner Spanish and immersion.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Enrique510666 11 6

Hi. This is my first Duolingo post.

I recommend you don't give too much importance to the shield and the percentage inside. I am a Spanish native speaker and after years of study, practice, an MBA from Arizona State University, and most importantly, reading a lot of books in English, I consider myself fluent.

I have seen Duolingo in action since my wife started using it to learn English 6 months ago (she is at 34%).

Yesterday, I decided to see how it would work for me and started working with it, going directly to the tests where available. I got over 1,000 points in about 45 minutes and scored 59% (considering a few missing accents in the Spanish translations, a couple typos -I did it using my iPhone-, and a couple of silly mistakes by trying to do it as fast as I could).

Today I continued with some additional exercises and no mistakes, and the percentage went down to 58%. Suddenly I got to the end of the tree and got my golden owl.

So these are my $0.02: Don't worry too much about the percentage. If you are 50%+ you should have a very good level to immerse yourself in book reading or TV watching. Reading has the advantage that you can make a pause and look up any word you find in the dictionary (I use the Merriam-Webster iPhone App). I just finished reading "The Adventure of English" by Melvyn Bragg, and I had to use it quite a few times.

In a few months, the real progress will be evident after several books have been through your nightstand (and you have also been through them).

Rgds.... e

17ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

HugoR36 9 7

Thank you for the feedback Enrique!

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

raans 25 20 19 16 13 13 12 8 1243

I hear that level 25 is the top level. It would be nice to have actual data on how many points are required to reach a certain level. Here's what I figured out with given data (just up to level 12) and a "smoother" (loess regression), well round up/down:

25 29611

26 32406

27 35328

28 38378

29 41556

30 44862

12ReplyGive Lingot5•3 years ago

SamohtSMA 25 25 15 1197

Level 25 is 30000. I got level 26 today, but it has to be a test. I have over 41000 points in Spanish. It does not show in my profile. I took the screen shot as a reward pic. Hehe

12ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 13 13 12 8 1243

Yeah, as I mentioned, this was just a simple regression with a smoother applied. :) Technically, level 25 is the limit, for whatever reason.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

amn060708 13 8 2 5

Is this the $20 test that they have you pay for using the DuoLingo proficiency certification?
<https://testcenter.duolingo.com/>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SamohtSMA 25 25 15 1197

No, it turns out the level 26 turned out to be a joke by Duo. They used it when they were having problems on their end grading responses and awarding points. I got several of them before they improved the app.

As someone else said the levels are what you make of them. If you do challenging sessions to extend your ability they mean more than if you constantly repeat the beginning lessons. The proficiency number a bit weird too, I have a 40% proficiency in English and 58% in Spanish. I really hope my English is better than my Spanish. Even though many friends make fun of my New England accent. Hey, enjoy your studies!

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amn060708 13 8 2 5

Awesome! Thank you for the knowledgeable information. Interesting to learn what has happened over time & maybe they will make more progress in their programs in due time. Your English is just fine! Have a good day!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

raans 25 20 19 16 13 13 12 8 1243

No, this is independent of any level on Duolingo (and the levels don't necessarily co-relate with your actual/personal level of the language, your proficiency).

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amn060708 13 8 2 5

Sorry my comment was for SamohtSMA about the test. Not really regarding the levels. Thank you for the reply though.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

raans 25 20 19 16 13 13 12 8 1243

Yes, I know, I was referring to the test. SamohtSMA was referring to a so-called A/B test run on by the DL team and not the test center.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

astry789 6

I'm not sure it is a good idea to use local regression when extrapolation is required.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amn060708 13 8 2 5

Thank you so much for answering this question, now gives me more peace of mind yet motivation to get there. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

saraellerose91 24 21 19 11 7 6

Gameification for the win!

11ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

blessilda 25 16 16 15 10 10 8 7 6 6 5 5 4 4 4 3 2 2 2

I just reached level 25 in French but that's okay. I saw that I leveled up at 26 but it did not display. It just stayed at level 25.

8ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

saraellerose91 24 21 19 11 7 6

WOWOWOW your Duolingo is SO IMPRESSIVE!!!!!! GOOD FOR YOU!!!

4ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Koenzz 15 13 10 10 7 6 2 1

Calm your horses, Sara. Have a lingot.

21ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

toxinhead 8

Hahahahaha ^ But really blessilda thats crazy.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CzegldiTam 15 12 6 4 63

And do you really speak those languages? Are you fluent? Or... it gives rather like a passive vocabulary?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

WouterC 15 12 11

Just my two cents, but to really make the most of duolingo, you have to actively use what you learnt in context. And do that regularly.

For example, read a newspaper article (in your foreign language), listen to music, watch a movie or TV show, talk with actual people. The key here is regular practice, better to read one article a day (tip: read aloud) then read the whole newspaper on Monday and stop learning for the rest of the week.

And I really like the suggestion of using the foreign language you just learnt as the base language. I wonder if that helps the brain to make the right connections?

12ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

jflyd012 14 8 3

what is it in real . i mean are you at b1 level? (french)

1ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

blessilda 25 16 16 15 10 10 8 7 6 6 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2

Je crois que le niveau de mon francais est deja comme ca. Il peut etre plus haut, je pense. :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MsHannahMatthau 8 6 6 5

I'll assume you can't type the accents and such, but still, it's "Je crois que mon niveau de français est déjà là. Mais il peut être plus élevé, je pense. :)"

2ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

SMDreamer 6 3 2

You must be so smart to learn all those languages, that is admirable!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bolsonera 7 6 6 3

Hi blessilda, how is it beeing studying so many languagues at a time? Isn't it complicated? doesn't the words mix?

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Susanna10025 25 25 25 15 11 11 5 5 3 164

Here's a list of how many XPs are needed to reach each level from 3 onward: 3=120, 4=200, 5=300, 6=450, 7=750, 8=1,125, 9=1,650, 10=2,250, 11=3,000, 12=3,900, 13=4,900, 14=6,000, 15=7,500, 16=9,000, 17=10,500, 18=12,000, 19=13,500, 20=15,000, 21=17,000, 22=19,000, 23=22,500, 24=26,000, 25=30,000

5ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

CHAMPION.DUO 19 10 8 8 7 6 2

I think you can't go upto 26. I have only seen till 25 just like EinStudent. You can ask Luis if you can go upto 26

4ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

corairene 10 6 5 4 1

Some of you guys who are learning so many languages and are so high up amaze me

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SMDreamer 6 3 2

I know right!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

spainfrank88 25 307

oh, once you get to level 25, you can try the reverse tree (just google duolingo reverse tree), I'm going to do it once I reach level 25 in Spanish.... then go back in reverse.... :) They say it really helps

3ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

SamohtSMA 25 25 15 1197

Think 100 points a day, 3000 per month, level 25, in 10 months. Along the way you get a golden tree and have some fun.

2ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

spainfrank88 25 307

Also you could try, "Learn Spanish 6,000 Words" available in android app store. This is an excellent program, <https://play.google.com/store/apps/details?id=com.funeasylearn.spanish> It is free and it teaches you words very fast indeed. So a good formula would be:- 100 duolingo xp a day and "Learn Spanish 6,000 Words" = very good knowledge of Spanish in 10 months reaching level 25 in Duolingo (30 000 xp points)

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

saraellerose91 24 21 19 11 7 6

Thanks EinStudent. I'll have to aim for 26!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

jns1922 6

I am just starting. Even though I have a 5/5 score for all the modules, basics 1 and 2, etc. It makes me continue to practice. Do I have to practice a certain number of hours to get to the next level? Are there any instructional lessons or only the testing apps? thanks

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tamez123 14 12 10

is there some secret way of getting more experience that i dont know about cause 10xp per skill I strengthen feels like it takes a lifetime to level up

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Octopus3TheWise 8 4 3 2

patience you must have my young padawan

14ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

AmbrishAbhijatya 11 10 9 7 3

you can have timed practice

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

WouterC 15 12 11

Yes, like @AmbrishAbhijatya says, timed practice will give you points a lot faster.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jabrera 25 6 5 3 2

Start translating (see the Immersion tab) as soon as you feel comfortable. Not only does it reward you faster with points, it also helps you learn the language faster. You can score 200 points or more from one document if you're patient. (I wish I discovered this earlier because I spent a year earning points the slow way.) And it's fun!

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

willian.millan 25 25 25 19 11 145

Hi you can earn more XP if you buy with your lingots the option "Timed Practice". You can earn 20XP per skill

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ClareyFairy3 23 10 10 7 5 2 208

Oh no! Having completed the French tree a while back I didn't think there'd be much more to do to reach the higher levels, but I suppose at least having to practice and practice and practice to earn those darned XPs is making sure the language sticks. :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

spainfrank88 25 307

Also you could try, "Learn Spanish 6,000 Words" available in android app store. This is an excellent program, <https://play.google.com/store/apps/details?id=com.funeasylearn.spanish> It is free and it teaches you words very fast indeed. So a good formula would be:- 100 duolingo xp a day and "Learn Spanish 6,000 Words" = very good knowledge of Spanish in 10 months reaching level 25 in Duolingo (30 000 xp points)

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Susanna10025 25 25 25 15 11 11 5 5 3 164

Duolingo is a great tool for strengthening grammar and building confidence.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

fabianno78 14 6 1

My wife is impressed how I am learning Spanish. Speaking and reading.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

JH826940 15 14 13 12 11 10 9 8 7 6

It seems i've completed Spanish at level 11, so how do people get up to level 25?

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

PaulMinden 12 10 5

Same here: I just completed the Spanish tree and am just at level 11, and 55% fluency. How DO people get to 25? Is it all translations from here on?

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

JH826940 15 14 13 12 11 10 9 8 7 6

How did you get 55% fluency? I have only 45% and I'm past you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

MarilynLou 25 2

I reached level 25 in French and 64% fluency about 6 months ago and there is no level above that, but still practising Duolingo every day and finding that new words and phrases are constantly added. Now I try other Apps on my iPad for Immersion. I understand that you can do translations on Duolingo to earn more points if you wish.

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

jonah-1 11 3 3

Wow! Your levels are amazing!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

corairene 10 6 5 4 1

Can I ask something also: if you're achieving 700+ XP per day, in how many days would you reach level 25? (e.g. three weeks, two months, nine years, that kind of thing)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SamohtSMA 25 25 15 1197

30000XP/700XPper day = 42.8571 days or about 6 weeks

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

corairene 10 6 5 4 1

Thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Avanascar 13 13 5 2

Of course, it would be awesome to reach the highest level asap but would the vocabularies, etc really sink in the long-term memory with such a pace?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

corairene 10 6 5 4 1

I think, seeing as (at least until high school started back up) I was earning 700XP+, if I continue to do so even after I reach level 25, it should still stick? after all, gotta keep those memory bars up :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

RamonSanchez62 12 11 10 6 3
yes, good question. I heard it is 25.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jdinnerstein 13
Does anyone have a sense of what level of competency a person who completes Level 25 achieves?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

spainfrank88 25 307
Have a look at this user's comments: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1834666>

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

michaelbay26 16
highest level is 25. please check

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

KerenLomas0 14 10 6
How do I get above level 14 in French? There are no more modules that I can see. I'd love to know how to get higher.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

KerenLomas0 14 10 6
I got to level 15 in French but there is no indication that I can go higher. Do you just keep on doing the Strengthen Skills exercises in order to get higher? Please someone let me know.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

KerenLomas0 14 10 6
What are XP's?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

deltoni 9 2
can the percentage of speaking in Spanish reach 100% fluently

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

oinkmeal 13 11 11 6
I doubt it. And even if it did, it wouldn't mean anything. It estimates fluency by how much work you've done in the language, not by competency. I found this out because I didn't think my fluency percentage was correct for French, so I started a module that I am 100% fluent in (Spanish). It says I'm 53% fluent in Spanish. The only way for me to increase its estimation of my fluency would be for me to spend more time "practicing my skills." This is, of course, useless and meaningless because I can't get any more fluent in Spanish than I already am.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

deltoni 9 2

thank you...I restarted the duolingo all over again (spanish) to see if i'm better the second time around and also to see if my percentage would go up..

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Youssef1921 17 7 2

I think 25

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Sbatata 9 7 6

great

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

alyssaBour 11 7 7 2

I've been on 67% for like 7 units why ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

EXTREMEWB 3

Guys I started today and reached level 2! OMG SKILLZ!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

Jack1836 4

boi

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Jack1836 4

boi

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

LataKrishnan 16 103

I'm confused - I got a "trophy" and completion certificate (Spanish) but am only at Level 15 and I don't see any higher levels - can anyone help?? Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 days ago

Edwinabarzaghi 16 3 40

You have to go back and strengthen your vocabulary and essentially go back and start overI skipped over the first few levels . I'm taking french and I got the same "trophy" at level 15. I'm now at level 16.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 days ago

betohrz 14 12 5 3
hi

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

156 "The mom is coming."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/17470011>

Translation: באה האמא.

16 months ago

Leave a new comment

42 Comments

eboone44 15 5 3 1

How is anyone else doing the part that says "write in hebrew?" I don't have a hebrew keyboard...

22ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

airelibre 24 21 21 19 13 13 11

If you're on PC, look in the keyboard settings and add Hebrew. Then you have to either learn to touch type, or buy some keyboard stickers online (very cheap).

Or use the app. Just look in the language settings of your phone or tablet and add Hebrew. That can be a good way of learning the keyboard layout if you're totally unfamiliar with it.

8ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Robin_Jeannene 8 6 2

I don't know the letters. I can't even learn how each one is meant to be pronounced and the voice only speaks a couple words aloud. I can't write a word or even begin to figure out how it's spell if I'm not given an alphabet and how it's pronounced. Can I write phonetically with roman letters?

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

schyrsivochter 8 7 1

There is a table of the Hebrew alphabet and an explanation in the overview of the Letters 1 skill.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

JoeZacharias 6 2

I used this online virtual keyboard :) <http://gate2home.com/Hebrew-Keyboard>

4ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

MikeWondro 9 6 5 2

Me too !

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

saba383448 4 3

u can just download keyboard in computer its super easy

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

sergio.languages 10 10 4

Just Google "how to configure Hebrew keyboard on Mac/Windows/Linux" (write only the OS you're using). On my mac I have it configured and use a key combination to switch between different layouts.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

CeCeClark11 5 2

It is really easy to download, just click Tips and Notes and it will tell you how.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

MatthewBla467211 3

if you are in chrome os on a chromebook, go to settings, then advanced settings, then input and keyboard settings, then just add the hebrew language there. make sure to check "keyboard" in the menu

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

JoaoAzev 4

you can install it and use your virtual keybord on windows. If you are using another system it may be possible too.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Quickshot5 8 4 2

What is the difference between באַ and בּא and when do I use each?

9ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Rochelle43 5

The first is Ba-a is feminine and second Ba is masculine

14ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

DonatoCali 9 9 8 8 8 8 7 7 7 7 4 22

"בּא" This one is "ba" and is used when the subject of the sentence is of male gender (grammatical or natural). The other one is for feminine subject.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Rochelle43 5

I am using <http://www.lexilogos.com/keyboard/hebrew.htm> Dead easy and then copying and pasting

3ReplyGive Lingot1•6 months ago

MatthewBla467211 3
cheater XD

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

TheHebrewHarambe
I'm struggling to believe that the love is coming anyone else agree?

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Arvidan 6 6 5 4
What's the differences between האמא and אמא ?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Jodievaughan 3 2
the one with the hay is the mum and the one with out is mum

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

Lilah124 3
me to, I think you are suppost to just write how it sounds

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Jodievaughan 3 2
<https://www.branah.com/hebrew>

0ReplyGive Lingot2•5 months ago

Jodievaughan 3 2
it is a hebrew letters website

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

jaicee104 6
i cant write in hebrew he is right we dont have a keyboard for that

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

sergio.languages 10 10 4
Have you read my earlier reply? Any modern OS allows you to switch keyboard layouts easily. No need for any virtual keyboards at all.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

RachelNach1 5
i dont have a hebrew keyboard either

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

DanielAvit638243 7

Hi

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

BelleAdler0 15 10 9 6 6 5 2

<http://gate2home.com/Hebrew-Keyboard> For anyone who needs it. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ferrets21 8

used this <https://www.branah.com/hebrew>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

beyblademan102 6 6

yeah I am you have to go to the computer settings to switch keyboards

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

EmojiQueen 11 17

Go to settings to change the language

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Diego782877 8 3 3 3 2

why wouldnt you add מא here?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

airelibre 24 21 21 19 13 13 11

For one that word cannot exist because ם is the final form of מ (m). For example the word מים mayim - water.

Secondly, it is ba'a not ma'a.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Diego782877 8 3 3 3 2

would this be pronounced "aba ma"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

JoelPontin 8 3 2

So to make something "the noun" you add a ה to the beginning?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

airelibre 24 21 21 19 13 13 11

On a basic level, yes.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 months ago

JoelPontin 8 3 2

Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

15Hedwig 6

how do you type hebrew?????????

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

IdeleneChi 2

how do I get to the next level

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

IdeleneChi 2

how do I get to the next level

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

IdeleneChi 2

how do I get to the next level

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

IdeleneChi 2

how do I get to the next level

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

wendym318620

the mom is coming. but how do i write hebrew on my english character computer? how to exchange these symbols?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

157 what is the difference between (les pommes and des pommes) ?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/24560>

Dana.Bashkour 9 9

Give Lingot

04 years ago

Leave a new comment

4 Comments

weerlicht 25 24 13 10 6 6 5 403

It's not always easy to choose between "les" and "des" (and the fact that "de les" becomes "des" makes it even more confusing).

"Les" is used for "the" (pl) or if it concerns all (e.g. "les chiens sont des animaux") vs "des" if undefined (pl).

Note that the same is true for "le/la" vs "du/de la" in case of materials (e.g. "l'acier est dur").

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

NinoshkaDS1 4

This makes my life so much easier, merci beaucoup :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

tommooore 11

Les pommes means THE apples. Des pommes means SOME apples. Hope that helps :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

milneyj 11

Le/la/les is also used when referring to the general sense of the noun, e.g. in English we can say "I like chocolate", but in French this becomes "J'aime bien le chocolat". Consequently, "J'aime bien les pommes" can translate to either "I like apples" (in general) or "I like the apples" (that we were just talking about, for example).

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

158 What is the difference between nominative, accusative, and dative?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4199682>

shipu23 10 6 2

Whenever people ask questions, people sometimes use these words. Please help!

Give Lingot

32 years ago

Leave a new comment

6 Comments

[deactivated user]

These are noun cases. They describe the relationship one noun has with the verb and other nouns in the sentence. They are visible as changes to words in some languages, but as a concept you can see them even in English.

The NOMINATIVE case is the basic, dictionary form of the noun. It's the case that names the subject of the sentence, the one who is performing the action.

E.g. The cat is sleeping. - Because the cat is the one performing the action, it is the subject and it would be in the nominative case.

The ACCUSATIVE case is the one that indicates a direct object that the action is being performed on.

E.g. I'm eating an apple. - The action is being performed on the apple, so it's the direct object and should be in the accusative.

The DATIVE case indicates an indirect object, a thing that's being affected in the course of the action that affects the direct object.

E.g. John throws the ball to his dog. - John is the subject in nominative, the ball is the direct object in accusative, and the dog is the indirect object of this action in dative.

That's basically it. Some languages have more and others have fewer cases. My native language (Croatian) has 7 of them.

6ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

anthgrl 25 15

That was a great explanation TanagerMoonmist! I've been thinking about giving German a try, but I kept reading comments about the cases so I Googled cases and just got myself more confused (and a little afraid of German...). This was very clear and makes much more sense now. I think once I get a little further through my French tree I will sign up for German. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sweilan1 13 5

You have an error in your DATIVE case example. John throws the ball to his dog - dog is the object of the preposition "to".

A corrected sentence would be - John gave the dog the ball. In this sentence, dog is in the Dative case and ball is in the Accusative case.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

stephpus 25 14 12 10 7 6 6 5 5 5 5 5 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 561
For German

Nominativ: the "default" form of the noun - the subject. (der, die, das) These articles are pre-assigned to a noun in no particular pattern. Dativ is the indirect object while the Akkusativ is the direct object that receives the action. The articles change, depending what the object's function in the sentence is. (from left to right, these are the articles: masculine, feminine, neuter, plural)

Nom. der die das die

Akk. den die das die

Dat. dem der dem den

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OldSpiceGuy 25 25 13 5 4

I give it to you. I am the one doing the action, the subject -the subject uses the nominative case. It is the direct object, the thing being acted on - the direct object uses the accusative case. You are the indirect object - this uses dative. There's also the genitive case, mostly used for possessive (Bob's cat ate a mouse. Bob's is genitive. In English, we have three of the four, but only for some pronouns: I is nominative, me is accusative and dative, my is genitive.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Andrealphus 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 3 3 3

I suggest that you move this to the German forum because German focuses on those cases more than any other language and therefore the people on that forum would know best how to answer you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

159 Translation mistakes: from outright funny to a publicity disaster.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4404019>

OnesimusUnbound 25 23 17 11 1084

Learning another language requires more than memorizing foreign words or mastering its grammar, we also have to learn how would its native speaker say it. We have to be aware that sometimes using how we say things and translating it to another language may give different meaning to the native speakers. For an example, in Spanish they don't say "I didn't realise" as "No me realicé" because "realizar" means to carry out, to execute. The native Spanish will use the expression "Darse cuenta". The correct expression is "No me di cuenta".

I was studying German when I stumble upon a page that lists translation mistakes that ranges from outright funny to a publicity disaster.

<http://joycep.myweb.port.ac.uk/abinitio/whygerm11.html>

Here are some of my favorite:

General Motors are probably still trying to forget the fiasco which ensued when they tried to market the Chevy Nova in Central and South America. "No va" means, of course, in Spanish, "it doesn't go". An American T-shirt maker in Miami printed shirts for the Spanish market which promoted the Pope's visit. Instead of "I saw the Pope" (= el Papa), the shirts read "I saw the Potato" (= la papa). Pepsi's "Come alive with the Pepsi generation" translated into "Pepsi brings your ancestors back from the grave" in Chinese.

In a hotel in Athens: "Visitors are expected to complain at the office between the hours of 9 and 11 A.M. daily."

In a tailor's shop in Rhodes: "Order your summer suit. Because is big rush we will execute customers in strict rotation."

Similarly, from the Soviet Weekly: "There will be a Moscow Exhibition of Arts by 15,000 Soviet Republic painters and sculptors. These were executed over the past two years."

Give Lingot3

352 years ago

Leave a new comment

23 Comments

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

I saw the Potato. It was amazing. Blessed me with French fries, it did. Thank you, Potato.

Hour later: And upon reading what I wrote, I realize that this seems like cannibalism, so this can either be double the laughs, or that much closer to me being put away.

17ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

azureskye 14 10 9 5 4 3 3 2 2

laughs Oh goodness.

Edit: I just read this one: When Gerber started selling baby food in Africa, they used the same packaging as in the US, with the smiling baby on the label. Later they learned that in Africa, companies routinely put pictures on the labels of what's inside, since many people can't read.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OnesimusUnbound 25 23 17 11 1084

When Gerber started selling baby food in Africa . . .

I've just realized it's not strictly a translation mistake, yet it's a reminder to know the market before advertising.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nkn15 17 7

My uncle knows a priest who, on Ash Wednesday at a Spanish church, mispronounced the words. He did not know why the people were giggling when he put the ashes on their foreheads, until afterwards. Instead of saying "polvo" for "dust," he said "pollo"; translated, he was actually saying something like, "Remember that you are a chicken, and to a chicken you shall return." :D

7ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

OnesimusUnbound 25 23 17 11 1084

So the priest isn't Spanish, right?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nkn15 17 7

No, but he is learning it, I think.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Selcen_Ozturk 23 11 10 6 6

I took this photo at work (in Germany). English and German are fine, but the Turkish translation is hilarious and as far as I have heard from colleagues, the Romanian and Russian translations are also totally wrong (can some russian or romanian speakers comment?). The translation they used for "Fire escape" in Turkish is something like "Burn the escape", the second part is so wrong that it cannot be translated, it is an incomplete sentence.

Alt text

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hataidir 17 12 8 7 2 2 2

In russian it means: "Fire staircase. Attention of security alarm" or "Fire staircase. Pay attention to security alarm"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Oliwia 20 19 17 14 12 8 2

I love these. I often see a lot myself while travelling.

I also like the signs or shop/restaurant names that mean something in another language, and that make you laugh alone... Last sign I've seen: "Kakadu" in Poland. That (phonetically) means "soft poop" in French.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1155

I with I could find the sign in a Finnish hospital, in which all the different parts of the hospital had their correct names in Finnish on the left side of the sign, and all the names in Swedish on the right side just said "same in Swedish". Although this was more of a lack of translation error.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Coby_Hughes 24 1

Mazda had a two seater sports car that was popular throughout Europe called the "MR2". But in French it is "M R Deux", which when said quickly means something quite different.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ravalentis 25 7 5

The Coca-Cola name in China was first read in China as "Kekoukela", meaning "Bite the wax tadpole" or "Female horse stuffed with wax", depending on the dialect. Coke then researched 40,000 characters to find a phonetic equivalent "kokou kole", translating into "Happiness in the mouth".

I laughed at that one, even though it's not true!

And this one:

When Parker Pen marketed a ball-point pen in Mexico, its ads were supposed to have read: "It won't leak in your pocket and embarrass you". The company thought that the word "embarazar" (= to impregnate) meant "to embarrass", so the ad read: "It won't leak in your pocket and make you pregnant".

When American Airlines wanted to advertise its new leather first class seats in the Mexican market, it translated its "Fly in leather" campaign literally, which meant "Fly naked" (vuela en cuero) in Spanish.

In a Belgrade hotel elevator: "To move the cabin, push button for wishing floor. If the cabin should enter more persons, each one should press a number of wishing floor. Driving is then going alphabetically by national order."

In the lobby of a Moscow hotel across from the Russian Orthodox monastery: "You are welcome to visit the cemetery where famous Russian composers, artists, and writers are buried daily except Thursday."

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Arnauti 25 25 25 21 20 18 16 12 11 11 11 9 9 3 2 2 99

I don't think I'm the only Swede who will never forget the Honda Fitta. They had to rename it Honda Fit http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Honda_Fit
I hope I'm not breaking site policy by posting this word, lol.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

As long as it isn't in English. But lol!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Oliwia 20 19 17 14 12 8 2

I just thought of something that has always made me laugh: The škoda brand. In polish, "szkoda" means "what a shame".

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

I'll never get over Ford Kuga. I'd love to know how Ford came up with that one. "Kuga" literally means "plague" in Croatian. "Hey guys, check out my new Black Death! You wanna go for a ride?" :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

putinpresident 13 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 11 11 11 9 9 8 8 8 8 6 5 3 3 2

I don't think some of them were actually disasters, they seem like a publicity stunt for me.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tammaiya 19 14 2

Last time I was in Kyoto, near Kiyomizudera, I saw one of those "you are here" type maps you get in tourist areas on the street. It did indeed have the equivalent of "you are here" written in Japanese, but the English said "are you here" which I found charmingly existential.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ludwigzhou 25 25 15 11 10 10 7 6 6 6 6 5 5

Pepsi story is an urban myth. No one has ever given any proof of the existence of that ad in Chinese.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OnesimusUnbound 25 23 17 11 1084

Interesting article on snopes.com regarding the mistranslation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ludwigzhou 25 25 15 11 10 10 7 6 6 6 6 5 5

Thanks! so it is indeed an urban myth then.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OnesimusUnbound 25 23 17 11 1084

More likely

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

springenkasteel 10 10 8 4 2 1

One of the prize ones in English: "Nothing sucks like an Electrolux." facepalm Idioms suck. : / Heh.
Which reminds me of a wonderful (not translated) ad for Ritter Sport bars I believe: "Für Beißer, nicht für Lutscher"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

160 "Der Tropfen, der das Fass zum Überlaufen bringt."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1305233>

Translation: The straw that breaks the camel's back.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

156 Comments

ArvinDhMani 25 9 6 5 2

This lesson has taught me that i first need to learn English idioms!

432ReplyGive Lingot9•2 years ago

natii.sc 14 5 3 2 19

I actually liked the literal translation better. We use it commonly in Spanish; La gota que derramo el vaso.

77ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

maripositalinda 21 13

Same here: La gota que derramó la copa. :')

17ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

TrulsLunde 9 8

And in norwegian: "That was the drop that made it overflow"

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

MarkDjinij 18 12

Same thing for Italian

5ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

duipapilla 10

oh so that is what it means? Now I understand!

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Abicelo 20 11 7 7 4 882

I thought the same

3ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

German606 9

It means that there are tons of bales on the camel's back, but when you put one more on, the camel's back breaks.

19ReplyGive Lingot1•11 months ago

OnkelD 25 22 12 12 10 8 8 8 5 3 3 611

Actually, in literal terms, it means the drop that makes the barrel overflow.

76ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

TanBharadwaj 9 2

Danke!

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Pokeboss 11 2 2 2

Ohh I didn't get it at first.

4ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Aucx57 13

one tiny, weightless thing after another, till one makes it go past the limit is what they all mean

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

lena21 12 8 4

ich auch! ;)

16ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RitchyEmbo 8 8

So do I

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

petkoo2 14 12 9 7 7 6

So do I (Ez volt az utolsó csepp a pohárban! [HUN, drop & cup])

13ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

thisisregi 8 2

Hálás vagyok a magyar megfeleltetésért. Se angolul se németül nem fogtam fel ezt az idiómát :D

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sprosser87 14

I think it's absurd that "The drop that brings the barrel to overflowing" is not accepted.

97ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OliverLaxt 12 3 3 2 2

I have similar feelings on "Es ist noch kein Meister vom Himmel gefallen." The direct translation makes enough sense, so why not associate it with that phrase. I think even an invented phrase that was grammatically correct but covered the same core concepts would work better; like "No man is born a master." or "Skill does not fall from the heavens." ohh - or "Their is no master heaven-made". It seems to me bizarre not to take advantage of the similarities between english and german. It's like translating "Angst verleiht Flügel." to "The fearful worker is the faster worker." rather than "Fear gives a man wings." or even better "Angst lends wings.", then the reader can see, word for word, the meaning: Angst, like Angst (slight fearful pressure); ver - leiht, like lend; Flügel, like flying. I just don't get it.

58ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CoalyBay 8 4

Same thing here!!

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ixionpearl 11 6 5

this problem occurs with great frequency for every language on this site

i think that it would be great if we could include the direct literal meaning and then maybe also the equivalent because what good are these phrases to me if i can't understand them by their culturally intended terms

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

split tongue 25 16 13 8 8 3 2 2 2 451

Same here, not being a native English speaker, "the drop that overflows the barrel" makes a lot of more sense for me, as we have something similar in our language. At least, substitute that camel with a horse or ass :) or something more domestic...hehe. But well, the lesson is about learning English idioms...

21ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JohnGadway 19 10 4 3

It was suggested as a possible translation today, March 7th 2016

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Zakrah 9 8

That's good. Using equivalent phrases instead of literal translations just isn't that practical for actually learning the German phrases.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

quentin.huon 13

Very true. The way it is now, we don't associate the right English words to the German ones. We should be able to give a completely literal sentence as a correct definition so we can increase our vocabulary as well, which is what we need more, rather than linking it to an English idiom.

5ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

realmdrakkar 19 8 7

Agreed. The German idioms make great sense on their own - why try to tie them to English idioms that translate differently?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JudithProctor 8

I wish they would give us both the idiom and the exact translation. I want to know the grammar and vocabulary, but I also want the idiomatic phrase in the language I am learning.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

lynneo 13 3

I agree, and well-said, quentin.huon. Learning correct vocabulary should be the goal. I agree, and I'm a native English speaker and teacher! Plus, there is no pre-teaching of the advanced vocabulary we encounter in these idioms, so any accurate literal translation should be accepted -- or idioms should not even be introduced at this low acquisition level of the language.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Uyterschout 17 16 15 13 13 9 8 5 4

It's not absurd; 'to overflowing' isn't proper English.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

milanbergh 11 7 6 4

In Serbian: "Kap koja je prelila čašu" :)

23ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Radmilce 12 2

yes, in Macedonian we also say "Kapkata koja ja preli chashata" which literally means "The drop that made the cup overflow"

18ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

StasKravch 14 11 10

Same in russian

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sonkayabusra 9

"bardağı taşıran son damla" in turkish.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

magikdansen 13 11 11 3

Same in Dutch: De druppel die de emmer doet overlopen.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LinhEmo 12 3

Yes, in Vietnamese it is "giọt nước làm tràn ly" which also literally means "the drop that makes the glass overflow". It is quite similar to "the drop that makes the barrel overflow" in German. I can see the similarity of many languages here.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flest 13 4

Same in Swedish

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

luanamoreno66 10 8

In portuguese is the same idea: the water drop

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hecknado 17 6 2

Also, literally this says, "the drop that the barrel's overflow brings"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

parzhitsky 13 11 9 6

In Ukrainian this proverb spells like "Остання крапля у чаші терпіння" [ostann'a krapl'a u chashee terpinn'a] — "The last droplet in a cup of patience".

14ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Clairs88 11 10 9

Also, in Italian, "La goccia che ha fatto traboccare il vaso" = "the drop that spilled the cup"

13ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AnnabelleG447573 6 5

Yeah! Same in french : "c'est la goutte d'eau qui fait déborder le vase" ! :-)

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TanBharadwaj 9 2

In Hindi its "Ab aur sahaa nahi jaata"(अब और सहा नहीं जाता) = Cannot tolerate (this) anymore.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

MaryjkaB 8 7 7 6

In Polish: "Kropla, która przepełnia czarę" = "The drop that makes the cup overflow". And BTW I really love Serbian and Macedonian - they both sound gorgeous and I'm glad that I understand quite much from them :).

10ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mechanigenic 15 3

In Turkish the equivalent of this is "Bardağı taşıran son damla." Literally meaning is "The drop that overflows the glass."

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AdamMasters 5 3 3 2

Woohoo! First Idiom that I guessed the right English equivalent on!

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

vinicius.i6 12 6

O equivalente em português seria "a gota d'água"... Até parece, já que palha (straw) e gota d'água são coisas quase insignificantes, mas que com o tempo pesam ou transbordam!

The equivalent in Portuguese would be "the water drop" ... It seems, as straw (straw) and water drop are almost insignificant things, but that over time overweigh or overflow!

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

belzinhafarias 18 15 11 9 7 6 4 3 2 18

yes. the equivalent to "a gota d'água" is "the final straw"

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Eljen.az.Adam 12

Why is there a "der" as well as a "das"?

7ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

AsafH 24 10 9

The second 'der' here is the relative pronoun, referring to the drop. If you'd look at the literal translation: "The drop, who/that brings the barrel to overflow", the second 'der' is translated to 'who' or 'that'

18ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rosella99 14 10 4

wow... the hints really confused me! Usually I can piece it together, but this one was tricky

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AsafH 24 10 9

So the literal meaning would be "The drop that grasping too much brings"?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kasra 25 13 10 6 5 5 5 2 1305

The hints are wrong on this one. the verb "fassen" means to grasp; but that has nothing to do with "das Fass", which means barrel, keg. Überlaufen is overflow. So literally this means "The drop that brings the barrel to [the point of] overflow."

111ReplyGive Lingot7•3 years ago

charityjenkins 13 9 4

Yes, I got marked correctly by writing "The drop that makes the barrel overflow" :)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AsafH 24 10 9

Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dunk999 21 19 15 14 5 2 2 2 2

This is more helpful than the equivalent English phrase. Now I know what fassen means and what Überlaufen means.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ich_lerne_gerne 25 21 8 7 6 6 4 3 3 3 2 558

Oh I don't know about "nothing to do with 'das Fass'". Hypothetically, isn't it possible that whoever invented the barrel might have come with it in efforts to find something capable of "grasping" a lot of liquid (for lack of a better word)? -- if they had been english the new thing might have been called a water grasper. I like knowing that possible connection between words --- even if I may be grasping at straws myself -- it helps!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Nadaa_Venus 7 3 2

That's also a very well known idiom in Arabic "البعير ظهر كسرت التى القشة"

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vinicius.i6 12 6

Nice, I don't even imagine how to read these characters! (I'm Brazillian)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rini.james 15 6 5

Lol right

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RitchyEmbo 8 8

In french I think we'd say "c'est la goutte d'eau qui fait déborder le vase " which literally means it's the droplet that overfill the bowl

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ovidiu.hut 8

Same in romanian. "Picatura care umple paharul"

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

YvesOlivierrr 15 8

"The drop that overflows the barrel" and yet duolingo doesn't accept it.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

andrewzeidell 9 7 2

It will accept: "The drop which causes the barrel to overflow"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nickB_617 9

Duo, teach me the literal translation instead of translating it to another idiom in my language.

3ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

cagatayyuksel 14

In Turkish, we say "Bardağı taşıran son damla" which roughly means last drop to overflow the glass.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

UriyaBA 11 10 10 3

And in Hebrew: "הגמל גב את ששבר הקש"

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

OnkelD 25 22 12 12 10 8 8 5 3 3 611

Um, yeah! What he said! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

petertrainor 16

Finally finished Idioms after more than 10 attempts! Don't know how anyone can translate 'colourful dogs' or 'doves on the roof' based on the clues

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

G-Shumway 25 124

The hints are almost useless for idioms since they are hints for words. I did correctly guess "A bird in the hand ..." from "doves on the roof" but from the context of the phrase, not the hints. :-)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SirOrrin 13
waste of lingots if you ask me...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

helicera 16
Really? It doesn't accept "which" instead of "that"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AsafH 24 10 9
Idioms are usually set phrases where you don't really rephrase it, even though the two phrasings are identical in literal meaning.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KristyJade 11
I put "The mouse that sunk the boat"

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

CassieBrenda 10 8
English: The mouse that sank the boat.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sagher 16
wow. what is the word by word translation of this sentence

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MuhammadSRashed 14 14 13 10 10 6 6 6 5 5 5 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 2 2 4
"The drop that gets the parallel to the overflow"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Tengger 13 3
I tried "the drop that spills the cup" but it didn't allow it

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Heather.33 14 4 3
I thought there was another word for "das Fass". I figured what it meant but was still trying to translate it and ended up with "the drop whose grasp brought overflow".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ilmolleggi 19 17 16 15 14 12 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2
This translates almost perfectly to the italian "La goccia che fa traboccare il vaso", the drop that spills the vase.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ana720237 8

Also in Spanish "la gota que colma el vaso"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dempl 14 11 6 5 2

I said "the drop that overflows the cup" , I thought that was (a sort of) an English idiom as well?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

savourtardis 20 18 12 9 7 7 6 5 4 4 3 3 2 2 2 827

Um, no, it's not really idiomatic in my experience. And while it's possible that other countries' English might vary, I probably would not use "overflow" transitively--that is, with an object-- in this context. (I might speak of the contents overflowing the vessel or a river its banks but not in the sense of the subject causing the object to overflow)

But I do think this makes more sense than the English scenario of straw on the camel's back. How common are camels in English speaking countries, anyway? ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sinenox 8 8 7 6

I'm glad that we can at least see the real words, but it's frustrating to mistranslate things in to English idioms that are all borrowed anyway. I would rather learn the idioms of the language I'm learning!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

andrewzeidell 9 7 2

The drop which causes the barrel to overflow!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MuhamadHeg 14 3

The english version of it matches the Arabic's perfectly, the only difference is that we say it in past tense form, so it's more like "the straw that broke the camel's back" , otherwise the german verison of Drops and barrel is brand new to me !!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

G-Shumway 25 124

The English is more common in the past tense as well. But, as a translation of the German, they put it this way.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MuhamadHeg 14 3

Thanks for the tip !

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jennifer43079 16

This lesson is pretty much worthless without the literal translation of the sayings.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Katpple 15 11

Actually what does it mean?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bersalon 25 17 4 708

It literally means: The drop that overflows the barrel. It's referring to a very small thing that 'breaks' or 'overflows' something already full of stress. The idiom "The straw that breaks the camel's back" is referring to a camel that has lots of straw (hay) on his back. The weight is overpowering, but he can bear it. However, when the last piece of straw is placed atop the pile, the entire weight crushes the camel's back.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Katpple 15 11

Danke!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bersalon 25 17 4 708

This literally translates to: The drop that overflows the barrel. Pretty interesting.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CorrieB1 8

This should also provide the literal translation! After all, that is the fun of idioms, no?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

araruney 14 13 8 7 6 6 3 2 2 2 2 2

Does this mean 'to exceed a point of something', like when in English people say i've had it up to here with you[shows above head to know i've had it plenty]. I can only relate it to my native's "Kap koja je prelila čašu" (Literally - The drop that spilled the glass...but one does not really spill the glass, rather it means that the water is spilling over/out)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RoboticRocketeer 11 8

I want it to accept, "The drop in the barrel that brings the flood." In fact, I wish this is how we said it in English, too!

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

CrystalM86 10 2 13

As a native English speaker I prefer to learn the exact translations. This expands my associative vocabulary and insures that I know and understand all the words I'm speaking.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

bmmike 9 8

This illustrates a classic problem with the translation of idioms: They often don't make any sense themselves--they may need interpretation even in their own language. To say that 'the last drop will overflow the glass' or words to that effect should be accepted, imho! If one knows 'tropfen' and 'fass', one can be totally at a loss of guessing this translates as a straw and a camel!!!! What to do if one is teaching the language????

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Jamie55977 25 14 10

I'm not sure how this helps as it's nothing like the translation!...

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

umlafoe 8 3

In Czech: "Poslední kapka." (The last drop.)

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

prastistron 8 2

"The drop that overflows the barrel", what does that mean? Non-native english speaker here

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

OnkelD 25 22 12 12 10 8 8 8 5 3 3 611

Well, I don't know if it helps a non-English speaker; but it's an idiom similar to "The straw that broke the camel's back"... a way of saying, "Ok, that is the last straw! You've gone too far!"... not the best analogy but essentially it means you've pushed things to the breaking point.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Spicykovsky 14 7 4 181

None of the words in the sentence are camel or straw, or back, or break. Besides the meaning behind the idiom there's absolutely nothing in common. Can we please maybe use this opportunity to learn German words and idioms? Nothing about camel and the straw helps me remember German words for drop and barrel, and the idiom itself, except that there's something similar somewhere.

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

DAVIDSHIN9 6

Wow, I'm a native English speaker and I didn't know what that idiom meant!

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Rosmarino5 11 10 2

I think its odd to translate 'the drop that makes the barrel overflow' into yet another idiom, when the imagery of the original expresses its meaning perfectly clearly.

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

thatsdoubled 7 5

It's using similar proverbs as the answer, but not the literal translation (which also makes sense)?!

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

jofefyzullah 16 10 9 6 1

"The drop makes the barrel overflow."

hasn't accepted pfff.... "that" is optional not vital

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Namjxxn23 8

This is quite confusing unless you really think about the literal translation

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Pac0master 9 7

It's interesting, In french we have one that goes as follow: "La goûte qui fait déborder le vase"

I've never heard of a "straw" that breaks the camel's back. We learn new things every days.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

LubaSolanova1 12

I would say the last drop make things move

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

nitmares 12

I will never get my hear round these proverbs!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

nitmares 12

I will never get my head around these proverbs the words bear no relation to the meaning!!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

NikolaMaric 10 5

This is the way I try to translate and keep original wording in this one:

The drop [, the one] which barrel to the overflow brings.

It sounds weird, but it's better mapping words and teaches me German sentence structure. Any advice/thoughts?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

EvelynJaco4 8
good one

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

AlexisAlfa19 12 9

What is the sense of this sentence? In spanish we say: "that is the drop that spilled the glass (esa es la gota que derramó el vaso). That sentence means something like that?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

velociraptor24 11 6 5 4 3 3 2 1

Clearly not the literal translation, probably my least favorite part of Duolingo is it doesn't have an option for literal translations.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

LucyGordon1 10 8

We have a book about in English - The Mouse That Sank The Boat

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

ellenrxford 13 1

the answer makes no sense, and has nothing to do with the German. The answer should resemble what the German says....that the drop makes the barrel spill over. Nothing whatsoever about a camel or his back. Please offer a better answer!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Nmangamer1 14 4

Can Tropfen be used to refer to a drop as in a fall, or is it only liquid drops?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Squonkalini 15 12 12 12 11 11 11 9 18

Duo did a good job of illustrating the power of small things (drops, straws, or in this case, repetition) in this lesson as their insistence on using this phrase four different times enabled me to learn it but almost broke my back in the process.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

realmdrakkar 19 8 7

Intriguingly, it almost made my barrel overflow.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Squonkalini 15 12 12 12 11 11 11 9 18

You know what? At the end of the lesson it appeared for a fifth time!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

jogerj 14 11 6 4

The drop that brings the barrel to an overflow

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

ThePaulGreen 13

Terrible. Teach the words then explain the idiom

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

14rfe 11 8 5

Where did our English idiom come from though? We don't even have camels!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

helicera 16

Really? It doesn't accept "which" instead of "that"?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rose_Senpai 15

What is this idiom mean? That the camel's weak?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KnightFoster 7

Said no one ever in the history of Earth.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ronkisimo 25 25 23 660

the drops that bring the bucket to overflow sear schön

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KevinValenVe 11 10 3 2 2 2

same in spanish: "la gota que rebosó la copa" though we use it in past

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

R.SiordiaD 9

*camels'

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AhmedSafwa8 13 8 3 2

same In arabic "البعير ظهر قسمت التي القشة"

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Saburosakai 9 6

In italian: La goccia che fa traboccare il vaso

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lorri761938 10 6 5 2

In the USA I've never heard use of the drop overflowing saying, although I understand it. We always say the straw that broke the camel's back.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

iselinfalk 10 6

Wouldn't it be "the camels back" and not "the camel's back"..? Wouldn't that basically mean that the camel is back?:)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JD_Jackson 17

's is a contraction for is and also shows possession. The camel's back shows that the bank we are talking about belongs to the camel. Camels without the apostrophe is the plural of camel.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

[deactivated user]

I didn't get this phrase, what does this means?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Saburosakai 9 6

It is used when someone makes something that get worse a situation. For example if I keep insulting a person, probably at the third bad word said by me I'd get punched on my face. That "third bad word" would be "Der Tropfen, der das Fass zum Überlaufen bringt" or the "The drop that brings the glass to overflowing" :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Danke, I've got it now. Is it a regular thing to say or is it used in particular areas in Germany? Sorry for asking more questions, just curious. ;D

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Saburosakai 9 6

I don't know since I'm Italian, I hope it isn't used frequently, however it's a common expression. As you can see from the comments it is used more or less in every country

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kaiser-Wilhelm 16 6 5 5 2 1
[deleted]

-1Give Lingot•10 months ago

AsafH 24 10 9

I understand it's easy to just comment but the answer for your question is already in this thread. You need to read the thread (and at least Ctrl+F) before you comment, otherwise there is just clutter.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

duolingo02468 9 7

What is this saying even supposed to mean?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RoboticRocketeer 11 8

It means a little thing pushed something past the breaking point, and had huge consequences.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

blacklord01 9 7 2

In Turkish this idiom has an accurate translation. "Bardağı taşıran son damla."

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SchwarzBart 22 14 6 6 2 595 and what's that mean?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kuldipnarain 16

An idiom is a concise sentence in any language. Here the answer though is 'Last straw' but sentence in German seems too long for just two words in English !

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Agricultura1990 23 14 13 10 9 4

Same in Greek: «Η σταγόνα που ξεχείλισε το ποτήρι» (the drop that made the glass overflow)

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CatGuardianmk1 7

what does it mean?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

cl114c0777498d 12

I said run over instead of overflow, but computer says no :(

-2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

DeutschesAlex 23 8 6 2 2
vat versus barrel?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Gao_Teng 9 8
As a Chinese, first of all,I need learn English well before learn German .

-2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

lupitafe1970 17 6 2
The drop that overflows the barrel sounds better than the camel and the straw

-2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Philip284082 9
I got a perfect scire from this thing listening to itself

-2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

ADOLFOFARIAS0 12 11 3 10
ICH VERSTEHE NICHT

-2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

SourishPradhan 8 3
I did not understand this Idiom.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

lokibragi 12 6 5
Why is keg wrong? Beer keg = beer barrel, nicht?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

161 What Are the Easiest and Hardest Tasks of Learning a Language.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3835779>

Mitchell_MT 22 14 13 13 13 8 8 7 6 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 86

I created this discussion, so I can find out what are people's easiest and hardest tasks when they're learning a language. This is my list!

EASY

Grammar: Grammar is actually easy for me personally because I think that like how the language works. I find it easy to understand it's word order an conjugations.

Pronunciation: This is easy for me because some sounds that aren't in English, like the Portuguese "j" and the Dutch "g", can be easy to learn for me.

Writing: Writing is easy for me because each letter will create a different sound. Except for some languages, but I find it easy to understand.

HARD

Vocab: This is difficult for me because you need to memorize every single word and every single meaning. And some words sound close to each other it's hard to tell the difference from them. Most of the vocab words I have trouble with are words that are prepositions, conjunctions, and adverbs. Words such as "Always, sometimes, other, before, maybe, however, etc."

Speaking: This is not the same as pronunciation, but speaking with a native speaker is difficult because you need to think, and I always take pauses in between words.

Listening: Listening is probably one the most difficult things for me to learn. Native speakers always take fast, and it's hard to understand them sometimes.

What are the easiest and hardest tasks for you to learn?

Give Lingot

12 years ago

Leave a new comment

14 Comments

bakpao 25 3 1046

It's all relative, depending on your native language and target language. Using your list:

Grammar: I find this quite challenging in German, definitely not easy at all.

Pronunciation: the pronunciation in Mandarin is an absolute nightmare.

Writing: again, Mandarin characters are insanely difficult to write.

I agree that vocabulary is consistently difficult in all languages for me. However for Spanish speakers, Portuguese vocabulary is very easy (and vice versa).

So it all depends on the languages (native and target).

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1223

Haha no.2 seriously? I can say the same about English pronunciation

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Sticking with it, listening, and grammar are the hardest part for me. For Japanese I would add culture to that list. Knowing what to say when is all about grasping the culture behind the context. Japanese is so hard but I love it T_T

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rewjeo 14 2 679

さあ、日本の文化と西洋の文化は少し違うらしいのに、日本の文法はあまり難しくないと思う。ドイツ語の文法の方はとっても複雑だよ。(スペイン語の文法はどうだ?)私の意見は日本語の一番難しいことが漢字です。漢字が多すぎるねえ。あっ、そして敬語。敬語は馬鹿だ。

(Wow, it's been months since I've used my Japanese. That took a lot longer to write than it should have, 笑。 And I'm still not 100% sure on all of my grammar in there. Oh, and on the topic of culture, probably not everything I said in there is entirely culturally appropriate.)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

That is more Japanese than I can speak at present! I have forgotten all of it in just 2 years! (I can forget languages very quickly, even though I used to tutor Japanese and was a teaching assistant in university!) But, I will be picking it up again once the English for Japanese speakers course starts up. :)

However, Wilvandal is a very pleasant person and might be willing to converse with you via Activity. Though, I haven't heard from them much since they started working on the Chinese course, so I can't guarantee they'll have time. It's worth a try though! :)

EDIT: As for Spanish, I am at level 24 but have managed to forget how to do the verb conjugations/when to use them for the last 1/3 of the tree because I stopped using it much >_<) But, being in the Spanish Book Club is helping me get back to studying.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mitchell_MT 22 14 13 13 13 8 8 7 6 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 86

I've started to gain an interest in Japanese.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

queendeeny 25 8 6 6

For me, listening and speaking are the hardest. I think speaking gets a lot easier as listening improves.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rewjeo 14 2 679

I generally agree with your list, but it really does depend on the language. For instance, German grammar is a pain. I get a basic hold on it pretty quickly, but it still takes a while to recall exactly which of the 48 different scenarios this is for adjective declension. Compare that to Japanese, which lacks gender, case, and declension entirely and has very little verb conjugation. Japanese pronunciation is also easier than German for me. On the other hand, Japanese vocabulary, besides some loanwords, has no connection to English vocabulary at all, while there are obvious similarities in German.

I've also generally found reading/listening to German to be easier than reading/listening to Japanese, while I can write/speak Japanese much more easily than German (even accounting for the fact that I have been studying Japanese for seven years and German for four weeks). In this case, I think it's because German is superficially similar to English and has a complex grammar system "under the hood" so to speak, so while I can parse the information quickly, it takes me longer to figure out exactly how to express myself. In contrast, Japanese is set up very, very differently from English, but is very simple, so I can figure out what the correct way to say something is, but my brain isn't used to parsing information the way Japanese demands.

(of course, this is all excluding kanji)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

-Lauren- 19 7 7 4

For Spanish I'm pretty much the opposite of you. Speaking and listening are not my biggest difficulties, but I still am not great at them. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

heqamaat 22 10 7 4

For me grammar is the hardest I think. It starts out kind of easy and like the regular rules aren't hard to learn but really getting the nuances of the language and the parts that are difficult to translate... sometimes I worry those will always be out of reach to me.

Listening is also a skill I definitely need to get up to speed as it were.

Vocab I don't really worry about at all because I think it's something you pick up by using the language and eventually it sinks. Eventually you start remembering not only words but like whole groups of words from their patterns. For example if I know bunch of adjectives in Spanish I know the pattern for turning an adjective into is adverb is feminine form+mente most of the time... lento becomes lentamente and rapido is rapidamente which means even if I've never encountered a particular adverb before if I know the adjectives I can still understand it and vice versa. I've never found it that practical to learn vocab any other way eventually it just starts sticking for me.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Starting to speak is the most difficult for me.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hdcanis 22 17 3

I have pretty much the same points as you. Of course difficulty of grammar varies from language to language but it seems that I pick it more easily than many...of course there is the general (amateur) interest in linguistics and how languages work, and possibly something like mathematical/engineering thinking, picking things apart and then putting them back together...

And I think I get pronunciation reasonably well too, at least I have been complimented on that with several languages, it might be difficult to string together sensible sentences but the delivery is clear :)

And of course if I have grammar down, a dictionary and enough time I can write reasonably well.

But vocabulary takes effort, and especially those "little words". Forming basic sentences, "the book is on the table, the book is red" etc is still manageable but to tune those sentences so that it sounds like real human expression and not some old computer program...

And speaking and listening. I assume these will just take time and practice, but they are hard.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

benseac 11 7 7 3

Sticking to it is probably the hardest thing for me to do. Once I get going, learning the target language is challenging but not difficult. It's getting over the initial hump of sticking with learning the language after the newness factor of the language wears off that I have the most problems with.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Xneb 21 20 13 10 6 2 2 2 15

For me it depends on the language, in Danish grammar is easiest and pronunciation is hardest, but in German pronunciation is easier and the grammar harder

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

162 What is the difference between es and está?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/16271715>

french909 14 8 7 4

I know that both of these mean "is", but I don't understand the difference. I often get things wrong in lessons, and I can't find a satisfactory answer anywhere else online. Can someone help me?

Give Lingot

38 months ago

Leave a new comment

21 Comments

DragonPolyglot 21 15 12 10 7 6 6 4 4 3 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 2

"Es" is a conjugation of the verb "ser", which means "to be". The catch is that ser is used for things that are permanent or descriptive.

Examples with ser:

I am a shy person; Soy una persona tímida. (description)

He is from America; Él es americano (this is both a description and a permanent thing, since he was born in America, therefore he will always be American)

"Está" is a conjugation of the verb "estar", also meaning "to be", but it is for temporary things like location.

Examples with estar:

I am happy; Estoy feliz (right now you are happy, but five minutes later you might be angry)

She is at the beach; Ella está en la playa (She is at the beach now, but she might be at home later)

Understanding the difference between them can avoid you making confusing mistakes like this:

El perro es feliz and El perro está feliz both translate to "the dog is happy", but es (while probably not 100% grammatically correct in Spanish) makes it sound like the dog has a happy personality, while está makes it sound like the dog happy right now.

An mnemonic that helped me as a beginner was "HELP DO-IT", the word "HELP" was for estar (Health, Emotion, Location, Present-progressive) and "DO IT" was for ser (Description, Origin, Identity, Time).

Hope this helps you.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

french909 14 8 7 4

Thank you so much. This helped me a lot!

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

rspreng 24

The permanent/temporary thing is waaaay overdone and can lead to confusion. Locations need not be temporary. The location of Mount Everest -- pretty permanent -- uses estar. The location of an event -- which can change in a moment -- uses ser. Being dead -- a pretty permanent condition -- uses estar. Professions use ser, even though I will not be a teacher forever. Soy joven = I am young, even though that will change.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

DragonPolyglot 21 15 12 10 7 6 6 4 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 2

Yes, that is true, but the general outline helps beginners a lot. That is another reason I shared the mnemonic, because it shows when to use each without the permanent/temporary conditions mentioned. You also have to know how speakers of the language think; death is considered a part of life in many Spanish-speaking countries and so the condition of being dead is not seen as a permanent loss but a gateway to the next stage of life. And even though an event itself might last for only a moment, it can affect other events forever. That's one of the reasons language is tricky at times and breaks "rules" or patterns set for itself.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

thanvi06 6 2

Take a look at this website: <http://www.spanishdict.com/answers/208967/what-is-the-difference-between-es-and-esta>

2ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

RavenTexas 7

Ok, so first with es. You would use es when you are for example, like "Is that _?" So like "Es que?" is when you ask an is that or is it or something like that. And with esta, you usually use that when you ask How are you (Como estas) or something. I am not very helpful so sorry if this makes no sense.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

SteffiBookworm 19 16 13 13 11 11 435

Please have a look at this: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/14676933>

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

french909 14 8 7 4

I don't think this helped me understand. It doesn't talk about está.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

SteffiBookworm 19 16 13 13 11 11 435

It does, es is the third singular form in present tense of the verb ser, está is the same form of the verb estar...

The rules in the other discussion for the usage of ser and estar are applicable for all forms and tenses. Do you have a link to a page with Spanish verb conjugation tables?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

french909 14 8 7 4

What is third singular form?!

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

SteffiBookworm 19 16 13 13 11 11 435

He or she is

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

SteffiBookworm 19 16 13 13 11 11 435

Please see word reference for the conjugation tables

<http://www.wordreference.com/conj/EsVerbs.aspx>

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

french909 14 8 7 4

I didn't see es or está anywhere on the page.

0Give Lingot•8 months ago

SrSchuster 18 14 4 2

Yo soy el anfitrión de la fiesta. - I am the host of the party. // Yo estoy en la fiesta. - I am in the party.

Espero que haberte ayudado. Salu2.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

Juancito1948 25 24 13 469

I posted this resource on ser and estar a while ago. It should clear it up for you.

http://jonsenglishsite.info/Jon%27s%20Spanish%20Site/Repase%20y%20escriba%20PDF/ser_y_esta_r_avanz.pdf

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

gardenncanwithme 7

I thought Esta is this. Take for example: Esta es mi arroz. It means this is my rice.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

SrSchuster 18 14 4 2

Es mejor decir "Este es mi plato de arroz". Porque si decís "este es mi arroz", estás dando a entender que es un solo grano. Acordate que arroz es incontable. Queda mejor un plato de arroz o un paquete de arroz. Abrazo.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

french909 14 8 7 4

Esta has different spellings. Esta does mean this, but está means is.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

SteffiBookworm 19 16 13 13 11 11 435

Has the same characters , but the accent indicates a different meaning

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

SteffiBookworm 19 16 13 13 11 11 435

Este, esta = this

Ese, esa = that

Ser AND estar = verbs => to be

Please correct me if I'm wrong ;-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

DragonPolyglot 21 15 12 10 7 6 6 4 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2

Without the accent, esta does mean this for feminine nouns (rice is masculine, by the way; el arroz, so you use este). With the accent (está), it means "it is/he is/she is".

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

163 Der Zug vs. Die Bahn?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1014402>

eng_omran_77 14

What is the difference between Der Zug and Die Bahn? When do we use each?

Give Lingot

193 years ago

Leave a new comment

9 Comments

jtsauls 20 9 8 4

Umm, I'm not really sure that is very helpful cbjj. Anyone can link to a dictionary... If you can't add insight then I don't know the point of responding.

As I understand it 'Zug' is the physical train. Like the big metal thing. 'Bahn' can mean that and also the train in a more abstract sense.

For example: "Hier kommt der Zug" and "Hier kommt die Bahn" would both be appropriate if you are standing on the train tracks and the train is coming. But "Ich hasse die Bahn" means "I hate the train (system)," while "Ich hasse den Zug" means "I hate the train," like a specific one, so people wouldn't really say (maybe they would say "Ich hasse diesen Zug;" "I hate this train"). In the end 'die Bahn' is far more common than 'Zug.' Germany's train system is called DB Bahn:
<http://www.bahn.de/p/view/index.shtml>

56ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

eng_omran_77 14

That's a very nice explanation, jtsauls. Thank you.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

catascouts 8

Yup. Makes sense.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

Hier kommt der Zug, not hier kommt den Zug. Der Zug is subject (Nominativ). Ihre Erklärung ist klar

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jtsauls 20 9 8 4

Thanks for the catch.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Wermoeuwe 12 11 9 7 6 4 3 2

Der Zug is the engine or motor coach with the belonging waggons. For example »I wait for the train.« (in German »Ich warte auf den Zug.) Die Bahn is a short term for railway, tram and metro. It's also the short for »Die deutsche Bahn« the name of the railway company in Germany.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lennixander 6 5 3 2

Die Bahn is the railway, der Zug is the train.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

164 Portuguese tenses - what do they mean?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1483888>

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

This lesson has created a lot of confusion and doubts about what the Portuguese tenses should mean, not only the "present perfect" (which has been given a wrong name, it's called "pretérito perfeito composto"), but others as well.

So here are some of them regarding non-conditional past tenses and how to compare them with English tenses:

Please note that using time adverbs like "sempre", "durante" and others can twist the meanings of the tenses and use constructions that seems not to follow the general idea.

Simple tenses:

Pretérito perfeito (Ex: falei)

Portuguese: Past perfect. -- English: Simple past / present perfect

Time referred by the sentence: past

Occurrences: Single

Done and finished in the time referred by the sentence

Idea: time spot/point in past

In Portuguese, the past perfect is not composed with an auxiliary verb, it's a simple verb past,

Thus, it matches the English simple past. And since there is no Portuguese option for "present perfect" (see below), it also matches the English present perfect.

A good idea is to picture a time spot/point in past, focusing the conclusion of the action. It doesn't carry the continuity idea, nor a "time room" idea.

I have done my job = I did my job = Eu fiz o meu trabalho

Pretérito imperfeito (Ex: falava)

Portuguese: Imperfect past -- English: past continuous / past habit or routine (used to)

Time referred by the sentence: past

Occurrences: single or unknown

State in time referred by the sentence: unfinished / taking place

State in present: finished

Idea: time room or continuity in past

The "perfect" word in tenses means that the action is "concluded/done/finished". Then, the imperfect past is used to represent a not finished action in the past. Then it has a "continuous" idea. But it stays completely in the past. The action does not continue to the present.

It's interesting to picture a time room idea in the past. The focus of this tense is not a spot in time, but a time room where the action used to occur/was occurring.

Eu tomava banho quando ela ligou - I was taking a shower when she called

Eu corria muito naquela rua - I used to run a lot in that street.

Pretérito mais-que-perfeito (Ex: falara - no accent)

Portuguese: More than perfect past -- English: past perfect / simple past

Time referred by the sentence: past

Occurrences: single

State in time referred by the sentence: done and finished before

This tense is rarely used nowadays, but should someone get interested, here it goes.

More than perfect means it is perfect in the past. It's the past in the past.

Imagine a sentence that talks about a past time.

While the past perfect indicates an action done and finished at the time referred by the sentence, the more than perfect past indicates an action done and finished before the time of the sentence.

Ontem ele destruiu o carro que comprara antes = yesterday he destroyed the car that he had bought before.

.

Composite tenses:

(*)Pretérito perfeito composto (Present TER + past participle --- Ex: tenho falado)

(*)This is what Duolingo calls "present perfect", because its structure is the same as English present perfect, but that name doesn't apply in Portuguese.

Portuguese: Composite past perfect - English: present perfect continuous

Time referred by the sentence: present and past continuously

Occurrences: unknown / many

State in present: many finished occurrences / occurrences might continue to happen.

Besides the "perfect" word, this tense doesn't look very "perfect". It describes an habit or a routine that has been taking place and still takes place in the present. A recurring action.

A very good way to understand this tense is to add "lately" at the end of a sentence, to remind it's an habit that started somewhere in the past and hasn't been gone yet.

So it's a series of "perfect"/finished actions that have been repeating.

