de acuerdo yo traduje la pluma es mas poderosa que la espada y me corrigio la pluma es mas poderoso que la espada, no estoy de acuerdo ya que pluma es femenino. Respecto al significado entiendo que la razon y el intelecto pueden mas que la fuerza

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JairoGras 11 5

la inteligencia vale mas que la fuerza, o mas vale maña que fuerza, deberían ser aceptadas

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlexMedinaPichs 14 3 3 5

A mi me pasó lo mismo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jvegacastro 25 12 11 8 7 3 3 62

Del escritor inglés Edward Bulwer-Lytton (1803-1873) la frase aparece en la obra teatral de 1839 "Richelieu; Or the Conspiracy" acto II, escena II Según la Wikipedia su equivalente mas cercano al español sería "Más vale maña que fuerza" -Sin embargo en la transcripción del manuscrito se mantiene la propuesta de Duolingo por ser la más fiel.

True, This! — Beneath the rule of men entirely great, The pen is mightier than the sword. Behold The arch-enchanters wand! — itself a nothing! — But taking sorcery from the master-hand To paralyse the Cæsars, and to strike The loud earth breathless! — Take away the sword — States can be saved without it!

¡Verdad, Esta! — Bajo el gobierno de los hombres enteramente grandes, La pluma es más poderosa que la espada. Observad La varita de los archi-hechiceros! - En sí misma una nada! — Pero tomar la brujería de la mano del maestro Para paralizar los Césares, y golpear El ruidoso jadeo de la tierra! — Arrojad la espada — Los Estados pueden ser salvados sin ella!

https://es.wikipedia.org/wiki/La_pluma_es_m%C3%A1s_poderosa_que_la_espada

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

KGLH 10 6 4

Yo digo que para cerrar esta discusión todos debemos saber que ese refrán en los diferentes países que existen los dicen de diferente manera. Ejemplos: Panamá: Mas vale maña que fuerza Argentina: La pluma es mas fuerte que la espalda México: Como lo traduce duolingo

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

mirall10 13

Siendo frases hechas, ¿no se podría aceptar también "la maña vence a la fuerza"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexRomero10 25 4 3 2 19

La pluma puede mas q la espada, no sean majes "el orden de los factores no altera el producto"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

villarrealmiriam 12

en Panamá usamos ese refrán Mas vale maña que fuerza

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

roseteelizabeth 7 5 2 2

si parece asi mas puede la pluma que la espada

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jorgerivas.84 7

LÁPIZ!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TonyVidal1 6 2

Lapiz es "pencil". Creo Aún así la traducción " más vale maña que fuerza " yo la daria por válida, ya que más poderosa es la pluma que la espada esta expresado en un castellano ya casi en desuso

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BereniceUnriza 14

los regionalismos o costumbrismos son relativos al lugar de origen

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

camportiz03 9 3 2

En México muchos autores mencionan "La pluma es más poderosa que la espada." que en sentido semántico es igual que "La pluma es mas fuerte que la espada" o "Es mas fuerte la pluma que la espada" creo que es mas un tema de semántica y regionalismos.

Saludos

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Anton-JR 6 5 4 2

En español se suele decir algo, no recuerdo exactamente, pero hace alusión a que el lápiz puede estar más afilado que la espada; remitiendo , por ejemplo, a periodistas. También se dice " tiene una pluma afilada", "su afilada pluma", etc.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Arendil 12

Pluma en español es un sustantivo femenino por lo tanto su adjetivo es poderosa y no poderoso como me señalaron la corrección.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

11eri11 11

Lo que significa es que lo que se escribe es más fuerte que la fuerza física.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Anabel484557 9 5

La pluma es más filosa que la espada.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

increiblemike 12

el lapiz es mas poderoso que la espada

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JonhattanU 11 6

Puse el esfero es más poderoso que la espada y me dice que incorrecto solo por que debe ser bolígrafo? que pasa con los sinónimo en esta app :S

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hdfallag 7 6 4

el lapiz es mas fuerte que la espada.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GonzaloVac 10 4

esfero es sinónimo de lapicero en Colombia

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mannyp331 13

The pen is mightier than the sword(la pluma es más poderosa que la espada) la verdadera traduccion seria " MAS VALE MAÑA QUE FUERZA" es un tópico literario acuñado por el autor inglés Edward Bulwer-Lytton (The pen is mightier than the sword), como una metonimia para indicar que hace más daño un escrito bien concebido y dirigido contra un punto débil del adversario, que una estocada. Se usa habitualmente para referirse a la primacía de los recursos literarios sobre los militares, o de la inteligencia sobre la fuerza (de un modo similar al refrán castellano más vale maña que fuerza). Aunque la forma de expresarla es original, la idea de que la expresión escrita o, en general, cualquier forma de comunicación, sobrepasa en eficacia a la violencia tiene muchos precedentes. La expresión cuarto poder con el que se compara a la prensa con los tres poderes clásicos del Estado comparte gran parte de ese sentido.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Mayte684263 14 11

si la palabra "mightier" significa "potente, poderoso", en la frase, "the pen is mightier than the sword"...y mi traducción al castellano ha sido "el boli es más (potente) que la espada"....por qué me da como mal traducida la palabra MIGHTIER = POTENTE, PODEROSA

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

adav90 5 3

lapicero y pluma (pen) es lo mismo!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AnicoraMulheim 5

La pluma es mas poderoso que la espada (aunque el dicho original es "la pluma es mas veloz que la espada")

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElisaMarch59 11 7 7

Es lo mismo

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mbmb1. 8 5

lapicero es donde guardas los lapices no el lápiz en sí

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

jorgesanma6 7

"mas vale la funda que la espada" es lo que comúnmente se dice en Chile. Lo de la "pluma" nada que ver.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

de_Jair 7 6

Pues siempre he dicho "La pluma es más poderosa que la espada".

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

MarjorieCajan 7 5 4 2

Todos los que tuvieron el mismo problema con esta frase, reporten la pregunta, para que así en el futuro acepten nuestras respuestas como válidas.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

DanielVenezuela 18 4 2

Las palabras hieran mas que los golpes.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Beatriz332995 13

Sinceramente, los hice adivinando porque no entendi casi nada. Que horrible los 30 lingots peor ganados.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

DavidAlcoc5 9 4

Mas puede la pluma que la espada

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

MauroPrest 12 2

¿Por qué no toman la traducción literal de las frases? De esta forma me confunde más y no llama la atención.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

KGLH 10 6 4

espero que les ayude

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

VeronicaPozoRuiz 21 19 13 78

Traduce "pen" como "boli" cuando la traducción correcta al español es "bolígrafo"

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

DavidPrez1 14 9

En Colombia también se "esfero" al boli , me la dio incorrecta

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

MVictoriaP4 15 13 73

Yo creo que es "más vale maña que fuerza"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

alrinpi 18 6

en cada pais se traduce o se dice de manera diferente

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

yurirojassalazar 19 13 9 4

El lapicero es mas poderoso que la espada 2016 felizz año nuevo .peru

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

NancyLaraZ 10 2

mas puede el lapiz que la espada

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

ValoCard 10 6

Yo recuerdo haber escuchado también "La letra es más fuerte que la espada". Pero no me lo aceptó. ¿Acaso lo recuerdo mal y nadie lo dice así? Ayuda... Ya no estoy seguro si conozco mi propio idioma.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Mario_efe 12 3

En mi país se usa "la pluma es más poderosa que la espada"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

paulalav 10 9 6

En España lo correcto y más común sería "Más vale maña que fuerza".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Luis.Forero.T 14 8 5 1

algunos latinos decimos "La pluma es mas poderosa que la espada"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

nbome 12

Lapiz es mas "universal" que boli

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

203 Spanish verbs

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2731292>

Lexhorton 10 9

Which verb form is "leen" in and how is it different from lee and lees? Lee is the tu form right?

Give Lingot

22 years ago

Leave a new comment

13 Comments

oopsiedaisies 8

Leen, comes from the verb leer, which means "to read" in Spanish. Leen is the "they" form of the verb. Here's how the conjugation works:

Yo (I) - Leo Nosotros (we)- Leemos Tu (you) - Lees

El/Ella (He/She) - Lee Ellos/Ellas (they) - Leen

Hope that helps!

7ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Lrtward 25 25 8 157

That was a great example of the conjugation of leer. I hope you don't mind me changing the format a little. It makes a bit more sense if you do your first, second, and third person singular, and then your first, second, and third person plural forms. Plus I've added usted and ustedes.

Yo (I) - Leo

Tu (you informal) - Lees

Usted/El/Ella (You formal/He/She) - Lee

Nosotros (we)- Leemos

Ustedes/Ellos/Ellas (you all/they) - Leen

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

oopsiedaisies 8

I just learned a different way. I listed it in the same order, it was just not meant to be read across, rather it was meant to be read down. It's like a chart. haha thank you though! I can see how a chart would be harder to read here.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lrtward 25 25 8 157

Ha! I didn't even think to read it like a chart. I learned with the chart, too. Once you post on here, though, the formatting is lost.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bcassill 4

But, how am I suppose to remember that?? I'm not getting the "rule", or is it just I have to memorize it, there isn't really a "rule"??

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wynrich 24 21 14 10 101

Leer is a regular "er" verb. So, if you learn the pattern for "er" verbs you will be able to conjugate "leer" or any other regular "er" verb. Here is an explanation about "er" verb conjugations:

http://www.davidreilly.com/spanish/lessons/basic_verbs/er_verbs.html

More if you want to read more: <http://www.studyspanish.com/verbs/lessons/juster.htm>

<http://www.spanishdict.com/topics/show/36>

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jay10girl 9 5 3 2

Oh my gosh thank so much because i get easily confused!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Joeyshere 14 11 10 10 9 4 3 2 2 2

Leen is the 3rd person present verb form of the verb "leer" -- to read. You would use this form in a sentence like: "Ellos leen un libro."

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wynrich 24 21 14 10 101

This is a helpful site: <http://www.spanishdict.com/conjugate/>

You can type in a verb and the site will conjugate it for you in many tenses. E.g., if you type in "leen" it will show you that "leer" is the infinitive ("to read") for that verb and "leen" will appear under the Present, after ellos/ellas/Uds. (3rd person plural). You'll see that the "tú" form is "lees".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Salxandra 23 10 2

:) "Tu lees un libro."

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lexhorton 10 9

Thanks everyone that helped a lot!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Julian_L. 10 6 6

You read / You are reading:

Tú lees

Vos leés (Argentina)

You guys read / You guys are reading:

Ustedes leen (Just in Hispanic America)

Vosotros leéis (Just in Spain)

They read / They are reading:

Ellos leen

You, read:

Tú, lee

Vos, leé (Argentina)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ShinbiBae 5

lol I get stuck on that too... theres also leemos but idk

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

204 What is the difference between S'il vous plait, and S'il te plait

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/964247>

neaunderhill 11

if they both mean please what is the difference between s'il vous plait and s'il te plait. and when would you use one over the other?

Give Lingot5
193 years ago

Leave a new comment
10 Comments

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 1

S'il vous plaît. formal formulation.

S'il te plaît. informal formulation; to ask to a friend or (close) member family.

35ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

AlejandroR666 24 11 10 6 5 3

I see it this way: Remember that Vous is formal and plural for "you" while tu is singular and informal for "you". The acusative of vous is the same (vous), while the acusative of tu is "te".

18ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JeffRoss6 11 5 4 3 2 2

I thought 'vous' meant 'you' in the plural format, and 'tu' or 'te' was in the singular format.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

You are on the right track, but not quite correct.

vous is "you" for use in a plural format, as well as for use in a single format for people you do not know well. It is the one you always use if in doubt. In fact you should use it unless you are invited by a french person to use the familiar term of tu.

tu is "you" for use only in a singular format, and only used when referring to family members and people you are very familiar with who are close friends. If in any doubt - it is more polite to use the term vous. It is generally recommend to only use tu if you are invited to do so, as if you use it inappropriately it is often viewed as being very offensive.

You would never use tu to refer to people you have just met, or to people in business such as shop keepers or hotel staff or museum staff, or ticket sellers, etc.

They even have a special concept for being allowed to use the term of tu when addressing people. tutoyer.

So you might hear the phrase:

Tu peux me tutoyer : You can address me as 'tu'

On peut se tutoyer, non? : We can address each other as 'tu', don't you think?

Est-ce qu'on peut se tutoyer? : Can we address each other as 'tu'?

Ne me tutoyez pas, s'il vous plaît : Please don't address me as 'tu'

Je n'aime pas qu'on me tutoie : I don't like being addressed as 'tu'

I will come back presently and give the examples of simple present of the verb totoyer

6ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

lukelisnevsky 3

Thats like, the best answer ever

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

yassminGad0 6

S'il vous plaît. formal formulation. S'il te plaît. informal formulation; to ask to a friend or (close) member family

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

yassminGad0 6

you say s'il vous plait to anyone but s'il te plait is for close people, (family and friends).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Haylinhex 7 6 4

what is the meaning of "S'il"? They seem to be dummy words.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

sarah_ma88 14 3

It is like saying < If it pleases you > = < S'il vous plaît >. That is how I see it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

hsinhsing 25 15 10 449

finally, thanks guys!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

205 Learning Atlantean is Possible...and Very Hard!

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7152650>

Flying_Frenchman 18 17 10 9 7

Recently I rewatched the Disney movie Atlantis: The Lost Empire, and after looking it up a little bit afterwards I found out that someone went out of their way to construct an entire language for the movie, all with its own vocabulary, phonetics and grammar! Here's a look at the alphabet/numbering system:

alt text

Other cool things to know about Atlantean:

Remember that someone I mentioned who constructed this language? It was none other than Marc Okrand, the man who invented the Klingon language for Star Trek!

Here's a clip of Okrand teaching Atlantean: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=shWTxkCdn80>

Atlantean was divided into two uses: the first being as a simple cypher code (as the video above and the image I posted use) and the second being a full-fledged constructed language. The key difference is that Atlantean Code has 29 letters while Atlantean only has 20. The letters c, f, j, q, v, x, z, ch, and th were later added to market the language as more of an easy cipher code (presumably to make it easy for children who watched the movie to learn?), but weren't used to formulate any of the words in the Atlantean dictionary: http://www.freewebs.com/keran_shadlag/eadictionary9710.htm.

In the movie's mythos, Atlantean is meant to be our world's "Tower of Babel" or the root of every language on the planet; nine thousand years ago Atlantis was a civilization that spawned an empire over much of the world, whose capital succumbed to a great cataclysm and remained isolated from the world - under the ocean - for over hundreds of thousands of years. Based on this fact, Okrand combined Proto-Indo-European (the ancestor to Romance, Germanic, Slavic, and Celtic languages) with ancient Chinese and Biblical Hebrew to construct the vocab, and formulated the grammar based off Sumerian and Native American languages.

Atlantean reads in the very ancient and quirky Boustrophedon format, meaning you read lines of text alternately between left-to-right and right-to-left in a zigzag, or snake motion. This is supposed to represent the flow of water. (Side note: Very Ancient Greek was written in this format, and very recently the Raga language of Vanuatu has adopted it.)

Maybe someday Duolingo may take a stab at this language?? They've already been thinking about adding other fictional languages (Kilngon, Dothraki, and Sindarin are listed on the Incubator page, along with their own symbols already designed)!

For language geeks, the Wikipedia article has an exhaustive rundown of phonetics, word order, grammatical cases and more: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Atlantean_language

Gamok!

Give Lingot5
192 years ago

Leave a new comment
9 Comments

Luscinda 25 25 25 14 11 10 8 7 6 6 5 4 3 3 2 2 4
Are people really short of things to do?

10ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

MusingThoughts 11 4 2
Awesome!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Wow. Seven years ago, I started studying a wee bit of Ancient Greek, but I wasn't aware that older forms of Greek were written in the Boustrophedon format.

Thanks a bunch for having taught me something new =)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sakana_Otoko 6
Not out of the ordinary for r/Conlangs.

Very cool!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Windrammer 14 9 8 7 3 3

conworkshop.info has different tools to create your own languages, and a very nice conlang society too.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I love codes! I found the key to an elaborate one I created when I was about 14. I was so excited! :D

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Flying_Frenchman 18 17 10 9 7

Yeah, codes as a kid were so much fun! I remember once writing a mini Zelda book in grade school and translating letters into the Hylian alphabet I found online. I'd make up the sounds and everyone would think I was crazy!! Haha good times.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TatianaBoshenka 25 12 8 2 122

This is so cool! Thanks for posting about this!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fr224 20 16 10 6 5 4 1

The number system looks like writing with the structure of Roman numerals and the appearance of Mayan numerals.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

206 How to tell the difference between come, comes, como and bebe, bebes, beba

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/11464>

Soulmonkey 3

As the title says, I'm having a bit of trouble knowing when to use the proper word in a sentence, so i was wondering if anyone could clarify it to me? Help is much appreciated! :)

Give Lingot

84 years ago

Leave a new comment

6 Comments

DWilsonCA 6 3 3

It's all conjugation stuff. You're really early on so it'll be easy for now. Here's a quick guide for the verbs you'll see so far: [verb]-o means "I [verb]", [verb]-as/es means "you [verb]", [verb]-a/e means "he/she/it [verb]s", [verb]-amos/emos means "We [verb]", and [verb]-an/en means "They/you all [verb]"

15ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

kinija 4

Yeah as DWilsonCA said it is all about conjugation. It could be difficult to understand it when your native language belongs to German language group, because conjugation in this group is very simplified. You have to just remember that every verb in spanish subjects to conjugation and sometimes it is really easy one e.g.in verbs 'comer' or 'beber' when you just do it like yo como, tu comes, el/ella/Vd. come, nosotros comemos, vosotros come'is, ellos/Vds. comen and every variant has it regular ending such as -o,-es,-e,-emos,-e'is,-en but usually it's more complicated and you have to just learn it by heart. If you had learned latin or any slavonic language it would be easier for you, but I'm sure you can do it anyway. Good luck :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

mixwrld 5 awesome help DWilsonCA thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JamJam532864 4
I am worndering that too.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MAevan1 7
i was curios thanks even though this was 4 years ago

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TabithaFor3 8 2
duolingo ugh

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

207 "She cannot play the piano."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/472947>
Translation: Elle ne peut pas jouer du piano.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment
32 Comments

ozzychris 25 8 3
I disagree profoundly with this. I think that only the 3rd option is correct. Why? Because "she does not know how to play the piano" ca have a totally different meaning to 'She cannot play the piano'. eg this could mean, if she broke he arm she cannot play the piano. That doesn't mean she doesn't know how to play.

32ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mjllopeze 12 11 11 2
i thought the exact same thing

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

n6zs 25 860

Either Duo staff is too busy to deal with this (still insisting that "Elle ne sait pas jouer du piano" is equivalent to "Elle ne peut pas jouer du piano" (26/03/2014), or they have a different opinion. I hope it is because they are very busy.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

I have made a number of changes.

she cannot play the piano: Best translations imply ability and I only kept "ne sait pas" as a side meaning.

elle ne peut pas jouer du piano:

-- "pouvoir" can mean at least "can" and "may", so I kept translations related to these notions.

--I added variant "de piano" everywhere, because it should be the way to say it (negative mode change "du/de la" to preposition "de" alone).

18ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

n6zs 25 860

Thank you very kindly, Sitesurf! Your efforts are greatly appreciated.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

markbrad 21 12 7 7 7 5 4 4 3 3 2 2

Merci beaucoup Sitesurf, for this and all that you do here!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

polinam1983 12 11

I think there's a fundamental difference between not KNOWING how to play and not being ABLE to play. so I don't think that 'sait jouer' and 'peut jouer' should both be accepted as reasonable translations.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Agreed, you may report it if you can.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jolynnedougherty 25 19 14 8 5 41

I thought after a negative sentence, something with a ne and pas, you used de instead of de or a. Why is this du?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

you are right, people say "du" but the correct form is "elle ne sait pas jouer de piano"

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Elyes17 11 10 8 7 3

very confusing.. why de is the correct form ? piano is masculine, so it should be du, no ?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

Theoretically, this sentence being negative, masculine or feminine nouns lose their article and only preposition "de" is kept.

elle ne sait pas jouer de piano (masc)

elle ne sait pas jouer de harpe (fem)

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Wobjam 24 23 23 20 19 10 8 5 411

But if that is the case, is 'du' not wrong? Or is it still something that many natives say regardless? I didn't select the 'du' form as one of the correct options and so lost a heart... :/

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

The reason why it is not "du" is that the sentence is negative, which removes the article:

il joue du piano - il ne joue pas de piano

il joue de la flûte - il ne joue pas de flûte

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Wobjam 24 23 23 20 19 10 8 5 411

Thanks, Sitesurf. Sorry, what I meant to ask is why is 'ne... du' acceptable if it is 'wrong'? (That is to say, why if I tick 'ne... de' but don't tick 'ne... du' as correct do I lose a heart?)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

Grammatically speaking, "du" meaning "de+le", you could use it if the musical instrument were specific, like:

"elle ne joue pas du piano que son père lui a offert, mais de celui du voisin." (she does not play the piano her father gave her but the neighbor's one).

If you lost a heart for not choosing "ne... du", it is a bit unfair as "ne pas du piano" should not be used if the piano is not otherwise specified.

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Wobjam 24 23 23 20 19 10 8 5 411

@Sitesurf, OK, I understand exactly what you mean, thanks for the explanation! :)

Do you know if it would be possible to make answers 'acceptable but not optimal', so that even if we don't tick them, then we don't lose a heart? Because sometimes there are translations we think are tenuous so don't tick them, but then they are still acceptable in some very rare contexts...

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

MCQ are made with 'tickable' best or accepted translations (same database as other exercises) and fancy, very wrong made up sentences.

Therefore, if "elle ne joue pas du piano" (which is acceptable in rare context) is shown in a MCQ, it means that this translation is already registered as acceptable (for any other exercise).

In other words, it is not perfectly proper French (without context) but you should have ticked it.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

AnnaTall 25 3 3 3

Elle ne peut pas jouer du piano? (because... eg her little finger is broken)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ozzychris 25 8 3

Right!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JirkaR 24 15 14 10 7 1262

It is not particular piano. Should be "de piano" in this case. In my opinion. Maybe "Elle ne peut plus jouer de piano parce que c'est cassé".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

... parce qu'il est cassé

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

silencer47 13 7

Ok im confused. Why is it de la for guitare but du for piano. Can someone help me??

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iixtapa 25 10 4 4

The sentence construction for playing an instrument is « jouer de + l'instrument ». Piano is masculine (le piano), and because « de + le » contracts to « du » the sentence becomes « jouer du piano ». However guitar is feminine (la guitare) and « de + la » does not contract so the sentence remains « jouer de la guitare »

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

silencer47 13 7
merci

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Karpadam 23 17 12 5 68
shouldn't it be "du piano"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7
Many French people use it, but it is not correct in a negative sentence without something that specifies "the piano" we are talking about:

elle joue du piano
elle ne joue pas de piano
elle ne joue pas du piano qui est dans le salon mais de celui qui est dans sa chambre (she does not play the piano that is in the living room but the one in her room).
0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Karpadam 23 17 12 5 68
thanks :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GeraintBal 18
Related question: is it correct to use clavier to refer to a non-specified keyboard instrument? (e.g. piece for harpsichord/piano/organ etc.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7
Yes, it is. "XYZ est au(x) clavier(s)" means that he/she is playing any instrument with a keyboard.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

GeraintBal 18
Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

afuller2 13 5 3
And elle n'arrive pas...?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

208 "The party already began."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/300132>
Translation: La fiesta ya empezó.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment
43 Comments

boricua022708 17 3

Empezo and comenzo.... They mean the same thing but is there a specific time when you should use empezo and a specific time when you should use comenzo or are they just interchangeable?

24ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fernandavale 12 8 4

You can use both interchangeably :) (native spanish speaker)

35ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

boricua022708 17 3

Okay cool! Thanks :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nubxei 10 8

Those words translate literally to begin and commence, respectively. Just so you have an idea as to why they're interchangeable.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gillpinnin 25 2 2

But in English they have different connotations (denotative meaning the same) - 'commence' is much more formal. If a friend said to another " the party has commenced", they would be misreading the occasion unless it was a very formal event or the speaker was being mildly ironic. Words of the same denotative meaning are not necessarily interchangeable. Is this the same for the Spanish equivalents? "Shall I commence to serve lunch", is incongruous in any informal everyday situation. It is like the difference between 'residence' and 'house'. I often feel the need to ask native Spanish speakers on DL about usage and context because meaning is not clear cut

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DvTiger 11

The native Spanish speaker said he uses them interchangeably. It sounds like it doesn't have that formal connotation.

6Give Lingot•1 year ago

Aurea897093 15 2

Thanks Robert Pattinson

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ConfusionMatrix 24 2 1371

Is "Ya la fiesta empezó" correct?

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

John__Doe 19 12

'ya empezó la fiesta' on the other hand is correct. I guess ya and the verb have to stick tgt

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pilgrim2k 25 1217

That's what I put and the owl said that I was wrong. Lost a heart!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alezzix 18 16 15 14 14 12 9 8 6 5 2 1081

It looks good to me.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

No, I learned from experience. ;(

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

slfranck 14

I'm not sure where to place "ya" in a sentence. Sometimes it is at the end, sometimes the beginning or, in this case, in the middle.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

stephrox 12 8 7 3 19

Usually besides the verb

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

stephrox 12 8 7 3 19

Don't worry you'll learn when you use it and you see the face on the native and then you ask them ¿Cómo debería decir eso? And then you'll learn from it and never look back (personal experience) lol

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ogniloud1 23 9

Is there a specific reason that "Ya" is in the middle of the sentence here as opposed to being mostly at the beginning of sentences. (in my experience so far on DL)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LaiaGim 8 2

I'm spanish and I started this just for fun, and now this is telling me i'm wrong. Because I wrote "la fiesta ya había empezado" instead of "la fiesta ya empezó"

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Fillmoe 25 8 48

DL is no respecter of credentials. It will chew you up and spit you out!!!

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

catcampion 20 11 6

Close, but that would be, "The party had already begun."

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Brian_Igiri 16 13 10 1

I think your translation may be due to differences between AmE and BrE. I am a native speaker of British English (BrE), and I cannot think when I would use the sentence 'The party already began'. I can say either, 'The party has already begun' or 'The party had already begun'. So if you have learned BrE, I completely understand why you translated the sentence as 'la fiesta ya había empezado' -- it was the first meaning that I thought of myself.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlanJ.Polasky 17 2

To me, the two sentences are 'one and the same'. In fact, it is more properly expressed as 'had begun', in normal English usage.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

laur3n 17 9 7

I keep accidentally typing empiezo and it says its wrong, why doesn't it say its a typo

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

amoussa 17 15 14 10 10 4

I guess because "empiezo" means "I begin", so the programme thinks your confusing the first person singular present tense of "empezar" (i.e. "empiezo") with the third person singular pretérito indefinido (i.e. "empezó")

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cdhicks1 25 23 1208

Adverb review here. <http://www.spanishdict.com/topics/show/28>

I also have difficulties with the 'YA' placement. Lately I just put it before the verb and it seems to work out.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

replica4 12 9 1

If I wanted to say, "It already started." in a situation where the context was clear would I just say, "Ya empezó." ?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

alezzix 18 16 15 14 14 12 9 8 6 5 2 1081

Yes.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

murplesauce 15

I'm very confused about word order in reference to "ya". When I got it wrong it says "la fiesta empezó ya" and when I come to the discussion page it says the correct phrase is "la fiesta ya empezó" are both of those correct? I put "ya la fiesta empezó" because I didn't think the word order would be the same as the English translation. It sounded strange to me but then again I'm not a native or fluent speaker.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ahmeda111 10 8 4 2

Why is la fiesta ya se comnzó incorrect?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Talca 25 12

spelling error

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Linda_from_NJ 24 394

I'm not an expert, but is your "se" supposed to be a reflexive pronoun? If it is, then maybe "comenzó" cannot be used with a reflexive pronoun. Maybe a native Spanish speaker can shed some light here.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ShirleyLittleton 23 132

I typed "ya la fiesta comenzo". Why is that incorrect?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

siyamatar 16 14 9 6 4 14

Can't I say "La fiesta ya comienza"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jbauer1414 13 12 4 2 1

not positive, but I think it would be "La fiesta ya comenzó"

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LaiaGim 8 2

Yes you can, but that means that the party is starting, so for the traduction of this sentnce you can't.
(I'm spanish)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mixar 22 14 7 7

Why cannot be "inicio" ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RocattaTait 22 1

I want to know that, too.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Linda_from_NJ 24 394

I think perhaps the use of inició is for when the meaning calls for a pronoun like "se" so that the Spanish sentence is the equivalent of an English passive sentence. However, I don't know for sure if I'm on the right track with my reply.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Amanda483426 10 2

Sorry, this is probably a stupid question. Do adverbs go in the same order as the English sentence, or is it like adjectives where they typically go after a verb?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Linda_from_NJ 24 394

Through trial and error, one of the things I learned about Spanish is that when "no" is used as an adverb, it has to be in front of both the main verb and the helping verb. (For example, "Ellos no habían leyendo el libro" is correct, and "Ellos habían no leyendo el libro" is incorrect.) Maybe this is also true for other Spanish adverbs. If anyone knows more about this, please feel free to comment further.

Although both Spanish and English each have absolute rules about the placement of the adverb "no," this rule does not hold for all English adverbs. Specifically, some adverbs can come before or after the verb as long as they are as close as possible to some part of the verb phrase they are modifying. (With the verb phrase "has begun," for example, all of the following are correct and sound natural: "The party already has begun," "The party has already begun," and "The party has begun already.")

I think it is significant that if a present participle, such as "beginning," is used instead of a past participle, such as "begun," (which, unlike a present participle, can be used with a modal helping verb in either past or present tense), then the placement of the English adverb is much more restricted. (For example, "The party is already beginning" and "The party is beginning already" sound much more natural to a native speaker than "The party already is beginning." Any native English speakers hearing the last sentence would understand perfectly what it meant. At the same time, they would think that whoever wrote or said it was NOT a native speaker, because native speakers don't put the adverb first when they modify the main verb phrases in passive voice sentences.)

For some idiosyncratic reason, the English language is very focused on time. Likewise, the Spanish language seems to be more focused on location. This is just how the languages evolved, and when translating, I try to remember this when I am deciding where to place the adverbs. Hope this helps.
;^)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hbeasley1 16 2 12

Why isn't "aún" accepted instead of "ya"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KedzieFamilies 17 7 5 4

Why can't the word feria be used here? It has been suggested in earlier lessons as interchangeable with fiesta.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Linda_from_NJ 24 394

In English, the word "carnival" can mean either "fair" or "party." However, "party" and "fair" can sometimes have different shades of meaning or even completely different meanings in English. For instance, sometimes English speakers use "fair" when they are talking about an open air market where anyone can go and things are bought and sold. Used this way, a "fair" could be a "carnival" because fairs can have a carnival atmosphere.

Also, sometimes English speakers use "party" when they are talking about private parties at which attendance is by invitation only. Because carnivals are parties in the sense that they are exciting times of gaiety and frolicking, in that sense they are like large public parties to which any local person can come.

When the words "fair" and "party" are not used with their shared meaning of "carnival," they certainly don't mean the same thing. This is probably why duo doesn't accept them as synonyms. I think the program doesn't accept these translations so that we duo users can learn these distinctions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

omarkhaif 14 8 6 5

Quería saber si podemos decir : la fiesta ha empezado ya !

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

209 The difference between Voici and Voila

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3258028>

YC.BC 19 11

Can someone explain it? Merci :-)

Give Lingot

32 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

tefflebear 11 8 6 3

I know a lot of people have already answered this, but here's an easy way to remember: voici has 'ici' in it which means here, while voilà has 'là' which means there.

8ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

SaveOrSlow 8 4 4

Well, I haven't practiced my French on here in a very long time, but when I had the class in high school (which was a very short time ago), my teacher told us that "Voici" means "Look Here" and "Voilà" means "Look There".

If that helps...

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

I find it hard to believe you're on level 10, yet don't know these very common words for 'here and there' Haven't DL taught them yet.?

Perhaps they are just familiar to me from 1st year secondary school French. Don't know. But I bet after this post, it will help you remember them, just as Duocitizen has explained.

-9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

YC.BC 19 11

Merci Beaucoup. Duolingo is an excellent way to learn a new language. However, sometimes there are small things that can only be explained by a person , and that's why we have those discussion forums, to leap the gap :-)

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

Yes DL is, in my opinion, the best language tool, bar none. But occasionally we have some very ordinary omissions from our education. For example, I can't remember, having done a bit of Italian, French and Spanish, at what stage we get introduced to 'yes' and 'no' per esempio ? - But it's not as early as you might expect.

Ooh I got some downvotes. Then I re-read my comment and I realise it comes across as negative / critical, which wasn't intended. at all.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

210 "The outfit is yours."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/947915>

Translation: O traje é seu.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

22 Comments

ryaton 11 8 6

The word traje has not been taught yet.

31ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PhilipNelson 12 10

Could someone explain teu(s)/tua(s) vs. seu(s)/sua(s). I thought seu was "his" and teu was "your"...

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

manofsnow 12 11 11 6 6 5 2

seu/sua is for ele, ela, or você. teu/tua is only for tu. Você in portugal is formal, tu informal. in brasil we don't care. in some places they only use tu, in some places they only use você, and in some places we mix the two. there is no distinction, just whatever you want to use and where you live. "o senhor" and "a senhora" are formal in brasil. você and tu had no informal or formal distinction

14ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

tanisemello 22 19 17 11

"O traje (masculine) é TEU/SEU"

"A roupa (feminine) é TUA/SUA"

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rachel_Kaylen 7

I still don't know whether to use teu or seu in a sentence. Or whether to use tua or sua. I recognize the difference when the noun is masculine or feminine, but what is the difference between the two masculine forms and the two feminine forms?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Albertyac 11 8 7 4

Rachel: Your question has to do with the "formal" and "informal" forms. The reason for your confusion is that the informal forms don't exist in English, anymore. But they used to, i.e. "thy and thine". Fortunately, from the discussion below, I see that the informal forms are not commonly used.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

akurzias 11 10 9 9 8 5 4 3

From what I understand about the gender of possessive adjectives, such as SEU/SUA, is that they refer to the noun they are modifying. For instance "o frango é seu" could mean both "the chicken is HIS or HERS". "seu" is used in this case because "o frango" is masculine and does not change with the gender of the chicken's owner.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

emeyr 25 25

Forget tua/teu unless you live in southern Brazil.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LifelnAfri 13

Not only in Southern Brazil, here in Mozambique, as well as other countries we also use "tua" and "teu"

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mars7017 12 10 1

The word Você seems similar in many respects with Usted in Spanish. It is a formal address form of 'You' which is used in the third person (just like 'him', 'her', or 'it'). As such it has agreement with sua / seu for feminine / masculine forms of words. So when talking to someone you know well it's okay to use tua carta for example, it might be better to say sua carta when speaking to someone formally, thereby implying Você.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chelskills 10 10 6 6 2

should the translation not be "O traje é teu/tinha"? I thought 'seu' means 'his'.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tanisemello 22 19 17 11

"O traje (masculine) é TEU/SEU"

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BenPhalan 11

What's wrong with 'a roupa é a sua'?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alfa220 10

Roupa=clothes/ traje=outfit. Clothes is like shirt and pants, outfit is more vast like hat glasses and scarves. You could say eu gosto de suas roupas and mean the same thing basically but it's not really correct and doesn't necessarily imply what the person is currently wearing or in the case of o traje é seu, a roupa é sua wouldn't specify the outfit layed out, basically traje is more specific than roupa like I like what you currently choose to wear vs I like all you have as an option to wear

2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

dreamboatannie 6 2

why can't it be o traje e sua?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tanisemello 22 19 17 11

"O traje (masculine) é TEU/SEU"

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jsknight 7 3

The gender reflects the noun, not the person. Seu/Sua applies to ele, ela and você (him, her and you). Teu/tua applies to the more intimate/formal tú (you). O traje é teu should be acceptable in this case as it is also a valid response. However, in Brasil, it is rare that people use the Tú form of anything. Você should always be your default answer unless tú is specifically stated. Even in the south where it is common to hear tú/teu/tua, they still use the conjugation for você.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JuanNaranj2 11 7

Traje is not on the list of words. Equipamento was marked wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

shanigruman 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 2

why can't I say "o traje é de voce?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Paulenrique 21 15 13 10 8

We don't use "de você" to mean "your", but we do use "de vocês".

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

PatrickCailly 18 15 13 13 7 180

why not o traje é o seu

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Paulenrique 21 15 13 10 8

It doesn't work when you have an article. (o traje é o seu), but it works when you have pronouns, as in "Este traje é o seu".

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

211 "What is the book about?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/421390>

Translation: ¿Acerca de qué es el libro?

23 years ago

Leave a new comment

187 Comments

Shelbyb11 25 5

When do you use "sobre" and when do you use "acerca de"?

89ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

thephotogod 8

I believe sobre is "on top of" meaning the physical sense. He is on top of the car.

19ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

bsimmo14 13 10 9 9 4

I've seen examples on DL that used sobre. Like el libro es sobre los monos. The book is about monkeys. Something like that

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wcpd 6

From Google Translate:

encima de: above, over, up, on top of, on, atop sobre: on, about, upon, above, concerning, on top of

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EdwardDov 10 2 1

I think that is "about" as in the sense of "being around"

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Erwin_Rommel 17 9 4 3 2 734

Almodovar's "Todo sobre mi madre" is translated as "All about my mother"

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jacopo349562 9 8 2

Doesn't that mean "everything is on my mother", as in "my mother has to handle everything / has to take care of all the things"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

What you are running into is that each language lumps various meanings into their prepositions so that some constructs are less clear/more ambiguous than others. When I learned Castellano in Peru, they never used the preposition 'sobre' or 'acerca de' for subject. They used it for 'on top of' and 'nearby'. They acknowledged that others in the Spanish speaking world used those words, so they understood it, but they would maintain that it was not good usage. The subject of something used the verb/preposition, 'tratarse de'. "De que' se trata el libro?" "Of what (subject) does the book treat?"

16ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Erwin_Rommel 17 9 4 3 2 734

hm. you caught me there. I'm not sure but it makes sense I must admit

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[+] 3 hidden comments

vicki.kura 25 8

"Acerca de" is "about" as in "the book is about a cat" and "sobre" is "on top of" as in "the cat is on top of the book".

17ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kasshiiee 8 6 2

"Sobre" can also be used to say "about". For example, "El examen es sobre Shakespeare" means "The exam is about Shakespeare"

51ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RichWeber 9

It's a different kind of "about." When you are using it in regards to the subject of a book, or a story "acerca de" is used to mean "about," or "concerning the" (more exact). When talking about an exam sobre means "covers" or "goes over." Which is what the word means. The exam goes over Shakespeare would be a more exact English translation, when using sobre. Not all translators are created equal, and they don't always translate word for word. Sometimes it translates the concept as a whole which is not always great if you are trying to learn the language. That's why there is an "improve this translation." feature.

23ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

beantorrent 13

Both a test and a book being about a subject use the same definition of the word "about". Also, "sobre" is applied to books. Real world example "Un Libro Ilustrado Sobre Martin Luther King, Hijo / An Illustrated Book about Martin Luther King, Jr."

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

brojohnsmith 9

And everyone say english is difficult because of multi meanings of words.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

vicki.kura 25 8

Thank you for the heads up. When you type "The exam is about Shakespeare" in a translator it does come up with "sobre". Guess I'll have to try Spanish Dictionary later since it won't come up now.

Someone should report this to duolingo.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

novantiqua 9 7

I think that "sobre" in this sense is equivalent to "cover" in English. So: "The test covers Shakespeare"

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

stevenpboyer 12 2

or the test is "on Shakespeare" would make more sense

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rafa_mezes 7 6 5 2

I also want to understand this

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kasshiiee 8 6 2

I'm not quite sure. I think they mean the same thing and are interchangeable.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gladius_Austin 11

Why ¿qué acerca del libro is wrong?

26ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

johnowens22 11 6 2

First let's understand the root of "acerca". Cerco/cerca means "close to or near something". In some countries, a fence is called a "cerco" because it draws the boundary between what is near from that which is outside or far. "A" means to approach, to go towards. So, acerca literally means either a) close to; or b) to go toward or get closer to something. The word "about" in English means to be "nearby". Here are some examples: i) "He is up and about" implies he is not traveling around the world but is relatively close compared to far away places. ii) Or, "in a round about way" means you got somewhere, but you didn't go straight. You traveled paths close to, but not on the shortest route. iii) We use it in time as well when we say it is "about 5pm", meaning it is near, but probably not exactly, 5pm. Your sentence says literally, "What close to (or about) the book?" Notice, you have no verb. The correct way to state it in English is either: 1) "What is the book about?" or 2) "About what (topic) is the book", or 3) "Tell me something close to the text, but not every single word in the book. That would take too long". (notice all of these have a verb) The second is the correct way to phrase the question in Spanish. "¿Acerca de qué es el libro?", literally means, " 'close to' what is (the meaning or content of) the book?", or more loosely "give me an account that is "close" to the story-line or subject matter of the book." Another way you could say it is, "¿De qué trata el libro?" which would literally mean, "of what or about what (subject) does the book treat (meaning of what subject is it a treatise). Notice treat and treatise are from the same root as the Spanish verb "tratar".

284ReplyGive Lingot27•3 years ago

jdorlon 17 3

Thanks for the lengthy discussion. That will help me remember both acerca and tratar.

14ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Roger_Burke 24 5

Tratar not tartar

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

McGhee34 18

So, I put "que es el libro acerca de". Why can't I put acerca de at the end? When I put it in google translate it reads "what is the book about". Am I incorrect or is that sentence structure acceptable?

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mr_Roboto96 20 19 19 7

That is just incorrect sentence structure. I think a much more common translation (at least among Mexican and Mexican-American spanish speakers) would be, "¿De qué es el libro?" Literally, "Of what is the book?" But that's beside the point. Whenever you ask a question in spanish, the root of your question (quién, qué, cuándo, dónde, por qué, and cuánto) should be at or very near the beginning of the sentence.

20ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jestings 13

Well, in "que es..." que is at the beginning of the sentence. Why is it wrong? Wouldn't that be a more direct translation? I'm sorry, I just don't understand spanish sentence structure very well, and It always helps me to understand WHY.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johnowens22 11 6 2

In your example, you have separated the prepositional phrase, and put half at the beginning and half at the end. You must keep the "acerca de" preposition and the object of that preposition "que" together. In English we started originally by doing this too, but have strayed. If you think back, you can probably remember your English teacher telling you the correct English formation is never to put the preposition at the end: we should say "About what is the book?" not, "What is the book about?" We should say, "To where is she headed?", not "Where is she headed to?" Our deviance in English is making many have a harder time in Spanish where this "laziness" is not (yet) tolerated.

47Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jestings 13

Ah, thank you very much, john. That makes sense. I never really thought of it that way.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Drumknott 17 12 8 7 5 4

Google translate doesn't really know grammar, it just translates individual words, so putting in a phrase or sentence will often result in something which makes no sense.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kristalzir 10

This is the best answer, gracias

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

KierenTinn 9

Great answer

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jafaroule 10

you'r just about genius!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mprdo 23 21 14 8 8 7 7 4 3 3 624

"De que' trata el libro" is correct in conveying inquiry of subject matter there within. 5Jul15

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lindzieh1 8 7 5 4

I see it now. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Bellyzumba1955 17

thankyou you are very knowledgeable

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrancoRae 9

Thank you for the great explanation

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

n.shomik 14 5

Thanks. It clears up things. Should "qué es acerca de el libro" be correct?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nickos111 11 11 11 5

"de el" = "del". Is what i learned.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

a.abbasi 10 6 3

Helpful explanation

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Debbie270885 18

Could you just come to my house and help with my spanish ? Lol :)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Maitlin 18 2

I wrote: "¿El libro es acerca de qué?" Could this be correct as well? The direct English translation would be slightly clunky (The book is about what?), but it still seems like it should work technically in Spanish, if not as naturally.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

joris.ev 22 13 7

I also wrote this, and it says that it is wrong. Would be nice to get some clarification here...

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lunabeams 12

I wonder if we'll ever know the answer to this...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TylrrDean 8 5 3 2

Same experience here...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

dclukens 14

I thought that word order wasn't as important in Spanish as in English. And yet, when I wrote: 'Qué es el libro acerca de?' it was not accepted. I used Google Translate and it translated to the same response, 'what is the book about?', so I am a bit confused.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Roger_Burke 24 5

I am not certain, but I think Google translate is programed to get you some usable translation even if the input is chopped up into poor or at least less frequently used Spanish. Duolingo, on the other hand is programmed to teach a polite middle to upper class Spanish. Word order is often the reverse order to what we expect in English, but it is not arbitrary.

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Talulah 9 3

Try reverso.net instead. Over the years, I've learned that google translate is a bit... "special" :D

In general though, I use google translate, reverso, and spanishdict. The latter two offer a more in depth explanation as opposed to just an answer.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

itsybitsyemu 11

Thanks for the resource!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talulah 9 3

De nada, buena suerte :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

yogibear42 10 10

De que va el libro is what you are given if you get this question wrong yet here it gives something totally different as the answer why?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tkpastro 24 8 2 2 31

I got that response too. I was reading all these answers, but didn't understand the reference to "arceca de."

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EnderCanEr 8 8 4 2 2

there are seriously good comments below, but here is my way to get it depends on johnowens22: (a cerca de que?) = (to near to what?) and then add this 'es el libro = the book but you know i have to use it at the begining of the sentence but this is spanish so...'

stupid but helps me to memorize.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Bellyzumba1955 17

no its not stupid EnderCanEr whatever works.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KANABLE 12 3 2

I got it wrong with "Que acerca del libro" but the correct answer that came up in the red bubble was "De que va el libro". Now the answer at the top of this thread i can understand, but cann someone please explane how "Of what goes the book" makes since?? I completely understand that not every statment or frase is a literal translation but we have not gone over the breakdown of this frase and it has left me with questions....

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

miramar2013 12 6 3

why do we use 'va' (to go) here?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jyous 16 10

I saw this given as the correct solution also. I don't understand it either. ¿De qué va el libro?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Roger_Burke 24 5

?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hello_world_hola 13 11 7 4 4 175
[deleted]

-1Give Lingot•3 years ago

RiggerBear 12 6

The correct solution given is: ¿De qué va el libro?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

skeez1960 22 4 2

DL also accepts "de que es el libro"

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bawallish 14 12 11 8 114

It let me use "¿De qué trata el libro?" I'm not even sure where I picked up the "tratar de" construction. I don't think it was in school. It just felt like the most natural way to translate this sentence.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

khaakenajaf 15

duolingo suggests "¿De qué va el libro?" but it does not make any sense to me. and this question is difficult.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ChumaUmenze 6 4

I answered "¿Cuál es el libro sobre?" Duolingo says it's wrong.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vicki.kura 25 8

Duolingo uses "sobre" for "on top of". "Acerca de" is used for "about".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vashii 8 6

De qué va el libro? Thats the answer i got! Explain me por favor,gracias

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HenriCameron 13 7 3

I find it an easy trick to remember word order if you speak it in english out loud or in your head the way it would translate in english. For example: it would translate to "About of what is the book". You'll remember this easier and be able to translate it to spanish. I notice new english speakers sometimes talk like this. Lingots if this helped you.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vicki.kura 25 8

I feel the same way Henri.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ChelseaZahara 12 3

Why can't I say, "Qué es el libro acerca?"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Roger_Burke 24 5

Think of "acera" and "acerca de" as two separate words. "Acerca" has to do with physical proximity and "acerca de" has to do with the nature, make up, or subject of something.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talulah 9 3

I had a similar problem, I answered with "Qué es el libro acerca de" and of course got it wrong. I later learned that in Spanish, a sentence should never end in a preposition, which is what acerca de is.

Some people also argue that a sentence should never end in a preposition in English as well, but I don't see anything wrong with "What is the book about?"

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

radek_1985 18 13 10

"Some people also argue that a sentence should never end in a preposition in English as well" Don't trust them. ;)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

itsybitsyemu 11

"Ending a sentence in a preposition is something up with which i can not put." Can never remember who said this, maybe mark twain? But it always makes me laugh.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

novantiqua 9 7

Even that old curmudgeon Fowler called this a "cherished superstition". It seems to come from Dryden bragging about how he was so much better than Chaucer and Shakespeare because he never did this (even though he did it a lot)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CyanJoke 10

Maybe it was also because "sobre" means about, but not "sobre de", which is used in one of the suggestions. This means that the correct answer would be :¿Sobre qué es el libro?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Cade_Manuel 11

Why does "Acerca de" come at the beginning of the sentence ?????

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

whiteyschwartz 24 8

the correct solution seems to literally read "of what goes the book?" Is that how I should understand it?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Roger_Burke 24 5

"Acerca de" = About "Que"= what "es el libro"= is the book.

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cyani01 11 8

Thanks Roger. It's clearer to me now!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bellyzumba1955 17

thankyou very helpful

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SuzieIndia 13

???

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dunks94 17

Can i say "Qué es acerca del libro?" ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

micalbrn 18 6 6 4 3 3 2

I feel like you could. I put the same thing.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pmuenzaniso 14 6

why start with acerca de rather tha que

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Bellyzumba1955 17

Thankyou

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mabelblue 14 6

I wrote "Cuál es el libro sobre" Why is this wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SRP87 1

Cuál is 'which'

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Soxx54 14

I also placed the words in a different order than this? Why was it not accepted. It was a proper way to use the sentence.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LEERICHA 11 6

So I used al here instead of el... Why wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Endless_forms 8 6 5

When does 'Acerca de' have to go in front of the sentence?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Shalsholet 15 8 7

When and for which phrases/words do you use "DE (qué)" as opposed to just "(qué)"? Why can't the translation here be "¿Acerca qué es el libro?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chrisgor14 7

Why is qué es el libro acerca wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Shalsholet 15 8 7

because you are translating it literally, and acerca, if I understand correctly, generally should be followed by a preposition.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fla33able1 10 6

¿De qué va el libro? Returned as translation for What is the book about? I'm confused.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MatthewEsl 7

Doh! I literally translated "what is the book about" instead of translating properly to "about what is the book".

Oops.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

imtonie 10 9

how about "que es el libro acerca de?" how do you know when to rearrange the sentences?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talulah 9 3

Generally, you want the most important bit in the front. In this case, we want to know ABOUT the book more than anything else, so "Acerca de" comes first, literally "About what is the book?" There is another example of this in the sentence "Los perros de la niñas.". Literally, "The dogs of the girls." Since "The dogs" are what we are talking about, and not "the girls", we put Los perros first. Of course, saying "The dogs of the girls" or "About what is the book?" in English is sloppy, so we translate them into proper English form. "What is the book about?" and "The girls' dogs."

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

imtonie 10 9

how about "que es el libro acerca de?" how do you know when to rearrange the sentences?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SRP87 1

The word de needs something after it. If you finished the sentence you'd get 'What is the book about ____?' i.e. ¿Que es el libro acerca del caballos?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

ArieSafari 19 7

Why is "¿Qué es acerca del libro?" marked wrong? I wrote that and Duo said it's incorrect.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talulah 9 3

Generally, you want the most important bit in the front. In this case, we want to know ABOUT the book more than anything else, so "Acerca de" comes first, literally "About what is the book?" There is another example of this in the sentence "Los perros de las niñas.". Literally, "The dogs of the girls." Since "The dogs" are what we are talking about, and not "the girls", we put Los perros first. Of course, saying "The dogs of the girls" or "About what is the book?" in English is sloppy, so we translate them into proper English form. "What is the book about?" and "The girls' dogs."

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chrissie1973 19 10 5 41

It has nothing to do with "the most important part"! It is because "about what " is a phrase that belongs together. It used to be incorrect to separate them in English, but as everyone has so adamantly pointed out, it has become acceptable to separate them. But it doesn't change the fact that "what" is an object of "about" and it makes sense to keep them together as a phrase. You wouldn't say "Spanish the book is about." You'd say "The book is about Spanish." In this case, I would think "Spanish" is the most important part of the sentence, but it is last. In English for some reason with questions, we have come to accept putting the preposition last. But maybe if you can think of what the answer would be, the phrasing might make more sense to you. "She gave the book TO

JOHN." Therefore, "TO WHOM did she give the book?" "That present is for my son." Therefore, "For whom is that present?"

"The girls' dogs" isn't even a sentence! The reason "dogs" comes first is because Spanish doesn't use an apostrophe to show possession. Instead, they use "de."

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ArieSafari 19 7

I understand now. Thank you so much for an amazing explanation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johnowens22 11 6 2

I'll respond to your question with another question to illustrate: Your question "¿Qué es acerca del libro?" would literally be translated into English as "What is about the book?" If you speak English well, you would know that that is incorrect grammar. The reason why it is wrong in Spanish is the same as why it is wrong in English. It is incorrect because we don't speak that way - objects of the prepositional phrases must go in a particular order, or else the preposition no longer points to the correct word (object). In Spanish prepositional phrases that point to an object are also listed in a particular order. Acerca de points to the theme or contents of the book. Since this is a question querying the subject matter of the book (it is the unknown variable) we must ask "Acerca de qué". The way you posed the question literally means "what is near to or similar to the book?" That question would be used if you wanted to ask what other things would be like unto the book - because you put the "libro" as the object to which the "acerca de" points. Order matters. You must always remember to put prepositional objects into the prepositional phrase, not somewhere else in the sentence. A couple similar mistakes would be the following sentences in English: Correct: About what subject matter is the book? On what subject is the book a treatise? Incorrect: About what book is the subject matter. On what book is the subject a treatise? You see, the incorrect sentences ask an entirely different question and are not equivalent to the correct ones.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ArieSafari 19 7

Thank you. This explanation is wonderful! I shall try to avoid such errors in the future.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

brain_blood 15 2

My answer was "acerca de cual es de libro" why is cual wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

Because "cual" means which, not what.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DudekRachael 22 8 7 6

Why was my answer, "¿cuál es el libro?" not accepted. Is the grammar incorrect? just wondering, Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hello_world_hola 13 11 7 4 4 175
[deleted]

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

DudekRachael 22 8 7 6
Oh, thank you, that makes sense why it wasn't accepted then. ;-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HoosierJim 11
Could one correctly use "cuál" to translate it as "Acerca de cuál es el libro?" I ask because we have been learning sentences like: "Cuál es tu pregunta?" Thank you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

trudikate 10 9
I put: él libro es acerca de qué. Why is that wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SRP87 1
él means he

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

TimeTurner13 13 4 2
Would someone please explain this whole question to me??? Please??? Thanks you guys.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DudoLinger 12 4 2
To me, this says "about of what is the book?" Also, the part where it says "Stop the clutter!" seems rude lol

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hello_world_hola 13 11 7 4 4 175
That's what it says if you translate each word individually. But that's not what you should be doing. At least on Duolingo, if the sentence doesn't make sense or has grammar mistakes in the language you translated to, then you didn't translate it correctly.

As for clutter, there are over 100 comments on this sentence. When someone comes in here, the almost certainly aren't going to read all the comments to find the answer to their question. Which means they either leave without getting an answer (which might very well be buried somewhere in here) or they post a new comment, making it even harder for every one after them. There is a lot of good info in the comments, but it becomes near useless if people are discouraged from looking for it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talulah 9 3

I wish more people understood that (the clutter) I've lost count of how many times I've answered the same exact question on the same sentences over and over again.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DudoLinger 12 4 2

I understand that you should translate statements as a whole, I just thought I'd add to the clutter. ;)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mickey5131 10

At what times do you put the subject at the end?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chrisjaimes 9

The reason why you should not use "acerca" at the end of the sentence, its because unlike English in Spanish YOU CAN'T end a sentence with a preposition

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kate.redhead13 8

no comprendo para las palabras en the sentence

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

brody._ 7

wow spanish is hard but know I understand it thanks duolingo

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tpolen0620 9 6 2

I thought it always went question word (qué), verb (none), subject (el libro), then the extra (acerca de)...?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gendarmes 16 15 10 7

I wrote "de qué es el libro" and it said it was correct. Is it really?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

I lived in Peru and learned to speak Castellano there (No Peruvian will call their language espanol). De que se trata ___ is how you asked what something was about. "acerca de que___" was viewed as clumsy, textbook language. Why doesn't Duolingo recognize real, street Spanish?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jameskg6hs 7

Why is "Acerca" at the beginning of the sentence and not the end?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

A.Shannon.B 9

Am I the only one confused by the word order? The only thing that helps me to remember what this means is to think of it out of order. "About what is the book?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

It would be more helpful to not think of Spanish word order as wrong. I agree that literal English translations in foreign language word order are a helpful way to learn a new language

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Anna_Daisy 10 5

This translates to: About what is the book? Why is it worded so funny?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

So, you think that only English word order is "normal" and everything else is "funny"? I suggest that if you want to learn a language besides English, you need to get rid of your English bias with regards to word order, what should and shouldn't be conjugated, how prepositions are used etc. English is no more normal or funny than any other language.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hravenlandeye 6 2

Can anyone help explain why you say "about of what is the book?" This is where Spanish gets really difficult for me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

Your language experience will get much more pleasant if you stop asking why. There is no why. Spanish does it that way. Why does English do it differently? Why do we chop a tree down but cut wood up? Your brain got conditioned in early childhood to think of English word order as "normal" and everything else as "weird". The fact is it is all weird and there aren't any very good reasons for doing it one way or another. All languages on the planet have subject-verb-object and they all vary the order in which they put the information.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

godsgirl500 11

I haven't learned this yet, why is it asking me???

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

fabio_ferrari0 9 8 3 2
El libro trata de qué

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

In Peru it would be "de que se trata el libro". "To be about" is a reflexive verb. Your word order above isn't wrong, but it isn't common either and it needs the reflexive article before the verb. "El libro se trata se que"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElliotKemp 8

i am getting incredibly confused in how to order this sentence. :S

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CazCabron 21 7

Hola, can someone explain why 'Acerca de' comes at the start of the sentence? Still muy new to the rules of Spanish, GRACIAS xxx

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

When you ask the question "why", you are getting in the way of your ability to learn the language unless "why" is a shortcut for "what is the general principle or usage patterns this falls under?" How would you answer the counter-question, "Why doesn't English say, 'About what is the book?'" Well, English does, but "What is the book about?" is much more common and the other way sounds kind of stilted and funny. By the same token, you can say, "El libro es acerca de qu'e?" and it is perfectly intelligible Spanish, but it sounds kind of funny. Frankly, I think the whole sentence is bad Spanish. "acerca de" means "near to" Where I learned Spanish (Peru), no one would ever have spoken that way. "De que se trata el libro." (Of what subject does the book treat) was the way I learned to say this.

It is important to realize at the beginning of your language learning that languages do not have rules in the way chess has rules. Grammarians and college professors make up rules to describe how people speak. If people actually spoke by following rules, we would all sound like your smart phone or your GPS voice - funny grammar and weird pronunciation. It is far more productive to expose yourself as much as possible to the sounds and conventions of the language and stop asking 'why?' I speak four languages and the process of learning got much more pleasant and faster when I stopped asking why. Don't be afraid to make mistakes. Find a local Spanish club and go speak bad Spanish and let people correct you. Always ask, "how could I say that better?" "Como puedo decirlo mejor?" This will be much more productive than trying to come up with a bunch of rules that have so many exceptions they aren't of any use.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

CazCabron 21 7

Hey, thanks man. I see where you're coming from it's just that Duolingo just tells you if you're right or wrong and doesn't explain it grammatically. I've since spoken to a Spanish friend and now understand that the preposition comes at the beginning of the sentence. Otherwise it makes no sense like in English. Cheers!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

micpatsul 11

aaaarrrrrrr! I get this wrong every time! Frustrating.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

Don't worry. Duolingo has messed this one up anyway. The correct answer in real Castellano is one of the "wrong" answers in Duolingo. "What is the book about" is "de que se trata el libro", literally, "of what does the book treat?"

People don't talk "acerca del" topics. They talk "sobre" topics. Duolingo is nice and cheap but they have quite a number of weird "Spanish" usages that I can't figure out who in the world talks like that and they have never answered my questions on weird usages. Still, what do you want for free?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AbbyPerrin 7 2

Why couldn't you say, "que es el sujeto del libro?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bdawson 22 3 2

when they translate Star Wars do they have Yoda speaking in English order?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kepsi 15

I am having trouble with sentence structure. I put 'acerca de' at the end. Is there a rule of thumb or something that I memorize from practice?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pierreblais 13

El libro es acerca de que? Why is this not correct i wonder?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jonathan.m897325 14

Cant you write "que es el libro acerca "?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

PheonixLearner 8

so what does acera mean

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Gwan53 12 10 6 6 5 54

Wouldn't this be: "about what is the book?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

SRP87 1

Would ¿El libro es acerca de que? also work?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Antonia927379 3

When do you say the sentence backwards?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Jeremyamrithlay 9

Why is acerca de used in the beginning of the sentence Pls help

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

queenqueli 10 6

"about what, is the book?" spanish is always constructing sentences like this

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

stcmrb9 14 66

What is the rule about the order of words in a Spanush sentence compared to an English sentence. I know the example gives us a clue with the capital letter as to the start of the sentence but i was stumped for the rest.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Kenadie7 13 4

I think the suggested solutions to the questions sometimes depend on what type of device your using. As in an apple or android product.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

zobozobo876 6 2

This is confusing first im doing yo come el pan and now its expecting me to know what this means?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

iamsubha 12 4 2

Duolingo wants us to solve the unthinkable..!!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

radek_1985 18 13 10

Is it wrong? Que es el libro acerca de?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bangsilencedeath 7

I can't seem to acquire enough Lingots to flirt with my girlfriend. Dangit!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

2008manja 8

why is 'quien es el libro acerca?' wrong?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bkinformatica 11

"Quien es" means "who is"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tracymacy 14 13 8

Why is "Lo que es el libro acerca" wrong?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

Lo means it not of. Aside from that the word order is clumsy and not common. Castellano, like English usually wants prepositions to be followed by an object

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

1) Don't think in English and try to translate over. 2) Never try to figure out why something is wrong. I taught physics for years and the failing students always poured over their mistakes rather than learning to do the problems right and, guess what? They had studied their mistakes so much that they repeated them on the tests. Abandon your way of thinking and learn how to think about the grammar in a new way. Spending time analyzing mistakes is just wasting time that you could be spending learning to speak a new language productively. 3) When a usage you come up with is wrong, stop asking for rules. Languages don't have rules the way chess does. Languages have certain patterns of usage but they are never hard and fast rules. "Lo que es el libro acerca" is wrong because no native Spanish speaker would say it that way even if a literal, word for word, translation from English might come up with that. "acerca de que es el libro" is right because some native Spanish speakers (though I don't know where" would say it that way. Where I learned Spanish, it was "de que se trata el libro" and the "acerca de..." construction was viewed as stilted and funny sounding.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nussa000 8

i didnt get it :(

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

catalinamuchnick 12

UNICORN!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

espanol321321 6
DEEZ NUTS

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

chrissie1973 19 10 5 41

"What is the book about?" is actually INCORRECT in ENGLISH, so that is why its word-for-word translation ending in "de" is also incorrect. I realize no one would say "About what is the book?" but still, why choose to use an incorrect sentence to teach another language when there are countless other sentences that could have been chosen? In my opinion, one of the perks of learning a foreign language should be to better understand correct usage of the first language.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

novantiqua 9 7

"What is the book about?" is NOT incorrect in English. It never has been. Even the hoary old keeper of "good standard English", Fowler pronounced it "a cherished superstition". It comes out of Dryden trying to prove how much better a poet he was compared to the likes of Chaucer and Shakespeare. And even he ended sentences in prepositions. It's time to put this superstition to rest.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chrissie1973 19 10 5 41

I never claimed that it is always incorrect to end a sentence with a preposition in English. There are certainly times when that is acceptable.

However, one cannot randomly decide how to use prepositions without understanding the function of the preposition in the sentence.

In this case, "what" is the OBJECT of "about." Together they are a prepositional phrase, and as such, ideally shouldn't be separated.

It is NOT correct to say "Who was it written by?" You would never say, "It was written by she." You would say, "It is written by HER." That is because "her" and "whom" are in the objective case. They are OBJECTS of the preposition. These are correct phrases: "About him" "For them" "With her" "Of whom"

NOT: "About he," "For they," "With she," or "of who."

In English, the word "what" doesn't change according to case, but in this sentence you still must understand that "what" is the OBJECT of "about." Perhaps it has become acceptable to separate them in English, but in Spanish, at least in this case, it is NOT acceptable, and it is for the reason that the preposition is being kept in front of its object.

I found a site that talks pretty clearly about the objective case: http://www.grammar-monster.com/glossary/objective_case.htm

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

novantiqua 9 7

Your mixing two slightly different issues. Yes, "Who" is the object of the preposition. But in claiming case change for pronouns you should also expect a case change in indefinite pronouns, so, by "strict" grammar rules, it should be "whom". I don't know anyone who does that.

The second point seems to be about the difference between prepositions connected to phrasal verbs and prepositions associated with objects of prepositions. The latter is certainly permissible and needed sometimes. Smelling something foul, I would never say, "In what did I step?". You might respond to an answer, "I stepped in what?" which would emphasize the object.

Grammar rules are not set in stone tablets, but codifications of agreed usage. The sentence, "Where you at?" would be ungrammatical since the verb is missing and the preposition is superfluous, but that's not to say that in some period in the future it could become proper grammar.

Even someone as peevish as H.W.Fowler in his Modern_English_Usage, called ending a sentence with a preposition [from a prepositional phrase and not as part of a phrasal verb], "a cherished superstition". He traces it back to Dryden. The idea was that he wanted fidelity to Latin and so attempted to write English as if it were Latin. But even he was guilty of it as quoted by Fowler: "Any more wasted words...I never heard of". He goes on to produce quotes from Ruskin, Chaucer, Shakespeare, Jonson, Milton, Pepys, Congreve, Burke, Lamb, etc, and all of them are fit the preposition with object model, rather than the phrasal verb model.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chrissie1973 19 10 5 41

I definitely agree with you that the rules can change! I just think if folks understood the reasons for the rules in the first place, instead of being so stuck on the fact that it is "okay to end a sentence with a preposition", they would better understand why "acerca de" belongs at the beginning of the sentence. (Seriously, people are so concerned with making sure everyone knows that it is okay to end a sentence with a preposition--and that you are wrong if you try to explain otherwise--that they are completely missing the point! They are worse with their protection of ending a sentence with a preposition than Dryden was with not ending a sentence that way!) Arguing that it's not wrong to end the English sentence with "about" does nothing to understand why it is wrong to end that same sentence with "acerca de" in Spanish. Figuring out why it was originally constructed that way in English, even if it HAS changed, DOES explain why it's still done that way in Spanish.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talulah 9 3

There's nothing wrong with ending a sentence with a preposition. Pull your head out of your overpriced English book and use some common sense instead.

"What is the book about? "Who was it written by?" "I simply couldn't put it down." "The last reader left a bookmark inside." "Somehow, the last 3 pages were completely absent." "They had been missing all along." "I wonder what I'll read next." "I think I should start reading outside."

All perfectly correct sentences, all of which end in prepositions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chrissie1973 19 10 5 41

I never claimed that it is always incorrect to end a sentence with a preposition in English. There are certainly times when that is acceptable.

However, one cannot randomly decide how to use prepositions without understanding the function of the preposition in the sentence.

In this case, "what" is the OBJECT of "about." Together they are a prepositional phrase, and as such, ideally shouldn't be separated.

It is NOT correct to say "Who was it written by?" You would never say, "It was written by she." You would say, "It is written by HER." That is because "her" and "whom" are in the objective case. They are OBJECTS of the preposition.

These are correct phrases: "About him"

"For them"

"With her"

"Of whom"

NOT: "About he," "For they," "With she," or "of who."

So at the very least, you need to say, "Whom was it written by?"

In English, the word "what" doesn't change according to case, but in this sentence you still must understand that "what" is the OBJECT of "about." Perhaps it has become acceptable to separate them in English, but in Spanish, at least in this case, it is NOT acceptable, and it is for the reason that the preposition is being kept in front of its object.

I found a site that talks pretty clearly about the objective case: http://www.grammar-monster.com/glossary/objective_case.htm

I hope this helps to clarify. I admit that in English, perhaps it may be acceptable to separate the preposition and its object in this instance (But I would just avoid this structure and say, "What's the topic of the book?") And it still is a completely different case than "I cleaned up."

And so you know, in your sentence, "absent" is an adjective modifying "pages." And in your examples, "inside," "all along," "next," and "outside" all seem to be acting like adverbs, not prepositions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

novantiqua 9 7

I disagree with your assessment of the specific case. My rebuttal is simply: What are you talking about?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chrissie1973 19 10 5 41

LOL. Ha, very clever. But it doesn't change the fact that your "common sense" is not founded on grammatical rules. "Who was it written by?" is NOT correct, no matter where you put the preposition. And you don't seem to understand parts of speech if you think "absent" is a preposition in the sentence you gave as an example.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

radek_1985 18 13 10

"Who was it written by?" is perfectly correct.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

chrissie1973 19 10 5 41

Yes, DarthSean, but in this case we are learning a language, so understanding the rules that have been described help to understand WHY something is correct (or incorrect) in the new language. It may now be acceptable in English to end a sentence with a preposition, but obviously not in Spanish, so understanding WHY the original rule existed in English helps to communicate in the foreign language. I couldn't care less if folks end sentences in English with a preposition, but people on this list are confused as to why that doesn't translate to Spanish, so the only way to explain it is to explain the rules. Saying, "You're wrong, it's okay to end a sentence with a preposition." does NOTHING to help the people who want to understand why it's wrong to do that in Spanish. And I can't really think of a way to learn a language, if you aren't going to just be immersed, without describing the RULES of the language. Unless you just want to memorize every sentence that could possibly exist. I'd rather have someone explain how "-ar verbs" are conjugated and then be able to basically use ANY of those verbs as opposed to having to memorize every form of every verb that exists. The exceptions to the rules are hard enough, but at least the rules make it somewhat manageable.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

As long as the "rules" of a language are only describing WHAT and never WHY, then I concur. Language rules are descriptive, not prescriptive to use more formal language. A language learner who whines that "but X doesn't follow the rule you just gave me" is sabotaging their own ability to learn a language. Language just is and no language makes complete sense to an outsider trying to learn it. I complained all my way through grade school at how stupid English was and why didn't it follow its own rules. Pointless. Grammarians and university professors make up language rules to sort of describe how people in a language community speak. The rules are illusion. There are no rules. There is only usage.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

DarthSean 20 19 16 559

Languages don't have rules. Grammarians observe how people speak and then make rules up. In other words, language rules are descriptive, not prescriptive. Those who try to fling grammar rules in the face of changing common usage are generally fighting the inevitable change in language or are trying to impose the clues of their social class on everyone else

-1Give Lingot•1 year ago

212 "The contract negotiation was good."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1764285>

Translation: La negociación del contrato fue buena.

13 years ago

Leave a new comment

17 Comments

Sunnymeador 14 11 8 2

I tried "La negociación contractual fue buena" which was rejected. Is the adjective form not acceptable in Spanish? Input by a native speaker would be appreciated.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rmina1891 10 9 5 3

Yes it is correct. I believe is used in formal situations.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SonMauri 21 10 8 8 6 3

It should be accepted. I'm Chilean and both phrases are perfect synonyms for the daily use.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RAMOSRAUL 15

the adjective form is not really working. In Spanish, "del contrato" works as "company" of negociación, more than a modifier. It is not really an adjective.

http://es.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sintagma_preposicional may show you some light.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sunnymeador 14 11 8 2

I turned to Dr Google and got over 3000 hits for "negociación contractual", the first one being the title of a presentation: "20 Estrategias para una Negociación Contractual efectiva." Several other scholarly works with the contentious phrase followed. So it's clearly acceptable.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RAMOSRAUL 15

well, Dr Google is suffering from problems himself. English terminology is often translated in a bizarre way, even in scholar publications.

Perhaps I should have said that it is understandable, but not "good" Spanish, thus pointing out some grammar. I assumed you could be interested on how those clauses work, as they are a key component of Spanish and the exercise brought it up, perhaps with that intention.

Nevertheless, I issue again a warning. Many professional terms copied from English have been adopted and semi-translated. Often they become part of the jargon and, if it is part of your jargon, you have to go along. I assume this example was more of general Spanish :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jegerikkeivind 12

why is it buenA after DEL contratO? i dont understand..

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jellonz 21 14 10 2

"Buena" is describing "La negociación" not "El contrato."

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jegerikkeeivind 12

ah i see!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ethjhig 25 12 8 3 1

Fine point, but in English "contract negotiation" is not quite the same as "contractual negotiation"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

markbooth 18 14 5

Why is 'bien' not accepted in place of 'buena'?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Byron_Davies 15

Bien is an adverb ("well") when the situation requires an adjective ("good").

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

redeye011 25 10 20

That's an interesting one. "fue bien" = "went well" (in English some might say "went good," but that is poor grammar). But "fue buena" = "was good." Fue is 3rd person past tense for both 'ir' and 'ser.' Either could make sense, but the English sentence was presented as "was good," so the correct response was "fue buena." I got it wrong, by the way, which is why I came to the forum to sort it out!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jeanniepq 19 5

I put "el contrato de negociación fue Bueno" Is this completely wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jellonz 21 14 10 2

Not completely :) But any way you try and interpret your sentence you have shifted the contract to the subject, instead of the negotiation. In English we may say "the contract negotiation" but we mean "the negotiation of the contract" which in this case the Spanish structure matches perfectly.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jeanniepq 19 5

Thanks for this reply

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rogercchristie 21 20 16 8 676

What is the difference between "el contrato" and "la contrata". My dictionary says they both mean "contract" (<http://www.wordreference.com/es/en/translation.asp?spen=contrato> and <http://www.wordreference.com/es/en/translation.asp?spen=contrata>).

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

213 "They look the same."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/629779>

Translation: Ellos parecen iguales.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

37 Comments

adamsrow 22 6

Why "lo mismo" and not "el mismo"?

25ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kennynica 19 13 993

Lo mismo is a general term to say "the same thing". If you are specifying what you are talking about, you would use la misma or el mismo. For example:

No estamos hablando de la misma casa. We aren't talking about the same house. Leímos el mismo libro. We read the same book.

Si quieres tener éxito, haz lo mismo que yo. If you want to succeed, do the same as me. I found this at this web site: <http://forum.wordreference.com/showthread.php?t=84423>

33ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Zuquita 15

Thanks. That is helpful.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CalShephar 19 5 4 3

Perhaps because the gender is not specified. Ellos could be a group of just men or a group of men and women.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

homefire 23 14

I'd love an answer to this!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

lori10 21

How about "se ven" instead of "parecen"

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kstearman 13 3 3

"Se ven igual" or "Se ven iguales" are much used, idiomatic expressions, at least in Mexico. I entered the first of these and it was accepted.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

rspreng 24

Ver does not get used reflexively, I am pretty sure. ver = to look at, parecer = to appear

-7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Laruthell 23

Both "ver" and "verse" exist.

"ver" = "to see" (not "to look at". That's "mirar")

"Verse" means "to be seen" "to find oneself" or "to look" as in . . . well, how about "they look identical" = "se ven idénticos"

I think "se ven iguales" should be accepted. If it isn't, please report an error.

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fpetratis 11

tienen el mismo aspecto- why this translation is wrong?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fpetratis 11

se ven igual

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mattnapro 9

Why wouldnt "se parecen igual" work?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Laruthell 23

"Se parecen" = "they look like each other."

"igual" = "all the same" (interjection)

So your sentence sounds like, "They look like each other, all the same," although the word order "igual, se parecen" is probably more common.

If you want "igual" to be the thing they look, not an interjection, you have to make it plural, as homefire said, and remove the "se". You end up with "parecen iguales".