Tenho chegado cedo = I have been arriving early (and I still arrive early)

Tenho feito muita coisa = I have been doing a lot of things (and I still do them)

If you are interested in knowing more about how would the "present perfect" be translated into portuguese, take a look here: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/12292400>

Pretérito mais-que-perfeito composto (Imperfect past TER + past participle --- Ex: tinha falado)

Portuguese: composite more than perfect past - English: past perfect

Time referred by the sentence: past

Occurrences: single

State in time referred by the sentence: done and finished before

Fortunately, this is a perfect match. A single action that had been finished in the past.

It's commonly used when the state in present is undone, the action had been done but somehow it was destroyed or undone.

Eu tinha feito tudo ontem - I had done everything yesterday (might suggest those things were undone after that)

Eu já tinha feito tudo ontem - I had already done everything yesterday. (true past in past meaning)

That "undone" idea comes from of a common question that appears when one uses the "imperfect past": "Tinha? Não tem mais? - You had/used to have? Don't have anymore?"

.

Composite tenses using gerund:

Present VIR + gerund (Ex: venho falando)

English: present perfect continuous

Time referred by the sentence: present and past continuously

Occurrences: single continuous or many

State in time referred by the sentence: started in the past, still being done in the present

Sometimes people use this tense with the same meaning of the Portuguese fake present perfect (pretérito perfeito composto), many occurrences that have been taking place and might still continue.

But this one can also be used for a single action that has been continuously done and hasn't been finished yet. A long term action.

Ele vem fazendo um bom trabalho - He has been doing a good job (he still does a good job)

Eu venho falando isso há muito tempo - I've been saying this for a long time

Imperfect past VIR + gerund (Ex: vinha falando)

English: past perfect continuous

Time referred by the sentence: past continuously

Occurrences: single continuous or many

State in time referred by the sentence: being continuously done

State in present: finished / not done anymore

And finally (sorry for that big post)...

The tense that matches the English past perfect continuous. It represents a single or a group of actions that had been continuously done in the past, but ceased being done in the past too. So it doesn't extend to the present.

Ele vinha fazendo um bom trabalho - He had been doing a good job (but doesn't anymore)

Go back to the Portuguese Help Index:

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6331998>

Give Lingot27

483 years ago

Leave a new comment

25 Comments

victorsabato 7

I'm not a grammar expert, but those "VIR + gerund" are just gerund.

Gerund sentences may have auxiliary verbs: ESTAR, ANDAR, IR, VIR.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

Yes....I thought they would have a name, since other composites have their own.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Davu 25 25

Isn't "VIR + gerund" an example of a "locução verbal" (verbal expression) or "conjugação perifrástica" (periphrastic conjugation)? This list comes from a Portuguese source:

<http://www.notapositiva.com/resumos/portugues/conjugacaoperifrastica.htm>

Would you make any changes if you were presenting the composite tenses described in the link to students of Brazilian Portuguese? Perhaps you'd replace some instances of "a + infinitive" with the gerund, for example. If you think it's worthwhile, and you can find the time, it would be really helpful if you could write one of your guides on this topic as you've made a great start with "VIR + gerund".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

Perhaps they are.....but I can't really say it now.... "conjugação perifrástica" is something I had never heard of before, although "locução verbal" is a common thing.

I'm afraid all compound conjugations are "locuções verbais", but I would need to study more to know those quite well.

I'm not sure about "making changes". About what exactly?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Davu 25 25

Thank you for looking at this. I did mention the kind of changes I thought might be needed. Because that document was written by a Portuguese it is not easy to spot when "a + infinitive" is essential and when it is simply a preference and the gerund could be used instead. I know that Brazilian Portuguese can probably accept both styles but I also know it has a strong preference for the gerund in many situations. For example, one entry in that list is:

Acontecimento simultâneo (estar a, ir a + infinitivo) Ex: Ia a sair quando o telefone tocou.
Because the gerund is not given as an option I'm not sure whether "Ia saindo quando o telefone tocou" would be more usual in Brazil or whether that means something subtly different from the version given.

I now recall a discussion where a Brazilian attempted to list all the Portuguese tenses and he singled out a set he called "conjugações perifrásticas". You should be able to spot the list here:
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1240494>

That made me think this set was special but I was obviously mistaken because there is an even longer list here:

<http://www.recantodasletras.com.br/gramatica/1810903>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

We would still prefer "ia saindo", but really "estava saindo" sounds more natural.

I think (at first) that there is no "essential a+infinitive". Except, of course, for the "verbs that ask for that preposition", such as:

Começar a + infinitive = Start to + verb

Vir a + infinitiv = Come to + verb

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

Most of those "perifrásticas" just seem like special cases, compared to modal, prepositional and phrasal verbs.

I'm not sure I would add them to a conjugation topic unless as "very particular cases".

The "gerúndio" ones seem more general though.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

And now (I think) I understand:

In that list you gave, I would change the "a + infinitive" for "gerúndios". (Except in "começar a")

Ando lendo = I've been reading lately

la saindo = Was leaving / Was about to leave

Vem lendo = Has been reading

Vinha lendo = Had been reading

And that's all.

1Give Lingot1•1 year ago

paulconsul 16 9 5

Thanks for the great discussion!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Brando727 12 11 5

Aren't there tenses Brazilians tend to drop and replace them with a different tense?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

No, they are very common, except the "pretérito mais-que-perfeito".

These are the ones they prefer: (at least in Rio)

(very common) Pretérito perfeito - single action done in the past

(very common) Pretérito imperfeito - with a "used to/not anymore" meaning

(common) Pretérito perfeito composto - to speak about habits/routines

(common) Pretérito mais-que-perfeito composto - to talk about past in past or things that got undone after done.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

Oh....I think I misread your comment.....

Yes.

It's common to replace "pretérito perfeito composto" with present "estar + gerund":

Tem feito muito frio ultimamente -- Está fazendo muito frio ultimamente = It's been very cold lately

Ele tem chegado cedo todos os dias -- Ele está chegando cedo todos os dias = He's been arriving early every day.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Thanks. In Whitlam's book, the naming of the tenses are confusing, as he does not use the Portuguese terms.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

manosdefie 14 12 7 3 3 1

another [English] name for "past perfect" is "pluperfect" (which literally means "more than perfect")

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

Ah, interesting! I've seen that name, but didn't know it was the "past perfect".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

saschambaer 12 6 5 5 4

I think it comes from the latin Plusquamperfectum (literally Morethanperfect). Plusquamperfekt is also the name of the past perfect in German, which loves to steal grammatical terms from Latin.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

If you look closely, English, German and all romance languages share exactly (or almost) the same conjugation system. Endings vary a lot, but the idea is the same.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

saschambaer 12 6 5 5 4

One would certainly hope so, considering they're all from the same language family and have been in contact a lot.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Indo-European_languages

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Standard_Average_European

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

mahogany1981 11 8

thanks a lot danmoller. i've found this very helpful!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RexHarawa

excellent post!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KevinWnuk 17 12

Thanks a lot, this is exactly what I have been looking for regarding tenses. I have bookmarked this page.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

no.name.42 25 25 25 14 13 10 10 8 7 7 5 4 3 3 912

Obrigado, tenho aprendido português de espanhol e isso é muito útil.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

juanlingo4 10 5

I have a book here that is talking about the Perfeito composto. Is this the same as the Pretérito perfeito composto that you described here?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Davu 25 25

That seems very likely, the only other tense that could be called "perfeito composto" is the subjunctive version which uses the present subjunctive of "ter" ("tenha" etc).

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bfeazell 21 3 11

Good summary. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

165 Duolingo now translating BuzzFeed and CNN

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/954969>

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 468

This week we're excited to announce partnerships with BuzzFeed and CNN to have their content translated by our community of language learners.

As you know, Duolingo is committed to providing free language education for the world. From the beginning, our plan to finance the platform has been to have our students translate real-world documents as they practice their foreign language skills. We like this model because it's a mutually beneficial arrangement: students receive high-quality, completely free language education, and organizations get translation services powered by the students. Today's announcement that two major publishers are financing our operation by translating their content with us is a significant milestone in keeping Duolingo free forever.

Over the last few weeks, our native Spanish, Portuguese and French speakers learning English have been working together to translate BuzzFeed and CNN articles while practicing their English skills. All of these articles have been published in the international versions of BuzzFeed and CNN.

With over 10 million users, we're now able to guarantee high-speed, high-volume translations in a matter of hours. By combining the effort of multiple students translating each phrase, our algorithms are able to produce crowdsourced translations as accurate as those from skilled professionals, meeting the quality standards of major publishers.

We are excited for this new phase at Duolingo and hope our community will enjoy translating the notoriously entertaining BuzzFeed articles and the top news content from CNN.

Give Lingot
1693 years ago

Leave a new comment
53 Comments

Hodgebergs 9
Could one of the categories be sponsored? I think that would help a lot to find the articles, that pay duolingo ;)

40ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bellatrix86 18 12 8 8
I would love to see that! I don't do much Immersion but when I do, I always think that I would prefer a nice article that also helps DL. But I can never find them.
I have a good guess about which ones are paid but you can never know for sure. And there are probably more out there, about themes that I would find more interesting, but you never see them. So please, make it easier for us to help you getting paid. ;-)

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mstreeter 16 12 5
You can tell whether an article is sponsored by looking for the gray "Sponsored" badge next to the title on the Immersion page. But for now, sponsored articles are only available for people learning English, so native English speakers won't see them.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bellatrix86 18 12 8 8
Ahhh! Thanks! That's why I don't know about it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

m.tastic 25 13 11 11 8 6 5 5 2
Oh, that makes sense :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

O-JO 16 10 9 2
I definitely agree with this one! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]
We're making history together.

19ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Viaggiatore 25 13 5 2
Italian! Italian!

17ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Thoughtdiva 25 8
...Italian!

Last I heard, there are 510,000 Italians on Duolingo (either learning English or learning from English). Also, many of us English speakers learning Italian would love to help detect misunderstandings in translations from the English text, with Italians ensuring the target language sounds natural.

Please, what about a trial at least? There are a lot of Italian/ English speakers craving meaningful texts to work with!

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kbogovic 16 13 7 7 6 5 4 2 2
Congrats, this is the future. :)

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

oskalingo 24 14 10 6 3 3
MEDIA COVERAGE ROUNDUP
Crowdsourcing.org
<http://www.crowdsourcing.org/editorial/duolingo-community-now-translating-cnn-buzzfeed-articles/28841>

Wall Street Journal
<http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052702304500404579129590411867328.html>

Salon magazine
http://www.salon.com/2013/10/14/buzzfeed_teams_up_with_duolingo_for_global_expansion_new_scred/singleton/

New York magazine
<http://nymag.com/daily/intelligencer/2013/10/buzzfeed-plans-to-crowdsource-its-translation.html>

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Thoughtdiva 25 8
Great! There are some interesting inaccuracies, though!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lyarra 25 15 2 1408
Congratulations, DL team!!! ¡Felicidades!

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Justinito 25 23 10 7

Muchas felicidades, Luis. ¡Lo mereces!

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SamHosseini 4

Congratulations. Big news.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Goim 11 9 9 8 8 7 6 3

I am glad to be part of this =)

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Zach1337 8 5 2

That's great! It's too bad though that only people learning English are translating for paying clients (Right now). I'd love to be a part of helping Duolingo profit, but I'm a native English speaker and I'm learning German.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Thoughtdiva 25 8

It's about demand, I imagine. That, and there are more people learning English on Duo than any other language (nearly half of Duolingo). A good reason to keep attracting more users!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Zach1337 8 5 2

Ya, I know, I just really wish I could help out too.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

You can. Switch your language to German or add your own article.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Zach1337 8 5 2

Huh? Only French, Spanish and Portuguese people learning English are translating for paying clients. If I switched to German to English (Can't anyways, as that's not available) then it wouldn't help the situation at all. And uploading my own article doesn't make them money.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

True. I forgot that there are no German courses... Sorry.

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

SergeantFTC 15
That's not the case, is it?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Zach1337 8 5 2

If you read the opening post, you'll see that only people learning English are translating articles for BuzzFeed and CNN.

Over the last few weeks, our native Spanish, Portuguese and French speakers learning English have been working together to translate BuzzFeed and CNN articles while practicing their English skills. All of these articles have been published in the international versions of BuzzFeed and CNN.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

diagramchaser 15 15 13 10 5 3 3 2 2 1016

There is a good article that talks about the deal with Buzzfeed in Le Monde:

http://www.lemonde.fr/actualite-medias/article/2013/10/14/buzzfeed-s-apprete-a-lancer-une-version-francaise_3495505_3236.html

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lyarra 25 15 2 1408

I found some more articles about this (in English) here:

<http://www.bing.com/search?q=Buzzfeed+and+duolingo&qsn&form=QBLH&pq=buzzfeed+and+duolingo&sc=0-0&sp=-1&sk=&cvid=c55b6f8fb2094ed492e6bdcb2739d45e>

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Justinito 25 23 10 7

Ah, y una preguntita. ¿Vamos a tener la oportunidad de traducir artículos de español a inglés, o solamente la reversa? No sigo mucho la sección latina de CNN, pero creo que tienen mucho contenido y, por eso, oportunidades.

Saludos!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Justinito 25 23 10 7

Also, so that I don't alienate anyone, I'm basically just asking if the agreement is going to include Spanish to English translations as well as the obvious English to Spanish. CNN has a pretty large Spanish section and there should be a lot of content there to tap into.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kbogovic 16 13 7 7 6 5 4 2 2

If I understood correctly from the announcement, Spanish speakers are translating to English, and not the other way around. Check the post!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Justinito 25 23 10 7

Right. I see that, which is great. I'm just curious if there might be any plans to do the reverse since CNN has such a large Spanish section. It opens up a lot of copyrighted content in the Immersion section if something like that were to happen.

Not to take anything away from what is already happening - it's fantastic. Just seems like the next logical step.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pinkduckling 22 13 9 9 2

I think they would be translating from English. It says people learning English which would mean they would be reading articles in the language they're learning (English) and translating them to their native language. And this is for their international versions which would require languages other than English.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Thoughtdiva 25 8

Yes, that's right. The Buzzfeed and CNN articles are in English. You translate FROM English INTO your native language. You can see this if you change your language profile to "I am French learning English". Lucky things!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Xiuhtecuhtli 21 14 9 998

I don't know if there is demand for English translations of CNN en Español. It's basically news for the Latin@ world, so the target audience speaks Spanish, not English.

I'm looking forward to seeing what English speakers get to translate, too!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Excellent news, in view of this I suggest this (optional daily Newsfeed - <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/955436>).

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jrikkal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Hi Luis,

would it be possible to add your original post to the Immersion section so we could later post it into the French, Spanish, German, Italian, and Portuguese Forums?

Indeed there are questions about it (at least one here <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/889074>) and it would be great for non-English speaker users to know about it, IMO.

I tried to upload into immersion this page (<http://www.duolingo.com/comment/954969>), but it doesn't work (it doesn't upload this specific thread...).

Or maybe Duo prefers to translate it and post it itself into Forums.

Whatever option you prefer, I really think it's a valuable information to share to all users.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kbrimington 13 7

Complimenti Duolingo! Best wishes for taking on additional clients, especially those whose source content is not English. Many of us native English speakers are anxious to go about translating real articles and contributing to the cause. We'll be watching.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JasmineTea 7

Cool! =)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Awesum_Domo 22 7 7

Good job duolingo!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NicVsP 10 9 8 2

<http://gizmodo.uol.com.br/buzzfeed-brasil/>

You can see the consequences already.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Treppich 9

Awh Yeah! Buzzfeed in german, here I come!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Thoughtdiva 25 8

German's not an option ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Treppich 9

Awh :(

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Awesum_Domo 22 7 7

Is french?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Thoughtdiva 25 8

Only for French people learning English. They translate English articles into French.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Awesum_Domo 22 7 7

:(

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ichilingo 12 4

Congratulations, I can't wait until most (or all) major sites use Duolingo!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rhynn 22 18 12 4 3

Congratulations, that's great! Too bad I can't help out translating sponsored articles. I know it's very normal in the Translating world to have native speakers of the source language do the translating to the target language, not the other way around, but it's still a shame xD

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

What a fantastic project ! Well done to those that thought it up, those behind the scenes that have done the hard work to do the programming and set up, and those of the community that have and are participating to make this amazing productive and motivating project happen, to improve the world, for themselves, and all humanity. Helping us all communicate and understand !

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 3

How can I find the buzzfeed articles to help Duolingo by translating them?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

doandinhytc 11

that is awesome :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rosamaliagenau 11

How do I start translating?

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

By clicking on the "Immersion" tab (in the top blue bar) if you have it. If you don't have it then you can't.

Have a look here for more information.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Ricadito1 6

Cómo veo los artículos?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

166 "The coffee is on me."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1440489>

Translation: Der Kaffee geht auf mich.

13 years ago

Leave a new comment

47 Comments

omerelhado 8

Why 'geht' instead of 'ist'?

21ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Zander918 10 4

I don't know, but it is very confusing.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Problemzerstorer 12 12 8 4 3 4

It's the way they say it, if you use "ist" you would change the context and say something like the coffee is literally on you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•yesterday

reichsebastian 12 10 10 2 1

The proper meaning is: 'I pay the coffee'. We Germans are sometimes a bit selfish or chivalrous, courteous and a cultured civilization. And now the big question why 'geht auf mich'. Cause I want to say that THIS COFFEE GOES ON MY BILL, on my MONEY, on ME, on my BANK ACCOUNT. So this freakin' Coffee is on ME.

16ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Mariam.m.s.e 17 10

thank you very much for the cultural explanation, that really does help understand, and learn!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

AlsEenPoffertje 18 17 15 14 13 12 6 5 3 12

Doesn't auf make things be in the dative case? Why is mich used in this case?

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

21mat5 22 10 6 6 3

Auf can be both dative and accusative. Depends on the verb (motion or no motion).

24ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Zander918 10 4

I wonder why I didn't know that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amplitud3 11 5

If there is no movement it is Akkusative. When there is movement you use the Dative form. Oh German!

-29ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MartinLosnedahl 9

It's the other way around!

31ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MarkBennett6 20 16 15 14 10 10 9 7 7 5 5 4 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 2 601

I remember it as accusative = "move-ative" dative = "stay-tive"

16ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aktm87 9

it is the opposite

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mariam.m.s.e 17 10

but in this sentence there is no motion and it is dative, so MarkBennett6 is right! I think:(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

cruzcott 23 12 6 14

i think it's not like that

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

triceratops 25 17 15 5 312

Actually, the opposite is true.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Zander918 10 4

Amplitud3, I'm new, and I know a lot of German, but this is different.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Zander918 10 4

And crazy.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alex_Cart 10 6

"Der Kaffee geht auf mich" --- 'geht' is the second person conjugation of 'gehen,' to go. 'Auf' means from, and 'mich' is the word for 'to me.' There is no literal translation, because of the difference in word and sentence structure, but it means more or less "the coffee will be from me" or "the coffee is on me. IT DOES NOT MEAN THAT THE COFFEE IS LITERALLY ON YOU, don't worry, Germany doesn't take scalding burns as a flirtatious act.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

alessio.me 15 9 8 5

what does it mean? is it an idiomatic sentence?

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

SteamWing 25 17 5

Hm, I'm pretty sure you can also say it like that in English. It means "I pay the coffee".

11ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

schultz4 21 13

Yes it can be - really needs context though. It also isn't generally written. It took me awhile to figure out it was that idiom :p. I usually use it with a possessive (eg.: "Your coffee is on me" or "His meal is on me"), but it can be used this way as well.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Zander918 10 4

That is very helpful, SteamWing.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Caversham 25 22 18 15 6

The implication is: Der Kaffee geht auf "meine Rechnung".

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JodineSparks 19 9 4

I prefer to see it as two possible outcome of the attempt, one of them resulting in scalding.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alessio.me 15 9 8 5

Thank you very much, it makes sense!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cameronpegam 20 2

I am confused

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

VaderGareth 19 13 10

Oh, I thought that here "geht" is like "works" like in some other sentence, and the translation is "the coffee works on me" meaning "I'm under the coffee effect"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ArvinhdMani 25 9 6 5 2

Cant i say ist auf mich?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MarkReed5 15 14 2 8

Please clarify here. Why is it geht and not ist? The coffee "is" on me, not "goes" on me.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MNMStraw 25 22 17 16 216

Think about it "going" on my bill or tab.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Abster_1911 12 53

But its also correct to say "ist auf mich" too, right?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Zander918 10 4

Well, it kinda makes more sense the way the computer, MarkReed 5

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

adoniz1911 9

Finally something useful

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AmirGorji 9 2 2

what a shame, I even don't know the meaning of 'The coffee is on me' :(Can anyone explain it for me and other guys like me please?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlsEenPoffertje 18 17 15 14 13 12 6 5 3 12

When you say "The coffee is on me," that means you're going to pay for the person's coffee for them. :)

5ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

gpl8675309 18 7 5 4 3

Smooth. German women want coffee. I got it now

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Paoladm88 10 9

I wish one could actually say "the coffee plays on my receipt". That would be an interesting start of a conversation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Fast-Eddy 12 10 7

Number 1 option also looks correct to me, yet it was marked wrong. Why?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PatelTirth 11

why it's always last option ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Dverning 5

It was trying to trick you there is only one answer yet it emphasises ALL

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

skortati 9 6

what does this sentence mean? the coffee is on me? I don't understand how the coffee is on me...
can somebody please help

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

VagelisKostas 22 10 10 3 41

What about "Ich gebe den Kaffee aus"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Olja. 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 19 517

"Der Kaffee geht auf meine Rechnung." ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

faridma 16

what about.. ich bezahle den kaffee?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Juliana445094 7

It sounds like The coffee, get off me!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Logan11114444 6 2

it never showed me how to spell any of the words besides , kaffee and der

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Hone8 8

Does that middle one say the coffes comes out of my rectum?! Aheheh!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

167 "Sometimes, the trees do not let us see the forest."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/261778>

Translation: A veces, los árboles no nos dejan ver el bosque.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

19 Comments

Brandon-Rollins 23 14 10

The only variation I've heard upon this in English is "hiding a tree in a forest." I think it's always cool when Duolingo incorporates Spanish idioms into the lessons...even if you sometimes get zapped by the heart-o-meter.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kcmurphy 21 15

This is an established idiom in English, too.

<http://idioms.thefreedictionary.com/not+see+the+forest+for+the+trees>

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LaurenceGr3 13 12

Well it's defiantly rarely used and i think you'd get a strange look if you use it, I've never heard of it.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sturdel 12

I don't think it's rare. Not something people would use everyday on the street but it's a common enough saying and has quite a useful meaning/feeling.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AurosHarman 23 11

Nope, not remotely rare. The version that's most familiar to me, "miss the forest for the trees" (with the quotes) gets hundreds of thousands of hits.

https://www.google.com/search?q=\"miss+the+forest+for+the+trees\"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LaurenceGr3 13 12

Everything gets thousands of hits on Google. As an Englishman, i've never heard this before, I am not arguing... believe me or not.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AurosHarman 23 11

Things you wrap in quotes don't. The quotes force the words to appear in that specific form. For instance, if you search for "why don't halibut like potatoes" (with the quotes), you get exactly one hit. (Which is me, quoting an obscure movie, on a BBS, in a posting from over a decade ago.)

Remove the quotes, and yeah, you get a lot of hits -- none of which actually contain the full phrase. A phrase wrapped in quotes only turns up lots of hits if that specific phrase is in wide use.

I believe you haven't heard it. (Why would you lie?) But it is definitely a widely used phrase, dating back at least to 16th century England.

<http://english.stackexchange.com/questions/84522/etymology-of-the-phrase-cannot-see-the-forest-for-the-trees>

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

emeraldwise 14

Is this the equivalent translation of the english idiomatic phrase "Sometimes you can't see the forest for the trees"? Or is it just a phrase that was created that happens to be similar?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

yekai 13 8 2

There's a same idiom in chinese. "只见树木 (only see the trees) , 不见森林 (not see the forest) "

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rspreng 24

same idiom in both languages, says my idioms of the two languages book.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CataMercedes 13

'de vez en cuando' = sometimes, but was not accepted

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

droma 21 35

"de vez en cuando" should work as it means: from time to time/now and again/occasionally/sometimes

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SaqlainAli 15

Does "Unas veces " also mean "sometimes " ? If I does then why doesn't duo accept it

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

droma 21 35

i think that "unas veces" = a few times. and "a veces" = sometimes.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CattleRustler 19 12 1051

a veces, los arboles no permítannos ver el bosque - seriously?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AurosHarman 23 11

"permítannos" is the plural formal command. So, you're addressing a group of people formally, saying, "Please let us [do whatever]."

If you want to use permitir, it's, "A veces, los árboles no nos permiten ver el bosque."

But I think using permitir with trees is a little weird. Permitir carries more of an explicit feeling of agency on the part of its subject, whereas dejar is more comfortable in the context of something being blocked by an inanimate force.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AnnRon 13

Why is "permittanos" given as a clue when "permitir" is an "ir" verb?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Andru1485 12 11 5

That made me cross. I know permitir is an ir verb but I changed my spelling to agree with the prompt and so lost a life. Not fair!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JoeHamvas 17 6 5 3 1

"permitan" is the imperative and subjunctive form of Permitir which do not work for this style of sentence. I suppose they just throw these in here so we don't rely on the hints too much. :P

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

168 – 196 of 912

[accessed March 9, 2017]

168 "I read the newspaper."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/93879/i-read-the-newspaper>

Translation: Yo leo el periódico.

14 years ago

Leave a new comment

126 Comments

grgb61 6
periódico?

36ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

PaulineAnn 14
I agree, I would have used "periódico".

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

horserider720 18 11 10 9 9 7 5 5 5 3 3 2 2 2 2 2 2
I was never taught periódico. Is it the same as diario?

49ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Supergirl__2004 9
I was never taught periódico either, it just popped up in Practice.

6ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

pikachu0803 7
same here

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Rishigaanesh 8 3
yes

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

juliancont6 9
Me neither.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BreeNikki 5
Yeah! I didn't get that either!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ImaniS007 3
me either

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

marwatop 5 5 4
yo leo el diario=i read the newspaper

19ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

dang000 14 63
This is what I said also. I don't know why "Yo" is not part of the correct answer.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5
It's because it's not actually needed. The ending "-o" in leo implies "yo".

29ReplyGive Lingot3•3 years ago

dang000 14 63
Thank you, you are the first person to explain this to me. I never understood why it is sometimes omitted.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6
dang000- the conjugation shows you who is the subject, so anybody will understand who's doing the action because each conjugation is different for each pronoun/person. Sometimes, you may have confusion in certain tenses, ex : subjunctive pres. : yo escriba, tú escribas, èl escriba. the first and the 3rd pers have the same conjugation, so if you think there's a confusion,, just for the other person you're talking with, you should use the pronoun, to clear things.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

Melf1234 12
Yo IS needed

-35ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5
Not really, it's optional. You're still right whether or not you include the "yo".
http://spanish.about.com/od/pronouns/a/subject_pronoun.htm

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nicole8451 4

In Spanish class let's say at a school they teach that yo tuand so on are not needed as long as you have the right forms of words like llevar=to wear if you take the ar off and add o to the end it would change the word to I wear this is not for all words this should help for ar words

AR

Yo -O Tu - as Ella,el..... - a

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alebovic21 11 11 3 1

As long as you use the correct conjugations you do NOT need the pronoun. Here is a chart: Yo- Leo
Tú- Lees El/Ella/Usted- Nosotros/nosotras- Leemos
Vosotros (optional, only used in Spain)-Leéis
Ellas/Ellos/Ustedes- Leen

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

mitaine56 15 6

dang- duo doesn't count it as a mistake, you must have made another mistake, because yo is correct, even though it's not necessary.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Agnes_Pate 9 3

I used yo and it worked. Thats different

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Melf1234 12

Yo IS part of the correct answer

-6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

melf- both are accepted, with or without the pronoun

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Laurenz0202 2

periodico?

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lautes 4

I thought that "read" was past tense so I put lei (with an accent on the i)

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EDK-Learner 22 20 5 465

I agree. I put Yo leí el diario

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

granguayaco 10
So did I.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JamieLusza 12
Considering this lesson is on present tense verbs, it probably wasn't the best choice to answer with a past tense verb...

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cielunLtd 25 12 7 4 580
This sentence came up for me in a review after completion of the tree and it is impossible to tell if they want present tense or past! Lots of tenses are mixed in the reviews at the end.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AngelTetim 12 9
It's too early for the past tense

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

theluchaki 7
Diario is diary my mom is spanish so she should know

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5
It all depends on the person and the context. You're right, "diario" can be "diary", but it can also mean "newspaper" and "daily". <http://www.wordreference.com/es/en/translation.asp?spen=diario>

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

DariaPirog 8 3
Yo isn't needed-the ending -o means I...it's optional

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alicia432098 4
This sorta stumped me!

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

cupcake_121 6
I thought it was diario not periodico

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Sportsbull50 14

They are basically the same thing. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

arajimi 7 2

"read" has two meanings. "I like to read" and "I read this book" for example. It's not fair that because I used the past tense version of "read" that my answer was marked wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

galeforcewind 8

But at this level duolingo hasn't introduced past tense yet, everything is in present tense - so that's why it's marked wrong.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

priella1 10

In Spanish there are past tense words. so to say I read the book yesterday.

You would say: Yo leí el libro ayer.

Check out this site: it might help with present, past, and future tenses.

<http://www.dummies.com/how-to/content/conjugating-the-spanish-verb-leer-to-read.html>

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

ElFuturero 13 12 10 10 9 46

I'm a native Spanish speaker. It's correct to just say "Leí el periódico".

Imagine someone asks you "Qué hiciste esta mañana?", would you really reply "Leí el periódico esta mañana"?

You wouldn't want to sound like a robot...

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Supergirl__2004 9

How do u make it bold???

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

PaulineAnn 14

The problem here is that in English the present and past tense are both written "I read" but are pronounced differently. Without any context it is impossible to know the tense. This is the same problem we often have in Spanish.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Benstation 11

This lesson is on present tense verbs so it is clear from the lesson context, but i agree this may not be what youre thinking about when trying to solve a translation problem.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hilarity

Agreed, arajimi! The sentence is unclear.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

TriLeiUom 6 5

Lol i said "Tu lee un diario" and it said correct!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

lesserman, it,s impossible because it's a big mistake.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 3 hidden comments

AniruddhaR5 11

Would 'Soy leo el diario' have been wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Tupples 10 6 4

yes, I think that would translate to 'I am read the journal'.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AlanBeam 15

"Soy leo el diario", as best as I can tell, translates to "I am reading the newspaper."

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5

No, although it does kind of look like what you think "soy leo el diario" is "I am I read the newspaper", which doesn't make sense. There are 2 ways of saying "I am reading" in spanish: "Leo" by itself sometimes can mean "I am reading", but it's more common to translate that to simply "I read", the 2nd way is to say "Estoy leyendo" which means that you are in the process of reading right when you say it as in "I am reading (right now)". To express that you are in the process of doing something the verb "estar" is needed, "ser" can't be used for that.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BigRed79 10 6 3

Yes, because that's what I put and it was wrong. Unsure as to why though.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5

This might help: <http://www.spanishdict.com/answers/100625/how-do-i-say-i-am-studying-spanish->

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Melf1234 12

Yes because SOY is not the correct answer for I

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

melf- Soy is perfectly correct, it means I am.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KailaT 4

really

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Annoyia

idk

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JonLedbett 5

I used "un" instead of "el." :/

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Forever_1d 3

Esto es ta mal es el periodico no el diario

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

forever- a diario is published everyday and periódico, one a week or a month, that's the difference, but they both mean "journal" newspaper.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

football59 9 2

What is definite and indefinite ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5

Definite and indefinite articles you mean? Well, definite articles refer to something specific. English only has one definite article: "the", while Spanish has 4 "el, la, los, las". Indefinite articles are nonspecific, English also only has one indefinite article: "a", while Spanish again has 4: "un, una, unos, unas". This link explains it pretty well: <http://www.studyspanish.com/lessons/defart1.htm>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Melf1234 12

Is too early in the lesson for past tense

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

03180078 5 4 4

periódico 가 뭐지?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5

Periódico=newspaper. Um... 신문, I'm not sure if that's correct, I don't speak Korean xD

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SubhangeeS 12

it should be "Periodico"! since "diario" means daily

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5

"Diario" has multiple definitions, "newspaper" is one of them. .