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

homefire 23 14

For one thing, it would need to be iguales because it's plural. Otherwise, that might be okay....not sure.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fivekhigh 20

how about 'tienen el mismo aspecto'

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ajabrams 25

No, but you can just say parecen lo mismo

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SimonCurry 12 7 3

Why is Ellas not marked as correct here?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Laruthell 23

It should be. Report an error.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

griffindance 25 25 12 334

Los parecen mismos..?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Laruthell 23

No, that doesn't work.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sra.GM 10

I entered "Me parecen los mismos." and it was marked wrong because of the "me." I guess it's because it didn't say "They look the same to me" - but isn't it implied? Wouldn't me parecen also work?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BassRobert 11

According to my text book it should be se parecen Parecerse = to look like

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Laruthell 23

Ellos se parecen. = They look like each other.

So when you change how they look from "like each other" to "the same," you replace the "se" with "iguales," otherwise the sentence doesn't make sense.

Ellos parecen iguales. = The look the same.

Ellos se parecen iguales. = They look like each other the same. What, huh??

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RobertMobb 9

Ellos parecen similares is another wrongly rejected answer

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Laruthell 23

That means, "They seem similar." I don't think that means quite the same thing as "They look the same."

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

amcb5 9

When talking about inanimate objects is "ellos/as" still appropriate? Example "what do you think of these plates?" - "They look the same"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Laruthell 23

Sure, "ellos/ellas" is appropriate for inanimate objects like plates, but you wouldn't normally repeat the pronoun in that context.

"¿Qué piensas de esos platos?" (What do you think of those dishes?)

"Me parecen iguales." (They look the same to me.) "Ellos me parecen iguales" sounds cumbersome to me, unless you are contrasting them with another set of plates.

A better example of "ellos" being used with inanimate objects might be simply,

"Oye, ¿ves esos platos? ¿Qué piensas de ellos?" (Hey, do you see those plates? What do you think of them?)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amcb5 9

Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

inckwise 22 17 3

Help! It doesn't say "They SEEM" it says "They LOOK" so why not "miran"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Laruthell 23

Mirar is to look at; it refers to a person viewing an object, so if you said, "ellos miran iguales" it means, (when these people look at things) they look at things the same way.

The English sentence, "they look the same" is not talking about people looking at anything; they are just similar in appearance. For that, the Spanish word is parecer.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

inckwise 22 17 3

Thanks for your explanation. So it's only in English that something can "look" the same. In Spanish it has to be to "seem" or "appear" the same? I find some Spanish verbs confusing when they have this add on..."AT" with mirar or i.e. "FOR" with buscar.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Laruthell 23

Yes, that's right. But don't forget that Spanish speakers learning English have a very difficult time grasping all our phrasal verbs. WHY is it look at, not look on, not look to, not look for, not look over, not look into? . . . or why not look by or look with or some other such thing?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Holly749522 23 42

I put "Ellos parecen los mismos". Duo did NOT mark it wrong, but since I don't see that answer anywhere, I'm wondering if it IS wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tetrasteeth 24 19 2

In English, the phrase "They look the same" can have two different meanings - It can mean multiple things/people look like each other, or it can mean that their appearance has not changed. Would both of these meanings translate into the same Spanish sentence as well?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Laruthell 23

Yes . . . "Ellos parecen iguales" could mean either, depending on the context, but I'm thinking that "They look the same as each other" would be the more commonly understood meaning. If you wanted to be clearer, you could say "Ellos parecen igual que antes." = "They look the same as before."

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tetrasteeth 24 19 2

Very useful information, thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

214 tout vs tous

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/132242>

truffleupagus 21 13 1049

I'm having trouble understanding when to use "tout" and when to use "tous". Both are masculine and the vocab page given no indication if one is for plural (although how you classify "all" as plural or singular seems pretty subjective to me). Is there a rule that I'm not picking up?

Give Lingot1

184 years ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

Arjofocolovi 21 14 10 5

"Tout" is used for uncountable objects such as bread, water, milk, time...etc

"Il a mangé tout le pain." = "He ate all the bread."

"Tous" is used for countable objects such as lemons, eggs, apples, pens...etc

"Prends tous tes stylos avec toi !" = "Take all your pens with you !"

88ReplyGive Lingot14•4 years ago

orangesunshine 14 5

To be clear, "tous" IS the plural form of the masculine "tout", just like "toutes" is the plural form of the feminine version "toute". There are no "touts". It also happens to be the case where the singular form "tout" refers to things that are uncountable. When deciding whether it is singular or plural, it is exactly like deciding the usage of "du" or "de la" instead of "des" when they all refer to "some". The same rules apply.

singular: tout le... (tout le temps, tout le pain, tout le riz) plural: tous les... (tous les stylos, tous les jours, tous les gens, tous les amis)

neutral/genderless: tout va bien

17ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

jflyd012 14 8 3

so it is 'bonjour a tous' right?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

Muzorewi1984 25 22 1373

The annoying thing I find is they exist as adjectives, adverbs and nouns and have quite a few meanings. Adjectives has been covered. From what I can make out as nouns:

tous = "all" (Elle est estimée de tous) [I think "all" has the sense "everyone" here]

tout = "everything" (Tout va bien)

As an adverb, "tout" = "very" (Il est tout heureux)

but I get the impression there's probably a few other definitions as well... I have endless problems with these words.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sofiesofie 15 13 9 9 5

I've been told that an easy way to know it is like this: if there is written for example "le" as in "tout le monde" it is with a t, because of the "le", but if there is written "les" for example - "Tous les autres" it is with an s.... This rule has made it really easy for me to understand :)

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Je.ne.sais.quoi 25 505

There's a lot of information here about tous/tout/toute & toutes.

<http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/tout.htm>

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

215 "The apple is red."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/286797/The-apple-is-red>

Translation: La pomme est rouge.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

336 Comments

language88791 2

I get confused with est and es

181ReplyGive Lingot3•3 years ago

witchcrvft 7

Es always goes with Tu.

153ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AlyaaTaha 6

Tu is the only word in which 'es' follows?

43ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

je suis, tu es, il est, nous sommes, vous êtes, ils sont.

334ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jazari2014 10 3
[deleted]

Give Lingot•2 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment
[+] 3 hidden comments
[+] 2 hidden comments

AabLundin 14 2
(Edited version)

It will be easier if you learn the verb form together with the subject person: "je suis"="I am" instead of each word separately: "je"="I" and "suis"="am". If you learn them together you know which one to use in which case, since "tu es"="you are" while "il/elle est"=he/it/she/it is. If you learn them word by word you will find yourself in the situation of wondering which one you are to use for "are" in each case: "es", "sommes", "êtes" or "sont".

The verb être (=to be) in present tense indicative:

Je suis=I am

Tu es=you are (singular informal you)

Il/elle/on est=he/it/she/it/one is

Nous sommes=we are

Vous êtes=you are (singular formal you or plural informal/formal you)

Ils/elles sont=they are

The first three cases are all for singular subjects and the last three are all for plural subjects. Vous is a special case; it is both singular and plural.

116ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

itaypoliti 12 3 2 1

Great explanation! But I still don't understand what is the difference between "Tu es" and "Vous êtes". aren't they mean the same - "You are"?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2
Sorry, I was unclear.

Tu is always in the singular meaning of you, and in French the more informal address.

Vous is both singular and more formal than tu, and plural and both informal and formal.

So, there are four kind of you in French: singular informal, singular formal, plural informal and plural formal. But only two forms: tu for singular informal and vous for the rest.

Tu es=you are (singular informal you)

Vous êtes=you are (singular formal you or plural informal/formal)

The context makes it clear when using the vous forms of address whether it is singular or plural.

31ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bantonlindgren 10 8 2

Yes but "tu" is singular and "vous" is plural, so "vous etes" refers at a group of people rather than just one individual.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

itaypoliti 12 3 2 1

So if "vous etes" refers to a group, why not saying "ils/elles sont"? How "vous etes" refers to a group if it's means "you are"? "you" is singular.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lhaveAsister 7

The usage of "you" in English took me awhile to get comfortable with. I've found the best way of think about "vous" is to compare it to the phrase "y'all" (as in 'you all'). In English, one might say "you are" or "y'all are". Additionally (to make this more confusing), "vous" is used when addressing someone formally even if it is one person: "monseur Président, vous êtes un bon homme!"

9Give Lingot•2 years ago

bantonlindgren 10 8 2

"ils/elles" means them, so even though it refers to a group of people it's not the same form.

"You" can be used both in singular and plural form, in the latter form one refers to a group of people that includes you.

4Give Lingot•2 years ago

itaypoliti 12 3 2 1

A group of people that includes me is "We". So you are telling me that "vous êtes" and "Nous sommes" are the same?

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

bantonlindgren 10 8 2

No I said "you", not "me". You in plural is a group that includes you, not a group that includes me.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

itaypoliti 12 3 2 1

Okay I got it now. Thank you very much :)

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

bantonlindgren 10 8 2
you're welcome :)

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

aaaronjohn 6 5
Because vous eyes addresses undefined group of people and ils is for boys and elles for girls. It's hard cause in English it's simplified. So you got YOU (GROUP OF PPL) ARE - VOUS, YOU (GROUP OF BOYS) ARE - ILS, YOU (GROUP OF GIRLS) ARE - ELLES

-1Give Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6
itay, you are (vous êtes, formal, is sing. You are, informal, plural. tu and vous mean YOU, so when you talk to many persons, vous, you speak to them directly. Vous sortez? You go out? If you say ils sortent, they go out, you're not talking to the persons who go out, but you're telling someone that they go out/ ils sortent. When you talk ABOUT someone, they're not vous, but ils.

-1Give Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6
banton- not exactly. Vous, can be both, sing. and plural. If I talk to an older person, or to the Prime Minister of my country, I won't say tu, but vous, sing (formal). For informal vous, it's plural : les enfants allez vous coucher /children go to bed.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FissleWine 4
Formality...I think

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

deeptaramki 3
But in etre conjugation u got to use a particular thing for a particular thing u cant say tu etes or vous es (all languages have a rule)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

shahkar.al 3 2
That was very helpful.thanks :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

greendoggirl12
Thanks, I will follow your advice and you! That is very helpful in my situation

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

greendoggirl12

Thanks, I am going to follow up on your advice. That is very important in my situation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JillCarlie 8 7

This was so helpful! Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AbraxunsIllusion 25 6 5 5 5 4

One of the disadvantages of learning Spanish and French, if you are.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SOisme 6 2

Je suis, Yo soy! Il est tre difficile!

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tgrand98 12 7 6

Oui

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

szabomihai0 9 4

est is for "il" "elle" and es is for "tu"

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Blattinum 4

The es always reminds me of spanish. lol But yeah, est confuses me. but i guess i get it now.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Taylor-Scott4 11 5 3 2

I'm trying to learn this after spanish so now e is feminine and it's Difficult at times

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AmnonPicker 5 3

Thanks, I understand

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

b.kober 7 6 5

Agreed. They just sprang "it" on us in all its forms without explaining it first.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NatyJqz92. 9 5
Me too

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JenniferOl242354 11 7 5
Yes, it is important. OMG

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

annavogne
Est means is and es i dont know

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Majka505 8 4
Po polsku ja tu z polski hello

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Maia-Amber 2
Me 2

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

daybreaker3 7
anytime you use "Tu" the "es" always follows. est is the rest of the time I found. es=am

-3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2
Not quite. The verb être=to be has, like every other French verb, six conjugations i present tense indicative depending on who am/are/is. English just have those three, and for other verbs just two conjugations, which makes the handling of French verbs tricky for those used to English.

I would like to advice you to always remember all verb forms together with its pronoun, otherwise will you end up with many French verb forms with the same English verb form translation and no idea when to use which form in French. So, Je suis=I am instead of je=I and suis=am.

Je suis=I am

Tu es=You are (singular informal you)

Il/elle/on est=he/it/she/it is

Nous sommes=we are

Vous êtes=you are (singular formal you or plural informal/formal you)

Ils/elles sont=they are (ils for all masculine or mixed gender they, elles for all feminine they)

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago
[+] 13 hidden comments

Nitigya 5
i didn't know that apple is feminine

25ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

frenchguitar 6
me too. I'm starting to wonder if the designation of feminine/masculine thing is mostly arbitrary with objects.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tinagazo 21 235
Most feminine nouns end with e like femme, fille and pomme, but there are a few exceptions so you will have to learn the exceptions. Fromage ends with e but it is masculine

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

siddhutsg
What does 'fromage' mean. I've heard 'omlette de fromage' in Dexter's Laboratory (I think)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CallMeAnja 13 10 8 6 5 4 3 3 2
It means "cheese," I think.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Watawkichaw 10 3 1
it is a bit silly that you cant use a universal "the" in many languages. there's something like 4-5 ways to say "the" in german. but, hey, that's why we're here.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NewtonWren 8 6 4 2
The sex of words really is arbitrary. As Twain put it, "In German, a young lady has no sex, while a turnip has. Think what overwrought reverence that shows for the turnip, and what callous disrespect for the girl". I highly recommend his essay "The Awful German Language". It's equal parts amusing and consoling as you realise that you basically need to memorise the entirety of cases and genders.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2
Yes, it is arbitrary. Exept for male/female persons - they are logical. That is grandmother, mother, aunt, daughter, granddaughter, woman, girl are all feminine and grandfather, father, uncle, son, grandson, man and boy are all masculine.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KarikJorge 5

I did know cuz my latin origined language, portuguese, use this kind of difereciation

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TheKingOfBarca 7

me too

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tomtom1212

Me too

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

janina.kahn 3

I find it difficult to remember the 'smaller' details - that you spell 'is' est and not et, for example.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

duofaithert 4 2

There are a lot of silent letters. S is the most common. Other examples include the fact that u is silent after q (question becomes que stion). It's easier when you have a french teacher actually speaking these words to you.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tinagazo 21 235

Get yourself a French cd and leave it playing continously. Even better download it on to your phone

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

moonious 12 9 5 2

So est is always pronounced as et? Then do we pronounce the t in est/et?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Et (and) is always pronounced eh.

Es (are) is pronounced eh, exept in front of a vowel sound (vowel or silent h) where it is pronounced ehs.

Est (is) is pronounced eh, exept in front of a vowel sound where it is pronounces eht. The s is never pronounced.

Est (east) is pronounced ehs (or est?, exept in front of a vowel sound ehere it is pronounces est?). The s is always pronounced.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lhavAsister 7

Yes. In general, the pronunciation changes when a "liaison" occurs. This is a common grammatical occurrence. It also makes French sound "French", I think. It is best to look this up online (and hear it being pronounced) as the audio portions here do not really emphasize the liaison in practice.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Yes, they are difficult in the beginning. But it really pays to learn them as early as possible. I mean to really learn them. Because they are numerous, these "smaller" details, and they bring meaning.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

Z3NZY 4

Are all fruit feminine or is it a select group?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sidneifc 25 11 10 9 6

usually words ending with the letter "a" in Latin languages are feminine. In Portuguese, for example, all words ending in "a" are feminine, but some words can end with the letter "e". In French there is a small change; on this site (<http://dictionary.reverso.net/english-french/apple>) you type the word in English and French translation appears and tells you if the word is masculine "m" or feminine "f".

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Flarestar 12

Some foods are counted as feminine, some are ranked masculine.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

No, not all fruit is feminine.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

z3nzy- There is no rule.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pauloladimeji 8

two levels in and still making the darn "le" and "un" mistake.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

It does need much practice in the beginning for most of us! But hang on, you will get it soon!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

QWEFFF146 3 2

What makes pomme feminine?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ladyisarma

that's my mistake too. I'm also still making the "une" and "le" mistake.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NichSucher 3

Most French nouns that end in an "e" are feminine.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

It just is. Convention, habit, rule since ages, latin heritage.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

qwefff, nothing, no rule

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nadeem.malik.3 2

can anyone tell me the list of masculine and feminine nouns(like names of fruit, vegetables , furniture, etc etc) as used in french... ?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

saschambaer 12 6 5 5 4

You want a list of every single noun? The only real way to learn them is by learning the words together with the articles. Instead of learning "apple = pomme", learn "the apple = la pomme". Much easier.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

almost all the nouns have singular and plural. You have to memorize them

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

There are no categories where its members are either all feminine or all masculine, just individual nouns to learn. So make sure you learn the gender for each noun at the same time as you learn the noun - and connect them in your memory.

Looking up new words in a dictionary is a good mean to learn its gender, plural and other useful features.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TJHarris12 2

These masculine and feminine words....no disrespect to the language, but who cares?! They need to unisex the language! Sheesh! I can't remember if an apple is a boy or a girl! LOL

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

saschambaer 12 6 5 5 4

No disrespect to the language

Sorry, but this IS disrespectful. Who cares? Every native speaker, for example. If you really want to learn a language then you need to accept its oddities and stop seing everything from an anglocentric point of view.

It's as if I were saying "Who cares that English differs between 'I go' and 'I'm going'. German only uses one present tense so English should get rid of one, it's stoopid LOL." See what I mean?

I'm assuming that the "12" in your username is your age, because you're definitely acting like a 12 year old.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Languages are constructed differently. English has a very easy rule for a and an. Except before y, which is a consonant (but is regarded as a vowel in this respect).

French has another system: genders. And it does not follow any fix rule. Some words just are feminine and some words just are masculine.

It is difficult to learn, and we will all make many mistakes, but that is like it is. And "they" do not have to change "their" language to make it easier to learn for others. Languages change when its users finds a need for it. Not when non-users find a need for it!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DoppleZephyr 2

English uses gender too

The moon is a woman

A lot of cars are women

Ships are women "her maiden voyage"

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tinagazo 21 235

Es always goes with tu and est goes with il or elle

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Yes! And est goes with on too.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nicole.pol 14 4 2

OMG, i speak portuguese, and it's so confused because i don't speak very well english! x_x

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZainaShahrouri 6

No one told me that Apple [AKA pomme] is feminine ????? How do i know if a word is feminine????
Help please..... 0____0 because im not good at french

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KateSimpson0 15 11 5

For each noun you learn you also have to learn it's gender. There's not really a simple trick to tell which is which.

Most people will forgive your mistakes.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Flamin_ 3

Est is Latin too, right?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

letitrock 2

[deleted]

Give Lingot•3 years ago

QWEFFF146 3 2

That doesn't help. But I figured it out.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Alex_R 8

then, can you explain me pretty please??

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

What is it you want an explanation of?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Smiley_Pete 5 2

Is the l' contraction not used for feminine words starting with a vowel?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MarcusGirao93 11 6

The l' contraction is used for feminine words. l'eau = the water.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

quack17 3

would an orange also be feminine? what about a vegetable? would that change anything? what about machines or other manmade objects? I am a little confused with this, please help.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Some nouns are feminine and some are masculine, but it is arbitrary which word is of either gender. That is, it is impossible to learn genders at a category level: fruits, vegetables, food, manmade objects and so on. There are just individual nouns to connect the correct gender to.

Adjectives have a feminine and a masculine form.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Veez 11

The orange will be l'orange male I think.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

KelLeigh-D 9 6

how can an object be feminine?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sidneifc 25 11 10 9 6

usually words ending with the letter "a" in Latin languages are feminine. In Portuguese, for example, all words ending in "a" are feminine, but some words can end with the letter "e". In French there is a small change; on this site (<http://dictionary.reverso.net/english-french/apple>) you type the word in English and French translation appears and tells you if the word is masculine "m" or feminine "f".

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

It is just a convention. All french nouns are either feminine och masculine, that is they have a grammatical gender.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kristen12387 2

Can someone give a serious answer as to what makes apple/pomme feminine? Is there any 'easier' way to tell which is which? I remember having trouble with this in grade school as well...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sidneifc 25 11 10 9 6

"Apple" comes from Latin "Malus domestica", and words that end with the letter "a" in, for example, Portuguese (which is a Latin language, as well as French) are female. As Malus domestica ends with the letter "a", it is possible that she is a feminine word for it.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

sidneifc- there are so many words finishing by A in French and are masculine, so I'm afraid that people will think that there's a rule and when they'll see A they will say LA. There's only one way to learn the gender and in every chapter, a native tells that, but people continue to ask the same question. LEARN THE NOUN WITH ITS GENDER, IT'S THE ONLY WAY TO AVOID MISTAKES. Here's a list of masculine nouns finishing en A : atoca, ataca, boa, caca, cinéma, coma, agenda and magma. There are so many more. Take the habit of learning a new noun with its article.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

brista543

[deleted]

Give Lingot•3 years ago

tinagazo 21 235

In French every object is either feminine or masculine. Apples are feminine

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pyragas 4 2

Yes. Either cat (boy) is chat and cat (girl) is chatte..

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rnzl 6

Is it okay to have a translation of "La rouge pomme" ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

No, it is not correct French. In French the normal position of an adjective is AFTER the noun, not before it as in English. But a few certain adjectives are placed before the noun, and some can be placed either before or after the noun depending on the wished meaning. Red is not such an adjective, it is a normal adjective in this sense.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

aasalundin- someone told you to stop beeing mr I know all or something like that. lol But I can tell as a native, maybe you don't know everything as she seems to think but as a native I can confirm that you know a lot in grammar rules. I'm impressed. I don't know if you're a native but congratulations, I think you know French grammar as well as me. It's a pity when someone seems to be angry when someone gives correct informations, instead she should be grateful to receive so much informations in a free lesson like Duo. That's what makes Duo a great place to learn but in complement, it needs people as you and I to complete the information when we are able to.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tinagazo 21 235

The red apple

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Abrar98 4

I'm confused why they used "est" not "es". I know that "es" is used with "tu" but what makes "pomme" "est" not "es"? So confused here -.-

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Est is used together with either il (he or it), or elle (she or it). And since pomme is feminine, it is regarded as elle: Elle est.

Or if you like to see it from English: An apple is an "it", and in French an "it" is either "il" or "elle" depending on its gender. And since pomme is feminine, "it" is translated to "elle" in this case.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

abrar- pomme is 3rd pers. sing, est. <http://conjugueur.reverso.net/conjugaison-francais-verbe-%C3%AAtre.html>

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eastdale 4

I'm having trouble with this one too. I can't figure out why some are some things are female and others are male.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

They just are. The best way to know which gender is attaced to a certain word is to look it up in a dictionary. And to learn the noun together with the correct choice of un and une.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

madameashley 6

Somebody help!!! le la how do you know?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CallMeAnja 13 10 8 6 5 4 3 3 2

Le is masculine, La is feminine. I am going to refer you up to sidneifc's comment closer to the top, which helped me understand it a little better.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bce1996

it is confusing that apple is feminine. Then again, the gender of most nouns is confusing!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LilCrittter_13 2

why wouldn't be Je pomme est rouge. Ahhh Mrs.Love help mee!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CallMeAnja 13 10 8 6 5 4 3 3 2

Je=I

Le=the (masculine)

La=the (feminine)...which is the correct answer

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

"Je pomme est rouge" means "I apple is red".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

missnicki 3

how do you make the r sound?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Far back in the throat.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KimberlyRo37 8 6

isn't it the = un/une and a/an = la/le?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

kimberly- no the= le, la and a =un, une

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

awsomesuperbunny 9

OMG I KEEP GETTING LE AND LA CONFUSED DDDDD :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

You will get hang of it, by time and practice. A lot of practice, but eventually you will make it!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

uMAw 3

A RED APPLE

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Une pomme rouge.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kadri43

i thought apple is masculine

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

It is not in French. Perhaps in some other language, but not in French!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rapprg23 2

When I hover over the word "The", it says that I can choose the words "Le/La" but when I chose "Le" it marked it wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

rapprg23- the in English means exactly le/ la, but in French each thing has a gender, masculine or feminine. the apple is feminine, so it's la pomme. le would be for le chien.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Yes, but you have to make the right choice. Le is for masculine nouns and la is for feminine nouns. So you always have to know which gender a noun has in order to be right.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Megha1427

je suis, tu es, il est, nous sommes, vous êtes, ils sont. What is this??

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

mehga - it's I am, you are, he is, we are, you are, they are

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CallMeAnja 13 10 8 6 5 4 3 3 2

The conjugations of être (meaning "to be")

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

callme- <http://conjugueur.reverso.net/conjugaison-francais-verbe-%C3%AAtre.html>

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

10756302 23 7 5

how will you know if its masculine or feminine?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

By learning the gender alongside each noun. Or look it up in a dictionary. N.f. means nom féminin (feminine noun) and n.m. means nom masculin (masculine noun).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

27eloise27

i get confused with the placement of words in the sentence

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

27 eloise- in French in a sentence, most of the time, it's the article or the pronoun, the noun, the verb and the adjective, in the same order. La fille est belle / the girl is pretty, same order as in French. So, la pomme est rouge is the same in English, the apple is red.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ryve4455 5

why does it matter if its la or le

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

ryve, because in French we have 2 genders, if you use the wrong one, it will sound very strange.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

whitney.mc1 11 5 2

How does one use le and la? It confuses me because i think of spanish

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

No confusion here, it's the same in Spanish, 2 genders, but sometimes in Spanish it's feminine while it's masculine in French. EX : portefeuille, masc. cartera fem.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sharma.muk 5

Confused between est and es

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Est is for il, elle and on (he, she, it and one - not an number). Es is for tu (you - singular informal).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jamie_Hill

How am supposed to know when to use feminine and masculine words ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

You have to learn the gender of every noun you learn. Une pomme instead of pomme.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pmongan 4

HOW ARE YOU SUPPOSED TO KNOW THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN MASCULIN AND FEMINEN

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

You have to learn it alongside of each noun. Une pomme instead of pomme. Une fille instead of fille. Un garçon instead of garçon.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 4 hidden comments

HeteroSapiens 8 5 4 4

For masculine and feminine, you can just remember which nouns seem feminine or are definitely feminine. For example, lip gloss would obviously be feminine, but apple, or "pomme", could be confused. "La pomme" would be correct instead of "Le pomme". In German, this is more confusing because "der" is masculine, "die" is feminine OR plural, and "das" is neuter, or undecided. The German word for "boy" is masculine, and the German word for "girl" is neuter, thus making absolutely no sense. Thank you if you have read this entire comment with almost nothing related to French in it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

chaos, you're right but but you should have chosen an other exemple, lip gloss is for females normally but in French it's a masculine word, brillant à lèvres.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pmongan 4

YOU ARE TOTALLY CORRECT AWESOME GUY THAT I HAVE NEVER MET BEFORE

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tyrielbr 5

How can I define when to use La or Le?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

La (the) and une (a, an, one) are for feminine words while le (the) and un (a, an, one) are for masculine words.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dongsheng 6

maybe i can make sense of it step by step 는 은

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

You will get used to it. It is hard in the beginning, but it will become easier to get this feature by time and practice.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

777Profluxury

the articles are sometimes confusing

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Un=a, an, one (masculine singular)

Une=a, an, one (feminine singular)

Des= (plural equivalent of un and une, hard to find any corresponding English article)

Le=the (masculine singular)

Le=the (feminine singular)

L'=the (masculine or feminine singular, always used when the following word starts with a vowel sound)

Les=the (masculine or feminine plural)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

walidraïne1 3
Why la pomme?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

La means the. And since pomme is feminine, you have to pick la - not le which is for masculine nouns, not l' since this construction is used only in front of vowel sounds and the p in pomme is not a vowel sound, and not les since pomme is singular and les is for plural.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

walidraïne1 3
Why la pomme?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SeoChoiJiyeon 2
What do you mean?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

The word pomme happens to be feminine in French, thus une and la are associated with it, not un and le.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pyragas 4 2
Je: suis Tu: es Il, elle, on: est Nous: sommes Vous: êtes Ils, elles: sont

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2
Almost right!

Je suis

Tu es

Il/elle/on est

Nous sommes

Vous êtes

Ils/elles sont

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

pyragas- <http://conjugueur.reverso.net/conjugaison-francais-verbe-%C3%AAtre.html>

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lilititili 5 3

We use est = is and es = are

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

And sommes=are, and êtes=are, and sont=are.

You have to learn the verb form together with its pronoun, otherwise you will have no clue as when to use which "are":

Je suis=I am

Tu es=you are (singular informal you)

Il/elle/on est=he/it/she/it/one is

Nous sommes=we are

Vous êtes=you are (singular formal you or plural informal/formal you)

Ils/elles sont=they are (ils for all masculine or mixed gender groups, elles for all feminine groups)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Abecedarian1 4

why la pomme and not le pomme?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Because apple happens to be feminine. It thus needs the feminine article la, not the masculine article le.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ImNotAbnormal 5

France is too confusing. I don't get this whole masculine/feminine thing, and now this. Help!?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

staywatchful 6

Why isn't it le pomme, instead of la pomme?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ValMcDonne 9

I am wondering the same exact thing!

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

NguyenHanhTran 10

"Le" goes with masculine nouns; "la" goes with feminines. "Pomme" is a feminine noun; so here it is "La pomme" and not "Le pomme".

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ValMcDonne 9

How do you tell if something is feminine or masculine

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

arturojesus1 14 4 2

de verdad que mi cerebro esta mareado con este frances tan dificil de pronunciar me confunde la pronunciacion de un e une y la de est y es bueno yo supongo que con el tiempo y practicando duro todos los dias llegare a pronunciarlo perfectamente vamos a ver solo el tiempo dira si podre hablar bien el frances a si desistire de aprenderlo my friends

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

codyman2 4

What the heck?? Why can't u say le?? Pomme is apple, how is a apple feminine

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IshitaSagg 2

Im confused between la and un

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tzenh_vl 6 5

Yo

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ssooohheeiii

French is very hard for me

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JenniferPi46183 3
Why is apple feminine?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

182865

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gork01 5 4
How to pronounce 'rouge'

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

thutguy 2
i got perfect

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

thutguy 2
i got perfect

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eliezerdej2 3
i thought an apple is masculine and it uses le

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PurpleStone1711 6 3
Wait so what is L'? When do i use it instead of la? Both of them are female...?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alexiabree 8
La is feminine and le is masculine. How are we supposed to know which one to use?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DVSkillz 7
Hey Duolingo, I love the app but I take two courses, French and Hindi, but I am only learning Hindi and the language changed to Hindi. How do I change that?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

North-Korea 3
darude-sandstorm

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

naimcherahimi 3

In one of the choices, why do they use 'La Orange' instead of 'L'orange' or are both accepted?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

naimcherahimi 3

In one of the choices, why do they use 'La Orange' instead of 'L'orange' or are both accepted?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cwolf510 7 3 2

I'm yvd.sw sssdd.nsys km cnn unwanted svec.os l km k.s km k s. Mw

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CynthiaCar732408 4

Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aaquib-hero-786

I am confused between un and une

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KittiesGalore 5 4

I am suprisingly good at French, or at leeast better than i thought but how do u pronounce rouge?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sydsmall03 3

It is weird how they have different words that mean the same thing for girls and boys it gets so confusing

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

brightstar0 5

What if the apple is green?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

8mkf

It's so perfect

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Heather-Ma 4

Right it tells me to do what it says on , y screen but when I do it correctlyen it a says I done it wrong and it changes the sentence on the Apple...Bit...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Shakil654923 2

Im confused! Dont know when to use 'La' and when 'Le'. Please help me

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IvieChacko 10 9 9 9 8 8 6 4

I love eating

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

brydiecuzz 2

Es AGAIN

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rainydays_ 6

Whats the difference between femimine and masculine

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AdityaPand178388 3

Why

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Patrick753501 7

Haven't studied french in 6 years, akways wanted to improve.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

DimpyThata 5

I get confused between unn and est

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

ValMcDonne 9

How do you know if something is feminine or masculine?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Peetulearnsitall 6 4

why in front of the sentence is "La" and not "Le"

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

EdenBeech 8 6

I got tripped up with the "la". In spanish, this word would be masculine if it were written like this.

They have not taught us about feminine or masculine yet, so it isn't really fair.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Claire943651 2

I'm always getting confused about the pronouns used for pomme, I guess I just need more practice <3

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

GhadaAyman4 4

Oui

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

DwightEste 5

How is pomme or apple feminine

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Evvy_Bear199 4 4

I have a question: Why is the apple's 'the' a girl/woman version of the? Like does that mean that the apple is a girl/woman? And with l'homme (the man), why can't you do l'garcon/ l'fille/ l'femme?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Evvy_Bear199 4 4

Whew! Good thing I'm not learning spanish at the same time but I'm learning german so sometimes I get really confused. I say: Je suis une frau

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

AnkushMudg 7 2

how do you guess if an object is masculine or feminine? This keeps throwing me off, an apple is feminine, but a book is masculine?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Ileana494000

Seriously people it is la pomme est rouge

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Veez 11

Pomme sounds like a man, pompous! So I learnt something new the apple is like me, a woman

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Viola0729 8

why?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2
Why what?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

awsomesuperbunny 9
OMG I KEEP GETTING LE AND LA CONFUSED DDDDD :(

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

queenb2b 6
This is hard. But i suppose it'll with college to be bilingual. Here's to thinking ahead in 8th grade!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

OwlIsLa 6
i typed in la but it said it was wrong. Then i would not let me report i have a problem and it is not because my computer is slow.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AabLundin 14 2
Report it later!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nicole.m.w1
So confusing

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2
What, more exact, is it you find confusing?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ILOVETHESWAG
i got the dankest

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cest_toujours 4
la pomme est rouge

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bortega8791 11 8 8 7 1
merci)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KwameBio

What will be the masculin for pomme

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Nouns have one gender (unless they denote a living being, then there is usually one masculine and one female version: either masculine or feminine. Apple is feminine: une pomme.

Adjectives have to accord to the gender of what it describes, as well as to the number of entities it describes. Each adjective thus have four forms: masculine singular, feminine singular, masculine plural and feminine plural.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

kwamebio- there's no masculine for pomme, as there isn't a feminine for un citron/ a lemon.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AmnonPicker 5 3

The apple is red

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AmnonPicker 5 3

I want to continue the course

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FaiqKhairol 2

confused with est an es

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

franklin96 8

Hello, can somebody explain why "pomme" is feminine? I thought apples are gender-neutral, unless I'm wrong.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlokSoni2 6

How come an apple is 'la'

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pie_taster 8

this can be very hard to remember

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JenniferDe999665 2

When do u know whether to use La or Une

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wave002 8 5

I hate feminine and masculine.. Is it "le pomme" or "la pomme"? I got "la" right, but i dont know if this is like google translator where they just take anything.. La or le o_O

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

wave002, forget about google, go in reverso.net their grammar is always perfect. As a native I assure you that this is a very good link, also for translations.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

npaigek02

le? la? Difference for items or not? need clarification :(

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DaniellaFranco56 2

It was pretty easy for me..... i love french!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

freddy.abraham 9 6

why not l'pomme? Apple is feminine or what?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Drey_ 4

I am confused about why apple is feminine while some words have a le instead of la.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NewtonWren 8 6 4 2

Le is masculine, La is feminine.

As for why things are masculine or feminine, there's no real answer to that particular question other than "that's how it is". In German, "Mann" (man) is masculine, "Frau" (woman) is feminine, "Mädchen" (girl) is neuter. Technically German nouns ending in "chen" are neutral so it kind of makes sense that way, but it's still ridiculous.

The easiest way of learning gender is to learn the gender with the word. So instead of learning "femme" and "pomme", learn "la femme" and "le homme". Think of words as being two parts and it will be easier.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6
newton- * l'homme.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alex_fan 9 9 5
Why is 'apple' a femeine word?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alex_fan 9 9 5
Why is 'apple' a femeine word?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alex_fan 9 9 5
Why is 'apple' a femeine word?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DreamtSound 17 6 4 2
I thought un is "is"

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MyaSmith
"The" translations always confuse me

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HemantGupt1 2
Rouge is like rough

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iriesya 2
Oooo im really confused

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ingrid_g16
I accidently pressed it :(

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Programmer01 10
Thanks

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

VaibhavSin11 6

I wrote rogue instead of rouge lol.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

avyllajun

How to differentiate if its feminine or masculine?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sv345 4

Its so confusing wen to use l'n wen to use le or la...

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Angel_Genuino 10 6 3

Ta sendo lindo tentar aprender francês dessa forma kkkkkk

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zahra_abz 2

what is the different between est and es?????

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sheilatoll 2

What does it mean when it states the word sounds feminine not masculine?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

marziyehtavakoli

Merci

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PerlaNegra20 11 8 7 6 2

What's the difference btw le and la

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sarahmache 2

I always get confused weather something is masculine or feminine. How do I tell the difference?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sarahmache 2

I absolutely love this app

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Akshaykk 3

Anyone help me learn french throu wats app plz Replyplz

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sophiechen526 8 4 3

Why is there a typo of my rough?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Daisy.r17 6

why is it la instead of le?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Megan_lynn12 3

I always get confused with the es and the est!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dogs-rock 5

I wrote red for rouge by accident. Lol

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OpalDogs 5

Why do you use est instead of es?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kiki1212 10 6

Est means is Es means are (you are=tu es)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

carrotcake78 7

i remember tu goes with es because of TUESday

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nobodylin

la pomme est rouge

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

anarchies 8 4

I always get confused with le and la

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tomtom1212

I love you to the people who followed me

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tomtom1212
Please follow me

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fibi1904 3
מבלבל מאוד. באמת נו

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rachelGZY 5
Where are you from?I am chinese.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CemGner
I confused about "la" "le"

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Deltapardis
Rouge is difficult to write!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

1a2n3n4a.ukr.net 3
П о ч е м у там la pomme,a ne l'pomme?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Reyzuelo 2
Typo due to autocorrect

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DariaNesbi
masculine and feminine got me

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FalconFawk
any tricks to remember the difference?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jasongouin 2
The apple is red

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RafaelAlen8 8

Its the second time that "rouge" shows to me

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Albertflamez 4

Please I think you should be teaching us from the basics especially the conjugation of the verbs.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LeMenton 5

I said pemme for some reason :(.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

siphosethu

I always forget a Apple is said as " le pomme"

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Taylor-Scott4 11 5 3 2

THIS IS SO HARD i regularly sPeak spanish and now e is feminine :-) but I wanna learn this so I'm determined

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BlairScots 21 6 4 4 3 3 2 1

Ugh! I thought German was hard! It only has three ways to write you! Du, Sie (formal), and sie (informal)!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

angelgang1 10

'la pomme est riche' such a rich apple. so much money belonging to apple.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ReinLourdes0 8 2

what's the difference when I'm using etre and est? little bit confused

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BrandonBoyce101 4

Sure! Être is the verb "to be". The conjugation es goes with Tu (meaning "you", used when talking TO a single person, informally)... Est is the conjugation that accompanies Il/Elle (he/she) which you use when talking ABOUT somebody. Boy or Girl, Masculine or Feminine object etc... So in this case The Apple is red. We know that Apple is feminine so it takes La over Le. So we have la pomme (talking ABOUT the Apple) est rouge!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ReinLourdes0 8 2
être

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

War_MiDgE 4
Ughhhh

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LoveRegiana2012
When ever i have to say what i hear i just hit give up with out even trying because it is so hard to hear what they are saying.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TabTabTab 5 5 4
I cant believe there is 290 comments! Add me friend someone

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dacy25 13
Ce ma

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dradoona 3
I always get confused with est and et in the sentence is there a way that could help me understand?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JackelynOr 9
Is anyone else having trouble with the gender of food?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MohammedSA720833 9
Guys you need to add audio for each and evey exercise

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

harshnanga
Helpful

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MadaSaiSan 3
Can u please explain me in clear

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

skate14702 5 5

These two are so confusing

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AprilWashi1 6

I dont understand how to determine a word is definite or not

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Raydoggy 3

the apple is red

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

freddy.abraham 9 6

i dont care if the apple is red or green!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

uMAw 3

nice

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hazerambce

La pomme

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

som3aa 3

Get used to English :)

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14 2

Get used to French :)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Deltapardis

Get used to persian :)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

callofdutyfan27 2

i hate french

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

216 – 243 of 912

[accessed March 13, 2017]

216 unable to pronounce the double r in Spanish

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/15673459>

davethewarrior 10

For the life of me I can not perform an alveolar trill, or the Spanish rr. I have tried and failed so many times until my throat was sore, and it's discouraging me from even continuing to study this language. Is there a linguistic substitute I can use that sounds similar? Does it matter if I just pronounce the rr as it is in English and ignore the proper pronunciation? I'm reading that countless people have this same problem so it should be acceptable to not execute this sound properly if they are incapable of it, but got everything else dead on.

Give Lingot5

59 months ago

Leave a new comment

20 Comments

brxken 11 4 6

i'm a native speaker and it's difficult to me too so please don't feel bad for it. i think that if you pronounce the "rr" like you normally do in english it will be ok too :-)

(i'm not very good in english, sorry)

3ReplyGive Lingot1•9 months ago

killerky721 3

you did pretty good don't worry

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

corvusabus 15 14 13 12 11 10 8 6 6 6 3 2 3

It's like a purring sound. Move the tip of your tongue the top of your mouth. The link below might help.

<http://www.spanishdict.com/blog/top-10-spanish-pronunciation-errors/>

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

parafrances 15 10 9

It's like a purring sound. !!!!!!!

corvusabus that's the best definition I've ever read about our "RR"!!!!!!

Thanks for the tip!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

jmartinezrei 21 21 13 11 9 9 8 7 7 6 5 2

First of all, it is an extremely common issue among non-native speakers, and even among many natives. No need to worry.

That said, if you really try (as some said, it's all about the tongue, not the throat) you'll finally achieve it, and become closer to sound like a real native. But don't try too hard, it's something that shouldn't bother you until you reach a high level in all the other subjects (grammar, listening, reading...)

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

davethewarrior 10

Believe me I tried. But yeah, perhaps I'm overreacting. I'll continue to practice the vocabulary and speech and worry about the double r later. I shouldn't shun a whole language because of one flaw. English has flaws too.

2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Isaiahjb563 14

This post lead me to like a hour of watching tutorials that I'll never get back lol.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

RichardCoc2 15 11

Everyone will understand your Spanish if you lack the trilled Rs.

Far, far, far more important is getting the pure vowels right, and eliminating the English tendency to make diphthongs and schwas out of them all. And that's generally a lot harder for most English speakers to do, because we have a lifetime of habits in the way we pronounce our vowels that must be unlearned. In English are so used to the idea that an unstressed vowel doesn't matter, we don't listen for the unstressed vowels, and we don't even notice when we're not pronouncing them right.

It's interesting that the American "R" sound is one of the hardest to pronounce, both for natives and non-natives. Every kindergarten class has a few kids who haven't gotten it right yet. And there are many from various languages who substitute a trilled "R", because they find it easier and more natural. They are easy to understand, even though their speech doesn't sound native.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

KickyKat 16 9 8

Richard is right about the American R being the hardest to pronounce. That is why American military operations traditionally have the letter R somewhere in the name.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

asdf098 12 11 10

I just don't care about it, and native speakers shouldn't mind too much

0ReplyGive Lingot1•9 months ago

aaaaaa 25 23 22 21 20 20 15 15 14 14 12 12 665

You need to use your tongue, not your throat :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

parafrances 15 10 9

Have you tried to sing? You record yourself trying to pronounce both sounds of the "Spanish R".

For instance, this song repeat often both sounds:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XVC6dbTMK3A>

"llorar y llorar" , "dinero"

vs

"rodar y rodar", "piedra", "rey", "arriero"

It's not a linguistic substitute, but it's fun... and maybe useful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

formagella 14 12 8

If you're getting a sore throat, you're trying it wrong. There are lots of videos on youtube that try to explain that, see a few of those if you haven't yet.

That sound is used not only in Spanish but also in my language. Nowadays people (native speakers) who cannot say the r can even work in radio and television where I live.

If you can already say the simple "r" (I mean the one that is just a single tap of the tongue on the palate), doing the trill shouldn't be too difficult.

When I make that sound alone and on purpose, it doesn't come out if I don't put enough power in my voice, so don't talk under your breath when practicing. No need to yell tho, just speak loudly.

Try saying ramarro rosso.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Sam_R_H 11 9

If you pronounce it as an English r, you won't really run into too many problems. There are some instances where the Spanish rr distinguishes between two similar words, like perro // pero

querría // quería

But a native speaker should easily understand what you're trying to say from context.

That being said, keep trying! There are some videos on Youtube that give tutorials on how to produce foreign sounds, and they might be helpful for you.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=K9eN2B7Wj68>

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

janey89 25 22 7 7 5 404

Oh god, neither can I. Well, no, I tell a lie: I can SORT OF do it SOMETIMES.

What I've found is that it helps if you take a word with just a single "r" in it, if you can say it with decent pronunciation, like, "encontrado."

Then keep saying that and focus on the "r" sound you're making - where your tongue is, where your teeth are - and just try to re-create that sound over and over again.

Then try to say "perro" or something.

It sometimes works for me; I haven't mastered it at all yet.

Good luck!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

davethewarrior 10

With that one word I can say it so it sounds kind of like the trill since the t comes before an r, but still not like it's supposed to come out as. With words like perro it just isn't happening haha.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Kanon087 25 14 5

Es una característica propia del idioma español la pronunciación de la doble "rr" te sugiero que aprendas la técnica, porque no se te entenderá mucho si lo pronuncias al estilo English, así como nosotros los que aprendemos inglés se nos dificulta aprender a diferenciar los sonidos del inglés que algunos son tan difíciles de percibir, así ustedes los angloparlantes deben aprenderlo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

parafrances 15 10 9

Kanon087 no, no "deben aprenderlo", no es imprescindible para hablar español pronunciarlo exactamente. En toda mi vida solo he conocido a dos personas que hablen español como españoles siendo otra su lengua nativa.

However, davethewarrior I believe you already have the sound : listen to the different pronunciations that wordreference offers of the word "RIOT". I believe you'll agree after pronouncing one or two of the samples , but insisting in the initial "R". Then the Spanish one "RAMA" will become easier.

RIOT : <http://www.wordreference.com/es/translation.asp?tranword=riot>

RAMA: <http://www.wordreference.com/es/en/translation.asp?spen=rama>

The result is not a vibrant Spanish "RR", but it's much closer than your usual result, which, most of the times, sounds very much like a soft "R" when my American friends speak Spanish.

AND

I agree with formagella: If you're getting a sore throat, you're trying it wrong.

The "R" coming from your throat is a "French R" (much more like you would pronounce "GHR" at "hotel-ghotel-ghrotel) and not a "Spanish RR" (as you would pronounce "RRRRRRR" at "riot- rrrriot- rrrrrriot").

Please, try and tell me your results... Txs in advance.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

tammythree 20 241

I'm still working on it and have gotten better in the last few weeks. I'm not consistent and that's what I'm working on. I watch a lot of Spanish TV so, every time I hear the double rr sound, I repeat it. I do this for at least six hours a day. It has become such a habit that I fear doing it in actual conversation with someone.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

kdressl 24 8 79

I have lived in Spanish speaking countries for a number of years. 12 in Panamá and 11 in Costa Rica. I have tried and tried but never been able to roll my r's, I have one daughter who can, perfectly, and a son who can't like me. I have also had a number of Latin friends who can not roll the r's so I'm not totally convinced the problem is correctable with practice for some people. Perhaps it is my English ancestry? I finally had to turn off the microphone in SETTINGS because either the sound quality was bad, or Duolingo simply could not understand my voice. I would spend 50 repetitions on a word I knew was pronounced correctly.. and I also became very discouraged. I decided to leave it off for awhile until I felt more familiar with Duolingo then turn it back on. Pronunciation is important, but people will understand your speech without the double r and you will understand what you hear if you continue even without it. I finished the golden tree yesterday, and now I'll go back with the microphone on to work on my pronunciations.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

217 Tener vs Haber

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/70578>

LEGEND 25 23 10

I really don't quite get it, both mean 'have' so what really is the difference between the 2 and when should you use them in certain situations?

Give Lingot

194 years ago

Leave a new comment

4 Comments

rspreng 24

Haber is a "helping verb" and you'll use it more as you progress, in phrases like "I have run." Tener means "to possess/have/own" and is also used in combination with many verbs to mean a variety of things. Take a look here and snoop around <http://www.studyspanish.com/lessons/tenque.htm>

18ReplyGive Lingot2•4 years ago

Muhammaddaltaher 20

Thank you for always being so helpful

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

dz617 8

Tener means to literally have something tangible. For example, I have an apple=tengo una manzana. With haber, the only conjugation you need is hay. It means "there are". So if you wanted to say there are many people at the game, you would say "Hay muchas personas al juego"

However, you can also use tener when you need to do something. It translates to "I have to..." So if I have to eat, it would be "tengo que comer" all you do is add a "que" after tener

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

ProfeHarp 16 7 6

"With haber, the only conjugation you need is hay."

This is true when you are beginning to learn Spanish since "hay" is one of the basics. However, "hay" is only the present tense of "there is" & "there are". There is also the past (había and hubo). Also, as you move onto the present perfect, you will use haber as an auxiliary verb. For example: I have lived in Mexico since 2010 (He vivido en México desde 2010).

23ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

218 Grammar: "niet" and "geen"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3734833>

Kai_E. 25 23 20 12 4 3

NEGATION

In Dutch, you use the words "niet" and "geen" when negating things.

"geen"

"geen" is used to negate a noun that, if not negated, would be preceded by "een".

Is dat een koe? - Nee, dat is geen koe.

(Is that a cow? - No, that is not a cow.)

It can also negate nouns that aren't preceded by any article, like some nouns in the plural and uncountable nouns.

Hebben jullie boeken? - Nee, we hebben geen boeken. + (Do you have books? - No, we don't have books.)

"niet"

"niet" is essentially used in all other situations:

to negate verbs, thoughts, adjectives and any other sentence elements that aren't nouns:

Ik ren niet. - I do not run.

Ik niet. - Not me.

Hij is niet zo oud. - He is not that old.

to negate nouns preceded by a definite article or possessive pronoun:

Nee, dat is niet mijn boek. - No, that is not my book.
Nee, hij was niet de burgemeester. - No, he was not the mayor.
Where does "niet" go in a sentence?

It depends on what you are negating. If you're trying to negate something particular like an adverb or adjective, then it's best to put "niet" right before it.

Mijn rok is niet geel. - My skirt is not yellow.
Ik eet niet altijd vis. - I do not always eat fish.
In most other cases, "niet" comes after the "middle part" of the sentence - where you usually have the time, manner and place.

Ik heb hem gisteren (time) niet gezien. - I did not see him yesterday.
Ik heb door het lawaai (manner) niet kunnen slapen. - I could not sleep due to the noise.
Put "niet" here, and you will likely be right.

Despite the "place" usually being in the middle part of a sentence, "niet" usually comes before it when it indicates a direction.

Wij gaan niet naar huis. - We are not going home.
However, if you put "niet" in front of the time, manner and place, then you are stressing that it was not then that I did it (but later), that it was not there that I did it (but here), or I didn't do it like that (but like this).

Hij gaat niet vandaag naar de maan, maar morgen. - He is not going to the moon today, but tomorrow.
Wij gaan niet met jullie, maar met hen. - We are not going with you, but with them.
Exercises

Here are some exercises that may help you with negation in Dutch:

<http://dutch.tolearnfree.com/free-dutch-lessons/free-dutch-exercise-68356.php>
<http://dutch.tolearnfree.com/free-dutch-lessons/free-dutch-exercise-41973.php>
<http://dutch.tolearnfree.com/free-dutch-lessons/free-dutch-exercise-86981.php>
Return to grammar overview!

Give Lingot30
1382 years ago

Leave a new comment
43 Comments

webazos 25 25 25 24 16 16 15 12 8 4
A trick that I use is that you use "geen" when you can use "no" in english

With the examples that you used:

Nee, dat is geen koe.
No, that is no cow

Hebben jullie boeken? - Nee, we hebben geen boeken. + (Do you have books? - No, we have no books.)

On the other side, you cannot use it for I do no run , or "i no run". Or no me -> "not me".

Am I wrong? English is not my mother tongue , but using this trick (so I am not 100% sure) but that is what it looked like to me.

15ReplyGive Lingot13•2 years ago

EricVanErt 16 224

Your post. Your post right there. This is going to save my life.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•6 months ago

ywikander 16 8 7

Your understanding in English is correct. That said, it would be unusual to say 'we have no books' or 'that is no cow'. 'We don't have any books' or 'that isn't a cow'. Nonetheless, one COULD say it that way and it wouldn't be grossly incorrect like 'I no run' or 'no me'. So basically your logic is sound.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

webazos 25 25 25 24 16 16 15 12 8 4

Hi, thanks for your confirmation. And yes, I am aware that those phrases are not the "cleanest English", however I think it is not that unusual to find that kind of expressions in TV series on spoken English, (maybe because it is shorter)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Igor153996 6 6

Just saved my life, just gave you a Lingot, Thanks mate!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

runhaags 16 15 14 14 13 13 11 10 6 6 5 4 3 450

I've been using the same trick, and English is my native language. I agree with ywikander that it doesn't always sound the most natural but I haven't run into any problems thinking this way with niet vs. geen. Another way to think about it is that geen focuses on the noun (or lack thereof) while niet focuses on the verb (or lack thereof), if that makes sense.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pmm123 25 25 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 13 12 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 1111

Thanks, this seems very similar to German "kein" vs. "nicht." And thank you and the team for creating such a great course. I really like and appreciate the grammar tips you've included within the lessons. Very, very helpful!

9ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

rayray_2561 8

I was thinking kein vs nicht as well

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jcarlosmjr 25 19 12 12 12 3

Understanding when to use "niet" or "geen" was a major difficulty for me until now. Thank you very much for all the explanation, KaiEngle!

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Joao1362 15 15 12 11 11 9 8 5 4 2

Very helpful! Dank je!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

I see now. Dank je wel. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jolynnedougherty 25 19 14 8 5 44

Thanks so much. I needed this. Have a Lingot.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gelaarsd_Schaap 12 11

Kai_E.,

I just came along this question (about 'geen' vs. 'niet een') and I thought about posting a link to this thread, however there is no explanation with regard to the actual question here. I think some explanation on 'geen' & 'niet een' should be included.

Greetings,
het Gelaarsd Schaap.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TerryLols 10 7 7

Thanks for the exercises that you have linked but the vocabulary is way too hard for a beginner.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

telepathic_onion 7 7 2

thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

WordFitlySpoken 16 9 8 6 6 4 2

Very, very helpful...thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JamesT.Wilson 14 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 10 10 10 8 637

This is all very fine and good. What I do not understand is when to use "geen...of" and when to use "noch...noch." Any suggestions for that?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KayP1603 21 20 19 16 7

"Noch.. noch" is Dutch for "neither...nor". It is used to summate negations. "Ik eet noch peren, noch appels, noch druiven, noch etc." -> "I eat neither pears, nor apples, nor grapes, nor ... etc." This is barely used anymore and considered old fashioned in everyday speech. However, you might still find it in written text and official speech.

"Geen...of" (literally: "not a...or") is what you will hear people say in conversations "dit is geen stoel of tafel" -> "this is neither a chair, nor a table". The example in the second paragraph would nowadays be translated as "Ik eet geen peren (of) appels of druiven".

There is not a real difference, but mind that choosing either construction does affect a sentence. You could say: "noch de jonges, noch de meisjes zijn blij" -> "neither the boys, nor the girls are happy". But it would become "geen (van de) jongens of meisjes zijn blij" -> "no(ne of) boys or girls are happy". As in English both sentences have a similar meaning, which is slightly changed by using or omitting the articles.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

xulong123 14

great! very helpful.. thank you very much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ywikander 16 8 7

Super helpful!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SebastianChw 23 21 16 10 9 6 6 4 890

When negating the sentence 'Het raam is 10 meters hoog', I used niet, which seemed a natural thing to do. However, the exercises pointed that the correct solution is 'Het raam is geen 10 meters hoog.'

Is there another rule applying here?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kai_E. 25 23 20 12 4 3

In Dutch you typically use "geen" to negate things with units, whether it be "geen 10 kilo", "geen €5" or "geen twee minuten".

You also don't need to use the plural of the unit. So in your example it should also be "10 meter hoog" not "10 meters hoog".

Hope that helps.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SebastianChw 23 21 16 10 9 6 6 4 890

I really wasn't aware of this. Thanks so much, it really clears up the negation to be used in these cases!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lidiapus 11 7 3 2 2

thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tarekb85 13

Thanks a million! You deserve 50 Lingots!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ehsan_Mehmed 25 21 20 17 15 15 12 11 10 10 10 10 8 8 7 6 6 6 5 5 4 3 2 2 51 so, ik spreek geen nederlands and ik spreek nederlands niet are the same?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gelaarsd_Schaap 12 11

Only "Ik spreek geen Nederlands" is correct - or, for that matter, used.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rsha 11 10 8 6

Bedankt! This was very helpful

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JAPANADA_YAAHH

Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PassionSunKiss 5

Regarding the examples above, could you say: "Ik niet altijd eet vis" rather than "Ik eet niet altijd vis" for "I do not always eat fish"...Or "Ik heb niet gezien hem gisteren" instead of "Ik heb hem gisteren niet gezien"? I'm confused because there seem to be so many different ways to say 1 sentence.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

runhaags 16 15 14 14 13 13 11 10 6 6 5 4 3 450

I'm not a native Dutch speaker, but I am pretty sure that both of the alternate sentences you proposed are grammatically incorrect. For the first, "Ik niet altijd eet vis" is incorrect because you can't separate the subject from the conjugated verb. For the second, "Ik heb niet gezien hem gisteren" is incorrect because in compound tenses, as well as constructions with more than one verb, every verb after the first goes at the very end of the clause. I think there are also rules about where time modifiers ("gisteren") have to go, but I don't know them. This link is helpful: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3733010>. If any native Dutch speakers want to add or correct me, please do. Hope this was helpful!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Martijn350416 14 8 6

I am dutch and would always say "Ik eet niet altijd vis" (Subject, verb, time, object) or maybe in an exceptional situation "Niet altijd eet ik vis", (time, verb, subject, object) which has to do with the location of the verb and emphasizes the time. Indeed "Ik niet altijd eet vis" would not be correct, though the meaning would be clear.

"Ik heb niet gezien hem gisteren" would never be used, but I must admit that I don't know why or the grammar rules behind it. The only reason I can think of, is that dutch people like to split the verbs (heb gezien) from each other. "Ik heb hem niet gezien gisteren", "Gisteren heb ik hem niet gezien" and "Ik heb hem gisteren niet gezien" are all very common.

3ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

travel_nat 15

Just to clarify the second example; Ik heb hem niet gezien, first of all the second verb (gezien) has to go to the end of the sentence, that's a rule. Second, there's a rule that says that niet comes after a direct object in a sentence. Hem is a specific person and thus a direct object in our example. Ik heb de man niet gezien vs ik heb geen man gezien if the man is not specific. Hope that helps, succes allemaal!

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

PauBofill 14 13 11 11 11 9 7 6 6 5 4 4 3 3 3 2 485

Dank je!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

colesautter 13 10 7 6 6 5 2 2

As far as "geen" vs. "niet", what about: I have no books now, and I don't have the books today, "Ik heb geen boeken nu, en ik heb niet de boeken vandaag". Does this work?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Martijn350416 14 8 6

If you remove the small typo (hab -> heb) it would be absolutely correct.

To me it feels a bit more common to say: "Ik heb nu geen boeken en ik heb de boeken vandaag niet." but that just has to do with the point you like to emphasize and the context.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

colesautter 13 10 7 6 6 5 2 2

Great! This is exactly what I was hoping my thinking was based on; use niet to negate verbs/actions, and use "geen" to negate adjectives/nouns... does that sound right?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Martijn350416 14 8 6
Absolutely!

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

AriastityM 9 8 2

What if I want to negate a verb in a sentence where there is a description of time/place? For example, if I want to negate the verb 'ga' in the sentence 'Ik ga naar de markt' (i.e. I am not going to the market and I'm not going anywhere), should I place 'niet' after 'naar de markt'?

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Verissimerson 23 22 21 17 14 9 9 7 4 338
Thank you so much for the explanation. I loved the exercises.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

N0xxys 8
I have a book that says "Nee, ik weet de weg niet.". In your examples, I see "Nee, hij was niet de burgemeester.". What is the difference? Which is right? Are both possible?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

DankStarMemeia 11 8 6 4 3
Thank you, this is really helpful! I'm still very much a beginner in Dutch and so far I think I gave an idea of when each is applicable, but this may save my butt in future!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

LanguagesL9 14 14 12 12 10 10 10 9 17
Thanks for the explanation!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

219 "In the next minute."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/192539>
Translation: Dans la minute qui suit.

04 years ago

Leave a new comment
29 Comments

mikeybarnes 13 5 3 3 2
Can we not use 'prochain' here instead? As in 'dans la minute prochain'?

49ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

n6zs 25 863

There are a number of tricky French adjectives that have slightly different meanings when placed before or after the noun. Generally speaking, adjectives placed before the noun have a figurative or subjective meaning; adjectives placed after the noun have a more literal or objective meaning. The expression here is not to be taken literally, as "in the next 60 seconds". It is subjective, like saying "in a minute". So if you choose to use prochaine, it would go before the noun to show that it is figurative/subjective and not literal.

http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/adjectives_fickle_2.htm

69ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

petic 14 11 9 142

Dans la prochaine minute was accepted (17.07.2014) - maybe it's the word order vs minute prochaine?

24ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Worfles 10

I also used "Dans la prochaine minute" and it was marked correct, so reversing the last two words must have been the issue.

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

xandermark 19 18 16 14 13 11 8 6 6 5 4 3 3 3 2 2

I thought "prochain/e" was acceptable after a noun too? I've often heard "la semaine prochaine"

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cscottchristian 11 7 6 5 2 2

Check above, n6zs answered this perfectly

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rubywish 17

When do I use en and when do I use dans?

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

petic 14 11 9 142

With expressions of time 'dans' refers to the future, while 'en' means how long something takes. Cf. http://french.about.com/library/prepositions/bl_prep_en_vs_dans.htm

36ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JewishPolyglot 14 13 12 11 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

That helped me too! Have a lingot

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NateBanas 18

why use "qui"? why not "que"?

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

n6zs 25 863

"Qui" is used as a subject pronoun and "que" is used to replace a direct object.
http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/relativepronouns_2.htm

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ROSIEenFEU 11 5 4

Man, I really need to take some basic grammar. It would help me so so much with my language lessons.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

n6zs 25 863

It is so true, Rosie. A great many (young) users show tremendous courage in attempting the French language and do not know what it means to conjugate a verb. I think that's one reason so many drop out. Fortunately, there are many great resources available for those who are willing to learn. Good luck to you!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

msinykin 14 388

You may want to get the book "English Grammar for French Students" by Jacqueline Morton. It explains the various components of English grammar and then how that grammar works in French. I have found it very useful.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

SimonSais 15 2

What is the preferred answer in real life use? "Dans la prochaine minute" "dans la minute suivante" "dans la minute qui suit" or some other answer?

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

duomnky 15 8 4 2

Are there clear rules about when the adjective goes before vs after the noun? (I also got dinged for entering 'la minute prochaine'. So, for example, why is it la prochaine minute but la robe rouge?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

n6zs 25 863

In general, adjectives follow the noun. Except for those which follow the BANGS rule (adjectives of Beauty, Age, Number, Goodness, and Size go before the noun. There are a few French adjectives that are quite tricky, changing meanings depending on whether they are placed before or after the noun. When they are placed before the noun, they have a figurative or subjective meaning. When they are placed after the noun, they have a literal or objective meaning. So the idea is not that "in the next minute" means "in the next 60 seconds" (literal), but rather the more subjective "in a minute" (subjective). Check out the two pages associated with this link:
http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/adjectives_fickle.htm

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

stancollins 15

Yeah, I was taught "Beauty, Age, Goodness, and Size" or BAGS for a mnemonic, as the ones that go before the noun. But that did me wrong here.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jaxxel24 22 6 1

I use "Dans la minute suivante"... DL should use "In the minute that follows" for the English if you ask me.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

n6zs 25 863

That is an accepted answer.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Goran12 22 8 2

I used "prochaine" and it said it's an error. Unfortunately, I missclicked to "fix mistakes" instead of reporting this. :-(

If it's really not acceptable, tell me why, please.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LoveRoblox 13 7 4

Dans la suivant minute is marked as wrong as of 7-14-2016. Prochaine is now accepted.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

jomoro 14 4 2 2

Omg its prochaine !!! Duo your killing me lol

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

n6zs 25 863

Yes, it can be "prochaine" but it must be before the noun. Dans la prochaine minute.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ahulani 14 6 6 2 2

Looks like it should be "prochain minute" (via reverso. Indeed, it was the word order, not the word that is the problem.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

n6zs 25 863

Except that "la minute" is a feminine noun so it would be "la prochaine minute". See my post above about how adjective placement affects the meaning.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KaZt04 15 6

Why is "à la minute qui suit" incorrect? It was in the multiple choice section so I chose both "dans la minute qui suit" et "à la minute qui suit" because I thought à could generally translate as "to," "at," or "in"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KyleKane1 14 14 13 13 13 9 9 8 8 7 6 6 6 6 5 5 4 4 3

À is often just to or at, unless you are talking about countries, where à can mean in, like I live in the United States: je vis aux États Unis. In this phrase, it is dans as time normally takes that specific preposition.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

09_1413 7 3

and dans la minute qui vient doesn't work, why?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

220 How to pronounce German 'r's and 'ch's: a weak attempt at a comprehensive answer.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2245899>

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

This explanation is based on what I wrote in this thread:

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2154267>

Since then, I have decided to also expound on the 'r' sounds which the original poster asked about, and to separate my advice into a new thread, since the old one has gone too far down the list.

Note:

1) I'm trying to be as accessible in my explanations as possible (remaining academic, though), but if you have issues with any of the terms or signs – ask away. Also, note that most of the IPA symbols have their own articles on English Wikipedia, so copying the one you don't know and searching for the sound it represents there will yield you information and recordings.

2) While I may be a phonetician(-in-making), German is not my speciality, so all the advice that I have to offer is based on my general knowledge of this discipline and what little I have read about German phonetics. Take this all with a grain of salt.

3) This guide has been written with most native speakers of English in mind. If you see that my advice doesn't agree with your accent, or if your first language is not English, you can ask about it in the comments: I may be able to help you.

4) Notation note. If a symbol is in the stroke symbols (e.g. /x/), I'm talking about a phoneme: a mental concept that may comprise differing actual speech sound variants, but which still functions as the same unit in the language (i.e. I'm talking about a unit of language as a system, not a real sound).

Square brackets mean that I am talking about a real sound (e.g. [x]), you'll see them the most.

I'll reserve the quotation marks to show that the symbol is meant as a letter in spelling, not a speech sound (e.g. 'x' can be pronounced as [ks], [gz] or [z]).

With this dull business out of the way, let's start with the German 'r'

As far as I have found out, there are three acceptable variants of the phoneme /r/ in Standard German: alveolar trill [r], uvular trill [ʀ] and voiced uvular fricative/approximant [ʁ].

All three are perfectly standard, although [r] is closely associated with the South. [ʀ] and [ʁ] are not distinguished from each other by region, and may vary even in one speaker: you'll soon see why. Consistency is good, and if you can – stick either to the alveolar sound or the uvular sounds.

Note that 'r' in writing does not always represent any of the above consonants in speech. It can represent a vowel if it is at the end of a syllable. Example: 'wir' is pronounced as [vi:ɐ̯], the semicircle under the [e] means that this vowel does not form its own syllable.

If 'r' is at the beginning of a syllable ('Rhein' [rain]) or between two vowels ('fahren' ['fa:rən]), it is always pronounced as one of the consonants we're discussing. But when in doubt, consult dictionaries that give transcriptions, like de.pons.com.

[r]

What are the features of the alveolar trill [r]?

1) It's alveolar. That is the place where the sound is being produced (place of articulation) is on the alveolar ridge, the rough area behind your upper teeth.

2) It's voiced. This is simple: you use your voice when you pronounce it, like with a vowel, or [n], or [l] or others. This is normally not included in the names of trills and taken for granted, because voiceless trills are rare (German [ʀ] is voiced too).

3) The tricky part: It's. A. Trill. No trills of any sort in most of Present-Day English. So what does this mean?

Trill is a type of speech sound whereby one organ of speech (in this case, the tip of the tongue) makes a series (in real speech, no more than 2-3) of beats against the other organ (the alveolar ridge here) at a certain low frequency (about 30 Hz).

This action is not produced by conscious movement of the tongue (!) but by applying air pressure, and through the resulting combination of Bernoulli effect and physical elasticity of the tongue (this is how our vocal folds (cords) work, by the way).

Tough in words, but not as tough in action. For one, if you have ever imitated the sound of a car engine with the tip of your tongue ('vroomed'), you've pronounced the alveolar trill.

But you can approach this sound by using familiar sounds from two directions.

D1.

- 1) Pronounce the sound [z] (which is the very first sound in 'zebra' or 'zillion'): pronounce it with full voice, and at length.
- 2) Make sure that the tip of your tongue is relaxed.
- 3) Then, move it closer to the alveolar ridge.
- 4) When you start feeling the tactile sensation of your tongue beating against your upper jaw and hear the sound of that, you've got it.
- 5) The whole procedure should sound about like 'zzzzzrrrrr' (like when you drop vegetables in a food processor).

D2.

- 1) Prepare to pronounce [t] (the very first sound in 'toast' or 'tank').
- 2) What does this mean? Put the (tight, not relaxed) tip of your tongue on the alveolar ridge so that the air from your lungs can't come through your mouth.
- 3) When you obtain this seal, push the air into your mouth.
- 4) If you maintain the tip of your tongue tight, and then abruptly release the seal. The air comes out with an explosion, and you get a [t].
- 4) But. If you don't release the seal, and just relax the tip of your tongue, the air will start coming out (like giving someone a raspberry. In fact, raspberry is a bilabial trill) and you'll hear and feel the desired beating you'll get an alveolar trill [r].
- 5) Don't forget to add voice to the trill.
- 6) The whole procedure should sound like 'trrrrrrrrr' (like the stereotypical sound of an arrow hitting a target).

Note that the goal of these methods is to let you see what the sound should be like: what position of the tongue to take, the feel, the sound etc. Obviously, you must practice the sound enough not need these crutches (if you need them to begin with).

And here's a pleasant bonus: alveolar trill is the most common trill in the world languages, and one of the most common consonant sounds. So if you master it, it'll be a walk in the park if you look into Italian, Russian, Spanish, Polish, and many others!

[ʀ] and [ʁ]

There is a good reason why I am reviewing these together (which also the reason why many speakers inadvertently use both) and you'll see it now. So, what are the features of the uvular trill [ʀ] and voiced uvular fricative/approximant [ʁ]?

1) They are uvular. This means that the place of articulation involves the interaction of the uvula (the dangly bit at the very back of the mouth that you can see in the mirror) and the back of the tongue. The back of the tongue can come close, very close or touch the uvula, producing various speech sounds.

2) They are voiced. This, I think, is fairly self-explanatory: the trill is voiced, too, of course.

3) Now, the not-so-tricky-any-more part: why, for crying out loud, do we put together a trill [ʀ] and a fricative/approximant [ɣ]?

Now we know that a trill is 'when something quickly beats against something else'. In this case, the uvula starts beating against the back of the tongue, if the back of the tongue is very close, and there is strong-enough air coming through the opening between them.

The (voiced) uvular fricative means that the back of the tongue is a bit further away from the uvula, and what you hear is the audible hissing noise of the escaping air (plus voice), so it's too far for any trilling (remember [z] and [r]). The uvular approximant means that the back of the tongue is even further away, so that there is very little hissing noise, and together with voice, it all sounds like a weird vowel.

The point of putting them together is that the back of the tongue is not very mobile and is not very precise in its movements, so in real speech even if you aim, say, for a trill, you may very well end up with a fricative/approximant, or vice versa. Which is completely unlike the tip of the tongue, which is pointed, agile and accurate, which allows us to enjoy licking the exact things we want to lick (yes, this is the pre-watershed version), and which explains why the difference between [z] and [r] is so strikingly bigger.

Achieving the uvular trill should be easy for most people: this is the sound of gargling. Simply try gargling without any liquid, and then start combining it with other sounds. When you are comfortable with the trill, start trying fricative/approximant by simply moving the back of the tongue away from the uvula.

If you don't know what gargling is or how to do it, my best suggestion is to practise in front of a mirror.

1) Open your mouth and touch the uvula with the back of your tongue (this should be visible, but you'll feel the contact, too).

2) Then apply gentle air pressure from the lungs (don't overdo it), and slightly move the back of the tongue forward, away from the uvula.

3) This should give you the beating sound and sensation. This all should sound like 'krrrrrr', and essentially follows the procedure of reaching [r] from [t] (don't forget about the voice).

Check the Wikipedia articles of these sounds for recordings, and if you have problems with these sounds, record yourself and compare your result with these recordings.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Uvular_trill http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Voiced_uvular_fricative

This guide can also help you with achieving uvular sounds in French and Portuguese.

German 'ch'

Essentially, here we're talking about two sounds in German: the voiceless velar fricative aka -ach aka [x], and the voiceless palatal fricative aka -ich aka [ç].

The difference in their use in German can be seen (almost always) only at the ends of syllables: if 'ch' is preceded by 'a' (Nacht), 'o' (Loch), 'u' (Tuch), 'au' (Hauch) (note that it's in writing), then it represents the [x] sound. After all other vowels, it's [ç] (Nächte, Löcher, Tücher, ich, Blech usw.). At the beginning of syllables, it's [x] with a couple of exceptions, like the diminutive suffix -chen (Mädchen), which always has [ç]. Whenever unsure, check a dictionary with transcriptions, like de.pons.com.

In general, these fricative sounds do not exist in English (with small dialectal exceptions), but luckily English has sounds with the same or close place of articulation, i.e. the place where, in this case, a particular part of the tongue does something against the roof of the mouth.

The -ach variant.

[x] has the same place of articulation as English [k]. Except that it's a fricative (i.e. the back of the tongue comes very close, but without contact, so that a hissing noise is produced), not a stop, like [k] (there is contact, as the name suggests). Compare it to [s] (fricative) and [t] (stop) in SIP and TIP, and try achieve the same kind of contrast with [k].

You can put the back of the tongue to where you would produce [k] ('start' [k], but don't release it, see what I suggested when going from [t] to [r]), then apply gentle pressure of air from the lungs, and then release the seal so that there's hissing noise. This all should sound like 'khhhhhh', a bit like a cue stick hitting a ball.

The -ich variant.

[ç] is a bit trickier, but it has about the same place of articulation as English [j]: cf. the first sound in YARD or YEAST.

The key here is to pronounce only the very first sound in, say, YARD, then to pronounce it without the voice (because [j] is voiced, and [ç] isn't), and then try to narrow the gap between the tongue and the palate, so that the frication noise becomes louder and harsher, but avoid contact between the tongue and the palate. Voila. It should all sound like 'jjjjhhhhh'.

Alternatively, you can approach it from the 'ee' vowel ([i:]) in 'bee'. Prolong the vowel as long as you can, then turn off the voice, and then raise the middle of the tongue very slightly towards the palate, so that you hear the hissing noise (make sure you don't touch the palate, or you'll obstruct the airflow). It should sound like 'beeeehhhhhh'. Voila again.

This is it, I think. If you have any questions, ask away.

EDIT: here's a diagram, based on the sagittal (side) section of the human head. This may be helpful with putting a finger on where all these 'velar', 'uvular', 'palatal' and other places of articulation are inside you: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/File:Places_of_articulation.svg

EEDIT: here's a good video for practising the uvular trill (suggested by J.DavidCR): <http://youtu.be/kqQ4gxcHPDw>

Give Lingot14
382 years ago

Leave a new comment
38 Comments

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 13

This is an extremely elaborate and comprehensive explanation, but I feel that I have to add that for people who are thinking about running screaming from learning German after reading it, that 100% faithfulness to the accent is about as optional as the 'T' in the word 'Britain'

I'm not just saying that because I can't make these sounds, because I can and do, and I always try to use my nearest German accent, but nobody will die if you speak German with a strong American accent, just like nobody dies when someone speaks English with a strong accent from [name any country in the world]. It gives the language that beautiful range of flavours. In my opinion if you learn the language, it's your inalienable right to speak it whichever way pleases you.

Anyway, I may be wrong but I think it's a myth that English speakers don't know the German or French 'R' sounds. Even Homer Simpson does both of them perfectly. Usually while slack jawed, tongue hanging out sideways thinking about donuts or butter or bacon or lamb chops. Most of us have a much larger repertoire of sounds than those we use in everyday speech, and probably don't even think about it. The subtle difference, and what most of us can't quite wrap our head around is using those sounds to represent letters of the alphabet. That is something we learn very early and then consider definitive and unchanging, so it's quite perplexing when you realise for the first time how inadequate it really is, how inconsistent it is from country to country and that you have to unlearn nearly everything about it you thought you knew with every new language, even though it fundamentally looks the same. There are so many sounds that are not represented in our alphabet, that they are a blind spot, for the sake of not being able to mentally associate a written equivalent to them. Weird eh?

Anyway, that's my obligatory 'Don't take it too seriously' response to this done. Enjoy the rest of your evening :)

15ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OlderThanRome 23 14 14 12 10 5 5 4 2 11

A very interesting read, even for a German native speaker. I think I finally understood the difference between a phone and a phoneme. Thanks!

I have only one thing to add: For a lot of speakers (at least for me), "ach" has a voiceless uvular fricative, while "och" and "uch" have the velar one. Well, I think that's what it is, because I can feel the uvula moving in "Bach", which it doesn't do in "Buch".

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

Well, German is nothing without regional differences. :) It could be that your 'a' in 'ach' is not a central open vowel [a] (which is the usual kind for SG), but the back open [ɑ], whose tongue position is closer to that of the uvular consonant. So, it's just coarticulation, and the vowel simply influences the consonant.

And I've tried to make the explanation of a phoneme as accessible as I could: this is a tricky concept, and I'm glad it works. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

idshanks 14 11 5 4 2

Excellent post. Another short tip I'd suggest for the [ç] is to try simply taking the first sound from the word 'hue'. That said, I have no idea if it's pronounced as such in most accents, mine being Scottish.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

No, it's [h] in most English accents. But for Scottish English accents it can certainly be true, so, like with alveolar trills you've got it easier. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

idshanks 14 11 5 4 2

Hah, I'm not surprised. Scottish accents are cheat-mode for foreign phonetics in many cases, I feel :P

Also, the way I learnt to perform [ʀ] and [ʁ] is to voice [x] (of course, more easily said for someone with [x] in their natural accent in the first place, again :P). I'm not sure it's as simple as that, but that was the first step and then it was just practise to make it feel more accurate, fluid, and natural.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

Yes, it's really a pity for learners of English as a second/foreign language that a Scottish accent is not a standard of teaching, since the typical Scottish features make many things easier: there is a much smaller vowel inventory than in most accents, there is the very common alveolar trill or tap, instead of the English weirdo alveolar approximant [ɹ], plus there is often better agreement with spelling.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Khymdragon 25 9

Interesting. Because Canadian English has the alveolar trill. As we Rrrrrroll up the Rrrrrrim of our coffee lol (Tim Hortons coffee reference for non-Canadians). Perhaps because there was a significant Scottish immigration in our origin?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

This is actually news to me. Practically all the Canadians I've heard used the alveolar approximant: the same sound most Americans or English people use.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

gotobedson 12 7

I would disagree with this. It is quite natural for English speakers, in words such as 'hue', to meld the glottal fricative [h] and the subsequent palatal approximant [j] giving the palatal fricative [ç]. so, (forgive my Australian accent) but I say the word 'huge' (/hjuːdʒ/) as [çuːdʒ]. In fact, this is how I was initially taught the German [ç] in a similar fashion to how @idshanks described it. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

Yes, I have considered this, but it is certainly not (consistently) true in the accents that I speak/familiar with.

This is definitely subject to variation (probably idiolectal), especially since this only occurs in connected speech — and I've tried to make up advice that would allow practically everyone to hit exactly the right spot, regardless of the phonetic context or their accent.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

For good examples of the alveolar trill and voiceless velar fricative, listen to Rammstein. The singer, Till Lindemann, exaggerates the sounds quite a bit, making them relatively easy to hear. ("Ein Zweibeinerrrrr auf allen Vierrrrrrren ...")

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

J.DavidCR 14 7 3 3

This is how I learned the pronunciation of the German "R" <http://youtu.be/kqQ4gxcHPDw>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

Yes, this is a pretty solid video, and the gargling trick is nice.

I don't know exactly what the author meant exactly by 'exaggerating until it becomes a habit', but my experience says that you should only exaggerate during your very first attempts to get a better understanding of the sound. Start avoiding this exaggeration as soon as possible, or it will indeed become a habit.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

amyhier 20 9 8 5 2

Thanks for putting this all together! So I've been doing well with the ch sounds in German, but I've been wondering whether I've been doing the r right for a while, so: are either the [ʀ] or the [ʁ] similar to the French r? Because I think I'm pretty good at doing that one and in German I've been doing that, mostly just with less trill.. is that what it's meant to be?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fenix_vulgaris 23 9 8 6 6 6 5

I think Edith Piaf's r in "Non, rien de rien. Non, je ne regrette rien!" is very similar. You don't have to stretch it out and celebrate it as much, but you can also have fun with it. Compare Nina Hagen/Zarah Leander "Ich weiß, es wird einmal ein Wunder geschehn". It's all on youtube.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

I must note that one should generally be careful about how things are pronounced in singing (or traditional theatre, for that matter) – there are often conventions and traditions that deviate from normal speech. As in 'stretching and celebrating' it. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lalinguiste 17 13 8

I would agree that Edith Piaf's singing pronunciation isn't the most representative of standard French. The standard French pronunciation is typically the fricative (with [χ] as an allophone). The trill is used in some dialects though.

Great post by the way Nerdator! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

Yes, it's exactly the same thing, and the uvular trill is a phenomenon that spread across languages in Central and Western Europe. This is why (it's believed that) the alveolar trill is a very Southern feature: because it is the older sound, and the uvular trill simply didn't reach them.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bluwavetab 8 6 6

So, is the "ch" in "Buch" or "hoch" the same as the uvular fricative except unvoiced?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

No, it's a different sound. It's a velar fricative. So the place of articulation is, the velum or soft palate, not the uvula.

If you're struggling to find the right spot, consider this diagram (8 is what you're looking for). You can also touch your palate with the tip of your tongue -- move it back, until you feel that the hard part is over and the fleshy soft part starts. The 'right' spot is where the soft part starts.

Note that nearby vowels can alter the place of articulation in real speech, so it's best that you try - uch first to get the hang of the sound (since [u], unlike other vowels, requires a very similar tongue position).

EDIT: whoops, forgot to add the diagram:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/File:Places_of_articulation.svg

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

fenix_vulgaris 23 9 8 6 6 6 5

"Der Schraubenschlüssel" (screw-wrench) is one of those words that can be used to torment native English speakers. The tongue has to move a lot from the sch spot to the [ʀ] and then there's the short ü surrounded by konsonants.

Ich mache Krach. (I make noise.) may be easier and has all the tricky sounds.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

idshanks 14 11 5 4 2

I actually find 'der Schraubenschlüssel' easy, unlike 'Ich mache Krach'! The thing that catches me with 'Krach' is being careful to articulate the 'K' before hitting the 'R'. Generally, the uvular R is the only phoneme which still disrupts the flow of my speech - it's usually good following all consonants but 'K' can be a tricky one. The most common place in which I struggle with it is between vowels; 'Amerikanerin' is a horrible word because of the double occurrence in close proximity! Lucky I'm neither American nor a woman so I never have to describe myself as such! :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fenix_vulgaris 23 9 8 6 6 5

In classical singing breath is quite important, so it is widely excepted to use the trill r instead. As a German I find the French "rien, rien, rien, rien, rien" in quick succession really hard.

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yDhRbAl93pU>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ViArSkoldpaddor 15 10 8 5 5 2

Try "Stallschreiberstrasse" (The first St, just like the st in Strasse, is a Scht). Trying to teach my wife to pronounce that was what first got me thinking about the way we form sounds (and to realize that Germans keep the tip of their tongues in front of their mouths most of the time, while Americans don't)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

springbett 17 10 9 8 4

I believe that [ç] is also used after consonants (durch), and at the beginning of several words (chemie).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

idshanks 14 11 5 4 2

Bear in mind that 'r' in that position is a vowel rather than a consonant. Pronouncing it as a consonant is apparently a common giveaway of an English speaker.

<http://joycep.myweb.port.ac.uk/pronounce/consonr3.html>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

This is still valid: there are words like 'Milch', in which the palatal fricative is certainly after a consonant.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

idshanks 14 11 5 4 2

True; I don't mean to dispute his overall point. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ViArSkoldpaddor 15 10 8 5 5 2

I heartily disagree with that -- whether the r is a consonant there or not, depends very much on the region. In Berlin this particular one is generally an alveolar trill consonant, whereas in Bavarian most things are vowels anyway.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

idshanks 14 11 5 4 2

Indeed, I forgot to consider dialects other than the standard teaching dialect! My mistake. :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ViArSkoldpaddor 15 10 8 5 5 2

You mean accent, not dialect. Sadly, there is no standard teaching accent, it depends on where your teacher or tape maker is from. Bavarian speakers - which includes newscasters from Pro7 - tend to slightly slur their pronunciation even when speaking Hochdeutsch. Standard pronunciation is hard to come by, and at my time the standard pronunciation was Hamburg German, which funnily enough has rather explicit but not 'celebrated' Rs. Whereas the standard TV pronunciation depends on the channel, and on aforementioned Pro7 you'll easily hear "ma" instead of "wir", which is a dead giveaway that it is Munich-based, while the rest if it mostly sound like standard German.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

idshanks 14 11 5 4 2

Well, I meant dialect, but accent does fits my statement in a more all-encompassing manner, so thank you for your contribution. :P

However, I must now take my turn in hearty disagreement! There is a clear accent towards which teaching materials largely steer; whether it receives use in actuality is beyond the scope of my comment. I've used a vast array of teaching materials so far, and they all fairly consistently obey the traits put forth in the Paul Joyce link I mentioned previously. I've yet to come across any pronunciation guide that has strayed from those standards phonetic qualities that I haven't specifically went out of my way to look for (such as when I explored some Austrian dialects).

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

ViArSkoldpaddor 15 10 8 5 5 2

I thought about this for a moment, and I realized that I have no idea whether you are right or not, because I never, ever use the WRITTEN pronunciation guides of the sounds for anything, because I simply have a hard time understanding them - I just immitate the native speaker on the tape or in real life. And those differ from one course to the other very much.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Nievva 17 9 3 4

So, if I can roll my r's the Russian way, I'm good to go in German? That's a little too good to believe xD

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

Yes, you can. Mind though that the alveolar trill [r] (i.e. 'the Russian way') has some regional connotations (but it's still perfectly okay to use it in Standard German), plus don't forget that 'r' in writing does not always represent a trill consonant or a consonant at all (I mention this, and there has been some discussion over it in the comments).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nievva 17 9 3 4

Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ViArSkoldpaddor 15 10 8 5 5 2

If you start out pronouncing German the Russian way, you'll have very few problems to fix - the pronunciation is almost identical; Down to things like ю = jü ; ë = jö - So you can pronounce Brüste like Брюсьтэ and Rösti like Рёсьти and sound almost natural.

DO NOT, however, try to pronounce "ach" like the Russian "ax". That is a dead giveaway that you are Russian. Ch in ach has a much softer sound -- see Nerdators explanations above. The "ch" in "ich" is (almost) the x sound in "хихи", so that one is easy for Russians. The ch in "ach" is somewhere in between the two Russian variants -- Russian doesn't have an exact equivalent of that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

221 difference vs la, le, l'?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/16607>

arshypls 8

as in why is it "l'homme" for the man, but "le garçon" for the boy. also difference between la/le as well as un/une? when is which used?

also un means one right? is there another way to say 'i am a man' instead of 'je suis un homme'? because that translates to "i am one man" i think

Give Lingot

04 years ago

Leave a new comment

3 Comments

juliegolick 17 7 6

"L'/Le/La" are used for definite articles and can all be translated as "the". "Le" is used for masculine nouns, "la" for feminine, and "l'" for nouns of either gender that start with a vowel or a silent H (like homme).

"Un/une" are used for indefinite articles and can generally be translated as "a/an". Technically, "un/une" also can refer to the number one, as you point out, but it's far more common that it'll be used as an article as opposed to the number. "Un" is used for masculine, "une" for feminine. Unless it's very clear that someone is talking about the amount ("How many men are there?" "One."), I'd stick to using the indefinite article.

6ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

milneyj 11

I'll also add that the concept of a "silent H" is not quite the same thing as in English, because the H is never pronounced in French. In words where the H is "aspirated", you do not make a contraction. For example, you would write "le hamster", and pronounce it "le amster". The only pronunciation difference is in liaisons between words: there is no 'z' sound between the words when saying "les haricots" (the beans), but there is with "les hommes" and the vast majority of words starting with h.

Aspirated H's are not common, but they do exist.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

gjeichenblatt 12

Le, La and l' are used as definite article (like the in English). Le: Use if the word it is in front of is masculine. La: Use if the word it is in front of is feminine. L': Use if the word begins with a vowel or a silent letter (like h). Can be masculine or feminine. Les: Use if the word it is in front of is plural. Can be masculine or feminine.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

222 "The girl is sick."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4493122>

translation: La niña está enferma.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

SzilviaKas3 16

What is the difference between using 'es' and 'esta'?

2ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Caleb_Grim. 16 8 5 3

I thought you were supposed to say something like "la niña tiene enferma"?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rocko2012 25 7 3 1454

I think "tener" is used to state a relatively small number of things we normally think of as using the verb "be". Age and fear come to mind. Likely more though. So I say the best way to deal with this is just remember the few uses of "tener" that are translated with the verb "be" and don't assume it applies elsewhere.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Julian_L. 10 6 6

Your sentence would be incomplete. What is supposedly what have sick the girl? A cat? A dog? A brother? A sister? A classmate?...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Caleb_Grim. 16 8 5 3

So tiene does not directly refer to la niña?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Julian_L. 10 6 6

«Tener» means "to have/possess something", or "to must" (I have to...) when you say «tener que...».

This sentence says that the girl is sick. It says that she has fever / a cold, you could use the verb «Tener».

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Caleb_Grim. 16 8 5 3

Ok thx

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vickyvullo99 10 8 7

Tener --> to have I have ten apples Tengo diez manzanas

"La niña tiene una enfermedad" would be ok

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

223 How the Greek and Cyrillic alphabets are related

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/15819619>

Posted 9 months ago by [deactivated user]

The Greek course for English speakers is almost out, and I wanted to give a word about the Cyrillic and Greek alphabets, which are used to write various Slavic languages and the Greek language, both Classical and Modern, respectively.

There many letters that the Greek and Cyrillic alphabets have in common or that look similar and that represent the same sound:

Cyrillic-Greek: Пп-Ππ, Рр-Ρρ, Хх-Χχ, Оо-Οο, Εε-Εε, Μμ-Μμ

These are just some examples, and the Early Cyrillic alphabet has even more. But why? For that, we need a have a little history lesson.

Back in the 900s CE (Common Era), Sts. Cyril and Methodius of Greece started spreading Christianity to the South Slavs. In order to make it easier to communicate with them, Cyril expanded the Greek alphabet and added a bunch of letters from an alphabet called the Glagolitic alphabet for sounds that weren't in Greek (this is why the word for "alphabet" in many Slavic languages is still "глаголи/glagoli," or a close variant).

While St. Cyril may be credited with creating the Cyrillic alphabet on his own, it was actually his students in his school in the First Bulgarian Empire who standardized and made the alphabet official. They credited the alphabet to him.

So now you know!

I figured this would be relevant information since Greek is about to come out and the observant language learner will probably ask about it.

Give Lingot1
189 months ago

Leave a new comment
13 Comments

[deactivated user]
Thanks for sharing this! :) Wait! Greek is about to come out?

2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

[deactivated user]
Yes. The Greek course for English Speakers is at 100%.

2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

[deactivated user]
Okay but for what speakers?

0ReplyGive Lingot1•9 months ago

[deactivated user]
English, I said

2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

[deactivated user]
Oh sorry that was such a stupid question! Thank you though.

2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

[deactivated user]
No problem!

1Give Lingot•9 months ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 13
I consistently find the Greek and Cyrillic alphabet the hardest to read... It isn't because they are hard to learn, it's just the conflicting letter forms they have with the Latin alphabet, it flies against 20 years of ingrained reading habits....

I am getting better at it, but I feel like it is always going to be like 'deciphering a code' rather than 'reading a sentence'

It really makes me wonder, why did the Romans, Greeks and Slavs feel the need to create completely different alphabets, that were very nearly identical, but yet irreconcilable with one another?

It sort of reminds me of this: <https://xkcd.com/927/>

2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

maria.nils 24 21 17 14 13 13 12 11 10 9 9 8 8 8 7 5 3 2 406

They aren't completely different, actually they are quite similar, but to the degree that they are different, it's because the languages are different and have different needs from an alphabet. It's the same thing with languages using the Latin alphabet - most of them adapt it a little bit to suit their needs.

One example from Greek is the letter H. Originally this was used for the same sound as we use it for. But in some dialects of Greek the sound h disappeared and in those dialects, the letter was used to represent the sound of a long e instead (for example in Athens, where the value of the letter officially changed in 403 BC). In other dialects they still had the sound and therefore also kept the original value of the letter. Among those were the dialects spoken in southern Italy, and that's the reason why it has this value in the Latin alphabet (this variant of Greek was the one the Romans knew best). The Athenian variant, on the other hand, later formed the basis for the Cyrillic alphabet, but by that time the pronunciation had changed again, so that's why in Russian it's pronounced as an I (and also looks a little bit different, I don't know the background for that).

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

GrandaUrso 14

"the same thing with languages using the Latin alphabet - most of them adapt it a little bit to suit their needs."

Or in the case of Vietnamese, change it so much it may as well be a different alphabet :P

3ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 13

Well, that simply satisfies my assumption that no one would knowingly repurpose a glyph to mean a completely different sound.... for example, C, P, H, R, N, B, Y, X, 3, J.... I mean obviously, they didn't realise how confusing it would turn out to be in the long run...

Thank god for the letter K... it really is my favourite letter, no such ambiguity is suffered there :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Vegnio 13 13 11 6 22

You have also other similar letters A E T O M ;) Additionally, there's I in Ukrainian and in Serbian J. And C in some languages using latin script is also pronounced similar way ;)

Intriguing fact: Peter the Great ordered a reform of Cyrillic, to make letters look more like latin ones.

Intriguing fact no 2: In several countries using Cyrillic script, car plates use only letters from both scripts.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

wyqtor 16 15 13 13 13 13 12 12 11 11 11 11 10 9 9 9 8 7 7 4 4 2 2 802

The Greeks and the Romans (or, more likely, their Etruscan neighbors who inspired them) were actually both inspired by the Phoenician script. Back then, people traveled with difficulty and could not really standardize scripts. Another similar example: languages across India and Southeast Asia all have similar, but not identical scripts.

You will soon get a glimpse of yet another derivative of the script that inspired the Greek and Latin scripts: Hebrew letters are derived from the Phoenician script too, and probably much closer to the original way they looked.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 13

Well, that's pretty much how I pictured it happening in my head, but not knowing the true history that well I didn't really want to comment. I did once peer into the dizzying array of southeast Asian scripts as well, and it's really interesting how you can see the hidden connections between them. You can almost draw a line from one to the next, but they are all pretty unique.

On the other hand, and it's a terrible thing to admit, but if there was a way that all the different scripts in the world could be done away with overnight and replaced the next morning with something universally suitable, then I would be all for that...am I a bad person?

I mean there is nothing stopping anyone from learning and writing in ancient futhark runes or glagolitic or any other script of days gone by, in fact people still do for artistic reasons, we just don't use them religiously because we have this nice shared inheritance we can use, that goes beyond national boundaries. I put forward that the writing system doesn't really define the language anyway - for instance, we're so accustomed the latin alphabet in English, that most people just think of it as 'the English alphabet' without any sense of irony...

Of course the sheer number of variations of the latin alphabet is clear evidence of its unsuitability for many languages, as well :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

224 Advice on how to pronounce the Danish soft "d"?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4360973>

MissYucatan 9 5

How does one properly pronounce the "d" as seen in "mad", "hedder", "brød"? I've heard that it's halfway in between a "d" and an "l", but also shares similarities with the phoneme ð. Are there any danskere here who can give a proper explanation of the soft d?

Give Lingot

72 years ago

Leave a new comment

3 Comments

Xneb 21 20 13 10 6 2 2 2

This video is in Danish, but it has a reasonably good explanation of how to pronounce it. I remember it being described to me as trying to pronounce the English "th" but with my tongue behind my lower teeth (which is kind of like the diagram he has in the video)

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

km1 16 15 13 13 11 10 8 7 5 2 2

Here's a summary of the video:

Vowel + d = soft d [ð]

Place tip of tongue behind lower teeth and hold it there while making soft d [ð] sound

The combination d+e [ðə] can be pronounced two ways. In everyday speech the e sound [ə or schwa in phonetics terms] is often omitted. This creates a longer soft d [ð] sound and the pitch rises.

Examples are given of pronunciation of d [ð] + stød (gottal stop)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

DeroGoi 17 11 7 6 6 5 4 3 2 2 2

Here's a great website! <http://www.speakdanish.dk/en/pronunciation/alph-a.php>

(Unfortunately, I can't explain it, I'm not a native speaker)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

225 A plus tard? My wife says the "s" is silent in the word "plus", but the program pronounces it. Which is right?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/13618>

SomethingHeroic 8 5

Give Lingot

434 years ago

Leave a new comment

102 Comments

bsbaixo 3

I don't think you have been married very long. The wife is always right independent of the truth.

257ReplyGive Lingot3•4 years ago

Orchids_ 15 2

Niiiiice.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AndresFedez 5

ja,,,ja,,ja,,,ça est très bon.....

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dannyjmt 10 9 8 5 5 4 4 3

A good tip on pronouncing the French "u" (or the German "ü") is to shape you mouth and lips AS IF you were about to say the sound "oo" (in English pronunciation) but INSTEAD of pronouncing "oo", you pronounce "ee".

147ReplyGive Lingot1•4 years ago

twindave 12 10 5 1

That's a great tip! The sound that came out of my mouth surprised me!

36ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EdwardChamourian 16 12 9 9 6 4

My brain cannot handle how awesome this advice is.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dannyjmt 10 9 8 5 5 4 4 3

You're welcome! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

danielgr47 9 5 3 2

I'm an exchange student in Germany and the "ü" has been giving me troubles every day for the last 2 months. Thank you so much!

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

reidlearnsguitar 17 10 9 9 5 3 2

Thanks.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Irisvielle 9 8 6 6 4

Wow, it is very useful, thank you so much

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

kumariixx721 5 2

wow that was beautiful

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

piy9 6

Great tip. Thanks

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dannyjmt 10 9 8 5 5 4 4 3

Wow! It's been a while since I've looked at my notifications! You're all welcome! I'm glad my little tip has helped you guys! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

oschwimer 16 6

In fact the s in "plus" is pronounced in modern french when you want to emphasize the positive "more" meaning, or were a liaison with a vowel requires it.

"J'en veux plus" : "I want more of that" -> pronounce the "s".

"Je n'en veux plus" : "I don't want that anymore" -> do not pronounce the "s".

"J'en veux plus" : (without "s" sound: colloquial, same meaning: I don't want).

52ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

KateYoak 13 7

Great explanation. Based on that, plus tard = s is pronounced, correct? (more late)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Chilie 5

Do not prounce the s, in a plus tard, like below comments, you can also say plutard.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Stickplayer 4

I was married to a French girl for 20 years, and visited France quite often. Also, I am frequently late. I heard this a lot. The "s" is silent in the phrase.

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CeluiKiDort 11

PluS = more, + ; Plus (S not pronounced) = no longer That's the general rule of course there's some exception like in "plus tard" which is pronounced and also written "plutard".

8ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

jdc465 7

It is usually silent. It sounds like ploo. The speaker probably pronounced the S because the word following plus started with a vowel or vowel sound. This is a liaison and when this happens you pronounce it like plooz.

Ex. Plus (ploo) tard, Plus (plooz) importante

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Mizotte 19 2

I don't think it is a dialect difference, just an enormous problem of programming the pronunciation of "plus" because it varies with context.. The summary tables inserted into the first posts in these forum threads have been a great help to me.

<http://forum.wordreference.com/showthread.php?t=542829> (Discussion in French)

<http://forum.wordreference.com/showthread.php?t=444986> (Discussion in French and English) The tables are based on contributions from francophones worldwide as well as standard references.

There are remarkably few regional differences in pronunciation of the "s" in "plus" and no francophones suggest that the "s" in "plus tard" should be pronounced.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Lauris 14 10 7 5

MarieL1969, in your sentences, the 's' would be pronounced, but as a 'z'. 'pluzonveu, pluzondi'

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Stickplayer 4

Nope, not in the phrase being asked about:

Source: Married to a French person for 20 years, visited France regularly, heard the phrase a lot.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lauris 14 10 7 5

My source : I'm french and have been for more than 30 years.

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kokiri_villager 13 78

I don't know why everyone has downvoted Stickplayers comment. Lauris seems to be correcting a different question and NOT what the original question is asking.

Lauris is answering a message within this feed which asks:

Marie_L1969 6 plus on veut...plus on dit...when there is a vowel behind the word plus, the 's' can be pronounced, but not in a plus tard...

Yes, often you use the S and merge it onto the next word but say it as a Z, but NOT in "A plus tard", as the original question is asking.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lauralia 10 8 6 5

There are two "plus"; you have to pronounce the "s" when that's means "more"

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NicoPup 5 2

Some examples of the two different pronunciations of "plus" (meaning "more"). I'm French, but as Mizotte said, there could be differences depending on the dialect and on the register (soutenu ou familier)

"S" is pronounced in: À plus ! (contraction of "à plus tard") J'en veux plus. (I want more) De plus en plus. Plus de lait. Un peu plus. Un verre de plus (en plus), ça ne fait pas de mal. De plus, ... (moreover)

"S" is not pronounced in: À plus tard ! Plus vite, plus haut, plus fort (Citius, altius, fortius) Plus con tu meurs ! (More stupid you die!)

Both pronunciations can be heard in the case of: Plus il parle, plus il m'énerve. Plus on est de fous, plus on rit.

More info on:

http://www.lepointdufle.net/ressources_fle/plus.htm

<http://francparler-oif.org/espace-collaboratif/forum.html?func=viewcatid=75id=6281>

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

AnieLes 10 7

the 2 of them are right, in the sentence "à plus tard" the "s" is silent but the word "plus" mean 2 things is also like english (+) sorry for my english i try my best

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

jdc465 7

I'm assuming he is American so I was trying to put it in terms he could understand. You are right it is a very quick movement of your mouth so it doesn't sound very drawn out like "plooo" but a lot of people are beginners and just want to know the basic pronunciation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

pisenberg 11 10

Don't pronounce the s!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

JKG105 9 7

I agree with Faranae. I live in Canada, and the way we are taught to pronounce it is without the 's', so perhaps it is a dialect difference. Without a doubt, there are differences in dialect depending on where you live.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

22g 6 6 6 2 2

There's one audio clip where they don't pronounce the 's' in this program, but when they have just the expression by itself they seem to "accidentally" pronounce it. I think it's a bug in the audio as the 's' shouldn't be pronounced in this expression.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

softasbeets 8 6

Ah, this annoyed me quite a lot. I don't know anyone who would pronounce the 's' in 'plus tard' ... Of course there are exceptions to which consonants are pronounced at the end of a word (& always 'c' 'f' 'l'), but this is not one of them.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

KatrineTJ 13 3

I was surprised as well, I'd never heard the 's' pronounced before. Not by my teachers, nor by people I've met or lived with in France.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Marie_L1969 6

plus on veut...plus on dit...when there is a vowel behind the word plus, the 's' can be pronounced, but not in a plus tard...

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Stickplayer 4

Yes, the liaison. But he's asking for the specific phrase, I think.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lahdeedah 8 5

the only time an "s" sound is made at the end of "plus" is when you're talking about addition. The "s" is silent. The only time it isn't silent is for a liaison with the next word if it starts with a vowel, and even there it sounds like a "z" not an "s".

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

ecoster 8

Presently, the s is usually pronounced in “plus” for added effect or emphasis.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

RobDerby 14

according to Michel Thomas French CD's the 'S' in Plus is silent

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

56qi 13

the "s" of the word "plus" remains silent unless there is a word that begins with a vowel (a,e,i,o,u) that follows it which results in the forming of liaison. ex.

plus lentement = plu lentement (because the proceeding word starts with a consonant, the letter "s" remains silent) BUT plus étrange = pluZétrange (since the word coming after "plus" this time starts with a vowel, one must make a Z sound to unite/form a liaison of the two words.

Well I hope I helped and I hope what I had offered makes sense. A plus tard! Bonne chance avec votre l'apprentissage de français et autres langues!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

ashlynn23127 5
program

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

AlexR7777777 6
It should be pronounced "plooo."

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Pragya.U 6
there is 2 different pluses in french, the plus with a 's' that isn't silent is very ex: 'je suis plus bien' and the other one is i think something like se you tomorrow?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Paige.Godvin 2
It is pronounced "plooo," like the "o" in "move."

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dfeinblum 10
You don't pronounce the s unless the word following "plus" starts with a vowel. This is known as an elision and is pretty common in french.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

drax26 3
I would add that it varies by region. Quebecois pronounce things significantly different from how it would be pronounced in Caen.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jellycat11 9 5 4 4
Do not pronounce the "s". Say it as if it rhymes with moo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

duolingodove 8
Bonjour, je suis une nouvelle étudiante ici mais j'ai quelque BASICS (basics en français?). Quand, j'écoute par aider de google traductor, il jamais PRONOUNCE(en français?) S en Plus.

<http://french.about.com/library/weekly/aa101300v.htm>

Check the above site :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

loveduolingo12 7 4

Its plus without the s at the end. Proof: that's what my french teacher told me!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

witerabit 5
Ha! Well said bsbaixo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NuclearLilly 7 2
Never pronounce the "s" , thats what my french teacher told me. Also never doubt your wife.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wspang651 3
your wife is right

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Idealantin 9
yor wife are right.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mininator 6 5
dont listen 2 the program your wife is smater

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kaitlynschrauwen 8
you wife is right, the french never pronounce there "t" 's or there "s" 's.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jaeggipierre 5
both are correct Sometime I do sometime I do not It depends out it sounds in the sentence. I know
....not very helpful

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tarachazot 3
the "s" is silent.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

footegirl57 6
Generally, in French, the consonants at the end of the word are silent...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Anastasia.piazzi 3

the program..... of course..... your wife is french???

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

StewartHines 5

I have been study french for years and it it is both, it will show where you are from.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Frenchexpand 5

in my class we also learned that the ending consonant is 'typically' silent unless it precedes a vowel so this is different here from what I learned~

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Raam09 3

your wife is correct

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

carmelamarion 5

S is silent

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hosszi 8

yes, the "s" shouldn't be pronounced here, that's a mistake, when there is after plus, a word starting with a vowel, the "s" will be pronounced "z" not "s", only when plus means +, the "s" could be pronounced!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GinoLisa 3

Your wife is always right. ALWAYS.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hutchisonw 2 2

ya I think ur wife is right ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago vinicius14 6 3

usually the S is silent, but i think in this case we must pronounce the S

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bctpaul 8

I've always pronounced it without the 's'

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

martitagm99 7
the program says the "s" to make it easy

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

crazyhippo567 9
you are right you use the s

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jmaj315 2
If you were to say "A plus" you would pronounce the s. But in "A plus tard" the s is silent.

My french professor (who moved to US at the age of 35 only 5 or so years ago) was telling the class about this one day. :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

avmartin 6 2
the "s" is silent

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rubyk101 6
The "s" is silent in the plus. It is pronounced "ah ploo tar". Here's a helpful link:
<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SDwgMgnIbmM>

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

KatherineEdwards 12 1
no S sound

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

osvvo 14 11 7 6 4
Do say the "s" when the next word starts in a vowel. Don't say the "s" when the next word starts in a consonant.

PD: When the word starts in a consonant but the first sound is like a vowel (like in "enfants"), do say the final "s".

Plus tard (do say "plutar") Plus enfants (do say "plus-an-fan")

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ClarkWool 15 10 7 4
It should not be pronounced. Here's a thorough explanation:

<http://french.about.com/library/weekly/aa101300v.htm>

In the phrase "à plus tard", it acts as a comparative adverb in the middle of a phrase, and thus the "s" is not pronounced.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bree_Cupcake02 6
the s is actually silent

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]
A PLEEUS TARD DO NOT SAY PLUS SAY PLEEUS

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Portady 3
the s is indeed silent.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tantsurin 8 4
I had the same question!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bosam15 5
I learn french, you don't pronounce the 's' in most words, just how in most instances you don't pronounce 'ent'

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

...Peetz... 10
the "s" is silent but computer programs always try to pronounce all the letters. Your wife knows what she's talking about

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ihart 4
the s is silent

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

grace8251 3
dear somethingheroic...your wife is right...i am 101% sure.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

frencherinfinity 6
I think your wife is correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LucianAlex001 2

Well you pronounce the 's' at the end but the other words that end in 's' it's silent. This what my teacher told me! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MGoscinski 6 5

Consonants are only pronounced if a vowel comes after them. Your wife is right.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MrHazard 19 19 6 3

A précis of this thread: This thread intrigues me. For those setting out to read it all, you will not find a definitive answer. I'm responding to the original question (Á plus tard? My wife says" etc.). Native speakers disagree on this one, so the rest of us might struggle a bit. Here's what the thread breaks down to:

1) The standard response: The liaison (pronounced "s") in the program is wrong. It doesn't follow a vowel, so don't pronounce it. Therefore it should sound like "plutard." If, of course, a vowel followed ("plus intéressant"), the "s" would be pronounced.

2) It's regional. Some do, some don't.

3) It's winsome. Pronounce it when you want to emphasize or accent what you are saying, or when the statement is "positive" (the latter term is from a poster). Therefore in a phrase like "Je veux plus," use the "s." Don't when it's negative ("Je ne le veux plus" - no "s.").

One commenter posted a good link that breaks it down well:

<http://french.about.com/library/weekly/aa101300v.htm> This link talks about positive and negative adverbs. The vowel/not vowel rule (see #1 above) is not valid in this explanation.

5) Other posts are humorous responses ("Your wife is always right, the software has trouble with this stuff, etc.) or do not address the original question.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jo-AnneYuskin 14

Do not pronounce the "s".

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MrHazard 19 19 6 3

Dans n'importe quelle circonstance? Désolé, cela a tort. Dans cet exemple particulier?

There are good arguments for both sides. And (depending upon the situation) I suspect both are right. However, if you follow the link in my post (copied from another post), it makes a good argument for not pronouncing the "s" if it's a comparative adverb, which this example is. The linked page lists this as "an exception."

Also, of course, as a Quebec poster noted, regional differences come into play here. I'm Canadian, so I am interested in Quebecois accents and usage. Some people from France look down on the Quebec accent and believe certain idioms and language usage is "wrong." They are not; they are local idioms and totally legit.

Je ne sais pas avec certitude, mais l'utilisation du "s" ne peut pas être aussi catégorique que vous suggérez.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LonaAbla 5
Your Wife Is Right sir ! lol

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AbbyWhite1415 6
your wife

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

girlatmidnight 6 5
Is your wife French? Does she know French? Because (No offense) if she doesn't, Duolingo probably uses the correct pronunciation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

vivielle01 6
According to my french teachers and most french speakers I have heard, the "s" is silent in "a plus tard." My current french teacher even warned our class that the program pronounces the "s" and most french speakers do not.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Akashkaushik 2
listen to your heart,listen to your mind..and then do what your wife says

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jimbobrown 4 4 2
Yes the program is wrong . The "s" is silent it is pronounced "a plu tar" but it's written "a plus tard".

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MichN15 7 5 2
the "s" is not pronounced

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

captain_bubbles 3
you do not pronounce the last letter of any word, so your wife is correct

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MrHazard 19 19 6 3

Fils, je veut plus, saillir, etc. etc etc. etc. On prononce certainement la dernière lettre d'un certain nombre de mots.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Faranae 25 12 7 9

Well, actually, it depends on which dialect you're dealing with. In Quebec, the "s" is never pronounced in "a plus tard", and there must always be the "tard" (you can't drop it like in France apparently). I nearly had to restart this lesson because of dialect differences!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Avika 2

the program pronounces it to tell you it is there

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

226 sind, bist, seid`

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7135103>

GeorgianaL15 3 2

differences between them? D:

Give Lingot

112 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

HappyEvilSlosh 25 23 21 20 13 11 10 9 8 7 4 2 2 5

It's similar to the difference between am, are, and is in English. All different forms of to be sein that change depending on the pronoun or noun.

I am ich bin

you (singular) are du bist

he is er ist, she is sie ist, it is es ist

we are wir sind

you (plural) are ihr seid

they are sie sind

you (polite) are Sie sind

19ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

LisandraBa6 8

Thank you for the amazing example of am, is, and are.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Steph5558 16

Is it correct to say "Man seid" or should it be "Man sein"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

HappyEvilSlosh 25 23 21 20 13 11 10 9 8 7 4 2 2 5
I don't think so, always man ist.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

donmac34 18 11 9 4

All verbs are "conjugated", which means they change depending on the number and person- first, second, third. Have a look at this for the German verb to be (sein) and for the verb to have (haben).

<http://german.about.com/library/verbs/blverb01.htm>

<http://german.about.com/library/verbs/blverb02.htm> It is unfortunate that in most Romance languages the first verbs ones learns are irregular.

Keep going. It comes with time. Good luck.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

thenoblesunfish 25 21 12 11 11 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 2

To be pedantic, German is not a Romance language; it's a Germanic language, like English (though English is heavily influenced by Norman French, a Romance language!). Your point about common verbs being irregular in many languages still holds, though.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

donmac34 18 11 9 4

You are of course correct. Mea culpa.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

227 Tricks for remembering the gender in German

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2054093>

Cuiki 10

Memorizing the gender of countless German nouns can be pretty frustrating. Do you have any tips or tricks to make the whole learning process a bit easier?

What I like to do is to make associations - I use a different person/group of people to represent each of the 3 genders, and connect the nouns with these people respectively.

So, for feminine nouns I'd use someone feminine or girly (a Japanese girl, Powerpuff Girls etc.), for masculine someone manly (Mr T, Chuck Norris), and for neuter nouns... I'm not sure. Maybe a transvestite/drag queen, if that's not too rude?

Below are a few boring examples of how this thing looks like in practice, but you can provide your own (more interesting) ones. The funnier they are, the more likely they are to stick in your mind.

der Tisch (table) - Mr T sawing a table; der Rock (skirt) - Mr T wearing a skirt; die Katze (cat) - a Japanese girl playing with a cat (or wearing cat ears); das Pferd (horse) - a drag queen riding a horse

Hope you have fun!

Give Lingot
143 years ago

Leave a new comment
36 Comments

OldSpiceGuy 25 25 13 5 4
You're welcome. Alt text

29ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

pont 25 23 18 16 9 5 103
It's a two-for-one mnemonic -- Mr T is in drag and holding a rubber chicken, which will remind me that "Gummihuhn" is neuter!

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ptangen 6
I was told that anything made by man is usually neuter or masculine and something which gives life is feminine i.e ? Der Tisch made by man Die Milch gives life and sustenance.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

J.DavidCR 14 7 3 3
hahahahaha

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pont 25 23 18 16 9 5 103
The "silly images" technique is powerful, but I discovered that it got unwieldy once I was learning more than one language, since the genders won't necessarily match. Should you wish to learn French and Italian, you'll have to make sure that Mr T is sawing his table at the Brandenburg Gate, while a Japanese girl is sawing another one at the Arc de Triomphe :-), and both of them are sawing a table at the Colosseum! It might simplify matters to make all your mental "actors" German, just in case you need to learn some other genders for the same things later.

These days, for German, I just try to learn the article as part of the word -- I don't learn "Tisch", I learn "der Tisch".

16ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

rrlear 25 20 13 8 1112
I agree with pont - the images and the memory palace approach works well in some situations but can be awkward. It seems to me that it is better to be able to respond quickly without having to ponder the images. So I too remember "der Tisch" pretty much as one word/phrase rather than trying to associate Tisch with masculine. And too, I try to remember "den Tisch", etc. as phrases.

That said, I do remember that nouns ending in "-e", "-ung", and "-keit", etc tend to be feminine. Except when they're not.

I must say though, that Mr. T in a skirt is an image that is going to remain with me for a long time!

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 686
Except when they're not

Hahaha ! Way to confuse people ! I like the way you put it !

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

caselthor 15 13 11 11 8 4
I'm pretty sure -ung, -heit, and -keit are always feminine. -e definitely has its exceptions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Cuiki 10
That's a really good point, thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

roandbehold 10 8 6 4
I use a mixture of learning the article with the word, and just to strengthen that I use the silly images as well. I use Arnie (I know he's Austrian, but same language) for masculine, my female German teacher I had in primary school for feminine, and for neuter I use both of them together.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Marie_So 13 10 6
I am using another trick. When writing down new words, I am using three different colors. Blue for masculine, red for feminine and green for neuter nouns.
I always associate a noun with one color.

I am aware that it is not for everyone. This only works because I remember things visually. Anyways in my practical experience, it really helps. and I hope it will help some of you.

15ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

V_Gabor 15 11 7
That's my way too. Exactly the same coloring scheme.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GuyMiddlet 13
And my same colour scheme too :) I have not been able to find any dictionaries or language apps with this type of colouring. Does anyone know of any?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

richardchyan 12 7 6 3
Here are some tips:

things ending in -heit, -keit, -schaft, -ung-, and -ei are feminine. Like die Zeitung, die Baeckeri, die Gewerkschaft, die Sehenswuerdigkeit. Also in my experience, most words ending in an "e" will be feminine. Not all, but if you had no idea and had to guess I'd say it's a good chance it's feminine.

words ending in -ich, -ig-, and -ling are masculine like der Teppich, der Essig, der Frueling (all seasons are masculine) and lots of words that start with "Ge" tend to be neuter like das Geschenk (the present, present as in gift not time frame lol), das Geschirr (the dishes), das Getreide (the crop).

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Nerdator 25 18 11 11 9 7 6 5 2

Diminutive suffixes -lein and -chen always mean that the noun is neuter.

ge- is tricky, and there are tonnes of masculine nouns with this prefix, like Geruch or Geschmack.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

schwarzer_peter 9 6 6 19

One trick I learned for German die See (Sea) and der See (Lake) is that you can more easily drown (die) in the sea as it is bigger than a lake and there are waves.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AliceMarie 19

There are some general classes of things that always have the same gender:

Masculine:

male humans and animals (der Mann, der Bock); seasons, months, days of the week (der Sommer, der Januar, der Montag); winds, weather, points of the compass (der Schnee, der Norden); rocks, minerals (der Granit, der Diamant); alcoholic and plant-based drinks (der Gin, der Kakao); makes of car (der BMW, der Audi); rivers outside Germany (der Ganges, der Nil); monetary units (der Euro, der Dollar); mountains, mountain ranges (der Brocken, der Spessart)

Feminine

female humans and animals (die Frau, die Henne); airplanes, motor-bikes, ships (die Boeing, die "Bismark"); rivers inside Germany (die Weser, die Donau); names of numerals (die eins, die Milliard)

Neuter

young humans and animals (das Baby, das Lamm); metals, chemicals, scientific units (das Gold, das Aspirin, das Volt); letters of the alphabet, musical notes (Das A, das hohe C); other parts of speech used as nouns (das Aber, das modern Deutsch); hotels, cafes, restaurants, cinemas (das "Hilton"); continents, countries, towns (das alte Europa, das neue Polen, das geteilte Berlin)

All of the above from Hammer's German Grammar and Usage. There are some exceptions (aren't there always?) but it is a nice list that can help you figure things out by category.

8ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

AlmogL 25 20 10

Thanks for this, that's very helpful! Just a question, what do you mean by "female animals" being grammatically feminine? As I understand, die Katze is feminine even if it is a male cat, and der Hund is grammatically male no matter the biological sex of the dog, and any horse is das Pferd. Am I wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AliceMarie 19

Hi. I think the reference to male and female animals would be when gender or age is specific. Like rooster (der Hahn, der Gockel), hen (die Henne) or chick (das Küken). Haven't checked them all out, but others might be for bull/cow/calf, stallion/mare/foal etc.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

AlmogL 25 20 10

Ok, thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jason.chum 8

For common nouns like "der Tisch" or "der Spiegel", I stick post-its around my apartment with the names and articles on it.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 118

Just like Matthew from Babbel!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

themangeorge 14 11 8 7 6 5

I just simply picture the noun itself being either very masculine feminine or inanimate. For example der tisch in my mind becomes a very aggressive table with giant biceps and a die katze is a cat with makeup on.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

DalekTechSupport 9

I kind of accidentally stumbled across a trick that ended up working quite well for me. I started putting all of my nouns into an Excel spreadsheet with a column for gender. Once I put a gender (m/f/n) in the column for a word, the next column will automatically show the correct article (der/die/das) and conditional formatting colours the row either blue (masc), pinkish (fem), or gray (neut).

Originally it was just meant to be a way to quickly distinguish genders for a word... but I ended up finding myself recalling the colours of words in the table when trying to recall the gender even though I hadn't made any intentional effort to memorize or associate the colours with the words.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

roandbehold 10 8 6 4

That is actually an awesome idea. Not only does it incorporate a great way of reviewing words and their genders, but it also incorporates my love of Excel! Thank you for the idea!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Athenicuber 8 6

or picture "Hello Kitty".

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

J.DavidCR 14 7 3 3

Well, in my case, as I am a native spanish speaker, I associate the german genders to the spanish ones, so I just need to remember those that does not match up, and the picture of a funny character is really good in these cases. For neuter I always think about a monkey smoking cigarrete while doing something with relating object... The more bizarre the picture, the easier I can remember the gender of the noun.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Aliceby 12 9

Hello, I try to think of my brain and my memory as a big box with many drawers. For learning german this is very helpful because I dedicated three different drawers to nouns. Whenever I learn a new noun, I force myself to "store it" in the right imaginary drawer. On the left I put all masculine nouns, in the middle are feminine nouns and on the right are neuter nouns (Der -Die - Das, in the natural order I would say it). To store a word I also look in the appropriate direction. I feel like it helps me to get an "intinct" for nouns. It is a good help in addition to all the "rules" mentioned by other people here.

Good luck!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

nateVONGreat 22 4 3 2 2 2

that is what I do too.

great stuff

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

IndiePotato 25 9 9 4 3 2 2

Any noun ending with "ung" (such as "Meinung" Opinion) is always feminine and many nouns ending in "e" are feminine as well. Another trend is that if that noun ends with "er" it's most likely going to be masculine.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rostellan 22 18 14 207

That's interesting! When learning French, I remember learning that words ending with "ion" are feminine. I've also tried that out with German "ion" word-endings and found them to be feminine too.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

pmm123 25 25 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 13 12 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 1112

Learning the gender of German nouns, along with the array of articles and determiners for the different cases, is a challenge for me. Not quite as challenging as German word order, but close! I am trying to learn the article and the plural form when I learn the noun, but I end up consulting a dictionary a lot.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mxylery 9 6

thx i love you, so much stress put away xd

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Mxylery 9 6

does it work all the time?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

228 "The apples are red."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/313274>

Translation: Les pommes sont rouges.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

13 Comments

siebolt 22 21 16 15 7

"The apples are red" means all the apples we are talking about are red. >> "Les pommes sont rouges." "Des pommes sont rouges" is not a good phrase, but for sake of argument: it means "some of the apples are red." Let's invent a new context: "I have the red apples and not the green ones." >> "J'ai les pommes rouges et pas les verts." OR "I took some red apples" >> "j'ai pris des pommes rouges."

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DrewDdmek 18 8 7 6 2 2 2

Difference between sont and sommes?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nbigman 12

Nous sommes - we are, ils/elles sont - they are

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

kjsin1994 9 8 4 2

Are there instances where a plural object does NOT have a plural descriptor? rouge vs rouges

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ArmorUp 11

Wow. I had the whole sentence correct. Except the part where the color needed to be plural also???? Why? I typed rouge at the end, and not rouges. Why?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ethanatkinson19 12

They tried to trick me in this sentence. But I managed to put the s at the end o rouge. Normally, s is not at the end of rouge.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

elalbertson 8

I'm still having such a hard time with "des." Why can't this be des pommes? I thought that des was the conjugation of "de la" and since pommes is feminine I thought that would be des.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dbarrie 10

Des is a conjugation of de-les not de la because the noun is plural, so des roughly translates to 'some of the' or more so 'some' - where les is just 'the'.

since THE is LA, LE or LES so in this case LES, this sentence is talking about specific apples, so if it were more specific 'the apples (over there) are red' you use THE (les) apples are red.

if you were talking about apples in general, or no specific ones you would say 'apples are red', or 'some apples are red', since those statements are talking about a non specific set of apples you use DES.

Les pommes sont rouges = THE apples are red Des pommes sont rouges = apples are red -or- (some) apples are red

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RyanTheBassGuy 10

I missed this une

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tlo0616 6

Im with you armor up, never descriptive word plural, why?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Tommy531Jed 7 6 2

So all words should plural right?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

claudine751880 8

Why are apples masculin ? Les and not las?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

229 I finished the Tree...

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2144618>

ccocdr 16 7 5

...and now it's time for the real work to begin. I am grateful for this terrific, free learning tool.

Give Lingot55

1793 years ago

Leave a new comment

121 Comments

Roger_Burke 24 8

This reminds me of a shaggy dog story often told in Vietnam. I will tell the short version, but the real fun was making the story so long that the listener gets impatient. Anyhow, a North Vietnamese soldier was given a mortar round and a bicycle and told to take the round to his brothers in the south. For six months the man fought tropical rain, US B52 strikes, Special forces teams, tigers, poisonous snakes and spiders, local dogs, malaria and dengue fever. Finally at the end the six months the all but broken soldier, a bag of bones, covered in scars and bleeding finally gets to the end of the Ho Chi Minh trail and hands the mortar round to his southern comrade. The comrade promptly fires the round at an American base camp and then turns to the soldier and says, "Go back and get another one." So you have finished the tree, it is time to start over and embed the knowledge a little deeper.

36ReplyGive Lingot3•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Congratulations!!! Do you plan to test your knowledge by finishing the reverse course? :D

22ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5

Thanks. That sounds like a good idea.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@ccocdr Buena suerte!

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wwang.1 11

How well do you feel that you have mastered the language after you finished the tree, if I may ask?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5

I don't feel as if I have mastered the language; for me, it's more like I have seen the schematics of the language and I can now use this knowledge to build something real with further study.

But don't be discouraged, I engage native speakers in real conversation nearly every day at my current level. It's rarely perfect, but I learn every time and am encouraged by everyone's patience. It seems that most people are pleased by your efforts to learn their language.

Best wishes...

15ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Wisecookiesheet 16 8

I'm just about to finish tomorrow (and also reach level 15 at the same time), so I want to add my input! I don't feel like I've mastered the language, but it's like a puzzle - I've finally examined at all the pieces, now I can really see how the picture comes together. All the pieces are laid out in front of you and it's no longer a wood chip pile. You have the border put together, now it's time to fill in the rest.

I plan to continue studying and reviewing the Spanish tree while working on immersion at home, and maybe next week start the reverse course.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Biberin 14 7

This is a really great description! Can someone please tell me how to find the reverse tree? I've been poking around but I don't see it. Not that it's doing me any harm to repeat all the crazy verb tenses at the bottom of the regular tree!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Hi Biberin,

I posted a screen shot below of the icon on the home page that allows you to see the drop down list of language courses (Both for Phase 2 and Phase 3 courses.) If the course you are looking for exists in either of those two Phases, then it will be on the list. I know the English for Spanish speakers course is up there. It is written in Spanish. If there is an English for German speakers course, it will be written in German. (I think there is one.)

Alt text

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

PS Don't forget, you can go up to as high as level 25 in a language. It takes 30,000 points total. (Though, you can continue to gain more points after that, your level doesn't increase at this time.)

I really plan to max things out. I want level 25 in my initial tree, I want to then take the reverse course (not necessarily to level 25), then ladder to another language course from Spanish. :D (crosses fingers for Japanese for Spanish speakers).

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
@Wisecookiesheet,

However, I did wait until I finished my tree. Well, I tried to start on the reverse tree before then, but, after just a few lessons of the Eng for Span speakers, it was surprisingly challenging!

Just note, if you take two courses with the same target language and then reset one of them, it will reset the other course as well. For instance, I am doing Eng for Spanish speakers (Eng is the target language) and Eng for Japanese speakers (again, Eng is the target language). If I delete Eng for Spanish, it will delete my progress in the Eng for Japanese. This is because Duolingo is not teaching me 2 English courses. It is teaching me one English course. If I reset the English course anywhere, it resets it everywhere. I hope that makes sense.

3Give Lingot•3 years ago

Wisecookiesheet 16 8
That's my plan too! Although, not maxing before I start the reverse tree :p I will get to level 25 before I start laddering, which gives me enough time to choose between French or Portuguese...

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
@Wisecookiesheet, I've already started my reverse tree. :)

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

Wisecookiesheet 16 8
Oh I guess I misread, sorry! (I had thought lvl 25 THEN reverse :p)

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

mcclure606 11
I just finished my Spanish tree, and my "Spanish proficiency" is shown as 37 percent. I don't feel that I've mastered Spanish at all, just got a good exposure to the language.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Joeyshere 14 11 10 10 9 4 3 2 2 2
That's an awesome idea. I have never thought about doing that! Thanks!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

bjfritz 23 11 6
what is the 'reverse' course?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 5
Learning English from Spanish

4ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

bjfritz 23 11 6
oh! i am going to ladder from my spanish to italian when its ready! I heard this is great and I am betting it makes it easier not to confuse the two new ones...like all I have to do is hear French in Ecuador and my brain starts crosswiring randomly. Ha!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mouffette 9 6
What's the reverse course?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ash2of6 10 6 5 2
see above

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kristinemc 16 9 7 4 2
¡Felicidades!

15ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

nathansk8s 20 15 12 11
Congrats! I just finished my Germany tree Friday it's an awesome experience. :)

13ReplyGive Lingot5•3 years ago

roodvuur 25
Nice one! Finished myself yesterday, and am having the exact same thoughts. Time for some extensive reading & immersion practice!

6ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

ravalentis 25 7 5
congrats!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ALoUSyUseRnaME 25 25 16 9 5 5 4
Congrats! Here's five lingots!

4ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5
Gracias amigo

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Biberin 14 7
Congratulations! I finished the tree this morning, after testing in at level 11 yesterday. Now I'm trying to figure out how to actually advance levels. Could someone please clue me in? Am I supposed to go back and redo lessons I tested out of? I see people on here with levels up in the 20s, so I know there is more out there if I just figure out how to find it. . .

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mattcolor 25 24 22 16 8 5
You also gain experience by translating articles (under the immersion tab).

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

felipecbehne 9 9 8 4
I believe you should do exactly that. Everytime you complete a lesson (even if already completed) you get XP.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NoahHab 9 2
Great Job!!! You deserve some lingots

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5
Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

alsrs 9
how long does it take to finish the tree? which stage do you think duolingo help you get to after finishig the tree in terms of language learning stages?

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5
I'm certainly not the expert, but I tried to pace myself such that I would not learn more skills than I could reasonably retain at a given time. With that idea in mind, I have probably worked steadily on Duolingo for about a month, about 2 hours a day to complete the tree.

This sounds like (and is) quite a lot of learning in a short amount of time, but I'm a writer, so I have more time than most in front of an all-too-often-blank screen. And to be fair, I have the added advantages of living in México, where I can practice with native speakers quite often, and I did pick up some Spanish throughout my time in the Army to augment the 3 years I had taken in high school (German was my language in college).

Having said all that, I think I can write and read at a high intermediate level, with a slightly lower speaking ability.

I hope this helps! I should note that Duolingo is by far the best language learning resource I have used, including the "big box" language software used by the Army and many other corporations.

Saludos,

Shane

21ReplyGive Lingot3•3 years ago

alsrs 9

thank you so much. your explonation is far beyond what i expected and i get what excatly i am looking for from your reply. and also i agree with you; duolingo is the best of all i have ever seen. thanks again:D

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Talca 25 13

Thank you for your service to the country, Shane. Congrats on your tree completion. No doubt you'll be staying on broad with DL to keep practicing from time to time.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5

You're very kind; thank you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

stingerbee12 3

That's fantastic! I'm really proud of you! It probably feels really good. So are you going to work on Portuguese now? Or perhaps immersing yourself with Spanish with the articles.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5

Thank you, and you're right: it feels great. Spanish will remain the focus, and I think spending much more time with immersion is the next step for me. Best wishes.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AbraxunsIllusion 25 6 5 5 5 4

Hooray! ;-D

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PattiSh 20 8 7 2

Congratulations! Your quick climb up the tree has been an inspiration. Thanks for showing off your lovely trophy.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kayasam 4
Congrats!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

alcatelo 9
awesome... i want to have this too... :)

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ElOtroMiqui 14 13 11 8 7 3 2 2 2
¡Felicitaciones! Espero que continúes aprendiendo Español :D

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

djbobhut 6
nice dude

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

SD-77 22 16 15 15 15 14 11 9 8 8 7 6 5 4 24
¡Wow, lo has logrado muy, muy rápidamente!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

drchall 8
I finished planting MY trees the other day. 6 oaks that should sprout in the next year or so. Very excited!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Julie_B 15 5 5
WOW!! You must have been busy! Another lingot for your collection.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mirriel 22 13 6
Congratulations :)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Noe010101 25 16 12 12 10
Good job! Have a lingot... or a few;)

1ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

AnkushDeshmukh 17 16 14 9 8 2 30

it seems Noe010101 is one of the most generous people on our duolingo community! gave me lingots as well! time to give you one too! ;) :D

4ReplyGive Lingot6•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5

Aww...thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Jsprwstr 25 24 20 19 17 16 11 9 6 6 4 4 3 97

I like your attitude :)!

1ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

Atanalo 9 7 5 3

Congrats :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

juliestarling 23 23 20 10

Congrats! That is awesome! Way to Go!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Kedrick_S 6

Great job! that is really awesome!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

aemann 14

Congratulations. I get how you must feel--five months so far and about three weeks to go to complete my tree.

1ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

bjfritz 23 11 6

wow! you deserve a lingot!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

HankyulPar 6 3

congratulations on your dedication and hard work.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MeryVan
Spagnolo

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GulNev 5
This free course is worth every praise! Thank you for giving me the confidence to carry on.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

frannythegranny 12 5
I'm so jealous! congrats

1ReplyGive Lingot50•3 years ago

zbdbz 20 9
Kudos, amigo!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

reptile_boy 3
good job

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Dr.Beez 23 12 5 5
Congratulations! I'm sitting at "Verbs Modal" right now and have been for several days. I don't want to push into those last few verb conjugations until I have a solid grasp on the ones already covered. I'm also spending more time in Immersion to boost my basic vocabulary, because the end of the tree only brings you up to something like 2,000 words.

Oh, and I envy your TRUE immersion, living in Mexico. I have roughly the same time resources that you do, but not nearly as much opportunity for conversation with native speakers.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hilery 21
Fantastic! Some advice please: I am very confused about how Duolingo works. I have completed all the lessons in level 15 but cannot move on to 16. Is there an explanation as to how it works, what ingots are, how to navigate through? I agree with everybody - Duolingo is a wonderful resource, but I do get cross when it says I'm wrong when I use English rather than American! Well done, again, and thanks for sharing (you see, even though I'm British I can 'do' American).

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FLchick 25 19 13 9 5 3 2 438
@hilery If you look at the bottom of this page you'll see the word Help in tiny print. Open that up and scroll down to the section What Are Skill Points and Levels. Then go to your Home Page and just above the top of the tree nestled between Spanish Skills and Spanish Progress is the Lingot Store.

Open up the Lingot Store and scroll to the bottom for an explanation of what they are and how to earn them. Best of luck with your studies.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hilery 21
Brilliant. Many thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12
You can fix the image by typing

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5
Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bjfritz 23 11 6
Yipee! That is such a great feeling como no?

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Roger_Burke 24 8
Increible y mas profundo.

1ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5
Sí, es la verdad

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Ryzll 11 11 10 2
congratulations! i can't wait until i finish mine too. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

AureliaUK 25 25 21 12 12 11 3
Well done! Have fun getting stuck into the Immersion section - those already there seem to find a wide variety of interesting material for themselves and others to have a go at.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

AnkushDeshmukh 17 16 14 9 8 2 30
duolingo's success is so evident here that not only did you finish the spanish tree but you're already on your way to finish the portuguese tree as well! great job, to you and to duolingo! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Lyaly 11 4 2
das ist voll

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

loofoo 25 12 11 7 7 7 3 2 2 2 2 169
Bien hecho! ahora, a practicar!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ScavengerRey 11 8 4 2
Well done amigo/a!:D

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

-C1- 24 4 4
Muy bien!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2
Congratulations! Now what is the next language?

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5
Thanks. I think I'll stick with Spanish and try more Immersion.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2
And you started Portuguese also! I love duolingo for the learning, but I think busuu is more fun for advanced levels because you write and you get corrected with scores.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5
Thanks for the tip; I'll check it out.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

AndjelaBoskovic 10 8 2
congratulations! :) That's so cool,I hope that I will finish it soon too.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ms.mm 25 14 3 2 2
congratulations! Well done! Will there be a party?

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ccocdr 16 7 5

There's always a party :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bjfritz 23 11 6

hey! that little trophy is new! cool! i looked and i have one too. Congrats again....

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

huntsteven 6 6 2 2 2

Holy, I'm only like 40% through the German tree and I'm already level 12. Guess I'm slower on the uptake, haha.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ALoUSyUseRnaME 25 25 16 9 5 5 4

Oh, I have the same feeling as you, I'm level 12, and, I have 35+ more skills to go...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

abluepearl 23 22 18 67

awesome.Congratulations!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mariemascio 15

congrats! an achievement. I hope to be there someday!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BobbieL 24 8 2

Well done!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ekfto456 14 7

wow,,,,,,, i think you worked really hard, it was like month ago i saw you were level 9..,,, ! amazing.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lafemmecreatrix 14 11 5

¡Felicidades! ¡El futuro es tuyo!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TheQueen_Gee 8 7

Congrats! How many levels are actually on this tree?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Biberin 14 7

Levels aren't really connected to the tree. You get experience points, which lead to levels, from either working on the tree or doing translation. People seem to finish the tree at all sorts of different levels.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Conqueror_Elmo 16 2

Awesome man! Good job

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

edwintf 10 8

Felicitaciones, sigue asi!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

OwlIsla 6

Good for you! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Qubbiq 12

Wonderful! Congratulations :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Kennethswim 8

cool man

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CanyonBluffs 23 14 8 6 3 3 2

Y yo do gracias por usted. A causa de lo que ha logrado, el mundo es un poco mejor.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Chen_Ruby 7

Good to know! It encourages me to do the same. Can't wait to feel it! Wish you all the best to the next step! =)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AlexLuna11 12 5

Felicidades!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dreamy22 10 8 6 2

Wow!!! Congratulations! Does "real world articles" mean that the translations will be used out of Duolingo, too? Or will these translations still stay within Duolingo for learning? Take care and have a nice day all of you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FLchick 25 19 13 9 5 3 2 438

Congratulations on your achievement. I think I just finished the tree but I have no certificate. Did you have all skills in yellow? Right now I have several that need strengthening. What have I done wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Qubbiq 12

I expect you need to have all of your skills in yellow and completed before you get the bells and whistles of completion. :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FLchick 25 19 13 9 5 3 2 438

Thank you. When I got close to the end of the tree I didn't it want it to be over. I'm far from proficient and really need to study a lot. I plan to keep up with it. Best of luck in your studies.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Qubbiq 12

Thank you, and you too! (It's never over! hee)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FLchick 25 19 13 9 5 3 2 438

Well, last night I had everything in yellow and still got bupkis. Still no certificate. But I'm not discouraged.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

IAmLifeOfChrist

Yes boys, finally finished this tree mate gonna go celebrate at nandos with the lads #LifeOfChrist

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FLchick 25 19 13 9 5 3 2 438

Congrats!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Viocube 11 10 6 5 5 3

Hello. Congratulations! May I ask whence you viewed your certificate as I've also finished the Tree in French? Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alex-sander45 15 11 7 5 2
Felicidades :-D

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Abrilita723 14 11 6 6 6 4 3 3 2 2

Question... I finished the Spanish tree and want to do the reverse tree (while of course continuing to review Spanish). Will that delete my current progress in Spanish??

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

230 "The dog is ours."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3577917>

Translation: El perro es nuestro.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

32 Comments

babybee28 2 years ago

Difference between nuestro and nuestros?

15ReplyGive Lingot

AndrewFowl1 2 years ago

The plurality of the subject, not the owners.

You can remember this because "our" (nuestro/nuestros) always refers to plural owners, and since nuestro is singular, the suffix must refer to the subject. The gender of the suffix also needs to match the subject, not the owners.

40ReplyGive Lingot

boysintheband 2 years ago

Big help, thanks

2ReplyGive Lingot

ShaeR2015 11 months ago

No difference at all between nuestro and nuestros

-1ReplyGive Lingot

rspreng 11 months ago

There certainly is! It depends on the number of dogs.

1ReplyGive Lingot

wjeremy 2 years ago

Why couldn't I say nuestra?

4ReplyGive Lingot

LittleWing1 2 years ago

@wjeremy - Why couldn't I say nuestra?

Hola wjeremy. I used nuestra in my answer as well. AndrewFowl1 explains in his comments that the possessive adjective "ours" is actually describing the subject of the sentence "male dog". Therefore the gender and count of the possessive adjective and subject must agree.

Because the sentence is constructed using the simple present tense in the declarative mood, the adjective describing the subject is on the other side of the verb (instead of being next to the noun it is describing).

It's easy for native English speakers like me to think that the possessive adjective is describing the owners. In my case, I thought to myself, well the gender of the owners is unknown and arbitrary so I'll just pretend it's me and my wife. Wrong!

So remember, in this skill set level, the exercise examples are mainly in the form of simple present tense in the declarative mood. That being the case then gives us the following possibilities:

El perro es nuestro.

La perra es nuestra.

Los perros son nuestros.

Las perras son nuestras.

In the last 3 cases you can even see a pattern. The "a" from "La" determines the last letter "a" of "nuestra".

The last two letters "os" of "Los" match the last two letters of "nuestros"

Finally "as" of "Las" are repeated in "nuestras".

Let's see if that helps.

13ReplyGive Lingot
baby-pie 1 year ago
Awesome answer. Thanks! Or gracias :)

0ReplyGive Lingot
JimmieMcge 2 years ago
Why can't I say "el perro es nuestros"? Do we have to be talking about more than one dog I'm guessing?

"Los perros son nuestros"?

2ReplyGive Lingot
anaiyah202012 2 years ago
You are right on both cases the first one is singular "the dog is ours" the second one would be plural "the dogs are ours". As I stated you are correct on both statements:)

3ReplyGive Lingot
IkeyDergon 2 years ago

I think Nuestro is used for 1 object and Nuestros would be for more than 1; "Nuestro perro"
"Nuestros perros"

2ReplyGive Lingot

thedirtymic 2 years ago

Why did I have to say "de nosotros" of ours? El perro es nosotros seems right to me

2ReplyGive Lingot

LittleWing1 2 years ago

@thedirtymic - Why did I have to say "de nosotros" of our? El perro es nosotros seems right to me.

Hola dirty. I'm not sure what the first part of your question refers to. But I can explain why the second part, "El perro es nosotros.", is wrong.

This sentence is a simple present tense statement made in the declarative mood. In this case "nosotros" is a possessive adjective that is describing the subject noun. In Spanish, adjectives must agree in gender and count with the nouns that they describe.

"Perro" is masculine singular.

"Nosotros" is masculine plural.

2ReplyGive Lingot

trenty22 2 years ago

Since it is one dog, we use (nuestro); if more than one dog then it is (nuestros) or (nuestras), depending on our gender. I guess.

1ReplyGive Lingot

AndrewFowl1 2 years ago

No, depending on the dog's gender and number.

3ReplyGive Lingot

ShawnLandr 2 years ago

I used "Nuestro perro". Why is that incorrect?

1ReplyGive Lingot

jea525 2 years ago

Why did I have to include 'de' in my answer 'el perro es de nosotros' why is 'el perro es nosotros' wrong?

1ReplyGive Lingot

GraySeal 2 years ago

How do you know when to use un and when to use el?

0ReplyGive Lingot

AndrewFowl1 2 years ago

"el"/"la" mean "the" and "un"/"una" mean "a"/"an".

El perro = the dog...

Un perro = a dog...

OReplyGive Lingot
fredmnl 2 years ago
We can use "el perro es de nosotras"

OReplyGive Lingot
orangeviolinst 2 years ago
nuestro is our nestros is we I think

OReplyGive Lingot
Bineary 2 years ago
Wouldn't "Es nuestro perro" also be correct? I don't understand why that's considered wrong.

OReplyGive Lingot
JoyXiao 2 years ago
why nuestros doesnt work?

OReplyGive Lingot
ElliotDavis 2 years ago
dis muffker sucks balls

OReplyGive Lingot
elfulayh 2 years ago
Nuestra refer to feminine subject, nuestro is mascline

OReplyGive Lingot
mitchellbrinsky 2 years ago
it is stupid

OReplyGive Lingot
espanol321321 1 year ago
deez nuts

OReplyGive Lingot
M.Mclearie 1 year ago
Can anyone tell me why it's wrong to use "sus/ su"?

OReplyGive Lingot
destiny.je2 1 year ago
I used google translate and it said mine was wrong:(

OReplyGive Lingot
SeanO.2 1 month ago
Why do I get this wrong

OReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

231 "I am going to the bathroom."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/458500>
Translation: Ich gehe zur Toilette.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

63 Comments

paint007 14

Why is it "nach Oesterreich" but "zur Toilette"?

15ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

CraigGirdlestone 13 11 7 5 2

For geographical places you use 'nach' e.g Ich fahre nach Berlin/Österreich. But to... locations (bathroom, house, cinema, trainstation etc etc) you use zu and a contraction. it's 'die Toilette' which becomes der Toilette in the dativ case and it's 'to the toilet' or 'zu der Toilette' and the zu der becomes zur.

Das Badezimmer - Ich gehe zu dem Badezimmer becomes Ich gehe zum Badezimmer.

123ReplyGive Lingot7•3 years ago

Bob20020 23 19 11 7 37

Or zum

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MuHegazy 11 2

i used zum and it didn't work !

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ChakibBenz 10

Yeah I used zum also and didn't work, anyone care to explain ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

araruney 14 13 8 7 6 6 3 2 2 2 2 2

Zum = Zu dem,dem would imply Masculine Dative noun,Toilette is feminine,therefore it's 'der',so it's zu+der=zur

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alek_bn 13

In this example: "I am going to the bathroom.", the translation is: Ich gehe zuR Toilette. (CraigGirdlestone explained it pretty well in the comment above).

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BBOutlaw 11 8

Ich gehe ins Badezimmer. For the question wohin can answer in + Akkusativ... Program didn't accept. :/

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

senakos 12 12 10
You are totally right

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wizwisdom 19 16 13 11 11 11 10 9 9 7 7 2
Or something like ~Ich gehe ins Kino~

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ErnoAlberts 10
I am pretty sure that "auf die Toilette gehen" is also correct

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

YOK1 9 5
That's what I think too. So in this case, "ich gehe auf die Toilette". Correct?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

thamboo 14
I don't know whether 'auf' can be used here, but 'auf' brings dative case and bathroom moves to 'der Toilette' according to case tables, experts comments are welcome

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 6
I don't know if it replaces bathroom or if it is more specific. <http://dictionary.reverso.net/german-english/gehe%20auf%20die%20toilette>

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Saulo_Rafael 15 10
Can someone explain me the difference between Zur, Zum and Zu?

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lasanyaface 12
Zur = zu der = to the / Zum = zu dem = to the / Zu = to

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CraigGirdlestone 13 11 7 5 2
Why can't I have "Ich gehe zum Badezimmer"? I understand that "bathroom" can be used to mean toilet but why not say "I am going to the toilet" if the only accepted translation is "Ich gehe zur Toilette". Should my answer be accepted?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Europaen 16 14 10 7 7 5

This answer is accepted.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DiffyKlaus 10

I tried "Ich gehe zum Bad" and it was incorrect. I don't understand why it's incorrect as compared to "Ich gehe zum Badezimmer."

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DorotaJarosz 11 11 11 10 2

It is now accepted.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kaurwn.regn 16

Because "das bad" refers specifically to the bath itself, not to the bathroom. At least, that is my understanding.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

HelcioTJ 25 1160

It seems "das Bad" could mean both "bath" and "bathroom".

<http://www.dict.cc/?s=bad>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

the1214 9 8 2

Why the answer "ich gehe in die Toilette" is incorrect? but the answer "ich gehe ins Bad" is correct?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pic 5

Why 'Ich gehe IN das Bad' but 'Ich gehe ZUR Toilette'? Is there any rule?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Peelyo 11 2

I am going in the bath - I am going to the bathroom

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Anecdotal 9

would you ever use "bin" for "am"? this will be incorrect but like: ich bin zur Toilette gehen

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CraigGirdlestone 13 11 7 5 2

Short answer, no. Long answer, this construction 'am verb+ing' is called the progressive tense. That doesn't exist in German, if you want to convey that you are in fact in the process of going to the toilet you would add a qualifier such as jetzt. It's actually easier than it would seem, once you get over it, (It gave me nightmares for a while and I still make some mistakes now). German doesn't use as many auxiliary verbs as English. Everything in the present literally translates to something that sounds weird in English. I go to the toilet or I walk to the shop or I drive my car. If you are in the process of doing the action you could add 'now'. I go to the toilet now. etc jetzt gehe ich zur Toilette.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

amr.stardu 10 2
Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lirajf 11 7 2
Why do we change "zur" for "zum. I understand that it's because is the dative for "zu dem", but in this case It's not clear to me how to identify that this is a dative form.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CraigGirdlestone 13 11 7 5 2
In this case, it's to do with the gender of 'Toilette'. It's 'die Toilette', which in the dative becomes 'der Toilette'. So it's 'ich gehe zu der Toilette' and we can contract the 'zu' and 'der' to get 'zur'. Much like the dative for 'das Zimmer' is 'dem Zimmer', we can contract 'zu dem' to get 'zum'. It's to do with the gender of the noun.

9ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

martin.becerra 9
I'm sure that it is akkusative case. Ich gehe zu die Toilette. Who is with me, guys?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NikitaKose 20 10 8 9
It looks that "zu" is a dative preposition http://german.about.com/library/blcase_dat2.htm

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

KiraOcc 11 2
Only if you change "die" to "der." Because Toilette is feminine and in the dative case feminine articles end with "r". It accepts "Ich gehe zu der Toilette" I think zur basically means "to the" so you don't have to use the article.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago
[+] 2 hidden comments

DanWillst 14
Is "Ich werde die Toilette" a correct alternate translation?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NataliaPla5 14

What is wrong with "laufe zum WC"? 'WC' isn't used in German? Or 'going' can't mean 'running' in English??

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ErikNM 16 10

Isn't Toilette accusative here? In that case, shouldn't it be 'Ich gehe zu die Toilette'?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Abendbrot 13 12 12 8 3 2

"zu" is a preposition which always forces you to use dative.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rilianxi 20 17 14 13 12 10 8 8 8 6 6 5 249

in means to. "ich gehe ins Kino" and stuff. "ich gehe in die Toilette".