<http://www.wordreference.com/es/en/translation.asp?spen=diario>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SubhangeeS 12

Yes, I know... But, "periodico" should not be Wrong!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5

Oh, yes I totally agree with that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Emilyspanishgirl 3

This really helps me with my School work♥♥

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SynaNara 4

My native spanish father just says "papel" when refering to the newspaper, and I don't like being forced to use a word that I normally use for "diary".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

galeforcewind 8

I also put 'papel' - my tia always said 'papel' for news'paper' - oh well.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ayanna_28 3

Why is " soy leo el diario wrong?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5

Because that literally says "I am I read the newspaper". You can't have two conjugated verbs next to each other like that. I think you're trying to say "I am reading the newspaper". When you are describing that you are in the process of doing something, you use "estar", not "ser". I am reading the newspaper=Estoy leyendo el diario.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ayanna_28 3

Why is " soy leo el diario wrong?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

ayanna- it would be : estoy leyendo el diario. With verb estar, it needs the present participle.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

xxMaiyalsCoolzz 4 3 2

Soy means i am

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AtaraxianSpa 11 5

In the enduring sense though: I am male. I am a doctor. I am German. I am an affable fellow. Estoy is for temporary conditions: I am here aren't I? I am staying at the hotel. I am happy.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

loveviolet47 6

Yo Leo el diarii

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lealithara 4

Papel es loco

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

xxMaiyalsCoolzz 4 3 2

I put yo leemos el diario

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dorismc221 3

It said newspaper was diario so when i put that it said i was wrong and said periodico but it was using diario the whole time which one is it

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eslamsaad2 7 4

Periódico... New word

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

devotedtothemax 14

Would leo work instead of yo leo? Kinda like just soy instead of yo soy?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5

Yes, you could say "leo" alone, the subject pronoun "yo" is optional in this case.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JulieRainb 4

I read the newspaper. Yeah and I play video-games. Which words of that translate?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HodaBenyamin 3

Doulingo is not fair

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GeorginaLa4 6

what is the difference between leen lees leemos leo? it is really confusing me because we havent dont this in class so im just learning as i go along

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5

leo=I read

lees=you read

lee=he/she/you-formal read leemos=we read

leen=they/you-plural read

<http://www.studyspanish.com/verbs/lessons/pireg.htm>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mcfarlane91 5

I write "yo leo un diario" instead of "... el diario". Explain why this is wrong please.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kiyojito 7

"periódico" and "diario" are same thing?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nani205711 6

oh

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Supergirl__2004 9

???

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

DoxieDoll 6

Why is it using 'periódico' all of a sudden?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Supergirl__2004 9

Ikr its so weird

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Cheerfulbean 5 3

How do I know the difference between lee,leen and leo

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

neiht20 15 6 5

<http://www.studyspanish.com/verbs/lessons/pireg.htm>

<http://www.studyspanish.com/lessons/regverb1.htm>

Leo=I read, lee=you-formal/he/she reads, leen=they/you-plural read

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nencunen. 5

I made a mistake:(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sup. Would it be better to use diario or periodico I learned one here and one from rosetta stone (which by the way sucks).

tzodle
haha, I speak spanish and I didn't get it right 0.0

GaryReamey 6
I don't get it ether.

Kepsi 15

sometimes i go over the basics... el diaro has been changed to el periodico. Was it an error on dualingo's part or just another way to say newspaper?

neiht20 15 6 5
It's another way of saying it.
<http://www.wordreference.com/es/translation.asp?tranword=newspaper> icychance 6

i dont get it

icychance 6
why

ImaniS007 3
just how do you think I now.

[illegible]

12

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

okytaz 4

What am I thinking about then?-- I am actually one step bellow an AP Spanish speaker, but I haven't brushed up in a Loooong time, and I didn't know the word for Duck in Spanish so it placed me at Level 2 haha. I subconsciously know a bunch of weird stuff.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5

You're thinking of preterite (past) tense: leyó=he/she/you-formal/it read.

<http://www.wordreference.com/conj/EsVerbs.aspx?v=leer>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

1097459613 5 stupid

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lindsaypenkrat 9 4 2

does anyone know what leía is? It said that you can say is yo leía el diario

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

169 Il, lo, l', la, i, gli, le

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/815852>

kbogovic 16 13 7 7 6 5 4 2 2

il, lo, l', la, i, gli, le are all words for "the".

In the singular...

il is used with masculine words beginning with most consonants: il sole - the sun, il centro - the centre.

lo with masculine words beginning with z or s + consonant: lo zucchero - the sugar, lo sport - the sport.

l' with masculine and feminine words beginning with a vowel: l'ufficio turistico - the tourist office, l'acqua - the water.

la with feminine words beginning with a consonant: la figlia - the daughter, la spiaggia - the beach.

In the plural (ie more than one)...

i is used with masculine words beginning with most consonants: i negozi - the shops, i vini - the wines.

gli with masculine words beginning with a vowel or with z or s + consonant: gli uffici - the offices, gli alberghi - the hotels.

le with all feminine words: le vetrine - the shop windows, le aranciate - the orange drinks.

Give Lingot3
163 years ago

Leave a new comment
5 Comments

f.formica 20 17 12 12 11 11 10 7 3 1271

Good work. There is a bit more complexity to the rule for impure consonants though: lo odio, lo psicologo, lo pneumatico, lo xilofono. Rather uncommon words anyway.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ah95al 8 5
good work , thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

stardustrust 2
Very helpful, thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ZohaibAli5 3
Also I wanna learn

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

ZoeLevy1 8
thank-you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 days ago

170 The Duolingo Owl
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2456615>

KittySch 12 10 6

I think it's funny that Duolingo uses an owl as their mascot character but even after having done one or two animal lesson in three different languages, I have yet to learn owl. I'm pretty sure it's lechuza in Spanish if I'm remembering correctly. But I only know that cause I've studied Spanish like forever. What if we wanted to tell someone on here in a language that we're learning, "Isn't that Duolingo owl cute?". Well we'd be SOL, if we were to be relying on the owl's teachers! But we learn duck in every language. I just thought that was weird is all since the owl pops up every time you finish a lesson, you would think you would have been taught that word already.

Give Lingot8
852 years ago

Leave a new comment
81 Comments

rocko2012 25 7 3 1451

The Owl likes to keep a low profile. And Duolingo does not use him he uses them.

58ReplyGive Lingot7•2 years ago

jolynnedougherty 25 19 14 8 5 41

Are you implying that the owl is mightier than Chuck Norris?

23ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

Susande 17 13 12 11 241

Don't be ridiculous. Clearly the owl is mighty, very mighty. But not even the owl stands a chance against Chuck Norris.

10ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Brains over brawn. Owl wins ;)

24ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

VStarTraveler 25 10 9 1283

Woah, now! Chuck Norris has more brains than most people. He's so smart that he's even counted to infinity. Twice!

That's #7-- <http://www.chucknorrisjokes.net/>

7ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

Equilibrio99 25 11 8 2 2

I just found Chuck Norris jokes in Spanish. Happiness!

Chuck Norris es la razon por que Waldo esta escondido Chuck Norris puede matar 2 piedras con un pajarito

<http://dsipaint.com/memberblog.php?blog=31221>

21Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

The owl is way more LGBTQ friendly. ^_^ Anyhow, this is getting pretty far off topic.

12Give Lingot•2 years ago

nalkalay 2

Yes . I think its a good point .

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

DSD9 10 9

Is this about Chuck Norris or about the owl?

0Give Lingot•2 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

nalkalay 2
You also have a good point

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MDoulos 11 10 10
The owl is the symbol of the Illuminati! Always visible never explained. Same operation here.
Bwahaha

25ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

KittySch 12 10 6
I think you may be onto something here!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dadaduo 10 8 7 7 6 4 2
I'm gonna go out on a limb here and say the Illuminati symbol is a triangle.
#getyourfactsstraightamerica

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
Both the triangle and the owl are Illuminati symbols <http://www.illuminatirex.com/illuminati-symbols/> Here is a cool wikipedia article about the Illuminati <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Illuminati>

^ _ ^

9ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

dadaduo 10 8 7 7 6 4 2
Wait, so an owl is actually a sign of the Illuminati?!

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MDoulos 11 10 10
Yep. It's a pretty prevalent sign too. You can see it all over the place.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pjafxo 11 6 3 4
you guys :)))

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

AnjiraVelasquez 16 12 7 5
Haha, It is true.

And for the translation to spanish... I think "Búho" is for those ones with little "ears" on his head.
http://www.ojocientifico.com/sites/www.ojocientifico.com/files/imagecache/primera/Como-gira-la-cabeza-un-buho-1_0.jpg

And "Lechuza" is when they do not have ears, I mean when its head is completely round.
<http://www.grandesimagenes.com/imagenes05/lechuza-4.jpg>

20ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

Exactly right. Here's a very good answer from a SpanishDict.com user:
<http://www.spanishdict.com/answers/149561/cul-es-la-diferencia-entre-un-bho-y-una-lechuza>

9ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

AnjiraVelasquez 16 12 7 5

Haha! Oh That's well explained in there :P Finally I think both of them: "buhos" and "lechuzas" are owls. There is no translation for Lechuza right? hehe

By the way owls are so cool :D Last year my cousin and I, we found one baby owl. And took him to an ornithologist teacher's aviary for its recovery hehe.

https://fbcdn-sphotos-h-a.akamaihd.net/hphotos-ak-frc3/t1.0-9/p417x417/397465_10151451532070966_1897897447_n.jpg

6ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

KittySch 12 10 6

omg that is such a beautiful bird!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KittySch 12 10 6

That was a great explanation! Also, now that I read that, I do remember learning tecolote as a word for owl, just had to job my memory. But I hadn't heard the other words listed and have now greatly broadened my Spanish vocabulary for the word owl. Thanks a bunch for the link!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AnjiraVelasquez 16 12 7 5

Yeah Tecolote is a common name that people give to these birds in some countries. :P Also there is the word "Mochuelo" to refer to an owl.

Spanish has a really huuuuugeeeee vocabulary XD.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JoshuaBowers 24 22 14 106

That is an interesting point, I had never thought of it. As far as I know, the word 'buho' is used for owl. However it could be a regional thing, as I only speak Spanish with Mexicans and Costa Ricans.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KittySch 12 10 6

Haha how weird! My Spanish is a total combo of Mexican and Costa Rican with a little bit of Spain influence and we both were familiar with two different word for owl!

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

toomath 18 11 9 5 3 2

Harry Potter books in Spanish use Lechuza, but those books use a distinctly Spanish dialect.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

KittySch 12 10 6

Rudolfo Anaya uses "lechuza" in his novel "Bless me, Ultima" as well and he's a New Mexican, so I'm pretty sure it's used in America as well.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

elPofero 14 11

In Bolivia and Peru they use both, but Buho is more common.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rachael.cr3 18 15 14 13 13 13 12 11 10 9 9 8 8 8 7 7 7 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 172

L'hibou en Francais.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

scottann 25 13

Sorry it is le hibou. ;)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

araparseghian 21 21 21 18 17 15 13 12 12 12 11 10 7 7 7 5 4 3 3 3 3 2

Why no elision?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

I believe from my knowledge base - that is because it is NOT a silent "H" . French is as complicated as English can be ! I can go and scurry for more information in my records if you want to ask another question or elaboration ~(♥~♥~) (I so love scuffling through my records of information :) ... and dancing (♥~♥~)~

I can also find a sound file I believe, if you are interested 📁(°▽°)📁

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

breadpudding 10 7

And there's a second word for barn owls (which makes sense, as they aren't true owls). I just don't remember what it is.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jolynnedougherty 25 19 14 8 5 41
Are you thinking of choette?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dadaduo 10 8 7 7 6 4 2
On a completely unrelated note, I figured out how to do Italics.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Robin_Lampert 12
And are you planning to share that information?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Atanalo 9 7 5 3
Put an astricks each side of the bit you want to italicise

Two astrickes make things bold

Three do italicised bold four do this

8ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

Robin_Lampert 12
Thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Atanalo 9 7 5 3
Your welcome :) They really should have a page on how to do them and how to insert pictures . . .
(That one I don't know)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dr.Beez 23 12 5 5
I once asked a mod about this, and here are the codes he gave me.

text Text becomes a link to the page at url

 Inserts the image at url

#Title Title header:

<h1>Example</h1>

##Header 1 Slightly smaller heading:

Example

###Header 2 Still smaller. (Changes to all uppercase):

EXAMPLE

`text` Highlights text and changes to a monospace font; this is the backtick, usually at the keyboard upper left.

Example

You've already found italics, bold, and the combination so I won't repeat those here.

If you want to use these characters directly, as opposed to markup, you can escape the characters with the backslash:

Not italics! would yield Not italics!

5Give Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

To add to Dr.Beez comment, here is a link to an old FAQ guide:

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1426103> (See #10 and #11)There is a new, updated guide here http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Duolingo_Wiki#Getting_Help but, I don't believe the newer guide has info about formatting posts or adding pics yet. I hope this helps! ^_^

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

Atanalo 9 7 5 3

Thanks guys

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

jorma1998b 17 11

did you say assterisks? or asterisks, [asteriscos en español] :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Atanalo 9 7 5 3

*

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Robin_Lampert 12

I see there are multiple potential translations. Lechuza is the one used in the Harry Potter books. Reading them in Spanish is a fun way to refresh, but it did add a few new vocabulary words -- or at least more rarely used ones like bruja, piedra filosofal, cámara, varita, caldero, sapo. You may be glad to know that Hogwarts, muggle and quidditch don't change. :-)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

scottann 25 13

If I remember correctly, in Ancient Greece, the owl was the bird of Athena the goddess of knowledge and wisdom. Such a gorgeous bird anyway. Thanks for teaching me how to say it in Spanish. As a first time Spanish learner I am now trying to memorize the names of my favorite animals in Spanish.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KittySch 12 10 6

That's a great idea scottann, I've got tons of spanish animal words in my head if you ever want a list of sorts!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

michaeldressner 16 15 13 10 7 6 4 2 2 2

speaking of the owl, it seems lately that it's clipped the wrong way

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

the last time I luck owl, was buo, maeby in latin America is lechuza, but my spanish knowledge always has being buo

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jorma1998b 17 11

lechuza and buho are owl. Here is a link for the difference between the two words:

<http://www.spanishdict.com/answers/149561/cul-es-la-diferencia-entre-un-bho-y-una-lechuza>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

araparseghian 21 21 21 18 17 15 13 12 12 12 11 10 7 7 7 5 4 3 3 3 2

Hibou in French

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

scottann 25 13

In this context (ie symbolizing knowledge) it would be : la chouette rather than le hibou. ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dragons101 6

I think that if they gave the owl glasses it would look a bit brainier!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LeQueenOfRandom 12

What does Chuck Norris have to do with the Duolingo Owl anyways? I mean like he is as normal as anyone else in the world(no offense btw).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dadaduo 10 8 7 7 6 4 2

Anyone who can beat up Bruce Lee is a god. Anyone who can beat Bruce Lee up with a single roundhouse kick is Chuck Norris.

-2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Bode.rehm 6

Cmon people this discussion is not about Chuck Norris

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LeQueenOfRandom 12

THAT'S WHAT I'M TRYING TO SAY!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dadaduo 10 8 7 7 6 4 2

Did I seriously get a lingot for that one comment?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

InfinitiJAK16 10

how did you guys come up with Chuck Norris in the first place???

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vandict 11 6

I like popcorn :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

You are pretty sure it's lechuza, could it be buo in Spanish?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KittySch 12 10 6

Lechuza is a barn owl and Buho is a horned owl.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DSD9 10 9

I don't get it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KittySch 12 10 6

What exactly do you not get?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DSD9 10 9

Like, I read this 10 times and I still don't get what this is about. That is partly because of some comments.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KittySch 12 10 6

It's suppose to be just commenting about how the Duo mascot is an owl but they don't seem to educate (at least in most language lessons) the vocabulary word for owl but instead duck & bird most often. And then the translations for and explanations on the different vocab terms for owl (barn owl vs horned owl) in Spanish. Idk why all the Chuck Norris talk; that has really nothing to do with the topic of this conversation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

dragons101 6

How did Chuck Norris get into this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

elPofero 14 11

Hahaha, I never noticed but you are right. I happen to find birds interesting so I noticed we were only taught 'chicken', 'duck' and 'bird' in german. I guess they figure the most common type of bird worldwide is a duck or something. Because I def learned 'Ente' is a duck in German.

Owl in Spanish is 'Buoh' (primary) - and also lechuza (secondary, I've heard it much less). The second one can also be used to describe a Barn Owl, specifically, as they are a bit different from other Owls species wise.

Salud*

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

buttz10 7

ikr

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SpiralStat 2

well, if i can remember correctly, most of the courses teach you what "bird" is, and my dutch course had me learn "uil" which is (of course) dutch for owl.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Winter_Maiden 10

The owl is all over the Turkish section. Baykuş, and his name is Duo. Duo is a little owl, not a big owl.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

InfinitiJAK16 10

you've got a point there!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

InfinitiJAK16 10

The spanish word for owl is buho. End of this discussion!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

171 The 100 most common German verbs - past participle and simple past

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/18665471>

HelpfulDuo 6 4

German verbs are generally categorized as weak, strong and mixed/irregular, depending on whether the stem form of the word changes in different tenses.

1) Weak verbs do not change their stem vowels in any tense.

The past participle ends in -t (while many PP forms start with "ge-" like "gearbeitet", several exceptions like "erklärt" exist)

German weak verbs (Click to enlarge)

2) Strong verbs change their form in one or more tenses.

The past participle ends in -en.

German strong verbs) (Click to enlarge)

3) Mixed verbs display elements of strong and weak verbs. Modal verbs indicated by *.

German mixed verbs (Click to enlarge)

Give Lingot153

2494 months ago

Leave a new comment

117 Comments

Lorel90 25 25 22 7 874

You can listen to the pronunciation here: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AJxieXyATaY>

27ReplyGive Lingot17•4 months ago

Zeitschleifer 14 11 6 188

Great video! Vielen dank!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Etty_ 9 3

really a very nice video! thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

matteverhart 17 16 14 11 11 11 10 2 1
Danke! This is amazing.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

fjmg000 19 2 2 49
vey good thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Pt.AljaziH 9 8
It it very helpful thank you .

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

rosademarzo 15
Thank you so much for the overview! At first glance, I think I see a problem with the third table. Past participle and simple past forms seem to be mixed up.. oder? Kann jemand überprüfen?

18ReplyGive Lingot5•4 months ago

HelpfulDuo 6 4
you're right! editing :)

13ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

rosademarzo 15
:D

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ErinShirey 11 2 8
Did you edit the last table? I am new to the German language and cannot tell if you have edited the last table or not. I am making flashcards with these words and do not want to get them wrong. Thanks! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Akronyktikus 24 20 19 17 15 6 6 6
[2016-11-07:] Seems to be alright, except the three words I mentioned below, concerning:

schließen (2): not "schloß" - but "schloss" (pronunciation as the castle "das Schloss")

müssen (3): not "gemußt" - but "gemusst" (pronunciation as "ge"+"muss"+"t") anfangen (3): not "er/sie/es frangt an" - but "er/sie/es fängt an" (typo)

[edit 2017-02-12:] There are two further mistakes found by <https://www.duolingo.com/Chocobocuddler> (see below):

I've found a minor mistake in the first table at "darstellen", the past form is not "stellte da" but "stellte dar"

In the second table it's not "ergiebt" but "ergibt", although the "i" sounds long in this word, it is written without the "e"

7ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

BobLeSnob 8 6

Please correct me if I'm wrong, but aren't "schloß" and "gemußt" the way of spelling from before the spelling reform?

5ReplyGive Lingot10•4 months ago

Samy1979 23 9 1171

As a german I think it is strange to use "gemußt" oder "schloß" now...

5Give Lingot•2 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 657

That's right.

1Give Lingot1•4 months ago

Salomee_e 18 15 15 14 12 12 11 4 2 510

Very nice, just a few tiny mistakes:

(an) bieten simple past bot (an) Nehmen simple past nahm

6ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

HelpfulDuo 6 4

Good catch! Thanks

9ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

jonathanim15 15 3 2

i think setzen means to sit. you have written 'to set' or am i wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 657

You are indeed wrong.

setzen = to set (something somewhere), to seat (someone)

sitzen = to sit, to be sitting

With the vowels pretty much as in English, as it turns out :)

There is also the reflexive sich setzen - literally "to seat oneself" - which means "to sit down".

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

billkamm 24 700

mizinamo this isn't quite correct.

sitzen means "to be sitting". ich sitze = I am sitting (as in you are currently seated) sich setzen means "to sit down". ich setze mich = I am sitting down or setzen Sie sich bitte = please sit down (formal) setzen by itself can you mean you are setting someone or something into a seated position. z. B. ich setze die Puppe auf dem Stuhl neben mir.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 657

I don't think anything I wrote was wrong, though it was perhaps incomplete to leave out sich setzen. I've added that now.

3Give Lingot•3 months ago

Salomee_e 18 15 15 14 12 12 11 4 2 510

*Ich setze die Puppe auf den Stuhl neben mir. Die Puppe sitzt auf dem Stuhl neben mir.

3Give Lingot1•3 months ago

billkamm 24 700

Thanks Salomee_e that grammar rule gets me every now and then lol.

1Give Lingot•3 months ago

billkamm 24 700

I personally would change the English translation on this list to: setzen = to seat

although it is odd to not point out in the list which verbs are reflexive, because some verbs have complete different meanings when used reflexively vs not reflexively. sitzen = to be sitting

-2Give Lingot•3 months ago

biertopf 19 2

Maybe you confuse it with the reflexive "sich setzen" = "to sit down"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

SuperGirlyGamer3 3

oh my gosh u have alot of daily streaks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Onsker 19 16 10

Great, thanks a lot!

3ReplyGive Lingot2•4 months ago

alonsaky 9 7 4 2 2

1 like ~

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

anitifunny3 25 25 18 8 4 590

Vielen Dank, das ist mir eine sehr große Hilfe!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Chocobocuddler 9 7 5 4 2

Very good overview, although I've found a minor mistake in the first table at "darstellen", the past form is not "stellte da" but "stellte dar" =)

In the second table it's not "ergiebt" but "ergibt", although the "i" sounds long in this word, it is written without the "e" ;)

And I think, that "schloß" is supposed to be written as "schloss" has already been said. Same goes für "gemußt" -> "gemusst" (table 3). We've had a change in the German orthography a few years ago which applied to "ss/ß" the following way:

When the preceding vowel is pronounced short, you use "ss" (like German "Fluss" (river)). When the preceding vowel is pronounced long, OR if there are two vowels preceding, you use "ß" (like German "Straße" (street, long vowel) or "fließen" (to flow, two vowels)).

Additionally there is a typo in table 3: "frangt an" - this should be written as "fängt an" =)

I hope I was able to help! Wish you all fun in learning German! ;)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Zak332671 14 9

New German Club:

Club Code: XCHG3S

Let's push each other to master this Wonderful Language!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Lea.1717 14 11 9 8 6 6 6 6 6 4 3 2

Thank you so much! :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

stoopher 20 18 8 2 278

typo: "frangt an"

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

LeviPolasak 15 9 7

Can you say "Ich darf essen"? In Yiddish we can say "Ikh darf/daf essen" (I need to eat/food). Ikh mizz essen means I must eat, and to be allowed to is "meyg"

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

patbo 15 11 11 10 9 9 9 7 2 2 2 1

You can say "ich darf essen", but it means "I may/am allowed to eat". Both "need to" and "must" would be translated as "müssen" ("ich muss essen"), they are similar enough in meaning that German simply doesn't make the distinction.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

AlanSCB 17 13 12 10 5 142

Danke schön! It helped me a lot

It would be nice to add the verbs sein/haben to the past participle so you know which one to use when forming the Perfekt tense. I know that if it implies movement you use the verb sein but there are a few exceptions

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

biertopf 19 2

I just read through. "Sein" is used with:

Table 1: gefolgt

Table 2: geblieben, erschienen, gefahren, gefallen, gekommen, gelaufen, gelegen

Table 3: entstanden, gegangen, gegessen (maybe in some regions also with "haben"), gestanden, geworden, gewesen, vergangen

Maybe I missed some...

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 657

Up here in the north, I would say ich habe (irgendwo) gelegen, ich habe (irgendwo) gegessen, ich habe (irgendwo) gestanden.

(So we don't make a distinction between "I stood" and "I confessed".)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Akronyktikus 24 20 19 17 15 6 6 6

Mizinamo is right again since "Hochdeutsch" should be always the right one for learners.

According to <http://www.duden.de/rechtschreibung/stehe> "stehe" is conjugated as "Perfektbildung mit »hat«; süddeutsch, österreichisch, schweizerisch: ist".

So "Ich bin (am Bahnhof) gestanden." only spoken in the south. And "Ich habe (am Bahnhof) gestanden." in the north, with DUO & elsewhere.

Analog with "sitzen (habe gesessen)" and "liegen (habe gelegen)".

Not to be confused with "Ich habe (eine Lüge) gestanden." Wich is univeral German. (participle from the infinitive "gestehen" = to confess) There is also no north/south-difference on "setzen (habe gesetzt)" and "legen (habe gelegt)".

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 657

I'm not sure what your point is when you mention learning Hochdeutsch; it seems to me that "Ich bin (am Bahnhof) gestanden" is perfectly fine Hochdeutsch, though it's not used all across German-speaking regions but mostly in the south. The Duden citation seems to confirm that.

A bit like how "sidewalk" is perfectly acceptable Standard Written English, even if it wouldn't be used in the UK, for example.

Just because I (or other Northerners) don't use it doesn't mean it's not Hochdeutsch - sometimes several alternatives exist in parallel which are all considered acceptable standard written German.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Akronyktikus 24 20 19 17 15 6 6 6

You're absolutely right. Please don't misunderstand me and please notice that "Ich bin gestanden." is nothing less than my mother tongue!

I just want to follow DUO-standards, which make in my opinion sence keeping it more simple for learners. And I by myself learn a lot, too.

Maybe I'm wrong if saying "Hochdeutsch" but according to <http://www.duden.de/rechtschreibung/Hochdeutsch> - "die hochdeutsche (a) Sprache", which leads to the conclusion that it's neither "Ober-" nor "Mitteldeutsch" even both are "hochdeutsche (b) Sprachen". I do not fully understand the logic behind by myself. But I guess that's the way it is.

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

Bharad.kv 23 10 9 3 436

Hi, this is very useful. Thanks a lot for your efforts. I think the Partzip II for "schaffen" (in the sense of to manage, accomplish) is "geschafft" and not "geschaffen" Maybe a native can confirm.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 657

Yes, schaffen "to manage" has past participle geschafft while schaffen "to create" has past participle geschaffen.

(The past tense is also similarly regular for "manage" - schaffte - and strong for "create" - schuf.)

So the conjugation in the table is fine, it's just the English gloss which is wrong -- the sense of schaffen that is in the table is not the "manage" one!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TORUCO 25 25 22 21 6 5 3 305
danke

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Jeeva-faded 11
Thank you so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

phamdoanChien 14 13 7 7 2 2
thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

uroz 16 437
Danke schön!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

elleheidi 10 9 3 2
danke!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Joshexplore 20 12 8 1
Wow, thanks. This is great.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

PolyglotCiro 25 25 25 25 14 13 13 12 11 11 9 4 35
HERZLICHEN DANK!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

PolyglotCiro 25 25 25 25 14 13 13 12 11 11 9 4 35
Wie macht man diese Sachen?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Akronyktikus 24 20 19 17 15 6 6 6
Just minor details:

schließen (2): not "schloß" - but "schloss" (pronunciation as the castle "das Schloss")

müssen (3): not "gemußt" - but "gemusst" (pronunciation as "ge"+"muss"+"t") anfangen (3): not "er/sie/es frangt an" - but "er/sie/es fängt an" (typo) - Thanks mizinamo!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 657 er fängt an with umlaut!

(fangt an would be the ihr form.)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

whukriede 16 15 15 14 14 13 13 13 11 11 11 5 4 63
Sorry, those spellings with ß are just better. Get over it.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 657
Regardless of what you think of them personally, I think Duolingo should (attempt to) teach words according to the current official spelling, the one taught in schools, i.e. according to the 1996 (and later) spelling reform.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

whukriede 16 15 15 14 14 13 13 13 11 11 11 5 4 63
You might consider that those so called reforms (which actually amounted to cultural vandalism) were largely politically motivated and had to be enforced against considerable resistance, among others the press. The 2006 re-reform of the 1996 reform was an attempt to mitigate some of the worst earlier mistakes. Duden and schoolbook publishers though wholeheartedly welcomed the business opportunities to have everything reprinted.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 657
The point is not whether the reforms were good or bad, organised or chaotic, beloved or hated.

The point is that they define the standard orthography taught in schools.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

whukriede 16 15 15 14 14 13 13 13 11 11 11 5 4 63
Thanks for your reply. Taught and standard in school, yes. But otherwise they're not binding in any way. Eg, now almost every major German newspaper has its own "house orthography" etc. I would expect Duo to take a neutral viewpoint, which it to a certain degree actually does, allowing eg "ß"- in place of "ss"-spellings. <https://de.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hausorthographie>

0Give Lingot•3 weeks ago

TiffanyPS 10 9 9 7 5 4 3
Dear HelpfulDuo Thank you very much for these most helpful grammar rules. They are very important!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ZoeyLarry 6 5 3 2 2

Thanks for that ! I really need that T;T

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

TheBigStep 9 3 2

Deutsche Verben werden allgemein als schwach, stark und gemischt / unregelmäßig kategorisiert, je nachdem, ob sich die Stammform des Wortes in verschiedenen Zeitformen ändert.

1) Schwache Verben ändern ihre Stammvokale nicht in jedem Tempus.

Das vergangene Partizip endet in -t (während viele PP-Formen mit "ge-" wie "gearbeitet" beginnen, mehrere Ausnahmen wie "erklären" existieren)

2) Starke Verben ändern ihre Form in einer oder mehreren Zeitformen.

Das letzte Partizip endet in -en.

3) Gemischte Verben zeigen Elemente von starken und schwachen Verben. Modale Verben mit *.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

SuperGirlyGamer3 3

this was very helpful! im glad this site was made. lingots for everyone!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

90mhdmhd 11 9

thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

RavikaSach 12 6 5 4

thank you so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

AwesomeE2 4

Thanks for this it will help my German a lot Danke

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Uriragos 5

danke! dies ist sehr nützlich, ich am neu, Und all dies wird von Google Übersetzer kopiert, für mich akzeptiert und danke

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

biertopf 19 2

Don't use google translate, as the result usually isn't really correct, just as the sentence you wrote.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Uriragos 5

Danke, i will remember that, But i wasn't using it for the lessons, only that comment.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JOAT2B 20 20 14 8 41

Wow... more proof that I have more studying to do!! cracks mental knuckles

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

CiarnMcKen 10 3 2

Thanks, very useful

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

gajatt77 6 4

A very helpful post! Vielen Dank! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot15•3 months ago

Riza_F 9 5

Vielen dank!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

ujeremy 8 6

Backen (to bake) is two ways I believe. Just remembering from years ago. It might make an interesting addition.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

gusyes1 8 7 6 2

Vielen dank!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Kardo45 15

this is great

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

houssam.47 15 10 9 4 110

Dankeschön

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

aminredwan 12 11 169

wow... lingots :)))

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

theskyisaboveus 10 2

Thank You. Now I know which verbs to practice.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

NguynAnhDngNo.1 16 6 18

interesting

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

MartinBrunclik 18 12 7 2

Terryfic

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

shensubin 11 6

thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

zmalec 13

Thank you so much

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

lotWeijers 10 4

i'm having trouble remembering it): could anyone help me?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Oshowatt1234 7

Cool

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

felipearcaro 10 5

Thank you for that! It's really helpful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

annasargsyan03 6 3 2 2

Thank you! This is helpful

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Ich-bin-Ben 23 8 6 4

Vielen Dank!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

PiaHoff90 7

Thank you very much for this, great learning and practice material!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

hoangtuperez 7

ko the tin noi

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

EdisonPepa 6 6

Thank you! Grazie mille! Danke schön!

:D

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

NguynPhcH0 7 2 2 2

like

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Deutsch36 7

This list is very useful! Danke! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Awesome737 8 4 4 3 3 3 10

Thanks that was helpful, any other tips ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

NataliaMye 3

Thanks i'm learning german and it's my bday

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

OwenEvo 6 4 4 4 2

good research lol

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

lovenordika 3

Hey, wie das neue Lied schrieb ich?