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

senakos 12 12 10

I've been learning German for 11 years but I've never heard "ich gehe zu dem Badezimmer"... I think it is: "Ich gehe in das Badezimmer"

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Pberg70 10 3

Hi. So if "zu" is supposed to be used for places like cinema toilet etc and instead nach for geographical sites cities etc why Germans say "ich gehe nach hause"?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 6

"nach Hause" is an exception, an idiom. <http://german.about.com/library/weekly/aa061900a.htm>
<http://dictionary.reverso.net/german-english/nach>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

emberfly 10 2

Ich gehe ins Badezimmer?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jigeeshu 17

[deleted]

-1Give Lingot•2 years ago

dkhorse 18 8

It has to do with the preposition 'zu'. It is one of a group (aus, ausser, bei, mit, nach, seit, von, and zu) that always select the dative case. There are others (e.g. 'für') that always select accusative, and still others (an, in, auf, etc.) that behave exactly like you described.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 6

Some prepositions require dative. Some prepositions require accusative. Some prepositions take either but change meaning from accusative to dative. "Zu" is one of the prepositions that require "Dative Case". "I am going in the church." would have been accusative. There are verbs that require dative and more verbs that require accusative. There are even a few prepositions and verbs that require Genitive Case. http://german.about.com/library/blcase_dat2.htm

http://german.about.com/library/blcase_dat.htm

http://german.about.com/library/verbs/blverb_dativ.htm

http://german.about.com/library/verbs/blverb_dativ2.htm

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Zrinka1234567 14 1

Can someone explain when to use "zu", "zur" and "zum". What's the difference?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bob690 25 870

Zu = zu (without a following article). If the following article is dem, zu dem is contracted to zum.

Ditto for zur = zu + der.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

emilymyer38 16 6

Why doesn't it need a "the" before bathroom?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HENGzz1997 10

Is "ich gehe zur die Toilette" correct?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jwarr8 11

WC was accepted instead of Toilette, which is cool that Duolingo has this implemented.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RosemaryRain 11 4

Why is it 'zum Bad' or 'zur Toilette' but not 'zur Bad'?? I'm not understanding how zu/zum/zur changes?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

namuu 13

Why not can we use "beim"? ... I written "ich gehe beim Toilette" but it's incorrect!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bob690 25 870

I believe that "Ich gehe auf der Toilette" should be accepted. In the cited reference materials I saw that auf = to is used (preferred) if motion to a public place, e.g., Toilette, is indicated. Why is this interpretation not acceptable?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jackhilger 16 6

First, why doesn't this sentence require "hin"? Second, where would it go if it does?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vbclibon 15 2 7

I put "Ich werde zum Badezimmer." It said it should be gehe instead, why?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

232 where are the lessons?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/376410>

hialmar 10 7

Where are the lessons? grammatical instructions for example? there are only exercises here, but any lesson!

Give Lingot

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

3 Comments

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

For some skills there are grammatical explanations on the skill pages. For the other there are none, but there is plenty of information in the internet that you can use. There is also quite a lot of useful information in discussions. Read the most popular discussions in every skill, look into discussions of every sentence you learn and many questions will be solved right away. The team is working on better grammar introductions and grammar tips in the lessons, but Rome was not built in a day. I can say the grammar explanations are now much better than they were before.

Don't hesitate to make a search if you don't understand something. Here is a great guide with examples for beginners: <http://duolingo.com/#/comment/370405>

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

javax 20 12 9 5 3

Duolingo is a place to learn through exercises. Plus, when you do a mouseover, it appears every word what it means and if you have a doubt you can ask (In every exercise there's a "Discuss Sentence", the people of the community will reply you). Besides, this is a friendly and fun page. Viel Spaß!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

javax 20 12 9 5 3

Also, remember every portion of lessons, make a pause and go to the blue button "Practice skills" like a couple of times and then continue with your lessons.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

233 Difference between qui est-ce qui, qui est-ce que, qu'est-ce qui, and qu'est-ce que?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8184126/Difference-between-qui-est-ce-qui-qui-est-ce-que-qu-est-ce-qui-and-qu-est-ce-que>

mamemame187

The explanation in the notes doesn't make any sense to me. Could someone help me?

Give Lingot

51 year ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

panagiotists13 25 19 17 17 12 12 10 663

Qui est-ce qui? means "Who?", when the answer that you expect is the subject. For example "Qui est-ce qui parle?" (or "Qui parle?")= who speaks? The answer that you expect is "Le professeur parle" (=The teacher speaks). Here the answer that you expect is "le professeur", which is the subject of the sentence, so you have to use qui est-ce qui or qui.

Qui est-ce que? means also "Who?", when the answer that you expect is the object. For example "Qui est-ce que tu invites?" = Who do you invite? The answer that you expect is "J'invite mon cousin" (= I invite my cousin). Here the answer that you expect is "mon cousin", which is the object of the sentence, so you have to use qui est-ce que. (if the next word starts with a vowel "que" becomes "qu' ", but this DOES NOT happen to "qui", which remains "qui")

Qu'est-ce qui? and Que'est-ce que? are the same (the first one is for the subject and the second one is for the object), but you have to use them when you are talking about things, not people!

I hope that this helps. :)

15ReplyGive Lingot6•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

QUI can be an interrogative pronoun representing a human being, as subject or object of an interrogative clause.

a relative pronoun representing any object or person, and subject of the relative clause interrogative or relative, QUI never elides.

QUE can be an interrogative pronoun representing a thing, as subject or object of an interrogative clause

a relative pronoun representing any object or person, and object of the relative clause

a conjunction, to introduce a subordinate clause : je veux QUE tu partes

QUE always elides in front of a vowel sound.
Strictly speaking, with proper grammar:

Qui est-ce QUI ? = [who is it that + Verb] - who does the job? - QUI is SUBJECT of the relative clause:
qui est-ce qui fait le travail ?

Qui est-ce QUE ? = [whom is it that + Subject + Verb] - whom do you invite? - QUE is OBJECT of the relative clause: qui est-ce que tu invites?

Qu'est-ce QUI ? = [what is it that + Verb] - what is wrong? - QUI is SUBJECT of the relative clause:
qu'est-ce qui est faux ?

Qu'est-ce QUE ? = [what is it that Subject Verb]- what are you doing? - QUE is OBJECT of the relative clause: qu'est-ce que tu fais ?

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 686

Very good explanation, but I believe you have a typo : didn't you mean "QUI is OBJECT" in the second line (the one about Qui est-ce QUE)?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

In the above examples, I give the function of the relative pronoun in capital letters.

So "qui est-ce QUE tu invites ?" has QUE object of "invites" (subject = tu).

In all sentences, the first interrogative pronoun (qui or qu') are always subject of "est".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 686

Right. It was the third one that had to be changed then, which you did.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

chihuahuazero 20

This helps me understand "whom" in the English language better. (Darn you ACT test, making me memorize this concept.)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JonMarkOli 13

Shouldn't the illustration for the item "Qu'est-ce QUI ?" read "QUI is SUBJECT of the relative clause: qu'est-ce qui est faux ?"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

That's right, edited, thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

234 "The car keys are on the table."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1990138>

Translation: Las llaves del coche están en la mesa.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

27 Comments

luojieli 24 23 22 21 20 14 13 13 10 8 7 7 7 4 251

What's the difference between "las llaves de coche" and "las llaves del coche". When you have an English noun phrase like "car keys", it seems Spanish sometimes puts the word "de" to show the relationship. I put "las llaves de coche", but the right answer is "las llaves del coche."

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

thakelo 16 16 7 2 11

The difference is subtle. The problem is, that in english "car keys" can either mean "the car's keys" or just "car keys" (the latter only referring to the fact that those keys were made for cars)

In spanish, we make the distinction. "Las llaves del coche" literally translates to "the car's keys", which is what in english you normally just call "car keys", referring to the ones that belong to your car(s).

"Las llaves de coche" literally translated to "car keys", but with the other english meaning I explained earlier.

Anyway, no one ever says "Llaves de coche" because in order for that to be correct, the context would have to be a very particular one. "Llaves del coche" is the way to go on a regular day.

And for the future, just keep in mind that del = de + el. You should always use 'del' or 'de la' when you are referring to a specific object.

44ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

luojieli 24 23 22 21 20 14 13 13 10 8 7 7 7 4 251

Thanks, I mean "muchas gracias." I guess in a normal context, "llaves del coche" is okay because you are referring to keys of a specific car. I'm trying to think of what would be a good context for "llaves de coche" in general. Maybe if there was a contrast, such as "these are not car keys, they are house keys." "Esos no son llaves de coche, pero llaves de casa."

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

thakelo 16 16 7 2 11

Exactly. As long as you're not referring to a specific house, but 'house' in general or as a concept. (Just ask yourself, 'am I referring to something's key or a key made for something?') If you were trying to make a contrast between your car keys and your house keys, "esas no son las llaves del coche, pero llaves de la casa". (remember that llave is feminine).

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

zhangtreefish 12
why are llaves feminine

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GringoUruguayo 15
There is no reason why one word is masculine and another is feminine, it's just the way it is.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

CattleRustler 19 12 1054
maybe if you found a set of car keys on the ground, but didn't know which car or who they belong to?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

thakelo 16 16 7 2 11
Yes. that would be a perfect example for "de coche"!

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CattleRustler 19 12 1054
they are the keys of(de) the(el) car. Whenever de is followed by el it must be contracted to Del. The same is not true for De + La

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fjvenegasb 16 16 12 12 9 7 5 3 2 2 2 2 2 2
You have to say "las llaves del auto/coche" because "del" is a contraction of "de el", and in this sentence you have to use the definite article (in fact, "las llaves de auto/coche" is a grammatical error).

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dmitry_Arch 15 14 14 13 9 6
If "en la mesa" means "on the table", how do you say "in the table" (= "in the table drawer") in Spanish?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Atokirina 13 9 5 4
Good question. Also, I think "sobre la mesa" is also accepted... Can anyone clarify?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

thakelo 16 16 7 2 11
Both "en" and "sobre" can mean the same "on the table". If you're talking about a drawer, you could still say "en"; it will be obvious that you're talking about a drawer because you'll just call it "cajón" or the context will show that something can be stored inside it (a table drawer is not called mesa as far as I know). Now if you really want to specify that something is inside something else, you should use "dentro". If you really want to specify that something is "on" a desk for example (and there are drawers and there could be a confusion) you could use "sobre" and that way there will be no place for doubt.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Atokirina 13 9 5 4

Thanks for your thorough answer. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jaymac90 12

What about "en allí" that could mean "in there" or "on there"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

BrandonKen8 9 3

why is claves not accepted even though it is still right?

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

BenShackie 12 7 5

The keys are = Las llaves estan... They are = Ellos son...

What's the difference in estan/son?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

copytenz 22 16 10 592

As far as I understand the mnemonic may be following: ser is used when something is perpetual or close to that, while estar is used when something is temporary. E.g. "The keys are yellow" would be "las llaves son amarillas", while "the keys are on the table" is "las llaves están en la mesa"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ahlbina 9

I have the same question, I just can't seem to figure out when to use esta/estan!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ahlbina 9

for example, in the same lesson i had:

Las bicicletas SON nuevas La bicicleta ESTA entre los coches Las llaves del coche ESTAN en la mesa.

I got the last one wrong when I tried to use son. I don't understand!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EmuLampen 21 14

There are lots of guidelines to help choose ser or estar for the English "to be". Google ser/estar, and you are sure to find the DOCTOR and PLACE anagrams.

The specific sentences you mentioned -

Las bicicletas SON nuevas.

Uses ser because we are describing a characteristic of the bike.

La bicicleta ESTÁ entre los coches. Las llaves del coche ESTÁN en la mesa.

Both use estar because the location of an object always uses estar.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cynthia7878 13

"Las llaves para el auto están en la mesa" was counted as incorrect. Why?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

thakelo 16 16 7 2 11

It's not incorrect but a native speaker would use "del" instead of "para el". You normally use "para el" when you are kind of explaining what things are for and not what they are. They are car keys, you're not trying to explain that they are keys for the car. Do you see the difference?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

steveweitraub 10

is auto and coche interchangeable?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

yael8376 25 99

Why not: " Las claves del coche están en la mesa"?? DL says it is wrong :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Dmitry_Arch 15 14 14 13 9 6

The keys = las llaves

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

EmuLampen 21 14

Clave = key, as in key code, or musical key, or a figurative key (the key to success)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

235 HOW TO ADD THE GREEK ALPHABET TO YOUR KEYBOARD Here are some links to easily convert your keyboard

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/17706271>

jaye16 25 25 25 13 6 3 2 167

. We have found these easy to install and simple to use. If you have any other links please share them with the community.

For Windows

<https://billmounce.com/freegreekfont/unicode-windows> <https://support.microsoft.com/en-us/help/17424/windows-change-keyboard-layout>
<https://www.conversationexchange.com/resources/keyboard-language.php?lg=en>

For Mac

<http://www.wikihow.com/Change-the-Keyboard-Language-of-a-Mac>

AND the Forums: ><https://www.duolingo.com/topic/936>

Give Lingot10

156 months ago

Start the discussion

No one has commented yet.

236 "Could you show me the way to the bus stop?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/567437>

Translation: Kannst du mir den Weg zur Bushaltestelle zeigen?

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

52 Comments

Sneakyrabbit 22 19 12 33

Why can't I answer "Könntet ihr" ? It seems to me like it should be accepted.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AlsEenPoffertje 18 17 15 14 13 13 6 5 3 15

It would be correct to say "könntet ihr." You should report this if you haven't.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aldittli 14

Usually you are asking people you don't know for directions. I would always use the formal "Sie" in that situation.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

If you ask a child, you would say "du".

13ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aldittli 14

Yes, but I would not ask a child. Most have been taught not to talk to strangers.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

Then ask a teenager. Still "du".

13Give Lingot•2 years ago

Ichimoku 18 16 14 13 11 11 10 10 8 7

I remember how proud i was when someone said the formal you to me when i was 11. I felt SO grown-up at once :D Now I often say the formal you to teenagers and even children, nice to see their reaction. :)

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

JCan72 24 1

So, not "nach"?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JacksonCarolyn 21

nach is rarely used with an article, for more info and the uses of nach and zu - <http://german.about.com/library/weekly/aa061900a.htm>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

"Nach dem Spiel ist vor dem Spiel." ;)

You are right if "nach" describes a direction, but "nach" does have other uses and you usually have articles there.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JacksonCarolyn 21

There are always exceptions. I included a link, which if you check it, contains the information I quoted, apologies for poor referencing. It's not my opinion, just that of 'About.com'. NB: I'm not a native speaker of German.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

It's not an exception, your rule only applies to one use of the word "nach" (the one the article is about). I just wanted to clear that up before someone thinks that applies to every use of "nach".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JeffFrias 17 11

I used, "Zeigen Sie mir den Weg zur Bushaltestelle?" If I wanted to add bitte to that sentence, where would I place it?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

You could say "Zeigen Sie mir bitte den Weg zur Bushaltestelle?" or "Zeigen sie mir den Weg zur Bushaltestelle, bitte?" but if you want to translate the could, too, you would say "Könnten Sie mir bitte den Weg zur Bushaltestelle zeigen?"
Ziegen, by the way, are goats.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Optiex 15 15 12 8 8 7 6 5 3 2 2

Why do we use mir instead of mich?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jess1camar1e 16 6 5 3 3

Because 'mich' would be used if I were the direct object. The way--den Weg--to the bus stop is what is being shown (accusative, direct object) and it is being shown to me--mir--(dative, indirect object).

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Optiex 15 15 12 8 8 7 6 5 3 2 2

I see, danke!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ana_BadWolf 20 9 7

is this wrong? Konnen Sie mir den Weg des Bushaltestelle zeigen

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

Yes, it is wrong. Using genitive would translate to "the way of the bus stop". It's also wrong gender.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Osyalia 21 11 10 10 6 2

Duo show the right answer in the exercise as "Zeigen Sie mir den Weg zur Haltestelle?" , so I don't understand which one is true? Or maybe both are?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JackBond 18 9 5 5 4

I was thinking it would be "an der Bushaltestelle". Of course I forget which sentence, but I think in this section we used some form of "an" to mean "to". Is there a rule for this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

No, there is not fix rule. You have to get a feeling what prepositions go where. That said, "zu(r)" is always a direction, while "an" can be both a location (with dative) and a direction (with accusative):

An der Haltestelle = at the bus stop (location)

An die Haltestelle = to the bus stop (direction)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JackBond 18 9 5 5 4

So "an die" is a valid translation for this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

It's possible, but I would not say it here. It sounds a little like you want the person to take your hand and lead you there.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JeffFrias 17 11

Thanks, lol.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nblaze20 15 2

Im confused by how to tell the direct object and indirrct object in sentences like this. Can someone break it down how to always tell?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlsEenPoffertje 18 17 15 14 13 13 6 5 3 15

Kannst du mir den Weg zur Bushaltestelle zeigen?

den Weg is the direct object because "the way" is what is being shown - it is what is directly receiving the action.

mir is the indirect object because "the way" is being shown to me, and therefore it is receiving the action indirectly.

Another good example is "I give the teacher an apple," or "Ich gebe dem Lehrer einen Apfel.

einen Apfel is what is being given, so it is receiving the action directly.

dem Lehrer is who the apple is being given to, so it is the indirect object. Often times if something is in the dative case, it can be translated with "to," so the sentence I gave could also be "I give an apple to the teacher," and the sentence you were originally asking about could be "Can you show the way to the bus stop to me?"

Hope this helps! :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

isopropylcyanide 14 5 5

I wrote "Konntest mir zeigen der Weg zum Bushaltstelle?" Can a native speaker confirm this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlsEenPoffertje 18 17 15 14 13 13 6 5 3 15

This is actually incorrect. "der Weg" is incorrect because "Weg" is in the accusative case - it's the direct object, it's what's being shown - so you have to use den instead of der. Also, "Bushaltstelle" is a feminine noun, so you have to use zur instead of zum. :)

"konntest" should technically be correct, though. It would just be in the past tense instead of the present tense. The meaning would be more like "Were you able to show me the bus stop?"

Hope this helps! :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

isopropylcyanide 14 5 5

So when a learner attempts to phrase the sentence, he should separate out the objects, form the correct articles /preps and then structure it? Thanks for your reply! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlsEenPoffertje 18 17 15 14 13 13 6 5 3 15

If that's what you need to do, then by all means do it! I definitely advise taking it slowly if it's necessary to learn it correctly. At first all of the cases and new grammatical concepts will probably be a little tricky, but I promise once you get them down they'll start to feel like second nature. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

I can confirm that you got the noun genders and the Umlaut wrong, as well as the verb placement, and you forgot the subject.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlsEenPoffertje 18 17 15 14 13 13 6 5 3 15

I didn't even notice that he left out the subject. XD Couldn't you also use "konntest" with it being in the past tense?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

I guess it could be past, too. But I think most English speakers express it differently then, like "were you able to show me the way to the bus stop?" to avoid the ambiguity.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlsEenPoffertje 18 17 15 14 13 13 6 5 3 15

Yep, that's definitely the case. In my post above I actually said that the meaning was closer to "were you able to." Thank you for confirming! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BenYoung84 25 25 25 13 41

I keep trying to say "Konnten" instead of "Könnten" but it insists on guessing the latter.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JackBond 18 9 5 5 4

"Könnten" is the correct word, though.

"Konnten" means "Was able to in the past"

"Könnten" means "Would hypothetically be able to"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BenYoung84 25 25 25 13 41

But the sentence works with the 'was able to in the past' sense, e.g. in reported speech.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JackBond 18 9 5 5 4

You're right that it's syntactically valid, but I can't imagine anyone ever saying that sentence in common speech.

But I suppose you would have grounds to report it if you want.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JacksonCarolyn 21

Könnten = could - subjunctive form used when being polite or speaking about a hypothetical situation. If you were asking a stranger (adult) for directions to the bus stop you would use the polite forms - Sie + subjunctive.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BenYoung84 25 25 25 13 41

I doubt that using the subjunctive over the indicative when making requests in formal situations is a hard and fast rule but am happy to be proved otherwise.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jess1camar1e 16 6 5 3 3

Maybe not hard and fast, but it's the nicest way to speak to people, and can be expected, especially among the older generation (with whom one would use the formal).

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

jess1camar1e 16 6 5 3 3

But that sentence is weird. Technically, I can ask someone if they were able to show me the way to the bus stop in the past, but I should know that (unless I have amnesia?)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BenYoung84 25 25 25 13 41

I actually imagined a torrid tale involving amnesia so I'm glad you brought it up. I'm struggling to think of any past tense examples outside of forgetfulness so I think you're right. Still, it's only the combination of question + 2nd person formal + 1st person that makes this case weird. If any one of those elements were different "konnten" would be an undeniable option.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Camelrot 20 11 11 5 2

I have seen other constructions where the direct object phrase proceeded the verb and preceded the indirect object. Is it the reverse here because the emphasis is on showing it to "me"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JackBond 18 9 5 5 4

The verb is actually the first word of the sentence. Pretty much any time you have a verb phrase with multiple words, the first word goes in the normal verb position, and remaining verbs go BACKWARDS towards the end. And all the ones at the end are not conjugated (i.e. they always take the -en ending)

For instance:

I [should] [be able to] [want to] [speak]

Would take the order:

I [should] [speak] [want to] [be able to]

As in:

Ich [soll] [sprechen] [wollen] [können]

In this sentence, we see:

You [can] [show] [etc.]

Which would be:

You [can] [etc.] [show]

Or:

Du [kannst] [...] [zeigen]

And then of course you always flip the first word of the sentence with the verb when posing questions.

Another time you might have seen the verb shifted around is in the case of subordinate clauses such as:

[I know] [that] [you] [can] [show] [me] [the way]

Which would be phrased:

[I know], [that] [you] [me] [the way] [show] [can]

Or:

[Ich weiß], [dass] [du] [mir] [den Weg] [zeigen] [kannst]

In this case, the phrase that has the subordinating conjunction ("that") pushes the conjugated verb to the end of the sentence just like the others.

By the way, "mir" comes before "den Weg" because direct and indirect objects follow these rules:

Indirect noun before Direct noun

Pronoun before noun

Direct pronoun before indirect pronoun

We're following rule 2 here.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Camelrot 20 11 11 5 2

Thanks. I understood the verb construction. It was the placement of the nouns which confused me. Your list is extremely helpful. I've added this to my notes. Much appreciated!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JMBarrett52 24 3 2 1

When did we start using "zur" instead of "zum?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jess1camar1e 16 6 5 3 3

Both are contractions of "to the". 'zu' = to, and then we add the definite article, which will vary depending on case and gender. 'zur' is zu+der (dative feminine) and 'zum' is zu+dem (dative masculine+neutral)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kagandilli 14 12

Hmm I don't understand why do we use "den Weg" and not "dem Weg". I mean It's dative thus we use "mir"; but then why do we use accusative form of der Weg?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

It depends on how you ask for it:

What do you show? - den Weg (accusative)

To whom do you show the way? - mir (dative)

9ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

kagandilli 14 12

Oh I got it thanks =D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

237 "The train is going to Austria."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/477447>

Translation: Der Zug geht nach Österreich.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

16 Comments

itsdappenin 8

Why not "Die Bahn fährt nach Österreich"?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

elizabethnorris 5

I said the same. And it's NOT wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rollingstock 14 12 12 10 7 5

No, I think there's a difference. Die Bahn or die Eisenbahn refers to the railroad/rail/track that the train travels on. Der Zug refers to the train, i.e. the vehicle that travels on the track. Sometimes they are interchangeable in English, as in "to travel by train" or "to travel by rail," but there's a difference between a railroad that goes to Austria and a train that goes to Austria.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

I should probably know this, but. . . what in the context makes "zu" for "to" invalid?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mrsemilynorris 19 11 11

Nach = to (towns and countries) Zu = to (the rest of the time)

15ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

erinwall 19 2 2

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RobertoM.O 22 11 9 7

We can use nach as well when refering to the house. "Ich gehe nach Hause"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rollingstock 14 12 12 10 7 5

True, but "nach Hause" specifically means "(to) home." So the exact translation of "Ich gehe nach Hause" is "I am going home," NOT "I am going to the house." As a related idiom, "zu Hause" means specifically "(at) home." "Er ist nicht zu Hause" translates to "He is not home."

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Pickle1 16 15 15 13 12 11 10 5 4 3

I think it should be Der Zug fährt nach Os....

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JuddCheatw 20 20 20 15 13

I agree. Could a native German speaker comment on whether "fährt" is more or less appropriate here than "geht"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Konnall 16 8

Yes you could use both. Although in this particular example it says 'going to', not 'driving to'.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RobertoM.O 22 11 9 7

Why is "Der Zug geht zu Österreich" wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

See mrsemilynorris's comment. I've made the same mistake myself.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RobertoM.O 22 11 9 7

Thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HillMark 18 10 9 6

why geht not gehen, because the train is male??

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

crispybacon4 19 87

It is geht because it is 3rd person singular, regardless of gender

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

238 "The woman drinks water."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/156561/The-woman-drinks-water>

Translation: La donna beve acqua.

04 years ago

Leave a new comment

28 Comments

framericaine128 21 15 8 8 7 5

Is there a rule for when an article before a noun is necessary? Why wouldn't this be: "La donna beve l'acqua"?

16ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wildlais 12 8 6

I think it's cause the translate of "l'acqua" is "the water" and "acqua" is just "water". So in this case they asked just for "water".

17ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

framericaine128 21 15 8 8 7 5

Okay, that makes sense. Thanks!

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

meesh36 17

Grazie, molto utile!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Musetta 12 3 2

Isn't it supposed to be: "La donna beve dell'acqua. " ?

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CaptainJustine 4 4 4

I would have said "dell'acqua" too. It makes more sense to me (I'm French). By the way, isn't it wrong to say "lei beve acqua"? Couldn't this be compared to some sort of "I Tarzan, you Jane" language? because in French that's what it would be, so that's a bit confusing for me. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

f.formica 20 17 12 12 11 11 10 8 3 1273

In modern Italian the partitive article can be omitted in many instances, but there isn't any clear rule to determine when, as it all boils down to popular usage; the Accademia della Crusca, the unlucky Italian ancestor of your Académie française, doesn't hold any power over the language since Mussolini changed its constitution by decree in 1923, and the language has been evolving freely. As a consequence you'll find the language less orderly than French on many grammatical points.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PeterLumbo 13 10 9 9 6 5 2
C'est la vie. I guess...

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

John.Burgess 7
I am guessing - just a beginner sharpening my rusty Italian - but I think that would be "The woman drinks some water."

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

abbiewander 6 5
why is it that in some sentences you can leave the l' on a word. Like l'acqua but you can't leave it off of words like bread. I get it wrong if I don't put il pane

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

momdokter 10
you can leave the l before words that start with a vowel.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mousie96 11 6 3 2
I speak spanish and although they are related somewhat it still gets confusing.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

slmpeace 10 7 6 5 4 3 3
What does 'La gatta' mean?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

f.formica 20 17 12 12 11 11 10 8 3 1273
A female cat, but what does that have to do with this sentence? :o

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

slmpeace 10 7 6 5 4 3 3
เห็นจากตัวเลือกหนึ่งในสาม ไม่เคยผ่านตา แค่อยากรู้ความหมาย :) Nothing to do with this sentence. I just want to know the meaning cuz I saw it from those choices. gatta = female cat?... una gatta = a female cat, la gatta = the female cat... correct? Thank you for reply :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

f.formica 20 17 12 12 11 11 10 8 3 1273

Aw I can't read Thai yet ;) Yes, that's correct. As you can guess gatto is male cat and gatte and gatti are the plurals. There are no second meanings in Italian, contrary to French, if you ever happen to study it.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AnnaSpina2 5

Bevo beve bevi. The i is talking about someone else like you drink and the o is talking about myself drinking and e is what? I'm confused. When to use the correct endings..

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

John.Burgess 7

I think this is right: -o, -i, -e relate to I, you (familiar) and he/she respectively. I think that's where you're getting confused. The -i form strictly speaking is for people with whom you're very familiar or for children. With strangers you'd use the more formal bevete (as you would do to talk to more than one "you".)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

an114 10

why does beve end with an e here when we are talking about "the woman"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

experimentGR 11 6 5

I think it goes like this: (I) bevo (you) bevi (he/she/it) beve

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

an114 10

so because we are talking about "the woman drinks water" beve ends in e, if it were "the women drink water" would it be bevono ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

experimentGR 11 6 5

yes, the sentence would be "Le donne bevono acqua" (The women drink water)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bryanomnom 8

I am having a hard time with beve, bevi and bevo

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kid.o.e 6

Why does it mark it wrong when I forgot to place a letter? Kinda unfair if you ask me

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sinasara 8

물을 셀 수 있나요? 어떻게 drink 옆에 s 가 붙죠..?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mthormer 5 3

In the last exaple "la ragazza mangia il pane" was correct for "the girl eats bread" even though it didnt say "the girl eats the bread" but for this examble i entered "la acqua" and it was not correct. What gives?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mocteto 3 2

isn't bevi describing something that is currently happening, and beve is describing something that happens but not necessarily happing at this moment

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

f.formica 20 17 12 12 11 11 10 8 3 1273

No, they're both forms of present tense, but "bevi" is for the second singular. An action that is currently happening would be "sta bevendo" (is drinking).

4ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

239 "She has opened the window."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/206513>

Translation: Ella ha abierto la ventana.

04 years ago

Leave a new comment

18 Comments

cdhicks1 25 23 1210

Ok. Earlier DL used the sentence "la silla es hecha de madera" The chair is made of wood. Hecho became hecha. Never saw hecha before. So now I see this sentence structure and think 'abierta' WRONG!

Adjective, adverb vs verb perhaps?

Thoughts pls.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Yerrick 25 23 22 9 7 96

Correct.

The first is a simple present-tense sentence, where "hecha" is an adjective: what is the chair? It is made of wood.

The second is present perfect tense: She has opened the window.

In spanish, adjectives change to match the gender of their referent noun; verbs do not. Generally, perfect-tense forms of verbs end in "o".

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EntourageEffect 13

Thank you. I had the same question! However, isn't made still a verb?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Yerrick 25 23 22 9 7 96

Nope! It's a participle, in this sentence. A participle is constructed from a verb as its base, but grammatically it functions as an adjective.

It's made of wood.

It's wooden.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•9 months ago

EntourageEffect 13

And a lingot for you! Thank you for the simple yet thorough explanation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

readergirl765 11 5

Me too!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

markakirkland 23 931

Why not abierta?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rogercchristie 21 20 16 8 679

OK. We are practicing the compound tense form Present Perfect - pretérito perfecto compuesto. In English this is I have opened, you have opened, he/she/it has opened etc.

In Spanish we conjugate haber (he, has, ha etc) and add the Past Participle abierto. It is always and only abierto.

That gives us: (yo) he abierto - I have opened, (tú) has abierto - you have opened, él ha abierto - he has opened, ella ha abierto - she has opened etc.

Now have a look at http://www.123teachme.com/spanish_verb_conjugation/abrir Present perfect, and <http://conjugator.reverso.net/conjugation-spanish-verb-abrir.html> Indicativo Pretérito perfecto compuesto.

This comment may be more than you wanted Mark (in fact I'm sure you are well beyond this stage by now), but I hope it will be helpful to others.

10ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KiraDehnel 15

But "the open window" would be "la ventana abierta" ...?

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rogercchristie 21 20 16 8 679

Yes. And abierta would be an adjective.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CheesePuffs222 13 10 7

When do we use 'se'???

If only I can master that, then I'll master Spanish... T-T

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

readergirl765 11 5

Seriously! I said abierta. Need to remember this.... :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lastrtelusnet 25

When the definition for Abierto was given, it included "(se) (ha) abierto as (he, she, it) has opened" yet when I responded "Ella se ha abierto...." which apparently is incorrect. Can anyone tell me what I'm missing here?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

enoksrd 19 4 2 2

I think "Ella se ha abierto" would mean "she has opened herself", since the "se" would make the "abierto" reflexive.

6ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

jmullen 24 20 16 11 10 10 8 7 7 7 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 2

I think "abrirse" applies when something opens by itself or what opened it is unclear. "La ventana se abrió." = "The window opened." (due to wind, etc.)

Edit: Disregard my post; HolyT is, of course, correct.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

HolyT 22 15 11 859

No, that is a form of passive voice. Your example sentence means "The window was opened." It's like "Se habla español," meaning "Spanish is spoken [here]."

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rogercchristie 21 20 16 8 679

abrise has several meanings. You need to look it up HERE.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Duomail 23 23 22 22 19 13 1327

I think that "The window opened" would also be "La ventana se abrió", since "La ventana abrió" doesn't sound well.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

240 "The bear is orange!"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6400847>

Translation: L'ours est orange !

12 years ago

Leave a new comment

101 Comments

detoxiodine 6 2

First, pink elephants, now orange bears. Lay off the psychedelics, Dou!

217ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

PetiteLearner101 17

Pink elephants are perfectly normal. I see them all the time. <http://www.mrkipling.co.uk>

26ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

littleowlalexa 11 11 3 2 2

[deleted]

-1Give Lingot•1 year ago

KendraMoe 11 11 10 2 2 2 2

I've not, no...then again, I live in the middle of nowhere, so that's probably why lol

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

keanacake 6

in Cali ive seen one at the zoo

-1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

[+] 4 hidden comments

[+] 3 hidden comments

bs804 13 6

Paddington, stop getting covered in marmalade.

84ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

WillowTan 25 5

Maybe it's a trick of the light...

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Chakradhar8 8

Pink elephants and orange bears by a green owl

67ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

pete.chore 16 6 5 4

Winnie the Pooh!

40ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HilaryCrys 6

Winnie le pooh est de couleur jeune non?

14ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AnySkywlkr 11 9 9 8

est de couleur jaune* jaune = yellow / jeune = young

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

WillowTan 25 5

Oui, tu es correct.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jade526491 6 2

Orange, jeune

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kli8483 6

oui

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Gavier 24 13 3 1170

Drôle d'ours!

26ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IRE505 6

Why is it 'ours' not 'our'? Wouldn't 'ours' be 'bears' not 'bear'?

19ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hprattdo 25 8 4

that is just how it is. The noun is "un ours" and the plural is "des ours"

37ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

jal2hdez 11 10 9 4 4

Is like some plural words in English that do not change in singular. You, deer, sheep, fish, swine, shrimp, bass... Yes, 'you' is plural and is conjugated with 'are, were...' despite some people say "you is" or the ones that claim its plural is "y'all" or "you all" Also note that 'fishes' is the plural for different species or types of fish. So tuna and salmon are fishes, and if you caught two flounders you have a pair of fish. One last thing, shrimp and bass can be plural as they are or as shrimps and basses.

18ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Cockatiel321 7

Is like some plural words in English that do not change in singular. You, deer, sheep, fish, swine, shrimp, bass... Yes, 'you' is plural and is conjugated with 'are, were...' despite some people say "you is" or the ones that claim its plural is "y'all" or "you all" Also note that 'fishes' is the plural for different species or types of fish. So tuna and salmon are fishes, and if you caught two flounders you have a pair of fish. One last thing, shrimp and bass can be plural as they are or as shrimps and basses.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nectarivorous 24

From the latin 'ursa'

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mere_des_chats 20

L'ours is similar to le fils (the son). Not only is there no difference in spelling between the singular and plural forms of the either word, but also the final S is pronounced in both words, whether singular or plural:

l'ours [looRs] / les ours [layzooRs] = the bear/the bears le fils [luh fees] / les fils [lay fees] = the son/the sons

12ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gleaminggold 8

my thoughts exactly

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Alilicee 12 11 8 6

It would be a different pronunciation :in 'ours' you pronounce the "s" (I might make spelling mistakes)

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

gloubard 10

Gummy bears....

18ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SamW15 8

Why is "Le ours" not correct? Isn't it the same thing?

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nectarivorous 24

No, it's a mandatory liaison, you can't leave the two vowels together like that. The 'e' is required to drop out so you can make 'l'ours'.

20ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

clnoy 22 13 12 10 10 8 6 5 2 8

You meant elision between le- and -ours: l'ours.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jamesalbon 13 8

I was always taught that the same happens in verbs, so "tu as" becomes "t'as", but duolingo seems to accept "tu as" - is that normal?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Gavier 24 13 3 1170

No that's incorrect. "Tu as" commonly becomes "T'as" in informal French but it is not the correct way to write it.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jamesalbon 13 8

that makes sense- but then why don't the two vowels in "Tu as" get contracted, but the e and o in "l'ours" do?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Gavier 24 13 3 1170

It's just how French is. "Le ours" must contract to "L'ours" (compulsory). But 'Tu' just does not contract.

You'll frequently hear "T'es" as well but this is also not proper french.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

Alilicee 12 11 8 6

"je" can be contracted (ex:j'aime,j'entend...)but "tu" is never contractedand grammatically correct at the same time

1Give Lingot•9 months ago

jamesalbon 13 8

Thanks for clarifying! My problem is that I mostly learnt French from just chatting to people there, and never properly learnt the rules of grammar- Duolingo is really helpful in rectifying it!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

WillowTan 25 5

No. In school, I learned that "la" or "le" cannot precede a noun starting with a vowel, I visualize it in my mind as "two vowels in a row is not right". Not the same with verbs though... for example, "tu as" is correct French. I hope that helps! (Note: if I'm saying along the lines of others, I was not copying. I have been wrongly blamed for copying others SO many times, I cannot comment without warning this.)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lalatoto1 7

I wrote the same at it is not valid.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

laurac13 11 7 5

First theres a green elephant, now theres an orange bear? Whats going on with Duolingo

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PetiteLearner101 17

Pink elephant, green owl :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

laurac13 11 7 5

Its easy to remember orange in French!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Han_Malik 10 6 6 3

The pronunciation of "l'ours" sounds very similar to the word "puzzle/mystery" in 'Arabic' :) .. just saying ..

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mere_des_chats 20

It kinda does. Google Translate Audio.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ColePaulson 13 9 9 7
Fozzy Bear!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

OMGITSLUISVONAHN 10
DUO! First pink elephants then orange bears! Mr. Duo you need an appointment!

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Oliver_Quinn 6
Winnie the Pooh!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

potatonuts 9 2
"Pay attention to the gender." How am I supposed to know the gender!?!?!?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mere_des_chats 20
At the time you learn a new noun, you should make a note of the gender; the articles usually help or Duo's pop-up when you hover over a new word usually tells you. If that does not work, look the word up in a dictionary.

You cannot learn French without making this a habit from the get-go because every noun has a gender and it affects other parts of speech when you write sentences.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ERGCKatz7 8
Were bears always orange, or is my LSD finally kicking in?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DavisHerre 8 8 5 4
Why i had the option of "l'ours est à l'orange

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

clnoy 22 13 12 10 10 8 6 5 2 8
Why not? They always give wrong options but you only have to choose all the right ones.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Darya-Yousefi 11
Orange est le nouveau noir

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bea33848 8 8

orange bears, pink elephants, green fish, purple ducks-- I wouldn't be surprised to see a green dog.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CharlesBra590031 7

If you accidentally donate a Lingot or want to withdraw a Lingot, how is it done?

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

KostasLimn 14 12

Why the only correct type appears to be only "l'ours" and not "l'ourse" as well?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

jessie527 8

green tomato, pink strawberries, orange bearInteresting

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

clnoy 22 13 12 10 10 8 6 5 2 8

What's wrong with green tomatoes?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

jessie527 8

I don't know Maybe it is poison???

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Andres9631 12 10 9

Are they talking about Trump ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

flowerowl716 11

Winne the Pooh!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

FAVskillz 11 5

How did i get it wrong when i said"le our est prange" but instead the correct answer was "l'ours est orange". Doulingo needs to fix this problem!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Gavier 24 13 3 1170

"Le our" is incorrect. Duolingo has told you the correct answer " l'ours"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

FAVSkillz 11 5

Berenstain Bears anyone?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

snichy 9 3 2

why cant it be le ours est orange

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

clnoy 22 13 12 10 10 8 6 5 2 8

Read the rest of discussion.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

TerryGao0 7

My answer should be accepted!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Peter473890 7

why it is "L'ours" and not "Le ours"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

selenebonafini 8 5

Whata the plural of bear

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Lorillene 10 7

When is the right time to drop the e? It seems arbitrary. Sometimes you leave it sometimes you don't...

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jal2hdez 11 10 9 4 4

Do you mean the 'e' from "le"? The 'e' from "le" and the 'a' from "la" are dropped if the next word start with a vowel-starting sound. Sounds better, there's no gap, and is easier to say. It's most identical to the 'a-an' before vowel sound in English.

A boat. A pear. A hospital. An apple. An orange. An hour. An MRI (em-ar-ay).

So it's not the letter, it's the sound. 'Les' end in consonant so it's fine. So if the next is vowel, drop one vowel. If the next letter is "Y" or "H" find out if 'y' sounds like 'i' or if 'h' is silent or not.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hannaverbogat 10 6

You drop the e whenever there is a vowel or a silent h after it. For instance le heure -> the h is silent so it's l'heure. Or la école-> l'école

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

clnoy 22 13 12 10 10 8 6 5 2 8

Heure is feminine though.

L'heure comes from the elision of the -a in la heure, not le heure.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ungewitig_Wiht 24 12 7

The concept is the same though.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ArleneHatc 7 6

When do you use l'? And le? Pls Help me. I'm so confused.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mere_des_chats 20

You use le before masculine nouns and l' before ANY noun starting with a vowel.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jack870784 5

Instead of "L'ours", can it be "le ours"? Really confused here.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mere_des_chats 20

No, it cannot. Whenever a noun starts with a vowel, le and la become l'.

une orange = an orange; l'orange = the orange un ours = a bear; l'ours = the bear

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jluczak234 14 11 71

Why is the bear l'ours and the snake is le serpent

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

clnoy 22 13 12 10 10 8 6 5 2 8

When a noun starts with a vowel sound, le/la are elided to l'.

L'araignée, l'ours, l'école, l'homme...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BilliciaPellum 7 5

whats the difference between l'ours and le ours?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mere_des_chats 20

There is no such thing as le ours. Any time le or la precedes a noun starting with a vowel, it become l':

un animal -- l'animal

une orange -- l'orange

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BasitAmin 6

where to use l le and la

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mere_des_chats 20

It is good practice, if you are very new to French, to read through the Tips & Notes on a PC browser before starting a lesson, as you will find a lot of the basic questions are answered there. Please refer back to the Tips & Notes of the very first lesson. For your convenience, here is a direct link to them: click here and scroll down to read.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

primus454 13 10

Gummy bears?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

zekeisbae 6 3

what? paddington? why is there marmalade all over you?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

alyre88 11

Is the 't' pronounced in est when it is before a word starting with a vowel? E.g. 'est orange'. DL gives no audio option on this sentence.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Emarvel1 25 13 520

It seems like Dr. Seuss' fantasies are brought to life.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PopcornBird 11 9 7 5 2 2
Why is "Le ours" not correct?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Gavier 24 13 3 1170
Please read the other comments.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

henriky11 11 7 3 2
Why is "le ours est orange" wrong?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

clnoy 22 13 12 10 10 8 6 5 2 8
Because the elision is mandatory. You can't have two vowels together so the -e from le is elided: le ours becomes l'ours.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DonnaLauv 10 6 5 4 4 3 3
Incorrect, parce que j'ai écrit "le ours est orange" et pas "l'ours". Attention, le gens! ne pas faire cette façon de erreurs

-3ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

clnoy 22 13 12 10 10 8 6 5 2 8
The elision is mandatory. It is also mandatory in "façon d'erreurs".

4ReplyGive Lingot1•11 months ago

241 "The employee is learning."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/525718>
Translation: Der Arbeitnehmer lernt.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment
14 Comments

Jamie P 13
Why not "Der Mitarbeiter lernt."?

15ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jaspercat 25 4 1324
That is accepted now.

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

onecrane 21 5 86

What is the difference between Mitarbeiter and Arbeitnehmer? I see they use the same root word.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

margusojä 22 13

"Mitarbeiter" is literally and primarily translated as "co-worker".

"Arbeitnehmer" is literally "work taker" and means "employee" in English. It is opposite to "Arbeitgeber" (literally "work giver"), which means "employer" in English.

45ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

jfree062 4

That helped out so much, thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

diall_abdallah 9 2

Why not "Der Arbeiter lernt"?

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 6

"The worker learns."

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

VinjaVraar 11

It is not clear from the english sentence that it is about a female. So not sure why i got a negative on this task? The translation is Mitarbeiterin But on english it is the employee...what gender is that? And how to know when i have english to german translation i should use female gender in german. ???

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ungewitig_Wiht 24 12 7

If you used the masculine form (correctly) and they dinged you saying you need the feminine form then you should report.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MichaelMet3 22

The clue says die?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IvieChacko 10 9 9 9 8 8 6 4

I love the sentence!!! I was so so confused.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IvieChacko 10 9 9 9 8 8 6 4
Thank you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

friendofthg
How common is "Arbeitnehmer" used in everyday speech?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

242 Some helpful numbers for calculating how quickly you can complete the Spanish course (From Reddit)

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3411264>

AndyTimm 7 3

(I posted this on Reddit last night, but I figured I'd get more feedback from folks further in the tree here.)

Hi folks,

I was trying to figure out how much work a day I wanted to put into Duo Lingo, and there wasn't a readily available resource with the number of lessons in total, or any sort of "time to completion" table available, so I made one myself.

Useful facts: There are 317 (319 with bonus skills) lessons in the Spanish tree, which means 3170 EXP to complete the tree.

Note: I obviously can't account for bonus exp for keeping hearts through the lessons, so the estimates in the below table are based on only the "base" exp (10) awarded for each lesson. You could alternatively make a table with the number of lessons you'd need to do a day, but EXP is convenient because it allows EXP/Day that isn't a multiple of 10. The "minutes per day" column is based on a rough 10 minutes per lesson estimate, which is a decent estimate for bar napkin excel work.

Beyond the number of days to complete at each given average EXP/day rate, I also assumed people wouldn't just do new lessons. Instead, people often do a split of old/new material, and so the last two columns assume 60/40% new/old and 80/20% new/old splits.

<http://imgur.com/Tg5FS20> (Doing tables on the forum here looks like a pita, sorry to have to link).

Hopefully this is helpful to folks in planning their Duo Lingo! Let me know if I made any mistakes, or if I can add something else to make this more useful.

I'd really, really like some feedback from folks further in the tree on where things start to take more than 10 minutes a lesson, so that I can make this more accurate.

PS: I'm planning to do the 50 EXP a day, 60/40 split- anyone care to join me?

Give Lingot2
92 years ago

Leave a new comment
26 Comments

mandyturtle 19 13

i dont know if this helps you at all but i am currently at 4,653 xp level 12 & have completed 50 skills in 40 days. at the beginning of the tree I did mostly new skills & only practiced when my skills were not golden. now that I'm a little further along & the lessons are more complicated I do about 1-2 new lessons per day(not even a whole skill just lessons) & the rest all practice to help cement the material. it will probably take me a long time to complete the tree at the rate I'm going now but I figure I'm not in a race :) & I really want to remember the material. oh & I have not kept track of exactly how much xp per day but I would say I spend about an hr a day on duolingo

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

I've finished the tree, and these are the three skills that gave me the most "trouble": Verbs: Subjunctive Past (V. Sub. P.) can be hard, so that one may take more than ten minutes (just one lesson, but it is a doozy). Verbs: Haber is difficult if you do not keep the forms straight. Verbs: Subjunctive/Imperative (V. Sub/Imp) is a little easier...once the imperative forms are learned (conjugation-wise), you should be good to go.

Best wishes!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kgm_7 16 5

What was your total XP (on the day you finished the tree)?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

Wow, that's a hard one. I did a lot of Immersion as well...I finished when I was level 14, I believed (because of all the XP), so...7,000 XP+.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kgm_7 16 5

Oh great! You done x2 more than average then :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

You could say that. ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kgm_7 16 5

Wow 300XP a day! :D That is really good! I will be aiming for that much in 2-3 skills time, at the meantime, the skill 'Food' is taking a long time. There are 13 lessons in total on Food in Italian :)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12
Lots of good Italian food. :D

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Kgm_7 16 5

I have so far averaged on 129XP since I started Italian 6 days ago. Repeating every lesson you have learnt previously while learning 2-3 new lessons a day really helps :)

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

Yeah, I rushed through my tree first time...about 300 XP a day (on the tree), and hardly any review. So even though I'd finished my tree, it's taken another month to really feel comfortable. I couldn't write more than a simple five sentence paragraph 40+ days ago, but I can express my thoughts a little better now. :)

0Give Lingot1•2 years ago

brose17 25 25 20 7 6 50

Wow, you have an impressive number of languages next to your name. When did you decide you were ready to take on another language?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

Who said anything about being ready? The only thing that determines when I start another language is if my desire to do so is greater than to keep going on with the ones I have..

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wazzie 25 11

Interesting. Based on the XP required to level up chart (put together by user olimo):
(level - points to next level - points by the end of the level):

9 - 600 → 2,250

10 - 750 → 3,000

11 - 900 → 3,900

12 - 1,000 → 4,900

The earliest level you could complete your tree by would be level 11.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sporg 23

I'm at 11 in Spanish and can not imagine being comfortable with the language if I had blasted through the tree with just 3700 EXP.

Heck, I can not even imagine getting through a tree with that few points. But I do not have an eidetic memory either....:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talca 25 13

Andy, I am sure this isn't much help to your statistics, but it took me 10 months to do the Spanish tree, and I think I finished at Level 14 or 15. But I started with an extreme low knowledge of Spanish, so I couldn't test out of many levels at all.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Danidanger101 6

I don't know if this is weird but i do 10 skills per day and the next day i review them to make sure they don't decay. Is this alright?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kgm_7 16 5

Great topic and table! It just shows how much you really need to be doing. :D

To be honest I don't think doing anything less than 90XP a day is enough. To immerse yourself fully you should be doing at least 90XP or more and it should increase as you progress (most of it being old content). Also, the old and new ratio should start from 0/10 (old/new) and go to 95/5 (old/new).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Griffin.cz 11 5 4 2 2

I will join you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

How does testing out of a skill (or group of skills) affect your XP points. I know you get some points, but is it equal to 10 * number of lessons skipped?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kgm_7 16 5

You get 10 points for passing a lesson with all your hearts gone, 11 points for 1 heart remaining, 12 points for 2 hearts remaining, and 13 points for passing without losing any hearts

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

I know, but you can use checkpoints, or test out of any skill without having to do the lessons (just a single test). When you test out of a skill, you are awarded points (more than just 10, 11, 12, 13). What I was wondering if points awarded based on testing out of a skill have a direct correlation to the points you would have earned had you did the lessons individually and if they do if the points awarded are based on 10, 11, 12 or 13 (or does it depend how well you do when testing out).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kgm_7 16 5

Do you mean the "Strengthen Skill" part? I normally get maximum 13XP on that unless I am levelling up :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

Imgur

As you can see, you can test out of an entire skill without doing each individual lesson.

You can also test out of a group of Skills at a time using checkpoints... I've already passed all mine, but if I hadn't, it would say something like 'Test 15 Skills' and you can test out of all 15 skills above it at once (you only get 3 chances).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kgm_7 16 5

Oh yes I see what you mean now!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

To you, wazzie, it doesn't give you extra XP. I've tested out of 50+ skills for my S -- E tree, and I got around 3000 XP, which is close to the final amount when finishing all the lessons. Barring heart XP, of course.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Hucklebeary 3

LOL ... I swear I could almost hear a distant echo of you smashing your prtsr key when I scrolled down and saw the image.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

243 "The ducks are eating bread."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/544091>

Translation: Les canards mangent du pain.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

32 Comments

personalavenir 9 4

Why is it du pain but not des pain?

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Tyler.O.Neil 16 92

du pain: the bread

des pains: the breads (different varieties? I'm guessing)

I guess in France, the ducks are not sophisticated enough to have their cheeseboards with multiple types of bread.

21ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LubinGuiha 5 3

Du = contraction de : de le

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hquek 5

I have the same question. If 'the ducks eat fish' is 'les canards mangent des poissons' then 'les canards mangent des pains' seems like it would also be acceptable for 'the ducks eat bread'.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

koshermal 8 7 3 2

For the same reason we don't drink some waters or buy some milks.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ozlaps 14

The ducks are eating bread, not breads

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

unitatos 6

Its just that if the sentence starts off plural like "we are" its going to have plural words in it. Apparently thats grammatically correct in French.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

koshermal 8 7 3 2

No that was because there were multiple ducks.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

unitatos 6

Its called le partitif. I cant really explain but maybe you can find a good explanation on the internet.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

slmarland 6

Why can you not say 'les canards sont mangent du pain'?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kirsty.Kessler 7

Thats like saying "the ducks are are eating some bread" mangent translates to are eating..thus sont is not needed

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LubinGuiha 5 3

The present continuous not existed in french

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

slmarland 6

Thank you Kirsty, that makes sense now :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BlackSapphire96 11 11 6 5 4 4 3 3 2

What does avoir mangé mean? It was listed under eating as one of the translations

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

doublestufforeo 11 8 5 3

I'm pretty sure it's the past tense, like "The ducks ate bread" would be "Les canards ont mangé de pain"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IsaSoulie 10 4 2

It's the passé composé. Like doublestufforeo said it's a past tense, but "Les canards ont mangé du pain" would be literally translated to "The ducks have eaten (some) bread".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

smk913 6

Why are we using, 'DU' before pain?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

P.Salamander 9

Wow. An amazing option in MCQ : "Les fruits mangent du pain."

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JLoverde 12 10 6

Why isn't it " Les canards sont en train de manger du pain." as well?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Tetris1 10

I really have no idea when to use the different variations of mange

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

patcha.mar 6

Wooooooooo

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JoaquinSos 11 9 4 25

So" are eating "always translates to" mangent? "

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Allison_Hjulberg 9 5

Well there is also things like manger, mangent, manger that is could also translate to. It depends on who comes before it. If you were to say Je (I) before, it would be Je mange.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lisa936102 9

Why mangent and not mangeons. The "They" form of manger?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LilyMouse03 7 5 21

So many forms of "manges, mangent, mangeon" etc. I keep getting confused! Can anyone recommend a way to remember them all/how to use?

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

IAmLost83 13 8 7 4

whats the difference in Manger Mangent Manges (idk if i'm forgetting some)

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

BrookeElizabeth1 5

I do not know the anser

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

BrookeElizabeth1 5

can someone tell me the ancer to this question

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

unitatos 6

I have a question: isnt les canards mangent du pain and des canards mangent du pain THE SAME THING?!?!?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SpencerWil69271 8 7 6

"The ducks are eating" vs. "Of the ducks are eating."

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

244 – 267 of 912

[accessed March 13, 2017]

244 German: the difference between dem and der?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4403251>

ejforster 6 5

I will give three lingots to whoever can tell me why dem and der mean the same thing and when to use which one?

Give Lingot3

12 years ago

Leave a new comment

9 Comments

ColinIR 10 3

Dem is the masculine dative definite article.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ejforster 6 5

What does that mean? In this case, it was an apple...how do I know if an apple is masculine or not?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jafiki91 9 8

In German, like nouns, the articles change form depending on their case. This shows their grammatical relationship to the verb. "Dem" is dative case for masculine and neuter words. What that means is that it's an indirect object. So If you said "I give water to the apple" "I" is nominative, it's the subject. "water" is accusative, the direct object and "apple" is dative, the indirect object.

This wiki page has a nice table of the articles and their forms which might help you out.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/German_articles

1ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

sweilan1 13 5

This is incorrect. In the sentence "I give water to the apple", apple would not be the indirect object, it would be the object of the preposition. If you wanted apple to be an indirect object, the sentence would need to be changed to "I give the apple water".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MrQuiggles 24 7 1115

A lot of indirect objects are recognized by their being the objects of prepositions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sweilan1 13 5

They are not indirect objects. They are objects of the prepositions and are in the dative case. Also, there are a few German verbs whose direct objects are in the dative case - they are not considered indirect objects, just direct objects in the dative case.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Jafiki91 9 8

It is the indirect object because it is what's being indirectly affected by the verb. The issue here is that English has two ways of forming sentences with ditransitive verbs of this sort. One is to use a preposition as I did, and the other is to switch the direct and indirect objects around without a preposition as in your example. And this is how German would render the sentence.

It is also true that some German prepositions require dative case marking, in the same way that others require accusative or genitive case.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ejforster 6 5

Thank you very much now it makes sense!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JudithL1 11 10 7 5 2

To make it even more confusing: Not only is "der" the masculine article in Nominativ, it also is the feminine article in Dative and Genetiv.

Nominativ - Genetiv - Dativ - Akkusativ neutral: das - des - dem - das feminine: die - der - der - die masculine: der - des - dem - den plural: die - der - den - die

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

245 What the difference between "mio", "mia", "mie" and "miei"?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2940991>

AntonioMatheus1 7 6 4

Please, when I use the words "mio", "mia", "mie" and "miei"?

Give Lingot

12 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

[deactivated user]

MIO for male singular.

MIEI for male plural.

MIA for female singular.

MIE for female plural.

9ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

PopTartTastic 9 9 7 7 6 6 5 4

Yeah, that. Also, don't get confused with words like "cane" or other masculine words ending in "e". They're still masculine singular, and should be "mio cane" and not "mie cane".

5ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

AntonioMatheus1 7 6 4

Thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Skydriller 6 5 5

Thank you Mr Life Saver

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

MiaMolzahn 6

thanks i always got those wrong!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

246 An easy way to type the Umlaut letters

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3635953>

Hischamo 16 4 2

If you have a problem typing the umlaut letters, cause the normal keyboard doesn't have specific keys for them and you don't want to switch between the mouse and the keyboard while you are typing.

Here is an easy way to type them, hope you like it

ä : Alt + 0228

ö : Alt + 0246

ü : Alt + 0252

ß : Alt + 0223

Ä : Alt + 0196

Ö : Alt + 0214

Ü : Alt + 0220

I found it easy to remember and very helpful, and maybe it will help you :)

Give Lingot2

72 years ago

Leave a new comment

28 Comments

Lavmarx 15 15 13 13 12 9 9 6 6 6 4 3 2

I had to learn the codes before I knew about the international keyboard, but if you activate it the only thing you need to do is type:

" + vowel = ä ë ï ö ü

' + vowel = á é é ó ú

` + vowel = à è ì ò ù

~ + n or vowel = ñ ã õ

' + c = ç

^ + vowel = â ê î ô û

And there are probably more combinations that I haven't discovered.

10ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

Rewjeo 14 2 682

The international keyboard also lets you type ß with ctrl+alt+s.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vienmoir 14 14 13 10 8 6 83

You've just made my life so much easier!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CaveatEmptor 22 11 8

Well raise my rent! That blows my mind! Activating the international keyboard (in my case, the United States-International) is freaking awesome :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavmarx 15 15 13 13 12 9 9 6 6 6 4 3 2

Lol, I know the struggle. I'm from Puerto Rico, we speak Spanish and yet it is rare to find a keyboard in Spanish, so they make us learn all the alt+number for the accents and stuff, I would have been really thankful with my teachers if they had taught this to me back then.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pobrecito13 17 11 9 8 7

Also right alt key + ? or ! = ¿ or ¡.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mhattick 20 11 45

Thanks so much, I get so tired of typing alt-0252 for ü ! Have a lingot.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavmarx 15 15 13 13 12 9 9 6 6 6 4 3 2

Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IchBinCorgii 6

You're a life saver, and a wrist saver. Vielen dank!

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

HappyEvilSlosh 25 23 21 20 13 11 10 9 8 7 4 2 2 5

I use break as a compose key. If your OS supports it it's a lot easier than remembering alt codes.

Also umlaut rather than umlate.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Hischamo 16 4 2

Thanks for the links, and it looks much easier than alt codes, My OS is Win 7 ,and I don't know how to activate "compose key", I tried to use the BREAK key but it didn't work. the mistake has been corrected

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iron_bun 25 24 8 5 1093

You should be able to find instructions for changing your keyboard map to an international version. It'll be in the language and regional settings in the control panel somewhere. Disappointingly the UK Extended keyboard map doesn't have a ß!

If you need more instructions then let me know and I'll see if I can help you out.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Hischamo 16 4 2

thank you for the instructions, I think i should switch back to the English interface to follow the activation steps, because i change it to German when i started duolingo ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JohnnySkin 14 13 6

This sent me down the happy road to keyboard setup. Hours of fun! Have a lingot!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

draquila 9 8

I would suggest, for Windows users, activating the International Keyboard. It allows you to type quite a few characters without having to memorize alt codes.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AndresC. 25 12 10

If you use iOS, the autocorrect function is very helpful. You populate the list as you go on. That way gross becomes groß with no extra effort. In addition to adding specific and very common words that use ß, ä, ö, ü, you can also use verb stems, so that gehor becomes gehör as you type, and you just finish the word: gehören, gehört, gehörst, etc.

In Windows, you can download Phrase Express (<http://www.phraseexpress.com>) and populate the autotext list in similar fashion.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dezinerai 16 2

In iOS you can also touch and hold a letter to show the alternates. It's not that much more effort to pick the right letter from the little popup.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Dutta.Pachori 20 6 3

Enable German, Spanish Kboard rather in keyboard settings... Like i am learning German and i have 3 keyboards enabled.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Siebenundzwanzig 14 9 4 2 2

Yep, that's what I've been doing for years; it's very useful to know. Although, I never did learn the codes for the capitals, but I seem to get by. xD Erinnere dich daran, dass die Britische Codes hier sind. Ich glaub', dass die Amerikaner haben andere Codes. Danke für teilen!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PopTartTastic 9 9 7 7 6 6 5 4

If you have a mac, you can push down alt, then push the "u". You get an umlaut. "ü" Then if you push a vowel after you have your umlaut, you can do ë. Or ü. äëïöüÿ.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dezinerai 16 2

Doing the same for an "s" immediately gives you "ß".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ManOfFewWords 19

You can go into keyboard settings (this is on a windows) and add german. Switch between languages with alt+shift. Where on the german keyboard ; is o, ' is a and [is u (all with Umlauts). then - is the ss character.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Filodendron 23 8

This is what I do. Using alt+shift two switch is really easy. I use (for not particular reason) the international keyboard for French, and a German keyboard for German. Then I just need to remember which order the keyboards are in when I press alt+shift!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago matson 16 12 9 8 4 2 2 2 2 113

these are for Windows OS

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pobrecito13 17 11 9 8 7

Here is a site with lots of alt key codes. <http://symbolcodes.tlt.psu.edu/accents/codealt.html> I used to use them, but don't have a number pad on my keyboard anymore. So I switched to changing the keyboard layout to United States-International. I think that is much easier than remembering a lot of codes.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wortspiel 14

These are great suggestions but the keyboard commands for the international keyboard seem to be working differently for Windows 8. The more I use Windows 8, the more I like Linux! Does anyone know if there is a chart or something with the commands for Win 8?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

joe685106 20
Very helpful, thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

GordonWhitton 11 90

My approach was to purchase some German keyboard stickers, place them on my computer keyboard, and (temporarily) switch my operating system keyboard to a German layout.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

247 The Spanish Billion is a Trillion, which in Spanish, is a Quintillion (etc.)
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/37180>

kelvinma13 24 16 9

I've noticed after translating some articles that deal with large numbers, that in Spanish, there are a lot of false cognates. -----

Million=Millón | Billion=Mil Millones | One Trillion=Billón | Quadrillion=Mil Billones |

Quintillion=Trillón -----

On top of that, the numbers don't seem to uniform throughout the Spanish Speaking world (Sometimes the cognates mean the same as they do in English). Either way, this could cause some colossal misunderstandings (to the order of thousands, millions, etc. of times off) so heads up when translating, maybe it's safest to steer clear of those sentences, lest there be some translations incorrectly stating the World population at seven trillion, or the US debt at just $15 Billion.

Give Lingot
164 years ago

Leave a new comment
15 Comments

hei_matau 7
I have to agree with @almonaster.

It's called long/short scale. https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Long_and_short_scales

If you are like me...and like a video format to teach you. Check out this 9 minute video with a bit of humor. http://youtu.be/C-52AI_ojyQ

14ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Saamcek 8 5
Wow, this is completely new to me. I've always been confused by number translations between my language and English, now I finally understand, thanks! :).

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dexedge 21
Incidentally, I think there is even variance in usage of these words in the English-speaking world.

11ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

[deactivated user]
Another one I have seen cause a lot of confusion is the European decimal standard, where comma and period are interchanged (for once the UK and US agree). So 7.250 often translates as 7,250 and 3,142 as 3.142 - you need to check the context carefully to be sure.

4ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

dexedge 21
This from spanish.about.com is helpful, even if it doesn't entirely solve the problem for translators: "Millions and more: Numbers larger than the millions can get problematic in both English and Spanish. Traditionally, a billion has been a thousand million in U.S. English but a million million in British English, and Spanish has followed the British standard, with a trillion being a thousand billions in either case. Thus 1,000,000,000,000 would be a billion in British English but a trillion in U.S. English. Precise Spanish, following the British understanding, uses mil millones for 1,000,000,000 and billón for 1,000,000,000,000, while trillón is 1,000,000,000,000,000. But U.S. English has influenced English outside the U.S. and Spanish as well, especially in Latin America, so there can be confusion both in Latin America and among English speakers outside the United States about exactly what a billion or billón is."

3ReplyGive Lingot1•4 years ago

[deactivated user]

It may be a new world/old world thing. British usage used to be that a billion was a million million, a trillion was a million billion and so on. The American usage of a billion is a thousand million, a trillion a thousand billion is slowly taking over by mass of speakers.

There are other differences, too - UK (and AFAIK European) usage has ground floor, then first, second, etc. whereas in the Americas the first floor is on the ground, and two floors up is the third.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

dexedge 21

@Kelvinsong: As for what we should do when translating, I guess one should assume that "billón" = American English "trillion" unless there is compelling evidence otherwise, since this is still the accepted "correct usage. That makes "billón" something like a false cognate, at least for speakers of American English. I think this confusion is also a potential problem for a crowd-sourced translation model like Duolingo's, since it's clear that in the case of the vocabulary article, the probably incorrect translation of "billón" as "billion" seems clearly to be "winning" (at least based on frequency of usage). For the translator, there is also the test of whether a particular translation makes sense. In the case of the vocabulary article, trillion seems much more likely to be the intended number than billion.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

dexedge 21

Yes, I was just grappling with this problem in translating an article that was discussing the growth in the number of words printed per year since the invention of the printing press. I'm pretty sure "billón" here was intended to mean "trillion," but it looked to me as if most people translating it had given "billion."

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

dwarven_hydra 15 12 12 10 6 4 3

I thought they used "Miliardo" for billion, like the rest of Europe (including England until more recently, apparently). http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=C-52AI_ojyQ

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MystyrNile 14 8 7 5 4 3

Those aren't false cognates at all, we mostly use the short scale, and Spaniards the long. Short Long Spanish Million Million Millón Billion Milliard Mil millones Trillion Billion Billón Quadrillion Billiard Mil Billones Quintillion Trillion Trillón Sextillion Trilliard Mil trillones

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MystyrNile 14 8 7 5 4 3

Okay, I had set up a nice grid with tabs between the words, and DL removed them all, along with the line breaks. :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mathso2 25 23 11 11 10 10 10 10 10 9 8 7 6 6 6 6 4 4 3 72
Double enter for line breaks ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kelvinma13 24 16 9
Still, what do we do when translating?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Pifta 14 13 12 11 8 8 5
There is even difference between my language (Hungarian) and English, Spanish is a 3rd way to say a large number. Cosfusing, yes.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BurnsieRoehrig 8
the spanish language was before the english language, so we are the wrong one's with numbers

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

248 "I am in the newspapers."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/241949>
Translation: Io sono sui giornali.

04 years ago

Leave a new comment
23 Comments

gingerthought 13 8 4
Why is sui used here?

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

marziotta 17 15 12 11 10 7 2 2 153
"sui" = su + i = on the

"Io sono nei giornali" would have been the same as "Io sono sui giornali."

30ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 6
Yes, but it is different in English. "On the newspaper" would be on the front page, or something on the newspaper that is external to the newspaper. In the newspaper, would be printed inside the newspaper. So, are you telling me that both "sui" and "nei" are accepted by Duolingo for this translation of "in the"?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jarinhumphrey 13 12 7 3

Think of how in English we say, "I saw it on the news" and "I saw it in the news" interchangeably. Both are acceptable, but I hear "on the news" a little bit more often.

6ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 6

It is not exactly interchangeable. I would assume that "on the news" was on TV or a video broadcast and "in the news" is more often referring to a newspaper or news magazine. Still, I see your point. When we are simply, wondering where the information was from in a more vague manner as to whether it were fact or fiction, both refer to the news.

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gingerthought 13 8 4

I see, thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

VicAnnells 11

wait "on the" rather than "in the"???

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fonf123 12

I know it doesn't make much sense but how would you say you are standing on top of the newspaper? would it be the same? Sono sui giornali?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

marinara.sauce 8

The cat is sleeping ON the newspaper. The picture is IN the newspaper. Specifically, the picture is ON page 3. When do you use sui, when do you use nei? Or it doesn't matter? Someone who knows for sure, come and explain it. I don't want to guess.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Trav1sty 15 2

Take a look at this chart of Italian Prepositional Articles and see if it answers your question.
<http://italian.about.com/library/fare/blfare153a.htm>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ElaineOconn 12 2

It is especially confusing as the suggested answer given when you hover over the underlined words is not 'sui' but 'nel'. Not helpful without more explanation.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

MariellaR 16 6 4

Why not "nelli giornali"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iattilagy 12 7 3

nel + i becomes nei and not nelli

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gardenhoser 15 12 11 10 9 3

so first sing and third plu are both the same?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TobyBartels 11 10 9 9 8 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 2

This time, but not usually.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Indreis7 12 6 2

Is it also right to say "Io sono nel giornale"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GloriaMarchese 14

Not according to Duolingo - I just did and Duolingo disagreed.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AntC1 14

I would say "I saw it on the news" and "It was in the news"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GloriaMarchese 14

Finally someone I can agree with re correct English , my problem with Duolingo is that I wrote nel instead of sui and was marked WRONG .

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EspaTalia 10 9 5 3

Is there any reason the translation doesn't include the pronoun? Would it necessarily be incorrect to include the pronoun, or is the pronoun part of "sui?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

YeruanAgui 9

Why is it nei and not nello or nell'

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

chardodd 16 10 6 3

Why Did it mark "Io sono Nel..." wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

DABurnside 24 14 438

As of December 2016, DL accepts both I am in the news/"Io sono nei giornali" and I am on the news/"Io sono sui giornali." As to why the n-e-i form for in/"in," as far as I can tell, there is no preposition "nelli," nor "sulli." "In" becomes nel, nello, nell', nella, nei, negli, or nelle to conform to the noun that follows. Likewise, on/"su" becomes sul, sullo, sull', sulla, sui, sugli, or sulle. This is how I understand them. I hope this helps.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

249 Best Way to Make Your Tree Turn Gold and Stay Gold

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6176795>

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

For the past several months, moomingirl and I have been doing some experiments to find the best way to "regild" trees. Since I thought a lot of people might have New Year's resolutions along those lines, I carefully wrote up our conclusions:

<http://gregreflects.blogspot.com/2014/12/how-to-make-gold-duolingo-tree.html>

The short, answer, though, is do three skill-specific strengthens per day. Never do a general strengthen unless all skills are already gold. Never do timed practice, and never use hints. Regild from the bottom up if you're still comfortable with the language (e.g. you just finished the tree). Regild from the top down if you're effectively starting over. How long it takes will depend on how decayed the tree is and how well you do the exercises. As little as a month. Maybe as much as three or four if all skills are at one bar.

While I was at it, I went through my older post about the best way to use Duolingo and updated it to reflect the big change that did away with hearts.

<http://gregreflects.blogspot.com/2014/09/duolingo-language-learning-as-game.html>

As always, I'd welcome any feedback.

--Greg

Give Lingot136

2052 years ago

Leave a new comment

105 Comments

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Many thanks for putting in the work Greg and Mooms!! ^_^

28ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Moomingirl 25 20 17 17 12

Yay, I'm famous. :D

53ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

wildfood 25 18 15 355

Ha! Since you posted this (about an hour ago) I followed your advice and my tree is now golden, something it hasn't been in a couple of weeks of strengthening the skills as recommended by Duolingo.

15ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

HappyEvilSlosh 25 23 21 20 13 11 10 9 8 7 4 2 2 5

"reguild" trees.

Wouldn't it be "regild" trees?

12ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

Yikes! Fixed.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Moomingirl 25 20 17 17 12

Except in the text above. ;)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

Yikes²! Fixed². :-)

12ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

oskalingo 24 14 10 6 3 4

There's one 'reguild' in the blog post still there

Finally, take your time. Don't try to reguild your tree in a day or two of inhumanly focused effort-- followed by a month of neglect.

Thanks for the write-up, it was very thorough.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Pyrrhia 10

All this regilding! I only just found this post. Thanks for the advice!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

HappyEvilSlosh 25 23 21 20 13 11 10 9 8 7 4 2 2 5

Cool, really interesting post.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NoelFigart 12 12

Dunno. I bet we could work out an interesting pun there...

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

spangineer 25 22 8 2

Very interesting analysis. I'm a bit surprised about your views on timed practice, and am wondering what you think of my typical approach. You say:

"I think [timed practice] strengthens the tree slowly because time pressure encourages people to skip long sentences. The earlier post from Duolingo said that every word counts, so it would make sense that skipping the long sentences would really hurt you."

Personally, I never use the skip button when using timed practice -- I get 20 questions, and each one I either get right or wrong. Furthermore, I've noticed that correctly answering different questions causes a varying amount of time to be added to the clock, presumably based on the estimated time that should be taken to answer the question -- so I'm not sure that skipping questions would ever make sense.

To me, timed practice is more difficult than standard practice, and I'm not sure why, with this approach, it would be more difficult to gild the tree using timed instead of standard. Have you seen a difference between those who skip questions and those who don't with respect to gilding time?

Incidentally, there's a great script that pauses the countdown in timed practice, allowing perusal of the comments or a dictionary following an incorrect answer.

Thanks!

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

My sole concern is with people skipping questions because the sentences are too long--or simply "dying" and never finishing long sentences at all. I've talked to lots of folks who told me they did repeated timed practices but never gilded anything. They admitted they skipped long sentences. That's my data--strictly anecdotal.

If you're really managing to finish all 20 (or however many) questions in timed practice, then I agree it should be just as good. And I'm sure it helps you get to where you have an instinctive feel for the right words rather than thinking through rules. But I think few people are able to do it the way you do. Do you really regularly finish the timed practices without the timer running out?

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cazort 18 18 18 12 8 6 2 2 1

I usually get all 20 sentences perfect, or only miss one, in time practice. I never skip anything. I usually don't even attempt timed practice until I feel confident that I can do it easily. I do it primarily as a way of improving my thinking speed in the language, so that I can think faster in conversations.

If few people are able to do it this way, maybe they haven't gotten good enough. I think DuoLingo is a tool that you can use to take you to varying levels and I've noticed that a lot of people settle for a rather weak command of the language and then feel satisfied, maybe because their tree looks full.

I think this is misguided. The game features are intended to motivate us to work harder at learning a language. They're not the end goal. If people are just trying to game the system, they're just hurting themselves. The point of DuoLingo is to learn a language. I find the timed practice a useful tool for getting to that next step of like...thinking on your feet, which is necessary if you're going to function among native speakers.

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Autodidactyl 20 15 8 6

Excellent point and insights. I have felt that even though both my Italian tree and the reverse are GOLD I don't have a strong enough command to converse in the language. Duo doesn't provide conversational practice. I haven't used the clock much but I will begin to do so. Thanks

An afterthought. Focusing on things like keeping a Gold tree may be fun and challenging but it can distract from the goal of learning a new language.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

spangineer 25 22 8 2

With very few exceptions, yes; in fact my goal is to have 2 minutes of left over time at the end of every round of 20 questions... I don't always finish with that much time remaining but I often do. I save a couple seconds per question thanks to the script I use that stops the clock once I submit my answer and starts only after I advance to the next question, and I make extensive use of keyboard shortcuts.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Alexander.Brale 22 2 210

agreed, same here on the 2 minute ending. I like it because it allows me to think as quickly as I would have to in a conversation. I just hate that if I click the "discuss sentence" the timer doesn't stop.

2ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

Then my caution wouldn't apply to you. Unless you report that you've had problems making your tree gold anyway.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CodyORB 22 12 4 5

I noticed that in shorter skills the timed-practice would "run out" of older, forgotten words to practice, while the longer skills use up all 20 either way.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

CodyORB 22 12 4 5

I personally prefer timed practice as it's more motivating, although for skills with long sentences I'll pick normal strengthening.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

eGhost57 19 4 3 3 2 2 2

Where do I find this script to pause timed practice? I frequently find myself wanting to check the comments but only do it if I've built up enough time or have serious concerns or questions about the phrase.

2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

cherub721 17 16 15 15 15 6 6 3 1134

Thank you, very interesting! Kudos to both you and Moomin for keeping up with that for 90+ days. It's definitely timely, because I've been ignoring some trees and I've been wanting to get back into. I have 22 decaying skills in French, 15 in German, 20 in Italian, and 7 in Russian (to English). (I'm not actively working on Spanish or Portuguese). That's nothing compared to the hundreds of words I'm behind in Memrise. :(

But if I have to do 3 exercises per language per day, that's 12 for the four trees, which is a lot for someone with a full time job, so I don't think I can swing that much. Also, I prefer not to do any new lessons at all whenever I have any decayed skills. I like having the tree gold before moving on, so my progress is quite slow. From time to time I'll do an intensive weekend where I re-gild everything (though I've never had this many), but it seems not to be worth it at all, because after a day or two I always have tons of colorful skills again. It's so de-motivating.

I'll definitely incorporate some of your tips though, like never using the general strengthens while I have ungilded skills, starting from the bottom up (I always practiced the easiest ones first), not using timed practice (I never have, so now I know it's not worth it to start), and never using the hints. I used to use the hints a lot to make sure the word was right so that I wouldn't lose a heart and have to re-do the whole lesson. I thought that would help me pass the lesson and keep the skill gold, but it was probably hurting me.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

The problem with binge-reviewing is that you end up so sick of Duolingo that you don't want to touch it for days. I still think you'd get your best result if you just picked one language and let the others go until you finished that one. When that one is done (even six months from now), you could come back to one of the others and start regilding it from the top. That's a bit like starting over, but it's faster and it does take advantage of the work you did before. When it's regilded, you can start doing new lessons. When you're done, you start another one.

14ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

I feel the same way about not wanting to proceed unless the tree is gold. If you follow my suggestions, I think you'll find that's not so hard to do.

Have you thought about just focusing on one language and letting the others go for a while? I only have two incomplete trees (French and German) and that's challenge enough. I can't imagine what four would be like.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

m_jepson 24 18 15 10 7 6 8

Wow, I'm just stunned about the fact that you are lvl 20 in French, but have not yet completed the tree? I have completed French and I am only lvl 14 now. I've just started German, as I want to finish a tree before starting a new one. But I now have to try and keep French in Gold too.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

It comes from doing Immersion, since that gives you lots of XP. You learn a lot from Immersion, but it does give people a distorted view of your level.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

m_jepson 24 18 15 10 7 6 8

Ah, that explains. I have only done a couple of lines in immersion. I should be taking a new look into it now I have finished my tree.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cherub721 17 16 15 15 15 6 6 3 1134

I often go through periods where I work on just one language. Right now it's Russian :)

The problem is the skills decay so fast (both duo and memrise) when I ignore the other languages and jumping back in gets harder and harder every time. Even a day off leaves me screaming, and now it's been like 6 weeks of basically just Russian. So I was thinking that for the new year I should try keeping up with all of them (not growing them, just not losing them) but it seems so impossible.

Did you complete Italian and Spanish before starting French and German? That's patience. :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

I completed Spanish in the first few weeks, but since I'd studied it for many years it doesn't really count. I started German on the same day I finished Italian--three days ago.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cherub721 17 16 15 15 15 6 6 3 1134

Congrats on the Italian!

I'm thinking maybe - if I have time over New Years - I'll try to binge-review and get everything as gold as I can, and then try do the two general strengthens a day (which is still 8 lessons so still kind of a lot). Usually whenever I do finally get it gold and I wake up the next morning and it's still gold, my first thought is "woohoo, don't have to study language X today!" and then the next day it's "oh, only 2 skills turned, let me review one and save the other for tomorrow" and then within days it's all decayed again. So maybe if I follow your advice of keeping them gold and doing the strengthens, I can at least keep the trees manageable. I like your idea of durable trees, where you can on vacation (even if vacation just means working on another language) and the tree doesn't fall apart. That is really appealing.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jackmchugh12 20 11 10 7

if there are more than 3 weak skills(say 6) do you still only strengthen 3 (for that day)?

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

That's right. Just be patient. Slow and steady wins this race.

10ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

jackmchugh12 20 11 10 7

thanks :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Moomingirl 25 20 17 17 12

Just to clarify that, you only do three skill specific strengthens in total, don't try to completely regild three entire skills.

Some of the larger skills (with lots of lessons within) take more than one strengthen to bring back up to gold, especially if the strength has dropped by more than one bar. So some days you may manage to regild three skills in a row, other days you may have to do three strengthens just on the same skill.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Yerrick 25 23 22 9 7 96

Personally I find it much more interesting to practice different skills each day. One lesson worth of study on a single topic seems to be just the right length for me; beyond that I start to lose interest. I always start with a single general skill review each day to warm up, then practice one skill from every fourth row moving down the tree (again, to avoid too much repetition), then one of each skill unlearned at the bottom (if any). If I still feel like practicing more that day, I go to Immersion.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Yerrick 25 23 22 9 7 96

@Greg nope. If there's not much/anything for me to practice on the tree after my general review, I just flip to the reverse tree and do the same, then Immersion after that. I practice on both trees every day, which also helps with the variety.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

You should definitely do what works for you. there's no point in gilding a tree just because you think it looks pretty. :-) So do you strengthen skills that aren't weak yet?

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Moomingirl 25 20 17 17 12

Fair enough. We are all different, and different strategies keep us motivated.

In your case then, do one strengthening each on three different skills. Sometimes you will regild one, sometimes not. You will still be doing three practices, and getting a bit more variety. :)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

I added it to the duowikiFAQ as this is an incredibly FAQ (can't imagine why we didn't add it earlier).

Anyway, it is interesting that you advise people to re-gild the skills from bottom to top rather than top to bottom as it would theoretically go against the Spaced repetition principles. The oldest practised ones would generally be last.

In addition, the regular practice should in theory be more effective for the same reasons. My guess is that what is good for the tree is not necessarily what is good for the memory, and the fact that most of the questions will be familiar(since they come from one skill rather than the whole tree) means that a student is generally more likely to be more successful and also cheat because they can see the words before the practice begins. I'd wager that's one of the reasons it is better.

Also, a small mistake in your article. A strong skill or word only requires 80% of "strength", 79% and it has decayed. That's why skills decay often, as most people only strengthen it until it reaches the 80% mark and then leave it alone. So the next day one or two words lose their strength and it effectively loses a bar.

Anyway, great article!

4ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

Well I have heard the 80% number quoted, but 50% is what I measured, so I'm sticking to it. :-)

Spaced repetition only applies to independent facts, but the questions Duolingo asks are highly interdependent. The skills at the very top of the tree are heavily exercised in all the skills below. The skills at the very bottom are usually rather neglected. Starting at the bottom causes you to refresh those skills with some delay. As you move up the tree, the ones further down decay and need to be refreshed so you actually do get some spaced repetition.

Therefore, redoing the top third or so of the tree has far less value than redoing the bottom part. If someone redoes the top third and then quits that's worth almost nothing. Redoing the bottom third has enormous value. If someone finishes the whole tree from the bottom up, that person will have redone many of the lower skills--getting a good bit of spaced repetition. If they did it from the top down, they'll end up with lots of practice of the basic skills (which they didn't need) plus another brief glance at the advanced ones.

The only argument for top down is for someone who is thinking of deleting the tree and starting over. It would make far more sense for such a person to just strengthen all the skills from the top down--even skills that are still gold.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Actually, the 80% is related to the bar. There are 5 bars so 4/5 of it are 80%. That's where it comes from. I do agree that bottom up makes sense since older skills are refreshed too.

Though I expect that if one diligently practices using general practice everyday the skill tree is unlikely to deteriorate unless one fails often.

Also, the new strength bar feature may make things change somewhat. So time will tell.

See tatou's official post.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

Yes, but the claim is that 2-bars on words (out of four max so 50%) equals four bars on the skills (so 80%). More accurately, you need to average 2.5 bars on the words to get 4.5 bars on the skills, which turns them gold.

I'm also curious whether the new skill bar will make a difference. I looked at the thread you linked to, but it's all a year old.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

I just remembered something related to practicing and keeping skills strong. If, from the beginning you always practice until you see the image below, then your tree will always be gold. :)

P.S. That's particularly hard to achieve, I've only ever managed to see that when I am starting a course and there aren't many words to practice in the first place.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johnlvs2run 25 19

How do you practice the words?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Well the old vocabulary also had 4 bars so that hasn't changed . See <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1453744> .

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AwkwardCactus 16 6 6

I had no idea that checking hints had an affect. OH SNAP!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Derek 13 13 8 4 3 249

Interesting, thanks for posting the results of your investigation. I just finished a tree, and will apply your suggested best practices. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

Let me know how it goes!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rDnB 13 10 3

Thanks for the informative article, Greg. I will adopt your strategy.

Cheers!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

adlihtam 20 18 17 9 6 6 3 3

Just to clarify, does this apply a) to the app/s or just the site b) to partially or only fully completed trees c) to trees where some skills still have full strength?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

I only use the web site, so I really don't know how the apps work. For a partial tree, I advise two strengthens and one new lesson per day. (Three strengthens on a day when you do no new lessons.) It doesn't matter whether some skills have full strength or not. Hope that helps.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

adlihtam 20 18 17 9 6 6 3 3

Thank you for your very prompt response. I think the app works in a very similar way, so I will definitely be able to adopt the strategies as you have described them. I'm already doing a lesson and recently about 3-4 strengthens a day depending on how many skills were weak. So: I'll do 2 specific/1 specific and 1 general/1 general practice a day as well as 1 lesson, change the order in which I do specific practices, avoid hints and revise my daily goal from 10 to 20 that'll increase the effectiveness of my learning. Merci beaucoup!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

adlihtam 20 18 17 9 6 6 3 3

I think I understand. The information at the top of the page is intended for those with fully completed trees, and the reference to 'a month or two' is how long it would take for a completed tree to become 'durable gold', e.g. fully gilded and able to stay that way with minimal effort from the learner.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Acrosoph 25 18 18 14 10 9 6 4 4 2 14

Very helpful and applicable advice as always -- Thank you!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

Thanks for doing all that work and then writing it up so well.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ilovescience 14 3 3 3 3

Actually, whenever I do timed practice, my skills gilden REALLY F A S T .

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jimnice 23 20 18 9 8 8 7 6 5 5 955

I have been following Greg's guidance with good results -- until today! Yesterday I had a fully gold tree, but I open it up today and see 28, yes twenty-eight skills have decayed. Did the owl eat a bad worm or something yesterday?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aspielman 21 20 19 16 6

Sounds as though the decay algorithm has been revised again - the usual cause of sudden widespread decay.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 118

I never learn anything new until everything is gold.

It's my study method, I remember things better that way ;)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Thanks, Greg! It seems a little too late, yesterday's news (post). Anyway, I daily do three general "strengthen skills" to keep my Spanish tree gold. Almost never failed so far.

edit Happy New Year!

dd2927a3e0

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

Glad to hear it works for you. And Happy New Year to you too!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrs90 18 11 2

I am just wondering, why not use timed practice? I am quite sure that my tree reguilds much faster when i use the timed practice.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

The question, though, is how long does it stay gold.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ilovescience 14 3 3 3 3

It depends, if you practice like a minute a day, your golden tree will decay really fast, and if you spend like 5 hours on Duolingo, your tree will decay slow, like you have to wait a week or two to let it decay one bar.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

I think the issue with timed practice is whether you do the long sentences or not. Some people just skip those. If you're fast enough to really do everything, then I would expect it to work just as well.

It's hard to believe it's actually better, but I can see how it might seem faster, since the regular practice will generally show you the same words two or three times, even though it's 100% strengthened the first time you see it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrs90 18 11 2

Well funnily i am not doing that great in timed practice but even if the time runs out on me after just one or two answers the skill generally regilds. With the standard pratice however I might finish practicing and my skill still is not golden.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Foudeb 25 25 25 24 18 15 14 8 1300

Many thanks for this Greg!

I'm using only timed practice to strengthen skills (I find it more efficient as it requires you to answer straight away - it's more like being in the country and having to speak without too much time to prepare your answers). It does work, my trees are (mostly) golden, but it requires a lot of work. I don't skip any questions though so I don't think your theory is true. Maybe I just give more wrong answers because of the time pressures (I typically get 14-17 / 20 on a timed practice). On one of my trees I'm now trying to do only "normal" practices to see if that slows down the decay.

I am wondering however whether the decay rates vary depending on the tree. I find the upkeep of my Dutch tree a lot easier than that of my Italian tree, the irony being that I would rate my Italian as better than my Dutch.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

I don't really think the decay rates vary by tree. Spanish, Italian, and French all seem quite similar.

As for timed practice being a bit like being in the country, I don't really think it is because 80% of what you do on Duolingo is typing answers in English. Maybe if you did timed practice on the reverse tree it might be closer.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sandyfrench1 25 7 313

I didn't realize I was typing in English 80% of the time. Of course, DL focuses on teaching us to translate as they are able to sell our translations which in turn provides means for them to continuously improve the program. So, I am not surprised that I am better at translating than I am at speaking or understanding fluent French folks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Foudeb 25 25 25 24 18 15 14 8 1300

Surely that mimicks a foreign environment pretty well? when abroad you have to listen and understand a lot more than you have to talk.

I think the decay rate is also influenced by how much activity you do - I thought Italian decayed faster when I was working on it a lot every day, and Dutch was stable even though I only worked on it episodically. Now the situations are reversed and my Dutch is decaying fast while the Italian stays stable.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

No on both counts. Timed practice is rushing you to type an English translation in a hurry. It's not hurrying you to read faster--much less listen.

Activity will adversely influence the decay rate if you get lots of words wrong when you do reviews. Or if you are doing lots of new lessons without bothering with reviews. Otherwise, more reviews means less decay. The graphs in the blog post show that beyond reasonable doubt.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Outer_Space 25

This is brilliant!! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Parsamana 15 15 3 3

First thank you very much.

Second, what if you look at the hints AFTER you answer, does that count against you?

Third, what if you do more than three strengthening per days, is that detrimental? I want to get the course done more quickly, that's why I ask.

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

aiigsh 22 9 8

This is so helpful. I've been waiting for the outcome of your experiments. It all makes sense now. Well kind of... I only do specific strengthening skills. I do about six a day but I can't get my tree golden. Seventy days in so far. You're not saying I should do less? Maybe you are. I'll do three a day for a while and see what happens. I feel like three a day would only let me gold the newly 'ungold' skills. But I'll try it. Great work! Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

When you do the strengthening skills, how many questions do you have to answer? If you make no mistakes, it should be only 17, but if you struggle a lot it can be 50 or more. Do you look at that number at all?

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

aiigsh 22 9 8

Thanks for your question. I use app still with the hearts. So I tried the web. I just did three skills specific strengthen exercises. I had to answer 30, 19 and 29 questions. I guess it would be worth making more of an effort to be more accurate and try to bring the number closer to 17 when I can? Also, I like your blog and what you are saying about reading. Best of luck to you for the new year. Thanks again.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

Happy New Year to you too. Yes, when you get words wrong, Duo strengthens them anyway, but it also makes them decay faster. If you're regularly needing 25 or more answers to finish a lesson, I suspect you'll find that your skills don't stay gold. Think of it as Duo's way of saying you should focus on learning the material really well. :-)

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

No, reducing the number won't help. And seventy days is more than plenty. Something else must be wrong.

Do you use hints? That'll definitely keep it from turning gold. Do you use timed exercises?

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

aiigsh 22 9 8

I use hints only occasionally if I really don't know the word. I don't use timed practise. My tree seems to have settled to gold from before the third checkpoint. But after that most skills have only one bar. So it will take a while to get them back up to full strength. Your advise supports what pink doug recommends. You have added not to delete your tree and start again. I did do that. Maybe that is my problem. Thanks again. I seem to be on the right track. I just need a big dose of patience.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Miytu 18 5 4 4

Early on I found a great way to reguild my tree quickly (a afternoon or so). Select a skill and simply redo a lesson beginning with lesson 1 or beginning with the last lesson in that skill set. If you know where your weak words are doing that lesson first will reguild the skill quickly. As a result I don't worry about it being guilded or not until I come down to the last skill. I will soon guild the tree rapidly and finish the last skill and obtain a golden owl.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DutchDuoL 23 11 10 10 2

I think the best way to make and your tree turn gold and let it stay gold is by doing what you enjoy most. I appreciate your tips but I don't think a golden tree should be the goal. As I can read from many of the comments it can quickly become a chore. Personally, I like the timed practices best, because it trains me to quickly retrieve the information from my brains, a skill that is not trained during the regular lessons. Each his own :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

Actually the whole premise of the "gamification" is to help make learning language more fun by making it more like a video game, wherein the player is motivated to accomplish goals in the game because the player is playing the game. So it is in fact intentional, I think, that they have game goals to pursue.

Of course, whatever works for the individual to enjoy & continue to study is likely their best path.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DutchDuoL 23 11 10 10 2

Indeed, I'm a big fan of the gamification! Just not all goals are similarly interesting to me though. I love finishing the lessons for example, but I hated losing 3 hearts. Likewise, I love making my tree gold, but I dislike keeping it gold at all times because then it starts to feel to much like work. Like I said, to each his own!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

Oh I agree entirely that making the tree gold should not be an end in itself. However, there is a certain appeal to it, and it does seem that if a person goes about it the right way, it can lead to Duolingo asking them review questions that will be useful for their language learning.

I like the concept of timed practice, and if it works for you, by all means do it. I just think that the way most people use it, it ends up not helping them at all. I think most people only answer the short questions and skip the long ones. Then they just keep restarting whenever they "die" and because they get credit for each question attempted, they're racking up lots of points--but not really learning much. I tried it a time or two myself, but it seemed to give you the same amount of time for short or long questions, making the latter almost impossible to do.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaggiePye 21 8 226

I'm interested in that "never do timed practice" thing. I saw your reasoning--that it causes people to skip long sentences. But I never skip anything, and can almost always (unless something interrupts me when I'm doing the exercise) get through all 20 sentences before I run out of time, so are they actually going to be hurting my chance to get and keep my tree gold?

I haven't actually had a lot of problem with having massive numbers of skills un-gild--they're usually things I either had problems with, or that I originally completed via shortcut (those seem to un-gild themselves pretty quickly until I've practiced them a few times). So is doing the full timed practice (20 sentences, usually 17-20 correct, no skipping) a truly bad strategy for me?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

If you really do the entire timed practice--no skipping and not making lots and lots of errors, then, no; it's not a bad strategy for you. For most people, though, I think it ups their error rates (which makes the trees weaken faster) and it tempts them to skip long sentences.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaggiePye 21 8 226

I don't skip, and rarely get below 18 correct (usually 19 or 20). I don't do the timed practices unless/until I'm comfortable with the material; if I'm having trouble, I do the untimed so that I can ponder/look things up/etc. I'm glad it isn't a terrible strategy, because I really enjoy the "beat the clock" aspect. (I can deal with "may be somewhat less than optimal," but not "terrible.")

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BryanAJParry 21 18 13 12 5 72

Brilliant. Thanks for this, Greg.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Keegs. 23 12 29

Thank you Greg

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PoetryOtter 14 7 6 5

Ah, nice about general strengthening - that's what I usually do! I'll do specific strengthening tomorrow, and see how much I can get done.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mintshine 13 5 2

Thanks, this really helps me!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aspielman 21 20 19 16 6

Terrific blogs - really useful

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Karxpava 16 14 8 6 5 4 2

useful advice for learning a new language, but will regard to simply getting back to full fluency with a language one learned years ago (as a child even), maybe it isn't so important to re-gild? Generally once i am reminded what a word in German means, it sticks with me, whereas with Turkish I need continual review.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gildatramo 15 12 10 5

Thanks, Greg! This tree becoming always in color was frustrating me.

Following your advices, today, for the first time in weeks, I opened Duolingo and the tree was still Golden.

I celebrated making three new lessons!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mmiesner 11

Do you suggest trying to keep the tree gold as you go, or completing the tree first, then going back and ensuring the tree is gold? I suspect its much easier to complete the entire tree first, but that I'll have a better (if not nearly impossible) experience trying to keep the entire tree gold while moving downwards.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

My approach was to keep it gold. I think that makes it much more likely that you'll actually learn the language. If you try to rush the tree, you'll reach a point where doing new lessons is extremely difficult because you have forgotten so much of the earlier material. Maybe you'll finish it anyway, but you're more likely to get frustrated and quit.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mmiesner 11

Thanks! That's what Im doing, but it's good to know

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RubyDawg 14

Thanks for the informative website.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Funnylce012345 13 6
THANK YOU!!!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

AnthonyAguilarFu 13
This info was very helpful

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Autodidactyl 20 15 8 6

I can't believe this is a year old and I am just now seeing it. I've been on DL for 10 months. I've got Gold Owls in Italian and the reverse but have let both go mostly colored. (6 weeks out of the country with minimal internet access). I had learned the advantage of working the trees bottom up, however this does not appear to apply to the app. I have never seen the app complete other than the skill being reviewed.

I think there may be advantage to timed review once you are strong in the language. Even though you have to type it all in your native tongue It should encourage more real world processes; that is understanding a phrase/sentence in Italian without having to translate every word to English.

I want to become a reasonable speaker of the language not necessarily pass for a native but able to communicate fluently with a native. Any suggestions along that line?

I'll go read your reflections now.

Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

YCW0 17 14 13 9 9 6 19

This is so helpful. It's been so annoying to me that I've finished the German tree and yet when I "strengthen skills" I'm given the basic phrases. I will follow your advice instead.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

ellen_ofarrell 23 18 17 755

Thanks and that definitely has some useful tips in it. The one thing it doesn't cover is that I believe the revision/strengthening for some trees has bugs in it and doesn't cover all the words it needs to. I have one tree (Italian from French) that de-gilds much much faster than my other ones and in some cases no amount of skill specific strengthening will get the skill gold again (I've tried doing 10 passes or so on that same skill just to check). The only solution I've found to this is to run through the entire lesson again. But even doing that this particular tree is driving me nuts, it feels absolutely impossible to keep gold (I checked it again this morning and I've had 25 skills de-gild on me in the last two days!!!). None of my other trees do this...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

sc0u7 9

Same issue, im re-gilding the same skills every day, even if dont make any mistakes, and if i do 3 a day, then I will be re-gilding them for-ever and never move up the tree. Is there a point to strengthen skill that is already in gold?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ellen_ofarrell 23 18 17 755

There is some point in strengthening skills that are already gold and it will delay them decaying. What the right mix is to complete the tree is really up to you - if you're still using hints or making mistakes other than typos the revision is probably still useful. If on the other hand you are always revising things you know perfectly I'd say drop it and move on. I've generally not had too much trouble keeping the tree gold as I go along it's just the completed Italian from French tree that is a headache.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

250 What is the English equivalent of this German idiom?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8242499>

amaliad1 11

Mit jemandem Pferde stehlen können

Literally, someone you can steal horses with. It means something like: someone you can count on in a tight spot, when things get dicey.

Thanks!

Give Lingot

41 year ago

Leave a new comment

12 Comments

Delta1212 24 12 8 8 8 7 5 4

My first instinct was "someone you'd call if you needed to move a body" but while a common enough saying to be recognizable, I'm not sure it quite rises to the level of idiom, and it also might be a bit stronger than what you're going for.

Especially after looking at the dict translation of the German idiom, I'm going to second "have your back."

If someone had my back, I can count on them to do crazy stuff with me and stick around to help me out if anything goes wrong. "I've got your back" means "You can count on me" (either in this specific situation or in general, depending on whether something is currently, or about to be, going wrong or not).

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

harryclark17 24 14 10 9 7 6 42

Someone who has your back, maybe?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Zzzzz... 25 25 25 24 23 19 16 15 12 2 905

<http://www.dict.cc/?s=Mit+ihm+kann+man+Pferde+stehlen>

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amaliad1 11

"He's a good sport". Interesting. The meaning I'm familiar with has a more "friend who'll have your back" kind of a vibe but I suppose this meaning falls into a related category. Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Zzzzz... 25 25 25 24 23 19 16 15 12 2 905

I thought the second translation was more interesting: somebody who is game for anything. According to this (<http://www.wissen.de/mit-jemandem-pferde-stehlen-koennen>), though, 'friend who will have your back' is a good translation. I usually trust dict.cc, but there is so little information online about this idiom that I am starting to wonder if I should have posted that link at all. My own dictionary (that is, an old-fashioned printed one) gives the translation 'to be really good friends with'.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Yototas 12

I would not be surprised if in German this has changed meaning over time, which means its equivalent translation into an English phrase or idiom would also have changed.

Given the penalties for horse stealing (when such a thing mattered) would have been extremely severe, this must originally have been closer to "someone I completely trust" or "happy to completely depend on".

Perhaps these days it has evolved so far as to become just a daredevil, pal or lightly supportive expression. If I had to guess, a happy medium between the extremes would be, "(someone's) got my back", i.e. a casual expression of loyalty or support.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pineconepeople 11 10 7 5 3 2

[deleted]

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

amaliad1 11

Thanks! That makes sense to me as the meaning I'm familiar with is similar to how you translated it. You would use it to say about someone: that's a person I would be able to steal horses with. As in, that's someone whom I can count on in a tight spot.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mitStrudel 24 20 14 11 4 29

I've heard such things as: "he's someone I'd like to have next to me in the trenches". Probably this doesn't hit the spot, exactly.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

-JJW 24 9 7 5 4 1

"Partner in Crime" has a similar meaning idiomatically and literally. N.B. You don't actually have to commit crimes with the subject.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bibeaults 22 9 7 6 2

"Thick as thieves" is the one that comes to mind for me.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amaliad1 11

Thank you everyone for your replies!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

251 Spanish Tree: finished (228 days), a 'little' review inside.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3117965>

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Summary (tl;dr): Duolingo has been fun to learn Spanish. I started on October 9, 2013 (228=221+7 days; 1 day missed). The streak kept me motivated. Overly long skills were tough and demotivating. Yet I enjoyed almost every day! Most importantly, many thanks go to the Duolingo staff, the moderators and the great community. Guys, you all rock!

After all, I decided to just to get the point(s). Yet it is surprisingly long and still a lot to read (I was even afraid to post it in the first place :)).

Days: 228, 221 on a streak, one day I lost the streak (day 8).

How I found DL: Merely by accident. I clicked a wrong RSS feed and read something about DL (TechCrunch rings a bell, but I simply don't know anymore). Anyway, I signed up immediately, and almost never missed a day (well, one day).

Background: I listened to the Coffee Break Spanish podcast mostly just for fun (after finishing the French one). I also studied a little grammar, particularly conjugation patterns and tenses (no moods).

Difficulty: The tree starts slow (in a good way), with some oddly chosen words (e.g. penguin :)). It is very good for beginners to get a grasp of the language. At some point, it relatively gradually proceeds to be more difficult (here and later on, grammar is needed). At the final stages, the lessons are partly quite challenging (subjunctive etc.).

Timed Practice: I used the "time practice" feature on the web, in my opinion way too late. It is an awesome tool, yet challenging, depending on the skill. Good tool to refresh/re-golden a skill.

Immersion: I found this quite difficult to accomplish. I translated a few sentences. Overall, most articles I tried were very specific where simply my knowledge was insufficient (I might have chosen the wrong articles). The tool itself is great and I reviewed some translations (and thus learning a bit, too).

Fun factor: Learning with Duolingo is fun. Aside from simply learning, the community is really great, the moderators are awesome (particularly but not limited to: Usagiboy7, FrankySka). Personally, I wanted to keep my streak going, so I did at least one lesson (at least), or when desperate a tiny "timed practice".

Suggestions: Some skills are painfully long. I found this to be demotivating (particularly "Abstract Objects 3" at the end!). I suggest to split up those skills and spread them across the tree.

My goals: Although levels and XPs do not reveal anything, I tried to keep my goals to level up (I just like numbers). This was just my personal (weekly or monthly) goal. If I did not reach it, I just let it go (i.e., no beating up myself).

Final Goal: To finish the tree, my goal was to have all skills golden, including the bonus skills. Here is the full golden tree: <http://i.imgur.com/MQ6OsKG.png> (too large to embed). I even had to take the Christmas skills in spring. :)

My Next steps: Doing the reserve tree(s):

English for Spanish speakers

German for Spanish speakers (beta, yet awesome, and I am happy to help)

Strange glitch: I was about to finish my tree when suddenly an unfinished skills (re?)appeared out of the blue (Places: 8/9):

Places

Trophy: Here it is:

Trophy

Additional resources:

(no particular order)

Anki (vocabulary drill, every day)

Readlang for reading articles and capture vocabulary (export to Anki possible)

Podcasts

A mi aire (with a great 'web-app' that follows the spoken words)

Notes in Spanish (Beginner and Gold, in particular, great for on-the-go or gym)

Watching Mexican telenovelas with Spanish closed captions (very helpful to read what they are actually saying!) — dangerously addictive...

News 'drill' on TVE — they really speak fast! I sometimes simply use(d) it as 'background' noise.

Series on Mitele

Eres tú, María (quite basic but good, depending on your progress/skills)

Extr@ en español (also slowly spoken and also good)

BBC Languages (great resource)

Destinos

Apps used (and very short reviews):

Web

I started with the web app. At first, I thought, this is just 'it' (I hadn't known about the mobile apps), just the way it is supposed to be. However, I learnt that the difficulty among other platforms varies a bit. I found the web app the most challenging, compared to the mobile apps.

iOS

I later also used the iOS versions

iPhone/iPod touch [all pre 4.0.x]

I used these devices mostly first thing in the morning to keep my streak going. Also: on the couch as part of relaxing. I found this the easiest way to get around. Fridge magnet puzzles were extremely easy (due to place limitations).

Pros

easy to use

coach feature

great chart

easy to 'click' (touch) your profile to see your own details (streaks, XP, languages)

Cons

only usable in landscape mode

no comments/reporting feature

iPad

The iPad version I mostly used on a desk or sitting on a bench (or something). My favorite app prior to 4.0. The fridge magnet puzzles were a bit harder due to more choices/words.

Pros:

good typing (but that's because of the device)

clear design, particularly pre 4.0 releases (3.x still better) more difficult fridge magnet puzzles (more choices/words)

Cons:

no comments/reporting feature

4.0.x

interface looks 'strange' in a way

no way to see your progress (w/o doing anything)

streaks mixed-up across languages

no chart w/o completing a lesson

duels: robot

long sentences either by listening or simply writing: very difficult robot ridiculously slow on the fridge magnet puzzles not really relaxing

duels: human (never tried so far, sorry)

Android

Mostly used on the go. Later (post-iOS-4.x) occasionally also on the couch, public transport, etc. I did not use it very much at the beginning. It was similar to the iPhone/touch version but had less features (coach, no weekly rankings).

Pros

report/comment feature progress bar on languages

Cons

no charts

no indicator for "on streak"

just overall ranking (utterly useless if someone has 200,000 XP more than you)

Conclusion: Learning a language requires a certain pattern which Duolingo provides. In particular, from the beginner's perspective the processing of the tree is fun and easy to go along (and follow-up). I dare say that the first couple of skills could enhance a learner such that they are able to communicate, although in very basic manners. I wished I could have tested these acquired skills in the real world.

Later on, with more advanced skills, there is simply no way around to look up rules and grammar in text books. Yet the increasing difficulty makes it fun to stick with Duolingo. Gamification as a learning tool is, in my opinion, working very well. Of course, there are yet things to improve (e.g. Vocabularies and a possible export for 'external' intense drills among other suggested improvements).

One of the most frequently asked question is about the proficiency. Personally, I tend to overrate my language learning progress. While I do think that we get the 'full package' to start-off, the way to improve proficiency is a (very) long way. Duolingo provides a solid base. But without studying grammar, it is very difficult to proceed to the next step.

The most important skill is to communicate: while written communication is certainly manageable (e.g. via the immersion tool or otherwise), conversational skills are of less focus here overall. The latter might require a different set of tools, which might as well be integrated into Duolingo at a later stage.

Well, I like the duolingo-way. Not just because it is free of charge and ads-free. The approach to "translate the web" is very inspiring and I hope I can be part of it at some point (that said, at a more productive way).

Post edit: I didn't mean this to have a demotivating touch. I was stuck in the middle of the tree and got back on track.

Give Lingot27
682 years ago

Leave a new comment
42 Comments

endios 21 15 14 6

Haha, this reminds me so much of my adventure with Duolingo :D I finished my Spanish tree a month ago (I wrote this post), it also took me around 230 days (I even lost seven day streak at the beginning). I generally share your feelings about Duolingo :) I found Immersion discouraging at first, but after finishing the tree I had to start using it and now I'm on the roll (just hit tier 3, yay). I'm doing German for Spanish speakers and it's my new favourite course (it's hard to stop thinking in English)!

So, congratulations and good luck with becoming fluent.

PS. They talk really fast on RTVE. I even wondered if I accidentally switched to 2.0x speed

8ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Thank you for your feedback. Your story is strangely similar to mine, with the streaks, immersion, German for Spanish speakers and all. Indeed, thinking in German is strange, I tend to write 'I' instead of 'Ich' and so the hearts go. Maybe I start immersion again. Congrats on tier 3.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

CONGRATULATIONS!!! I really wish I had taken more time when I was initially going through the tree. I think I took 90-some-odd-days. But, I would have absorbed more if I had actually gone and googled what a "present imperfect" verb was, etc. I tried a few times but it was really over my head for not having been exposed to a lot of that in school. So, I really like that you took your time and let everybody know how it went. ^_^ Thank you for this awesome and thorough review!! (and FrankySka and I got a mention, woohoo!! I am so totally putting that in my positive feedback folder.) xD

6ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Thanks. Yes, I think taking it a bit slower could work better for some people, maybe not everyone, though. Thanks for stopping by. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

As far as I can tell, your positive feedback folder has got to be overflowing, Usagiboy7! Thanks for everything that you do for the community.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Thanks, raans for the detailed post. Hey, I started on Duolingo a day earlier on 8-Oct-2013, although my streak is shorter :(btw, the way you are going, you will definitely make an entry to the hall of fame in three months. <http://www.duolingo.com/comment/2933824>

In contrast, I started on iOS. I have been very fond of the prior version of the iOS app. The current version doesn't seem to have the same appeal. I have preferred iOS even though the sentence discussions cannot be seen. For some reason, I make more errors when I take a lesson on the web version :)

I did have some knowledge of Spanish prior to starting on Duolingo, so that allowed me to move faster. Right now I am super excited about the Spanish from French and French from Spanish trees. One day in future, I will start a language totally afresh on Duolingo and then I will be able to recall this post and some of your experiences.

Overall, a very exhaustive, educational and valuable write-up!

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Not sure about the hall of fame. But my goal is to reach 365. Thank you for sharing your experiences. Almost uncanny that you started one day before me. ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

have an up-vote and a Lingot. I found the whole of your article informative and interesting, but just a little scary. I'm still finding things a bit hard only half way through the tree, so I'm starting to tread into new lessons more slowly than when I started! A Whole year ago.

But DL inspires us to keep going, and I do love learning my Italian, and the little bit of Spanish, I've picked up. Spanish will be next on the books :)

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Thanks! Yes, right. I forgot to mention that I was stuck in the middle and was a bit demotivated. Starting slowly into new lessons was my way out and to get back on track!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

That's encouraging. I've drifted back to keep all my bits gold and not moved on for a while. I started learning when I heard my friend (girlfriend?) talking to her daughter on the mobile phone, switching between fluent English and and Italian every 15 seconds and I thought WTF (Excuse the language) I just couldn't understand how it was possible to be so multi-linguistic. I wanted to at least give it a go. Long way to go yet!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Yeah, I was at that point. Keeping it golden vs go further. It was kind of a "loop": every time I did another skills, three (randomly chosen) decayed. But that is the way spaced repetition works.

When I have my daily lunch time 'news drill' on Spanish TV (TVE), I mostly feel like an idiot. I just get the general idea but they are just speaking too fast. So, yes, there multiple WTF-moments :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

Glad you didn't mind the WTF, But this language stuff is hard. I try to watch films, I listen (and translate) Italian music but wonder if it will ever come. I did the first units in Spanish on DL, which seemed so easy, but I would guess that it was because I already knew them in Italian !

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

No worries :). Personally, I stick with series or even (Mexican) telenovelas. They are — for me — long enough to get me entertained without feeling dizzy, but not too long. Telenovelas have the 'advantage' that some things are predictable :). But besides, closed captions on the target language helps in any case.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

I go to the other extreme and try to translate the lyrics of Faber (Fabrizio de Andre) [I can't seem to get the accent up on his surname]] In my opinion - the greatest poet in the world - beats shakespeare! lol. He may be a songwriter, but I know his poetry appears in Italian school textbooks :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrankySka 25 23 16 14 14 10 8 1348

I only just now had time to read this fully :-) thanks so much for the mention! <3

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Yeah, it turned out to be longer than anticipated. :) Thanks for stopping by!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

saxicola 23 16

Thanks, a great review.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Thanks! Glad you liked it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

robertOn 24 14 4 4 46

Thanks for doing this write up. Very informative, very interesting and very inspiring. Definitely not too long!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Thanks. When I re-read the thing it was kind of too long to me. ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Paigey4 15 13 3 2

Amo Coffee Break. I sing the theme song constantly and love the Scottish accents.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Indeed, the theme is kind of catchy. I also love their Scottish accents!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

najim15 15

I finished the Spanish tree in 59 days and Duolingo is amazing!! Today is my 60th day and I will still keep practising and using other resources to improve and gain additional fluency in Spanish

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Johnny-jay 21 11 172

Felicidades! Take a Lingot. Thank you for the list of resources

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

¡Gracias! Here is a list of resources for many languages:

http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Useful_links_for_learning_or_practicing_a_language_outside_of_Duolingo

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mayml 11

Is it only possible to get the Christmas bonus skill during christmas? or?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

endios 21 15 14 6

I am afraid only then.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mayml 11

Ok, thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Yes, only then, and I just used it a few days back... ;) So, I guess DL could offer it not just for Christmas time.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlanFC 16 2

Felicitaciones por lograrlo! Sé que no es fácil el español para los ingleses, pero la constancia siempre tiene sus frutos :) Una duda, ¿Como has hecho para que te muestre tus datos semanales en los 2 graficos laterales? A mi no me aparece así :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

¡Gracias! Los datos semanales en el gráfico son de la página web (una captura de pantalla).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlanFC 16 2

Que raro, a mi no me aparecen. Solo me muestran esos datos cuando termino una leccion.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BenTheGeek 20

I don't think that's a "glitch". Sometimes the Duo team adds new lessons to skills. Correct me if I'm wrong!

Edit: @alexander95015 posted a thread saying that there were some new lessons added. Here it is!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Haha, and that exactly during my last lesson on the last skill. What are the odds? ;) Good to know.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BenTheGeek 20

:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jin hale 23 10

Yesterday I saw some new lessons too and they disappeared today. There were several. I was excited because I thought DuoLingo was expanding.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ALoUSyUseRnaME 25 25 16 9 5 5 4

Congratulations and thanks for sharing your story :) I'm on my way to finish the tree and it feels really exciting! Here's five lingots you should deserve!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Thanks! Good luck for finishing the tree and have fun (it's really awesome which I didn't anticipate). But it strangely took me a couple of minutes that it is over (at least with new skills). ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nateVONgreat 22 4 3 2 2 2

WOW, very nice work doing that, and writing this whole thing! impressive! I am almost done with my tree! cant wait.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Best of luck with your tree! Thanks for your comment.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ikamjh 22 16 10 5

The glitch was that they added another lesson...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

s1mps0ns 13 10 2

Excellent!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

252 "Where are the shoes?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/683024>

Translation: Où sont les chaussures ?

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

10 Comments

wongni 10 8

Why is "Quand sont les chaussures ?" a wrong answer?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DJNikonn 10 6

Quand = When, not where.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

b_adger 10

Although Quand is given as a hover hint for "where" so you can be forgiven for getting this one wrong...

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jordant1022 6

Ou est-ce que les chaussures?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

aucunLien 18 13 10 7

you're missing the verb, you have to think of "est-ce que" as something introducing the sentence, not a verb or noun or anything like that. So "Où est-ce que sont les chaussures?" would be right

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fisherha 9

Aren't shoes usually referred to as a pair? Similar to how you refer to a pair of jeans? So how do you know when they are being referred to as a singular pair of shoes or multiple pairs of shoes?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

meowool 7 5

Un chaussure is one shoe, just like how it is in english, and for some reason, trousers, jeans and pants are referred to in the plural in English.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MzMolly65 16 10

I used les chaussures sont où and got it right but would anyone French actually say it this way?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

fstopfitzgerald 6

Why isn't "Où se trouve" correct for Where are?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Itisgogo_Guy 9

I LOVE numbers

Un deux trois quatre cinq six sept huit neuf dix onze douze treize quatorze canze seize dix-sept dix-huit dix-neuf vingt

Now give me a lingot:)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

253 difference between 'egli' and 'lui'

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2077671>

Rhonue 25 20 8 7 3 3 2 700

What is the difference between 'egli' and 'lui'? we learn only 'lui' here, but somebody told me, that 'egli' is the "better" word for 'he' and that 'lui' is 'him'. And DL accepts both 'egli' and 'lui' for 'he'. Is 'egli' something like old-italian?

Give Lingot

43 years ago

Leave a new comment

9 Comments

riemann3 10 9 8 3

Theoretically, "egli" ("ella" for female, and "esso" for objects) is used as the subject of a sentence. As object of the sentence or after prepositions the correct form is "lui" (or "lei" for female). But anyway, everybody uses "lui" also for the subject. It feels weird to say "egli mangia", for example, even if this should be the correct (but "old") form

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

riemann3 10 9 8 3

I forgot something: as far as talking is concerned, (almost) nobody uses "egli/ella/esso". But if you write something "official" (documents, papers...) the correct use is "egli" as subject and "lui" in the other cases.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1226

Everytime I look up an italian verb and conjugation, I see they always use "egli" to refer "lui" (at first I did not know egli = lui)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

riemann3 10 9 8 3

because the correct form for the subject of the sentence is "egli". So in verbs' coniugations you will find "egli", since is the subject. But as object of after prepositions is wrong. For example, "scrivo ad egli" is wrong in any case, because it is not the subject of the sentence. But when someone is speaking, you will very rarely hear "egli".

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

alantrousers 11 10 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 6 6 5 4 3 3 2 2 2

Sounds a bit like "ye" and "you" in English. Ye is the subject and you is technically the object, but nowadays everyone uses you as both the subject and the object.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Timicek 10 10 10 10 5

Yes. Pronouns egli, ella, esso, essa, essi and esse are not used anymore, although still correct. Lui, lei and loro are used instead.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mmseiple 23 13 12 12 3

I've heard people using "ella" in casual conversation, so it's not completely dead in modern speech. :) To answer the original question, "egli" you'll see a lot in written works. "Egli" is more formal than "lui," but is rarely used in speaking. I'm not sure what the person who told you about meant about "him" and "he." "Egli" and "lui" are definitely both used as the subject ("he"). Maybe a native speaker can weigh in.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

einstein042801 12 9 8 7 6 2

yes. A native said to me that it is old Italian.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lhotun 9

I am a native speaker. Using "lui" as a subject is INCORRECT. It is true that many illiterate people do it, but "egli" is the correct form, and it is still used by anyone who speaks a decent Italian. The reason why "egli" is not really used is because in Italian we generally omit the subject. Thus: "Egli mangia" is correct, but uncommon. "Mangia" is correct and common. "Lui Mangia" is INCORRECT.

-1ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

254 Obrigado vs. Obrigada

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1684717>

LeMaitre 21 15 13 12 11 9 8 8 6 6 6 5 5 4 3 2 2 7

What's the difference between both these words since they both mean thank you. I perceive it's some kind of a feminine - masculine thing, but I'm not sure

Give Lingot

43 years ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

cloudhorizon 16 8 6

You say "Obrigado" if you're a man, and "Obrigada" if you're a woman. :)

9ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

LeMaitre 21 15 13 12 11 9 8 8 6 6 6 5 5 4 3 2 2 7

Oh, so it depends on your gender then. I didn't think about that. Thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ricardojorgerm 7 5 4

If you're a woman you can use both because you'd use the adjectival form in feminine and the interjectional form in masculine: "obrigado" can be considered an interjection - "Obrigado!" ('Thanks!') - and in that case it is usually written in the masculine form (but that's what the grammar guys say <http://www.flip.pt/Duvidas-Linguisticas/Duvida-Linguistica/DID/1008.aspx>, I hear "Obrigada!" quite often). If you're a man you're only supposed to use the masculine form, but as a native, I've seen variations because little boys are (sometimes due to gender role tradition) taught by their mothers to be well behaved and they might say "Obrigada!", sometimes even when they're older! ;) - so in essence, it doesn't really matter, the intention is what counts.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Paulenrique 21 15 13 10 8

<http://www.duolingo.com/comment/60688>

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

manfazil 14 13 10

Here in Brazil I hear women saying 'obrigada' by far more often than saying 'obrigado'.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mastymino1 3

When duolingo makes the lessons, I can hear the man saying obrigada that I believe is wrong they should correct this cause it could confuse people.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

255 What is the difference between 'que' and 'cual' ???

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1936132>

Sir_Sohail 7

I have a confusion between the 2 above mentioned words. The hovering texts on both 'que' and 'cual' shows the meaning 'What', but they are used in a particular way. The 2 words cannot be used interchangeably. Please, can anyone pull me out of my confusion???

Give Lingot

73 years ago

Leave a new comment

9 Comments

sebas90 17 17 16 14 11 10 8 8 8 6 6 3

Que (Qué when in questions) = what and that (when it's not a demonstrative) Ex: What do you know?= Qué sabes tú? and "I know that they love each other = Sé que ellos se aman". While "Cual" is more "Which". you could technically translate "what" into "cual" as long as you can also translate that "what" into "which".

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CattleRustler 19 12 1054

Cual is more like "Which", Que' is what. So you can ask someone What do you want? Or if the situation requires a choice, you say Which do you want. Try not to replace Que' with Cual, when the word "what" is intended.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mrben83 25 11 9 8 2 2 2 2 2

As CattleRustler said above, however do take note that there are a few occurrences where Cuál is used in Spanish, where you would expect it to be what. These you'll get with practice such as "Cuál es su profesión?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CattleRustler 19 12 1054

Cual is being used there because the question really means "Out of all professions, which is yours?"

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mrben83 25 11 9 8 2 2 2 2 2

Yes! not a normal English phrase was the point I was trying to make, badly explained ;)

Also "Cuál es tu pregunta?" came up on a refresher as soon as I posted this!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

http://spanish.about.com/cs/grammar/a/que_vs_cual.htm

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maritzapaja 4

THE son los artículos que utilizamos en español :el, la los, las, la traducción dependerá si tu sujeto o sustantivo esta en singular o plural ejemplo: los patos= THE DUCKS-----EL PATO= THE DUCK. te das cuenta en tu ejemplo " THE BOY" ESTA EN SINGULAR entonces seria EL NIÑO--- otra buena señal es la "s" en el verbo porque se adiciona la terminación "S" o "ES" cuando el sujeto es singular es decir :una mujer, un hombre o un objeto, PERO no con Tú o Yo que también son singular.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Teacher Mario27 9

Lo que dices es cierto porque la S en el sustantivo indica que THE es plural (lo-las) y la S en el verbo indica que es singular (el- la-). La diferencia entre The y He, es que el primero es artículo definido y el segundo es pronombre personal.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LIPIBAMA 5

Muchas gracias, me gusto la respuesta.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

susurros azules 11

si claro es asi, singular y plural es the, the man and the men, el hombre y los hombres y HE es para nombrar el genero masculino He is a good man. el es un buen hombre.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

I am Not Batman 11 2

Sí, efectivamente como dices. Recuerda que el artículo "The" equivale a "la, el, las, los" y el artículo neutro "lo" en español; por ejemplo:

The boy = El niño

The girl = La niña

The women = Las mujeres

The men = Los hombres

The best = Lo mejor

Y para lo de "boy" recuerda que significa niño, pero cuando dices "boys" son dos o más niños; entonces el verbo depende del sustantivo, si fuera "boy" tendrías que trabajarlo con un verbo en 3ra persona (Se agrega "S"), y con "boys" con un verbo en 2da persona (No se agrega "S") P.D. Esto solo funciona en el tiempo Presente

The boy eats = El niño come

The boys eat = Los niños comen

The girl runs = La niña corre

The girls run = Las niñas corren

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

257 Swedish R's: How to pronounce them?
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5522768>

ClemeyTime 6 5 3

I encountered a Swedish r at åter. The Swedish r seems like the Spanish r, but I can't pronounce either of them. Does anyone have any tips?

Give Lingot
132 years ago

Leave a new comment
21 Comments

Blehg 13 12 11 10 10 10 9 6 3 2

In Standard Swedish, the r is similar to the Spanish single r (that is a tap, /r/). It's a myth that we roll our r's. Few people do, in fact, it's more common to "weaken" them to something that resembles the English r, although not as strongly as in English.

In the South of Sweden, a uvular r is used, as in German or French. It's simple, but might sound a bit funny if you're learning Central Swedish pronunciation otherwise, although it's not really a huge deal.

If you speak American or Canadian English you probably already know how to make the Swedish/Spanish r, except that you think of it as a t/d. In American English, t/d turns into a tap between vowels, so that for example "Eddy" and "get up" is pronounced like "eri" and "gerap". Slight exaggerations at the end there, but I hope you get my point :) I'd say that's a good place to start practicing!

25ReplyGive Lingot10•2 years ago

BruceHuskyDamon 11 7

You write that you don't roll your r's and yet both my swedish friend and my norwegian friend said its common to roll your tongue and that actually in scandinavia its most common in sweden.

I dont wanna speak broken swedish and I don't know on what to go, roll or not to roll.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Blehg 13 12 11 10 10 10 9 6 3 2

First of all, do they roll their r's, or do they say that they roll their r's? Usually the confusion starts there. It's very common to refer to the /r/ pronounced with the tip of the tongue as a "rolled r" to contrast it with the /R/ pronounced in the back of the mouth (the southern r). That doesn't mean that it's actually rolled. (To make the terminology clear; when I say rolled, what I mean is a trilled /r/ with more than one 'rolling' vibration.)

The r can be rolled when it or the word it's in is being especially stressed, or sometimes when the preceding vowel is short (making the r long). The most common pronunciation in Central Swedish, in all contexts, is the tap pronunciation (as described above) or the approximant pronunciation - which is like a tap but weaker, with the tongue just barely touching the roof of the mouth.

As a Swedish speaker, when you actually hear someone speaking Swedish using only really rolled r's, you react, because it sounds odd and emphatic.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kendallkimosabe 13

I feel like this is probably a dead topic, and I'm sorry if so, but I keep coming back to this and I can't help but wonder, is this maybe just a dialectal thing? Obviously I'm not a native, you'd have a better idea, but I've been, for all intents and purposes, sort of living in Linköping for more than four months. I've been pretty well immersed in the language, going to classes with my boyfriend at his school and generally being around the Swedish language far more than I've been around English. Television and films, music, YouTube, just listening to people talk in coffee shops and to my boyfriend and his family and friends, really every way imaginable, and I've noticed that nearly everyone uses quite a noticeable trilled 'r' pretty often in their speech. Not always, but in quite a few words it is there. Not just flipped or tapped, but rolled. And it confuses me that I keep reading in places that the Swedish 'r' isn't rolled, because I hear it quite a lot. I just didn't know if this was just some sort of statistical anomaly, like maybe the people that I happen to be around are just really prone to trilling their r's, or if it's dialectal, or anything really. Again, sorry if I'm, like, beating a dead horse with this one, but for some time I've been a bit fixated and, for lack of a better word, frustrated with my inability to roll my r's and with my lack of comprehension about whether or not it's used.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Blehg 13 12 11 10 10 10 9 6 3 2

It's a valid question. A rolled r does exist, it's just that it isn't used most of the time. There is no dialect issue regarding this, just to make that clear. R ought to be pronounced pretty much the same in most of the Central Swedish area.

Now, r is generally not rolled, but tapped or even weaker. This is most obvious in unstressed words and syllables. You may also notice that people with a Stockholm dialect tend to have more English-like r's (that is, approximant r's) than people from the rest of Sweden. When the rolled r does occur, it is usually more weakly rolled than in languages like Spanish or Finnish, and as I said often it is reduced to a single tap (like the Spanish single r). The rolled variety is most likely to appear in a stressed syllable, particularly before a vowel (f.ex. in words such as 'resa', 'rida', 'rad'). Rolling also occurs when words with r are being singled out or otherwise emphasized.

If you don't know how to trill/roll an r, I'd say just stick with the tap. If you immerse yourself enough in the language you'll pick up on it and eventually start rolling them slightly in the positions this might occur. And if not, nobody will notice, because the tap is close enough and common enough anyway :) A rolled r is not a necessity for speaking or sounding Swedish.

As for the apparent double standard whether or not the r is rolled; The reason you come across the claim that Swedish r isn't rolled is for 2 reasons: 1) It usually isn't, and 2) Stressing that it is rolled gives a false picture of the variation in the r sound, and leads non-Swedish speakers to either over-roll it, or to give up on it (because they can't roll an r) and use English r's (which is even worse). By emphasizing the more common pronunciation of r, it will help learners of the language to actually start using a common Swedish variety of r, which will help the overall pronunciation so much more.

Don't hesitate to ask if you have further questions :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rhythmialex 22 17 14 11 9 8 6 5 864

I use the tapped R. But just being curious, does an English-like R sounds really bad, even for Stockholm dialect? Thank you. :)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Joel__W 11 11 7 6 5 5 5 3 2

Not to diminish your experience, but this is what I as a native speaker, would perceive to be the standard pronunciation of single and geminate /r/. The realization is somewhere between a alveolar flap/tap and an approximant in my unprofessional opinion. Could it be that you from the perspective of an English speaker perceive it as more "trilled" than English /r/, and this hear it as a trill even when it isn't one? Because it can be a trill when you are putting emphasis or speaking very carefully.

Just took the first examples that came to mind: <http://sv.forvo.com/word/sp%C3%A4rr/>
<http://sv.forvo.com/word/sp%C3%A4r/>

Compare with Spanish, that has a true trill and flap in the cases. Different, no? <http://sv.forvo.com/word/caro/#es> <http://sv.forvo.com/word/carro/#es>

EDIT: In the beginning of a word you can also hear a trill sometimes, as Blehg stated. But that would also be associated with more articulated speech.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hobomonkey990 10 2

I've heard it's a matter of formality, if you want to be poetic you roll your Rs, if you want to be casual you tap them along with the approximate, and if you want to be sort formal(ish) you have hard Rs, at least that's what I've noticed from listening to people speak.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BruceHuskyDamon 11 7

Thanks, that helped :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Skoldpaddor 5 2

Using the French rhotic seems a bit lazy, tempting as it is. The classic Swedish R sounds beautiful. Could you elaborate on your last paragraph? I speak American English and I can approximate a rolled r, but it sounds nothing like the Swedish R. I heard the Swedish R as an L, almost, but it's a T/D?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Joel__W 11 11 7 6 5 5 5 3 2

Well, uvular trills and fricatives are used in the south of Sweden, so there's nothing wrong with them. In central Sweden, it can be a flap, a sibilant or an approximant. The last one is actually the same as English 'r', and is very common when 'r' is at the end of a syllable. What you think of as "beautiful" is probably the flap though. Try saying "bitty" rapidly several times; you will most likely pronounce 'tt' as a flap.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Skoldpaddor 5 2

I sounded kind of mean to the south there. I do love the Skånska dialect, but I want to push myself and not accidentally Frenchify my Swedish. I've heard Rs pronounced as that zh-ish approximant sound, but I thought it was a dialectal thing. I've also noticed the flap is easier to pronounce in certain words (jordgubbe springs to mind, if that is a flap).

I've heard "guitarra" and "morgon" pronounced with something that sounds very much like a Spanish R, though. Is that a quirk of loanwords, if those are loanwords?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Joel__W 11 11 7 6 5 5 3 2

Well, the Swedish word for guitar is en gitarr (pronounced 'jitarr'), and since it's a geminate consonant, it can be pronounced as a trill when it's emphasized, but will probably be a flap. Morgon is a native Swedish word, and pretty much everyone pronounces it as morron. The same applies here. 'Jordgubbe' is a special case though; here the 'r' assimilates to the 'd', making 'd' postalveolar or retroflex. This means that instead of being articulated with your tongue at your teeth, it's articulated behind the alveolar ridge at the soft palate, either with your tongue curled backward or not. Note: this process happens everywhere in Swedish, even across words, and applies to all dental consonants /t d n s l/ preceded by /r/.

7ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

Luke_5.1991 22 18 15 14 14 13 12 12 11 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 5 5 4 4 1

Try imitating the tt in the US pronunciation of butter. That works for me.

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Antoineclaisse 16 10

Pretend you come from Skåne and use a French-ish r :o

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ClemeyTime 6 5 3

That sounds nice. :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gluehbirneee 14 12 11 10 8 5 60

There's a wikihow article about that in which a few methods are explained:

<http://www.wikihow.com/Roll-Your-%22R%22s> Still none of these methods worked well for me but I'll just keep on trying;)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Joel__W 11 11 7 6 5 5 3 2

As stated above, /r/ is not actually trilled in Swedish, so using a 'Spanish' /r/ would sound strange.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LeonhardtS1 11 11 10 10 9 6 3 3 2 2

Put your tongue behind your upper teeth and blow some air through it... somehow :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheGoomy42 8 6 6 3

The way I learned to pronounce the swedish /r/ is by using this video :

<http://youtu.be/V2wzUuGm7yw> It is from a Japanese perspective but it is the same sound /r/. Hope this helps any others who stumble upon this problem.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Mayo2017 8 3

Oh, I'm actually really familiar with the Japanese /r/.

That just made it 50 times easier.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

258 Mon, Ma, Mes. Son, Sa, Ses.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/46329>

Rachopertrat 13 13 8

What is the difference between 'mon, ma, and mes' and 'son, sa and ses' ? It's so confusing! Please explain someone.....

Give Lingot

424 years ago

Leave a new comment

40 Comments

hugolemieux 24

In english, what determines if "his", "her" or "its" is the gender of the one who own the thing.

In french, it's the opposite. The gender of the possessive article is determined by the gender and number of the thing that is possessed.

-

For exemple:

Mon livre (masculin singulier)

Ma pomme (féminin singulier)

Mes livres / Mes pommes (pluriel)

-
So when it ends in :

on : masculin singulier (ex: "mon ami" = my friend; "mon livre" = my book); or féminin singulier, when placed before a feminine noun starting with a vowel (ex: "mon amie" = my (girl)friend).

a : féminin singulier

es : pluriel

-

The first letter determine who owns the thing:

mon/ma/mes : My ton/ta/tes : Your (singular) son/sa/ses : His/Her/Its

-

For plural owners, it's something else. The gender of the object is not important, only the number:

Our: Notre livre / Notre pomme / Nos livres / Nos pommes

Your : Votre livre / Votre pomme / Vos livres / Vos pommes

Their : Leur livre / Leur pomme / Leurs livres / Leurs pommes

277ReplyGive Lingot22•4 years ago

CorkSpork 17 8 3 2 30

This is tremendously helpful. Merci!

15ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

KajLundsga 6

the french language has so much redundancy in the french language

13ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

salehgeek 13 3 2

"The gender of the possessive article is determined by the gender and number of the thing that is possessed"

That solves everything, thanks!

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ChrisW37621 11

Same as your comment

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Captman 12 8 4 2

Parfait! Merci.

5ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

TominoCZ 12 5 4
Merci beaucoup! :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

dirtSlut 7 6 5 4
c'est parfait

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

carolynhebert 21 6 242
Oh my goodness! Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

ercj95 10 6
Merci beaucoup ! C'est es parfait !

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mindinagarage 5 4
great! very helpful thx!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tracidmartin 11 7 5 3 3
This has been driving me nuts! Thanks so much for your help.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lyzure 10
J'aime! Merci beaucoup!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LeeTbv 15
Brilliant! Thank you! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

whaleyrn 8
Hugo, if you are still out there somewhere, this post was tremendously helpful, thank you so much.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hugolemieux 24
Yes I am, and I read every comment. I'm glad I could help :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]
Tons of help, thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

larryb82 5

This is a great answer, however, I have a follow up question. Since, Son and Sa are tied to the gender of the object and not the owner. How can I say It's his? in order to indicate that an object belongs to the man and not to the woman standing beside him.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hugolemieux 24

It is generally implicit with the context. However, if you really want to specify who's object it is, you can use "de" or "à", in the same way you use "of" in english. ex: "C'est son objet à lui" (It is his object) or "C'est l'objet de sa voisine" (It is the object of the girl next to him)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

boowee 15

Very helpful. Merci beaucoup!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

D_O_M_O 25 9 9 6 4

Not to be on you case, but its Merci. :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

abcd1111 15

Thanks for the explanation, I speak spanish and this has some similarities with my language but still I was some confused, In Spanish Mi, Tu, Su, Sus have no gender, except for Nuestro/Nuestra (ours) and mío, tuyo, suyo or mía, tuya, suya. And in these last cases refers to the possessed item. So I must understand this well in English and French to understand how it translates to Spanish. :) ;) but the course is very good.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mb0742 17 9

c'est très bon! Merci

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DupontAndre 12 11

Merci!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DanaRussell 9 4

Thanks this explanation helps so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SwagatGaik 9 3
Merci beaucoup!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bellwitch 13 4
This is an amazing help - thank you so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tbehan2 10
Thank you that was very helpful :)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rachopertrat 13 13 8
Yes thank you, this is a very good answer.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

pedro_torres 5
salute! merci beau coup, mon ami!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kakotrichis 12 9 6 6 5
very helpful. helped me a lot understanding this. tks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

6am 7
merci beacoup, c'est marveilleux

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RyanTran 12
Merci Beaucoup!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Shellymitch 10
You are a star! I was quite confused, but now all is clear. Thanks very much.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JanelleAkua 18 4
merci

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kayoung5 7 6 4

mon is masculine, ma is feminine, mes is plural; son is masculine, sa is feminine and ses is plural

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dvyne91 10

I've been struggling for weeks. Why didn't I read this earlier. Merci beaucoup!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

iluvjanie 6

Excellent; I was lost until I found hugolemieux's comment? Merci.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MariaAnghel123 3

hugolemieux 22 1 In english, what determines if "his", "her" or "its" is the gender of the one who own the thing.

In french, it's the opposite. The gender of the possessive article is determined by the gender and number of the thing that is possessed.

-

For exemple:

Mon livre (masculin singulier) Ma pomme (féminin singulier) Mes livres / Mes pommes (pluriel) -

So when it ends in :

on : masculin singulier (ex: "mon ami" = my friend; "mon livre" = my book); or féminin singulier, when placed before a feminine noun starting with a vowel (ex: "mon amie" = my (girl)friend). a : féminin singulier es : pluriel -

The first letter determine who owns the thing:

mon/ma/mes : My ton/ta/tes : Your (singular) son/sa/ses : His/Her/Its -

For plural owners, it's something else. The gender of the object is not important, only the number:

Our: Notre livre / Notre pomme / Nos livres / Nos pommes Your : Votre livre / Votre pomme / Vos livres / Vos pommes Their : Leur livre / Leur pomme / Leurs livres / Leurs pommes

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

MariaAnghel123 3

thx hugo now i can study

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

259 "I am at the bed."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3810758>

Translation: Ich bin bei dem Bett.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

26 Comments

Anneleerika 19 7 6

Why isn't "am Bett" accepted? How can you decide when to use "an" and when "bei"? Apparently you can't just translate from English like an=at and bei=by.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

niceliz 25 6 3 2 2

The usage of prepositions in German is pretty tricky and doesn't correspond to English a lot of the time. This page from the University of Michigan explains when certain prepositions should be used and it might help you (also, scroll up to "c" where it says "Use "an" to describe motion...").

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kanko 17 10 6 2 2 2

I put "Ich bin am Bett" and it was accepted. Is it correct, though?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EeroK 12 5

It is.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kanko 17 10 6 2 2 2

Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MegaMag 7

what's wrong with "ich bin im bett" ?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

niceliz 25 6 3 2 2

"Im Bett" is "in bed."

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

senor_vaca 15 12 7

Why is it not "beim Bett"?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Averin88 8

I wrote "beim Bett" and it was accepted...

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

schmitzel76 21 13 12 9 749

As "beim" is a short form of "bei dem" both are acceptable

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pnisa 6 2 2

why is 'auf dem Bett' wrong?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EeroK 12 5

That would mean "on the bed".

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Adriaanloan 8 5 2 2

Good enough for me, haha

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

V.D.Alone 8

Why use here "dem" article for "the" ?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

susanstory 20 17 13 11 10 10 9 9 8 8 5 4 3 3 3 550

Because it's "das Bett" and "bei" takes dative case.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

ElizabethC419238 11 7 2 2

an is a two way preposition. So as long as you have it in the dative case (am dem or am in this case) then it should be accepted, correct? Because you can say Ich sitze am Tisch. (I sit at the table) or Ich sitze an den Tisch. (I sit (myself) at the table.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EeroK 12 5

A small correction:

Ich sitze am Tisch (sitzen = to sit)

Ich setze mich an den Tisch (sich setzen = to sit (down), to take a seat)

"am Bett" and "beim Bett" are both used. I have no idea, which is "better". I would for example say that a nurse is "am Bett" when she is at the bedside taking care of someone, but if I'm talking about my mobile phone, I'm keeping it "beim Bett" during the night. This coming from a non-native who hears a lot of dialect, so take it with a warning ;)

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

loz_m 12 9

How come you say, "Ich bin zu Hause" (I am at home) but not "Ich bin zu Bett"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JimvanderB 8

What is wrong with "Ich bin am das Bett"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HeinrichIV 19 8 7 7 4 2

There would be two articles and two cases : (1) "dem" (Dativ) contracted with "an" into "am" and (2) "das" (Nominativ). Both for the same noun simultaneously.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lexagen 11 4

I am not a native English speaker, but can someone clarify to me how often do you use in English "I am at the bed"? It just sounds so strange...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JonErikS 20

Almost never. I can only think of two instances where at the bed is useful: 1) ... at the bedside [of someone who is sick] 2) ... at the bed [waiting or looking for something]. "...by the bed would generally be preferable and has fewer implied meanings attached.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TravisHeredy 12 2 2

So what does "bei" mean exactly and when do I use it?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wwest003 13 6 4 3

Why not "Ich bin auf dem Bett."?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

niceliz 25 6 3 2 2

"Auf dem Bett" would be "on the bed"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3

Hello everyone!

לכולם שלום !

Welcome to Hebrew Time #10! For those of us who are joining now – Hebrew Time is a series of weekly posts about the Hebrew language, Israel, and the Jewish people.

You can see the previous post here

Ready? Let's go!

Today we are going to talk about the Hebrew nouns, adjectives, dual and plural forms.

Nouns

In Hebrew there are two genders: masculine and feminine.

Each verb in Hebrew has its own gender, even though some nouns have both masculine and feminine forms.

Basically, there are no guidelines which helps us know what is the noun's gender - but we can figure it out through the adjective (we will get back to this later).

Examples for masculine verbs:

גבר-man

תפוח-apple

בית-house

Examples for feminine verbs:

אישה-woman

ציפור-bird

ביצה-egg

Nouns that have both masculine and feminine forms

These nouns are usually animals.

In order to make a masculine animal noun into a feminine animal noun, we just add the letter "ה".

Beware that some animals have their special nouns for masculine and feminine and some have only feminine or masculine form.

We'll give some examples for the rule we explained:

dog masculine: כלב feminine: כלבה

cat masculine: חתול

feminine: חתולה

horse masculine: סוס

feminine: סוסה

Dual and Plural

Plural

The plural form in Hebrew not like in other languages, as it depends on the noun's gender.

There are two possible situations when making a singular noun into plural noun:

masculine

When making a masculine singular noun into plural noun, we add "ים" (im) to the end of the noun (note: if the noun ends in the letter "ר", we omit it).

For example:

House - בית
-> Houses - בתים

Apple - תפוח
-> Apples - תפוחים

Man - גבר
-> Men - גברים

Feminine

When making a feminine singular noun into plural noun, we add "ות" (ot) to the end of the noun (note: if the noun ends in the letter "ר", we omit it).

For example:

Guitar - גיטרה
-> Guitars - גיטרות (Gitarot)

Hour - שעה
-> Hours - שעות (Shaot)

Note: There are some nouns which their plural form goes by the opposite gender (masculine plural form for singular feminine noun and the opposite). There is no way of knowing, you just have to learn these exceptions.

Dual

The dual form doesn't exist in English, and in the modern Hebrew it exists only in very specific nouns.

The source of this form is in the biblical Hebrew where each noun had singular, dual and plural form.

In modern Hebrew, this form is only exist in words related to time. Some useful dual forms nouns:

For the noun Day -

Day-יום

Two days - יומִים

Days - יָמִים

For the noun Year-

Year-שָׁנָה

Two years - שְׁנַתַּיִם

Years - שָׁנִים

For the noun Month-

Month - חֹדֶשׁ

Two months - חֲדָשִׁים

Months - חֳדָשִׁים

For the noun Hour:

Hour - שָׁעָה

Two hours - שְׁעָתַיִם

Hours - שָׁעוֹת (Shaot)

The following dual form has no similar forms:

Two days ago - שְׁלֹשֹׁם

The following dual form is derived from the word Tomorrow:

Tomorrow - מָחָר

In two days - מָחָרָתַיִם

Adjectives

In Hebrew, in contrast to English, the nouns changes depends on the noun's gender and number.

In addition, the adjective comes after the noun.

The adjective's gender goes only by the noun's singular gender (original gender) - as we said before, there are situations when masculine plural form changes to singular feminine noun and the opposite.

We will use the adjective "גָּדוֹל" (big) for example.

For masculine:

Singular - גָּדוֹל בֵּית - big house

In the masculine singular form we use the basic form of the adjective.

Plural - גְּדוּלִים בָּתִּים - big houses

In the masculine plural form we(always) add "ים" to the adjective.

For feminine:

Singular - גְּדוּלָה יְלֵדָה - big girl

In the feminine singular form we(always) add "ה" to the end of the adjective.

Plural - גְּדוּלוֹת יְלָדוֹת - big girls

In the feminine plural we(always) add "ות" (ot) to the end of the adjective.

That's it! You now know how to use nouns and adjectives in Hebrew!

We can't finish without telling you:

לִחְדוּרָא ת!

See you later!

That was the 10th Hebrew Time, thanks for joining us! Join our facebook group here!

Support the future Hebrew for English speakers course so we will be able to work on it!

Thanks MaeMcA for helping me write this post!

That's it!

טוב ערב!

Erev Tov! (Good Evening!)

Give Lingot10

192 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

loolitay 13 11 6 2

Have you really been doing this for 10 weeks? Insane!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

susanstory 20 17 13 11 10 10 9 9 8 8 5 4 3 3 3 550

Well, he wants to do a Hebrew course on Duolingo.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

loolitay 13 11 6 2

I am aware :).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 4 2 2 9

Seeing the words אי שׂה and גבר has reminded me of something that confuses me and which I would love to know the answer to!

I've seen אי שׂה and גבר both used to mean man/a man, but I've only seen the plural - so far as I remember! - as גבריִם. OTOH, I don't remember seeing woman as anything but אי שׂה, but the plural as נשים (which I may have misspelled...). There might very probably be other ones I'm not aware of, because I am still only a beginner, but I wondered if there was logic here I'm missing or if I have just totally misunderstood or... I iz confused!

Thanks for all you guys' hard work, which is hugely appreciated רבתי דהם:

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

loolitay 13 11 6 2

Wow I use those words but I've never even noticed that O.o. Now I want to know the answer! Anyone?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaeMcA 20 8 4

Right אי שׂה is man, and woman is אי שׂה. The plurals of both are irregular - the plural of אי שׂה is נשים, and the plural of אי שׂה is אנשים - BUT, in true patriarchal style, אנשים actually means "people" (even though אי שׂה always means "man"). If you want to expressly say "men", you can use the word גבר, which means something more like "bloke", and then use its plural גבריִם - blokes.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

elishevabb 10 10 9 7

Thanks again for all the wonderful work you guys are doing. I just wanted to say that I learnt the rule for determining the gender of a noun differently from the way you presented it. I was taught that gender is determined from the singular form of the noun. Words ending in "ah" and "taf" are feminine, with everything else being masculine, and there is a limited list of exceptions to this rule (like לֵהָלַךְ, לֵי אֶבֶן and so on). (I have the list somewhere and will try to look it up). On the other hand, whilst there are rules on forming the plural of nouns, there are so many exceptions, it's best to learn each one individually.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

261 What do you think are the top five most useful languages?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1125470>

O-JO 16 10 9 2

I was just curious as to what languages other people find the most useful. Things to consider are how many people speak the language, how many countries speak the language, and how many opportunities could one get by learning this language. My top five are based off of the United Nations official languages, minus english of course. Chinese Mandarin, Spanish, French, Russian, and Arabic. What are yours? :)

Give Lingot

113 years ago

Leave a new comment

31 Comments

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 13

This is one of my favourite questions. There are so many ways to answer it. From the point of view of hedging your bets, not knowing where you might end up, my five would be Spanish, Russian, Arabic, Mandarin, and while it is very hard to decide the last, French is useful at least somewhere on almost every continent and even large swathes of the pacific ocean. You'll probably notice that I also picked the UN official languages, which I only mention because I originally decided on those 5 independently, and was quite surprised that the UN agreed with me :)

I pick those five because apart from Spanish and French, they are completely unrelated, they are all widely dispersed, and all very influential on (and/or influenced by) the languages that surround them.

I hate that my list has two Romance languages in it though, so the other languages that were fighting for that spot are German (because it is a doorway into all the other Germanic languages), Turkish (because it the same thing for turkic languages), Hindustani (etc etc) and Indonesian.

All of those languages, even if you don't end up directly using them, are extremely helpful in learning even more languages, in the same way that learning Spanish helps you learn Portuguese, learning German helps you understand basic Dutch, so in that sense they are all a 'safe investment' because you can use their 'synergy' to get by almost anywhere.

However, once you start to use that rationale, you can loosen your decision making a bit. If we say that learning German helps you learn Dutch, but you really want to see the dykes in Holland (hey get your mind out of the gutter :p), you can flip it around and say learning Dutch would be a useful leg up if you ever ended up having to learn German. Or even Norsk. Indonesian and Malaysian are closely related, but you'd rather visit Malaysia. There's no reason not to learn Malaysian instead, you'll always get large banks of useful vocabulary. You can stretch your choices very far this way without losing any of that comfortable certainty. So even languages that at first seem isolated can be very useful, and you might find all the big five boring anyway, or you might know where you want to go, or know what you like the sound of.

Of course now you might be thinking "Well yeah, I like animé and j-pop, why isn't Japanese on the list Chiv :P", and it certainly deserves to be because like many of the above languages there is a very strong cultural output in Japanese - I only excluded it because in complete contrast to eg Russian, it is extremely regional, you are only ever going to get much return from it if you either live in Japan, or spend your whole days watching animé - but that might be exactly how you define the 'usefulness' of a language, and if you aren't interested in Dostoevsky or cold weather, how is learning Russian going to help you?

tldr:

question doesn't wanna be definitively answered

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nortino 13

My top 5 are Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Dutch and Russian. My choices are mostly based on future travel plans I have. Dutch is actually one of the least "useful" languages based on the number of speakers and the fact that most Dutch speak English, but I love the language and am looking forward to visiting the Netherlands one day.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

O-JO 16 10 9 2

Hey, there's nothing wrong with that. :) I hope you enjoy your travels.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

H-Scorpio-CEO 9

Dutch is nice (And Dutch speakers in Netherlands and in Belgium are very nice as well!) Although if I remember correctly Dutch Scrabble has a whole lot of J's to try and use... :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 11

For me it would be the languages my students speak: Vietnamese, Cantonese, Mandarin, Spanish, and Amharic.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Huysan 13 11

Vietnamese here. I hope the Vietnamese course will be on DL soon !