Will You Be My Valentine?

Von: Nordika Goetze | Alter: 9

Deutschland Felsen! Deutschland Felsen! Du bist der beste Freund, den ich je hatte! Möchtest du mein Valentinstagsdate sein? Möchtest du mein Valentinstagsdate sein? Ich würde alles für dich tun, für dich. Ich versuche, Sie zu behandeln das Beste, was ich kann. Ich würde dir nie etwas tun. So, sind Sie mein Valentinsgruß? Wenn du traurig bist, bin ich auch traurig. Wenn du glücklich bist, bin ich auch glücklich. Sie machen mein Herz ticken. Es tickt den ganzen Tag. Bitte, sei mein Valentinsgruß. Sie halten mich auf den Boden, nicht auf die Schwerkraft. Verzeihst du mir, was ich dir schlecht getan habe? Ich flehe dich an!!!! Möchtest du mein Valentinstagsdate sein? Möchtest du mein Valentinstagsdate sein? Sie helfen, die deutsche Flagge zu unterstützen. Sie sagen Deutschland Felsen !! Das ist wahr. Ich stimme dir zu. Möchtest du mein Valentinstagsdate sein? Möchtest du mein Valentinstagsdate sein? Möchtest du mein Valentinstagsdate sein? Bitte bitte bitte! Möchtest du mein Valentinstagsdate sein?

And in english that is

Hey, like the new song i wrote?

Will You Be My Valentine?

By: Nordika Goetze | Age: 9

Germany Rocks! Germany Rocks! You're the best friend I ever had! Will you be my Valentine? Will you be my Valentine? I would do anything, be anything for you, for you. I try to treat you the best I can. I would never do anything to you, to you. So, will you be my Valentine? If you're sad, I'm sad, too. If you're happy, I'm happy, too. You make my heart tick. It ticks the whole entire day. Please, be my Valentine. You hold me to the ground, not gravity. Do you forgive me, for what I done bad to you? I am begging you!!!! Will you be my Valentine? Will you be my Valentine? You help support the german flag. You say Germany Rocks!! That is true. I agree with you. Will you be my Valentine? Will you be my Valentine? Will you be my Valentine? Please, please, please! Will you be my Valentine? And in english that is

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

AnaB512 8

Thanks, this is great !

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Jennifer731823 7

very good

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Michael527805 11 10 9 7

When I can have Duolingo for mobile ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

dungcd55 6

hay đó

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

lucii_anaa 9
nice thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

lbabb 8
I greatly enjoy waffles!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

stoopher 20 18 8 2 278
Are you a native speaker of German? (I am not.) A lot of the verbs you have listed as mixed, don't fit my understanding of what a mixed verb is. For example, stehen is a strong verb.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

gisberth 25 24 22 22 21 14 814
Stehen formerly was strong: stehen, stund, gestanden; so if there is no vocal change between the last two forms, it is mixed.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

stoopher 20 18 8 2 278
Erm ... that's not my understanding, and it's not even how strong verbs are defined above. This is what I was taught:

weak: No vowel changes, simple past has "t" endings, past participle ends in -t, e.g. sagen.
strong: Vowel changes, simple past does not have "t" endings, past participle ends in -en, e.g. singen.
mixed: Vowel changes (so "strong"), but all endings are weak, e.g. bringen.
0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Salomee_e 18 15 15 14 12 12 11 4 2 510
*stand (typo)

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 657
Not a typo. Note the "formerly" in gisberth's answer -- that is the way the verb used to be conjugated.

Compare also the Konjunktiv stünde which still shows this trace of the old conjugation in having (an umlauted) -u-.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Salomee_e 18 15 15 14 12 12 11 4 2 510
Ok, got it, it's just very old. I still remember buk what is now most times backte, but stund is too old for me. ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

HorazioVilches 11 6

Any chance I can have this in word or excel ? so I can make an app. Thanks

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

BolisettyS 11 10 5 11

hey i want to join a french club and german club. If you guys created any, can i get the club code?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

emmanuel569158 3

what is all these kind of words? next time use some kind of writing, not this complex

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

172 Where did the owl go??? Please let her come back (soon)!

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1556339>

belindaberlin 13 12

I really appreciate all the work the duolingo-team puts into this platform. So I will not talk about all the other changes the developer team made because there are already a lot of very constructive posts in other discussion concerning responsive layout (the usage of the new design for PC/notebook is really not comfortable...), gamification and commitment to the community. I just want to know what has happened to poor Duo! I don't want to sound childish, but I really like the owl - so where is Duo? Duo does not appear any more, neither when the websites opens nor when someone is out of hearts etc. Will she come back? I wonder, because that owl really helps my motivation (as do the sound effects and the trophies - will they come back?) and - as unlikely it may sound to some people - was one of the main reasons I fall in love this duolingo. Please bring Duo back soon...

Give Lingot3

513 years ago

Leave a new comment

41 Comments

nick4president 14

Long live Duo!

21ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Puddleglum 16 9 8 7 5

That's weird. Now that you mention it, I don't see Duo around the site. I wish Duo was in more places. :(

17ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Johnni0 21 18 15 12 10 9 3 3 2

Weird indeed, they just did a whole redesign of the owl. I mentioned somewhere before that the crying duo is nowhere to be found anymore. Just 3 broken hearts.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Puddleglum 16 9 8 7 5

It's been like that on the app for a while, so I wasn't as surprised about that. I hope the team will be putting Duo back into some places. Maybe Duo was lost in the redesigned as an oversight.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ZheGreatest 15 12 9 6 5

Duo is still in the vocabulary tab :) thank goodness!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Puddleglum 16 9 8 7 5

There's no vocab tab on the new design. They are reworking it, though. Luis has said it is coming, but we will have to be patient.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nkn15 17 7

How do you get your typing in bold ("They are reworking it, though")?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Kai_E. 25 23 20 12 4 3

By writing it like this: They are reworking it though

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nkn15 17 7

Thanks!

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

sokovia 10 6 3

Yes. More owl.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jaceklebi 20 11 10 8 6 4 3 2 2 462

More owl and more coins!

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MetaHalberd 6

How about Duo being on every Duolingo page you visit?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

J-Steven 23 15

Duo is now gone because all the nice lush trees, his old home, are all gone, along with foggy overcast weather. I say we bring back the trees, blue skies, AND our mascot Duo!

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ricaloca 23 2

I just saw her!! When you click on "strengthen your skill", she appears on the screen where you choose either timed practice or un-timed practice, encouraging you with a sporty little coach's outfit.

PS Sorry, DL, this new font is weird. The word "sporty" looks like "SPOTTY" or even "SPONY" or "SPONTY".

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

belindaberlin 13 12

Tanks a lot for this information: That gives me the hope that Duo will appear soon in other sections, too! I think I will have to do some more word practice in the future ;-)

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Shanigans 23 16 14 7 3 2 68

I got my trophy back at the end of my French tree. It doesn't have it's French scarf but it has a laurel wreath instead.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

HH324 8 4

Screenshot please? :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Shanigans 23 16 14 7 3 2 68

How do I do a screen shot please ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Shanigans 23 16 14 7 3 2 68

Alt text

Sorry it took so long and thanks Puddl3glum for your help

5Give Lingot•3 years ago

Puddleglum 16 9 8 7 5

There's a section on screenshots in this guide: <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1426103>

2Give Lingot•3 years ago

AnnaElsa1 5 4

how did you do that?

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

I spent 50 lingots on Duo outfits on the iphone app. Love Duo! Earning those lingots and the "gamified" aspect of the website really has encouraged me to keep going and spread the word about Duolingo. Duo is the face of the website, and I think a face is important.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ezattack123 10 10

I believe duo shows up before you do the timed practice; like my picture!

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jasminedesi16 25 13 10 8 8 5 3 1272

Aww I miss duo too :(

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EWHPTthe4th 10 8 4 38

the new design for duo is terrible. since when did feet float?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

A_Baby_Kangaroo 10 7

The owl is still there... Just completely modified. And for the broken hearts thing, there should be a weeping owl at the end. Thats what my friend got.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Puddleglum 16 9 8 7 5

There's been a redesign of the site. :) This is what it looks like now: image

This is what it looks like after a failed lesson: image

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

A_Baby_Kangaroo 10 7

hmmm... I swear i saw a crying, modified, cartoony, owl... yeah i knew there was a redesign... I dont like it

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

A_Baby_Kangaroo 10 7

and i didnt update yet

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

deletedaccount12 15 4 3 3

how do you update? id like to do it

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Puddleglum 16 9 8 7 5

The plan is that everyone will get the new layout by the end of the week.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

deletedaccount12 15 4 3 3
so every week it updates for you

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

Puddleglum 16 9 8 7 5
No, by the end of the week, those that have not been updated yet should have the new layout.

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

deletedaccount12 15 4 3 3
What does layout mean?

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

Puddleglum 16 9 8 7 5
It means the site looks different and a few things are changed around. It's really nothing major and anything that you are missing is being worked on.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

A_Baby_Kangaroo 10 7
its an auto

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

A_Baby_Kangaroo 10 7
I UPDATED...NUUUUUU... actually, its OK

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

Serioussu 24 23 16 12 82
I miss the owl too :'(

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JackedTortoise 23 9 3 2
The owl went to the tropics to avoid the harsh winter... but seriously I also would like it back. It's not a big deal though..

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

weesnig 6
Isn't it a him?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SalmaH._XD 6
Ok.....

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

173 I read "The Hunger Games" in French!!!
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/13512116>

jjmackk 8 8
Bonjour!

I am so happy to finally make it this far in Duolingo! I successfully completed (sorta XD) the Hunger Games! I had an English copy also, but it didn't seem to do much good... I want to thank Duo for helping me get this far! :)

Give Lingot5
01 year ago

Leave a new comment
16 Comments

SallyGoebel 9
Congratulations! You really have mastered a language when you can understand it just for fun!

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Hyllning 25 14
Yes! Nice job!

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Hyllning 25 14
I am addicted to the Hunger Games... just ask any of my friends that I follow or look at my profile. Heck, Hyllning means "Tribute" in Swedish.

I will soon get my hands (or wings) on a German copy and try to decipher it, even though I already memorized all three books by heart in English.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

jjmackk 8 8
:)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Hyllning 25 14
=]

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wildfood 25 18 15 353
That's pretty awesome, I remember Harry Potter was my first book in Spanish and I was so happy when I found it in a used book store like some treasure hiding in the back shelf.

Don't forget to keep reading more!

<https://www.bibliothequedesameriques.com/> is a free, online French lending library where you can read books in your browser or download them to devices if you have Adobe's Digital Editions software (available free at the Adobe website). Registration is required but it is free and easy. They will ask for your address but you can put down a false one if you don't feel comfortable entering your real one, I gave them my real one and haven't received anything so I don't even know why they ask.

The largest selection of books will be found by clicking the Jeunesse - albums et romans link at the bottom of the page.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jjmackk 8 8

I know! I actually went to my school library and went to the teeny-tiny French section. There were like 4 books XD.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jjmackk 8 8

Thanks everyone :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LanguageButcher 20 10 8

Would you mind giving us some more details? Did you learn French somewhere else before duo? Did you finish the french tree before you started reading the Hunger Games? How long did it take you to read it? Do you feel you know a lot of vocabulary now? Hope I can read it one day. Thanks.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jjmackk 8 8

I take French Tutor, and French in school. It's actually not so bad if you have the book beside you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lento_Rodriguez 13 12 11 10 7 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Nice work amigo!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jjmackk 8 8

;))

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Double100 11 8

Oh my! That's truly a big accomplishment! Well done!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jjmackk 8 8
Thank you! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lemarzetta 15 7 2
Wow! That is so impressive. If you can do that in French, you can do anything! :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]
That's great! Did you struggle a lot while reading it? I want to start reading french books once I finish my tree. Only a few more lessons to go :D My local library doesn't have any French books, so I'll have to see if I can get some cheap books from bookstores.

@Wildfood, thank you for that link. That's going to be very helpful.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

174 Dutch Word Of The Day
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4315667>

nathansk8s 20 15 12 11
I follow word of the day post from German, Spanish, and French on Instagram but when I looked for Dutch there wasn't an account posting Dutch words. So I made one! It's called Dutchwordoftheday and you can follow it if you're interested in seeing Dutch words in your instagram feed. Thanks!

Give Lingot1
122 years ago

Leave a new comment
4 Comments

blizzard-spider 10 10 10 9
Awesome! there also exists a seperate site for this- <http://www.woordvanvandaag.nl/> (het woord van vandaag = the word of today). The author posts a new word with explanation every day, you could use it as inspiration for your own words!

4ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

EveAdelle 16 8 8 8 7 4 3 2
Thanks for sharing that. I've been looking for a good Dutch word of the day.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ReidHT 25 15 8 7 6 5 2
Cool!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Francesska3 6

how can i have the word of the day in dutch on my email

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

175 "We are the last ones."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/307003>

Translation: Somos los últimos.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

36 Comments

SuzieRawle 9

Why can't we say estamos - I'm finding the difference between somos and estamos really tricky

19ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

grahaminald 16 5

Apparently it's somos rather than estamos because it's a finalized condition. Even if it's a temporary situation, the condition itself (last ones out of the room, the final generation) is permanent within the moment.

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago vvsey 17 16 15 14 8 3 3 4

"Permanent within the moment" - now that's funny. Anyway, I just read some advice (am I allowed to mention? Dr Lemon's website) that said let's forget permanent vs temporary because it is an oversimplification and causes confusion. Think of it instead as one (ser) describing identity and the other (estar) describing states of being. I find it useful. Now, you can replace one with the other in certain sentences, and it will change the meaning. Ella es bonita. - She is a pretty girl. She is the pretty girl. Identity. (not necessarily permanent though) Ella esta bonita. - She looks pretty today. Current state of being. I guess the same logic could be applied to "Somos los ultimos" vs "Estamos ultimos". Anyway, I'm sure native speakers don't have this debate in their heads before saying one or the other. It comes naturally to them. We are just not there yet. I think I will just keep letting it seep in without much frustration, and one day it will hit me. Soy paciente.

44ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RaviOnline 20 9 9 793

Your comment makes sense. If I extend your logic to the current sentence then "somos últimos" could mean we came last in a race or something while "estamos últimos" could mean we are last currently but the race hasn't ended yet. Need a native Spanish POV though.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

timstellmach 25 12 2 14

No, forget permanent vs. temporary. It's not true.

"Estamos últimos" would mean "we are last." Últimos in this case is an adjective describing a condition, so "estamos" is correct.

However, most any adjective in Spanish can be made into a noun meaning "the (whatever) one/s" by preceding it with the definite article. So "los últimos" is not an adjective, but a noun phrase. "We are last" is then a statement that two nouns are identical, which is "somos."

Yes, this is a case where information about a condition is grammatically constructed as a statement of identity (between the sentence subject and a hypothetical object having that condition).

8ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

GaelBraxton 25
Permanent within the moment - truly funny. Is it also an oxymoron? Moments are very fleeting things. A lot of the sentences in this lesson are open to interpretation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RachelSlos 8 8
Estar: health, emotion, location description (hot/cold, uncomfortable, hurt) all temporary Ser: profession, origin, nationality, description (tall, pretty, short, athletic, etc) all long-term and/or permanent

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

ep377 11 7 6 5
I agree. I thought 'estamos' would be the answer here because being the last ones is a temporary state...

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

heylois 13
I answered - Somos los ultimos unos. Is it redundant to include unos? I thought it would be correct either way, to include it or not.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ImpInTraining 16 6 2
Ultimos means 'last' so the technical interpretation for 'Somos los ultimos' is 'We are the last'. It is not a completely correct answer although basically means the same either way. I think your answer was correct as well.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ImpInTraining 16 6 2
After speaking with my Spanish teacher, a native-speaking lady from Nicaragua, she assures me that they simply do not use 'unos' at the end. It simply isn't done.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlfSagen 18 13 11 8 7
In my opinion 'estamos' should clearly be accepted since the context isn't known here. It could be, e.g. that we were (temporarily) the last ones to pass the pit stop (any intermediate point) of any kind of race, and at the next point we climbed to a better position. Hence, we are last only temporarily, and Estar is the correct verb.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

Platachica 22 20 2 3
Would "los finales" be acceptable, if not why?

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

timstellmach 25 12 2 14
"Final" used as a noun in Spanish denotes "end" (so it's used with continuous processes, not sequences of things, like the English noun "finish"), or alternately the final round in tournaments or the endgame in chess.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

baker910 11 5
I said "los unos finales" and it makes unos as wrong but finales as correct. Can someone clarify?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2
baker910, uno is a word that can be used to mean many things. It can be an indefinite article used before a masculine noun (as un), meaning 'a' or 'an'; it can be in the plural form as 'some' as 'unos', but it can be a pronoun, a noun, or an adjective.

For example: un hombre (a man or one man)=article or adjective; Pronoun: uno/a de ellos= one of them ; noun: el uno/= number one; I am no expert but I believe the plural of 'uno' used as a pronoun or noun would be 'unos' and could be translated into English as 'ones' ; Unos/unas also means some, the plural of una/uno.

but the problem arises that 'últimos' can also mean an adjective as well as a noun,(such as last ones, or last). Therefore in your translation 'los unos' meaning 'the ones' seem litigate to me. It may very well mean that this use of 'unos' as a noun may not be prevalent with the Spanish speakers, so maybe someone who is a native speaker can come along and give you,(and the rest of us) who reach this point an insight into this dilemma.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rmcgwn 21
[deleted]

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

baker910 11 5
Yes, I was asking about unos. I didn't know it meant "some" since that word hasn't been taught on here yet. I thought "uno" means "one" so "unos" would mean "ones." I thought it was a legitimate question. Sorry you thought it was stupid for me to include.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rmcgwn 21

It was a legitimate question. I make so many mistakes here that I'm sure I've given others a good laugh many times. I find learning spanish is all about making mistakes. I've removed my question to preserve my integrity. I do want to help.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EvaEstrellita 22 8 6 4

Why is "somos son finales" wrong?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Daria_C 11 10 5 2

That would translate to... we are they are end

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

siraj.birch 11 6 2 20

This after "los ultimos segundos" and "tus ultimas palabras"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SophiaAvery 10 3 2

I thought that it would be Nosotras instead of somos. Does it matter? Don't they both mean the same thing? Can someone please explain?!! :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jfGor 16 2 2

Nosotros/nosotras are the subject pronouns for 'we'. You can say 'nosotros somos' or 'nosotras somos' or simply 'somos' and mean 'we are'. In most cases the subject pronouns are not needed to convey the subject because it is built into the verb.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JuneM 17 14

I thought últimos meant only. I can see that if "we are the last ones" I guess that would "infer" we are the only ones. Feels a little tricky

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

IgnasiJM 15 9 2

Well, you can also think that if "we are the last ones" to do something, for example to finish a race, it means that more people has done that before, so "we are the only ones" doesn't make sense. If you wanted to say we are the only ones then you should say: "Somos los únicos."

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

último means last or last one. Make that plural with the word últimos and you have last ones

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Roslagsbanan 14 13

I gave up and wrote 'Nosotros son las' and to my surprise it was marked correct. Is it?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

timstellmach 25 12 2 14

That's just "We are the," except using the conjugation of "are" that should go with "they" instead of "we." You must have caught Duolingo at a particularly broken moment. You were right to be surprised.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RickCotner 23 169

From the context how is one supposed to know permanent or temporary condition?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

timstellmach 25 12 2 14

That's not something you need to know. It's a statement of identity (thing A is thing B), so it uses "ser."

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AScam0 13 5 2

Arrrgh, and here I thought it was a statement of position - we are in the last place, the last ones... :(I will get it one day.... Funny tho, instinct told me to use somos...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

RobChristiansen 11

nosotros somos las ultimas personas - We are the last people

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

timstellmach 25 12 2 14

You want "las últimas personas" for gender agreement.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

176 Translating internet?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/639245/Translating-internet>

pubudu79 5

I saw on TED that duolingo is also used for "real translations" - is there a way I can tell whether I am seeing some of the seeded (i.e. fixed/basic translations) or translating actual web content?

Give Lingot

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

pubudu79 5

(by the way, love this service - the whole gamification angle is brilliant!)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

XytherNZ 24 16 14 14 11 10 3 2 1

The translations are done in the immersion section :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pubudu79 5

Hi XyntherNZ, what are the immersion sections?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

XytherNZ 24 16 14 14 11 10 3 2 1

See at the top of your screen how you can see Home, Immersion, Discussion, Vocabulary & Mobile. If you click on the immersion one, you can see a whole bunch of documents uploaded for translation. If you click on them you can help translate them and earn points for doing it. Hope this helps to explain a bit :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pubudu79 5

Ah - i see now, thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

177 Frustration after completing the tree

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2960724/Frustration-after-completing-the-tree>

bakpao 25 3 1046

I have completed the German Duolingo tree a week or so ago and since then have been trying to keep the whole tree golden.

Unfortunately it seems to be an exercise in futility considering that everyday around 10 lessons will turn back to non golden. It takes me around 10 minutes to redo a lesson using my phone. With some retrying, usually I am spending more than two hours everyday just trying to keep the whole tree golden.

Two hours just trying to keep the tree golden! I feel that is such a waste of time. Yes I am refreshing my knowledge but that is such a very large time investment that now I don't feel worth doing.

I am not sure if it is even possible for people who have completed two trees or more to keep their trees golden at all time.

I find that the tree's golden status degrades far too quickly to allow for it to be golden every day. So I am suggesting that the daily degradation rate is reduced so that only 5 or 6 lessons will degrade from golden to a normal colour.

I also noticed that using the web interface, the timed practice will award you strength points for every answer you answered correctly while the non-timed one (the only one available in android) only gives credit if you have completed the whole exercise successfully. This is an inconsistency or even a bug.

A question for other users: do any of you actually succeed in keeping your tree golden for an extended amount of time (maybe months)? How much time do you spend daily?

Give Lingot16
542 years ago

Leave a new comment
47 Comments

sakasiru 22 11 9 1

The skills decay according to spaced repetition. You seem to have gone through your tree quite fast, being just level 14. This means you didn't do the individual lessons as often as someone who finishes the tree at say level 20. This means your skills still decay pretty fast at the moment. If you keep on repeating them, they will eventually decay more slowly. My last acquired skills decay after 3-4 days, while my basic skills seem to decay after months, since I have already trained them many, many times.

So if you want to keep your tree golden, go on to re-golden your tree, and eventually it won't be such a huge task anymore. That said, you don't need to do this. If you feel you know enough, you can easily refresh your memory by reading books or playing games in your target language. After all, learning a language should be fun, not a chore.

107ReplyGive Lingot13•2 years ago

fer84 22 12 8 6 2

Is it feasible to get a mathematical formulation of the tree decay? It might be interesting to calculate, how long it would take to finish a tree (if you keep the tree always golden and do X EXP per day). You would also need to know how many words are learned per lesson and how many words you strengthen per Strengthening exp ...

Maybe the wrong place to ask :)

7ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

ReubenTD 17 5
See <http://www.gwern.net/Spaced%20repetition?2>

3ReplyGive Lingot2•10 months ago

bakpao 25 3 1046
Thank you for your and pont's replies.

I finished the whole tree in around 42 days so yes, that is pretty much the cause of many lessons being non-golden in a day.

Today there are 19 lessons for me to do for full golden status, which is pretty much absurd considering that it will probably take me four hours or more to complete. So I guess I won't even be bothering to golden everything today.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Portofan 14 10 7 6 2

Did you test out of skills? Then these will decay much faster than skills where you completed every single lesson.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bakpao 25 3 1046

I think I never did that. I am a new German learner so I will have problem doing a test.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Ikamjh 22 16 10 5

I had that problem too... Its why I don't use Spanish Duolingo because I really wanted to keep the tree golden (I tested far into it) but it was too much work.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ikamjh 22 16 10 5

Its better to go slow is what I have learned. If you are trying to go slow and have a completely golden tree and want to practice, just do general practice or practice a golden skill. It will make the skills decay slower...

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bakpao 25 3 1046

Absolutely correct. It's just that I'm fascinated with German and wanted to learn as much as possible and as soon as possible.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Portofan 14 10 7 6 2

I think it's the better way to do it quickly, as it will enable you to consume real life texts and audio earlier, and this is where real learning can only start! A word heard or read in a text you are personally interested in will be remembered much more easily than in those lessons. There is no purpose in doing these little sentences over and over, as they have very little to do with the practical use of the language.

19ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

haileyhailhail 17 8 4

I totally agree. I finished my French tree at level 15 (which is early apparently) and I tested out of quite a few of the skills as I am a French major in University. It worked well for me to finish faster because my vocabulary expanded more quickly and I could actually read more complex things in French. Doing this slowly and repeating "She eats an apple" 50 times only gets you SO far.

4Give Lingot•10 months ago

Shane361067 16 9

"I can't really understand radio broadcasts" Ahodny, have you tried (seriously) News in Slow French? See <https://www.newsinslowfrench.com/>

1Give Lingot•3 months ago

ahodny 17

I agree. I completed my tree at level 13, with around 5000 XP in 27 days. I'm going to get it golden and keep it golden for a month or so as practice. But the real learning is in talking, writing, watching, and reading real language use. My frustration is that I can't really understand radio broadcasts or the like at this point. I don't know what resources I can use to bridge the gap between a completed Duolingo course and being able to "study" by simply reading books and newspapers or watching TV or listening to the radio in the target language.

0Give Lingot•5 months ago

redphillips 15 65

I know how you feel. If you can manage it, spend a week in Germany. There is absolutely no substitute for total immersion when it comes to learning quickly, because when we learn a language we are actually learning TWO skills (listening AND speaking). I know this because I'm fortunate to have Mexican neighbors.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Ikamjh 22 16 10 5

I get it...

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pont 25 23 18 16 9 5 100

As sakasiru says, the decay rate slows with practice. I completed my German tree a few weeks ago and am averaging about 50 points per day to keep it golden with a mixture of timed and non-timed practices. My Italian tree, which I completed in November, needs a similar amount of practice to keep it golden. I've given up trying to maintain my partially completed French and Spanish trees, and my Portuguese is at a very basic level so maintaining it takes no effort.

I don't measure the time I spend on Duolingo, but I'd estimate I average between half an hour and an hour a day. Italian takes very little time, since I know it well: for practically any of the skills I can now race through on a timed practice with close to full marks in a couple of minutes, so even if five skills decay in a day it's not a major time-sink. However, it's getting to the stage where I feel I have little more to learn; at some point soon I'll probably let the Italian tree drop.

For German, the situation is different: I still have to think hard about the grammar in the advanced skills, and often plod slowly through an untimed practice with half-a-dozen other browser tabs open for grammar reference. I'm slowed down even further by the bugs in the later parts of the tree: a significant amount of time goes into reporting and re-reporting Duolingo mistakes and confirming them in the sentence discussions. (With Italian, the mistakes are fewer and are rectified more quickly when reported.) But I feel that I'm still getting a reasonable amount of learning done for the time invested, so I'm happy to keep at it.

17ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

killary45 25 25 25 23 9 150

Congratulations on finishing the tree so fast. That is a great achievement, and I hope that it spurs you on to perfecting what you have learnt.

When I started Duo I was trying to get down the trees as fast as I could, but then I read something on the interesting blog "Fluent in 3 Months" that made me slow down. The guy writing that blog can speak a lot of languages and he says that the faster you learn a language the faster you forget it. Since I want to remember what I have learned in years to come I then slowed right down and everyday spent a lot more time on Strengthen Skills than on learning new Skills. I think that has really helped me learn the languages properly, although my progress down the tree is now pretty slow.

15ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

bakpao 25 3 1046

Thanks for that!

My plan is not simply to learn German in a few/several months and hope that I will remember it. From the beginning I have planned something like this:

Use and complete Duolingo tree.

At the same time use a German learning book to explain grammar and other concepts. I am using "German Demystified" by Ed Swick , which worked pretty well for Duolingo.

After the Duolingo tree is complete, keep trying to keep everything golden until I am proficient enough. I plan on allocating half an hour to an hour every day for this.

Read children's books and upgrade the difficulty level gradually. I have finished my first children's book: "Studies und Plauderien" by Sigmon Stern, which can be downloaded freely from project Guttenberg. I am hoping to be able to read Franz Kafka's book before the end of the year.

Parallel to the above: try to read some German news, text snippets and humour (German humour is not an oxymoron, apparently!). I use the dw website and Reddit, which has several subsections about German.

Find and watch/listen some movies/show/songs/YouTube video with German in it. Subtitles are fine for the first run but try to turn it off for subsequent watching. I am impressed with the mini series "Unsere Mütter Unsere Väter" or in English: "Generation War" . Definitely check it out if you haven't. For songs, "Glasperlenspiel" has many decent pop music.

For the future after I am proficient enough to comfortably read German newspaper and books: keep reading news and books and watching German shows. It is always good to read the news from several points of view due to bias, intended or not.

My greatest problem is, of course, finding native speakers. I haven't resolved this at the moment, but I will think of something later.

So yes, I am not learning German for only several months and hoping that it will stick because I know I won't be able to do that.

14ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

allsey87 19 13 10 205

There is plenty of native speakers of German who want to improve their English, just Google for "language exchange skype" or something of that nature and you'll find sites that help people find one another for language exchange.

6ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

ahodny 17

This is a really good summary. Duolingo is just one tool. It's a good one, but not sufficient. I think your use of Duolingo as a bridge to more complex videos and books is exactly right for lots of learners, as is your use of the Swick book to get some sort of after-the-fact explanation of what you learned. My only caveat--and this is especially true of German--is to learn how rules work before you try to understand why they work that way.

My question is what got you from the end of Duolingo to reading real newspapers? Just readers or kids books? Bridging that gap from where Duolingo gets you, about B1 level, to a level where you can immerse yourself in media in the target language is my sticking point, as I'm about B1 in Spanish and low B2 in German. I can't read Der Standard, FAZ, or SDZ without it taking a really long time. I can't watch TV in Spanish without being bored because I don't understand enough. I'd love to be C1 in both, if for no other reason than what you've mentioned--to see the world from a few different perspectives.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

haileyhailhail 17 8 4

The fluent in 3 months guy pisses me off. He makes so many generalizations about language learning. Yeah sure, these things worked for him but he talks like he's speaking on behalf of the entire world. I went from not speaking a word of French to being pretty fluent in 2 years. Immersion dude. Yeah, if you speed through Duo, your effects probably won't last but you can only get so far on here anyway. I guess my point is jumping in the deep end when learning a language is never a bad thing, even if you learn it quickly. Slower is not always better.

7ReplyGive Lingot1•10 months ago

ellen_ofarrell 23 18 17 752

Immersion works! I went from very basic French to fluent enough you probably wouldn't have guessed I was a foreigner in three months. OK, I was age 11, we moved to France and I got put in a French school and had to deal with the language all day every day but the point is that it works. I think if you could replicate the experience as an adult it wouldn't take you much longer. It felt like my head was going to explode for about two of those months and then it all came together at once. And no, I haven't forgotten my french since then.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

ahodny 17

I get that, but I also have speaking conversations a few times a week using Italki. I feel like i want to be able to address how things further down the tree (modals) work pretty early in lessons.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

salspauh 18 10 7 5

I have an actual answer for your question, rather than just telling you you're doing it wrong. You've indicated you are already aware of this in your post, but you haven't seemed to take it to its logical conclusion. It is kind of a cheat and is unlikely to be an optimal learning style. With that disclaimer out of the way: If you do timed practice in the web interface on a module that is only one bar short, you only have to get ONE answer right for it to turn the skill golden. So you can select timed practice, get one right, then let the timer run out, and that is a super fast way to make your tree gold. So to answer your question, that is what I do when I feel like trying to keep it all gold and only want to spend a few minutes on doing that.

Just to preempt some of the otherwise inevitable replies to my comment: no, I don't think this is the best way to learn and no, it is not the point of the site, and so on. I know. It's just the fastest way that I am aware of to turn all your passed modules golden.

One caveat of this is I'm not sure if that module would decay more quickly than if you did this instead of the normal practice -- it depends on how they do the accounting internally and exactly how the decay function aggregates over the words in a module.

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bakpao 25 3 1046

Yes I am aware of that but I don't do it because I use duolingo mostly from my Android, which does not have that feature.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

caselthor 15 13 11 11 8 4

I think if you score a 5/5.0 on the certificate test, your tree should become permanently golden. You're obviously done and need to start a new tree at that point.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

haileyhailhail 17 8 4

French major here, I got a 5/5 on the certificate test halfway through my tree. I got it completely golden about a month ago, it's such a drag to keep up. You're right, it should stay golden if you get a 5/5.