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 11

The overwhelming majority of my students speak Vietnamese. I'm learning Spanish because I have a background in it, but I want to learn Vietnamese more than any other language. If you're bilingual in English and in Vietnamese, could you make this course happen yourself? I would be forever grateful if you started this brewing in the incubator. <http://incubator.duolingo.com/>

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Huysan 13 11

I did applying revdolphin. However, Vietnamese is not the top priority on DL at the moment, at least not on the first batch of languages :). I'll be waiting for a message from DL team and I'm looking forward to be either as moderator or contributor for Vietnamese course.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

michisjourdi 12 11 8 8 7 5 5 4 3 3 3 2

My personal top five based off my goals and interests are Spanish, German, Mandarin Chinese, Italian, and French.

Spanish - because I'm nearly fluent and want to write books in Spanish.

German - because I have an intense interest in Germany and a few German friends who are awesome.

Mandarin Chinese - because I made some friends who were Chinese and their language was so cool. I wanted to speak to them in it (and did a little bit), but sadly they moved.

Italian - because it's beautiful and I'd like to eventually translate my books into Italian too!

French - because my mother used to sing to me in French and it's in my subconscious. I'd love to bring it to the surface. But it's very difficult to learn.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

n.gratton 19 14 10 8 5 5 20

It depends on your personal circumstances, of course.

What I'd get most practical use from: Spanish, French, Greek (for holidays), Italian (for holidays) and Portuguese (for holidays).

What I'd get most face to face opportunities to practice: Spanish, Polish, Mandarin, Lithuanian, not sure of the fifth (I travel to Spain a lot. The others are the common languages I hear among foreign visitors/immigrants/students here).

My top five to study/master starts with Spanish, but the rest are ordered by interest, not practicality.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nat-aly 24

German, Italian, French, Portuguese and Spanish for me, as I live in Europe, I like these languages and possibly I can live or study in those countries.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Oliwia 20 19 17 14 12 8

It all depends on your personal plans and opportunities I guess.

My current useful languages are French, English, Polish, German, Italian (the last 2 I don't speak, but I'm planning on learning them as I will need them for business.) I chose to speak Spanish out of pleasure, maybe it'll come in handy later. So far it's very useful on vacation but not really on a daily basis.

If you look at the global picture and the opportunities you might get out of it, AND if you're ready to move to one of those countries, I'd say Mandarin and Cantonese, Arabic, Brazilian Portuguese, Russian. Because there are plenty of business opportunities in those countries, and these are sought languages -- seriously, everybody speaks English and Spanish, hence they are "vital" but won't be special if you speak them and you won't get above the crowd.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

squiggy.fl 3

I base language usefulness on them being top earners. A lot of people say spanish is the most useful if you live in america just because so many here speak it. Well guess what? People who speak spanish are a dime a dozen to the people doing the hiring. In the business field especially, knowing spanish is not something that is special enough to help you get a job or get you a sweet promotion. What languages will?

Well there is chinese of course. China is big business. If you can greet your chinese clients and speak to them in their own language, your factory deal may go through and your boss will be impressed. There is another thing to consider. How impressive is it that you know that language. When you see someone speak spanish, are you impressed. No? Why is that? It is because it is common to learn it here. Go for the more rare languages in the area and you will look all kinds of awesome in front of your boss. Mandarin is pretty cool, but if you can learn more than one chinese language then you will be set up nicely for the office with the leather chair and windows on 2 sides.

The next language on my list is korean. Why korean? The government needs people who speak korean because you never know when they will need a translator with the way north korea is headed. Knowing korean can get you a better chance at a comfortable government job with lots of benefits and whatnot. There is also the business field. Korea is a powerhouse in the electronics industry. They also do a lot of manufacturing. There is also the perk of being able to watch all those awesome kdramas without subtitles.

Japan may not be as huge of a deal as it used to be, but it is still fairly important in both government and business. Nihongo is still a language that fortune 500 companies value highly. It is also still pretty sought after by the government too. I chose japanese as the primary language to study mainly because I find it easier than romance languages. Italian is so hard compared to Japanese.

Next up is arabic. Knowing arabic is something that will put you on the fast track to a cushy government job. In the business field it is important, but not as important as some of the asian languages (except in some limited fields).

Russian follows because there are still some areas of government where knowing russian will give you an edge. There are a few fields of business where its important as well

What makes these languages most valuable to government and private employers? They, like gold, are valuable because they are a rare commodity. They are useful because they make you likely to be the only one in the room who raises their hand when the boss comes in panicked and asks if anyone speaks korean. It makes you the only one who can make that hundred million dollar deal go through with that client. Why study something that half of the people in the room know, when you can set yourself apart?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

michisjourdi 12 11 8 8 7 5 5 4 3 3 3 3 2

I think some of this depends on the area you live in and what kind of job you do as well. In my area I'm one of the only people who speak Spanish. It was more common in the south. Chinese is useful and practical if you are in some kind of business profession, but if you are a medical professional Spanish is probably more useful. Though a nurse or doctor who speaks Mandarin would be handy to have around. Most likely the people who say Spanish is the most useful because so many people speak it are learning in order to converse for fun or a hobby.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I am/will be learning Spanish, Japanese, Russian, Hindi... and then hopefully I won't ever stop learning more. I don't leave the house much. So, my two main reasons are for reading and for the pleasure of their sounds.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1226

Just curious, do you want to study Japanese so desperately because of the anime?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Well howdy TrangQuynh, I don't run into you in the forums much. :D

My language priorities (since I can't afford to travel) are:

1. Can I use it to do things I enjoy from home?
2. Do I love how it sounds?
3. How many coolness points will I get for this? (hehe)
4. Is it useful in other ways

Out of the top languages I want to learn:

Japanese

ASL

Russian

Hindi

Arabic

(Unfortunately, I haven't figured out what to do with Russian, Hindi, Arabic yet. But, wow so beautiful/cool sounding!)

Anime was my first introduction to Japanese. No one had ever spoken it around me. When I heard it for the first time via anime (the sound tracks, mainly), I was mesmerized. So beautiful!
<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=85XtjQPhOr8> (How amazing is that?! xD) It was also the coolest thing I had encountered in middle school ;) That's when I first started wanting to speak it. That was a lot of years ago. My motivations are a little more fleshed out these days. If I refresh on it and improve I can go back to being a teaching assistant at my alma mater when I move back to town. It's a fountain of self-worth and self-esteem and the sensei will work with my circumstances without any problems. And, until I can move back, it fits the other 4 criteria as well.

The next language I take after Japanese will be the one that most closely fits all 4 priorities, which means might take German so I can read more fanfiction by April Eagle, unless someone is rocking Sailor Moon fics in R, H, and A.)

What about you? What draws you to a language (and which ones are at the top of your list?)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1226

I love Japanese culture very much but I don't think I have enough patience with the characters :P. I rarely watch anime because Japanese mangas are more popular here and I love the drawings more.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

It helps that manga is just plain better than anime. ^_~

I am basically the most difficult person to satisfy when it comes to movies, tv shows, and anime. So, I'm empathizing with you. There is a lot of anime out there that just isn't worth my time.

(Sailor Moon was an accident... --it was supposed to be absurd comic relief outlet after getting bullied every day at school-- but once I fell in love with it, there was just no turning back. I DON'T WANT TO BE SAAAVED ANYMORE xD.)

Ahem... [pulls myself back together] But, I have a friend who watches every.single.anime. every. season. So (when I remember) I just call him up for a recommendation. Somehow, he has got my tastes down to a T. He is the only person who can convince me to return to an anime after I've quit watching (Usually before the end of episode 1, but my max cut off is 3 unless he's handed me something.)

My feels after all of this time is that Anime is like any other tv show or movie. There are directors, genre's, and artists I love, and then there are others that can ensure a nice nap and a pair of eyeballs that have rolled right off the couch. :P

I'm now curious to know which manga you've enjoyed? If you're up to it, put it on my wall?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fairydongwoo 5 4 2 1

For me personally, my top five are Korean, Mandarin Chinese, German, Spanish and Japanese. This is mainly based on my future though. ^^

As for non-personal wise, I agree with your top five choices. :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

javax 20 12 9 5 3

My top five are very similar than yours :D. Only that instead of Spanish ('Cause I already know it), it's French. And instead of Mandarin Chinese, (which I also like but it's not in top 5), it's Polish. So, in the end, my top 5 is: German, Japanese, French, Korean and Polish. Now Polish is really cool and I know is hard, but I have many books in Polish and I can't read them because, obviously, I don't understand them. So, yeah, Polish is also on.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bink-the-Beagle

It really depends on where you live. The most spoken languages are Mandarin Chinese, English, Spanish etc. I live in Europe (grew up in Asia tho learning Mandarin) and here most useful languages are quite frankly German (spoken in Germany, Austria, Switzerland and parts of Belgium, the Netherlands and Denmark), French (spoken in France, Belgium and Luxembourg), English (duh), Italian (spoken in Italy) and Russian (Spoken in Russia, Belarus, Ukraine, Estonia, Lithuania, Latvia and Georgia) . You might think spanish but that has more use if you live in America.

This is primarily for european peeps. ;-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alexbcastillejos 18 8 6 4 3 2

For me, the five most useful languages are:

English. It is more of the "universal language" of this era and is essential in international business.

Spanish. This is because it links all of Latin America together and has over half a billion native speakers. Also with Mexico projected to be one the world's top economies in 2050, it is an essential language for business in the country and the rest of Latin America.

Mandarin Chinese. Because of its 1 billion+ speakers and importance for business in the Far East, Mandarin Chinese takes up spot #3 in my list.

Arabic. Arabic os fourth of my list because of its importance in the middle east and northern Africa. It's important for business and the region's rising economies making it more important for International business.

French. And for the fifth spot I would place French. French is spoken in pretty much every continent today, and is an important language in diplomatic affairs and is very important for communication in several countries in Africa, the Caribbean, and Oceania.

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

WolframOmega 13 8

As a busboy at an international diner, I need to know Spanish to speak with the dishwashers who are all from Latin America, Turkish to speak with the cooks who are all from Turkey, and Russian to speak with all the servers who are all from Russia/Eastern Europe. And then we speak English if we don't want to waste time understanding each other :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Roddy_
same

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Michaelangelo0 6 2

I'd have to say it's Portuguese, French, Spanish, Russian and Chinese Mandarin.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NickM98 15 13 10 10 6 2

I think the most important language is English - as it's the "universal" language nowadays and, as my mum says, you can't live in such a globalized world if you don't speak English. Then I think Spanish or French - mainly because by knowing one of them, you'll understand at least the basic things in other romance languages. And then I don't know, but I guess any German or Russian, as by knowing them you'd get a basic understanding of other Germanic and Slavic languages, respectively, and that'd make you able to understand almost all languages in the world. And, at last, I guess Arabic or Chinese would also be useful, as both are spoken by quite a lot of people.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

anthonywski 7 4 3

My top 3 are: Chinese - Russian - Spanish

Most spoken language in the world: <http://graphs.net/201208/statistics-of-languages-spoken-in-the-world.html>

Most spoken in 2050: http://www.intersolinc.com/newsletters/newsletter_35.htm

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

H-Scorpio-CEO 9

My personal five (outside English) would be French, German, Spanish, Mandarin and maybe Swahili based on my own future plans, that may change with time too!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nmymo 9

My current top 5 are Chinese (Mandarin), Spanish, French, Italian and Arabic.

Chinese - because I'm proficient but not fluent in it, and it makes me sad that I can't speak the language of my grandparents Spanish- because so many people speak it in the world and the quickness of the language is so exciting French - because it's a beautiful language in a beautiful country with beautiful people speaking it Italian - because I'm a music major and having so much contact with the language already just made me more motivated to learn it Arabic - the script is like art and I love how much of culture is ingrained in the language

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gbooks 10 7

Excluding English, I'd choose: French, Spanish, Mandarin, Arabic, and Latin. Latin might sound odd, but learning it can help your English, and it is the basis of many words in French and Spanish. It's an old language, considered dead by most people, yet still is fascinating. It useful for academic reasons more than jobs or money. If you wanted to ask about those, then of course, you'd choose the ones spoken by more people, or which ones you would be surrounded by more of. I choose Arabic, because it seems to be the middle east's and north africa's main language, and would be useful if you ever visited there. Every other language I added was because of population, because if you live in the US, then Spanish would be a must on that list, with majority of the immigrants coming from Mexico. Of course, some people add Russian, Dutch, German all to the mix, Russian would be a fine idea population wise. But useful wise is a different story. The two old languages: Ancient Greek and Latin are traditionally languages we don't consider useful in day to day life, as that's where Spanish and French come in, but at the same time, for a scholar, those are important. And acessibility to these languages have the drawback of almost no native speakers, rather people who learn it as a foregin language, too, but still are easy to learn. If I had to choose based on population, then you'd choose the standard: Mandarin, Spanish, Arabic, Hindi, Russian.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

262 Duolingo's iPhone app: Can't mute the app?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2753353/Duolingo-s-iPhone-app-Can-t-mute-the-app>

BettyJJ 22 10

Good app overall, but there is one thing I sorely miss: the ability to mute the app completely. Sometimes I use the app when there are other people around, such as in a library, and I don't want it to make noise. But even though I choose 'no sound' in the app's settings and mute the phone itself, this app still sometimes makes sounds abruptly! Please! Respect the user's sound settings. Otherwise I would not dare to use the app again except when I am alone. :(

Give Lingot2

92 years ago

Leave a new comment

9 Comments

pmm123 25 25 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 13 12 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 1112

I learned this the hard way when I wanted to practice my Italian. I was in an otherwise silent waiting room, I had the volume turned all the way down, but as soon as I started the lesson, a loud Italian voice filled the room. People sort of chuckled but I felt like an idiot and immediately turned it off. I guess the only way to mute the speakers is if you have headphones connected. No other iOS app that I have acts like that. But as you said, other than that, it's a great app and the new version is even better.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ThatOneDoge 17 15

I thought this was pretty strange also. I had it on silent (Flappy bird is so loud, lolz) but randomly it say a word or two, and then stop itself.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

stecchetto 25 19 16 16 14 12 9 9 6 6 6 6 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 63

Might want to move this to the Troubleshooting section (click "Edit" and change which topic it's posted to).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

I always manually turn the volume down when I open the app and have never had a problem. Could this be a solution for you?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pmm123 25 25 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 13 12 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 1112

I tried it and if I turn the volume down after I open the app and after I begin a lesson, then yes, it does mute the volume. It did not mute it for me after opening the app and turning the volume down before starting a lesson, so there would still be at least one item that would be audible before muting.

But it's better than no muting at all, so thank you very much for the help!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BettyJJ 22 10

As I have said, I have manually turned the volume down but the app still randomly makes sounds...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

I wonder if there has been any progress on this, or if anyone knows it here is a bug tracker for the app?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

I have discovered that pmm123's workaround above works for me.

It does seem like a bug in either the iPhone or the app that muting the phone does not work?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Balastena 25 21 21 19 15 12 9 8 8 7 5 1192

This happened recently to me on an android phone. So it's not fixed and it's not only on iOS.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

263 "Quand" and "Lorsque"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/22730>

Golden 13 8

Both mean "when", so I was wondering what the difference is between them, and when each should be used.

Give Lingot1

314 years ago

Leave a new comment

10 Comments

lpacker 25 6 3 3

Here's an excellent explanation of the difference between lorsque and quand:

<http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/quand-vs-lorsque.htm>

22ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

This was helpful.. Merci!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dax1792 9

You must use quand in a question. For example: Quand viendra-t-elle nous voir? When will she come to see us.

To mean 'at the same time that' either can be used. To mean 'after' use quand. For example, in 'Ask me when I've finished' où can also mean when in phrases like 'le jour où' - the day when.

19ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

sog 11

"quand" and "lorsque" are interchangeable when you use them with the meaning "when" but "quand" can also mean "every time" ie: quand on mange, on ne parle pas ..when used in such way it cannot be replaced by "lorsque"

11ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

badboybilly 14

I believe that this has to do with the fact that in English "when" has two meanings. Quand = "when" as in, "when did that happen?" and Lorsque = "when" as in "when I was a child, I ate a cockroach".

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Wendy_Monkey 12 11 2

I think lorsque can mean "while".

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

hanbi01 6

Also, I think lorsque is used more often in written language

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EmmaLui

Both lorsque and quand are substitutes for one another. In the French language, one would often use quand in an informal piece of writing or when conversing with a friend. Lorsque would be generally found in formal written documents.

It is important to understand that the meaning of lorsque may change depending on the context. Like Monkey Speak previously mentioned, lorsque may also mean while

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vonbess 13 8 5 4 2

lorsque means mean while- mientras tanto quand means when - cuando

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

264 Bron (The Bridge) TV series, and mutual intelligibility

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/16602758>

f0ffee 15 12 9 8 8 6 4 4 2 2 1

Have you ever heard of this TV series?

About a year ago, I asked on the French forum for a few TV series to watch, and somebody recommended "The Tunnel", a British/French production. I was about to start watching it, when I discovered it is actually based on a Swedish/Danish show, Bron/Broen (The Bridge).

I would love to watch this as well (once I'm a little more proficient in Swedish), but I'm afraid I would understand next to nothing during the Danish parts. How hard would it be for a Swedish language student to understand Danish with no prior exposure? Is mutual intelligibility actually a language property, or is it a skill? Is it a thing only for native speakers or is it something you can develop while studying one of many mutually intelligible languages?

Discuss :)

Give Lingot

78 months ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 7 1271

In this case, it is very much a skill, since you have - presumably - no prior experience with Danish, and since it's oral. You would likely be able to understand quite a lot of written Danish, but very little spoken. Most Swedes have a very hard time understanding Danish - so someone learning Swedish will likely understand even less.

Please don't take that as discouragement. While I have not seen the series myself, I hear from other learners that it's a great tool.

8ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

KlantOstwodd 3

I'm a native Swede, and speaking for myself, written Danish is easy but listening to them speaking is hard I mean, we even joke about them. You really, really have to listen, but even then I find it hard. But like most countries, there's dialects, and some are easier to understand than others. I can tell you this, I would not have understood much of the Danish in Bron unless there were subs.

4ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

root. 11 11

I think Swedes living closer to the border with Denmark are better at understanding Danish (someone correct me if I'm wrong) but not necessarily everybody. IIRC Bron has Swedish subs for all Danish dialogues.

I'm learning Swedish atm and I can somewhat read Danish texts but when that same text is spoken, I understand pretty much nothing. The pronunciation is very hard.

Fun fact: there's a scene in the first series where Martin (the Danish detective) was talking about the victim but the Swedish detectives in the room couldn't follow what he was saying, so he had to slow it down and make the words more clear.

4ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

HelenCarlsson 22 18 18 18 15 15 12 860

I have watched Bron and the Danish actors are subbed in the Swedish version. Sadly, I would be totally lost without the subtitles :).

4ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

JR_Cthulhu_Dobbs 18 17 6 4

I've watched all 3 series with English subs, and I could understand quite a bit of the Danish. Very good series!

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

265 Somos vs. nosotros/nosotras

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3919/Somos-vs-nosotros-nosotras>

cirrusspray 7 5 4

What is the difference between somos and nosotros/nosotras? Eg: somos mujeres -> we are women. Would "nosotras" work just as well in place of somos? Thank you for your help :)

Give Lingot

04 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

ikey 18

actually nosotros/nosotras are subject pronouns. You use whichever depending on whether the noun (mujer) is masculine or feminine i.e. nosotras somos mujeres. For a masculine noun like 'hombre' you would say nosotros somos hombres

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

AmandaBourbois 8

Yup, nosotros/nosotras is a pronoun, where somos is the verb. You can say either "Somos mujeres" or "Nosotras somos mujeres", but "Nosotras mujeres" is incorrect. It's sort of like "Go take out the trash" vs "You go take out the trash", where in the former, the pronoun "you" is implied, though not actually present.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

parcellsharp 3

Nosotros/nosotras is a noun. Somos is the conjugated form of the verb "ser", which means to be. You always need the verb to make a proper sentence. You can say "nosotros somos mujeres", but you can't say "nosotros mujeres" which is "we women" literally.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

nicogino1 11

I don't get this... someone please help me... these explanations don't make sense :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

AmandaBourbois 8

"Nosotros" is a pronoun meaning "we/us".

Come con nosotros. Eat with us.

Nosotros comemos. We eat.

"Somos" is a conjugated form of the verb "ser", which means "to be" (is/am/are). It can be used with "nosotros" or alone. When used alone, "nosotros" is implied.

Nosotros somos mujeres. We are women.

Somos mujeres. We (implied) are women.

Another important distinction is between "somos" and "estamos" (conjugated form of "estar"). "Estar", also means "to be." The difference is that "ser" refers to a more or less permanent state of being, and "estar" is used for a current, temporary state.

Somos humanos. We are (always) humans.

Estamos bailando. We are (currently) dancing.

Note that in those last two examples, nosotros/we is implied.

2ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Halo998688 13

thanks, very clear explanation

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

ikey 18

Nico, nosotros and nosotras = the pronoun "we". If the "we" are women then the correct pronoun is "nosotras" e.g. nosotras estamos cansadas = we (women) are tired. if the "we" are men then "nosotros" e.g. nosotros estamos cansados = we (men) are tired. Note, if referring to a group of men and women then - as with all pronouns - the default is the masculine "nosotros" i.e. nosotros estamos cansados. Note also that in reality the pronoun is not often used and estamos cansadas or estamos cansados will suffice.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

266 "Which is the good one?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3542438>

Translation: Quel est le bon ?

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

22 Comments

mhdelejel 14 10

"Je ne comprends pas"

Pourquoi ... both "quelle" and "laquelle" sentences are correct ?!

16ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

It's the difference between "Which one is the good one" and "which is the good one." Duo apparently decided that was a distinction without a difference.

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ebeak 12 5

I was also wondering this, for "which one" are quel/quelle and lequel/laquelle interchangeable, or is there a grammatical difference?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Olly_Capon 14 14 8 8 8 7 6 3

Me too. Since quelle is an adjective rather than a pronoun, doesn't the sentence need a noun? E.g. "Quelle voiture est la bonne?"

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Pedro_Muniz 14 9

Can somebody help me? I don't understand why "Quel est le bon?" is a good translation of "Which is the good one?". I thought "which" translated only to lequel, laquelle and lesquels; while "what" translated just to quel, quelle and quels, quelles...

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

valmir.nas 12 4

I think Quel/Quelle means "Which" and Lequel/Laquelle means "Which one". At this particular sentence there were no distinction on the "one" presence so both forms were considered.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vamagman 15

Why is the feminine not right--what is the subject of this sentence?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FlyingSandals 9 8

Here "bon" is a noun meaning "good," "good things" or "good one" (like in this case). When "bon" is a noun, it is masculine.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

123magal 25 13

I think "quel est le bon" or "quelle est la bonne" are rights. It depends if the subject is feminine or masculine (or noun). "Which is the good one" does not specify whether the noun is masculine or feminine, So the two answers should be correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DJNikonn 10 6

I said, "Lequel est le bon un?" is this wrong because lequel/laquelle is which one instead of just which?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

greenteagirl67 25 22 18 10

It is wrong because of the "un" you added to the end of the sentence. Otherwise, it seems perfectly fine to me. Remember that adjectives in French can sometimes become nouns in ways that they couldn't in English. Translation often overcomes this by adding "one" to the end of the sentence in English, but it doesn't make sense to add it into the French. (If you want an example, think of Victor Hugo's book-turned-musical Les Misérables--it is an adjective turned noun that could be translated as "the miserable ones").

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maspiker79 16 9

What's the difference between Quel est bonne and Quel est le bon?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zjohnson715 20 10

"Quel est bonne" would mean "Which is good?", and "Quel est le bon" would mean "Which is the good one?".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

clnoy 22 13 12 10 10 8 6 5 2 8

Adding a correction:

Quelle est bonne.

Quel is masculine.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CORINNNNNNNNNNE 14 4 2

What's the difference between "laquelle" and "quelle"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

profeva14 13

<<laquelle>> is 'which one' while <<quelle>> is 'which' but both for feminine objects. The masculine counterparts would be <<lequel>> and <<quel>> respectively.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TaraConklin 18 10 3 198

Lesquelles/les quels/lesquelle/lequel mean "which one(s)" and are used in lieu of a noun or pronoun, and are determined based on the gender and plural/singular nature of your noun: "lesquelles sont rouges?" "which ones are red?" The "les" replaces the noun/pronoun.

Quell/quelle/quells/quelles mean "which" and are used in conjunction with a noun/pronoun. "quelles pommes sont rouges?" "Which apples are red?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

louisknight 10 5

when would you use "Laquelle est la bonne ?" vs "Lequel est le bon ?"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mhdelejel 14 10

If the subject is masculine use "lequel" and "le bon"

Ex: - lequel (chat) est le bon - quel chat est le bon

If the subject is feminine then use "laquelle" and "la bon"

Ex: - laquelle (chatte) est la bonne - quelle chatte est la bonne.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NaftaliFri1 18 13 11 6 5 209

Why not bien?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mike660094 11

I answered Lequele est le un bon? Why is that not accepted?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

dianabilam 9 3

Why not bien??

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

267 XP's required for promotion

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1358479>

SuLTan0203 10 2

How many XP's are required for being promoted to the next level?

For example how many XP's would I require to get promoted from level 8 to 9 and then 9 to 10 and so on?

I gather that level 16 is the last one, so by this knowledge I'm trying to estimate by when will I be able to complete my Spanish course.

Give Lingot27

1343 years ago

Leave a new comment

159 Comments

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

Here's what I managed to gather about levels (level - points to next level - points by the end of the level):

1 - 60 → 60

2 - 60 → 120

3 - 80 → 200

4 - 100 → 300

5 - 150 → 450

6 - 300 → 750

7 - 375 → 1,125

8 - 525 → 1,650

9 - 600 → 2,250

10 - 750 → 3,000

11 - 900 → 3,900

12 - 1,000 → 4,900

13 - 1,100 → 6,000

14 - 1,500 → 7,500

15 - 1,500 → 9,000

16 - 1,500 → 10,500

17 - 1,500 → 12,000

18 - 1,500 → 13,500

19 - 1,500 → 15,000

20 - 2,000 → 17,000

21 - 2,000 → 19,000

22 - 3,500 → 22,500

23 - 3,500 → 26,000

24 - 4,000 → 30,000

So, for example, I have level 19 in Spanish, I have to earn 1,500 points to get to level 20, and I'll have a total of 15,000 points when I finish level 19 and get to level 20.

After you earn 30,000 points, you are level 25 and your level does not grow anymore.

907ReplyGive Lingot465•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I was wondering how the rest of the journey would go. Thanks!! :D

53ReplyGive Lingot8•3 years ago

Kelly-Rose 22 10 7

I have a question. How do you see your experience bar now that they've added the daily goal xp thing? It took the xp bar spot on the upper right hand corner next to the lesson tree and the spot after a lesson. I want to know how much experience I have at my current level and how much I need for the next level. I've tried taking daily goal off but once you set one you can only change it.

33ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

Sola6174 16 5

All you have to do is go to your profile page. On the right side, it shows your language courses, your total XP, and the number of XP you need to get to the next level!

27ReplyGive Lingot8•1 year ago

renanmzmendes 17 14 12 11 11 8 3

This is a way better answer! :)

-1ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I've heard from wazzie that you can right click and view page source. It should give a bunch of code. I don't know which tag to search for in the code, but I would start with XP. If that doesn't work, try Level. If that doesn't work, just try looking for keywords related to what you want to know. If you figure it out, it would be great if you would come back and post instructions. :)

7ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

Kelly-Rose 22 10 7

Well I tried it, but I doubt that what I found will be of any use. When on the page source I used ctrl + f (find) and as you suggested, tried "xp" though it led to no advantage as there were almost 300 results but mainly for the word "experiment." So then I went with "level" which gave 25 results and on the 10th result, I found that it said ' "level_percent": 92 ' So I'm assuming I'm 92% to my next level. It must be referring to my Irish level, but I can't find a similar account as to my Spanish level percentage because when I search "level_percent" it is the only result. And this is the same whether I adjust the "learning language" to Spanish or Irish and view page source again. Sorry, I wish I found something more useful, but hey at least I know I'm about to level up in Irish. :D

7ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

SamuelPort7 8 1

Search for the words "Level" and "Level_Left" is how many you have to go and "Level_Progress" is how many XP you currently have. I am not sure about people with multiple courses though...

23ReplyGive Lingot20•2 years ago

iainsona 11 10 10 8 5 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 20

My thanks as well, SamuelPort7. Got a lingot from me as well.

I'd say don't spend it all in one place but ... :-)

4Give Lingot•1 year ago

Kelly-Rose 22 10 7

Thanks for those keywords! As for those with multiple courses, I figured it out shortly after I left my previous comment. After adjusting the "language learning" to the one you want to see your xp progress on, you actually have to refresh the page (f5) for the language change to fully take place. Then proceed as previously described.

3Give Lingot3•2 years ago

sandeepa2 15 14 14 12 8 6 730

Thanks SamuelPort7. Very useful info. Was able to check the Level progress and level left too. Danke !

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

renanmzmendes 17 14 12 11 11 8 3

In Chrome, another way to do it is to go to the developers console (on mac => command + alt + j, on windows/linux => ctrl + shift + j) and paste the following code:

```
duo.user.get("language_data")["de"]["level_progress"]
```

It will give you your current level's progress

1Give Lingot1•8 months ago

Legolas_11 11

Where do you type that in?

-2Give Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Thank you for getting back to me. Maybe go message wazzie directly:
<http://www.duolingo.com/wazzie> Good luck!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Norway1994 25 17 15 13 13 12 11 10 10 10 10 9 7 6 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 425
ok

0Give Lingot1•1 year ago

jan_19 18 12 7 3 2

Yes, you can do this but searching with the term: "points": 1 or "points": 2 etc. depending on the first character of your experience points you think you gained.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chiantiglance 25 25 20 10 8 6 5 2

you can see it on your mobile app if you have it.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MadrugRenan 12 10 10 5 3 2 2

Why have they hid the exp bar? It was so useful...

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NewtonWren 8 6 4 2

It's not absolutely necessary. If you go to your Profile, on the right hand side there should be a sidebar with the heading "Languages", and underneath should be each language with flag, XP to next level, and total XP.

I do miss an XP bar on the home page with the language, but oh well.

10ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

ConaireMor 15 10 7 7 5 4 4 3 3 3 3 2 2

After further investigation, I've found that if you look at the page source and search for "Language name", "points" (quotations included) you can find information on your progress each of the languages available for learning from your native language. Ex: "Irish", "points". This includes current level, points in your current level, points to your next level, total points, and your streak relative to just that language.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Warheart 15 11 7 3 2

Hi! The easiest way is just to go click on your name on the top right corner, and choose "Your profile" from the dropdown menu. It will show an "Achievements" page on the right, and there you see how many points you need to level up :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

StevenMans2 22 18 11 10 4

Looking at that, I see no progress listed for either of my languages...:-{

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1262

The XP on the profile page is currently an A/B test. If you're not part of the test group, the only way to see this information is to trudge through the page source code as mentioned above, or do something like pinkodoug's suggestion here: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5303747>

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

swampsparrow 25 25 20 14 6 973

Actually, you can share your progress with yourself (Settings > Progress Sharing). That lets you see how many XPs you have in each language you're learning..

3Give Lingot1•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1262

@swampsparrow

The schools/dashboard feature wasn't yet released when I made that post. Sadly, I can't predict the future :)

You're right though, that you can see how many XP you have in each language with the dashboard now. As far as I can tell, you still can't use it to see how far away you are unless you combine it with the chart in the original post here. Together the two pieces of information create a workable solution, but this one originally posted by Dmitriy_K is the best method I've seen from an ease-of-use perspective.

1Give Lingot1•1 year ago

EMGould 8 4

I don't either. However, if you go to the leaderboard thing on the side of the homepage, it shows the number of points you have. Just be sure to go to the "all time" section.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

jeanprendiville 25 20 15 6

I am not sure that helps if you are doing more than one language, no matter what language you open it shows the same number of xps.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Kelly-Rose 22 10 7

Yes thank you! :) I'm so glad that they added a way to view our xp again! Now I can see how much xp I need for the next level and my percentage. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PabloSueno 25 25 1101

Using the app on my tablet, I can just click on the language name in the upper left-hand corner and the display for adding languages will appear. It also list my experience in each of the languages I am studying in my base language. (English). If I go to learning English as a Spanish-speaker, I can see my experience in the languages I am learning as a Spanish-speaker.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CharliePlett 14 14 9 9 6 5 28

That's desktop version.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

omofizzy 13 10

The quickest way and cleanest way: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4914732>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AvikRC 11 2

I guess the easiest way to see current experience is to follow another member, then in the leader board on the right side of the home page shows the 'All time' XP, which is the current total XP of the user.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Nihil.77swe 24 7 5 782

if you're using Duolingo on your mobile too , click on the three horizontal rows on the upper left

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jeanprendiville 25 20 15 6

For me that used to be the case but not any more. Looking up my total xps does not help either because there are two languages involved. I have decided that I will just plug away and wait until level 15 pops up. Pity because once I approached the last few hundreds I used to put on a spurt. Ah well, this way I learn patience along with my Greek!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SSolheim 16

Look under your name in top bar and select Your Profile.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ConaireMor 15 10 7 7 5 4 4 3 3 3 3 2 2

The experience bar may not be easy to find, but given the information in this thread, you can see how close you are using the app. The app will show you how much experience you have in each language so all you have to do is keep track of when you will get your next level.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MattRockstrom 25 12 8

Now you can just click on your profile picture or the "Your Profile" tab and it will display how many points you have and how many points you need to level up on the right side of the screen

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TheRealDaveRuby 21 19 16 10 10 9 8 3

Just hover your mouse over your profile pic and then pick "your profile" under the drop-down list. This will then take you to your profile, on the right it shows how many exp points you need until your next level.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

saraellerose91 24 21 19 11 8 6 1

THANK-YOU! This is what I was looking for!

11ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

SuLTan0203 10 2

Thanks a lot! This is what I was looking for.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Andrew_DiMartino 9

So I am 1/30 of the way to 25. nice.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Flavio1218 20 15 14 12 12 11 10 7 7 4 3 3
Many thanks! :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

espo fleet 25 23 4 3
Eso se logra con las traducciones o también reforzando las unidades? Todo cuenta?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1262
Si, todo cuenta. Reforzar las unidades o traducir frases en Inmersión para ganar XP.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ly72511 7
that helps me,too

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

andrew.varano 15 4 2 2 2
Is this definitely accurate? I just passed 6,000 XP but didn't level up from 13 to 14.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ridley-C 12 6 3 3 3 70
I just found out that it is the XP for each course you have. So maybe you had 5,500 XP in Italian and 500 in French.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EMGould 8 4
I don't think so... one of my friends has 800ish XP and is a level 8.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

josefplatil 12 9 5
Maybe that friend skipped levels

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kt98762 16 4 2 2
I have 6944xp points and it says I'm on level 14 but according to your chart I should only be on level 13. I am just mis-reading it. Also, is there a way to see the progress bar anymore because that seems to have been replaced by the personal trainer section. Many Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Toma 22 12 10 9 7 5 3 121

Thank you for this, a lingot from me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

shaneneads 10
bro this is some useful information

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

marianop89 14 13 13 11 7 7 6 4 4 3 2 2 2
Thank you so much! This was the info I was looking for.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Torikii 13
Sorry to say, but this is wrong. I'm on level 9 and i have only 2,150, and here it says you have to have 2,250.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Notagtipsy 17 9 6 4 791
You misinterpreted it, though that's not your fault as it isn't laid out as clearly as it could be. The exp necessary for a given level is actually the second number in the row before it. Level 9 is actually 1650. Level 10 is 2250.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Notagtipsy 17 9 6 4 791
Thank you! This is very helpful!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ridley-C 12 6 3 3 3 70
I think that is incorrect. I have 756 XP and I am still in Level 6!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Legolas_11 11
I got 1666 xp but not the next level!!! what do I do

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Phateeee 8
thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

dadexter 25 25 4
I recently received an e-mail saying "next goal is achieving level 26" - is there really another level in Spanish?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

anastime 11 11 9 2 2

Thank you for the information

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NASUH 16

than you very much

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

leoofreitas 15 12 7 7 5 4

Thank you very much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DakikaSani 7

muy bien gracias

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

gordonwk 15

Brilliant! thanks. now I wonder how all that relates to "% fluency"

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Peter.Moss 25 25 354

Enter this in Chrome developer's console:

```
duo.user.get("language_data")["en"]
```

Expand the object, you will see:

max_depth_learned: 32

max_level:false

max_tree_level:32

So it looks like duolingo programmers coded duolingo to go up to level 32. So maybe they will open up the upper levels in the future.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Titoaito 15 7

You deffo deserve a Lingot for that work! ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Nicolsia 8

Very helpful 'cause I was wondering what was next. Ty!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Zoppiski 15 11 3

Nice answer! Thank you so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Aplaceinthesnow 16 97

interesting

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

DFineNormal 22

For anyone interested, I have created a simplified list (based on tomas_sito's post) that just shows the XP required to reach each level:

Level - XP

1 - 0

2 - 60

3 - 120

4 - 200

5 - 300

6 - 450

7 - 750

8 - 1,125

9 - 1,650

10 - 2,250

11 - 3,000

12 - 3,900

13 - 4,900

14 - 6,000

15 - 7,500

16 - 9,000

17 - 10,500

18 - 12,000

19 - 13,500

20 - 15,000

21 - 17,000

22 - 19,000

23 - 22,500

24 - 26,000

25 - 30,000

I have also created a chart on Google Docs to show an interactive, visual representation of the same information, for those who might prefer it.

Click here to view the chart

This is my first ever post on Duolingo so I'd just like to say how much I'm loving the site and the wonderful its thriving community is. It's a pleasure to learn amongst such lovely, supportive people as yourselves! :)

96ReplyGive Lingot48•2 years ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1262

Thanks for the visual, DFineNormal.

Seeing this information in a graph makes it obvious that the progression isn't quite exponential. There's weird hiccups in the graph from level 15 to 23. It looks like they started rounding to the nearest thousand a teensy bit too early. Hmm..

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

MattRockstrom 25 12 8

Hey writchie4, I've heard rumors that you can't advance past level 25 on any language. Did you just recently reach level 25 in Spanish or do you get the feeling you've plateaued?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1262

What you've heard is correct. Level 25 is the highest level on the site. Once you reach that, you can continue to gain XP from lesson reviews and Immersion, but you won't ever level up further.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MattRockstrom 25 12 8

That chart might be the most beautifully nerdy thing I have ever seen +1

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wkevinc 14 6 4 3

Thank you. This is helpful. I think the first one has some inaccuracies because I'm Level 12 in French and working on my 13 and DuoLingo says I need 1,000 points but the first post said I need 1,100.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SpongeOver 23 10 7 6 3 2

This can't be right. I'm level 16, but I have 10769 XP.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iainsona 11 10 10 8 5 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 20

I note that you have German and English ... it doesn't combine the languages together; you have to look in the source code on your homepage to see how many points you have in German and how many in English. I have a total number of points to be level 13 myself ... if all my points were in one language instead of, at time of writing this, levels 9, 8, 6, 5, 4 and 4.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Emmaleelee 14

Yeah, inaccuracies on level 12. I was past 4,900 points and still not level 13...I think it might actually be 5000 and not 4,900.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RobertTurn7 16 9 6 2

Do you think it depends on what sort of lessons you do? I.e. the score adjusts some depending on if you repeat lessons. That would kinda make sense, the scale would be slightly tailored to each individual that way.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jeanprendiville 25 20 15 6

Congratulations, what a great post! Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jackgba 13 2

Thank you, it's more easy

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tomas_sito 11 8

I made a new version of olimo's table (which was great, but sort of misleading in that it can easily be read that you need 60 XP to reach level one, or 30,000 to reach level 24, when it is actually 0 and 26,000 respectively)

1 - 0 (start of the game)

2 - 60 → 60

3 - 60 → 120

4 - 80 → 200

5 - 100 → 300

6 - 150 → 450

7 - 300 → 750

8 - 375 → 1,125

9 - 525 → 1,650

10 - 600 → 2,250

11 - 750 → 3,000

12 - 900 → 3,900

13 - 1,000 → 4,900

14 - 1,100 → 6,000

15 - 1,500 → 7,500

16 - 1,500 → 9,000

17 - 1,500 → 10,500

18 - 1,500 → 12,000

19 - 1,500 → 13,500

20 - 1,500 → 15,000

21 - 2,000 → 17,000

22 - 2,000 → 19,000

23 - 3,500 → 22,500

24 - 3,500 → 26,000

25 - 4,000 → 30,000

36ReplyGive Lingot8•2 years ago

Fantomius 25 25 25 25 14 13 12 12 7 7 7 6 6 10

Though I'm adding yet another chart, I put mine in a format that's easiest for me to understand at a glance. Maybe you'll find it to be the same:

Level 1: 0 → 59 (60 point span)
Level 2: 60 → 119 (60 point span)
Level 3: 120 → 199 (80 point span)
Level 4: 200 → 299 (100 point span)
Level 5: 300 → 449 (150 point span)
Level 6: 450 → 749 (300 point span)
Level 7: 750 → 1,124 (375 point span)
Level 8: 1,125 → 1,649 (525 point span)
Level 9: 1,650 → 2,249 (600 point span)
Level 10: 2,250 → 2,999 (750 point span)
Level 11: 3,000 → 3,899 (900 point span)
Level 12: 3,900 → 4,899 (1,000 point span)
Level 13: 4,900 → 5,999 (1,100 point span)
Level 14: 6,000 → 7,499 (1,500 point span)
Level 15: 7,500 → 8,999 (1,500 point span)
Level 16: 9,000 → 10,499 (1,500 point span)
Level 17: 10,500 → 11,999 (1,500 point span)
Level 18: 12,000 → 13,499 (1,500 point span)
Level 19: 13,500 → 14,999 (1,500 point span)
Level 20: 15,000 → 16,999 (2,000 point span)
Level 21: 17,000 → 18,999 (2,000 point span)
Level 22: 19,000 → 22,499 (3,500 point span)
Level 23: 22,500 → 25,999 (3,500 point span)
Level 24: 26,000 → 29,999 (4,000 point span)
Level 25: 30,000 and up

16ReplyGive Lingot6•1 year ago

lhagr1 19 12 10 206

Duo

14ReplyGive Lingot9•1 year ago

Kalleca 21 10 6 4 3 534

Nice

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

john_treehugger 25 25 25 24 16 14 10 2 2

First the Bar was removed, and now today experience points have been removed from profile. I can't tell where I am at!

Please bring back XPs!

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Vincentos54 15 8 2

It is the only thing I sometimes share in Facebook and Twitter. So this means less exposure for the site. Bad Decision IMO.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jeanprendiville 25 20 15 6

Good news,I am now getting a message with my daily reminder which says 198 required to reach next level. I hope you are too!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SpongeOver 23 10 7 6 3 2

If you go to the Leaderboard and click on "All Time" You will see how many XP you have in total.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Turandotissimo 5

What does XP stands for?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Experience points.

10ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Turandotissimo 5

Thank You!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

talvezahora 8

gracias!!!!!! that should be clear somewhere on the DL site! but, i couldn't find it. finalmente.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@talvezahora, have you visited the wiki yet? It's currently the most comprehensive public guide to Duolingo http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Duolingo_Wiki

2ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

talvezahora 8

thanks, it looks great. i had asked, a few weeks ago if there was a source like this....but, didn't get a reply. i'm sure i'll use it. today i just wanted to know what "XP" stands for.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Its best to post important matters when traffic on the boards is higher. More people around to answer your questions. Also using the search bar and looking for new user faq or just faq will lead to discussions linking to the wiki as well. Always best to check search bar before making a new discussion in general :)

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Emmaleelee 14

I figured out how to do it! Go to your profile page and on the right-hand side there should be a little box thingy that tells you all the languages you are taking, as well as the experience you have in them and the amount of experience left until you reach the next level!!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RukmaniLama 15 11 11 11 6 3 2 81

Mine doesn't say how many XPs are needed. It only says the level :/ :(

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OneAndOnlyJosh 25 10 6

Here's a quick link:

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6428964>

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bolletjeb 20

You can check the skill points you still have to go in each level by clicking "home". It's in the yellow pointer on the right. Mine says I am at level 15, while I worked myself about half way through my tree. Of course your real level depends on how seriously you keep your tree golden. If you rush about and never repeat decayed lessons, like chrisfay obviously did, you might finish in 16 levels. However, learning a language is not a race against the clock!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SuLTan0203 10 2

Thanks for all the info.

But I was asking for something else. Presently I'm at level 7. So the pointer only shows me how many XPs more I require to reach level 8. But I want to know how many points would I require to get promoted to level 9 when I reach level 8, and similarly how many points would be required to get promoted to level 10 from 9 and so on. I want to know all this now itself, being at level 7.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

violinsharmony 6

Thanks for clarifying that

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

McCaskey..14 25 10

So once you've completed Level 24 there's no more XPs to win on Level 25?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tomas_sito 11 8

Correct, in the sense that once you have 30,000 XPs you "end" level 24 and attain level 25, meaning that any addition XPs do not move you toward any higher level since there is no higher level. However, consider that you may continue to accumulate XPs, and if so, you be front-running a higher set of levels from Duolingo. At a high level, Duolingo optimizes the number of levels along two dimensions: (1) Encouraging the development of an optimized level of mastery within one language, while (2) encouraging the development of an optimized diversity of mastery among multiple languages. Duolingo added levels 17 - 25 after recalibrating their understanding of this optimization point. Duolingo may add more levels if the calculation of this optimization point changes.

11ReplyGive Lingot4•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Thank you for this really great explanation!! ^_^ Have a lingot!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

shaneneads 10

bro this is some useful information

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

LeapYear123 12 5

..... Wat...

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Elgatobandido 25 21 18 11 9 8 5 4 3 3 2 2 2 995

It will take me awhile to get to level 25 in Spanish, but I'll be a lot more familiar with the language by the time I get there.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

RobertTurn7 16 9 6 2

Estoy de acuerdo^^

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

-LonelyWolf- 20 2

IKR

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

WinAR6 19 10 9 7 6 6 2

I use the mobile app on my Kindle Fire and you can see how much XP you have in each language. It only works for Spanish, French, German, Italian, and Portuguese though, none of the other ones.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mrmeyers 10

If you click on your user name in the top bar of the website and then choose "Your Profile" there is a box in the upper right hand corner labeled "Achievements." Within this box it shows your current level, how many XP until the next level, and your total XP.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

quanlienminh 17 8 7 6

1 - 60 → 60

2 - 60 → 120

3 - 80 → 200

4 - 100 → 300

5 - 150 → 450

6 - 300 → 750

7 - 375 → 1,125

8 - 525 → 1,650

9 - 600 → 2,250

10 - 750 → 3,000

11 - 900 → 3,900

12 - 1,000 → 4,900

13 - 1,100 → 6,000

14 - 1,500 → 7,500

15 - 1,500 → 9,000

16 - 1,500 → 10,500

17 - 1,500 → 12,000

18 - 1,500 → 13,500

19 - 1,500 → 15,000

20 - 2,000 → 17,000

21 - 2,000 → 19,000

22 - 3,500 → 22,500

23 - 3,500 → 26,000

24 - 4,000 → 30,000 And then you will in level 25

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

celiamojica1 8

Me gusta mucho porque estoy aprendiendo palabras nuevas y puede uno repetir las lecciones

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bkay5 19 6 4 3 3 2

amazing

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

StanLanguages 20 20 9 3

Level 25 is the last one.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SuLTan0203 10 2

<http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1305767>

chrisfay claims to have finished the Spanish tree and it can be seen that he is at level 16 only.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

Levels don't correspond to your progress through the tree but only to your skill points (which you also get for practice and Immersion). You can finish the tree even being Level 11 or still have new lessons while being level 20.

23ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

reapiraahora 11 2

I can confirm this. I am using Duolingo with my son and wanted to check it out myself. I lived in Spain for a few years in my early twenties, got a B.A. in Spanish Translation, and worked as a legal translator/interpreter for a while, so I pretty "tested out" through the language tree. It put me at a level 11 and gave me the owl trophy for having completed the Spanish tree. It's pretty awesome for a free program and I'm loving doing it with my son. It's great to have something structured to work on with him.

16ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

RukmaniLama 15 11 11 11 6 3 2 81

Hello !

Could you please tell me - how to go about being a legal translator ? Like how to start ? I have a C1 Dalf, in French and a B1 Goethe Zertifikat in German and English was my first language in school.

Thank you!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Neugierige_Katze 20 10 8 6 2

I think it really depends on where you live, in many places you can just register as freelancer and gather some samples of your work to show to people (like translating stuff for nonprofit organization who then can confirm that you have some experience), that's for "normal" translating.... translating legal documents usually needs some special certificates. And speaking about translating fiction, I know people who just translated some text they picked and send it around as an example of their work and style.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

erdnaoluap 25 25 22 21 11 855

That's correct. If you do a placement test -even without losing hearts - you will be sent to level 10 with your tree filled.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

geneoconnor 17 11 11 11 7 221

I think completely testing out of a tree has changed since this was posted.

I speak both Spanish and English. I speak English best because I've lived in the United States all my life but my Spanish is pretty good too.

So I did the Spanish -- English courses in both directions this last Spring (Spring 2016) and after testing out of about half the course, I couldn't advance to the next set of lessons even though I got all the answers on the test. I tried it a few times in a row. At some point, Duolingo wants you to take a lesson.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

856pm 13 3

You don't need to be level 25 to finish a tree. The only thing that affects the level is how many times you take lessons or practice. If you take each lesson once, you can go through the whole tree and you still wouldn't be level 25.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SuLTan0203 10 2

Oh okay. Never knew that. Thanks.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 11

I'm currently Level 7 in English just from using Immersion to translate my blog into Spanish. If you looked at my Spanish --> English tree, though, all you would see is the very neglected Basics 1 skill that I tried out before deciding to wait until I finish my English --> Spanish tree.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

andpalmieri 13 11 5
Yes

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DaniloFdo 14 14 13 13 13 12 12 11 8 8 7 7 6 6 5 2 2
I have a question. In the comments one's name appears with little flags and levels. If I'm practicing a language from different languages (for instance, French from English and from Spanish), are my French XP points added and with those points is a total level calculated? Has anyone realized of this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Atomic_Sheep 9
Do you get more points for lessons that happen later in the tree?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

crabilld 23 14 8 1044
No

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mkajitaly 10
If you use tampermonkey you can have it displayed on your screen on the home page. Use this script (configured for Italian):

```
// ==UserScript== // @name duolingo // @version 0.1 // @match https://www.duolingo.com/* // @require http://ajax.googleapis.com/ajax/libs/jquery/1.8.3/jquery.min.js // ==/UserScript== var gravatarHash = "96b63ad3750f82467a67b3e674bd6794";
```

```
var $el = $(".level-text");
```

```
var dolt = function() { for (var i = 0; i < duo.user.attributes.languages.length; i++) { var item = duo.user.attributes.languages[i]; if (item.language == "it") { $el.html("LEVEL: " + item.level + ", POINTS: " + item.points + ", TO NEXT LEVEL: " + item.to_next_level); } }
```

```
<pre>setTimeout(dolt, 10000); </pre>
};
```

```
setTimeout(dolt, 2000);
```

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lorrin827 14 7 2
Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Fuzzy_Eva 10
Click on Duocheck: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6155294>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bigbox2 14 7

I posted this a while ago just press this it will tell u how many xp from now until next level
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7464159>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

clancy42 25 9

I am confused on how the levels work, I started 8 days ago, have no friends, can i still advance. Jpc

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

clancy42 25 9

WHERE DO I FIND THE POINTS, I EARNED?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

t__robinson 25 13 13

<http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/XP>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kostas00 21 8 2 13

I wanna ask about the levels A1. A2. B1. B2. C1. C2 does anybody knows the levels in duolingo i mean let's say that level 6 is A1 how does it go then

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1262

There is very little direct relationship between Duolingo levels and CEFR levels since Duolingo levels only reflect your exp earned. In theory, you could repeat the first lesson hundreds of times and get to level 25 without learning anything more than "hello" and "good morning".

That said, most people agree that you can get to level A2-B1 by finishing the tree, stronger with reading and writing and weaker with listening and speaking. Try a search for "CEFR" in the main forum and you'll find loads of threads on the topic.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sianomatic 15 12 11 3 2

I finished the (old) German language tree and got placed in B1.2 when I went to a school, if that helps.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tytyrle32 21 18 10 7 5 2

I've almost finished the tree in French. I'm here studying abroad in France right now in a diploma program working towards the B2 degree. There are some words I didn't know, more so in the end, but I would have never gotten anywhere near the level I have with only DuoLingo. Just my opinion though. I do think it's a great way to learn in conjunction with other language learning resources. Especially for reviewing vocabulary.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jeanprendville 25 20 15 6

But TylerBaron you are comparing apples with oranges. Duolingo never claimed to be a substitute for a diploma taken in the country of the target language. It is what it is, an on-line programme

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PattynhaOliveira 15

Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

olotheels 11 3 2

does anyone know how many levels portuguese has?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lenkvist 23 22 17 14 13 12 12 11 10 7 7 1

25 is the maximum level for all languages.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kalleca 21 10 6 4 3 534

Nice

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

LeePDX 18 14 13 12 8 7 6 5 5 4 4 4 4 4 2 2 2

!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Daniel_Buchorn 9 8 2 192

does anything happen when you reach level 25?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Nicksol502 10

Thanks so much for this! Im aiming to get to level 10 soon! I just earned 420 points that got me into level 9!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

sodutola 13 4 3 2

Are there new lessons after level 12, or do I just have to keep on earning points in order to increase my level? I was thinking they were still going to teach me more topics.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

vishal1806 12 6

This is a perfect thing anyone wanted

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Amir_Pro 23 10 7 6 74

Can a high xp result in a prize? (for example becoming a moderator or something else?) haha! And also seems doing exercises using the mobile app gives a bonus while the web version doesn't am I right?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Beaner941933 4

Here's what I managed to gather about levels (level - points to next level - points by the end of the level):

1 - 60 → 60

2 - 60 → 120

3 - 80 → 200

4 - 100 → 300

5 - 150 → 450

6 - 300 → 750

7 - 375 → 1,125

8 - 525 → 1,650

9 - 600 → 2,250

10 - 750 → 3,000

11 - 900 → 3,900

12 - 1,000 → 4,900

13 - 1,100 → 6,000

14 - 1,500 → 7,500

15 - 1,500 → 9,000

16 - 1,500 → 10,500

17 - 1,500 → 12,000

18 - 1,500 → 13,500

19 - 1,500 → 15,000

20 - 2,000 → 17,000

21 - 2,000 → 19,000

22 - 3,500 → 22,500

23 - 3,500 → 26,000

24 - 4,000 → 30,000

So, for example, I have level 19 in Spanish, I have to earn 1,500 points to get to level 20, and I'll have a total of 15,000 points when I finish level 19 and get to level 20.

After you earn 30,000 points, you are level 25 and your level does not grow anymore.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

268 – 281 of 912

[accessed March 13, 2017]

268 "The walls have ears."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3069896>

Translation: Les murs ont des oreilles.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

13 Comments

hackneyduo1510 14 6

How come it doesn't show you the whole phrase first time? I did it word by word and I'm almost out of hearts. HELP!

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

athalaberhtaz 22 20 18 12 9 7 5 2 2 9

It just doesn't always do that. It's very annoying. I use google as a supplement to introduce me to new phrases, though often I'll also try to translate it by myself (using common sense) before resorting to that.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hackneyduo1510 14 6

Yeah I've been using google but I have also written all the translations down and just tried to fathom it out using common sense (see my epic last heart-last question comment for "Actions speak louder than words"!!)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hackneyduo1510 14 6

Just got it wrong AGAIN!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AabLundin 14

In this case, the literal translation is the correct one.

Generally Duolingo wants us to do our best try, and if we are wrong expects us to find out why and repeat it. But, in order to make the learning experience a bit easier, sometimes the translation hints are provided the first time we encounter a phrase. But often it is not.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hackneyduo1510 14 6

Yeah but it isn't consistent. Why do hints for some and not others?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

UsernameJanina 6

I got this question FOUR TIMES in a row. I'm no website making expert, but shouldn't there be an algorithm to prevent that?

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Flaeon 7

Well, I happen to be a programmer. Duo's algorithms are based on randomness. It's supposed to give you a random question from its file of questions for one lesson. Of course, there's still a chance (very small, but still) that you'll get what you just did. And from what I've seen it manipulates the chances of certain questions appearing based on what it thinks you know and what you've already answered.

For the record: I have no idea if that makes sense.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

plooblevor 9

I just discovered my name sounds as 'ear' in French. Schemes of playing the interesting foreigner evaporating. What's this ear?

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

tmaddox01 20 9 3 2 13

It's fascinating to me that there is a French idiom literally identical to our English one. (More than one, actually!) My guess would be that one language borrowed the idiom from the other ... especially for one like this, which doesn't seem obvious from the words themselves. Anyone know?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rjeanp3 23 22 19 16 9 4 570

Et les collines ont des yeux

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hbot01 9 6 4

So "YOLO" is an accepted answer to "On ne vit qu'une fois." and, respectfully, "ONVQUF" for "You only live once." but "LMODO" is not an accepted answer for "The walls have ears."? :D

I call hax!! XD

-5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheCtrlmas 7

Don't be silly

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

269 French "liaisons" between words

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2004908>

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 310

In French, a "liaison" is when a normally silent consonant at the end of a word is pronounced at the beginning of the word that follows it.

Usually, liaisons are required between two words when the first one ends with a consonant (ex: "es") and the second one starts with a vowel (ex: "un"). They are also required when the second word starts with a "mute H" (ex: "honnête" which means "honest").

Cautious: consonants in liaisons sometimes change pronunciation. For example, an S is pronounced like a Z when it is in a liaison.

ex: "Tu es un garçon" means "You are a boy", and is pronounced like "Tu es-Z-un garçon"

ex: "Tu es honnête" means "You are honest", and is pronounced like "Tu es-Z-honnête"

The pronunciation (or not) of liaisons follows specific rules. Liaisons are divided into three categories:

Required liaisons:

There are many cases, but here are a few examples:

Nominal group: "un homme" (pronounced "un-N-homme"), "les amis" (pronounced "les-Z-amis")

Verbal group: "vous avez" (pronounced "vous-Z-avez"), "ils ont" (pronounced "ils-Z-ont") etc.

Forbidden liaisons:

There are many cases, but here are a few examples:

After a singular noun: "un garçon intéressant" (you should not say "un garçon-N-intéressant")

After "et" (and): "un homme et une femme" (you should not say "un homme et-T-une femme")

Before a "h aspiré": "les haricots" (you should not say "les-Z-haricots").

Optional liaisons:

There are many cases, but a case of optional liaison is after verbs that are not followed by a pronoun: "L'enfant prend un sucre".

You can either pronounce: "L'enfant prend un sucre" or "... prend-T-un sucre".

Give Lingot23

1183 years ago

Leave a new comment

38 Comments

DXLi 25 3 1257

Thanks. I had been duped into thinking that liaisons only occur when two words love each other very, very much.

36ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

gauchowatcher 14 12 11 10 10 10 8 7 4 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2

Once I saw that there was a very complete article about liaisons on French Wikipedia.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchCrazy 15 8 3 2 2 2

In an attempt to improve this explanation:

Which consonants could receive a liaison??

The /Z/ sound - written as an s, z, or x. (trois_ateliers sounds like: twa Za teh leeay)

The /T/ sound - written as a t or a d. (c'est_ici sounds like: say Tee see)

The /N/ sound - written as an n. (en plein_air sounds like: on pleh Nair)

The /R/ sound - written as an r.

The /P/ sound - written as a p.

And the /G/ sound - written as a g.

There are 7 obligatory rules when you would use a liaison, without getting into too much detail one of them is:

Place a liason between a nominal-group (a bunch of words used to represent an entity).

Examples: mes_étudiants, ces_animaux.

In French, liaisons rely on phonetic, lexical, syntactic and stylistic factors rather than just a phonetic concept (linking). A liaison is the obligatory or optional pronunciation of a latent consonant. A latent consonant is a consonant that is not pronounced when the word is alone, BUT has the ability to become pronounced when placed in a liaison context.

Not surprisingly, liaisons are in the process of disappearing in French. Their usage is becoming used less and less with the new generations. The reason for this is because they are not easily defined by formal rules and are sometimes optional.

Sources:

One of my majors is French Linguistics

Bien Entendu - Valdman (1993)

More info on French phonetics/phonology can be found on my website.

15ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

snowyee 24 16 14 7 6

Thank you for the information! What is your website called?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchCrazy 15 8 3 2 2 2

Frenchcrazy.com :) I mentioned it on my profile page

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

snowyee 24 16 14 7 6
Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Carolind 14 11 11 10 10 5

I always have a hard time with liaisons. My native French-speaking husband says no liaison in "Tu es honnête" and "L'enfant prend un sucre". Do you have some reference where I can check it out?
Thanks for posting. Useful discussion!

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 310

There is a liaison between "es" and "honnête", because the "h" in "honnête" is mute (we say "l'honnête homme", not "le honnête homme").

For "prend un sucre", you can either say it with the liaison or without it.

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Carolind 14 11 11 10 10 5

Oh, I got the rule. The thing is: my husband didn't agree. But he is just a native speaker, he doesn't know the rules. I know that native speakers are often unaware of the way they speak (or we speak, cause I'm also native, though not in French...). So I wanted to read more on the matter and I was wondering if you have a reference online for these rules. Some place I can search. Thanks

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tliarch 23 23 23 22 12 10 4 1

Hi Carolind, check out the below, on liasons allowed and those forbidden.
<http://french.about.com/library/pronunciation/bl-liaisons-f.htm>

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 13
Forbidden liaisons eh?

I can't speak for anyone else, but that just makes me want to use them more, hehe

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tliarch 23 23 23 22 12 10 4 1
oui oui!!!

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

Carolind 14 11 11 10 10 5
Great! Thanks, tliarch!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

helmad 21 19 17 17 15 15 14 13 11 10 2

by contrast, this link <http://people.wku.edu/nathan.love/Multi-handouts/liaison.htm> calls liaison after tu es optional, which is my experience, like Carolind says in her comment. Other question: Will the duolingo French audio be repaired for weird pronunciation of things like les yeux? It's been the same for a long time, it seems.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 310

I agree, the liaison after the verb "être" is optional. (It just sounds better if you pronounce the liaison.)

The audio problems will be fixed, but it not a trivial thing to do, that's why we could not do it so far. Thanks for your patience and understanding.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nitram. 25 16 16 11 6 6 5 2

Merci beaucoup Rémy! :) Is there some rule about when an "h" is considered "h aspiré" or mute? Is there a difference in pronunciation? Merci d'avance.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 310

There is no difference in pronunciation between "h aspiré" and "mute h", when you just pronounce the words that start with these letters:

ex: "homme" (mute h) and "haricot" (h aspiré) sound as if they started with the first vowel ("omme" and "aricot").

There is a difference between the pronunciation of articles before words starting with an "h aspiré" and the pronunciation of articles before words starting with a "mute h". For example, you have to say:

"l'homme" (the article "le" is elided before a mute h, and becomes "l'")

"le haricot" (the article "le" is not elided before an "h aspiré")

10ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Nitram. 25 16 16 11 6 6 5 2

Merci! Maintenant je comprends!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Laetitia_Lalila 25

Hi Nitram, there is no rule for the nouns starting in "h" that can help you identify from which catheogry they are. You just have to memorize them by heart, or look them up in a dictionary. H aspiré words are marked with an asterisk, for example: *hérisson=hedgehog

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Nitram. 25 16 16 11 6 6 5 2
I see, thank you! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DanyKreep 10 6 5 4 3 2
Good to know! And just how forbidden is the "et un(e)" liason? I've been pronouncing that for 5 years, and I fear it may be too late to stop lol.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

thakelo 16 16 7 2 11
Completely forbidden! Source: <http://french.about.com/library/pronunciation/bl-liaisons-f.htm>

I think it's because it can be mistaken with "est" when you make that liaison (which is correct)

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gauchowatcher 14 12 11 10 10 10 8 7 4 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2
My French teacher always corrected us when someone said " et-une femme", for example. Pas deliason avec "et".

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MaelFr 21 2
A link to the website of "l'académie française", which is THE reference in France:
http://www.academie-francaise.fr/la-langue-francaise/questions-de-langue#46_strong-em-liaisons-em-strong

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
Thanks, Remy. I should visit this forum more often :) I also want to personally thank you since only because of the two Duolingo courses French <-> English, forward and reverse that you have created, I have begun to believe that I can learn French. In my past life, I had attempted a few times without much success. I am still struggling around the middle of the tree and more practice is helping clear things up! Visiting here is going to help further. This was a great post!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

sigmacharding 18 17 15 15 14 12 11 11 10 10 10 8 4 4 2
Très utile. Merci beaucoup, vous avez aidé ma prononciation!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sdiwan 3
Thanks for posting this, very useful =)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rob1745 8

great info...but just visited my neighbour, had a couple of drams...need to read this tomorrow...2 hours of French...my noddle is spinning avec Breton and Francais...bed time me thinks.....not to mention the uisghava

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MarzipanSky73 10 7 5 3 3

Grazie davvero! Thanks, really helpful and complete.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Camilla345 5

:)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Daleska9 5 4 3

Merci beaucoup! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Beatrice_Lucie 8 5

'Forbidden' by who? It's important to distinguish between prescribed 'book' language and real actual language. Plenty of people liaise 'et' which means it shouldn't be fed to learners as 'forbidden' when actually loads of people do it in real life French.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

samoliverasi 5

What about this sentence: Vous avez un livre

I know the 's' in Vous should have a liaison but what of the 'z' in avez to un? Would it be: Vous-Z-avez-z-un-livre??

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JenniferClair0 12 3

No, because the "Vous + Avez" is required liaison, and you don't want too many liaisons in the same sentence. A liaison after the verb is optional, but in this case since there is a required liaison in the same phrase, "Avez + un" becomes forbidden.

http://www.lepointdufle.net/ressources_fle/liaisons_obligatoires_liaisons_interdites.htm

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

SzilviaRosental 2 2 2

Would you use liaison in the example <<Je suis accro aux langues.>>? (Je sui - Z - accro) My French teacher doesn't pronounce it and I'm just really confused! Please help!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 310

Yes, you should make the liaison in this case.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

semeur 12 33

"Je suis en communication avec ..." Is that an optional liaison? For one of the DL exercises the speaker does not include a liaison.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

JenniferClair0 12 3

Suis+en is optional but I would make it for sure. It sounds a lot better.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

270 Difference between "suyo" and "su/sus"?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/634316>

anione 7

What is the difference between the usage of these two words? I know that "suyo" means "yours" but it means "his/her/your/their" too just as "su/sus"?

So when do we use these two words?

Give Lingot

53 years ago

Leave a new comment

4 Comments

ceaer 25 25 23 16 927

Yes, "suyo" means his, hers, yours (usted/ustedes), and theirs, just like "su/sus" does.

As a rule of thumb, if you are naming the object, you use the "su/sus" and if the object is not named, you use "suyo".

¿Es su abrigo? (Is this your coat?)

No, no es mío, es suyo. (No, it's not mine, it's his)

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mwalding2000 15

Suyo is a possessive pronoun. Su is a possessive adjective.

An adjective describes a noun, and a pronoun takes the place of a person.

Su casa es verde= His/her/your house is green.

La casa verde es suyo= The green house is his/hers/yours

A rule of thumb is mio/tuyo/suyo usually comes after the noun, while mi/tu/su usually comes before.

<http://www.studyspanish.com/lessons/posspro.htm>

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rspreng 24

You can get the whole story here: <http://www.studyspanish.com/lessons/possadj.htm>

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SeongjunPark 8

Nice question.. I was always confused with those!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

271 How do I report an issue with the course?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204752064-How-do-I-report-an-issue-with-the-course->

There are two types of issues you can report when it comes to language courses. You can report specific sentences, or you can provide feedback about the language course in general.

When you have feedback about errors in specific sentences and translations, please report the sentence like this:

1. After submitting your answer, select "Report a Problem."
2. Select an option depending on the issue you want to report. For example, you can pick "my answer should be accepted."

This feedback goes directly to the course contributors, and they collect these reports to fix mistakes and add possible translations to the phrase. For details about what each of these options mean, take a look at this.

If you have general feedback about a course or language (such as the voice used, grammar questions, or just praise for the team), please communicate directly with the Incubator team for that course. You can contact them via their course specific forum:

1. Click on the Discussion link on the blue bar on the top part of the page:
2. To the right, you will see a list of forums that you are following. You can click on one to isolate it and post new questions and feedback. You can manage the list of subscriptions by clicking on the blue "edit" button on the sidebar.
3. A pop-up window will appear. Select the forums you want to follow by clicking "subscribe". Click anywhere outside the window to close the subscription pop-up.
4. Select the appropriate forum and post your feedback directly to contributors and fellow learners!

272 Having trouble with ce, ça, and cette
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2397786>

Naylor1993 23 17 17 15 13 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 6 4 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

Would someone explain the differences between these and when to use them, s'il vous plaît?

Give Lingot
52 years ago

Leave a new comment
8 Comments

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

"ce/cet;cette;ces;ces" and "ça" are different words. To keep it simple:

ça means "that" or can be translated with "it": Ça coûte combien? - "How much does that/it cost?"
or "J'aime bien ça" - "I like that".

ce/cet;cette;ces;ces are different forms of the same word meaning this/this;this;these/those;these/those:

ce train: "this train" (singular, masculin, the following word starts with a consonant: ce) cet article/cet hôtel: "this article" (singular, masculin, the following word starts with a vowel or sometimes (see the description below) with "h": cet) cette destination: "this destination" (singular, feminine: cette) ces articles: "these/those articles" (plural, masculin: ces) ces destinations: "these/those destinations" (plural, feminine: ces) Please note that there are a lot of adjectives in French that have 4 forms (singular masculin, singular feminine, plural masculin and plural feminine), but only a few words do have 2 singular masculin forms where you have to differ between the following word that starts with a consonant or vowel (other examples are beau/bel;belle;beaux;belles or nouveau/nouvel;nouvelle;nouveaux;nouvelles).

Concerning the "h", this is pretty tough to learn since there are words in French where the h is aspirated and some where the h is mute; f. e. it is correct to say "cet hôtel" (pronounced "cettotel"), but you have to write "ce héros" (pronounced "ce ero"). This might be an advanced rule for a beginner (as I am also a beginner) and goes maybe much too far for now, but I just don't wanted to write something like "you use the cet-form singular masculin with every following word that starts with an "h"" - that would have been wrong.

If you have further questions, do not hesitate to ask =)

24ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Please, can you make a thread with your explanation, BastouXII collects the explanations to make a database about French grammar.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Thanks for the suggestion; I wrote him a message on his stream and see what he will answer.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Naylor1993 23 17 17 15 13 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 6 4 4 4 3 2 2 2 2
Thank you very much, that was very helpful! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2
Pas de problème =)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kerrin.osb 16
thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

fatmanspicnic 10
What about in the example "pas comme ça / pas comme cet", I understand both phrases mean "Not like this". My confusion though is with the use of ça to mean this instead of that. How often does this happen in French...?

3ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

AlisonGres 11
What about cela? What is the rule for using cela as "that"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

273 "Right in the bullseye!"
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2135987>
Translation: Na mosca!

03 years ago

Leave a new comment
19 Comments

pocketenthusiast 12 7 6
It'd be great to know the idiom before being asked about it!

20ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AnaCarolin276165 7 4
I've never seen this before until now!

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

motherwind 13 4
Exactly. How is it even possible to know that it literally translates to "in the fly"? Once again the drop down options didn't include "na mosca".

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

I got it wrong too, just report it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mallowigi 21 20 13 11 9 8 272

Reminds me of the french "fait mouche!"

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Blnd_E 10 2

In the US, we have a game of darts where the red center, most valuable & hardest spot to hit, is called the "bulls eye." As to why we call it that, I have no idea. Maybe an old hunters saying.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

dwalkslt 12 4 3 3 2

Darts was invented in England. We named it.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Elsid89 16

The triple 20 is more valuable.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IvanaSandra 15 11 8 8

I have just reported it. Let's see what happens.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

matamor1 17 9 8 6 4

I think encouraging people to reach out and find some things on their own from time to time is a good thing.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iknowyou 25 6

Sorry,I am not a native speaker.what's the meaning "right in the bull's eyes"? Is't a idiom in english contry? please tell me that.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bmoran2 7

The "bull's eye" they are talking about is the red dot in the center of a target board. For example, the center dot on a dart board.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

yinnyann 16 9 4

So, "justo no alvo" (from "dar no alvo") should be accepted too

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LadyMar1923 25 107

I agree - no chance at this one. Meaning in English: I got it absolutely right! I would not use this phrase very often at all.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrancoB455 12

Impossible to guess in the fly from the english first time.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NadiaUribeM 12 7

what does this mean?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KVART 9 2

"straight to the point" (as I have got it)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EmilySabo1 6

I agree. There was no way to know the answer. Just an oversight it seems. The app has been pretty great otherwise.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jones_Rick 22 12 12 10 9 2 1

Absurd.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

274 Thoughts on completing my Italian tree

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3293409>

CtrlZED 20 8 6 4 11

Well, I finally finished my tree last night, after 106 days, 17 levels and 11,038 points. So, I'd like to share some thoughts on the whole experience. Firstly, I'd like to thank Duolingo - this is absolutely the best resource I've found for learning and practising a language - and it's free!

What I like about Duolingo: The structure of the language tree is absolutely great. It really does take you through the full range of language grammar and structure, from beginner to advanced level. It gives you the framework and knowledge to continue to learn. The game format is great too. Setting goals, maintaining streaks and trying to finish the tree is very motivating, and really helps maintain focus on learning over long periods of time. This is very difficult to do using traditional methods, like books. I did most of my learning using the mobile app. I have a very long daily commute and it's handy being able to do something productive with the time.

What I think could be improved: While the Duolingo method works very well at learning new vocabulary, by introducing new words to familiar sentence structures, I don't think it is very effective at teaching grammar. I think learning would really benefit from having an integrated grammar resource. As you progress through the tree, there are some concepts that are impossible to learn without consulting other websites or books. It's not necessarily because the concepts are extremely difficult, it's just they need a brief introduction for the learner to more easily understand the context of the lesson. I know this has been raised many times before and rejected as it is against Duolingo's philosophy, but the reality is that most people by necessity are using external resources to learn the grammar, and having this integrated would improve the overall experience. In my case, I have been learning from a grammar book and using Duolingo as a method of practice. The next area that I think could use some development is personal stats. We really need a vocabulary list. It would also be great to be able to see my stats in more detail: e.g. my points each day over a longer timeframe, and my personal best points per day. Being able to see your progress in this way is motivating in two ways: by showing you how far you've come; and by allowing you to try to beat your past records. Finally, it would be great if the mobile app could integrate with Discussion and Immersion. As someone who spends about 95% of their time on the mobile version, I feel like I'm missing out on a lot. It's very difficult to sit in front of the computer for long stretches, and with mobile becoming such an important method of access, it would be in Duolingo's interest to make as much content available as possible.

What happens when you get to the end?: In terms of Duolingo, not a whole lot. You get a screen to congratulate you, and a trophy at the bottom of your tree. Everything else is the same: skills still degrade as before.

Alt text

Alt text

So what about my Italian proficiency? I can read Italian fairly well, but there are still many words that I don't understand. When listening to spoken Italian, I can understand the gist of the discussion, but I rarely pick up on more than a few phrases at a time. My spoken Italian is fairly bad right now too. If it came down to it, I could get by, but I'm not conversational or anything. I think it's important to have the right expectations about learning a language, and what Duolingo will and will not do. Learning a language is a lifelong process. Think about your native language- you are probably still learning words and improving your grammar, no matter your age. It's unrealistic to think that you'll pick up an entire language in just a few months. But having said that, what Duolingo provides is very valuable. It can take you from zero, to having a very solid grounding in a language in just a few months. And what I really like is that it doesn't just teach you "survival phrases" - it gives you a real understanding of how the language works. From there, it is up to you to continue your journey. All it takes is more practice, and exposure.

What's next?: I plan to maintain my streak with daily practice, and eventually get all my skills to gold. I would like to try some immersion. I have been a bit intimidated in the past, and on the occasions I have looked, there have already been a ton of translations for the article I was looking at, and being a beginner I didn't think I could improve them. Also, the fact that I can't access on mobile makes it hard for me. I have picked up a few books in Italian that I plan to read. I can't understand every word, but I can usually understand the flow of the sentence, or the paragraph. With a dictionary I hope to improve my understanding this way. Eventually, I'd like to read some classics in the original language: some books by Eco, Macchiavelli and Dante's Inferno. I have been listening to Italian podcasts as well, to improve my understanding of the spoken language. The range of words used in speech is very different to writing, and phrases really need to be ingrained in your mind as you don't have time to translate on the fly - you need to just "understand". This becomes easier the more you listen. For anyone interested, I listen to "News in slow Italian", and the "SBS Radio Italian" podcasts. As my understanding of spoken Italian improves, I would like to watch some classic Italian movies too. All in all, I'm very thankful for the help that Duolingo has given me, and I can't wait to continue my journey to understanding.

Give Lingot24
542 years ago

Leave a new comment
13 Comments

TKelliott 21 21 21 10 10 555

I do like your point that Duolingo does not just teach 'survival phrases'. This is a complaint that gets aired every so often on the boards "Duolingo is crap: it doesn't teach me how to say [insert phrase here]."

Well, duh... Duolingo is designed for people who actually want to learn to speak and understand the language beyond being able to repeat learned-by-rote tourist phrases. Duolingo may not make you memorise phrases like "Where is the railway station", but it teaches you the vocabulary and grammar to put the phrase together yourself - and any other you might need.

15ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

kristinemc 16 9 7 4 2

Hi CtrlZED- Thank you so much for sharing your experience using Duolingo in such detail. Going to share this thread and feedback with the rest of the team.

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

This is, without doubt, the best post I've ever read in the discussion pages, and echoes some of my own experiences.

I know I'm only 12 on here, but I did all my early DLing on the mobile app too.

If I were you, though, read Dante by all means, but I once chatted to an Italian friend, who said she didn't understand a word of it!!! so maybe stick to modern Italian. Dante - Well to me, at the time, it seemed no harder than the Italian I was just learning...equally new and foreign, but to her it was as strange as an Englishman reading Chaucer.

Everything you say in your first paragraph is true. I go with DL to motivate me and carry me through, but with a Grammar book and other resources by my side. Yet without DL I don't think I would have found the motivation to keep going. It kind of makes me a bit scared to finish the tree. But that, I imagine, is a 'grown-up' moment when you have to go out and face the real world!

God bless DL

Oh You get a Lingot :)

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CtrlZED 20 8 6 4 11
Thank You!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tbvjshqk017 22 22
[deleted]

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

CtrlZED 20 8 6 4 11
Thank you. I should clarify - I have actually chosen three contemporary books that are translated from English to Italian - Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone, Hunger Games and Game of Thrones. All three were recently written and use contemporary language, and the first two are simpler, being targeted at younger readers. Also, I am familiar with each of those stories, so they are easier to follow even if I don't understand every word. However my long term aim though is to eventually build my understanding of Italian to be able to read some classic Italian literature in its original language.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ALoUSyUseRnaME 25 25 16 9 5 5 4
Congrats! You have some very good points there, such a well said post! Have 5 lingots for finishing your tree!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1158
Having done the French tree, I agree with every single word in your post. Have a lingot!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ajcee7 25 25 25 24 21 21 18 16 15 15 14 12 1173
For immersion, I like to upload pages and work on those rather than work on what's already available, which, as you say, can often be quite over-crowded - so e.g. I'll go on Wikipedia, find a subject I'm interested in, then upload the page to immersion. If you just want to work on the article on your own a bit before letting other people have a look in, you can just click the 'remove article' button on the tab on the right-hand side.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johnmcarne 11
Great suggestion. Uploading articles is fun and easy. You also get some "stealth" immersion in while looking for articles.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lrtward 25 25 8 159

Congratulations! One of the best (if not THE best) tree completion summaries I've had the pleasure of reading.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

joedalegend 11

Coming from institutionalised Italian, from secondary school, I knew all the grammar points fairly easily, but for anybody else, it would seem to be hard. Duo is good for learning vocab, which is something I defiantly needed for my examinations. Good luck with the rest of your Italian learning. btw, I can tell your Australian with the SBS podcasts. Love listening to them, especially when they speak English phrases.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

swntzu 23 12 11 9 9 5 4 3 2

I'm only a short way through the Italian tree and I completely agree with what you said about having realistic expectations. I've tried learning several languages in the past and they've all failed mainly because of that.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

275 I have finished my French tree: My side of the story :)

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2311547>

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

Hello everyone. Bonjour à tous.

I have been using Duolingo since exactly 5 July 2013. To be honest, it was just for fun in the beginning, I wasn't paying attention to the streaks and so. It is sad to say but eventually I stopped using Duolingo. How cruel is that :)

Then all of a sudden I have received an e-mail stating that my PhD application to Université de Strasbourg was a success. I have moved to Strasbourg on 3 October.

Following the 3 months of my relocation, it was pitiful for me that the only sentence I could master was "je ne parle pas bien français, désolé". I have finally realized that it could not go like this. The game was on!

I spent hours and hours in front of the computer, studying 3-4 chapters a day, taking notes of the key sentences at the same time. I have installed an app to my cellphone to help me with the verb conjugations. I was thinking of imaginary conversation in my mind to improve my vocabulary. I was speaking French with my friends whenever possible. It has been exactly 70 days since I started to study with this pace. Today I graduated from Duolingo, yay! :)

Now I can easily read a newspaper, watch the news and involve in a conversation. I always got positive feedback from the people around me. "You are getting better and better everyday, how great is that!"

Now I'd like to take this opportunity to thank all of you; whoever put his/her efforts in this project, whoever working hard to make here a better place, I am really happy to know you guys, you are awesome.

Give Lingot47
2282 years ago

Leave a new comment
64 Comments

Anwar1429 11
congrats, you deserve this because you're a hard worker . Wish you all the best in Strasbourg.

19ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mundusfr 25 25 18 1

Welcome to the world of winners ! (Lol) Me too, I have finished the French tree, about 8 days ago. I also finished the English one. The two trees have been realized in 52 days. As I have already repeated several times, I find duolingo very challenging.

I am here to learn English, since as you can see 59 days ago. As you have noticed it, I am sure you have done it, the style or the mistakes in my phrases can indicate from which country I am, no ? France, of course, what else ?(lol)

I want English to be my second language, at least the one of writing one. Because until now, I have neither time, nor occasion to speak with someone in English. At my office, I need only to listen and to understand, because some of our meetings are made in English, "surtout" the conference video...

Désolé, je ne peux m'empêcher d'utiliser quelques mots en Français. Je n'ai pas trouvé l'équivalent du mot "surtout" en Anglais.

18ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

Je crois que le mot "especially", c'est l'équivalent de "surtout". :)

C'etait exactement la meme facon pour moi. je ecoutais, je ne comprenais pas. Mais, j'ai essaye, j'ai fait un effort. Je suis bien sur qu'il sera mieux. :)

any corrections?

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mundusfr 25 25 18 1

Merci pour la traduction du mot surtout. Apparemment, mostly peut aussi faire l'affaire. Sinon, n'oublie pas les accents ! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

vous avez raison. je ne fais pas attention aux accents.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mundusfr 25 25 18 1

I don't know what you think about it, the accent, but for French people, it is very important. Even Duolingo takes it as consideration very seriously, no ? :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

icundell 22

The literal translation of "surtout" would probably be "above all", but "especially", as suggested by mrquanta, is perfectly acceptable. Both indicate that you are highlighting the most important element of a topic.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196

A fantastic tribute to Team Duolingo and specifically to the one person French Team!

Only because of Duolingo, I have got motivated to learn French, once again. I have been slowly and steadily working on my French tree and one day - probably this year - I will be joining your club :)

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

I am really happy to hear that.

One language, one person.

By the way, besides Remy, I would like to thank to Sitesurf for her endless guidance to French learners.

<https://www.duolingo.com/Sitesurf>

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Meg_in_Canada 12 5

Sérieusement, elle est la meilleure!

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Sitesurf is a she?? All this time I used to think it's some erudite French guy.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Luscinda 25 25 25 14 11 10 8 7 6 6 5 4 3 3 2 2 7

Pourquoi?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ooOBilalOoo 25 25 6 5 5 5 3 2

Congratulations ! It would have took you a long time to do that !

Have 3 Lingots for brilliant effort !

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

thank you a bunch friend, you are very nice :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IsaacLonge 15 11 6 5 4 4 3

I've completed mine as well, Ou sont mes lingots?

0ReplyGive Lingot1•12 months ago

SadieShay 6

I will be a freshman next year and I will start french my first french course also next year. To graduate, I need to take one World Language for 2 years, but I am going to take it for 3 or maybe over three years... because I have always dreamed about learning french. I desperately want to master the language. I wish you luck in Strasbourg, and congratulate you on mastering Duaglingo. I am only now on Level 3, and I am already frustrated. (:

5ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

NicoleJohnson5 13 2

Relax, you are going to do fine. It helps that you are eager to learn the language. I took French all four years in high school and one year in college. I do not regret a single minute of it. When you begin to learn with your class it will be more fun and less frustrating. Plus in class, your teacher will teach you songs and acronyms to help you remember verb conjugations and grammar. My advice to you is just relax, have fun, and try to immerse yourself in the language as much as you can. Bonne chance!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 686

NicoleJohnson5 is right. I would suggest to emphasize the pronunciation. The rest will come so much easier as you progress in class people won't believe that's the only thing you did more than the others.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

catfisher01 10 8 6

I'm in almost the same situation. I'm just beginning high school and want to take French over the required 2 years (and hopefully visit some day!). So know there are other people in the same boat as you. Good luck! (Bonne chance!) :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

roobee2sday 13 3 2

You can do it! Keep trying! I believe in you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Chuckstarrrr 15 11 7

Congratulations, and how very inspirational :D

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Bon travail! Are you able to speak with a good French accent, as well as understand people who speak French? J'espere que je peux faire ce que tu faisais!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

Thanks to my native language, Turkish, I can make all the sounds -except the throaty "r" sound- which are necessary for the French people to take me as a native speaker. I am trying hard.

But to be honest, of course I am not yet in the advanced level. I think while I am speaking. I think of the words, verbs; the conjugations and the singular-plural pronunciations of the articles. But thinking of the duration, I can proudly say that I am advancing fast.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

D'accord, maybe you should apply for the Turkish for English course :) I can't wait to learn it!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

English for Turkish speakers is in fact brewing in the incubator with its 125K users. It is in beta phase. I guess Turkish for English speakers will be out in no time. :)

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Hopefully :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

but you still can apply. :-) maybe it will be faster.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

I made a discussion to exchange recordings. You go on a site, you record yourself, you post the link, and you get reviewed on it, but I don't know where my discussion is now, I should contact a moderator to know if they remove it and why.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jackthelad93 10 8 6

Awesome stuff! :D

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Congrats to your accomplishment - this is what I call real commitment. All the best to you!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jadey7 10

Nice work and keep at it! I'm working on finishing my Spanish tree, after three years of high school classes and then a year off (plus a dabbling of German and Portuguese that I will pick up when I am finished with this tree). My main motivation is wanting to study abroad in Spain with my university. I'd like to be able to test out of elementary and intermediate classes (a definitely possibility at this point) so I can start off at a higher level. You and all the others sharing their stories are great motivation. Have a lingot! :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tariqnisarahmed 19 11 8 7 5

Congratulations and great luck with the PhD as well as French.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BaconAddict 25 11 11

Congratulations, on both finishing Duolingo and on the acceptance to the university!! All of your hard work has paid off. Good luck with your studies.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

Thank you very much for the good wishes.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Safa2564 11 9

Tebrikler :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

cok tesekkurler :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CarolJean1 24 12 10

Congratulations and best of luck! Strasbourg is such a great city. You may want to do German next?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

My doctoral advisor is an Italian who was born in a town located in the Swiss border. He is also a visiting professor in a university in Japan. Long story short, including English and French, he can speak 5 languages. I need to choose one of them :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FernHenderson
Well done :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JustinOliver 6
Nice one. Congrats.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3
thanks dude.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dankabass3 25
wow; what a great and an inspirational story; well done

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3
Thank you very much.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2
I l'ôve these story when you start from scratch in a language, c'est génial! I want to be able to do the same as you in ALL the Duolingo languages. What are you studying to the fac de Strasbourg?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3
I didn't speak a word when I start. But now it's getting better everyday. Dedication pays off eventually.

I am doing my PhD in the physics department on atomistic simulations regarding nanotechnology.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2
Very interesting. I guess you'll need a bit of technic French too.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

yeah, but luckily all the technical terms are the same in english.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2

I you need oral or speaking practice, I could help...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KataMermin 13 3

Congrats for your hard work!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

Thank you :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dexterneutron 13 11 10 2

Congratulations, I would like to have enough time to take 4 lessons per day to, however I'm expecting to reach a decent french level at the final of this year because although I only can dedicate a little time to the course, I'm doing it daily; Stories like yours motivate me to keep on going.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ApoloRosales 14 11 9 3

¿Which app do you have to practice conjugations? Cheers and congratulations :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

thank you very much.

https://play.google.com/store/apps/details?id=com.onitan.android.application.onitan_lebienparler_conjugaison&hl=fr_FR

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Leli3 18 12 11 11 11 6 3

That's awesome! I'm sure the creators and investors of Duolingo love stories like yours in that learning a different language helped in your day to day life.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IsaqueDias 6 5

Congrats!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

artst 11 2

Wow! That is inspiring!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

karime_battat 15 6 5 4 2 2

I wanna join your club too . now that I read your comments I am more enthusiastic to study and work hard to Learn French . since I was a kid I wanted to speak French but unfortunately i wasn't that lucky cause I find it hard for my ears to distinguish the the words and understand the meaning .

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

pariswpqt 18 6

What was the app that you used for verb conjugation? Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

https://play.google.com/store/apps/details?id=com.onitan.android.application.onitan_lebienparler_conjugaison&hl=fr

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

jonathanwas
nobody cares

-16ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mrquanta 14 10 3 3

you care enough to write a comment as far as i can see haha :)

8ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

276 Pronunciation of singular/plural

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1996398>

MarissaThayer 4

I love learning french, but when I am required to write what the recording says, I have the hardest time telling the difference between singular/plural.

For instance: le/les, somme/sommes, femme/femmes, homme/hommes.

I can't really decipher the difference between some words and their plural partners.

Any suggestions?

Give Lingot

183 years ago

Leave a new comment

10 Comments

TheLizzyIzzi 17 6

I'm having some similar problems. One of the "issues" with the french language is that they often don't pronounce the last letter of the word, such as the last -t in petit (although they do in the feminine version petite). So when you have a sentence like "Les pommes sont bonnes" every -s is silent (except for sont). The "trick" or clue is the use of "sont". If there was only one apple then the sentence would be "La pomme est bonne."

Another thing you can listen for is the liaison between a word that ends in -s and a following word that starts with a vowel or silent -h. In the sentence "Les enfant sont bonnes." you can hear a liaison between les and enfant. (the -s makes a -z sound leading into enfant). If you put these two example sentences into Google Translate you can hear the difference. (Here is a decent introduction to the ideas behind liaison if you don't have a lot of experience with it.
<http://french.about.com/library/pronunciation/bl-liaisons.htm>)

Keep in mind that unlike English, french makes many of their words "match" in number as well as in gender. So when you're first working on plurals double check to make sure all of the words "match" in both number and gender. As you practice it gets easier.

21ReplyGive Lingot11•3 years ago

ColeRaney 6 4

I know this is an old post, but I had some input too. Duolingo makes it sound like there is a difference between Le and Les in pronunciation (same with de and des). It almost sounds like Le is pronounced like "loo". De kind of sounds like "doo" as well.

2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

YazykPineapple 11 9 7

That's because the "e" in French is not pronounce like the e in let, but like the a in sofa. This sound is a schwa, or [ə]. So "le" is pronounced [lə], and "de" is pronounced [də].

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Judy1866 8

I really appreciate your help!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Chocokels 18 8 7

As Bill-Roca mentioned, in french singulars often sound the same as plurals, so you must listen to the article before them (le, la, les, du, de la, des, etc). To clarify, le (singular) sounds kind of like "luh" and les (plural) sounds like "lay". Other words, such as de and des, me and mes, etc. are pronounced similarly, although they mean different things.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bill-Roca 20 17

If you can hear the words side-by-side it really helps pick up subtle differences. For this I use a speech synthesizer. For example go to <http://www.acapela-group.com/> and there are three French options (France, Belgium, Canada) with a variety of voices or moods for each version (12 voices for French(France) for example).

So pick your dialect and enter something like this text string, with different punctuations to pick up different pauses: "le, la, les, le. la. les. de, du, des. somme. sommes, femme. femmes, homme, hommes." Then click 'listen' to play. Sometimes I could hear it better with one voice than with another.

Note that often the plural sounds exactly like the singular but you can pick up the correct answer by the le or les, or de or des, for example. So concentrate on those first.

This worked well for me when I was studying French, and to a lesser extent Spanish. Bonne chance!

3ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

MarissaThayer 4

Ahhh, all of these are such helpful tips! Thanks for the responses everyone. =)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1226

I was wondering the same thing about French. But learning english at first is difficult for me too with all the ending sounds (Still struggle with it) because in my mother tongue we do not spell the ending sounds that clearly

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MarissaThayer 4

Do you have some examples? I may be able to help you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1226

Anything that ends with "s" like always, plural form... or "t" like government, contact, list... or "ed" in the past form (I usually forget to spell them :P)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

277 Finally completed my Spanish tree :)

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4135771>

plaberge 25 24 12 4 1181

Just wanted you to know ... ;)

Give Lingot2

152 years ago

Leave a new comment

24 Comments

AnandBas 14 6

Please I have just started using Duolingo, about 10 days, what do you mean by completing the tree and what is meant by a golden tree?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jolynnedougherty 25 19 14 8 5 44

When you click on the Home button up top, it shows all the lessons that you need to complete. On the computer, they are little circles. After you complete all the lessons in that subject, the circle turns gold. All of those circles are the tree. If you don't go back a review the lessons, the tree loses its golden color. Practicing keeps your tree golden.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AnandBas 14 6

thank you I did not know that the circles (lessons) change color I guess that mine are always gold since each day I practice. Tell me do you have to complete all the lessons (circles) to be able to say that your tree is finished or is it the shape formed by the completed lessons, how many lessons do you need to complete?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

You must successfully complete all lessons to complete the tree. However, they don't have to be gold to get your golden owl trophy when you complete the last lesson. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AnandBas 14 6

thanks much.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FuturePolyglot01 8 7 5 4 2

How many levels are there for Spanish?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PopTartTastic 9 9 7 7 6 6 5 4

Awesome! I can't wait to finish mine. Do you plan on learning any more languages on Duolingo?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

plaberge 25 24 12 4 1181

Thanks, no so far I feel like Duo was just the beginning :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sofia673 18 7 2

Felicitaciones!!!! Buena suerte, que te diviertas con tu aventura del idioma!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

azureskye 14 10 9 5 4 3 3 2 2

Congrats!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rorabear01 10

haha! Great Job! How long did it take you?!?!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Felicidades! Are you planning to do the reverse tree?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

plaberge 25 24 12 4 1181

Never thought of it, but why not! I am not a native English speaker and wanted to improve some weakness I have. I was not planning on leaving Duo yet. I still want to get extra practice on my weakness Spanish skills (mostly verbs!) So the reverse tree may help :) Thanks for the advice!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

natsent06 10 4

what is the reverse tree?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jolynnedougherty 25 19 14 8 5 44

If you speak English and you finish your Spanish tree, then the reverse tree is when you change your language to Spanish and proceed to do the English tree.

3ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

plaberge 25 24 12 4 1181

Never though of it! Thanks for the explanation! :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

muzzmackay 14

How good at speaking Spanish did it make you and what other resources did you use ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

plaberge 25 24 12 4 1181

Good enough to be able to communicate on almost any topic (at show speed, without elegance) not good enough to watch Spanish TV. But I have developed an intuition that impressed me sometimes. Without knowing why, I guess correctly how to put the sentence. I am planning to take an advance class this fall and try to watch some Spanish cartoons.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

plaberge 25 24 12 4 1181

Edit: I tried Assimil before duo (which is a French book to learn Spanish, title is "El Español") but I was not successful at keeping motivated. Duo was great since I was able to study on my phone everytime I had 5 minutes and anywhere so it helped a lot :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

After finishing studying Spanish in Duolingo, can you use it, I mean, be able to speak and listen thoroughly ? Or Doulingo just gives you the basis and then you have to work on other books, something to improve more ? thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I have conversations with my friend all of the time. Though usually we switch between japanese, english, and spanish in the same conversation... But the Spanish has been useful on its own too. I had a conversation in a cafe with someone who didnt speak English. To max out the Duolingo experience, find people to talk to via Activity, use immersion, join the Spanish Book Club, and participate in language contests when they show up in the discussion forums :)

The tree alone covers the basics (very well)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

wow ya awesome, i mean, you really dedicated yourself to accomplishing this. So awesome. 327 days = 1 year. oh my ghost

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Almost a year ;) as for dedication, certainly a lot in for the first 2/3 of my tree. I currently tend to prioritize my time as a forum moderator rather than doing intense study. But I'm still using Spanish regularly so that it doesn't completely rust :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

toutousmile 12 12 10 1026

Congrat!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

278 What's the difference between Kleidung and Bekleidung?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/132/What-s-the-difference-between-Kleidung-and-Bekleidung>

AndrewCorby 15 6 4

What's the difference between Kleidung and Bekleidung and how do you choose which to use?

Give Lingot

945 years ago

Leave a new comment
21 Comments

Finn 12 5 4

Being German I can say there is no real difference. A "Bekleidungsgeschäft" would be a "clothing store" but also a "Kleidungsgeschäft". I think it's not essential to learn the word "Bekleidung". "Kleidung" is more common. You would say "Ich trage Kleidung" but not "Ich trage Bekleidung". Maybe "Bekleidung" is a little bit old-fashioned. I did this translation wrong in the test, and I am a native speaker..

113ReplyGive Lingot•5 years ago

leweskiddy 25 67

Ich bin ein Ausländer, denn es gibt mir keine Hoffnung, nicht wahr?

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DannyOcean 14

Es gibt immer Hoffnung :)

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ValidUserName 11 7

There are definitely slight differences in actual use. And on top of that those may (or may not) be regionally different (which is generally true in such cases in any language... So what I say here might not be universally true). Where I live you would rather say "die Kleidung einer Person" (a person's clothes) or "ein Bekleidungsgeschäft" (a shop that sells clothes) or "Herrenbekleidung" (~men's wear).

So "Kleidung" is mostly used when referring to the specific stuff some one is wearing, whereas "Bekleidung" refers to clothes in a more general sense. If that's too complicated for you you will be on the safe side if you only use "Kleidung" in any context ;)

32ReplyGive Lingot•5 years ago

tangbo 6

Only use "Kleidung", this is clever ! Danke!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

weissblau 14 6

Maybe it's like the difference between "clothes" and "clothing", which is to say, not much.

18ReplyGive Lingot•5 years ago

gheller 12

The be- prefix tends to be similar in German to the be- prefix in older English words. For example, the difference between decked and bedecked. You might say some one is all decked out, but bedecked tends to mean more like decorated, like, the house was all bedecked with Christmas lights. So I would guess Kleidung is used more when you're talking about wearing clothes, and Bekleidung is used more when you're talking about getting all dressed up. That's just a guess, though.

6ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

arsavard 22 10 7 6 6 5 4 4
Kleidung is "clothes" and Bekleidung is like using the word "attire" in English.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

woodlander 11 3 2
I find Bekleidung a little bit strange when talking about everyday clothing. But if you turn it into a verb, for example sich bekleiden, it means to dress up. So I would think that Bekleidung is more like a costume or formal attire.

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Meatshoes 17 3
I'm by no means an expert, but I have seen duolingo translate Kleidung to clothing, and Bekleidung to costume. EDIT: I googled both terms and found the German wikipedia page for clothing <http://de.wikipedia.org/wiki/Kleidung>, which starts Kleidung (auch Bekleidung), auch meaning also, as far as I can tell. So I'm stumped.

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 years ago

constancefrith 10 6 3
I think it comes down to connotation and context. if Bekleidung is sometimes specific to costume perhaps it has less formal connotations, might be equivalent to English words like Getup, Outfit, where as Kleidung might be more like Clothing and Attire. I

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 years ago

taylorjskinner 11 6 3 3
It's hard to find explanations of slight differences in words online... Something I always use as a tip is to do a google image search of the terms. Kleidung gives general pictures of clothing... Bekleidung seems to give more pictures of clothing hanging in stores. So perhaps Bekleidung carries the connotation of shopping and purchasing...?

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 years ago

DERGAUNER 13 12 20
Es machts nichts

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

fagbot 13 11
It's pretty much the same thing. But I've learned that any words that are alike only with a Be- difference (or a ver- for a verb as well) can have a slightly different meaning. With the particle Be-, the term takes a more practical sense. Die Kleidung einer Person = this person's clothes. Die BEkleidung einer Person = the way this person dresses. It's really hard to make the difference, and I don't think it would change anything meaning-wise in a conversation.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Maddiex 6

Kleidung - clothes, Bekleidung - apparel

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

threadpiece 14 11 58

I like the explanations given of Kleidung = clothes and Bekleidung = clothing/wear/attire.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 4 2 6

Check this out:

<http://www.duden.de/suchen/dudenonline/Kleidung%2C>

<http://www.duden.de/suchen/dudenonline/Bekleidung%2C>

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lethargoslangsam 7 4

They're both dungs.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kewest 11

Kleidung=clothes Bekleidung= being clothed

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Flibbo 18 14 6 6 6 5

being clothed would be "bekleidet"

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

279 Find the pairs

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7247941>

scarcerer 22 20 17 10 196

I was just using the iOS app when I was presented with this

I haven't seen anyone bring this up before, so I thought I'd ask your opinions. Are these kind of exercises useful and should they be implemented to the web version as well?

Give Lingot1

522 years ago

Leave a new comment

9 Comments

tko209 25 11

I just opened the iOS app and was presented with a lesson type I'd never seen before as well!
Between this and the other thread about the updated French tree, it seems like some major updates are coming. Exciting!

16ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1262

Thanks for the post, scarcerer. I just tried a review on my iPad and I've got the new challenge type too. I like these a lot, quick and painless, and very much a throwback to the "gamification" spirit that we've lost a little with the removal of the hearts, etc. Cool stuff!

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

King.Sid 23 9 8 446

I actually have seen a very similar thing on my IOS and I believe it has been there for a long time. It is just that it is not yet in the PC / Mac version, and I do agree should be added.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

King.Sid 23 9 8 446

When I say long time I mean like 2 years ago

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JohnReid8 10 8 7 6 5 4 4 4 3 3 3 2 2

I think that these exercises can be quite useful, and if it turns out that they can not be implemented in the web version, I'd like to see the DuoLingo app made desktop friendly.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

llouiee 13 6 6 2 2

what is that?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrederickEason 25 23 19 17 13 11 10 10 9 9 8 8 7 3 2 1210

A memory game type lesson only found on the mobile app. You flip over the cards, and try to find words in one language that match words in the other.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

21abryant 3

I do not personally know that answer. I would say ask a mod.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 9

I haven't had the pair matching one yet, but I did have one which gave me the word in one language and a choice of three to translate it into. I think that was what it was, anyway.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

280 Unofficial list of members from the one year+ hall of fame - ARCHIVED 8-Mar-2015

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2933824>

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

The newer post for this hof is here. Started on 8-Mar-2015.

Maintaining a streak is mark of dedication and focus and also of the ability to remain über-connected. Of course, the incentive tends to grow once you cross a threshold of say 100 days. But to be able to maintain the streak through thick and thin is commendable, imho.

The community will benefit, draw inspiration and motivation by being able to find all the members of this club here. (Please check-in below to get listed).

The listing for the one year+ hall of fame members follows:

Current members

Platinum (730+)

754 johnarnold

753 christi3

Gold (500 - 729)

728 lesorton

713 centime

713 IG88

712 JaySilverman

700 lolaphilologist

677 garrettowne

670 ketoacidosis

666 MABBY

660 smearedink

654 Birdexplorers

654 jolynnedougherty

652 klariet

650 hal8196

650 Yglen

645 ASBusinessMagnet

644 Shisoik

640 Lyarra

631 SamirShaker

625 Pastafarianist

624 annecooling

623 Markmcopc

615 yteri

614 wombatua

611 Dan_gloriosul

610 raydancer

601 vivisaurus

591 xprochi

587 Hypnotoad1

587 laneuffer

586 wazzie

585 quasinabo

578 Ariaflame

578 FrankySka
573 rolosrevenge
572 rashtrakut
571 yonoleo
570 Druckles
569 DimaButerin
565 davidalso
565 davidcwalls
563 Davu
563 JsuisTony
557 JizzanthePuss
557 ruinchristmas
554 zsazsagoulash
553 rowaso
552 RooPuddin
552 sernstberger
551 rosebud131
551 swtoby
550 DonCarlosPeligro
543 YuMoises
540 MandGoja
539 ych0130517
537 zengator
535 espace13
533 Chartreux
533 VStarTraveler
531 Kortaggio
530 Foubdeb
529 kplife
527 gerfboy
527 Zainth
524 DXLi
523 leeRoccy
522 MarcosFodrini
517 nicholas.md
515 Stefano.Prina
512 amjbrown
512 Sabandija9
510 ClintTweed
509 luisito.le.beau
506 rambo.e
503 Knoxienne
502 Calleson
502 fantomitzah
Silver (400 - 499)
498 anachron
498 writchier4
497 paulsagra
496 joelphillips
495 at2004
495 Trisha1961

494 pdquinn1
493 queendeeny
493 Z.Shan
492 arekolek ![][ede]
492 BobbieL
490 Usagiboy7
485 graham_wildzaner
485 Lejnonen
485 MultiLinguAlex
485 Paulo.Guedes
478 RichardLaFleshe
477 pada.online
476 Objectivist
475 raans
474 nomadff7
473 maggimunro
472 BarbaraMorris
472 philip322
471 QTrg
469 alan_moreno
468 knittinggirl
468 MeredithNa
465 helenmk
463 territrades
462 nashrambler
461 M132T003C
459 lindaljc
458 Professor01
458 rodvil77
456 Thidrekr
454 Candace0
454 magda222
453 zim_ek
451 leogrignafini
451 pilgrim2k
450 jitengore
449 piotrben
448 quis_lib_duo
446 wataya
445 moodswinger
441 Luyematsu
439 marie.valarao
436 LukeHoltom
436 mingthemad
436 Wildlight
432 jddar
431 josephPoole
431 Rompip
430 kimojima
426 Adjack
422 pianochem

421 Chi82
421 Salas85
418 TinyKitties
416 EricGjovaag
415 jairapetyan
414 tihomir2
413 georgeoftruth
411 Ynhockey
410 ElConejoVolador
410 pobrecito13
410 vvrastev
409 Justin-B
409 OrhunNihat
406 celticranger
406 NickFlynn
405 slogger
405 SoyHenry
402 ajcee7
400 GeniusJack
400 xyphax
Bronze (365 - 399)
397 R_Wlsn_1969
396 RooMum
396 tariqnisarahmed
394 idk101
391 pablitoneal
386 CatherinGregory
381 bowsy51
381 dewluca
381 GregHullender
380 johnkpaul
378 pmbrowner
376 DeroGoi
370 balios
368 JSong1085
368 LeMaitre
365 MichaelRed8
Alumni members (Streak end date)
629 adrianojp2000 (12-Jan-2015)
595 Deraillieur (12-Jan-2015)
558 Arthurva (30-Nov-2014)
540 SzeAndr (25-Oct-2014)
511 Equilibrio99 (12-Jan-2015)
491 Mr.Aaren (21-Dec-2014)
485 kmandrew (27-Sep-2014)
479 Nerdator (27-Sep-2014)
455 ceaer (19-Aug-2014)
447 revdolphin (21-Dec-2014)
437 niceliz (10-Oct-2014)
435 lenvm (8-Nov-2014)
435 Theognome (23-Aug-2014)

418 Paiting (23-Aug-2014)
409 jqstringfield (21-Dec-2014)
401 afdhein (13-Sep-2014)
395 qaa2 (30-Nov-2014)
391 bf2010 (18-May-2014)
386 dojodo (4-Oct-2014)
382 fer84 (24-Nov-2014)
378 Wilvandal (16-Aug-2014)
374 SpaceOwl42 (25-Oct-2014)
369 shanezie (25-Oct-2014)
367 maria_ferro (8-Nov-2014)
365 Balaur (30-Dec-2014)

If any of the current members lose their streak, they are added to this list.

Soon to be's (300 - 364)

364 sikoritta
361 coldasice26
361 SamuBG13
357 wj677
356 Rob2042
353 segesdi
348 suesieb
338 s-g-miller
329 _gs9
327 godlessprimate
316 MandyDieKatze
313 paanmokhtar
310 AndreaOviedo
307 EllaPolmear

The Hall of Fame statistics:

Started: April 2014

Last Updated: 01-February-2015

Archived & Locked: 08-March-2015

Newer page: Started March 2015

This discussion is now archived and locked. The future updates will happen on this post.

Give Lingot140

2482 years ago

547 CommentsThis discussion is locked.

Birdexplorers 25 25 25 25 25 24 13 11 11 11 11 2 2 2 1410

Greetings from Efate, Vanuatu. Surprisingly, I have been able to keep the streak despite travel to remote wilderness areas in over 26 countries including remote parts of Bhutan, Nepal, Myanmar, Sweden, Canada, India, Indonesia and many South Pacific Island States. Seems like the whole world is wired in these days even in the remote far corners. Also Duolingo-ing up to 4200 ms on Dochala Pass photographing Monal in Bhutan, and -10 m photographing Kowari in South Australia. Maybe these are Duolingo elevation records ;-) Off to Viti Levu tomorrow, better get off Duolingo and start packing ;-)

143Give Lingot22•2 years ago

sommerlied 25 23 16 15 14 14 13 12 11 11 10 10 8 7 7 7 6 6 4 4 2 2 Amazing!

16Give Lingot1•2 years ago

SoyHenry 25 25 1172
Here are the monsters of Duoilingo.. my respects =)

9Give Lingot43•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12
I'm reserving my place 349 days early. 215 days...

41Give Lingot3•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
lol!

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

lolaphilologist 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 11 11 7 5 5 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 1470
Thanks!

30Give Lingot3•2 years ago

christi3 25 17 1524
Fun idea. Count me in also :)

24Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
Dear hof (hall of fame) members, current and future!

There are quite a few changes this week and that calls for this update:

- First of all, welcome to the "soon to be" members, paulsagra & Trisha1961.
- smearedink in on the brink (499) of reaching the gold level, and wazzie & Paiting for the silver level
- Theognome recently made it to the silver level (406 now)
- RooPuddin has now joined the club - over an year of streak
- And rowaso, zsazsagoulash, swtoby, ych0130517, Wilvandal should be joining around the next update
- MultiLinguAlex (299) is on the verge of joining the "soon to be" list
- Unfortunately endios missed the streak having reached 318. Hope to see endios back here next year.

In other news, it is great to see how many hofers have started learning Dutch. I have added those for whom I found the Dutch levels (>1). If I have missed your Dutch level, please let me know on my stream.

Perhaps Duolingo should consider adding the display of the Dutch levels here, just as they do on the Profile page. That will make it easier.

Lastly, very happy to see the hof grow so nicely. As a result, the updates are taking longer time and that is the reason I have discontinued the mid-week updates. At some point in future, it will be great to have this feature woven into the website. In another 105 days, I should be joining the club. I hope Duolingo builds this feature before I get there :)

Cheers!

23Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588

I cant wait! 16 more days and I am a soon to be! :-D happy learning! -Spaceowl42

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

anachron 22 9 2 2

the updates are taking longer time

Are you collecting the data by hand?

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

I would like to fully automate it. Would love to hear any ideas you might have!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

anachron 22 9 2 2

I created a javascript: <http://pastebin.com/ApbEvVWQ>

For now, it does not automate everything. You can run the script in the web developer's console, and it will give you a list like this:

```
<pre>"Gold" 578 "johnarnold" 576 "christi3" 552 "lesorton" 537 "centime" 536 "JaySilverman" 536
"IG88" 525 "lolaphilologist" 513 "smearedink" "Silver" 494 "ketoacidosis" 478 "jolynnedougherty"
477 "Birdexplorers" ... </pre>
```

The list has no language flags or levels, just the streak length and user name are shown.

12Give Lingot10•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Thanks, anachron! That's a great start. I will try to tweak it to add the bells and whistles :) I might ping you on your stream if I have questions.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

anachron 22 9 2 2

Sure, no problem.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

anachron 22 9 2 2

I'll see what I can figure out if/when I have some time to spare.

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

The Dutch levels seem to show up sometimes, only in the right place. Though I haven't seen them for a while now, so I'm not sure what's going on with that.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

ArchitOjha 25 23 20 15 11 7 6 1173

Hi may i get on it as well :)

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jolynnedougherty 25 19 14 8 5 44

Thanks for the invite.

19Give Lingot2•2 years ago

ASBusinessMagnet 25 25 25 23 16 1417

'Sup, count me in.

17Give Lingot2•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525

Thank you for the invite. For those of us with multiple languages, it would be good to see our streaks in each language. This used to be a feature. Now it is only visible from the phone app--a nice to have but not must have feature.

15Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1226

462 <https://www.duolingo.com/davidbohardt>

14Give Lingot1•2 years ago

lesorton 25 1499

I now know I am not alone. Roll on 500

12Give Lingot2•2 years ago

RooPuddin 25 19 14 12 11 8 1286

I'M COMING GUYS!!

11Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Lyarra 25 15 1411

I've got 372 now! Thanks to praer for letting me know to post this. :)

10Give Lingot2•2 years ago

praer 19 16 9

yay, it would feel weird if you're not on the list! I think your contribution to the Spanish immersion section is very impressive!! ..you also have the most XPs on my leaderboard! :P

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

centime 25 10 1482

Bonjour tout le monde !

10Give Lingot2•2 years ago

JaySilverman 25 18 13 1484

I reached 500 today - please add me in! Thanks!

10Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Congratulations! You have made a golden entry :)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525

congratulations

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

ketoacidosis 25 25 15 13 9 6 4 1404

Nice list. Haven't missed a day since I've started. Thanks a lot!

9Give Lingot2•2 years ago

swtoby 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 7

Hey jitengore! I guess now that I've reached my goal of 6x25 you can pencil me in here if you want.
:D

9Give Lingot3•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

swtoby, that is a great accomplishment! You are the only second person I know with a '6x25'. I will include you when I update the list later today.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

swtoby 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 7

Thanks!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588

Wow! 6 languages and level 25 on all of them!?!? Amazing! :-D Have a lingot! Happy learning! - Spaceowl42

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

seelian 25 9 3 3 2 507

488 mtravels <https://www.duolingo.com/mtravels>

463 lesorton <https://www.duolingo.com/lesorton>

423 smearedink <https://www.duolingo.com/smearedink>

405 ketoacidosis <https://www.duolingo.com/ketoacidosis> found this

8Give Lingot2•2 years ago

fantomitzah 25 18 17 17 16 11 9 9 2 2 701

Duo keeps me happy (while I keep the owl happy)... I just reached 300 days. :-)

UPDATE (December):

23 - English

17 - Dutch

16 - Spanish

10 - French 9 - Portuguese, Italian, German

2 - Irish, Danish

(August 26th) Reached level 2 in Irish and Danish. Just to show my support. :)

1 - Swedish

8Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1226

Bravo bravo :)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Ikamjh 22 16 10 5

Why not put a list of all the usernames as links (put the username in brackets, then the link next to it in parenthesis and it will make the name into a link) At the top of the main discussion in an edit.

Then people can more easily find all the hall of famers. You could also put their longest streak length (only updating once a week or something if its still active).

7Give Lingot2•2 years ago

christi3 25 17 1524

Hi there! I just wanted to say "thank you" for taking the time to put all of this together, and for gathering all of us here to one place. It really is a fun idea. Thanks!

7Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Sure! We needed a place to celebrate yours and others accomplishments, especially now that you would be among the first ones to cross the 500 day mark by next week.

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

YGlen 25 1421

Thanks for the invite to check in on this thread. I've actually been on the site daily since joining 2013-03-17 but lost the initial streak of something like 45 days by not realizing what was required to maintain it. Ever since I confirm the check mark next to the streak value after qualifying activity. It is surprising how much a person can learn just by showing up every day, even if only to complete a single lesson or duel.

7Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Congratulations to Derailleur, xprochi, and yteri for achieving their 400 day streak! The Silver category now has the bulk of 365ers and the Bronze category has only three. That is until few Soon-to-be's start joining in three days :)

7Give Lingot2•2 years ago

FrankySka 25 23 16 14 14 10 8 1348
now you can add me jitengore :-)

7Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Soolrak 25 25 25 22 20 19 17 16 15 14 14 11 7

My highest streak was 116 days, but then I went abroad and I lost it... See you in the club in around 9-10 months! :-)

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

And today you've reached your highest streak again. Congrats ;-)

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

maggimunro 25 25 25 14 1242

I would have been a 365er but for a short break in Germany last year without the internet

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

wataya 25 25 25 25 25 25 23 20 10 9 9 5 1161

Interesting to hear that lost mountain regions in Bhutan don't seem to be an issue but that good old Germany is :)

8Give Lingot1•2 years ago

maggimunro 25 25 25 14 1242

Ah, no, Germany is fine, but our French friend who lives there is in the dark ages when it comes to computer technology, so hadn't set up wi-fi at his place!

7Give Lingot1•2 years ago

vashishvip 22 6 4 1

Unlucky. I believe Duolingo should allow users to buy more than one streak freeze.

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Objectivist 16 14 13 12 11 1235

I think we're already lucky to be able to buy just one. Otherwise, what's the point of keeping streaks?

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Ikamjh 22 16 10 5

Certain hotels are terrible about their wifi... But often you can just lie to the people at the front desk, say your a premium member or whatever gets you free wifi (even though your not) and they usually dont ask to see proof of it. If they do just say you lost it and walk away.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196

OR one can say that they belong to the Duolingo one year+ hall of fame and they must continue their streak while they stay with them :)

8Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Ikamjh 22 16 10 5

They would probably get all douchey and say if its that worth it, pay for it. I like free wifi better...

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Ariaflame 25 25 14 1346

When I was interstate I did the bare minimum to keep my streak up (1 lesson in Italian and in French) using my 3G connection and my phone app.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

StuffieStephie 19 15 11 11 4

Soon... soon...!!!

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Beast_Legend 11 8 8 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 4 2

You can be in the soon to be slot ;) And nicely done everybody else, I'm trying but going on multiple trips this summer probably won't allow me to keep up with Duolingo.

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

StuffieStephie 19 15 11 11 4

Well I cannot believe this but in an instant I lost my streak and so begins the infinite sadness D: Can my name still be up there with like an "R.I.P" to mourn my loss? ;_;

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

I feel sorry for you. Did you not buy insurance, i.e. invest in streak freeze?

2Give Lingot2•2 years ago

StuffieStephie 19 15 11 11 4

Aww thank you! I really thought that I had bought a streak freeze :/ maybe I accidentally used it before? Anyway, I really appreciate that you kept my name up there! Takes some of the sting out ;)

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Beast_Legend 11 8 8 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 4 2

So does a streak freeze automatically use itself? Because if it does... I can get exactly to a 100 before I have to leave...

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Beast_Legend 11 8 8 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 4 2

Jizzan got his streak back. EvilHoneyBadger bought it from a moderator for around 400 lingots! But I think he doesn't know... D:

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

StuffieStephie 19 15 11 11 4

Yeah, I just saw that (today was my mom's birthday so we were out and about -- I spent $300 bucks on her :D I'm a good baby lol) I'm pretty speechless about the whole thing actually! Thanks to all involved!

(P.S. I'm a girl)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Moderators (or employees) don't do that kind of trade. Besides, lingots bribery is considered a cyber crime ;)

To answer your other question, I don't think that streak freeze applies itself automatically. One probably has to choose to use it. But, I have not yet run in that situation.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

_gs9 22 11 8 7 6 5 5 2 2

Beast_DJ_Legend: I can't reply to your other post so I'll reply here to your questions about the streak freeze.

At any point anyone can buy a streak freeze in the lingot store for 10 lingots. You can only buy one at a time. Once you have bought it it remains as an insurance until it is used.

Suppose you then forget to use Duolingo all day on Monday. At 23:59 Monday, as the clock ticks over to 00:00, your streak freeze will automatically be used and it will mark you as having practiced on Monday. You will gain an extra day on your streak (without a streak freeze your streak would reset back to zero!). Then on Tuesday when you log in, you will see that your streak freeze has been used and you still have your streak.

If you want to keep your streak after Tuesday then you need to log in and either do a lesson on Tuesday or buy another streak freeze. There is no way to buy more than one streak freeze.

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
Thanks _gs9 for explaining how it works!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

yuioyuo 24 11 3 3 2
Streak freeze doesn't really gives you an extra day of practice. It just freezes your streak, so that it stays unchanged for the day you don't practise, you just don't lose it. Description from the store: Streak Freeze allows your streak to remain in place for one full day of inactivity.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Beast_Legend 11 8 8 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 4 2
Sorry JIzzan, I had no way of knowing and I refer to everybody thats gender is unknown to me a guy. sorry I'll try to remember :P

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Beast_Legend 11 8 8 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 4 2
Thanks so much gs now I can get 100 instead of 99 :P

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Beast_Legend 11 8 8 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 4 2
Yes, I know, but I was just asking if it automatically is used or if you have to log in and use it.

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

SamirShaker 25 25 23 22 19 15 11 6 4 1394
I had to wait two days before I comment, so I would have a streak strictly greater than 365 :)

6Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
Congrats on your streak! And thanks for exercising patience, you have been officially added to this unofficial list. As you know, we have had a few very aspiring learners who have checked-in much in advance. The community has great expectations from them :)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

SamirShaker 25 25 23 22 19 15 11 6 4 1394

Thanks! I probably wouldn't have noticed the day my streak passed the 1 year threshold without this thread, because I stopped paying attention to its number a long time ago. After passing the 100 days threshold, my thought process gradually shifted from following my streak number, to "Language learning is something I do every day, just like brushing my teeth", and my streak is just a byproduct of that.

And regarding the very early check-ins, I much prefer beating games within the rules than outside them, because that makes it so much more fulfilling. Posting before my streak was officially more than one year would have made the wait less fun without much to look forward to. My advice to the very aspiring learners is to forget the long term goal and think about the daily routine that needs to be developed to easily (and fruitfully) achieve their long term goal.

8Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196

Very well said! My intent with this is not to force a mad rush to this hall of fame, but I would like for the community to be able to see the stars in one place.

Due to the long period involved (over a year), achieving this feat is not for those with a feeble mind using shortcuts and gimmicks to achieve it. Having a long streak is a mark of discipline and consistent progress, something that is very much needed for learning new languages.

11Give Lingot1•2 years ago

SamirShaker 25 25 23 22 19 15 11 6 4 1394

Exactly :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Shisoik 25 1406

Proud to join the club.

6Give Lingot2•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525

Congratulations. You earned it!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Markmcopc 25 25 25 25 25 12 1383

1 year, May 18.

6Give Lingot3•2 years ago

xprochi 24 14 6 6 6 5 2 2 3

Please count me in!

6Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Z.Shan 21 12 10 2 1203
@jitengore I'm checking in! :D

2014.07.09

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1226
Congratulations! I still have 2 months ahead :P

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

vivisaurus 17 15 13 9 7 5 4 1344
Well I didn't know there was a Hall of Fame! Can I play? It seems like my English score doesn't show, but I suppose that is not important. =]

6Give Lingot2•2 years ago

dauidalso 21 19 16 13 1332
And as Vivisaurus has led me to this room (as she leads me in streak days!), may I join the fun as well?

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
Sure, happy to add you and dauidalso :) I have added your English level as well and a lingot for making the entry!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

vivisaurus 17 15 13 9 7 5 4 1344
Thanks! Wow, I didn't know I had Spanish and French too. Are you sure those are mine? Did I do those and forget? Where is my mind.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
My bad! Even I don't know where they came from. :) All is well now.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

lolaphilologist 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 11 11 7 5 5 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 1470
I just made 500! :-D

6Give Lingot6•2 years ago

MarieValarao 25 25 25 25 25
Congrats, lolaphilologist.

1Give Lingot2•2 years ago

lolaphilologist 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 11 11 7 5 5 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 1470
congrats on making a year!

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MarieValarao 25 25 25 25 25
Thanks! You are an inspiration, remember that.

1Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Objectivist 16 14 13 12 11 1235
What happens when a 500 member gets to 600 though? Will he be the only gold one and will the rest of the 500 club be demoted to silver? And the 400 club to bronze etc.

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
One stays for 35 days in the Bronze level, 100 days in the Silver, so I was thinking a 250 day stay in the Gold level would be more appropriate. So that would put Platinum starting at 750 days which will amount to over two year streak. What do you all think?

And beyond that, we will make the future as we go! And no, no demotions planned :)

p.s.: I have just updated the list. I have seen a lot of leveling ups. Great show everyone!

10Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Objectivist 16 14 13 12 11 1235
Sounds good.

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rolosrevenge 25 24 14 1326
I like it.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12
That sounds like a great tier system. I can't wait to be on this list...these are all such dedicated users. Thanks for putting this all together, it's really motivating.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
And thanks to you AlexisLinguist, for creating the Golden Owl hall of fame! I personally agree that such "human-powered gamification" as davidcwalls put it recently, further adds to the inherent gamification aspects of Duolingo :)

No, 35 is not a typo:

65 days (ending 364) in the "Soon to be list"
35 days (ending 399) in the Bronze level
100 days (ending 499) in Silver
250 days (ending 749) in Gold (being proposed)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11
I think the 2 year mark (730) would be perfect for the next tier.

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12
Oh, my mistake then. :) I was thinking the Bronze level was the Soon-to-be level for some reason.

I was inspired by yours, so you're welcome, and thank you in return for the inspiration. :) Just to let you know, I've been thinking further on the reverse trophies, and I'm not sure that it would be the easiest for me to do so, because of the large amount of entries, and several of you have 2+ reverse trees.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

davidcwalls 24 22 18 12 1335
Platinum - like the recording industry

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Objectivist 16 14 13 12 11 1235
I thought of that too, but after that? Sooner or later someone will reach 800 and we're running out of precious metals.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rolosrevenge 25 24 14 1326
Rhodium, Palladium, Diamond, Sapphire, Emerald

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
And after that, we consult the ferengi ^_~

9Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Druckles 25 25 22 18 1342
Have a slightly embarrassed bar of gold-pressed latinum.

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
16-Aug update: A lot of progress and movement this week :)

Welcoming ketoacidosis to the gold level!

And rolosrevenge, Druckles, rashtrakut, yonoleo, & ruinchristmas to the silver level! davidalso, davidcwalls, JsuisTony, Davu, & Jizzanthepuss will soon be joining them before the next update.

And Equilibrio99 & Mr.Aaren to the bronze level. Chartreux, VStarTraveler, & kplife will be joining them before the next update.

Welcoming kmandrew & Kortaggio to the club!

Last but not the least, welcoming maggimunro, SpaceOwl42, & Trang. to the 'soon-to-be' list.

6Give Lingot2•2 years ago

tonywangtj 25 23 23 15 13 12 12 11 8 6 2 2 2 1312
Wohoo!! 1 more day to hit the 4xx mark ;) Thank you sir!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588
Thanks for adding me!! :-D

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

LeeRoccy 25 14 352
377 days today. Bronze. :) :)

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

So, I'm a bit of a number nerd. I noticed that my name seemed to be on an island. There really isn't a user who's streak is close to mine. My streak is 448 days. The closes above mine is 14 days away at 462, and the one closest below mine is 12 days away at 436.

I looked to see if anyone else was in the same boat as me, and found two other users who had it worse: lesorton (streak of 587) who is surrounded by 24 days above and 16 below and lolaphilologist who is surroounded by 12 days and 22 days.

The two other people are 'gold' members, so it is bit expected, but I still think mine is a bit of an oddball.

(These were based off the top 10 difference on both sides, meaning, both the above and below values were in the top 10 largest difference)

Next I looked at who had the greatest total of days different from users around them, and made a quick top 10:

587 lesorton - 40 total days

558 lolaphilologist - 34 total days

536 garrettowne - 29 total days

611 christi3 - 26 total days

448 wazzie - 26 total days

(streak values taken on 9-20-14)

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Dear fellow hofers,

I have just updated the hof listing. If you find any omissions or errors, please let me know on my stream (and not here)! The reason is that too many comments here make it harder to update the list. That is the main reason that I do not individually respond to the new requests here although I do appreciate each request. I am making an exception today by adding my comment here because I wanted to highlight a few things.

1. Downvoting: Please resist from downvoting comments here. A few of the comments written by the alums have recently got systematically downvoted, perhaps because the down-voter didn't see a health streak against the alum's comment. This makes it harder to find them to update their language levels.

2. Duplicated comments: A few of the recent comments have got posted twice, thrice or even four times. That is primarily because this bulky page takes a considerable time to refresh. So please click on the "Post" button only once. That is assuming that you really need to post something here :) Avoid any unnecessary comments please!

3. Order of comments: If possible let the order of comments remain the way it is. This helps me with updating. When the comments move around, it becomes harder to reconcile.

4. Automation: Lastly the reason I have not automated this list is because: 1. The levels are still not correct for a few languages/entries. 2. And automation needs a considerable work (I would like to maintain the Alumni listing and that needs a complex logic). But some day, we will get there!

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525

need to add a couple names: smearedink & Arthurva

5Give Lingot2•2 years ago

MarieValarao 25 25 25 25 25

@jitengore: I noticed that the languages presented here are the following: French, Portuguese, German, Italian, and Spanish. Now, what about English? I have completed the English tree (Level 25) in a period of 35 days, albeit under the username, "proftherese". Will English also be included here? Apparently, your "discussion" does not appear on the English Program Discussion and am not able to post a comment under my other username, proftherese. <https://www.duolingo.com/marie.valarao>
<https://www.duolingo.com/proftherese>

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

If you are using another username (proftherese), then Duolingo cannot show all your languages together. Even if you were learning English on this account, there is a current limitation that will prevent English from showing up here with the rest of your five languages, for which, you have reached the highest levels - quite impressive!

This discussion was posted on English forum. You should be able to look it up by going to the web page address (shown in your browser) while you are signed up as the other user.

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196

I feel compelled to add a special entry for someone who has just reached a streak of 200 (not the needed 300), but has reached level 25 in six languages. Well done!

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MarieValarao 25 25 25 25 25

Thank you for your clarification.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588

Wow! 6 languages and level 25? Amazing! Have a lingot! Happy learning! -Spaceowl42

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

VStarTraveler 25 10 9 1285

jitengore,

Please add

<https://www.duolingo.com/davidbohardt>

He's now at 468. Thanks!

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196

tfagan, there are two reasons I have not added people to the list if they have not checked-in here by themselves.

This gives them control on whether their name should or should not be listed on such a public list.

Secondly, I plan to keep the list updated at least once a week or more. Having their entry here makes this job easier for me as well as for the readers of this post.

Does it make sense?

9Give Lingot1•2 years ago

VStarTraveler 25 10 9 1285

Thanks, that makes sense. There were a number of others who had been added, and I didn't catch that all of them had responded, so I was just afraid that the earlier note had gotten lost in the replies. Great job, and carry on!

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

RooPuddin 25 19 14 12 11 8 1286

Thanks for the addition!

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

vivisaurus 17 15 13 9 7 5 4 1344

Hey, that's a Keepon! I have one looking at me in my living room right now. Looks just like you. =]

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

RooPuddin 25 19 14 12 11 8 1286

Well, they're actually based on me you know ;-)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

dauidalso 21 19 16 13 1332

Wow. It's an honor to find the original inspiration.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

klariet 23 22 22 14 14 13 13 13 6 405 ok why not ;)

5Give Lingot2•2 years ago

ceaer 25 25 23 16 927

I'm just over a year now.

5Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196

You have been officially added to the unofficial list :)

A few interesting milestones are coming up...

- johnarnold and christi3 are on the verge of crossing the 500 mark!

- jolynnedougherty, adrianojp2000, Birdexplorers, klariet, and Yglen are at the brink of their 400 mark!

- Derailleur is set to join the club in five days!

4Give Lingot3•2 years ago

jolynnedougherty 25 19 14 8 5 44

Thanks. This is better than Googling myself :)

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

ceaer 25 25 23 16 927

As you'll notice when doing the next update, I have lost my streak. The perils of going on vacation while not owning a smart device :-) The last day I practiced was 8/17 but I had a freeze so it didn't reset till 8/19. It was at 455.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196

Sorry to hear that! Wilvandal seems to be in the same boat as you. I will reflect that in my update later today. Now with bf2010, you, and Wilvandal, we have an alumni club for this hall of fame.

"Been there, done that" club :)

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

lindaljc 25 13 4 49

sorry to see that! I still think it would be great if your profile could show the 'highest historical streak', but I know there are more important things on the wish list! We know you were there, anyway!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

yonoleo 25 16 13 11 7 7 6 4 2 1325

[cough, cough] 317 here. I also know FrankySka is around 325.

5Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196

yonoleo, you are in! You might be the first incubator course guy to have checked-in. FrankySka wants to wait another forty days, before she joins. A few others have the same thinking, which is also understandable.

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

FrankySka 25 23 16 14 14 10 8 1348

exactly. Let my make my year full first - I think I should be done independence day! haha

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

VStarTraveler 25 10 9 1285

Almost there!!!! Go! Go! Go!!!!

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

yonoleo 25 16 13 11 7 7 6 4 2 1325

I'm not waiting for anything. 317 is enough to celebrate. Plus, I have this thing on autopilot, I am not jinxing anything. (No tricks, I'm just saying that coming here every day is part of my daily routine.)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rowaso 25 6 4 1325

Just hit 300 today. Thanks for the Hall of Fame.

5Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588

Congrats! Have a lingot! :-D Happy learning! - SpaceOwl42

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Druckles 25 25 22 18 1342
I have not finished my tree yet :-)

5Give Lingot2•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525
You are not alone!

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Druckles 25 25 22 18 1342
Today I broke my next barrier and joined you for a month.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

yteri 25 23 1386
Hey there - checking in with a little more than a year streak

5Give Lingot2•2 years ago

lesorton 25 1499
Wow I made it to Gold. Just need the other 2 to step aside now (christi3 and johnarnold) ;-)

5Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196
And in the same spirit...

You would not want any other 'Gold' members who might be out there to decide to show up here ;-)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

lesorton 25 1499
Of course not, well not for a while anyway.....

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525
congratulations

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

lesorton 25 1499
Thanks, I can see you like languages, 5 well done.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rodvil77 25 22 6 1

Helloo guys, I have a streak of 235 days. Learning German and reinforcing my French. Please add me to this champ list! Cheers

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

hal8196 25 21 18 1418

Thank you for the invitation to join this elite group. My streak is at 431.

5Give Lingot11•2 years ago

Luis.Bloncourt 19 11 8 8 7 5 2 2 2

Private Le Beau reporting for duty on the next list, Sir!

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Ariaflame 25 25 14 1346

Well, looks like I just hit bronze level. Hello from Western Australia where I am currently learning French and Italian via duolingo, and Scottish Gaelic in more face to face and with some books. (I thought about looking at Irish but it's sometimes the similarities that are more of a problem than differences). 366 today.

5Give Lingot3•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Way to go!! :D

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rashtrakut 22 22 21 20 19 18 17 17 16 15 15 15 14 14 1343

Two more days :)

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rolosrevenge 25 24 14 1326

You can do it!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

wombatua 25 25 14 13 13 13 12 11 7 5 3 1385

I suppose my streak meets your standards...

5Give Lingot2•2 years ago

ruinchristmas 23 19 6 4 160

Add me to the almosts.

5Give Lingot2•2 years ago

at2004 25 14 11

I made it to 300 today

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2
Congrats to you =)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

davidcwalls 24 22 18 12 1335
I am a few hours early, but I hope to join the group tomorrow!

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Objectivist 16 14 13 12 11 1235
Soon...

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

RichardLaFleshe 22 632
I have finished the Spanish Tree and 311consecutive days. I think Duolingo is a great opportunity and one of the best things I have ever accomplished from a learning standpoint and I have been around for seventy years.Thanks Richard LaFleshe

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

M132T003C 23 19 19 18 17 16 14 12 12 10 10 9 9 9 8 8 6 6 6 6 3 3 3 2 1231
My streak reached 300 today!

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

nicholas.md 25 14 13 7 1288
Just a few hours out from hitting 365. I am ready!

Update (Sept 1st):

Success!!

Bonne chance à tout le monde ;)

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525
New milestone. Reached 365 days in all 5 languages today.

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2
Awesome. Way to go!

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525

Thanks! I see you are at 347 so you are getting close to the milestone too! I guess your streak survived your vacation.....mine barely did--no computer internet for 4 of the 7 days I rented a house on the beach. Good thing I had a smartphone.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

As you already recognized, I haven't barely been online for some weeks now due to stress and it was pretty tough to maintain the streak; I also had to use several streak freezes. I'm still very stressed right now, but it's okay. I'm glad you're maintaining your top notch-streak =)

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525

I hope whatever is generating that stress can give you some relief. Hang in there. You have friends who care.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Cleeent 25 16 4 1280

Por favor, incluyeme en la lista. Gracias.

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

adrianojp2000 25 16

put me

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Done :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

adrianojp2000 25 16

thanks

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

smearredink 25 8 5 1430

Oh sure, high score lists are fun. :)

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

nicknolt123 7

davidbohardt is 1k xp away from 700k xp he should get some kind of award for pursuing the language he wants to learn so intensely.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Beast_Legend 11 8 8 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 4 2

Nicstarc is close to 700k xp as well.

1Give Lingot2•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

I must say I'm pretty impressed with the amount of people who've been on here for +400 days!

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196

I have added you to the "Soon to be's" :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

haha, thanks :)

I'll have to remember to come back here in the end of June!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MarieValarao 25 25 25 25 25

marie.valarao / proftherese: What a great and motivating connection. Please count me in. Thanks!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

tonywangtj 25 23 23 15 13 12 12 11 8 6 2 2 2 1312

Thanks man :) Good luck to you too!

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

rashtrakut 22 22 21 20 19 18 17 17 16 15 15 15 14 14 1343

Thanks for the invite. Was doing the math yesterday and hope to at least finish my Spanish tree before the year is up. The French will take longer, but at least have the streak :)

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

rashtrakut 22 22 21 20 19 18 17 17 16 15 15 15 14 14 1343

Idle curiosity, does the streak freeze work on all your languages or just one?

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

Technically, it doesn't protect any of the individual language streaks. But, generally, the overall is the only one you see (web and iOS) and if android currently show individual streaks, they will probably change it soon.

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rashtrakut 22 22 21 20 19 18 17 17 16 15 15 15 14 14 1343

Thanks...Yeah, Android still shows individual streaks. I do wish you get individual streaks because I intend to start a couple more languages...will be good to follow the streaks on those too.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

ych0130517 20 13 8
count me in soon :P

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196
Welcome to the newest member, ych0130517 to the 300+ list. Also version 2 of the Hall of fame listing is now out! Comments welcome :)

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

ych0130517 20 13 8
Muchas gracias :)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588
Cool! I only need 80 more days to get to 300 days! :-D

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196
You are now part of an unpublished watchlist which will trigger your entry in 80 days. It's all up to you now :)

5Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588
Awesome! Thanks so much! I will not let you down! ;-D Happy learning! -SpaceOwl42

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MandGoja 20 6 4 4 1304
Here I am! Ready to be included :)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

AndreaOviedo 21 14 8
Congratulazioni!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

AndreaOviedo 21 14 8
A mi me ha salvado más de una vez el protector de racha pero ya me veo llegando también a 302!

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Stefano-P 20 14

Hope to be able to reach the Soon to be's level ...

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2
You did it! Congrats =)

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Stefano-P 20 14
Thanks, it is nice to be in!

and you are not far, keep up the good work

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Chartreux 25 11 4
I am ready to be added to the list. Merci beaucoup !

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
Chartreux, welcome to the 300 club!

A note to all: I just completed the weekly update of the list. I will continue to update this list once a week. And when there are any milestones achieved, I will try to do a minor update.

Three milestones that are coming up:

- lesorton is due to have a gold membership (500) in 3 days
- SamirShaker to due to have a silver membership (400) in a day
- wazzie is going to join the Hall of Fame (365) in 8 days, that will probably happen at the time of the next major update.

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Chartreux 25 11 4
Great job, Jitengore! It's very interesting for people to see how many "old timers" are actually hanging in there. Is there any way of finding out how many people actually have finished their tree? That would be an interesting statistic. Again, thanks! I'll have to order my club jacket ;)p

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

IG88 25 25 25 25 19 16 13 11 9 9 4 2 1483
Thank you for your notification, jitengore.

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

kplife 22 22 14 10 9 9 8 8 7 7 5 3 2
I just made it!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

RooPuddin 25 19 14 12 11 8 1286

jitengore: many thanks for maintaining this, it makes me feel ever so proud!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I'd love to be added whenever I'm eligible :D

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

I will be happy to add you in 31 days :)

I will have to wait longer to add myself!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

We can do this jitengore! :)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Hi guys, I will definitely reach the magical number 300 in 37 days. I'm just not sure about 365 days, though due to holidays in the summer.

Edit 1: I reached my 365-day streak on October 4, 2014.

Edit 2: I reached my 400-day streak on November 8, 2014.

Edit 3: I finished my French for Germans tree on December 12, 2014.

Edit 4: I've become a contributor to the EN<->DE courses on February 9, 2015.

Edit 5: I reached my 500-day streak on February 16, 2015.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I'm rooting for you anyway!!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

You are awesome =)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525

we are all rooting for you.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

You are awesome =)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rolosrevenge 25 24 14 1326

Use the app. That's how I survived trips to Portugal, Canada, and Saudi Arabia for my year streak. It helps that Tmobile has free international data roaming.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Therefore I need a phone with access to the Internet, therefore I need money which I clearly don't have right now... But my vacation is almost over right now and I will surely make it to 365 days at least =)

5Give Lingot2•2 years ago

rolosrevenge 25 24 14 1326

I can appreciate that. I only recently moved to an android phone less than a year ago.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

amjbrown 25

Almost there!!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rolosrevenge 25 24 14 1326

Add me to the list please.

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

rashtrakut 22 22 21 20 19 18 17 17 16 15 15 15 14 14 1343

Please bronze me

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Congratulations to you! I am also happy to add my two friends from the incubator family :)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Theognome 14 11 105

I just spoke to my wife, Knoxienne, and she'd like to be added. She has completed all of the language trees and tomorrow will reach her 300th flame streak.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Congratulations to her! Please ask her to add a comment here. That makes it possible to maintain the list in the future.

You might well be the first husband-wife team to join the board :)

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

dauidalso 21 19 16 13 1332

Hold on there! Vivisaurus and I are married and joining the list now, too! But we're happy to share the title. ;)

7Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

And tomorrow you will be the first married couple who will both have reached a 365-day streak. Pretty impressive =)

7Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Great to know! :)

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

zsazsagoulash 23 15 9 88

Congrats to all! I am a Soon to Be myself, with a streak of 353 days.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525

I am betting you make it!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

anachron 22 9 2 2

YES! Checking in for the soon-to-be list!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

paulsagra 25 6 5 3 2 2

I am on the last lap! the streak count has really helped motivation, thanks DL!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Trisha1961 25 25 25 25 21 15 14 12 9 7 4 3 3 1266

Hi, I reached 300 days today, so does that get me on the 'soon to be' list? Hope so...and looking forward to doing many more days with Duolingo.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Soolrak 25 25 25 22 20 19 17 16 15 14 14 11 7

I'm almost half-way to appear in the "Soon to be's" list :-)

See you there in around 5 months!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

thergothonfhtagn 25 25 25 25 9 6 5 3 3 3 2 1254

Hello, could you please add me to Soon to be's? I hope I will have streak over 300 days before the next update:-)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

graham_wildzaner 15 14 10

I have made the 300 club

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

DeroGoi 17 11 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 2 2

Just got to 200 today, someday I'll be on the list :)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Davu 25 25

I predict it will be in 100 days. :-) (Congratulations on getting to 200 days by the way.)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Ariaflame 25 25 14 1346

Silver today! Looking forward to tomorrow's update. :)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525

congratulations

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

YuMoises 23 16 93

Hi, how do i get into the club?

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Congrats! You have been added to the listing.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

YuMoises 23 16 93

Yay! Thanks!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rashtrakut 22 22 21 20 19 18 17 17 16 15 15 15 14 14 1343

I need a silver bath

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rolosrevenge 25 24 14 1326
I hear ya.

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Kortaggio 22 10 9 3 2 2 148
Hit my one-year streak today! Add me to the list?

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Professor01 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 22 12
300 days, 3X25

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Objectivist 16 14 13 12 11 1235
mtravels has a streak of 598, two days of the top spot. Doesn't he want to be added?

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
Yes, I have added only those who have consented by adding their comment here.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Wildlight 19 10 2
I've been watching this for a while. It's been a great motivator. I finally made it above 300 the other day :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
Great to hear that :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Sabandija9 21 10 5 5 4 3 3 2
One year for me! :D

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

garrettowne 25 25 14 11 2 2 1431
I just found this. Put me on there. Thanks.

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Arthurva 25 23 13 12 11 8 7 6 4 105
Wow! That is great!

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

DonCarlosPeligro 23 14

Wow. I didn't know there were so many folks with with long streaks. Pretty cool. :)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

espace13 25 7 2 1278

Thank you very much for doing this!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

piotrben 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 23 1220

I found new inspiration! :) Congratulations to all!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Chartreux 25 11 4

Club 400 and the 25th level all in the same day! Now to lose a few pounds so I can fit into that club jacket I ordered.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Adjack 25 25 24 20 11 1197

Today is the day I turn 300.

THIS IS SPARTA!

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Adjack 25 25 24 20 11 1197

Thanks for adding me!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

LukeHoltom 21 7 3 2 1201

Add me to the list next time you update please. I never thought I'd make it to the one year mark but I'm getting pretty close now.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

LeLapinVolant 14 13 13 10

One year seems to be a lot of time. But when you are there, it seems you could have done more...

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Professor01 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 22 12

Hello, 365 days!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

RooPuddin 25 19 14 12 11 8 1286

Hi jitengore, my mum (RooMum, <https://www.duolingo.com/RooMum>) now has over 300 days of streak, can you add her to the Soon to be's section? Thanks!

And congratulations on being just a week away yourself! Almost there!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196

Hi RooPuddin, it is nice to see she gets her name from you :) Congrats to her. Please have her comment on this post. Without a reference on this post, I cannot keep the list updated.

And thanks for the cheer!

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

RooMum 25 23 18 12 1167

Hi there jitengore. I'd be delighted to be added to the soon-to-be's and thanks for keeping the list. It's a real incentive and I feel honoured to be part of it. :)

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

gerfboy 20 12 11 9 8 8 5 4 2 2 1292

Hi there! I'd love to be added to this list! I love this site!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Trisha1961 25 25 25 25 21 15 14 12 9 7 4 3 3 1266

Just want to thank Jitengore once again for all your hard work maintaining this part of the site. It's no easy task, yet provides us with so much enjoyment and motivation. Thanks so much.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

wj677 25 18 5 1118

Hi, been looking forward to this day. Can you add me to the "Soon to be's" please.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1257

Count me in. Thanks =)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

sernstberger 25 7 1311

Checking in -- 500 days today!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Objectivist 16 14 13 12 11 1235

With the list becoming as long as it has, wouldn't it be easier to just update it once every two weeks?

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

I had delayed the complete automation for updating this list so far. It seems that now I need to take on that project :)

Surprisingly, a few check-ins have got down voted from 6 to 5, from 5 to 4. I fail to understand the motivation of the down-voters, but this changes the sort order and until I improve upon the level of automation, things get tricky. This is part of the reason for the current delay :(

4Give Lingot3•2 years ago

Objectivist 16 14 13 12 11 1235

A gift horse and all...

You don't need to explain yourself, the rest of us appreciate the effort you put into it.

3Give Lingot3•2 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 8

Anyway, Jitengore, thanks for this list! Can you please wait two weeks then add me to the silver class? :) Happy New Year!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

bf2010 25 25 25 15 12 10 8 3 972

Count me in; and I agree with johnarnold to show the streams in different languages. By the way, what happens to people who interrupt their streak for a couple of days, do they get kicked out of the hall of fame ? ;)

3Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Carolind 14 11 11 10 10 5

I'd like to suggest you include Davu: <https://www.duolingo.com/Davu>. He has a 306 streak today (May 20, 2014). Does he have to confirm this? Let me know and I'll tell him to stop by.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Yes, please ask him to check-in and I will add him.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Davu 25 25

Just to confirm that Carolind did ask me before she suggested my name. My level in English (from Portuguese) can be checked via one of comments here: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1201522>. Thanks both.

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

FKrasniqi 21 8 5 2

Wow! Well done to everyone who's been able to keep their streaks up for so long!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Equilibrio99 25 11 8 2 6

Just hit 300! Woot-hoo! Thanks DuoLingo and Jitengore :-)

3Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588

Congrats! Have a lingot! Happy learning! - Spaceowl42

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Equilibrio99 25 11 8 2 6

Thanks!

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588

Woohoo! 230 day streak! 70 more days! :-D Happy learning! -Spaceowl42

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Congrats to 301 days today =)

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588

Thanks! :-D Happy learning! -Spaceowl42

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Theognome 14 11 105

I just passed the one year mark. At least one lesson is now just part of my daily routine.

Theognome

3Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Congratulations! I will include your entry when I do a minor (partial) update later today. (Shoutout to kplife too)!

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

ReidHT 25 15 8 7 6 5 2

Only 361 days left! HERE I COME!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

ruinchristmas 23 19 6 4 160
That never gets old.

16Give Lingot3•2 years ago

AlbertJMR 22 11 10 4
Oh God! I thought I was "undefeatable" and... I've found this list! hahaha... Now I do have a reason to work even harder! ;)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

niceliz 25 6 3 2 2
This is such a cool idea! I just reached 365 days today! :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Athletesrun 18 5
My new goal is to make it onto this list... only 220 more days to go!

3Give Lingot2•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
See you in 220 days! :D

5Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Athletesrun 18 5
Thanks see you then! :)

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

kmandrew 21
Hola!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

titeuf1 25 2 148
Thanks for putting the list together. Please count me in.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

smearredink 25 8 5 1430
My streak vanished for no reason :(

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196
Enjoy the restoration of your gold level. Please consider getting a streak freeze for future. :)

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

smearedink 25 8 5 1430

What the? Yes it would seem my streak has been mostly returned by the powers that be. I think 500 instead of 529 was added to my current small streak but I won't complain. ;) Thanks, powers that be.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

As promised I tried to help from my side. Consider this as a perk for being a part of this hall of fame :)

But I think I might have run out of 'goodwill' hearts from the "powers that be". :) I may not be able to help anyone else in the future. So everyone, please get your streak freezes and replenish them if & when you use one!

Also keep the broader perspective in mind - we are primarily here to learn new languages! And the learning continues, with or without a streak.

8Give Lingot3•2 years ago

paulsagra 25 6 5 3 2 2

Just in case it helps, it happened to me because I inadvertently changed by base language. Restored ok when I figured out what had happened.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

smearedink 25 8 5 1430

No, wasn't that. There was some issue for the past few months where my streak seemed to roll over at a different time than my daily points, so maybe it was related to that. Anyway, my daily points still say I've got points every day, but my streak got set to zero.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

Sorry to hear that! Please email support with the chart showing daily points to see what they can do to help.