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

salspauh 18 10 7 5

This is interesting -- do you have any evidence to verify this?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

caselthor 15 13 11 11 8 4

No real empirical evidence. I scored a 5 on the certificate test in German after completing the German tree, but my tree is in shambles. It helps that I was a German major too.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

salspauh 18 10 7 5

Wait, how is that not empirical evidence regarding whether the tree turns golden? Maybe my question was confusing, I meant evidence that the tree becomes permanently golden after you finish the test. Actually now I see that you were saying that's how you think it ought to be rather than saying that's how it is. Is that right? Dang, you got my hopes up.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

caselthor 15 13 11 11 8 4

Oh, right, I meant that it would be cool if it did do that. My tree looks ugly, but I don't think profiles show any gained certificates.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

turidbrox 24 21 13 13 10 4 3 3 3 2 1119

I don't agree with this. Even if you know all the skills in the tree at a certain point, that doesn't mean you won't forget anything later. That is the whole point of spaced repetition.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

caselthor 15 13 11 11 8 4

If you can score a 5/5.0, you need to advance from Duolingo to real life application. Keeping your tree golden forever isn't going to make you fluent. So it might as well stay golden when you reach that point and start practicing in your daily life.

13ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

jmgomez77 13

Maybe it's now time to join a club or an online community, read books, listen to radio or watch TV? Duolingo is just a tool, I started with Babbel to learn vocabulary, then moved to Duo, next is literature and mass media, and interacting with real people. Good luck!

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

marxaholic 20 13 3

If you consider the fact that everytime you are strengthening the skills, you're solidifying words (through repetition leading to deeper memory formation), it's not really an exercise in futility.

In other words, the point of Duolingo is to LEARN A LANGUAGE.

You might not notice that each time you repeat lessons, you learn a word or two here and there, but it is happening slowly but surely. I would very much doubt that anyone who completes a tree has actually learned (stored in their long term memory) more than 30% of the words. The actual learning takes place through the repeated exposure to the words in the tree.

So, while it may feel frustrating, keep at it until you feel like the entire tree (every skill, or every time you do a general "strengthen skills") is super easy. At THAT point, you can say that you've learned what Duolingo has to teach.

Just my 2 cents.

2ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Druckles 25 25 22 18 1339

My tree tends to stay golden with very little practice, and I haven't even finished it yet.

I have, however, recently been working to make 'Basics 2' golden without practising it directly. There appears to be a problem with the generic 'Strengthen Skills' practice. I've been working at it for the past two weeks with over 100 coins a day.

Edit: Also, congratulations on finishing :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

egfinn 25 25 19 14 13 7 1156

I almost always use the generic "Strengthen Skills" practice and do not have much decay. I do have a little more now that I have been going through lessons faster instead of doing just one lesson to every two or three practices. But I have been able to strengthen it with "Strengthen Skills." Sometimes I have to do it several times to get it back to golden, but I have not gone into any of the specific skills to return anything to golden.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ikamjh 22 16 10 5

Yes I have had that problem with the generic one too recently. All the sudden portuguese fell apart on me with all the skills loosing so much because I did the generic one for a long time...

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bakpao 25 3 1046

Thank you. No, I almost never use the generic one so I am not aware of any of the problems.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mike790372 12 9 9 7 5 5

You should practice with these. <http://www.tagesschau.de/download/podcast/>

They are updated every day and the sound and language quality is good. Personally I've learned to not make completing the tree a goal. Practicing everything, even stuff you think is simple is the best thing you can do for language retention. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ClaudiaGee2 21 20 15 15 13 12 6 6 195

I do agree, I do spend much more time on it than I anticipated. It's so addictive to keep your tree golden but it does take all the little free time I've got, so I don't do much housework these days, oops. Which book of Kafka's would you like to read, Die Verwandlung or Das Schloss? (Or anything else?) Good luck with your German. I'm Dutch, I'm a German teacher, I live in the UK and my church is Norwegian. ;-)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

ellen_ofarrell 23 18 17 752

I have four (related) trees I'm keeping gold at the moment so it is possible although some days it does take a fair bit of time. For three of those trees the decay rate has slowed down enough I probably average one lesson a day needing to be worked on, possibly two and sometimes none at all. One of those trees is a nightmare and seems to need huge amounts more revision - I think it's a Duolingo bug/feature about that language. But yes it is possible to keep more than one tree gold and it does get easier with time as long as you keep getting the answers right.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

SjefvanOekel 19 10 10 7 6

Same problem

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SjefvanOekel 19 10 10 7 6

Wow 300 day streaks?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lohnesinpr 18 8 7 303

I find it frustrating to try and finish a skill strengthen, make only one error and yet not be given credit for it. Yes, I get 10 points, but the skill still needs to be strengthened. Does this happen to everyone?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Deidra788563 17

It happened to me once but only when I made several errors. Check to see if you only have one "bar" of the skill that needs to be strengthened (if you're using the website). Harder to tell whether you need more than one review if you're using the app. But that may be what's going on - the longer you wait to strengthen, it may take several reviews to regild the skill.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

178 "My apartment is on the third floor."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/670722/My-apartment-is-on-the-third-floor>

Translation: Mon appartement est au troisième étage.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

20 Comments

jrobblee 13

Why can't it be "Mon appartement est sur le troisieme etage" ?

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

buffalump21 25 11 6 5 3 2

I wondered this too. May be it's just one of those conventions where we have to use "a" instead of "sur". Think we've just gotta learn them.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

OldBob 25 25 23 13 12 11 11 9 9 6 3 3

The third floor for Americans is the second floor for the French on account of the whole rez de chaussee thing, n'est pas?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

smearedink 25 8 5 1427

But the word "third" is still "troisième" which is what is being translated here.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

swmmrmn 25 254

While you are literally correct, I think it's valid to consider that you'll get very different results if you tell an American to go to the "third floor" vs. if you tell a French person to go to the "troisième étage".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pammie1031 7

I agree with you! I put deuxieme because I knew that the 3rd floor for french people is our 2nd floor-
-and duolingo marked it wrong!

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

[+] 5 hidden comments

aneteomelete 12 12 10 5 4

Oui, c'est ça! How does one report these things???

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

percyflage 22 18 10

Go to the office. It's on the third floor, or is that the second, or maybe the thirteenth?

Report what, btw?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aneteomelete 12 12 10 5 4

Report to duolingo?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ChmielowiecAdam 12 10 4 3 2

Why au?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ketutsf 14 14 14 13 13 12 7 5

Since "étage" is a masculine noun, we use the masculine article "le" in the phrase "le troisième étage" = "the third* floor." To express "on the third floor" in French, we need to use the preposition "à" = "to/at/in." But "à" contracts with "le" to form "au": á + le = au.

Putting it all together we have:

"on the third floor" = "(á + le) troisième étage" = "au troisième étage."

*In American English, this floor, which is three floors above the ground floor, is called "the fourth floor."

5ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

ChmielowiecAdam 12 10 4 3 2

Thanks! Are there any other contractions? I guess "á la..." sounds good to me, but how about "á les"? Does it contract too?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ketutsf 14 14 14 13 13 12 7 5

Both "á" and "de" contract with the articles "le" and "les" (but not "la" or "l'"):

á + le = au

á + les = aux

de + le = du de + les = des

But we do not contract "á la plage" or "de l'intérieur." Also note that "le" does not contract when it is used as a pronoun:

"Elle m'a demandé de le faire." = "She asked me to do it."

Similar contractions apply to "á" or "de" followed by some form of "lequel." For example:

á + lesquels = auxquels

de + lequel = duquel

de + lesquelles = desquelles

There are too many contractions in French for me to give you a complete answer. So here's a link:

<http://french.about.com/library/pronunciation/bl-contractions.htm>

5ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

ChmielowiecAdam 12 10 4 3 2
Thanks again!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AnnaTall 25 3 3 3
Is it 'liaiseable' - 'esT au', please??

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

179 Die, Der and Das

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1287119/Die-Der-and-Das>

CarlosRCR 5

I'll like to know the difference between: Die, Der and Das; until what I've seen, It seems as Der is for masculine, Die for feminine, and Das for plural; is that correct? Thanks.

Give Lingot
03 years ago

Leave a new comment
3 Comments

raupach 7

German nouns have one of three genders: masculine, feminine or neuter. Unless you are native speaker it doesn't really make sense why one noun is masculine and the other is feminine. There are some rules of thumb that might help, but you are well advised to just learn the gender by heart.

<http://yourdailygerman.wordpress.com/2013/05/17/german-noun-gender-learn-tips/>

The good news: the definitive article for plurals is always "Die".

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

godonlyknows 25 14 12 9 9 49

German has 3 genders - masculine, feminine and neuter. "der" is masculine, "die" is feminine and "das" is neuter. In the plural, all genders use "die". Note that der, die, das not only change based on gender/number of the noun, it will also change based on the case of the noun too.

As you progress down the tree, duolingo will introduce when you use the different cases but it's always a good idea when you're learning a word to learn the article with it. So don't learn "Mann", learn "der Mann".

This site might help explain things further - http://german.about.com/library/blcase_sum.htm

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CarlosRCR 5

Ok, thank you for the help!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

180 How to remember the German dative prepositions

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3793557>

DariaTrehyMathes 25 13 11 18

A friend of mine gave me this little clue, sing the following list to the tune of the Blue Danube Waltz. The list is arranged alphabetically.

aus, außer, bei, mit, nach, seit, von, zu

All of these prepositions are always followed by the dative case.

Give Lingot8

222 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

theupandup 19 3 3 2

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bw1O_Z9Wo-8 I found this video singing it :) very clever way of remembering.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DariaTrehyMathes 25 13 11 18

Oh, you get a lingot from me for this link! Love it! :-)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Cours_toujours 10 7 7 5

Haha! Ich danke dir!! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

atIramona 20 11 11 6 6 4 3

Vergessen nicht gegenüber

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Williedunn 25 9 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 3 2 2 86

Learn German with Ania on you tube teaches this

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

madSimonJ 12 9

Awesome. I've learned that set of prepositions before, but I never thought of using The Blue Danube!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DariaTrehyMathes 25 13 11 18

Yeah, it made the list so easy for me to remember! Did you check out my hint on remembering the accusative by singing the list to London Bridge is Falling Down? :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

181 difference between manger and manges

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2341531>

IgorOrlov 2

can someone help, i cant understand when to use manger and manges. thank you :)

Give Lingot2

32 years ago

Leave a new comment

21 Comments

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 683

Look at the first group conjugation from this post. But specifically for the verb manger (to eat) :

Je mange (I eat);

Tu manges (you eat);

Il, elle, on mange (he, she, it, one eats);

Nous mangeons (we eat);

Vous mangez (you eat, plural or formal);

Ils, elles mangent (they eat).

67ReplyGive Lingot15•2 years ago

5hpy 6

This is so helpful, thank you! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Arundhati527918 11 1

This was very helpful... Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

HHla5S 6

I gave you a lingot for such a great answer!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

theaestheticmind 2

thank you finally!! :) it was very helpful

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

crush 14 14 8 3

"Manges" is used with "tu" (tu manges), "mange" is used with "je" and "il/elle". It's like how we say "I run" but "he runS" in English, only the "s" isn't pronounced in French.

18ReplyGive Lingot4•2 years ago

bleekicker 7 4

So are manger and manges pronounced the same?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dwilkyway 8 3
Yes

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IgorOrlov 2
thank you very much helped alot! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]
that makes SO much sense now, thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rewong 4 2 2
It's all about conjugation! You can check under the "Tips and notes" of each skills page for grammar explanations. If you want a super-detailed chart:
http://french.about.com/od/verb_conjugations/a/manger.htm

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SongbirdSandra 18
Actually, there are no Tips and Notes in French.
I did see the Tips & Notes in Spanish and they are completely awesome!
That link you provided is perfect- I use it myself. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 683
Really? That sucks! There is about one in every two to three lessons in German and I wish there were more and they were more complete. But I feed my grammar cravings elsewhere on the web.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wolfstarttrashh 6
It's all part of the ER verb endings. This is how I learned them: Take away the ER and add the correct ending (depending on the pronoun)

Je > e Tu > es Il/Elle/On > e Nous > ons (for manger it becomes mangeons because otherwise it is the incorrect word) Vous > ez Ils/Elles > ent

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Snooks. 10
Je mange, Tu manges, Il/Elle mange. Just remember the "s" is used with "TU" Snooks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Vashaun.T 9
this helped alot

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Jenna908562 5
je mange, tu manges

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

NuttyNiya 2
idk either help meeeee

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

HHla5S 6
Thank you so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

SachiHiromura 6
So mange is for I, he, she, it, or one eats? Manges is only for you eat?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Ezmia 6
I always get stuck on 'eat' verbs, thx so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

182 Unable to type special characters on the tablet

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3622828>

SergioDeveloper 22 13 12 12 11 11 11 7 7 6 6 5 4 3 62

I'm studying German and there are some characters, such as eszett (ß), that are not available on the keyboard. It would be nice if the buttons with the letters appear on the screen as well as in Duolingo by computer.

Give Lingot
12 years ago

Leave a new comment
7 Comments

sakasiru 22 11 9 1

For people with any non-German keybord, there are official substitutes:

ß = ss

ä = ae ü = ue

ö = oe

As far as I have tried it, duo accepts these.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PatriciaJH 25 25 16 7 18

On Android, I just use Swype; it has keyboards for different languages, which you can switch between very, very quickly. I see it's now available for Apple platforms as well.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jackthelad93 10 8 6

If you go into the settings on your tablet, you can choose to type with a German keyboard, which has all the special characters.

Edit: You can on Android, anyway.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

lauryswagner 18 10 6 6 5 4 4 2 1

If you're using an Apple product then you can also switch the keyboard in settings.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dallontrash 14 11 6 5 4 4 4 2

You also don't have to switch the keyboard on an Apple product. If you hold down on the character, then a whole list of that letter's special characters should pop up. For example, when I hold down the "s" on my keyboard, I get ß, ś, and š.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jackthelad93 10 8 6

I just tested this on Android and it works the same. So forget the German keyboard. :P

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IanWatson10 9

Great idea

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

183 Differences between lo siento/ perdón / disculpe / con permiso

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4632849>

JasonGuzman 9

How to use lo siento, perdón, disculpe, con permiso??? Have you ever felt struggling in these words?

I think it's quite a common question for who started to learn Spanish and I would like to ask u guys for help. Does anyone know how to differentiate these words? It will be better if you can suggest for me some specific contexts. Thank you in advance and I will very appreciate your help :)

Give Lingot

62 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

CattleRustler 19 12 1051

From what I have learned from my spanish speaking friends, and possibly contrary to what DL may teach, the following uses are common.

Lo Siento is for apologizing and expressing sorrow. It is used as "I am sorry", but literally it means "I feel it"

Permiso/Con Permiso is used for saying "excuse me" like if you want to pass by someone in the store aisle, and they don't yet see you. The literal translation is "permission/with permission" and is basically a request/question.

Perdon is also "excuse me" (literal Pardon) but is used more in the event that two people accidentally bump into each other in a crowded space. Its basically an apology in essence.

Disculpe is also a form of "excuse me" but more in an exclamatory form: "Excuse me!" Implying shock or surprise at something said or done. You wouldn't use this to replace Perdon or Permiso forms.

Again, this is what native speakers from various countries have told me, but there are always regional variations. Hope that helps. buean suerte.

11ReplyGive Lingot8•2 years ago

15hello 7 4

have a Lingot!!!! for free!!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

15hello 7 4

Thank you guys, now i know.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1259

Your instincts are right on with respect to it being a common question. This question is asked often in the forums.

In fact, here's a recent thread from a few days ago that you'll find helpful:
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4537610>

In general, "lo siento" is used to offer condolences, or to apologize for causing harm. "disculpe" or "perdon" to get somebody's attention, and "con permiso" if somebody is in your way.

10ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

meggycortes 9

have a lingot!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

184 "The car is mine and only mine."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/503860>

Translation: El auto es mío y solo mío.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

11 Comments

fauna1 15

What's the difference between solo and solamente?

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Talca 25 12

I believe they are both adverbs and mean the same thing.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tetrasteeth 24 19 2

I had a multiple choice here - "El auto es mío y solo mío" was correct, "El coche es mío y sólo mío" was incorrect. After reading about it, I guess sólo was the original spelling of the adverb, which is now obsolete, except where it could be confused with the adjective solo.

So, just leaving this comment here in case someone in the future gets confused over that like I did.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wklem88 25 107

Doesn't sólo require an accent?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Talca 25 12

one means only and one means alone

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

baker910 11 5

I don't understand the difference between solamente and únicamente. Can someone explain?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

horvathdavid 10 9 2 2

Not a huge difference in meaning. Solamente more "only" and unicamente is more like "solely" in English.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Lirodin 9 8 2

El auto es mio y solo mio sounds a bit redundant. Why can't we just say El auto es solamente mio? I think it would be best.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kidofzakarum 6 6 3

In Spain, nobody calls a car "auto" or "automóvil", not in everyday speech anyway. The term used is "coche".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TuroTouret 10 7 6

I'm against RAE!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

185 The use of à, au(à+le), aux(à+les)

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/903211>

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

A wise person once taught me that the best way to learn or know how much you know is to verbalize/explain your knowledge.

So here is my attempt to build up on DuoLingo's explanation of à. DuoLingo seems to only list à (to and with), au (of the), and aux (to the). According to about.com, there are more tricky uses of it listed below :

Location : J'habite à Paris - I live in Paris

Distance : Il est à 6 km de lui - he is 6 km [away(distance)] from you.

Point in Time : J'arrive à 06:00 -- I arrive at 06:00.

Manner, style, or characteristic: J'habite à l'africaine - I live in the African style

Possession : Un ami à moi - a friend of mine

Measurement : Payer à la semaine - to pay by the week

Purpose or use :Une tasse à thé - A cup for tea/ teacup.

In the passive infinitive: À louer - for rent

In addition, it must be combined(contracté) with à + les or à + le :

Masculine: au (mandatory contraction of 'à le')

Feminine: à la

Plural: aux (mandatory contraction of 'à les')

(Suggestion by jrikhal)

e.g.:

Incorrect : à le : je vais à le magasin - I go to the shop

Correct : à+le = au : je vais au magasin - I go to the shop

Incorrect : à les : je vais à les maisons - I go to the houses

Correct: à+les = aux : je vais aux maisons - I go to the houses

However, à does not contract/merge with la or l' (à+la/l' is not = au), and not with direct objects :

Correct : tu dois continuer à le faire bien

Incorrect: tu dois continuer au faire bien (direct object)

Incorrect: J'habite aux(à+l') africaine

Incorrect: Payer au(à + la) semaine

http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/preposition_a.htm

Are there any more unusual common uses of it?

Edit: added comments by Sitesurf, jrikhal

Give Lingot3

93 years ago

Leave a new comment

10 Comments

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Details:

- Distance: I suggest "km" instead of minutes (which is time measurement)

- "à l'africaine" vs "à la-Africaine": elision of la in front of a vowel + africaine (adjective) not to be capitalized

- "tu dois continuer à le faire bien" (not au faire): you are right

Plus, a comment: you cannot expect to list all the cases where preposition "à" has "an unusual use" because it depends which your native language is and whether you compare French with English or with another language*

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Merci beaucoup. I've corrected the errors you identified. You are quite right in indicating that I cannot list everything, I only endeavoured to list the most common uses that sometimes baffles me when I'm practicing French.

A language is always evolving, one cannot hope to grasp a lot of the uses unless one is truly immersed in it. For example googling, is a currently used term that didn't exist few years ago, and may not exist in some languages.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Quite right, we some time say (but never write): "je l'ai googlé", meaning I searched information about him via Google.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

For the contraction, it not only "seems", it's mandatory for 'le' and 'les'. So your table is not completely right. For example you one of your own example says je vais au magasin - I go to the shop.

If you want a table, I would write this one:

Masculine: au (mandatory contraction of 'à le')

Feminine: à la

Plural: aux (mandatory contraction of 'à les')

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

hmm, not sure if I understand, you mean something like this ??

Masculine | Feminine | Plural
au(à +le) | à la | aux(à + les)

*Mandatory Contraction

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

Yes. au is the mandatory contraction of 'à+le' and aux of 'à+les'.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Thanks, I didn't see that before. I also added more examples to make it easier to understand.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CharlotteHywd 16 10 7 5 3 3

In a related vein, is anyone else confused by the difference between de, du, and des, and when each is supposed to be used? I have lost far too many hearts on that one.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

Look at: <http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/de-vs-du-de-la-des.htm>

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CharlotteHywd 16 10 7 5 3 3

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

186 "The cars were stopped."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/508031>

Translation: Los coches fueron detenidos.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

51 Comments

markusenes 18

Yes it is correct too. Here in Spain is more common saying "los coches estaban parados"

30ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

MauroQuil 11 10 10 10 10

I think the sentence meant to describe the act of stopping the cars, not the state of the cars.

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

brianhaddad 10

That's the stinky thing about trying to translate such a short blurb from English into Spanish. Without context, the English sentence could mean either one. In Spanish the use of ser/estar determines which idea is intended.

13ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

SallyBrown1 13 8 8 2

I think you're right, but it's definitely annoying to have a perfectly good translation marked wrong because it's not the answer they had in mind.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

homefire 23 14

But there is no way in the world to tell which they meant!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

TezraM 12

It corrected mine saying it should be fueron parados.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fotopala 12 10

I believe this is correct as well, "los coches estaban parados"

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

brianhaddad 10

It is a correct translation of "the cars were stopped," but it means something very different from "Los coches fueron detenidos."

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

homefire 23 14

Which is why this is a bad sentence. There are just so many ways to interpret what is happening. If the cars were stopped along the country road for a picnic, it would require a completely different construction than if they were stopped by border patrol. Right? And different yet if they simply stopped for a traffic light?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

brianhaddad 10

Cars that are stopped along a country road for a picnic and cars that are stopped at a traffic light would both use "estar" since "estar" is for a state (the state of being stopped). Being stopped by a police officer, or the act of being stopping by a stoplight would be "ser" since "ser" is for action.

People here are trying to differentiate between "ser" and "estar" based on how permanent or temporary the condition is. But in reality those two words are not separated by that idea alone. "Ser" is for living, breathing, acting ideas--things of life and essence. "Estar" is for states--states of being ("subject to change" is sometimes associated with this, which leads to the "temporary" confusion).

It is good to learn at first that when talking about traits you use "ser" if it is something characteristic about the person that is not likely to change, and use "estar" for things that you note casually in that moment that are not a permanent trait of that person. For example, if I say that deep down inside you are a wonderful, beautiful human being, I am describing you using "ser." If you get all prettied up for our date tonight I might remark that you look lovely or beautiful tonight, and I would use "estar" for that.

Outside of describing people and traits, the "ser/estar" relationship isn't so cut and dry as "permanent/temporary."

14ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kennynica 19 13 993

Here is a link that helps to explain this concept:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Spanish_verbs#Expressing_movement

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

homefire 23 14

But it is not only a question of ser vs. estar. In English, at least, "were stopped" can be either a passive or an active concept. It may mean simply hanging out, not going anywhere, or it may mean they paused for a moment, or that they were forcibly detained. So parado may be a perfectly fine choice, or detenido, but without any further context, it could also be translated quite correctly as inmóvil. "Stopped" is often used as an adjective in English.

I realize that Duolingo can't think of every possibility, but when there are so many possible interpretations to a sentence, it would be nice if they made a bit more explanation of which situation they want to portray. For instance, "stopped by the police" would have made this sentence far less vague.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

wworsnopp 11 2 1

I believe "estuvieron" fits the temporary nature of a car being in a stopped position. Lots of room for discussion here but it depends on interpretation more than anything.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TezraM 12

The difference is not temporary/permanent, despite all the posts.

Read here: <http://www.studyspanish.com/lessons/serest1.htm>

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AurosHarman 23 11

If you're using estar here, you almost certainly want the imperfect, estaban, because you're talking about the cars being in the state described by "stopped", over an extended period. Like, you were walking down the street, and you saw some cars, and those cars were stopped, not going.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kazmax1 17

What is wrong with "Se detuvieron los coches"

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

brianhaddad 10

Nothing, but it's a pretty advanced construction (reflexive for passive voice). It should probably be an accepted translation, but I wouldn't expect most novices to arrive at that possibility.

Of course, I also wasn't paying attention to what they have/haven't taught up to this point. If reflexive verbs for passive voice have already been covered then it wouldn't be all that bad.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Casiquire 20 13 7 3 54

Keep in mind, duo makes you redo lessons down the road, so advanced constructions should be accepted. I finished the entire Spanish tree, and here I am being told I need to learn what a "padre" is.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

shankroll 12 11 6 5 2

It is correct, but has it been taught in the skill tree yet? I have been getting things wrong with ambiguous English phrases that could be translated with different meanings into Spanish. In this sentence, without any other context, "The cars were stopped." could mean 1) The cars were stopped (by someone, like a police officer.) 2) The cars were stopped (and not moving). The first meaning would be translated with "fueron" because it is passive. The second with "estaban" because it describes a continuous state in the past.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

AurosHarman 23 11

You're correct. Both should be accepted. (As well as "se detuvieron", using the reflexive passive, which is actually more common than ser + participle.)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Casiquire 20 13 7 3 54

As far as the skill tree is concerned, I finished my entire tree and DL said I needed to come back and strengthen this lesson. So this lesson's place in the tree is irrelevant. Advanced answers should be accepted.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rodstudio 15 11 6 4 3
ser o estar / fueron o estaban

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

brianhaddad 10
Why Ésteban? ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Hurtsickle 9
It is "fueron" because the choice is between "fueron and "estuvieron". Estaban isn't an option here because it's a different verb tense than what has already been learned.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

eaarthman 15 7
That is not particularly good reasoning.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AurosHarman 23 11
Nope, the main choice here is between fueron and estaban, not fueron and estuvieron. You could probably contrive a situation in which estuvieron made sense, but it's much less likely.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago liluz123 11

What about sean?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

neiht20 15 6 5
"Sean" is subjunctive, which would not apply this this situation because there is no need for it in this sentence.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

khaakenajaf 15
this is the physical state of cars so estar past form must be used. any reson for using ser?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

brianhaddad 10
Ser, in this case, indicates not the state but the action. If a policeman pulled you over then I would say that your car "fue detenido" (was stopped) by the police. It most literally means "detained," but "stopped" works just as well.

This is where thinking of estar as for physical state only can sometimes trip people up. You must be able to see when something you are initially inclined to interpret as a physical state might also be something else.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

REXWALKER 25 25 6 2

I agree

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 2

Why not estuvieron?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

brianhaddad 10

"estuvieron parados" could work, but it would mean "the cars were stopped (they were in a state of not moving)" whereas this one means "the cars were stopped (meaning someone stopped them, a policeman or something)."

In this case Duolingo should take both answers but the translation is looking for a very specific meaning that isn't readily captured by the English words chosen. Most likely this question was originally presented in the Spanish "fueron detenidos" (which would be used in the context of being detained or stopped, perhaps by an authority), and the English translation was then provided as "the cars were stopped." Had it started as an English phrase, then been translated, I'm sure "fueron detenidos" and "estuvieron parados" would both be accepted. Perhaps Duolingo can be convinced to accept both (or some combination of both options).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AurosHarman 23 11

The issue with estuvieron is that it is unusual to try to describe a past state of being using the preterite, unless you also specify a period over which the state was relevant. You might be able to contrive a situation where it would make sense, given the English prompt, the imperfect is a much better choice.

Yo caminaba por la acera. Vi algunos coches. Los coches estaban parados.

I was walking along the sidewalk. I saw some cars. The cars were stopped.

The first sentence describes something that should be interpreted as ongoing. The second is a discrete / complete event. The third, again, is something continuous -- the cars were stopped before I saw them, and unless the story specifies otherwise we can expect they were probably stopped after I walked on. It would be kind of peculiar to use the preterite in that last sentence.

A common use of preterite estar might be: Juan no estuvo en clase ayer. Juan was not in class yesterday. We're talking about somebody's location during a discrete, bounded event. Or: Estuve enfermo el sábado pasado. I was sick last Saturday. Again, we've put clear bounds on the time we're talking about. Without that kind of specificity built into the narrative, the preterite sounds weird.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FL0grown 23 21 9
Estuvieron

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

frank479 16 77

If you had said, "Los coches se fueron detenidos." how does the addition of "se" change the meaning?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AurosHarman 23 11

You can use "se detuvieron", or "fueron detenidos". "Se fueron detenidos" is wrong.

The "se detuvieron" is an example of the reflexive passive, in which a reflexive form is used to eliminate any specific subject. You may commonly see the expression, "Se habla español aquí." If you translated this literally using a reflexive pronoun you'd have, "Spanish speaks itself here." But that obviously is not what it means -- it means, "Spanish is spoken here (... by whoever happens to be speaking)." Many verbs can be shifted to passive voice in this manner. In fact, I would say that this the best way of translating English passive voice, in the majority of cases.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

diana.valji 13 12 9 7

Would it not also be correct to use "altados" for stopped?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DCIvanhoe 21 10 9 8 7 6 5 5 4 4 4 3 26

"tapamos" das not accepted although it was suggested

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wklem88 25 107

Why not simply "Los coches paraban"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

neiht20 15 6 5

Because it changes the meaning slightly. "los coches paraban/pararon"=the cars stopped (they did it themselves) "los coches fueron detenidos/parados"=the cars were stopped (someone/something else stopped them)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hesolomon 25 3

"Los coches se pararon." I think this should be marked correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

neiht20 15 6 5

It would be "se pararon los coches" for it to be passive voice. I think if you said "los coches se pararon" it would mean that "the cars stopped themselves" or "the cars stopped each other".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

thepriebe 15 7 7 2

Why is the participle plural here? When do you pluralize a verb?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

neiht20 15 6 5

Past participles can function as adjectives, and so they must follow the rules of adjectives. Adjectives must match the noun that it refers to in gender and number, since the noun is "coches" the adjective must be masculine and plural.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

trua9 16 6

Why would los coches fueron dejados not be accepted? In the lesson on participles dejado is translated to mean stopped.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

neiht20 15 6 5

I believe "dejado" in that context would mean "left". You can use "dejar" to mean "to stop", but it's usually used as a phrase "dejar de" together with the "de", which would not fit in this sentence.
<http://www.wordreference.com/es/en/translation.asp?spen=dejar>

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

jjk8043 16 5 35

So, as of 10-4-16, the "hints" given for "stopped" are "tapamos," "suspender," and "apretaba." None of these actually means "stopped." "Detenidos" and "parados" are not mentioned.

Since "we cover," "to suspend", and "squeezed" don't really have anything in common, unless I'm missing some idiom, one has to wonder if this is a joke.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Superskrull31 14

How many times the correct answer is not in the dictionary hints!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

ande095 14 9 1

Four months ago, jjk8043 pointed out that "the "hints" given for "stopped" are "tapamos," "suspender," and "apretaba." None of these actually means "stopped." "Detenidos" and "parados" are not mentioned." The correct answer is not in this list.

This provides confusion for learners. Is there a way that either the answers in the hints list could be recognized as correct or that the hints list would begin with the acceptable answers?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

187 the difference between "de" and "del"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/27193/the-difference-between-de-and-del>

nimasoltanirad 19 9

i want to know what's the difference between de and del (as in english means of) ? which one for male names and which for femal names?

Give Lingot

24 years ago

Leave a new comment

2 Comments

Raymond17 14 12 7

The contraction "del" is formed by merging "de + el" ("of the"). On the other hand, there is no contraction for "de la". The same thing happens with "al" ("a + el"), and "a la"; el being masculine and la being feminine.

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

nimasoltanirad 19 9

dear Raymond, thanks for your nice explanation. i got it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

188 "Sometimes, we can't see the forest for the trees."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3018465>

Translation: A veces, los árboles no nos dejan ver el bosque.

12 years ago

Leave a new comment

29 Comments

dmavrcks 23 8 6 5

A veces, no podemos ver el bosque por los arboles

Why is this wrong?

44ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

GerSzej 14 13 13 13 242

Please do not reject a literal translation if it makes sense like the one proposed by dmavrcks. If it is an idiom, place it with other idioms, or just get rid of that sentence altogether.

25ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OnesimusUnbound 25 23 17 11 1084

Can anyone breakdown the sentence structure?

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jqstringfield 24 6 286

"A veces": Sometimes, "los árboles": the trees, "no nos dejan ver": do not let us see, "el bosque": the forest.

47ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

OnesimusUnbound 25 23 17 11 1084

Gracias, the phrase no nos dejan ver is the key to understand the whole sentence. I've always thought of dejar as to left, forgetting that it could mean "to let".

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talca 25 12

Dejar's multiple meanings: to let, to allow, to leave, to permit, to forget and (even) to stop. But some of these meanings are related to prepositions positioned with the verb: dejar + a = leave; degar + de + infinitive = to stop (doing that verb).

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nashrambler 25 23 2 2 1224

This is what bugs me about spanish, that a word can mean so many unrelated things. Can someone give me an example of how we do it in english (other than bugs). Somehow I feel better about it, more accepting, when I see we do it too. I'm sure we do, but I want to fight it. And I don't think 'fight it' is a good example either.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BuceriasBecky 25

The dog the boy had had, had had to be removed. Proper grammar, but must be tough for a non English speaker to understand! I try to remember this when I have trouble with words like dejar.

4Give Lingot•2 years ago

allise.bur 24 4 39

English has many examples: Fix--to repair, to cheat (esp. when betting), to set (a date, a price, hair), to be about to ("I'm fixing to"), to smoothe over ("I'll fix it with her"), secure, prepare Clear--transparent, understandable, absolute ownership, remove trees, erase characters, take dishes off the table, without color, get approval for ("clear it with x"), pristine complexion Over--above, finished, excess, location ("over there") Tender--caring, money, offer ("tender to the court"), easily chewable, sore, moving ("tender moment")

There are many, many more but I'll stop with the one I abhor the most: sanction--to approve OR to punish because disapproved

4Give Lingot•2 years ago

jqstringfield 24 6 286

De nada y de acuerdo. It took me a minute to see it too. There is a reason I was in the comments :)
Excited that I could help.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

arismartin 23 18

That is an idiom. It means that sometimes, the external things, the least important things prevent us to pay attention to the most important things, the essential point. And also that we pay attention to individualities leaving apart a overall view.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SallyBrown1 13 8 8 2

I know it's an idiom that directly translates to the Spanish idiom, but I wish they wouldn't phrase it the English way for translation.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bryn1953 23 20 630

Guess Ill have to do the lesson on idioms which is an extra, wont get this right unless you do doh!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

homefire 23 14

This one isn't in the idioms lesson.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

My least favourite sentence of the entire course.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sinartu 11 5 3

I think personally Duolingo should express when something is an idiom or not. Sometimes it wants a direct English translation, sometimes it wants a Spanglish translation and sometimes it basically expects you to know the Spanish idioms before you've learnt them. 'Sometimes, the trees don't let us see the forest.' surely is the English equivalent?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ngarrang 23 18 10 8 6 4 683

This idiom has no business in the general section and should be moved to section on just idioms. Oh, wait...there is one!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

dbone37 22 11 7 7 7 3 3 3 2

I feel like this should say "through the trees" or "because of the trees" in english. "For the trees" sounds unnatural and makes no sense.

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

ngarrang 23 18 10 8 6 4 683

How about a more reasonable reply to your quandary.

'...for the trees' may sound a little odd, but it natural English. It is a situation where 'because' and 'for' or even 'due to' become interchangeable due to the vagueness of English.

I cannot see the forest because of the trees. I cannot see the forest due to the trees. I cannot see the forest for the trees.

I suppose it comes from older English.

I cannot give you a more detailed answer, for the details elude me. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

dbone37 22 11 7 7 7 3 3 3 2

Maybe it's technically correct but it still sounds unnatural or extremely old-fashioned at the least and I think it confuses the meaning. I didn't realize what the sentence was trying to say until I read the spanish translation, and I'm a native english speaker!

Seeing that the idiom comes from the 1500's though I guess it makes sense. I've just never actually heard this idiom used and didn't realize it was specifically constructed like that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

jaydak 15 1

Me: "A veces, no podemos ver el bosque por las arboles." INCORRECT - 'Arboles' is masculine, not feminine!

"Nnnnnooooooooo!"

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

puffinwoman 19 500

Why "por" instead of "a favor de?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

peonke 15 11 9 8 7 7 2 2

The English used in the sentence is colloquial or not widely used. We would use "because of the trees". "For the trees" hits the ear wrong and makes it sound like Old English that we no longer use on a daily basis.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dj63010 20 114

I disagree.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

peonke 15 11 9 8 7 7 2 2

Care to elaborate?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dbronso 23 1000

It's an idiomatic expression in English so that's just the way it's said... "He can't see the forest for the trees." meaning that he doesn't see the big picture. Another common expression would be, "It's raining cats and dogs." to describe heavy rainfall. Which again would not have a literal translation to most other languages..

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

peonke 15 11 9 8 7 7 2 2

So then wouldn't this be best suited for the extra "Idioms" category?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dbronso 23 1000

That would be above my pay grade!! I believe since Duolingo is built by volunteers and each language is probably their first, so English is second... it always appears to be a work in progress (at least from my experience). Notice how the sentence translates literally to something more like, "Sometimes, the trees prevent us from seeing the forest." We just have a particular way of stating that idea in English was the point of my original post however colloquial it may sound.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Okapi1812 14

It is very widely used in England - though the form I am familiar with is "can't see the wood for the trees"

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

189 The Hypothetical Period

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/9954045/The-Hypothetical-Period>

IvanSab 16 7 5 4

I will write something about the Hypothetical Period, so as to clarify some aspects of its grammar rules.

Well, in English it is divided into four cases, that express different possibilities:

<h1>ZERO CONDITIONAL</h1>

It expresses a general accepted truth, and it is formed by:

If + Simple present , Simple present

In italian:

Se + Indicative , Indicative

"If you heat ice, it melts" / "Se scaldi il ghiaccio, si scioglie"

<h1>FIRST CONDITIONAL</h1>

It refers to a possibile situation and on its probably consequences:

If + Simple present , Simple future

In Italian:

Se + Indicative , Simple future

"If you don't hurry, you will miss the train" / "Se non ti sbrighi, perderai il treno"

<h1>SECOND CONDITIONAL</h1>

It refers to a unreal situation:

If + Simple past , Would + Infinitive

In Italian:

Se + Imperfect Subjunctive (example: Se mangiaSSi, Se aveSSi)

In Italian we say the "Three S rule": if you use "Se" (If) you have to put two S in the verb (feature of the Imperfect Subjunctive) , Present Conditional

"If it rained, you would get wet" / "Se piovesse, ti bagneresti"

<h1>THIRD CONDITIONAL</h1>

It refers to a situation in the past that did not happen:

If + Past Perfect , Would have + Past Participle

In Italian:

Se + Pluperfect Subjunctive (example: Se aveSSi mangiato, Se aveSSi avuto) , Past Conditional

"If you had studied harder, you would have passed the exam" / "Se tu avessi studiato di più, avresti passato l'esame"

Give Lingot3

151 year ago

Leave a new comment

6 Comments

NancyMihalich 22 22 21 2 1114

Thanks for the explanation, IvanSab! It's very helpful!

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IvanSab 16 7 5 4

Thanks Nancy! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot25•1 year ago

jeffrey.eggars 25 15 10 8 917

Very helpful IvanSab. Thank you. If this is taken from the Italian phrase "il periodo ipotetico" then I would suggest you call it "the hypothetical sentence" in English.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IvanSab 16 7 5 4

Oh, I will correct it immediately, thank you Jeffrey :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

psionpete 25 21 15 15 14 6 5 4 3 1148

I assume you mean hypothetical and not hypotetical?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IvanSab 16 7 5 4
Thanks:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

190 What is the most effectively use Duolingo to learn a language
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1059380>

whitis1950 13 6

I am relatively new to Duolingo. I would like to know what is the most effective way to use Duolingo to learn a language. For example, does one keep moving to subsequent lessons before fully grasping the current lesson all the while using the "practice" feature? Or does one become proficient before moving on to the next lesson?

I would love to hear your thoughts.

Give Lingot
53 years ago

Leave a new comment
15 Comments

Samsta 17 16 12

It's personal preference really. I didn't practice much at all when I was working through my tree. Some people practice as much as or more than they do new lessons, and some don't practice at all. Whatever works for you.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cazort 18 18 18 12 8 6 2 2 2

My approach is that I tend to practice the lessons until everything is golden / full, and only then move on to learning new lessons. I don't ever keep practicing a lesson once Duo shows that it's golden / full. I work through lessons and practices slowly, thinking a lot. When I encounter two words that can be translated with the same word in English, I delve deep. I go into the discussion page, and ask questions or read the existing discussion. I type words into google image search using a Google homepage from a country that speaks a dialect of the language I want to learn. I use google translate or external dictionaries to compare the definitions or translations given for similar words.

I also put a lot of effort into listening to the pronunciation. If the computer voice isn't 100% clear I look up words on Forvo. Instead of just zooming through exercises, if I cannot pronounce a word correctly I sit there listening and trying over and over again until I get it.

I also do a lot off DuoLingo. I try to listen to things in the language, and I try to find places I can speak the language, especially with native speakers if possible. I read things online in the language too.

I've found this very effective. I seem to gain a lot relative to the time I put in. I've been doing DuoLingo less than a year and I think I've gained way more out of it than I have out of years of classroom instruction. I had studied 3 years of German, 1 of Spanish. I could communicate easily in German and had a big vocabulary and great listening comprehension, but my grammar was poor. Spanish I could barely communicate in and my listening comprehension was poor. My accents in both languages weren't great.

To compare, in about 8 months of DuoLingo, I've gotten my Spanish to where I can comfortably converse with people, and express ideas...my accent in both Spanish and German have hugely improved, and my German grammar has hugely improved...and totally from scratch I learned Portuguese and can now functionally converse in that too. I also have dabbled in Russian and will probably turn to focus on that once I've completed the Portuguese course.

7ReplyGive Lingot5•9 months ago

FelipeFresnal 21 10

I do think that one has to move to subsequent lessons before fully grasping the current one. At our level one should not be aiming for perfection for it would be most discouraging and therefore counter-productive. We have to keep in mind the goal which is to speak the target language not to know perfectly certain aspects of it or get an absolute command of some parts of it, I think. Learning anything is a making mistake process. Only practice makes perfect. I personally know from experience that it is impossible, once past 16 years of age or so, to have a native like command of a second language. And this no matter how much effort you put into it.

The more mistakes made the more learning there is. By definition, perfection is mistakeless. Often rules are grasped when we are ready to grasp them often as other blocks of the construction of the language are in place we find ourselves with an available space for a previous element that we couldn't fit anywhere before. We will learn the target language trying to speak it, trying to make sentences, reading aloud and exchanging naturally with native speakers of it and ... making mistakes. The more mistakes the better.

To answer your question: Duolingo gives one an excellent user-friendly corpus to base our speaking on.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ontalor 22 22 16 14 13 12 6 2 4

I agree with your views.

But when I studied second language acquisition theory in my Master's program, what we were taught is that the phase when children readily learn new languages and can learn them to a native level ends at about 12 years old. If you start studying a language after that, for 95% of people, they will hit a level where they stop improving no matter how much they study, but for some reason 5% of people with enough effort are able to reach native level even when they start learning when they're older. They don't understand why this happens yet.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

benjaminsull 11 8

If you are committed to learning a language, the only rational choice is to assume that you are in the 5%. Otherwise your chances are 0% by default.

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Ontalor 22 22 16 14 13 12 6 2 4

I think it's more reasonable though to just accept that you probably won't make it to native level, and that native level shouldn't be the goal. If you enjoy living in the language and using it and can do so well enough, that should be enough.

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

benjaminsull 11 8

It depends on how you perceive cost. A gamble with 5% chance of hitting jackpot at no cost is a no-brainer decision (go for it). Probability doesn't matter because the cost is zero or near zero.

For me the cost of not limiting myself is zero or near zero. Others may perceive the cost differently.

3ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1155

I agree with your approach to using Duolingo, but I absolutely have to disagree with your conclusion about language learning and the limits of it! That you have had a particular experience (that reaching a native speaker's level after age 16 or so is impossible), certainly doesn't equate to this being true for all or even for 95 % of people, as another person writes below.

People all learn differently, and everyone has different abilities, motivations, and skills. I know plenty of people who in their late teens or twenties have learned a language to the extent that native speakers now can't hear or believe that they aren't native speakers. I know others who have full command of a second or third language, but still have a strong accent, after maybe 30 years of speaking the language and living in an area where it is spoken. We are all different. I personally do believe that adults are often lazier and busier than children are (expected to be) when it comes to learning languages, and therefore neither put in as much effort nor achieve as much.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

Take your time and practice as much as you feel you need. Otherwise, you'll come to a point when you realize you've forgotten a lot and will have to come back and review a big part of your tree. I made this mistake twice - with my German and Spanish. It's terribly frustrating to feel stupid and unable to remember mere 300-500 words.

Also, don't hesitate to use additional resources such as grammar reference. In most cases it is easier to know the reason for using this or that word than to guess endlessly.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

northernguy 25 22 14 1273

Everybody has their own approach. I don't leave a lesson until I am able to keep all my hearts. When I complete a group of lessons I go back to the beginning of the course and start all over again with the same requirement. Fine way to go if you are indifferent to how long it takes to finish Duo.

People who have certain goals they want to meet can't be so casual about how they use their time.

I also supplement Duo with other approaches.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

I'll probably reach level 25 before I finish my tree..

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Same here. I'm less worried about the appearance of my tree than in retaining what i'm learning.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

garrettowne 25 25 14 11 2 2 1428

I like to power through as far as I can while keeping all past lessons in the Gold status. When I come to new lessons I'm forced to fumble around a little, but I feel that in the end this gives me a better grasp when I have to come back and review after the Gold status is dropped.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

michisjourdi 16 12 11 8 8 5 5 4 3 3 3 2

I went through each lesson and tested out of each course as fast as I could. If I didn't fail a lesson I didn't stay on it. I moved on to the next one. This method works well for me. It might not for others.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Szczels 10 8

Yes the same thing is puzzling me. I've got to a point after two or three months when I seem to be forgetting as much as I learn and some lessons only cover 5 or 10% of usages of a particular term. If I go back and practice and look at the word list and do a bit of dialogue I seem to be standing still. Perhaps pushing forward brings up the rear? - as I noticed, as I fail a lot doing new exercises (e.g. guessing the meanings of words or phrases etc) I revise older stuff on the way.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

191 what is the difference between chat and chatte?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/16698>

maddymaddy26 9 6 5

i am learning animals, and this means cat

Give Lingot

54 years ago

Leave a new comment

6 Comments

limoges 14 9

"un chat" is a cat. "une chatte" is a female cat and also a colloquialism for "pussy". In a french speaking country, one avoids using the word "chatte" if one does not want to make a joke.

25ReplyGive Lingot1•4 years ago

stephanie_reese 22 12

Vony is correct. Technically chatte is a female cat and chat is a male cat. Chat is used generally as usually you aren't sure of the gender. Chatte has turned into a dirty word in some cases, but used with the right context would not be seen as such.

10ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Vony 7 5

I am not sure I am 100% correct, but when I was in France I was told that "chatte" means "pussy" and is a colloquialism for vagina... And, just checking, Google Translate says that too.

9ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

oschwimer 16 6

Limoges and Vony are correct. I would recommend a non-native female speaker not to use the word in most cases.

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

IsaSoulie 10 4 2

So for a non-native male speaker it's fine to say?

2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

gjeichenblatt 12

The difference is one is female and the other is male. In general, when talking about cats, like when talking about a mix group of girls and boys people you just use il, you will just use chat.

This is the same with chien, if it is female, you will use chienne. And just like the posting above (and in english) when using the female version. It has its other connotations. So chienne can also be used to say bitch...just like a female dog is a bitch in english.

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

192 "The grass is always greener on the other side."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5102076>

Translation: L'herbe est toujours plus verte chez le voisin.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

36 Comments

hellomidnight 17 11 6 384

Why does this sentence use the feminine form of green 'verte' instead of the masculine form 'vert'?

13ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lampmap1 11 10 6 5

L'herbe is a feminine noun, and in French, adjectives agree in number and gender with the nouns they describe.

46ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

hellomidnight 17 11 6 384

Thank you! Have a lingot!

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lampmap1 11 10 6 5

You are far too kind, thank you, and I hope it helped! :)

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CasmiraBog 11

Is this a common idiom in French? It's a direct translation from English and I find it rather uncommon for exactly identical idioms to exist in 2 languages.

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TomKlinora 20 2 2

I can't really answer your question, but my maiden tongue is Hebrew and this idiom exist in this exact form in Hebrew as well and in fact very common. So this may be one of those things that became international.

17ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JewishPolyglot 14 13 12 11 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

It's probably similar because French and English have heavily influenced each other, and modern Hebrew is VERY heavily influenced by English and other European languages

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mayor426 8 4 4

Speak hebrew please I want to see

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TomKlinora 20 2 2

הדשא יותר ירוק תמיד השכן של הדשא this in the Hebrew translation of the exercise. (remember to read it right to left :-)

16ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JewishPolyglot 14 13 12 11 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

And the transliteration (for those who can't read Hebrew) is "ha-desheh shel ha-shakhen tamid yarok yoter."

12ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LizGGibbons 13

It is not exactly a direct translation, however. In English we say, "on the other side", while the French is, "at the neighbors".

12ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FilipTirke 10 9 5

Yeah this is a common french idiom

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

learingfrench8 6 2

there are many identical idioms from different languages. Like the phrase "sour grapes " in English there is the same phrase in Mandarin. It might be a coincidence, or it might prove that people were once more connected then we think.

here is said idiom in Mandarin 酸葡萄

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

StormEdwar 6

The break down for these idioms doesnt really support a foundation if understanding. Such as word for word. It midtly just gives the whole phrase each time you select a word..

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

staccatoiscool 12 9 7 7 6 5 5 4 3 3 2 2

you are correct

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Adam-Rabel 22 11

French grammar question here. Why does this sentence not have any prepositions or other connecting words? If I understand correctly, the literal translation is "The grass is always greener at the neighbor's place" or something like that." Where is the equivalent of the preposition "at" or the possessive "de"?

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PatrickJaye 25 5

@Adam-Rebel

"Chez" is a preposition - it means "at the place of". I realise that may seem odd but that is because English doesn't have a directly equivalent proposition.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TomKlinora 20 2 2

can "le pelouse" be used here instead of L'herbe? Or is that not a correcct use of this idiom?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KateSimpson0 15 11 5

la pelouse. no, because the grass in the saying does not specifically refer to a lawn.

If you were having some kind of lawn competition and you knew someone who was getting obsessed with it then you could use la pelouse, i guess.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

kentch 19 14 6

We always said "street", not fence. As in, "The grass is always greener on the other side of the street."

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Candela805458 8

is this actually used in french?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EdisonMGuz 9 7 3

I cant really understand it. Which circumstances would that idiom be use?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

neontzars 14 8 3 3 3 2

Where are you from? Not to be inquisitive, but it struck me as strange that this was included here. I'm from the US and I always assumed this was an Americanism and that it would probably not make sense outside the Anglophone world. Anyway: It's just a way of saying that people can have a tendency to be jealous of others' success regardless of how good or bad their own circumstances are (the "grass" part of the idiom is very suburban America)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EdisonMGuz 9 7 3

Thanks for the explanation. I am from Colombia. And I still can't find an idiom in Spanish which fits on that meaning.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Frenziefrenz 16

A check in my Van Dale Groot Spreekwoordenboek (Idiom Dictionary) suggests two Spanish equivalents:

La gallina de mi vecina más huevos pone que la mía (My neighborwoman's chicken lays more eggs than mine)

El mejor racimo, el de la viña del vecino (The best grape is that of my neighbor's vineyard)

Note that I was completely unfamiliar with the main Dutch entries and that I found it through "grass" in the index:

Andermans schotels zijn altijd vet (other people's dishes are always fat)

Het is altijd vet in andermans keuken (it's always fat in another's kitchen)

Al wat onze buurman heeft, lijkt ons beter dan wat God ons geeft (all our neighbor has, seems better to us than what God gives us)

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

roy.leihong 25 25 24 10 846

How about: "Bien se está donde uno no está." or "Gusta lo ajeno más por ajeno que por bueno."

2ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

LindaB_Duolingo 25 25 25 12 37
Interesting question, guys.

When I was a kid, I thought it was about farming. (British working-class houses didn't have lawns in those days.) Apparently:

The renowned Oxford Dictionary of English Proverbs (1970) does not even have a separate entry for the proverb "The grass is always greener on the other side of the fence". Instead it lists the Latin proverb "Fertilior seges est alieno semper in arvo" cited by Erasmus of Rotterdam which was published in English translation by Richard Taverner in 1545 as "The corne in an other mans ground semeth euer more fertyll and plentifull then doth oure owne". (deproverbio.com)

So the older version was, indeed, about farming ... but it seems the 'grass' version only turned up in the 50s. Could well be American after all!

:)

4ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

neontzars 14 8 3 3 3 2

Erasmus! Who would have thought. I'm tempted to go on researching but I think the objective of elucidating this has largely been accomplished. I would say that the agricultural antecedents to me seem less about "farming" per se than they do, as in the modern example, about a sort of doleful envy vis-a-vis the evident prosperity and plenty of one's neighbors; i.e., it's about land, which only becomes domesticated as unproductive "grass" when the exchange-value of real estate exceeds anything one could get from agricultural yield in a suburban backyard (which tends not to employ farmhands). Anyway, I could see about a hundred lawns with a ten-minute walk through the suburb I grew up in, so I never really thought about this; makes me wonder what aphorisms pessimists in desert settlements have come up with for similar sentiments. Thanks for the research!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LindaB_Duolingo 25 25 25 12 37
Hi, Neon

Yep: it's an envy aphorism. Greener pastures, more fertile land ... both neighbours looking across the fence and envying the other. Envy goggles (rather than Saturday night beer goggles) distorting your perception.

Interesting question about sayings from desert countries. Back at school, I remember fondly 'Trust in God - but tie your camel.'

Also - life is like a cucumber ... but I can't finish that one in polite company.

:)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Frenziefrenz 16

It's Ovid (Ars Amatoria 1,349/350);* I imagine Erasmus was referencing him.

There are at least two more such Latin phrases:

Majorque videtur et melior vicina seges (larger and better seems my neighbor's harvest)

Aliena capella gerit distentius uber (another's goat has a fuller udder)

* <http://www.thelatinlibrary.com/ovid/ovid.artis1.shtml>

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LenoFlores 12 2

I've pressed on both answers and both are wrong according to the system, and it does not give me other options! I'm stuck!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LiaWalters 13 5 5 5 4 4

That reminds me of a thing I found in a magazine, three pets were trying to get over a fence to be on greener grass..... but it was totally fake!

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

JillyMill 6 6 5

It doesn't like me saying 'chez la voisine'. Surely the proverb works with the feminine too?

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

barbara.gr5 14 9 8 6

I don't think I'll ever remember these idioms. Ca va, ça vient is probably the easiest. (sorry, don't have any way to type the special characters on my laptop keyboard)

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

SridharSai 8 11

Shouldn't it be le herbe instead of l'herbe?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Frenziefrenz 16

No, there are only a few exceptions to the rule: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Aspirated_h

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

193 Mange / manges / mangent / mangeons

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/13396>

neil_heerden 14 6 5 3

One thing remains unclear; that is how and when to use which verb forms? For example "to eat" = "mange" / "manges" / "mangent" / "mangeons" / et cetera. I would much rather try and understand the morphological change than try and memorise all the different verb realizations and their correct syntactic context. The same applies to the verb variation in "to drink" = "bois" / "boit" / "boivent" / "buvez" / et cetera. Some clarity would be much appreciated.

Give Lingot1
374 years ago

Leave a new comment
12 Comments

csi 18 11 11 8 7 7 6 4 3 3 2

The verb form changes based on the person (it's called conjugation). For instance, in English, we say "I eat" but we don't say "he eat", instead we say "he eats". For the other persons (you, they) the verb form remains "eat", in English, but in French each person takes a different form. Generally, it goes something like this: 1st person singular (je) -e ; 2nd person singular (tu) -es; 3rd person singular (il, elle, on) -e; 1st person plural (nous) -ons; 2nd person plural (vous) -ez; 3rd person plural (ils, elles) -ent. This is just a generalization, the actual conjugation depends on whether it's an -er verb or an -ir verb, or an irregular verb, or I can't remember what else, it's been a while. But now that you know basically what's going on it'll all start to make sense now.

37ReplyGive Lingot4•4 years ago

ajaxanon 6
As csi explained, follow this guideline in general:

to eat: manger

I eat: "mange"

You (singular) eat: "tu manges" (add an 's')

He/She eats: "Il/Elle mange" (same conjugation as 'I eat')

We eat: "Nous mangeons" (add an 'ons')

You (plural) eat: "Vous mangez" (add a 'z')

They eat: "Ils/Elles mangent" (add an 'nt')

You / "mangent" / "mangeons"

To drink: boire

I drink: "Je bois"

You (singular) drink: "Tu boit"

He/She drinks: "Il/Elle bois"

We drink: "Nous buvons"

You (plural) drink: "Vouz buvez"

They drink: "Ils/Elles buvent"

17ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

matthewmazurek 10 3

Helpful tip: Hover over the verb and use the "conjugate" button to display a list of present tense conjugations for every person.

13ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Kpurple 7 6 6

je bois tu bois il/elle boit nous buvons vous buvez ils/elles boivent the general rule for the present verb time is: s,s,t,ons,ez,ent and a lot of verbs will follow that form (in the present time)

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

anitchie 9

verbs ending in -er usually follow the -e, -es, -e, -ons, -ez, -ent endings verbs ending in -re usually follow -s, -s, -t, -ez, -ons, -ent, but with a change to the stem in the plural (boi- becomes buv-, etc.) -ir verbs are the same as -re verbs in the singular, but only drop the -r and add -ss- to the stem (jouir: jouis, jouis, jouit, jouissons, jouissez, jouissent) These are just general rules, as there are a lot of exceptions (aller, avoir and etre are probably the most used)

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Anish992496 5

thank you so much

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

pplc 8

You have to conjugate the word from a base: the word "mange" has a base of "mang". Then, memorize the add-ons:

il/elle (he/she)- mang+e = mange *pronounced mang-zh je (i)- mang+e =mange *pronounced mang-zh

tu (you)- mang+es =manges *pronounced mang-zh vous (you(formal or plural))- mang+ez *pronounced mang-zh-A

Nous (we)- mang+eons =mangeons *pronounced mang-zh-on ils/elles (they)- mangent =mangent *pronounced mang-zh *be careful on this one!

Hope that helped :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ForamRavenclaw 9 3 2

thanks, i actually understood this

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

clumsygirl77 5

say 'e, es, e, ons, ez, ent.' its supposed to help u with endings

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Redscarf88 9

This has really helped me. Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RaynelisV 6

ITS SO CONFUSING I WISH I LIVED IN PARIS Im a french decendant

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

194 "What is the question?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/580846>

Translation: ¿Cuál es la pregunta?

13 years ago

Leave a new comment

102 Comments

Athalia2 15 3

I thought "cual" meant "which." Why is it offered as a correct translation of "what"?

62ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rspreng 24

It can be translated as which one, what, which -- depends on context. What is your favorite fruit?
Can use can use 'cual' because the options are limited. Many questions can use cual or que, I have been taught.

88ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EdwardDov 10 2 1

hmm, but in that example "what is your favorite fruit?" and "which is your favorite fruit?" are practically the same question since you have a limited selection either way (fruit).

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[+] 8 hidden comments

SariahLily 13 12 8 8 5 4 2 19

If you say "¿Que es la pregunta?" you are literally asking for the meaning of "la pregunta", and you'd get a response along the lines of "la pregunta is a way of requesting information."

The only time you can use "qué" as "which" is when it is followed IMMEDIATELY by a noun. For example "which book?" would be "¿Qué libro?", and "which question?" would be "¿Qué pregunta?"

But when you are asking what IS the question, you must use cuál, unless you actually want the definition of a question.

In my class our teacher reinforced this by always answering what we asked, even if he knew it wasn't what we meant. Pretty soon we were doing it to each other. Someone would say to someone else "¿Qué es tu problema?" and the other person would respond "Pues, «mi problema» es algo que me molesta..." (Well, "my problem" is something that bothers me...). The correct way to ask "what's your problem?" is "¿Cuál es tu problema?"

69ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

SariahLily 13 12 8 8 5 4 2 19

Short version: "¿Qué es ...?" asks for a definition.

"¿Cuál es ...?" means "What is (the question, your problem, etc.)" as well as "which one is ...?"

50ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

Pat_May 12

Thanks for the short version. That helps and I will remember it.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MJMGruver 25 658

Thanks! That explanation should help me remember it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

butterfly813 8

Very helpful. Thanks a lot

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

joehhendrickson 23

English distinguishes between what and which slightly differently than does Spanish. "Qué" won't work here because you know what it is. It is a question. But English doesn't want "which" because there is not a defined set of questions.

8ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

emmaleek67 7 3

Because "which question is it" also makes sense.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AryavBhara 6

Same!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

brilboud 9

I thought cual and que could be used interchangeably in this situation?

16ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SariahLily 13 12 8 8 5 4 2 19

They are not interchangeable here. Cuál is correct. Qué would be asking for the meaning of "the question".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

birnard 21 3 418

Wouldn't you say "Qué significa la pregunta?" if you were asking for meaning?

I think the "... would be like asking for the definition of the words 'la pregunta'" explanation is incorrect. And just is a shot in the dark explanation given by some teachers.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SariahLily 13 12 8 8 5 4 2 19

You could use significa, and probably would in this particular case, but there are definite times I've heard "qué es...." alone to ask for a definition. I've never heard a native Spanish speaker use it to ask for which. (Using "qué" directly before a noun, however, that is proper. But not with the verb ser in between.)

It's not a shot in the dark. I spent 3 years speaking with native Spanish speakers, and my experience matched what I was taught.

The main problem is people don't want to let go of English's patterns for using what versus which, but they don't apply in Spanish.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ectricious 13 11

I believe you're correct - I just got pinged for selecting cual and not que as well

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gforcera 15 7 2

That's funny. I chose que and got it right and it said cual was another acceptable translation.

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MJMGruber 25 658

Must have been fixed. Duolingo will add acceptable answers if they are reported. (Although it often takes awhile.)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AllisonTee 16 3

Same here.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kai7 9

That's odd since I used Cual and didn't get pinged

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

xCheshire_Katx 5

ah! i got pinged using cual! ._. i guess im not worthy XD

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NLucidC 13

(can't use accent marks since i'm using the mobile app) cual means what, which. if there is a range of options you use cual. Ex: que es capital? means what does capital mean? but cual es capital [de...] means what is the capital [of...]

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Bob.Harrison 14

Accent marks are easily accessible within the AP using either iphone or android. Simply hold the desired letter key down without releasing it. Within 2-3 seconds your phone will display the possible accents for that letter.

18ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

serenittee 25 7 79

I switch back & forth between English & Spanish languages on my Android b/c sometimes I'm not sure about the accent placement. Makes it easier for me.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HeatherR444 7

I don't understand the difference between que and cual (sorry I'm missing the accent marks). Is it just contextual? For example, I know you can say: "Que escribes?" (What do you write?) but can you say "Cual escribes?" ? Thanks!

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

hello,

que= what cual = which

if you were to write "cual escribe?", that would be "which do you write?". do you see how this will not work? :)

i hoped this helped. i was confused myself but i took some tips from the posts above!

have a good day

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

osiol3k 11

As you can see in the posts above cual also means what and the difference between "que" and "cual" is in the number of answers to the question and, sadly, there's more to remember. To avoid quoting here's the link to some good grammar explanation site of Spanish.

http://spanish.about.com/cs/grammar/a/que_vs_cual.htm

18ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lballam 2

Great link. Thanks for the tip. Really helped sort things out.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

leighebark 11 7 7 6

Ser o no ser: ESA es la pregunta. ;P

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SariahLily 13 12 8 8 5 4 2 19

There seems to be a lot of confusion between qué and cuál. I'm going to put an explanation here, so that it won't be buried in replies (for anyone new who comes along).

In English, we often use what and which interchangeably. In Spanish, whether you use qué or cuál depends on the construction of the question, and switching them is usually either grammatically incorrect, or actually changes the question. Forget about English conventions for what and which, and just learn the following:

Rule #1: If you are going to put the noun directly after the interrogative, use "qué".

So: "What book?" and "Which book?" would both be "¿Qué libro?"

"What question?" and "Which question?" would both be "¿Qué pregunta?" Using cuál, followed directly by a noun, is grammatically incorrect. (Never "¿Cuál pregunta?)

Rule #2: If you are asking for a definition, explanation, or description, use "qué".

The most common use is "¿Qué es eso?" ("What is that?") Frankly this is the only question I can think of at the moment of this form.

Rule #3: If you are asking "what is....?" but not asking for a definition, use "cuál". So: "What is the question?" "¿Cuál es la pregunta?" "What is today's date?" "¿Cuál es la fecha de hoy?" "What's your problem?" "¿Cuál es tu problema?"

If you use "qué" in any of the examples in #3, it changes the meaning of the question entirely, because of rule #2. So "¿Qué es la pregunta?" actually asks for an explanation, description, or definition of "la pregunta", and you'd get a response along the lines of "A question is a way of requesting information." (And yes, it is an odd way to ask that. You'd normally say "¿Qué es una pregunta?" or "¿Qué significa pregunta?", but they would probably think you just mixed up la and una on accident.)

If you ask "¿Qué es tu problema?" the answer would be "Mi problema es algo que me molesta or que me impide" (My problem is something that annoys me or that impedes me.)

These are the rules I was taught, and the subsequent three years I spent speaking and living with native Spanish speakers confirmed they are correct.

Here is an example of a possible conversation. I'll give the English first: "What is the question?" "What question?" "David's question, what is it?"

"¿Cuál es la pregunta?" "¿Qué pregunta?" "La pregunta de David, ¿cuál es?"

And another: "I have the book." "Which book?" "The red book."

"Tengo el libro." "¿Qué libro?" "El libro rojo."

And, so as not to leave #2 out.... "I like Root Beer." "What's Root Beer?" "It's a type of soda." (Or, depending on where you're from, it could be a type of pop, coke, or soft drink.)

"Me gusta Root Beer." "¿Qué es Root Beer?" "Es un tipo de soda."

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PratikP7 12 9

Gracias

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vwearmouth 23 12 2 373

So 'what is it' is Cual es? and 'what is that' is que es eso? Must we just learn that or is there a rule followed please? Thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Athalia2 15 3

The "él/ella/Ud." form of a verb gets used for "he," "she," "you" (polite), or "it"--never "that." Thus, when the subject (or in a question, the object) isn't stated in Spanish, and when it's clearly not referring to a person, then always assume the implied word is "it." For the word "that," one needs to add a pronoun--"que" before a subordinate or relative clause, and ese/esa/eso or aquel/aquella/aquello for demonstrative pronouns and adjectives (used before a noun).

E.g. "Es mi balón." = "It is my ball." vs. "Ese es mi balón." = "That is my ball." "Es mi padre." = "It is my father/He is my father." vs. "Ese hombre es mi padre." = "That man is my father." Other examples-- "Es verano." = "It is summer." "Son las siete." = "It is seven o'clock." "Fue construido" = "It was built." "¿Cuánto es?" = "How much is it?"

Hope that helps!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vwearmouth 23 12 2 373

Yikes! :) thank you. So would 'what is that?' be que ese?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Athalia2 15 3

Almost. Don't forget your verb: "¿Qué es eso?"

(Note that question words always seem to use the accent; that's part of what distinguishes them from their non-question pronoun form. Spanishdict.com also uses the neuter "eso" instead of the masculine "ese" for this question--presumably because if we don't know what something is, we won't know what gender to use.)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

King.ameki 10 7 2

This is how Wiktionary defined it:

what (in terms of a very specific item), which, which one

This is how I understand it:

Because we want to know something specific from the person we ask (in this case, the question that he has) we use cuál.

If we wanted to know what "the question" is (more general) we would use qué?

Correct me if I'm wrong please ^^

Edit: Kind of like the difference between:

What is your question and what is the question?

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

duovincenzo 12 10 9 8 8

Is cuestión ever used? If so when?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SariahLily 13 12 8 8 5 4 2 19

I've heard it only rarely, and usually in a statement like "it's a question of how important this is to you", rather than meaning an interrogative.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

megapolis2014 7

these brain teasers are killin me

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rorabear01 10

what about pregunta?!?! I never learned cuestion?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

roropunkii 8 8 2

I thought "what" meant "que" from the previous lesson

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Athalia2 15 3

It does, but Spanish sometimes uses "cuál" ("which") where we would use "what." Read the comments above.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ron1956 14 10 8 7 6 6 6 5 4 4 3 2 2 1

My answer was cual es la pregunto? Would someone help with an explanation?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Athalia2 15 3

"Pregunta" ends with an "a" since it is a feminine noun. "Cuál" also has an accent mark on the "a."

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eslamsaad2 7 4

What's different between cuál,qué,cuáles? All give same mean

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Flugschein 10 10 8 4

Cuáles is plural.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Qué is used to find what something means, unless used directly before a noun. For example, ¿Qué biblioteca? means, Which library? But ¿Qué es la biblioteca? means, What is a library?Cuál is used to ask what or which, like qué, but has no need to be in front of a noun. For example, ¿Cuál es la biblioteca? means, What/which library? Cuáles is used for cuál when the subject is plural.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Darthlegos 9

Sorry, I was snoozing in school again.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jade934750 5

Wow

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Mattdog456

It means What is the question this conversation is over.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Pat567426 14

Would it be correct if it read "Que es la pregunta?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SariahLily 13 12 8 8 5 4 2 19

That basically means "can you define 'the question'"?

It is not the same.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

missliteracy12 13 6 5

Hi - I don't understand why the question is feminine. Pregunto is the way I was taught this word - but here it is pregunta. Why? That is my question. (I wrote - ¿Cual es el pregunta? (With upside down ? at beginning and correct accent marks.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Athalia2 15 3

"Pregunta" ("question") is a feminine noun and thus requires a matching feminine article ("la" rather than "el").

"Pregunto" ("I ask") is the present tense first person form of the verb "preguntar" and thus uses no article. (Other forms of "preguntar" include "pregunta"--"he/she asks," "preguntas"--"you ask," "preguntamos"--"we ask," etc.)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

abelardocr 10 5

Like Shakespeare

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

winsenken 7

Are both qué and cuál acceptable for this translation?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SariahLily 13 12 8 8 5 4 2 19

Not really. Both are grammatically correct, but they mean different things. I wrote a detailed post above explaining the difference (it begins with "There seems to be").

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

juaneichler 9

What is the difference between que and cuales when translating "what"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SariahLily 13 12 8 8 5 4 2 19

"Cuáles" is plural, so you would only use it if the noun is plural. For example, "¿Cuáles son las preguntas?" (What are the questions?).

For the differences between qué and cuál(es), please see my detailed post above (it begins with "There seems to be").

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

will077 9 2

How do you know when to put La instead of El?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Athalia2 15 3

Check out <http://www.studyspanish.com/lessons/genoun1.htm>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

simsvm1 12

What's the difference in "Que" and "Cual"? Why can't this be "Que es la pregunta?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SariahLily 13 12 8 8 5 4 2 19

Please see my detailed post above. (It begins with "There seems to be")

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rowith 22 6 3 2

Why not estás?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

chrisdfrank 10

This is about forms of "ser" versus forms of "estar." Well, this might be over-simplified, but in a general sense "estás" means "you [informal] [temporarily] are." Examples? You are sick today. Estás enfermo hoy. Temporary. You are wrong / mistaken. Estás equivocado. Temporary. You are very beautiful. Eres muy bonito. Permanent condition or state of being. (Though this might be a bad example: beauty fades, yes? But that will be someday, not any time soon.) You are a man. Eres un hombre. (Does, "Eres hombre," work, too?) Permanent, usually. If your perception changes, let us know. :-)

Ser for permanence. Soy un payazo. I am a clown; it is who I am. Es grande tu casa. Your house is big. Probably, it won't be getting any smaller. Eres perfecto. You are perfect. Oh, forever and ever. I love you. Marry me!

Estar for impermanence, temporary things, things that might change, will or must change, or are expected to change. Estoy descansando. I am relaxing. But you know it won't last; there's no rest for the wicked. :D Está cansado él. He is tired. But not always. Estás por la calle. You are out on the street. Again. Not always; it just seems like it. :p

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rowith 22 6 3 2

Thanks for the reply. But if we're asking "which question", that sounds like something not permanent. Your explanation is great, so I guess I'm just thick!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

why is cual es de pregunta wrong??? Hmm.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

chrisdfrank 10

"What is of question?"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

warmheartedbear 7

I didnt finish the the question and it checked it for me when i didnt want it to

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lortesha 7

Why can't I just say ¿Cual es pregunta? Is the la really necessary. Cause when we say it is you can just use Es so why the difference on some and not on all questions

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Athalia2 15 3

In English, it would be ungrammatical to say "What is question?" We would instead say, "What is THE question?" or possibly "What is A question?" In the same way, "la" ("the") is necessary in this Spanish sentence before "pregunta."

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PratikP7 12 9

When we sould use Cuàles and cuàl?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Furry_Halo_Fan 5 2

stupid fricken thing not understanding wtf im saying

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hakunamatatahal 14 5 5 3

What is the difference between Cual es and Cuales?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MJMGruver 25 658

"Cual es" means "which is". "Cuales" is the plural of "cual". It would be used with a plural verb - "Cuales son" to be "which are"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PuppyLover66666 6
es/la? I thought es was masculine.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MJMGruver 25 658
"el" is the masculine article; "es" is the third person singular form of the verb ser - to be.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

iam_rwjxiii 7
they are so picky about this like even if you make the littlest mistake they mark it wrong

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PuppyLover66666 6
I know right!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hydrating 11 2 2
Why is this in the indirect pronoun lesson for les/nos?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

DayanPerez732
it hard

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

jade934750 5
I think my answer was right how come it corrected it wrong ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Wildspeck1 6 3
friend for inget

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Gkeisler917 5
Is there any easy way to remember this???

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

xomaddiexo 5
the last time it told me to put tu now its saying put la?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

DelphinaDJ 9

When did I learn this? Some random question pops up in the food tutorial.....anyway, I'm seeing 2 different answers. I guessed the answer, but got told it's 'Qué es la cuestión?' But in this section....'Cual es la pregunta?.....all fun and games

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

BaconLover3113 7

I'm confused, how come "Cual es pregunta" is wrong here, but when i look it up, it shows as the perfect translation?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

195 "We speak in the afternoons"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2832>

JohanRodriguez 6 2

English is my second language, and I don't really get what "We speak in the afternoons" is supposed to mean. I think in Spanish it is "Hablamos en las tardes".

Give Lingot

04 years ago

Leave a new comment

6 Comments

bonnie.sjoberg 25 24 3

"We speak in the afternoons" is not incorrect, but it is awkward.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

ianferrel 11 6 5

You'd probably only see "afternoons" if you meant "in the afternoon, on multiple days".

Example: "I'm visiting my grandmother this week. Mornings, we go to the market. We speak in the afternoons"

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

marcomsm 9

You are correct - "We speak in the afternoons" is incorrect English.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

bonnie.sjoberg 25 24 3

Speak is very formal. Usually it relates to someone giving a formal speech or address, as in "I will speak to my employees this afternoon." Speak does not usually mean a friendly conversation among friends or family members. In the case of the grandmother I would say "We chat in the afternoons." or "We visit in the afternoons." or more colloquially, "We have talks in the afternoons." If it was with a friend of the same age, colloquially one might say "We hang out in the afternoons." because "hanging out" implies spending time and talking together. I just wouldn't use "hanging out" as an expression in a formal setting like a job interview to describe a favorite activity.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

kyoush 8 7 2

my 2 cents worth, don't expect every Spanish to English translated sentence on duolingo to be absolutely correct (English-wise i mean). They are there to get the meaning across, since English is somewhat limited/generic when it comes to certain sentence structures.

Another example that comes to mind that you will notice is the use of 'you all' for plural second person, something not usually used in English (unless you are talking about certain slang/dialects) but necessary here to differentiate between usted and ustedes.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

csi 18 11 11 8 7 7 6 4 3 3 2

"We speak in the afternoons" sounds fine to me. It sounds like something I would say and hear on any given day. "My husband and I don't speak in the mornings. We're not morning people." "I'm not working evenings this week. I'm on days." Does it really sound awkward?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

196 "The man is drinking tea."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1117750>

Translation: Der Mann trinkt Tee.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

Doarhe 7

I have no clue when to use the definite and indefinite articles. I fully understand the object subject situation but can't find a simple little chart that tells me when to use what and I keep making mistakes. Apparently I can't learn it through trial and error because the error is taking over and I am about to give up. I can always google it I guess but there should be something right on the site where we can check to learn it.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SimoneBa 15 13 9 98

I have to admit, I don't quite understand your query... as far as I can see, the use of direct and indirect articles in German corresponds more or less equivalent to how they are used in English. I realise that learners whose mother tongue does not feature direct or indirect articles (i.e. native speakers of Slavic languages) have no end of trouble with this.

Anyway, if you're managed to get on top of this in English, you'll eventually succeed in German... although I realise that this won't alleviate your frustration right now :(

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Doarhe 7

My problem is not the object pronouns, I haven't gotten that far yet. It's just the definite and indefinite article. When is die, der, ein, einen, din, den....

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

growlbeast 7

I too am having issues with this and i feel that duolingo could do a better job to try to help with these. I feel it should be most of what is covered in the basics. Instead we are being drilled on different foods..

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

snlzk 13 10 5

Well the sentences asked in the test always have the hint. In English the corresponds to der/die/das/den and a corresponds to ein/eine/einen. I missed this quest as I thought the English sentence was "a tea" not just "tea"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Raees400810 6

Are we actually learning by just putting in words ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Michael497408 5

yes or no if you are typing it in then yourself yes you are but, if some one is helping you then no, not at all.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

197 - 215 of 920

[accessed March 9, 2017]

197 How can I take the placement test again?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4320326>

kealiiballao 13 8 4 4 3 2 2

I skipped the placement test, but how could I take it after I started the course?

Give Lingot

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

3 Comments

JaneEmily 17 8

Like Lenkvist said, if you reset your progress in your settings then you should be able to do a placement test again. If you want to know your progress, but you don't want to risk losing your levels etc - then you can take the Dutch progress quiz located in the store:

https://www.duolingo.com/show_store - this won't act as a placement test but you can see how you're doing on a rough estimate :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lenkvist 23 22 17 14 13 12 12 11 10 7 7 1

Maybe you will get another chance if you reset your course? Otherwise you could try to test out of the lessons by using the locks in your tree.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kealiiballao 13 8 4 4 3 2 2

hmm... thats risky. what if I don't place back beyond my current level. I'll just continue on. Bedankt.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

198 "The onion is mine."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/97236>

Translation: La cebolla es mía.

34 years ago

37 CommentsThis discussion is locked.

AlanBeardface 7 3

Is it still mía if I am not a girl?

59Give Lingot•4 years ago

gro_com 16

'mía/o' refers to the gender of the object, not the owner.

203Give Lingot5•4 years ago

arooshaa3 8 2

Why?

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Camelor 17 6

That's just how the language works. If the object is feminine, like cebolla (onion), semana (week), bandera (flag), etc. you'd use 'mía.' For example, "La cebolla es mía." However, if the object is masculine, like Plato (plate), cerebro (brain), perro (dog, etc. You'd use "mío." For example, "El perro es mío."

Learning the genders of objects can be tricky, but there's a generality that words that end in "a" are feminine and words that end in "o" are masculine. This is not always the case, which is why it's a generality and not a law. Also, words that end in 'tion' in english change to 'ción' in spanish. For example, admiration changes to admiración. I believe that all of the ción words are feminine... there might be some exceptions, but at least most of them are.

106Give Lingot4•2 years ago

jen.mccorm 6

This was very in-depth and very helpful! Thank you for all the examples!!

7Give Lingot•2 years ago

hankmoody 5 2

That was a great help thanks :)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

ShaneHudson 4 2

How can an onion have a gender?!

-46Give Lingot•4 years ago

TByrd007 15

You must peel each and every layer off and look closely.

195Give Lingot4•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 468

Every noun in Spanish has a gender. "Onion" is a feminine noun, so it is "La cebolla". However, "chile" (pepper) is masculine, so it is "el chile".

71Give Lingot•4 years ago

Conrad64 14 8 4 6

Very good question, I understand you, if you try it in German it is worse, they have three genders...

14Give Lingot•4 years ago

emilsaric 22 18 17 15 13 12 10 9 9 8 7 7 7 6 5 3 2

Just a curious fact, the German "die Zwiebel" and Spanish "la cebolla" both come from the Latin "cepa" or "cepulla". :)

13Give Lingot•4 years ago

mcdx3 11 4

dutch 'ui' and english 'onion' also come from latin 'unio' = onion, garlic, large pearl.

5Give Lingot•3 years ago

TwiztidMenace 6 3

I keep forgetting the word for onion (cebolla) and always want to use the word for horse (caballo). Hopefully typing this down will help me remember!

28Give Lingot•3 years ago

Yourfacerecords 6

Please remember that an onion and a horse taste different.

16Give Lingot•2 years ago

Satrinix 9 6 2

Caballo=Cabela's=Deer=four legged mammal=Horse This is my ridiculous system. Hope it helps!

7Give Lingot•3 years ago

SierraAkhd 4

I only remember because of Disney's the 3 caballeros. Cowboys = ride horses.

4Give Lingot•2 years ago

UeeMac 5

La cebolla es mía if I am a boy?

5Give Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 468

"mía" applies to the gender of the onion, not yours.

15Give Lingot•3 years ago

5dvandev 10

Would mía work?

2Give Lingot•4 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 468

No, because "cebolla" is feminine.

6Give Lingot•4 years ago

RicAnderson 6

Shouldn't mío or mía refer to the gender of who has the onion? Regardless of the gender of the object?

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 468

No. It refers to the gender of the onion (native Spanish speaker).

5Give Lingot•3 years ago

foodgeek 10

I got this wrong at first also...here's the explanation from the notes on Duolingo: Note that the possessive adjectives vary by number and gender. The change is with the nouns they modify, not with the person(s) who possess the object. For example, for a male cat you say "El gato es tuyo" (The cat is yours) regardless of whether you are talking to a man or a woman.

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

razon 7 7 6 2

Why is the sentence "La cebolla es la mía" incorrect? My book says it can be la mía or only mía. Both should be correct. What do you think?

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 468

That would be like saying "The onion is the mine".

7Give Lingot•3 years ago

razon 7 7 6 2

Thanks for answering but you can't translate English-Spanish literally. My Spanish books said so that both should be posible.

2Give Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 468

I'm a native Spanish speaker. I guess you could say "La cebolla es la mía", but it would mean something like "The onion is the one that belongs to me", for example as an answer to the question "which is the vegetable that belongs to you?" I would not use it to say "The onion is mine".

10Give Lingot•3 years ago

razon 7 7 6 2

you win :) Thank you for the explanation. That sounds good. So I remember to use "la mía" when I am talking about something that really belongs to me. In other cases only "mía".

2Give Lingot•3 years ago

Mark2020 25 25 21 14 8 3

One of the sentences on Duolingo is "La casa de la esquina es la nuestra." translated as "The house on the corner is ours".

2Give Lingot•3 years ago

jfGor 16 2 2

Razon, usually with the verb 'ser', the possessive pronoun, usually the definite article is left off. The text books will tell you that the possessive pronouns Do take a definite article. 'mia' is a possessive adjective meaning 'of mine'. It is the long form of the possessive adjectives. It like saying 'they are onions of mine' or 'son cebollas mias. 'They are my onions'

http://spanish.about.com/od/adjectives/a/long_form_possessive_adjectives.htm

http://spanish.about.com/od/pronouns/a/possessive_pronouns.htm

2Give Lingot•3 years ago

Conrad64 14 8 4 6

If you say, you are saying that this particular onion is mine, but when you said "la cebolla es la mia" you are selecting between diferent products. For example: you have the melon and theonion, an you said to your friend: the melon is mine and the onion is yours, you can said in spanish, el meón es el mio i la cebolla es la tuya.

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

CiCi0015 10

How do u know when it's mia or mio?

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

Camelor 17 6

It depends on the gender of the noun. For example, onion is cebolla which is a feminine noun so you'd use mía. If the noun was masculine, like cerebro (brain) you'd use mío.

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

TerranLane 16 2

So why es (ser) rather than está (estar)? I think of ser as being more innate or permanent and estar as being more ephemeral or extrinsic and, as an English speaker, I tend to think of possession as being temporary or contingent. Would "La cebolla está mía" be correct as well? Or would that have a different connotation?

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 468

You always user ser for belonging.

5Give Lingot1•3 years ago

tafuerniss 8 7

So the feminine/masculine has to do with the object being discussed not the person speaking?

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Camelor 17 6

Yes, exactly. Let's say I'm talking about a chair. "The chair is red." In Spanish, that's "La silla es roja." Chair is a feminine noun. Even though I'm a boy, chair will ALWAYS be 'silla' never 'sillo.'

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

199 How come I can't access the next lesson?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/172779>

Jmw5555 2

How come I can't access the next lesson after passing Basics 1 & 2 and the "phrases" lessons?

Give Lingot

44 years ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

artedalia 8

The answers to this question are very complicated. Learning tree???? What's that? Only the people who work in this regularly know what you're talking about. For someone who is just getting started with Duolingo it would help if you could just tell us what BUTTON to click on next and what that button does that will allow us to move on. So tell me, which Button do I click on? Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

You have not passed Basics 2.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

jmw12345 10

Thank you for helping. But I still do not know what I am supposed to do next- nothing is highlighted for me to click and open. On the tree graph, when I click on Basic 1, 2, or Phrases, it shows the pics of the notebooks I have completed- lessons 1,2,3. But there is nothing else I can open and continue (except a manila folder that lets you translate long, complicated words beyond my level.) Now what do I do? I even created a second account, re-did basic 1 (lesson 1), basic 2 (lesson 2), and Phrases (lesson 3).

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

Actually, next lessons should be available to you even without translations. You have to "learn" the unit to move on, you don't have to "master" it. If you are sure you have made through all the lessons and "learned" the unit, I'd recommend you to write a feedback (see the Feedback tab to the left) and tell your problem. Your skill tree that I can see tells me that you have not made any lessons in Basics 2 - the progressbar is empty.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

spiceyokooko 11 2

Your skill tree shows that you've 'learnt' Basics 1 (as shown by the tick in the middle) which has unlocked Phrases and Basics 2 which you haven't yet 'Learnt'. You need to 'Learn' Basics 2 and Phrases to unlock any more lessons.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

nickpraeger 8

you have to do a bit of that complicated translation to progress. but its not too bad. hovering over the foreign word shows you some literal translations. because you are human and not a machine you can put together all the literal words and figure out what the real translation is. this is what Duolingo gets out of providing a free learning tool for you and in the process it translates the web for everyone. so put in your translation, next you select the best from the bunch it suggests and then you can progress.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Simla 8

i can't get on to the next lesson. What should i do?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

EricBurger 2

Soy Anicacia Dudamel email adudamel2@gmail. com - No se como accesar para continuar en mi clase 3. Por favor indicarme el procedimiento.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

200 "I would have managed the kitchen."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/911235>

T ranslation: Yo habría dirigido la cocina.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

21 Comments

Pigslew 23 23

"Logrado" was one of their hints!

5ReplyGive Lingot8•3 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

The hints are... hints, not correct answers for the specific sentence. It's a list of all possible meanings (well obviously it's not always exhaustive) the word may have in (all) different possible contexts. So they don't apply all to all sentences.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Melita2 16 14 6

Jrik, I am almost at the end and I know this now, but I must say that there are practically no explanations in the FAQ or elsewhere on how DL works. They want us not to clutter, but if they would explain How it Works, all the questions about the hints would be eliminated. I wrote to DL twice about this bit, and another question which I have since forgotten and never heard back.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

Indeed... But I almost sure to remember that it was written on top of the list before. And I was sure it was still the case.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Cheryl1 20 11 7 7

Can someone explain when you use lograr, dirigir and manejar? I'm not catching the differences by doing the exercises. ¡Gracias!

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

See:

<http://www.wordreference.com/es/en/translation.asp?spen=lograr>

<http://www.wordreference.com/es/en/translation.asp?spen=dirigir>

<http://www.wordreference.com/es/en/translation.asp?spen=manejar>

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

estefaniamm 25 9 7 458

"Dirigido" maybe, but not "controlado la cocina", except if you are feeding someone with eating disorders... and just maybe. Gestionar could also be used.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

daduolingovid 15 11

+1 for gestionar

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

QuasarJones 11 9 8 6 5 2 2 2

+2! That's what I wrote and was marked incorrect (native Spanish speaker)

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

FrankOvares 15 11 10

I am also a native Spanish speaker and got marked wrong for "supervisado", which to me it doesn't make much sense for "managing" , "supervising" or even "administering" a place is practically the same action.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Jeevikaa_nan 21 17 4 2 2

Note : conjugation of the verb haber is common for both 1st personal singular (" I ") & 3rd personal singular("he", "she") & second person singular formal ("usted") and is "habría".

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dsj330 20 2

The previous sentence was "I would have managed the company" answer was yo habría la empresa dirigido..

This one is "I would have managed the kitchen" answer is yo habría dirigido la cocina. Why?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

david795616 25 24 10 14

CoCina...No coSina..

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Ludowho 11 10 9 9 7 5 3 3 2

me hubiese hecho A cargo SHOULD be correct....

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

raul_007 23 7 671

Tendria dirigido la cocina is wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Eamon167480 13 12 12 8

Si. -_- It's hubriese apparently

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 days ago

raul_007 23 7 671

Okay. Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 days ago

Eamon167480 13 12 12 8

You're welcome :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 days ago

Eamon167480 13 12 12 8

Oh my...look at all those flags heh

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 days ago

JoeJarema 14

Was correct

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

201 The most used tenses.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/15475>

kowcio 13

Hey.

"What tenses / times are most often used in Spanish to communicate".

My goal is to learn the basics where can talk in past / present /future in 90% of time (or at least the more the better ;)). Subjuntivos and rest of the more "fancy" construction i want to leave for some day in future.

Cheers -Kowcio

Give Lingot

34 years ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

Peci 11 8

It is very similar to English. Pretérito indefinido - past simple, pretérito perfecto (compuesto) - present perfect, pretérito imperfecto - imperfect tense (I was talking...), futuro imperfecto - future simple, "ir" a infinitive - going to. That should be enough for now, you could find out how is every tense made, there are some irregular verbs but it is easy to learn in my opinion. Good luck.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

dagger 17

Peci's suggestion about using "ir a" + infinitive to express the future is an excellent way to expand your ability to express yourself without a lot of effort. I'd say in conversation, it is probably used more than the actual future tense.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 352

And there are good reasons for that. This post here doesn't address that directly, but reading it and listening to the accompanying link will help you understand why.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

dagger 17

If you are looking to get to a survival mode where you can be in another country and at least communicate your needs then start with the present tense. With the use of some context you'll make yourself understood. It's actually correct to use the present tense for the future when you provide context, so you'll get by with that. For example, even though "lo haré" is the correct future form, you can absolutely say "lo hago mañana" and not need to know the future tense. The next important thing would be to learn the preterite. This one is different because it really isn't correct to say "lo hago ayer" but if the other person knows you are a foreigner you will be understood. One could argue that most of our conversations are about things we did, so the preterite is very important to master.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

kowcio 13

Thanks a lot for the hints !!

About future AFAIK futuro imperfecto AND ir + infinitive will suffice. If i wont know il ltry to craft something with present :P

About past : preterito perfecto de indicativo preterito indefinido What about those ? I see that also present tense can be used like (in duolingo) "nosotros hablamos anoche" if it wasnt here i woudnt say it is past (although it would be translated like that) because theres no conjugation for the past tense.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

mol1980s 17 6 5

"ir a" + infinitive is MUCH more common in conversation, and imperfect past (e.g. -aba or -ia endings) is the most common. Of course this might vary depending on where you're going, but in general those were most helpful from my previous experience. If you want to be more adventurous with your language use I can highly recommend Practise Makes Perfect Spanish Verb Tenses - it's helping me through my A level currently! All the best!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

mol1980s 17 6 5

"ir a" + infinitive is MUCH more common in conversation, and imperfect past (e.g. -aba or -ia endings) is the most common. Of course this might vary depending on where you're going, but in general those were most helpful from my previous experience. If you want to be more adventurous with your language use I can highly recommend Practise Makes Perfect Spanish Verb Tenses - it's helping me through my A level currently! All the best!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

mol1980s 17 6 5

"ir a" + infinitive is MUCH more common in conversation, and imperfect past (e.g. -aba or -ia endings) is the most common. Of course this might vary depending on where you're going, but in general those were most helpful from my previous experience. If you want to be more adventurous with your language use I can highly recommend Practise Makes Perfect Spanish Verb Tenses - it's helping me through my A level currently! All the best!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

202 "The pen is mightier than the sword."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1652948>

Translation: Más puede la pluma que la espada.

13 years ago

Leave a new comment

77 Comments

Danielexx_CHL 9 8
el lápiz es más fuerte que la espada

21ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LuisMartin598446 19
yo escribí "el lápiz es mas poderoso que la espada" y me traduce el boli.. se refería al bolígrafo o que
O.o

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ralmendr 13
"El lápiz es más poderoso que la espada"

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mara.rodri4 9
me paso igual :O !!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

CoolRafaGD 7
yo puse el bolígrafo es mas fuerte que la espada, pero falle, Que mal

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

LauraCp23 11 2
a mi me suena más al refrán: "Más vale maña que fuerza"

14ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ciroptero 22 22 22 22 13 10 161
No se trata de maña y de fuerza. Quiere decir que algo escrito puede hacer más daño que una herida física

33ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hardoy.jua 6
coincido

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

filroot 9
Coincido contigo..."Más vale maña que fuerza", se usa en México

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Quirante89 22
ahi está !

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lucioavilla 18

En arg escuché... "La palabra es mas fuerte que la espada" pero tb puede que tb lo digan de esa forma, no soy muy refranero

10ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Caleidoscope. 11 8 2

No sé, soy Argentina, y más que "la palabra", decimos "La pluma es más fuerte que la espada".

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

luishavila 15 2

En los Refranes aprendan la forma de decirlo en Ingles, pero conserven la traduccion como ustedes lo conocen en sus respectivos paises, al final de cuentas el uso de estos refranes tiene mas sentido como los conocemos a como los traduce Dualingo.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Malomalisimo 11 11 6 3

A mí me quiere sonar más: "La pluma vence a la espada" Atendiendo quizás al español clásico.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Serotro 16

A mí me parece un español normal, lo antiguo es el común uso de la pluma para escribir, actualmente suelen utilizarse otras herramientas para eso. Pero español clásico no encuentro en tu comentario.

PD: por favor no me escriban viejo... que aún puedo llegar a ser mucho más viejo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nic93snk 25 19 14 4 3 2 2

The pen is mightier than the sword.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

YudaX 15 9

¿"La pluma puede más que la espada" no debería ser válida?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

enzomatrix97 18 2

La pluma es mas fuerte que la espada

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

yucano 15 6 4

porque no puede ser: puede más la pluma que la espada?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

primitivo. 16

el significado es el mismo.el orden de los elementos no altera el significado.otra cosa es que quieran que se escriba en forma de refrán.Deberían advertirlo.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RicardoMen485711 14 4

Boli se dice en argentina. Genéricamente se dice lapiz y la consideró mala. Maaaaal

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BrisyVasquez 11 2

Escribí: La pluma puede más que la espada,pero NO! la traducción correcta es: Más puede la pluma que la espada.. -.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BrianMacedo 17 14

Son 03 colaboradores para todo el curso, poco a poco van incorporando todas las alternativas, es como pedirle a Wikipedia que sea completa y enteramente perfecta.

Son colaboradores y hacen algo gratuitamente no son nuestros empleados ;)

16ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ciroptero 22 22 22 22 13 10 161

Yo escribi puede mas y me lo dio mal. Hay que poner más puede cuando ya nadie se expresa así

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AntonioCil1 10

la pluma puede más que la espada. también es correcto

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KarloVerde 12 11 46

la pluma puede más que la espada... tiene el mismo significado.. solo que está en un orden distinto-..

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Iulmi7 13 12 8 7

Me gusta el refrán, nunca lo había escuchado.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Algie58 12 9 8 2

"La pluma tiene más poder que la espada" está bien dicho, ¿No?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Gabba_2013 7

Pluma es femenino, así que debería rectificar el comentario

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AntonioMcano 10