Let me see what I can do from my side.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

The Duolingo staff knows each and every time you earn points. Just emailing them would be fine. The problem with the chart is that it syncs with your local computer's time. This means if you finish a skill at 1205, and then set your clock back 10 minutes, the point graph will look like you studied every day, but you will lose your streak.

I'm not saying this is what happens with smearedink. To me it sounds like their timezone isn't set to their current time zone. I'm just saying that the points graph doesn't prove anything, and wouldn't be good evidence (especially since DL seems to reliably track the info anyway).

4Give Lingot2•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1196

You make a good point.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

ThankWee 22 20 20 16 9 1

Same thing happened to me. But I have been so busy, that I thought that maybe I just lost track of time.

2Give Lingot2•2 years ago

WeiDeTaiwan 20 14 12

oh! Now we are in the same situation! but I think you are strong enough to overcome this, my dear friend!

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

ThankWee 22 20 20 16 9 1

Ah, thanks Wei. It's okay. Having a streak doesn't really mean much anyway except for earning extra lingots and I have 879 lingots that I'll never use anyway.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rolosrevenge 25 24 14 1326

The easiest way to solve something like that is to have the streak freeze.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

smearedink 25 8 5 1430

I refused to get streak freeze because I didn't want a streak that wasn't real. But if I'd thought there was a chance of a computer error ending my streak, I may have reconsidered. Ah well, life goes on.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rolosrevenge 25 24 14 1326

Yeah, I've traveled a lot (to Europe and Saudi Arabia) and the Streak Freeze has been good insurance for the time zone changes. I've noticed that the App won't always be synced with my computer clock and start a new day several hours earlier than my actual time zone. I've never actually missed a day but on a few long haul flight days it thought I had but the streak freeze saved me.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

paulsagra 25 6 5 3 2 2

I learnt my lesson at 38 day streak -I lost wifi for an hr at 11:30 pm whilst on holiday so lost the streak. Bought the freeze as insurance but have never used it (so far) and hope to be 365 in 20 days - whoop!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

smearedink 25 8 5 1430

I would have been more accepting of that, though. At least you know you went past midnight, even if the situation got out of your control. (In other words, at least yours makes sense!)

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

ThankWee 22 20 20 16 9 1

I had purchased the streak freeze and it still didn't matter. I'm sure I didn't go two days without working on a skill. But like I said, I was very busy, so I'm not certain.

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588

I have used the streak freeze a couple of times but I have found that if I get it... I need it and I forget to practice Spanish, but if I don't get it... I don't need it. So ever sense the last time I bought a streak freeze I have never forgotten to practice Spanish or nothing has happened that I had to lose my streak! So I have thought about it sometimes because I have so many lingots that maybe it's a good idea to get a streak freezer just in case, but if I get it... I need it! So I only get streak freezers if I really really need it. :-D

Happy learning! -Spaceowl42

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rolosrevenge 25 24 14 1326

Wait, you have to buy a new streak freeze every time you use it? Maybe I've never used it then.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588

@rolosrevenge (ran out of reply buttons)

Yes... Once you buy it you have it until you skip one day after one day you have to buy another one... If you buy it but don't skip a day then you can save it for later. But it is only good for one day.

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

zengator 25 51

Ping.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Candace0 17 14

I just made 300! Thanks.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

knittinggirl 25 25 21 19 14 12 11 10 7 6 4 2 1232

Put me on the soon to be list please!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

moodswinger 23 16 13 66
I can finally be added! :D

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Isrianth 25 25 23 21 16 4 1297
I'd like to be on the list. :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

joelphillips 22 16 13 10 1254
Hopefully I'll still be here at the next update, so please add me to the list.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jqstringfield 24 6 289
Great work putting this together! It's nice to know I'm not alone in my craziness.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Arthurva 25 23 13 12 11 8 7 6 4 105
This is a great list! I am amazed how many there are that are way ahead of me. Congrats to all those who have done such consistent work! John Arnold - you are a star!

I would love to enrol in this Hall of Fame!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

afdhein 24
I lost my 400 day streak a couple weeks ago, but I'm back now, and still learning German! I never realized there were so many with such long streaks! Thanks for all your information - it's fascinating!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 8
Did you lose it just when they switched over to the coach? Well, I think that was more than a couple of weeks ago, so probably not.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

afdhein 24
I lost my streak several months ago, and have not been very regular since. But I love learning languages and I have learned a lot of German on Duolingo. If I ever get through German I would like to learn Spanish. I have been a member of Duolingo since January, 2013. Congratulations on your long streak. You are an inspiration! Maybe I can do it again.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 8

Anne, there was a glitch when they implemented the coach. If you were regularly practicing (even just a few points a day) and you lost your streak at that time, they can restore it. Well, I guess it's late now anyway, if you've been on and off since then. It's kind of sad though. :(But you're right -- you can do it again. Make it a habit. And btw (by the way) you're an inspiration too! I read your profile page and I'm impressed. :)

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Foudeb 25 25 25 24 18 15 14 8 1300
Please add me to the list :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Thidrekr 25 19 18 18 18 16 15 15 11 1227
Count me in for the "soon to be" list. ;)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1262
Greetings, my people :)

Mind adding me to the club, jitengore?

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

arekolek 23 22 14 10
Sign me up please!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

pooley_ 25 10 5 2
Can I be added please?

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

pooley_ 25 10 5 2
Thanks for adding me

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

queendeeny 25 8 6 6
Please add me to the list for 370 days and 1 level 25.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

pdquinn1 25 4 173
Thanks!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

BobbieL 24 8 2

It's funny that 374 days later I would only qualify for bronze. It's amazing how long we've all been faithfully plugging away and learning :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

territrades 23 19 17 14 12 8 8 7 4 1230

Noch in diesem Monat werde ich es würdig sein, in diese Liste aufgenommen zu werden !

In this month still I am going to worthy to be placed in this list !

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rambo.e 25 25 17 17 16 9 8 7 5 5 4 4 3 2 364

This is great, but I'm not included in this extensive list...great job everyone with the streaks!!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Dan_gloriosul 10 9 7

Hi, I just passed the 500 mark. Could you please insert me in the "Hall of Owl Fame"?

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MarcosFodrini 25 14 13 12 8 6 3 1291

Great idea, count me in also please. Greetings

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

DimaButerin 21 18 17 11 9 5 1338

Hi everyone-from Toronto!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

annecooling 25 20 12 1395

If your list has not become unsustainably long I would love to join. Funny that something as private as quietly learning a language can also be something so public!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

vvkrastev 25 25 25 25 24 16 15 15 15 12 9 8 8 8 8 8 6 6 5 4 4 3 3 2 1182

Hi - just hit 300 today. Can you throw me on there?

Thanks!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Hypnotoad1 24 4 3 1351

639 days in an amazing effort of doing anything let alone learning something useful. Amazing dedication and well done to all on this list.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

BarbaraMorris 25 25 25

365 here. Cool to see how many people have long streaks.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

OrhunNihat 22 15

Hi. Could you add me to soon-to-be list and thanks for your effort.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

GeniusJack 25 25 20 16 14 14 13 13 11 10 9 9 8 6 2

Hi Jiten, can you add me? Thanks! :D

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

LeoGrignafini 25 25 25 15 4 3 1222

Hi jitengore, can you add me to the list next time you update the post? Thanks!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

NickFlynn 20 19 11 7 7 6 6 2

Ciao! I'm almost there!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

idk101 25 19 15 14 13 6 2 1165

I have just made it to my 300 day streak so can you add me to the waiting list please?

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Knoxienne 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 23 19 18 17 16 16 16 15 15 13 12 10 1273

Hi there! Please add me - my streak is 412. Thank you! :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

alan_moreno 25 8 8 7 3 1233

Wow, that's great! Can you add me also? =D

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Trisha1961 25 25 25 25 21 15 14 12 9 7 4 3 3 1266

Thanks for the comments, which are really helpful. Yes, once I realised by turning on the coach in 5 languages I was losing my streak, I kept it on for the other three (I know, it really shouldn't have taken me 5 times to realise that!). So that is how I have kept my 407 day streak! It's a shame to lose the progress bar as well, as just knowing you were short of a going up a level, certainly kept up the motivation. It would be a shame to see this 'streak' thread disappear because of the new coach, as it's really good to see how many people enjoy getting up the streak ladder! Once again Jitengore, thanks for your dedication in maintaining this - it's such hard work, but well worth it.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Ariaflame 25 25 14 1346

The coach on the app is not the same thing as the coach on the website. I have the coach on the app having me do 30 xp per day for two languages, but the website coach (which is my overall streak) only at 30 total.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

mingthemad 24 21 7 7 6 6 2

Hello from Australia! I'll have one year in a week or so. Please add me :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

territrades 23 19 17 14 12 8 8 7 4 1230

Finally I can be added :D

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

ajcee7 25 25 25 24 21 21 18 16 15 15 14 12 1173

Hi Jiten, could I be enrolled in 'soon to be'?

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

quis_lib_duo 25 25 25 25 14 9 6 6 3 2 1219

Today is day 366 for me. Aiming for the 400 now. :-)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

bowsy51 24 9 4 1120

Soon to be: achieved!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Quasinabo 25 23 19 6 5 5 59

I only recently learned about this list, but it would be nice if i could be added to it :-)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MeredithNa 23 12 11 11 1236

Can you please add me? Thanks... that platinum looks mighty tantalising!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

pmbrowner 25 1145

Please add me to the soon to be's. Working on 365...

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

And now you did it. Congrats =)

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

pmbrowner 25 1145

Thank you for noticing & commenting. Learning Italian is simply just great!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Ariaflame 25 25 14 1346

Woohoo, gold today!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

pianochem 25 16 16 15 12 9 7 6 4 79

I'm almost there!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

pobrecito13 17 11 9 8 7

You can put me down for a "soon to be".

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

sikoritta 21 16

Me too!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Luyematsu 25 23 9 1

Finally! 365!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

GregHullender 25 25 22 13 10

Congratulations!

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Luyematsu 25 23 9 1

Thanks! I only used streak freeze two or three (or so...) times. :)

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

pilgrim2k 25 1220

Have completed my 375 day Streak and loving every day. My Goal is Platinum and being Spanish fluent. Thank you Duo lingo.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

raans 25 20 19 16 14 13 12 8 1246

Could you add me, please? Thanks!

UID: ed6c25eb54a92669d3c02b4eee5d6086

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

nashrambler 25 23 2 2 1227
I am at 387 today.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

bowsy51 24 9 4 1120
At 311 days, now a soon to be.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

jddar 25
Wow! I did it!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MABBY 25 22 1434
What do I need to do to be on the list?

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rolosrevenge 25 24 14 1326
I think you've just done all you needed to do.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

helenmk 25 4 495
Please add me to the list. 400 days today! Thank you DuoLingo

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

LeMaitre 21 15 13 12 11 9 8 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 4 3 2 2 7
Hi Jiten! I guess I'm finally eligible to enter into the 'Soon-to-be's! :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

johnkpaul 20 19 15 2 2 1151
I'm at a 318 day streak and I'm definitely making it to 365! :-)

Thank you for putting this together jitengore.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

SamuBG13 21 12 11 3 3 2
Hi! I'm happy I finally made it to the soon-to-be's! Could you please add me? :-)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

coldasice26 22 20 10 10 7 1116

Can I join the soon to be list? That would be awesome! :D

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

rosebud131 25 25 25 25 25 25 15 14 14 13 13 12 11 1321

I'd love to be added! Thanks

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Salas85 25 9

Today one year! Could you please add me to your list? :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MichaelRed8 24 12

please add me, I am at 313 and will get to 700 without any problems because I love duolingo!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

MichaelRed8 24 12

please add me, I am at 313 and will get to 700 without any problems because I love duolingo!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

philip322 21 1240

Please add me philip322 419

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

georgeoftruth 25 25 25 24 15 1184

Checking in on day 365. Merci, Jiten.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Pastafarianist 19 14 10 4

Count me in!

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

dewluca 25 7 271

As of December 20, 2014, I have a 339 day streak with 479 lingots . . . 6340 points and 1095 words. I started Duolingo Italian on January 1, 2014 . . . but was able to skip a few days using lingots. About a month ago I decided to stop doing new lessons until I could make it through the older lessons in Timed Practice, so pretty much started over, but it's been worth it. I wish I felt more confident and able to actually speak/think in Italian; I'm definitely not close to that. Still seems worth doing regular practice even if it is only for a brief time every day.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

alukasiak 23 19 16 15 13 13 12 11 1272

Well done guys! Please add me.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

segesdi 25 25

hello guys, I hope I can join the club :) Merry Christmas to everyone!

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

tihomir2 25 25 17 3 1185

I am at 372 now. Please add me !

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

magda222 25 24 1225

I am ready to be added to the list.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

suesieb 23 19 14 13 10 3 2 2 3

Soon-to-be with 307 and counting.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

TinyKitties 25 20 3 1184

I would like to be added to the list, 379 days so far.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

slogger 25 23 22 20 14 1175

Hi, My streak will be at 369 today. I'd love to be listed under bronze. . . . and eventually beyond!

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

xyphax 24 21 4

I'm in! Whoo-oo! Thanks to duo for keeping the site running smoothly enough for me to practice every day!

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

laneuffer 25 23 22 19 18 14 13 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 8 8 8 6 6 6 6 5 2 1352

I am surprised to see that I am not on this list, but I am on day 553 in a row.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

ricolino20 21 13 13 10 8 3 2

The list isn't exhaustive. But you really deserve to be on the golden one. I know that you work a lot everyday. I support you because you are a great example. ;-) Congratulation !

1Give Lingot1•2 years ago

laneuffer 25 23 22 19 18 14 13 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 8 8 8 6 6 6 6 5 2 1352

Thanks so much for your kind words and for supporting me! Have a lingot on me. It's the least I can do.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

ceae 25 25 23 16 927

The list isn't automatically generated - jitengore curates and maintains it and only adds people who check in or ask to be included. You should be added in the next update now that you've posted here.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

laneuffer 25 23 22 19 18 14 13 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 8 8 8 6 6 6 5 2 1352

Thank you! I did not know this until looking at it more extensively. I thought it may be generated at first because I did not know if jitengore would go through all the work of updating it, but it seems that they do. That alone is very impressive.

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

tariqnisarahmed 19 11 8 7 5

It's official: my first 365 day streak. 12/29/2014 NYC time. (NYC is where I registered, so DL clocks me in there, no matter which time zone I'm in. Which is no big deal as long as you know the difference.)

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

xyphax 24 21 4

Hi. Please add me to the list. Thank you.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

R_Wlsn_1969 25 1164

Have just managed to get a 365 day streak. Could you please add me?

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

celticranger 25 25 21 7 1177

What a list! And I thought 365 days was a long streak...

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 8

Once I lost my streak due to travel... I had even paid Sykpe money so that I could work during a stopover in the Amsterdam airport, but it didn't work and I lost my streak. I reported it as a problem and asked them to restore it, but they never answered (now I know the "report a problem" tab has some automated filters). I was so upset I quit DL! If it weren't for that boycott I'd be in the high 500s, I think... joined in May 2012.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Sorry to hear that, that must've been pretty disturbing. If such a thing is about to happen again, you can ask bchan whether she will be able to restore your streak (in fact, she did that with numerous users against lingots).

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 8

Yeah, now I know whom to bug! I had only been on DL a couple of months when that happened though. It's just funny how much something unimportant (fairness in the gaming aspect of DL) can acquire importance. Our real goal here is learning languages, not showing off our seniority. :)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

kplife 22 22 14 10 9 9 8 8 7 7 5 3 2

I made it over 500 days!! Woot!

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

What a great accomplishment =)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

kplife 22 22 14 10 9 9 8 8 7 7 5 3 2

Thank you! :-)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

paulsagra 25 6 5 3 2 2

Thanks again for the work jitengore , happy new year!

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

zim_ek 21 13 11 11 8 5 5 1217

Nice! Can you add me as well?

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

CatherinGregory 25 17 16 6 4 1151

Tomorrow, Sunday, January 12, 2015, is my big day for 365! Thanks Duolingo, you all rock. Ciao, Ciao.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

raydancer 24 14 11 3 2 2 2 386

Nice to know there are so many other dedicated Duolinguists! I've been trying hard to keep my streak going. It'd be even longer had the streak freeze been around when my current streak started (I'm pretty sure I had well over a hundred day streak going before this one). Still, I'm here to learn, not to watch a number go up (though it's a nice bit of additional motivation on my lazier days).

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

JSong1085 21 17 14 10 632

Humbly requesting addition to the list, if I may. Figured it might help with the motivation henceforth. Many thanks!

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

reyzvolution 9 2

Awsome, Jitengore! See you in the club next year! :D

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Derailleur 12 8 6 25

Two weeks to go! I'm away for a week in the middle of that so hopefully I don't let it slip.

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Paiting 17 6 3 3

324, checking in! <https://www.duolingo.com/Paiting>

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

JackedTortoise 23 9 3 2

I love highscore lists...

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

WeiDeTaiwan 20 14 12

Count me in ;)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

What happened to your streak? =(

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

WeiDeTaiwan 20 14 12

Had to work in a different place and I forgot to maintain it. But it's ok :) thank you!

3Give Lingot6•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

I agree with Usagi. Two more lingots for being so cool about it and reminding that streak is merely a secondary gamification feature to the profound learning experience.

Having said that, we would like to see you back soon :)

5Give Lingot•2 years ago

WeiDeTaiwan 20 14 12

The important thing is that we learn things ;), wish you all the luck with your streak!

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

T-T im so sad on your behalf, but so inspired by your poise :D three cheers for Wilvandal! (And three lingots)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

WeiDeTaiwan 20 14 12

thanks usagi, but i am not sad at all, my goal was to maintain my streak for a year, and i've achieved it! so this is just another start of a trip.

3Give Lingot4•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588

Congrats on achieving a year long streak! have three lingots for your achievement! :-D

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

ALoUSyUseRnaME 25 25 16 9 5 5 4

I'm joining the "Soon to be's" :)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

tonywangtj 25 23 23 15 13 12 12 11 8 6 2 2 2 1312

Congrats! ;)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588

Woo hoo! 240! Only 60 left! :-D Happy learning! -Spaceowl42

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

SzeAndr 22 15 10

Awesome;)I would like to join to the SilverClub and to the Golden ones in the future;) Thank you for creating this list:P

2Give Lingot1•2 years ago

-Lauren- 19 7 7 4

Congrats everyone!!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Adrien_Be 12 8 5

Some of these guys can't be humans!!! ^^

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

johnarnold 25 25 25 25 25 14 8 1525
DL for alien languages; beam me up Scotty.

5Give Lingot•2 years ago

jaime.flores 19 11 11
2 days more for the 300 club :)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 588
This owl is ready for the Soon to be's!!!!!! :-D HOO HOO!!!! ; -D Thanks for making the list! ; -D

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

qaa2 17 13 10 4
Hi!! I am not quite at a year but I see that there is a category for 'Soon to be'. Could you add me to that list please? Thanks!! This is a great incentive - and it all helps to keep one on track.

Astounding the streak that some people have ... what staying power!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Objectivist 16 14 13 12 11 1235
Not long now...

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Trisha1961 25 25 25 25 21 15 14 12 9 7 4 3 3 1266
Hello, I am just a little confused with the 'Coach' now. Does that mean the normal streak will disappear? I stupidly turned it on for a couple of the languages I am learning, and now it just says my streak is two days (rather than 407) and I can't turn the coach back off. I did not continue to activate it for the other languages once I found that out....do you know therefore whether the long streaks people have will now disappear?

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Arthurva 25 23 13 12 11 8 7 6 4 105
From this view it looks like you have a streak of 407. Maybe it has been restored. The coach is not per language ... if you set it to 50 in any language you need to get at least 50 XP every day from the sum of XP on all languages else you lose your streak. eg 30 XP for French + 20 XP for Spanish will give you 50 XP, and you will make your streak for that day.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

AbraxunsIllusion 25 6 5 5 5 4
Care to list me as a noobie? :)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Just reached 300 days. Please add me to the soon to be list. Thanks!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

nomadff7 25 8 6 6 5 129

I'm on day 418 and I just finished my French tree!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Chi82 25 11 7 3 1164

I just found this, could I get added? Thanks!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

MarieValarao 25 25 25 25 25

Under "marie.valarao" I have 388 streaks for the Bronze and the Alumni levels. Under "proftherese" I have 306 streaks qualifying for the Soon-to-Be. Thanks, jitengore!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

pada.online 23 20 10 9 4 2 1242

Please count me in :)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

pilgrim2k 25 1220

Just hit my 400th day steak, I guess I get to move up to Silver. Gold here I come. Spanish is getting better everyday and I'm loving it more and more. Thank you Duolingo you're the Best!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Paulo.Guedes 20 20 1244

Please count me in! currently in a 436 streak. I hope I can maintain it for another year or so:)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

EricGjovaag 23 23 22 16 7 1186

I just hit my one year streak yesterday. I would be honored to be added to the roll here, if I may so humbly make that request.

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Justin-B 25 25 1176

Finalmente, 365!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

s-g-miller 25 25 14 14 13

I would like to be added, please! :D

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

s-g-miller 25 25 14 14 13
I would like to be added, please! :D

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Rompip 25 25 10 1198
When you update the list could you please add me? (I'm currently on a 402 day streak). Thank you and thank you for the work you put into maintaining this list.

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Ynhockey 23 14 10 9 5 1167
Just saw this, kinda cool, sign me up :)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

pablitoneal 25 17 15 13 11 10 7 2 2 2 1154
Can I be on the list too???

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

paanmokhtar 24 17 17 13 13 12 10 8 7 5 3 2 2 1033
Hey, can I join the list? Thanks :)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

MandyDieKatze 25 18 16 12 10 6 4 4
Hi, can I be added to the 'Soon to Be' list? Thanks :D

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

godlessprimate 22 9 8 283
Sign me up!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

EllaPolmear 25 25 17 15 8 7 3 3 1065
Hi, i cant believe I've actually made it past 300 days - can I be added to this list? Thanks

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Gomez.Mark 20 20 15 15
I'd be jazzed if you could place me on the "Soon to be's" List! (300-364). As of February 1, 2014, I've been on Duolingo for 291 days! I will have surpassed the 300-day mark by the first week of March when you update the list. Thank you so much for all the Platinum, Gold, Silver and Bronze title holders who inspire me to keep learning more foreign languages! Well done!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Carl_os 25 6 4 1383

Hi jitengore! I ask you to add me to your list, please. Today I got 632 days! Thanks.

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Sheplilingual 11

I'm working at it! 354 days to go!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Beast_Legend 11 8 8 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 4 2

Good luck. lol

4Give Lingot•2 years ago

jqstringfield 24 6 289

If I had aimed for a year from the beginning, I would never have made it this far. at first it was a week, then two, then a month, then 6. Each time I was amazed I made it that far.

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Parabéns para todos!!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

I think you forgot this lady: <https://www.duolingo.com/scottann>

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

endios 21 15 14 6

Count me in :)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

High five endios!! ^_^

4Give Lingot•2 years ago

endios 21 15 14 6

So I lost my over 300 days streak. My vacations were really intense and one day I was just so tired I forgot to Duolingo (streak freeze was already used). Tough luck. Hope to be there next year :)

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

lindaljc 25 13 4 49

That's sad; I still think it would be great if your personal highest streak showed somewhere in your profile, just to prove you'd been there! Good luck with your next streak!

6Give Lingot1•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

We'll be here to welcome you back next year! :)

4Give Lingot•2 years ago

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 11

I guess I qualify for the soon-to-be's now.

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

dojodo 23 12 11 249

Hooray, and thanks duolingo!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

maria_ferro 24

Olá! I'd like to be added to the list of those soon to be. Obrigada!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

FlyingDoughnut 7 5

i'm reserving my place 147 days early!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

fer84 22 12 8 6 2

Great idea! Reserve me a place!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

makemusic 24 13 9 8 5 2

If it doesn't inconvenience you, I would love to be added to the year+ hall of fame. :)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 1196

You might have completed an year on Duolingo but on this hall of fame we use the streak to measure the length of continuous learning. So perhaps next year, you can make it!

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

makemusic 24 13 9 8 5 2

Ohhhhh. Rats I may never make it then! I'm so terrible at keeping streaks but I'll try my absolute best. :)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

jairapetyan 25 25 25 25 25 22 15 10 10 9 5 4 2 8

It's so easy once you make a habit of it; do it first thing when you wake up. I have a student who does it on her phone (which also serves as her alarm) before she even gets out of bed.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

MaxBuddy 12 1

Hope you can . I never could. and now I'm at a 23 day streak

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

vmonteiro4 22 13 10 9 2 2

how does this thing get updated ?

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

jutengore updates it once a week "by hand". They check everyone's statuses, and updates the number. I have no idea how they are able to keep up with it so well.

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

shanezie 20 7 5 2

Hope to see my name there soon! Wow... some approaching 2 uninterrupted years. Great job everyone!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

MaxBuddy 12 1

dude has anyone had a 750+ day streak?

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Not that we are aware of. The first one will probably be johnarnold.

Edit: John Arnold is indeed the first one. (January 28, 2015)

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

ernestd 15 6

user @mariadolors just reached 365 today! congrats!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

lenvm 25 16 16 6 4 2 2

I'm at 414 now. Please add me!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Balaur 25 22 17 17 14 12 12 10 8 8 7 6

Please add me to this list. Thank you!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Balaur 25 22 17 17 14 12 12 10 8 8 7 6

I noticed I'm not in the alumni section. I actually lost my streak right after reaching 365 days (on December 30 or 31, if I remember correctly), though I guess it must have happened between updates, so it went unnoticed.

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

...but as you can see, you are added as an alumni as of today (January 7, 2015). =)

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

raydancer 24 14 11 3 2 2 2 386

Nice to know there are so many other dedicated Duolinguists! I've been trying hard to keep my streak going. It'd be even longer had the streak freeze been around when my current streak started (I'm pretty sure I had well over a hundred day streak going before this one). Still, I'm here to learn, not to watch a number go up (though it's a nice bit of additional motivation on my lazier days).

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

MandyDieKatze 25 18 16 12 10 6 4 4

Hi, can I be added to the 'Soon to Be' list? Thanks :D

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

EllaPolmear 25 25 17 15 8 7 3 3 1065

Hi, i cant believe I've actually made it past 300 days - can I be added to this list? Thanks

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

carpelanam 22 21 18 17 16 13 13 7 5 1173

I would love to be added the next time this list is updated... I recently passed the 400 day mark. Thanks, Jitengore, for all the work maintaining the list!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

d.batta 23 15 14 11 11 8 5 2 43

Just accomplished a 400-day streak :) Thanks for your work!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

nekonekokoneko 25 25 25 25 25 25 11 10 6 5 5 4 4 3 1136

Hi guys, I am ecstatic to reach the one year streak milestone as the first attempt failed when I was travelling in an area that I could not get the Internet connection. Please add me to the list!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 5

add me :D

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

wj677 25 18 5 1118

Hi, Greetings from sunny Australia. Today marks my 365 day streak which means I have now been learning french for 366 days. Amazed and somewhat daunted by how far I still have to go.

Thanks for maintaining this list. The motivation it provides is quite surprising and makes me laugh at some of the rescheduling I do to make sure I get in my DL for the day.

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

DrWho100 25 25 1202

Thanks for maintaining the list. I just completed 440 days today

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Arek1 25 14 1094

Finally got to one year, I remember seeing that post 9 months ago and hoping that maybe one day I'll be here :) Can I be added to the list, please? Thanks in advance :)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Alexandra Z 18 18

Hello! I've been following this discussion for a long time; now you can add me. 370 days so far :)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

egotrip25 23 18 8 1114

Hi, can you add me to the 365 days category? Thanks!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

LitigiousOx 25 25 24 22 13 13 9 8 7 7 6 6 3 2

So how does one get into the list? :) English is for Romanian>English.

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

Doing what you just did (posting here). It looks like the next update update will happen the first week of March, and you should be added then!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

LitigiousOx 25 25 24 22 13 13 9 8 7 7 6 6 3 2

Cool! Thanks

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

DavidDuolinguier 21 15 14 12

Davidbohart is the more streaker un Duolingo

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Teddybear71 25 15 15 11 11 1098

I am now only 15 days away, and hopefully I will be turning the year-mark around the 8th of March this year! Thanks, Duolingo, for making it so easy and fun to do something every single day for a whole year!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

adamblondin 24 1110

May I please be added :)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

adamblondin 24 1110

May I please be added :)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Seannibal 21 20 13 11 10 6

Well, today I reached the 365-day mark, and I couldn't be happier. Seeing that number next to the little flame go up every day is all the motivation I need!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Ariaflame 25 25 14 1346

You only needed to say this once.

-1Give Lingot•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

It's probably a glitch with all the stuff going on on this page. I see it almost every time someone post a new comment.

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

BarbaraMorris 25 25 25

It also happens with other pages that have a zillion comments.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

daninell 25 11 1067

Yay! One year! Will you add me please? Thanks!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Fuzzy_Eva 10

All these people with hundreds of days and I'm sitting here with 50. :-(
Never lost my streak though.

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

niskigwun 14 14 12 11 11 10 8 8 8 7 7 7 7 6 6 6 6 6 4 4 4 4 2 1062
I've made it! 365 days and counting

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Orsowski 20 14

I'm approaching to the 365 days mark, I should enter in the list soon:) You did a very good work with this Hall of Fame!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

BrandonCrowther 24 20 10 10 9 5 4 999

Checking in (finally). 1 year today! Here's to the next one!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

mukashu 25 7 1240

Could you add me to the list?

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

claireyclaire 25 1069

Hi there, I just completed my one-year streak! I would love to be added to the list. Thank you!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Deinanthe 25 17 15 11 9 7 5 3 2 2

What a cool idea! Put me on the list please! :)

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

wyeager84 20 10 2 1138

Please count me in. I have a long trip later this month and a bit nervous I'll lose the streak.... wish me luck. Thanks!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

anthgrl 25 15

Could I be added to the "Soon to be's," please? :-D

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

KTkee-EnglishEng 25 11 6 6 6

I've now completed 365 days. If only there was some way of marking this achievement.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

ms.mm 25 14 3 2 2

count me in too please!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

ms.mm 25 14 3 2 2

count me in too please!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

ms.mm 25 14 3 2 2

count me in too please!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Arnauti 25 25 25 21 20 18 16 12 11 11 11 9 9 4 2 2 102

Hi Jiten! It's my Duoversary – please add me to your illustrious list! Thanks in advance. PS as for levels, my English level varies back and forth between 13 and 19 :D

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

pastorsteve99 25 107

559 days of fun and still going!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Szab 25 22 21 9 8 3 2 1195

I am not on the list.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

slpengy2 19 19 696

Hello!! Please add me! I can't wait to hit 365 - so close!!!

-1Give Lingot•2 years ago

slpengy2 19 19 696

Hello!! Please add me! I can't wait to hit 365 - so close!!!

-1Give Lingot•2 years ago

mrs wag_22 21 16 5 4 2

is this updating

-5Give Lingot•2 years ago

paulsagra 25 6 5 3 2 2

next update is on or after 20th - see above :-)

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

dewluca 25 7 271

Is the update automatic? If so, I should have been in the 300+ group on December 6th. (Which is why I just posted all my info.) The main post could be more clear about whether we need to request to be included or if the lists are automatically generated. Thanks to jitengore for doing this!

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

paulsagra 25 6 5 3 2 2
nope, jitengore is a star maintaining the list .

7Give Lingot•2 years ago

281 Conlanging: The Art of Crafting Tongues
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/16640680>

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2

The crowdfunding campaign for the documentary Conlanging: The Art of Crafting Languages just started. See Evildea's interview with the director!

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nyv4iWcH9ps>

Give Lingot4
218 months ago

Leave a new comment
2 Comments

JunaUrsoTropika 12 9 9 6 4 3 2 2 290

I like conlanging and I think that it is something to be encouraged. Since it's on the same topic, here is a link to a documentary about conlangs made by Ben Wood, the creator of Angos:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YVs5--zgANElst=LL-11xnQmN4-6TOLs5oC61QQindex=5>

The conlang that I am currently developing is basically an Esperantido whose primary aim to be less Eurocentric while simultaneously remaining easy to learn for Indo-European speakers. I call it "Newespero" (meaning "A New Hope"), hence Esperanto means "One who Hopes." I have been constructing it for four and a half months.

6ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

v.ivanov 11 10 9 8 8 5 5 3

Mi foje partoprenis en filmado de filmeto pri artefaritaj lingvoj en la rusa:

https://vk.com/video72595_176673 Ĝi estas en la rusa kaj montras kvenjan, Esperanton kaj tokiponon kiel ekzemplojn, rakontante ke ekzistas pluraj aliaj.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

282 – 301 of 912

[accessed March 13, 2017]

282 How long did it take for you to complete the tree and what level were you?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1347940>

856pm 13 3

This is a question for those who've completed the tree in any language: How long did it take for you to complete and what level were you?

Give Lingot

43 years ago

Leave a new comment

72 Comments

Lahure 25 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 8 1091

Three months and one week to complete the Portuguese tree at level 12. But I studied for around five hours every day. The method I adopted was to begin each exercise with a clean A4 sheet of paper next to my computer and head it with the name of the lesson (Prepositions 1 for example). After each of the twenty questions I would write down the Duo question and my response. In those cases where I was incorrect I would highlight the question with a marker pen and show the correct Duo answer below my wrong one. The physical act of writing each word repetitively helped imprint them into memory and the highlighted errors were reviewed on a random basis to hopefully prevent a recurrence thereof. Much credit must go to a really special guy by the name of Paulenrique who is one of the experts on the Duo team.

67ReplyGive Lingot36•3 years ago

856pm 13 3

Now that's dedicated. I just do a few hours of practice per day, and I'm at lv11 French (started in October) and lv6 Italian (started last Sunday).

11ReplyGive Lingot6•3 years ago

Lahure 25 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 8 1091

Well done! You deserve a token of admiration 856pm. Herewith a Lingot for your dedication and achievements. Merry Christmas.

5ReplyGive Lingot7•3 years ago

856pm 13 3

All right! Thanks! Take 2 lingots, Merry Christmas!

3ReplyGive Lingot25•3 years ago

fergusfettes 14

Haha, I love that you gave him his Lingot back with interest! Here, have three for your confusing generosity (and don't give me any back!)

Came here because I just finished German in 23 days. That's why I'm throwing Lingots around like it ain't no thing ;)

29ReplyGive Lingot7•3 years ago

AdrianJosh 19 19 10 6 5

i had 29 days and how can you do that in 23 days? i spend an hour to 4hrs everyday... well in studying french too. but that's reakky fast

6Give Lingot•2 years ago

CseeC 10 5 4

HOW?

4Give Lingot•2 years ago

TheRealDaveRuby 21 19 16 10 10 9 8 3

He probably skipped some lessons. My mom wanted to test how fluent she was in English from spanish and she was able to finish the tree in two weeks. She just skipped ahead and tested out of every skill.

1Give Lingot1•1 year ago

Llama_Spanish 10 4

You finished german that quickly? Well, I started yesterday and I'm at lvl 7 lol

1Give Lingot•11 months ago

Okmanimcoo 11 7 2

you are so kind here take a lingot

1Give Lingot1•9 months ago

Danidanger101 6

Awesome advise! I'd try doing that.

6ReplyGive Lingot68•1 year ago

Lahure 25 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 8 1091

A couple of lingots - good luck and try, then try again! One day it's suddenly like a light has been switched on and everything becomes so clear and obvious!

11ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

FinnSmyth 13 8 5

Lahure... I literally want to bask in your language learning glory. You are above level 20 in 5 languages... I am so inspired and fired up. I give you a lingo good sir

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ivy711 8 6 6 5

Wow! Nice strategy (and commitment!) Here's a lingot!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

classysuitbeard 12 7

Good advice

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MS_Genius88 18 18 14 14 12 11 10 9 6 6 6 6 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2

That's what I used to do, but it's painstaking. Effective though!

1ReplyGive Lingot18•1 year ago

rarcher2010 13 9 8 6 3 3 2 2 2

18?!!!! UGH! Errgggg! Ugh.... my competitiveness is killing me. Here's 18 lingos....

ughhhhhh!.....fiiiine.... I'll keep trying! UGH!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•6 months ago

Llama_Spanish 10 4

Oh wow, you're really dedicated

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

zephy5 17 5

I am trying to implement your trick but I fear I may not have understood everything, I need your help.

So only after 20 questions would you stop practicing on the computer and write down all the questions that Duolingo asked (with your answers)? 20 seems plenty, yes I may have a sponge memory.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Lahure 25 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 8 10 9 1

To zephy5. My first tree was a couple of years ago. At that time Duo operated differently in that each lesson consisted (as now) of a number of questions. You were given three 'hearts' at the start of each lesson. When a question was answered incorrectly you lost a heart.

If you lost all three hearts before correctly answering all the questions you had to redo that lesson from the first question. As we all know, a few earlier questions in most lessons are repeated as you approach the end of the lesson. It was so annoying to repeatedly have one or two questions remaining to complete the lesson, but with no remaining hearts. As a result I adopted the extremely tedious and time consuming approach of writing out each question and answer mainly in order to be able to refer to them and find the appropriate reply. Thus preventing the necessity of having to return to the start. There is a definitive 'cementing of learning' aspect to be gained from the pen and paper approach, though.

With the current 'plus and minus' cursor system the above approach (my 'trick' as you refer to it) is definitely inadvisable from a time factor given that you can continue any lesson after three incorrect answers in terms of the current Duo system. Perhaps in those couple of instances where your reply was not accepted you may wish to transcribe those ones to refer to later in the lesson in the event they reappear.

4ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

zephy5 17 5

Thanks a lot for taking time for such a detailed reply.

I have have been following 'Learning How To Learn' MOOC on coursera and your trick (ok, method) is coherent to what has been taught.

I agree with you that writing sentences for newer version may not be the best.

I am now doing 'deliberate learning' for hard words. That is, I try to imagine situations and sentences using the words that cause problem. I some times write them down to cement the learning. It seems to be working well!

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Lahure 25 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 8 1091

What a coincidence! I heard about MOOC for the first time on a talk show an hour ago! Would be so nice to hear from you when you get the next of the many trees that you will attain! Cheers, Mark.

3ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

rarcher2010 13 9 8 6 3 3 2 2 2

I have a question, I completed the Portuguese tree some time ago and I can carry on a conversation in Portuguese, as well as read and write, but I see that your level is 25. How is that? Is this because you are translating? Thank you.

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

1213eli 7

It takes around a year to get to level 25 from what I've heard, but it is the immersion that really helps.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lilypaddy 9 6 2

I am learning German for an exchange program, reviewing Italian to brush up on my first language, and learning French for fun (and I got tired of Spanish BEING FORCED TO take it for five years in school!). I am most focused on German, but I have been going since September and I'm STILL just level 8 in German, 10 in Italian and 3 in French (I think). I wish I had more time to practice, but... school, karate, life... just no time! sighs self-pityingly :)

6ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Danidanger101 6

I feel your pain. Except for the karate bit.

7ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Eb00kie 25 17 17 11 8 4 3

Danish at level 12 in 3 months and two weeks (mid July to 29.10), starting as a complete beginner.

I finished Italian, starting as a beginner, in 4 months and a half give or take. Nonetheless, Romanian and Italian are very similar, so that was a point in my favour.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rok.sraka 19 8 6 3 2

Really? I'm level 11 in Danish at the moment, after about a month of learning, and I'm still at about 40%. But I do like to practice a lot, instead of progressing with the tree as fast as possible.

Understanding the audio samples is by far the hardest for me...

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DanSurf 13 10 6 5 5 5

Of course the audio is the hardest. It's DANISH!

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

trillions1 7

Have you retained it? You say 2010, and today is May 19 2015. Also when you do like languages do you still retain them without mixing them up? I'm nearly finished with DuoLingo Spanish(on my cell phone) and I'm not sure if I want to start French for fear of messing up my Spanish. I'm doing German next because of it but I will still have that worry about doing French too after. What's your experience with so many?

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FinnSmyth 13 8 5

YAY! I can finally help someone. I am a multi-language learner and have had to research into this subject. As it pertains to romance languages, Specifically romance languages, it is always best to have a very firm grasp of any one romance language before endeavoring into another. The reason being that it will act as a basis for learning the others. For instance, I am a French major at university. I specifically chose French because it is one of the least similar. Italian, Spanish, and portugese are incredibly difficult not to confuse when Spanish is your base, and Romanian is very different from all of them as it is the closest to Latin due to its' distance from the other countries. So finally arriving at my point, your best bet is to strengthen your spanish to good degree, learn a non- romance language (German is a perfect idea), and then learn French or Romanian. After one of those you can switch to Italian or Portuguese. My non-romance is Japanese, which I learned before French.

10ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Danidanger101 6
You know Romanian?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Eb00kie 25 17 17 11 8 4 3
Maternal language

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

goran519 18
43 days on track level 12/13 loving it. Hopefully it will stay in my mind :) Full tree at full bars at all times.

4ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

Lahure 25 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 8 10 9 1
Three months and a day or two on about level eleven I guess. But am trying to keep my skill bars full now and I definitely received the easiest of questions. Anyway, completing the tree is not significant. I am still a complete novice.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheRealDaveRuby 21 19 16 10 10 9 8 3
I remember completing the Spanish and feeling immense joy. But, at the same time I still couldn't understand everything I would hear in the Spanish television. I think duolingo gets you at a B1 level in the language of your choosing. It is only a stepping stone to a neverending journey.

6ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

harjinder123 6
Thats really cool.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MnBY 14 4 3 2 2
It depends, but i try to know perfectly the material before moving on, so it takes longer. But, I think at least one or two exercises a day and you'll make it in less than a year/

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

missdjfrankiem 25 24 13 7 3 9

I'm an american but also a fluent spanish speaker (parents are from Latin America), and have completed both Portuguese and Italian trees. I started as an english speaker learning portuguese about 2 years ago (Sept 2013) and finished the tree in less 6 months, then when duolingo updated and provided an option to learn as a spanish speaker i did the whole tree over again- much faster this time.

I was very thorough though, literally hand writing down all the regular verb conjugations for all the tenses out in spanish- and then their portuguese equivalents next to them because it helped me memorize everything to see how they corresponded with each other (it's amazing how similar verb endings are for each of the tenses), also I googled and looked up concepts that i didn't understand, and specific grammar rules that weren't explained in duolingo, as well as articles comparing portuguese to spanish, explaining the grammatical differences and common errors that a spanish speaker learning portuguese might make. I probably could have gone through the tree faster just doing the exercises but i wanted to understand why certain things were structured in a certain way, and every time i logged in i made sure all my previous exercises were gold before learning a new skill.

When the Italian for Spanish speakers option came out (about a year ago) I did the Italian course in about the same amount of time using the same methods- writing out all verb conjugations (this time comparing, spanish, portuguese and italian), looking up rules etc.

In both cases i've found that i've reached a fairly high level of proficiency in both languages, but i have to emphasize that my prior knowledge of another romance language was extremely useful as there a lot of grammatical and structural similarities, so my results probably would not be typical of someone who has no other language experience.

If you are an english speaker who has a significant background in spanish (you've lived in another, country, achieved fluency somehow) and you want to learn either portuguese, italian, or french- I'd highly recommend doing those trees as a spanish speaker because it will help you understand everything much better.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TheRealDaveRuby 21 19 16 10 10 9 8 3

That is exactly what I am doing now. Not only does it help you learn the language but, it helps strengthen your Spanish. A lingot for your advice.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mariano_Bentley 6

Thanks for the amazing advice! I'm actually in the same position you were and it will make it easier for me learning from Spanish then.

2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

SWEENBEAN58 10

What is your level of fluency after completing the tree. Are you able to speak fluently with Natives of other languages. I am just curious

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

missdjfrankiem 25 24 13 7 39

when my trees were all gold... they said i was about between 55-60% fluent. I can pretty much carry on conversations with portuguese speakers, certain accents are a bit more difficult for me to understand than others, but i've had speakers from Portugal tell me that my accent and pronunciation sounds like a brazilian's (i was expecting to hear i sound like gringo). I haven't really had the chance to practice italian as much with native speakers unfortunately as there aren't as many of those where I am. But i can understand the little bit i see on youtube vids, and movies relatively well.

I also definitely recommend movies, youtube, podcasts, etc anything where you can hear native speakers talking

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

salarmiri 8 6 4 4 2

I think it depends on how much time does someone spend daily or how often someone take a lesson. It's about 4 months that I'm a duolingo user and I'm level 7 in French . but with some more time I would probably end it in a month. with a particular time daily , I think 5-6 months would be enough

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Scuba_Bruce 16

131 days (4 months, 10 days). Level 15. Spanish. 30-60 minutes a day.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PoonTony 13 11 6 402

I finished my Italian tree at level 13. I completed these 399 lessons in 808 days (around 27 months) with a 101 day streak.

Had to really commit to finishing it at the end.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LingPenguin 17 15 14 12 11

It took me around 6 months (Though for two of them near the start I was extremely busy and only did a quick "Strengthen weakest words" each day to keep my streak) to finish my Spanish tree, and I was at level 14, almost at level 15. If I truly focused on learning that language and made it my number 1 priority, I could probably finish the whole tree in a month.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TrowerHous 15 2

It took me 15 days to complete the whole tree and make everything golden in french. I did not even realize until I had completed the entire tree that there was any difference between gold and the other colors ... this is day 16 and the dashboard says that I'm 41% fluent and at level 14. I came here because I am having trouble figuring out what to do next.

I appear to have moved very rapidly through the course. I am wondering if that is because something has changed in duolingo since the older comments were put here or if I have some peculiar advantage. I have been recovering from some injuries which I think came from statin drugs. Is it possible that a nervous system on the mend is able to learn languages more quickly?

I am a computer software guy, know a fair number of programming languages, and I live in Canada. Even though I did not know french prior to trying Duolingo, it swirls about us here because it is an official language. I also have a large English vocabulary so ...

I did most of my work on an Android tablet. I did a little bit on the web and a little bit on my iPhone. It seems to me that the Android tablet is more forgiving and allows you to move more quickly. Certainly, duolingo is different on the different platforms.

I don't know if it made any difference but I got bored towards the end and bought everything you were able to buy in the shop.

If somebody from duolingo is reading this: it is weird being in this situation. I was really enjoying this and then it just ended. I realize that things will degrade back from gold as they have all along. However as of now the entire tree is gold and the application gives me no indication of what I should do next.

I am a pretty aggressive self learner and I spent more than a little time at this. However it seems to me that a pretty bright person who really hammers at it hard would be able to get to where I am in about 7 days. Maybe you should restructure to have silver/gold/platinum/diamond levels or something.

Anybody who is reading this and making slower progress don't get discouraged. I had a variety of advantages and my grasp of French is weak at best. My skill degrades rapidly on duolingo and in real life as well. As somebody else has mentioned here, it is likely that slower progress is more permanent progress.

2ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

856pm 13 3

I don't know. I started duo a few years ago. While I don't really do much here any more, I do speak french every day outside duo, so I'm probably okayish. I'm waiting for the hungarian course

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RebeccaPou 13 4

I took the Spanish placement test this morning and spent about an hour doing exercises this evening and finished the tree. It was totally unexpected, I didn't realize it was the end of the tree at all. I'm kind of bummed. I was really enjoying it and a deffinitely don't speak Spanish (I took 2 yrs in high school ten years ago, practiced a bit while working in restaurants but no real immersion)

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

wilkinsnick18 23 11 735

It took me a year or so and I finished at level 13 (just shy of 14) with finish the Italian course.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

patty835786 6 2

I am a complete beginner in french and level six in 4 days, about 30-45 minutes per day

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Hannah959717 14 12 3

took me 5 weeks to complete Swedish course at lvl 11 doing 5-20 lessons every day :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ArinaR2 10 10 9 8

I started to learn French and German approximately 2 weeks ago from the beginning. Now I have Level 8 in French and Level 7 in German.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

roberto_dega 25 11 4 91

I finished the Spanish Tree in about two months at level 14.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

princesslrosy 6 6

I barely have time andmi ussayy take about thirty minutes a day so immreally be hind

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PJCSantos 17 11 7

Lahure, your dedication is impressive! Espero que por esta altura consigas ler esta frase sem qualquer problema :P E já agora, será que podias partilhar quantas palavras tem o curso de alemão aqui no Duolingo? I'm doing it right now and I'm curious about this. Cheers!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lahure 25 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 8 1091

Para PJCSantos. Sim posso entender a frase facilmente. Mas infelizmente não me lembro o curso de alemão muito bem, infelizmente.

Seu inglês é excelente!

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

500xpPerDay 15 13 12 10 9 6 2 2

I just the Spanish tree from scratch in 17 days. I spent around 5 hours per day on Duo and learned about 160 words per day. Because I go to Spain very soon, I was kind of in a hurry ;)

Now let's keep practicing!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Scott280797 21 1
about forty days for spanish

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

ImFizzle 3 2
I have been wanting to work on Swedish for a while, I'm really glad I finally am.

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Scott280797 21 1
Good for you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

gollon11 12
Hey I am currently learning french and was just wondering if anyone knew supplemental ways to learn. Duolingo does a fantastic job but I have heard it doesn't get you all the way there. Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

missdjfrankiem 25 24 13 7 39
I'd say just use the google and look up stuff online. There are a bunch of online resources for language learning that can explain the grammar, structure, rules that aren't readily available within Duolingo itself. that's what i did for portuguese and Italian, and have been doing for Catalan. If i didn't understand a verb tense, then I'd just type in google example: "Portuguese subjunctive rules" and tons of stuff would come up. You can use the duolingo categories in the trees as guides, even wikipedia has some pretty useful information. Good luck :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

BlackPanther909 12 4
I went through all of the French lessons and categories in less than two months, mind you I had prior knowledge (about 11% fluency when I started according to duolingo). Because of the prior knowledge I was able to test out of many categories successfully Now I'm at level 12 and 47% fluency. A ways to go. The real question is when I reach 100% will i actually be able to say anything I need to say flawlessly.

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Whodathunkitz 13 12 6

I'm almost embarrassed to say this. I have no L2 beyond basic Cebuano, basic Esperanto. I used test out a lot. Used test out a few times twice. Once 3 times. I half-heartedly did 2 months of Spanish nearly 2 years ago. Mostly on Memrise. I was on level one duolingo Spanish on Monday evening. I must have started it some time ago then left it. I finished today Saturday morning less than 5 days later. Mostly golden, maybe 5 not. Cebuano has around 2000 Spanish words. Esperanto introduced me to different grammar. 8 weeks total time in Spain over 20 plus years.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Whodathunkitz 13 12 6

Am level 11 Spanish and 13 for Esperanto. I didn't test out on Esperanto as far as I remember. Two weeks for Esperanto but much harder working. I have never successfully learnt a language. With duolingo, Memrise, YouTube and research into how I learn best, techniques etc it's completely different. But I still don't speak a language. I do have the confidence to start aiming higher now though and i believe I can learn a language. I thought it was beyond me!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Whodathunkitz 13 12 6

I'd also recommend Esperanto. In Uk, various courses. Well worth considering especially if you were never taught grammar terms at school.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Whodathunkitz 13 12 6

Just for record 10 percent fluency according to duolingo.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

roberto_dega 25 11 4 91

I finished the Duo Spanish the Tree at level 12. It took awhile to get to level 25.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

jerryshadrick 9 7 5 3

I am on adjectives in Romanian today I am going to see how far I can get with NO testing out.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

283 "He reached the bird."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/905286>

Translation: Él alcanzó al pájaro.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

22 Comments

itay_bi 13 7 6

Duo accepted my translation - "Él alcanzó el pájaro"

Is it have exactly the same meaning as the sentence above?

According to google dictionary -

Él alcanzó al pájaro = He caught the bird.

Él alcanzó el pájaro = He reached the bird.

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

You can add the personal 'a' to animals when it's a pet or something like that. Not totally sure why the google dictionary changed that.

http://spanish.about.com/cs/grammar/a/personal_a.htm

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

itay_bi 13 7 6

Thanks a lot Samsta!

I know what is the 'personal a' and I also have that link you gave me in my favorites. I just didn't thought about it when I dealt with that sentence. I thought the 'a' means 'to' and that maybe if we put it after 'alcanzar' it makes some change in the meaning of the verb.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lafe55 21 15 2

And you were quite right. Thanks for asking a very good question that elicited so much insight from Mavry that was a great help.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mirrored 17 7 5

Por qué no puedo decir "Lo alcanzó al pájaro"?

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eskerjim 15 6

Good question...

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eskerjim 15 6

Anyone?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

seanboyle30 22 16 8 5 5 4 4 7
Bueller?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CarolMoffatt 19

Google Translate uses "llegar" as the preferred Spanish word for "reach" and Duolingo did not accept it.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

QiPercyDeng 23 9

llegar means reach, it is similar to venir, arrive at some place

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hesolomon 25 7

What's wrong with: "Él logró el pájaro?"

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

k-kayak 14

Logró can mean reached, as "reached a goal" or achieved/reached a level. So your sentence is more like he achieved the bird.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

The.Other.Caleb 15 5 4 1

Yes! I have achieved the bird! I am now firmly established on the way to greatness...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

oldschool.flora 24 24 2

I don't know it either. Anybody, please?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ah56 24 2 14

My understanding is that anything involving movement from point A to point B ... "to the" = "al". Or maybe, in this case ... he reached "for the" bird.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

John_Payne 25 2

I was reading He reached the bird as in a mile marker, meaning that's how far he got, but now that I think about it, that would probably be llegar (arrived at)...is this correct?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JulioLuna10 22 1

I wrote él alcanzó la pájaro and was marked wrong. Why is that incorrect? Im confused.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sendero 23 2 2

La is feminine and pajaró is masculine.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lindisfarne 20 9 17

Why is llegar the wrong verb here?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KarenDeZar 20 4

Why the word al instead of el or la?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

The.Other.Caleb 15 5 4 1

Al is an abbreviation for a el. They basically sound the same in spoken Spanish because of the way the vowels are run together, but al is shorter to write.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Agent_Gabriel 21 16 3 2 2 2

I'm sure this bird was happy about it.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

284 "I am the son of my parents."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/395768>

Translation: Soy el hijo de mis padres.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

47 Comments

House_Martell 21 6

Me: I am the son of my parents

Duo: You are correct

Me: Yay :)

21ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

arzuan4 10 2

Why mis and not mi?

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kierstynnf 20 8 5 3

I think just because "padres" is plural "mis" must be too

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CJFB 13 9 3 2

It's plural. "Mis padres" is plural meaning "my parents." Not to be confused with "mi padre" (my father).

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

banananino 13 9 8 6 5 4 3 3 2 2

"Mis padres" could mean "my fathers"?

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

puzzlepeas 7

I think it could, but it is a lot less common. This is the same as children, where niños can mean boys or children.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Sierra97383 16 2

Because "Padres" is a plural noun, so instead of saying "mi" you say "mis".

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

GlenVeed 14 8 8 7

I wrote "Estoy el hijo de mis padres" which I thought meant "I am ..." Is there a difference I am missing between "Soy" and "Estoy"?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hmarinescu 7 5

In spanish there are 2 different verbs that can be translated as "to be": "ESTAR" and "SER".

To address condition, use "estar" (estoy/estás/está/estamos/estáis/están)

Ex: La manzana está verde / the apple is green = unripe.

To address an essential quality, use "ser" (soy/eres/es/somos/sois/son)

Ex: La manzana es verde / the apple is green = color green, which is an essential characteristic.

17ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

and before a noun, it's always ser.

7ReplyGive Lingot5•3 years ago

MissSpell 19 10 8 6 4 3

I never knew that. That will come in handy, thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

andreamccraley 10

Soy is permanent estoy is not

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

chrisyue 10 2

What an obvious statement.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

omidespero 9 8

I wrote "Soy el niño de mis padres" and it was wrong. Do these two sentences convey different meanings?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kymbur 10 8 7

I think el niño conveys "child" or "boy" more than "son".

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

cogbon 20 8 38

Wow, so apparently "mis papás" is also another way to say "my parents". The accent is needed over the "a" for this.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Parkstah 11 6

Is "papás" the same as "padres"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

noisemaker483 20 12 9 7 3 581

"Papás" would be "dads," while "padres" would be either "fathers" or "parents."

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Skargan 13 4 4

Still don't get it why estoy is wrong in this case. I think being a son of someone is quite an essential characteristic.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MissSpell 19 10 8 6 4 3

Another general rule is ser is permanent and estoy is temporary. Whether you or your father live or die, you will always be his son. It's a permanent condition.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mspretentious 6 4

This (permanent vs. temporary) was how it was explained to me by a native speaker. If something is red, for instance, it is always red. If you are someone's son or daughter, it is and will always be true. But if you are happy or sad that is a state of being at that specific moment. There are other specific rules (from Spanish class that I learned), however, this is basically the easiest way to decipher when unsure which should be utilized.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

miwade 14 9 2

Thanks MissSpell and pretentiostsdc amazingly simple way of putting it... so much simpler than the gobbledygook on so many sites out there!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

Always "ser" in front of a noun Juan es un niño, hoy es lunes. ser+ pronoun= Este libro es mío. Ser+ number or quantity= Somos treinta, Eran muchos. Always ser with infinitive= lo importante es participar.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Plum_Turtle 9

Hello! I was just wondering how wrong my answer "Yo hijo de mis padres" was ^_^; I'm not sure when to use "soy" and "yo"... along with many other different versions of a word D: I gotta practiceeee!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sambarino 11 5 2

Yo means 'I' while soy means 'I am'

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

YO is a pronoun and SOY is a verb. You can say YO SOY, if you want emphasis. SOY, already implies YO, SO NO NEED TO WRITE THE PRONOUN. If I traduce your way : I my parents' son was.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Candicebush 25 15

Would "de a mis padres" or, why no "a"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CheerenCoc 15 5

Can someone tell me the difference between "del" and "de" PLEASE I NEED HELP URGENTLY

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Candicebush 25 15

I think del is a contraction of de + el = Del

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HamidrezaK9 11 6 5 2

What is different between de and del?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

noisemaker483 20 12 9 7 3 581

de = "of"

del = "of the" for masculine words (it's a contraction of "de + el")

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ZacharyX 8

Thanks Captain Obvious!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jon.- 23 15 15 8 5 3 3 3 2 2

Soy hijo de mis padres

1-1-2016 ,sin corregir todavia

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/12602853>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mauni3 6

Why is it only papa instead of mama y papa

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

noisemaker483 20 12 9 7 3 581

"Padres" can mean either "fathers" or "parents." Most people just interpret it as meaning "parents."

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lokitty14 9 5

I put "yo es el hijo" instead of "yo soy el hijo" and got it wrong. What is the difference between "es" and "soy" ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

noisemaker483 20 12 9 7 3 581

"Es" is used for the subjects "él," "ella," and "usted." "Soy" is used for "yo." By saying "yo es el hijo," you basically said "I is the son," which is improper grammar.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aviyaburg 11 10 4 3 2

Why is 'Soy mis papás hijo' incorrect?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

noisemaker483 20 12 9 7 3 581

Because it doesn't convey possession. That sentence would mean "I'm my parents son," not "I'm my parents' son" with the apostrophe. To convey possession in Spanish, you always use "de" plus whoever is claiming ownership of the object (i.e., you say "of my parents" instead of "my parents' ").

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ziionneybillups 2

lol

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

ziionneybillups 2

no us yesss we son just

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

wesleyronda 11 11 5 2

Would "Yo soy el hijo por mis padres" be correct too?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

hanshal 9 1

This has literally nothing to do with food!!... unless you are a cannibal that is

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

maureensta1 24 1

The word padres was not amongst the choice of words. It was missed out. Please rectify.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

tatarBurak 13

isn't sound ridiculous ? is that how you say in Spanish ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

noisemaker483 20 12 9 7 3 581

Yes, this is just how possessives work in Spanish. In English we would say things like "That is Sally's book," but in Spanish you have to say "That is the book of Sally."

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

tatarBurak 13

thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

285 "I live on the first floor."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/716090>

Translation: J'habite au rez-de chaussée.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

9 Comments

austinmcgi 6

rez-de-chaussée?

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rents 23 22 22 14 14 10

It is important in French to make the difference between the ground floor and the first floor - le premier étage is what many other nations would call the SECOND floor, not the first one.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gentiane2 12

Right, and the ground floor is called the "rez-de-chaussée". However, in Quebec, we often use "premier étage" to indicate the ground floor.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tosca15858 10 3

when should you use "je vis" and "j'habite"? what's the difference please?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pghahaha 11 5 4 4

I'd say, and this is my humble understanding, but you would use vivre with just living in general and habiter with inhabiting a place

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BLPK 21 21 20 20 4 814

But the English sentence, in America at least, means rez de chausee, NOT premier stage. So premier stage is not an accurate French translation of an American saying the first floor.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

alfredo.pl 23 10

Why can't I say "Je vis dans le premier étage" :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ronnie-JA 25 8 2

You live in the floor?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ronnie-JA 25 8 2

My only issue is why the French construction has to be "at the" rather than "on the" first floor.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

286 Owl costumes

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3105789>

RhysJohnson92 15 8 7 6 6 5 5

My mobile app allows me to purchase costumes from the Lingot Store (but not the actual website which I find strange), but what do they actually do?

Don't get me wrong, I'm a sucker for a green owl dressed like Hugh Hefner, but I don't really want to spend 20 Lingots if it's not going to help me do anything.

Give Lingot2
52 years ago

Leave a new comment
21 Comments

curiousking 15 9 7 6 5 2 25

It does not do anything really. At the end of the lesson, if you paid for an outfit, the owl will be dressed in that outfit. Therefore, it is just part of the results screen. It looks cool, but there is nothing really special to it.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

psionpete 25 21 16 15 14 6 5 4 3 1151

Some people have so many lingots that they do not know what to do with them. When you are just starting your journey on DL you only have a few but Believe me, as you progress down your tree you will get many more.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I believe the costumes are just costumes. I don't think they come with anything extra. But, I'm not certain. However, the Lingot store on the website might have a few extra things too :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RhysJohnson92 15 8 7 6 6 5 5

Ah, that's cool. I'll probably buy one when I have Lingots to burn.

I wouldn't mind seeing costumes specific to the course, like I'm doing German so when I complete a lesson the owl wears a lederhosen, or something like that.

Spanish - Matador? French - Beret and striped shirt? Brazilian/Portuguese - Carnival? English - Queen's guard?

Just ideas, mind.

6ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

maria.nils 24 21 17 14 13 13 12 11 10 9 9 8 8 8 7 5 3 2 406

I like the idea! I've never seriously thought about using of my 1425 lingots to buy an outfit, but I think I might if I could have a German owl with lederhosen!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HoodieDan 10 10 5 3 2

oh god! haha wow that's a lot, but.. i kinda see it as a bit obvious, i mean, the things you can spend lingots on aren't really worth it and there aren't many things to spend them on also, at least costumes are worth it a bit, but i think there could also be more content to spend lingots on, some other digital souvenirs or something, like idk, maybe a minigame?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DSD9 10 9

WOW! That is so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DSD9 10 9

I just bought that fancy champagne tracksuit.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bobbiabbas 13

do you know how to do it on the computer...or only on your phone? I bought an outfit on my phone but don't see where to do it on the computer version

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

LizaBochkareva 15 5 5

I bought a costume, but I don't really like it, I prefer to have the "simple" green owl again- is there any way to go back??? Please?... :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DanaBielob 12 6 2

Is there a way to take the costume, off. I don't like the one that I got.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bredec07 13 2

BAAAAHHHHHH! I just spent 30 stinkin' lingots for the owl to dress up in a "champagne tracksuit"??? Can I get them back?? I thought it was going to teach me fun, fancy words in German...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mehrnoosh.Z 7 5 5

Oh, I didn't know that! I thought it helps me to learn better. :(now I can't cancel it There are just two choices: Take off and Wear!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aca1011 11
ok

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ChloeJohns9 10
i would save your lingots for the flirting, idiom and christmas bonus lessons

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

VocaMaika 6
Never done it, may never do it...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

solopipe 23 15 4
do it. it's a good investment.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

VocaMaika 6
I can. I only have it on pc and i'm too lazy to.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KalebTheCatLover 5
Can you only dress "Duo" (I hear thats his name) on mobile? I like to dress mine and i play on chromebook

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

bobbiabbas 13
that is what I want to know because I did it on my phone and can't figure it out on the computer

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

emmaziesemer 6
Where do you dress the owl up? How do I get there? Do I use the app or website?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

287 "The book is about a horse."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/430476>
Translation: El libro es acerca de un caballo.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

144 Comments

CJFloyd 25 9

El libro (The book) es (is) acerca (about) un caballo (a horse). Where does this de come from and why?

160ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PaulAnjoe 8

I think it is a misconception that "acerca de" is exactly translates as "about". (As some people have opined here) The question here is this alien word "de". I believe this "de" is used here to show the possession. "de" means "of" right? So in Latin based languages possession is a prime issue. Even if you know that The book is about "a horse" it is necessary in these languages to use the possession "de" which means of. So digging deeply you get: The book is dealing with the ideas of horse. It is because of the rigid grammatical rules that these age old conventions still find a way in Latin based languages. This is where we appreciate the grammatical sense of English Men. So when you stop thinking in the grammatical sense of English this problem will be easily overcome. And please understand that only a few of the translations appear on duolingo are sufficient to convey the correct meaning of a Spanish text.

227ReplyGive Lingot10•3 years ago

DeanG6 20 12 9 2 12

Well said.

15ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

amyhengst 14 9 2

In German I think you could say, something like, "es haendelt um," meaning it is about or sort of like, "it is handled around." I think in english it might be something like, the subject "concerns itself with." There is just sometimes no direct translation, but it is very interesting that some of the German structures and Romance language structures have analogues where the Latin and Germanic based English language does not. Each language seems to have its idiosyncratic structures and only hearing them over time, do you really get a sense of the connotations and internal logic of how it works.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ricaloca 23 2

You could also convey the same idea in a different way in English: "the book has to do with a horse". In this case "has to do with" means "is about". It's an idiosyncratic expression, for sure! And one that I use often, for example: "I don't know what his job is, but it is something to do with airplanes". Sometimes you just have to memorize this kind of expression when you're learning a different language.

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sadeghtoulabifar 19 16 16

Thanks. You are great

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SoheilRahs 9

Very good

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

dafoxe 11 3

"About" translates to "acerca de."

60ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

akezar 7 3

"de" is often used with prepositions, for example you always use "de" with "después" and "antes"

24ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jacqueline1145 25

I still get confused about the use of de.

15ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nycbarb 23 1

Me too! I'm relieved I'm not the only one!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tessbee 24 16 64

The de is the partner of acerca here; one can't go without the other in order to convey the meaning intended for in this sentence (dealing with/concerning a horse). Look at all the other replies to this question. Acerca and acerca de both mean "about" but even in English dictionaries there are different meanings of "about".

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Phil46 15

Who knows, de un why not un caballo de or un? This is difficult!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Peabianjay 25 10 60

Note that we do the same thing in English (kinda).

I said TO him.

I told him.

Only example I can think of, off hand. Deal with it. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

jacquebabe 24 200

why is it not El libro es acerca un caballo

20ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Babella 17 14

With this use, "about" translates as "acerca de".

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mddutson 9

so why do they drop "acerca" completely then? if the translation is "acerca de" shouldn't the sentence be "El libro es acerca de un caballo"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bat_Fish 11

That is the correct sentence.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Soulfire86 17 9 7 6 4 4 3 2

I believe that "acerca" or "acerca de" means 'about' in the sense that something is around you...like, "The trees were about us." More of a location about instead of subject about.

Unless I'm wrong...anyone?

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mannzac1 14

I believe so too. Normally I thought you should use "sobre" when speaking about something in this context

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bat_Fish 11

No, it's both - it can mean concerning something or near.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ja3n_Hghar 11

why didnt they teach us to use " acerca " with " de " ?

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dbryant036 10

I know... I know.. However people keep in mind, I paid 350.00 dollars for Rosetta stone which does nothing to describe anything, so you are left all alone to try and "I Say TRY" and figure everything out on your own. Duolingo is hands down the best and surpasses Rosetta Stone by leaps and bounds. Also, it is free! I think this is the best product ever, even though it's not 100 percent, we have each other. You will never get that from Rosetta Stone. Once I got Duolingo, I quit using "RS". It's a piece of crap!!!

64ReplyGive Lingot7•3 years ago

DSushi 14 4

Same here. Have a Lingot

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dbryant036 10

You are awesome! Thank you!

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JasonKarne 10

This is true. I have bought spanish texts and rosetta stone. Duolingo is by far better than both. It is free and these comments, if you read them, you can figure out these languages. There is no software, Nor text that will teach you 100% everything you need to know. Keep in mind, practice is what makes you understand a language.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

choward9 13 9 8 6

I found rs incredibly helpful. Much more complex sentences than duo, especially on later discs. That said, you're right; Ultimately you need to just talk with native speakers to improve beyond a certain point.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

japgirl1965 17

Same here. I have other Spanish learning apps on my phone but i learn the most from this one.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FranksTom 9

Yes, you put all this in perspective. I got next to nothing, except some vocab from Rosetta Stone which relies on a linguistically and philosophically dubious "picture" theory of meaning. I just get frustrated sometimes with this otherwise excellent and free program.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

dbryant036 10

I am with you on that. At least we have each other and I am now up to 515 words. It's getting better. Just somethings like you said are just hard to understand because we just don't speak that way in english.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Krisincr 22 104

I agree

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

shreshthv 11 2

350 Dollars is a lot!

Here you go.. have a lingot. Its the least i can do to make you feel better

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

solenoid.android 11 10 7

yes, the discussion totally "makes" duolingo, because let's be honest, it's seriously lacking in actual lessons!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DanPrix 7

So True

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GazMembrane 12 3 1

I agree! Duo beats Rosetta. The method of Rosetta works better for children.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jacambra 9

Thanks for the heads up!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FranksTom 9

Agree

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Leo7miguel 9

Im suprised

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nemesis6 11 3

its not el libro se trata de un caballo?

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fvance 10

I was wondering the same thing! I use "se trata" when I talk to people and have not been corrected yet.....

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

moh8558 8

Doesnt "sobre" mean about

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lliblens 22

I used "sobre" and it was said to be correct. 3/18/2015

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FranksTom 9

We should be told such things as the use of "de" when words like "acerca" are introduced.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ScottyCarlisle 9 2

Acerda de is more akin to a spacial relationship. I think "Sobre" is a little more appropriate.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cielunltd 25 12 7 4 583

I used sobre and it was marked OK.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

oakss 13 3

Why can't it be una caballa I thought you could change the gender of animals with an a at end? :/

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlanTelloM 18 14 14 9 6 2 2 503

No siempre.

Male: Horse - Caballo

Female: Mare - Yegua

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RemingtonSDP 9

I used "acerca" de and it marked it wrong and said it should be "trata de"?! ¿Por que?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

garjay 19 501

Ditto, another new word introduced after a wrong entry!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Wiliamty 8 8

what's the difference between “cerca de” and “acerca de” ?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AurosHarman 23 11

"cerca de" is "near", "close to".

"acerca de" is "around", "about". (Though usually not "around" in the sense of "encircling". That would be "alrededor de".) There's also a related verb, "acercar", which means something like "to draw in" or "to bring closer".

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Wiliamty 8 8

thanks a lot !

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

solenoid.android 11 10 7

good to know. i would have guessed encircling too

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

leahtard 14

El libro se trata de un caballo is also right

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mollyt 15

babella.....and what is "this use"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Babella 17 14

(From Wordreference):

about, be about [prep] (have as subject)

<pre> de [prep] sobre [prep] This book is about a king who loses his crown. El libro trata de un rey que perdió su corona. El libro habla sobre un rey que perdió su corona. </pre>

That use, sorry for not being clear, mollyt!

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AurosHarman 23 11

Yeah, I would translate this type of "about" with "tratar de". For statements about the topic of a document / book / movie / whatever, that's the one I was taught was appropriate, way back in high school. It also shows up in the Rosetta Stone Spanish.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

christine.benagh 10

Still not clear. "We talk about books." Books is the object of the preposition about. "The book is about a king." Same in English, object of preposition.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sahilsingla112 12

one question here over the use of "que" as "who" in the example given by you.. If i am not wrong "que" means "what". But here it is used as if it means "who". Why this difference with the standard meaning ? any explanation ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Babella 17 14

It is simply the structure we have for those sentences. "The boy who was there" = "el chico que estaba allí". I guess it is like saying "the boy that was there"?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sahilsingla112 12

you are right ! actually here "que" is used as "that". And the word translation of que gives "that" along with the "what".

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

solenoid.android 11 10 7

it means "that"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

sobre is about? It's like in German! Hooray!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chookitarocky 9

sobre is 'on top of' lol!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sahilsingla112 12

sobre is clearly "over". what confusion do you have sobre "sobre" :) :)

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PatDotts 11

I used El libro trata de un caballo. And I think that should also be marked correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ronzo-uno 17

And it is now. (April 2015)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mcbridecorina 8 4 3

I wrote "el libro acerca del caballo" why doesn't del work?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JarraGreen 7

Yes, I wrote the same. I don't understand why "del" doesn't work either.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JarraGreen 7

I think it is because it is "a horse...un caballo" instead of " the horse...or el caballo."

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chookitarocky 9

si correcto ;) a horse not the horse!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

morybel 11

They corrected me with: El libro es de un caballo. And I wrote: EL libro acerca un caballo. Is this an error from the program or should I completely dump the acerca?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

solenoid.android 11 10 7
if using acerca, you need to add de

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Phil46 15
Hi JC, de is of or from, go with it enjoy part of the fun, makes us think!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mrswaka 7
El libro es acerca de un caballo

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

HamzaAli5 6
I translated el libro de acerca es un caballo! and it's wrong :@ where does de come from??

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AurosHarman 23 11
So, not directly related to your question, but it's important to know that even leaving aside the preposition, you have a word-order error that is completely parallel to English. Even if you'd said, "El libro acerca de es un caballo," that would be something like, "The book about is a horse." It's possible to have a prepositional phrase come before a verb, but only if it's actually describing a noun that comes before the verb. So: "Las flores alrededor de la casa son rojas." "The flowers around the house are red." "Around the house" is a description of the flowers. If you read the structure of the sentence as, "The book IS [something]", the "something" is modifying "IS"; and that's the prepositional phrase.

Moving on... The "de" is simply part of the preposition. Several Spanish prepositions are kind of like compound words. Consider:

encima de == on top of. (You can read the "en" there as a separate morpheme. "La cima" can mean something like "the top" or "the summit".)

alrededor de == around or surrounding. You could also read it as "to all sides of". ("Surrounded", the adjective, is "rodeado"; there's a common Latin root for these, which is also lurking behind "un rodeo", an encirclement or round-up.)

The thing is, a bunch of the Spanish prepositions work like this, even though there is not any comfortable or idiomatic parallel structure in English. For instance:

debajo de == under. in the below area of. ("Bajo" is "low". It can also mean "short" in relation to the vertical height of something.)

cerca de == near, close to. in the nearby area of.

Does that help?

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jaaberg90 8

What is the difference between "acerca de" and "sobre"? It accepted my answer using sobre, but I'm wondering if acerca de is more appropriate?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chotichoti 6

Just to be certain, you can use «es» with «acerca de» (like in this sense)?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PaulAnjoe 8

I think it is a misconception that "acerca de" is exactly translates as "about". (As some people have opined here) The question here is this alien word "de". I believe this "de" is used here to show the possession. "de" means "of" right? So in Latin based languages possession is a prime issue. Even if you know that The book is about "a horse" it is necessary in these languages to use the possession "de" which means of. So digging deeply you get: The book is dealing with the ideas of horse. It is because of the rigid grammatical rules that these age old conventions still find a way in Latin based languages. This is where we appreciate the grammatical sense of English Men. So when you stop thinking in the grammatical sense of English this problem will be easily overcome. And please understand that only a few of the translations appear on duolingo are sufficient to convey the correct meaning of a Spanish text.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DeeSzasz 10

How am I supposed to know when its "acerca de" or "cerca de" its confusing me and I keep loosing hearts because of it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kjenkins80 9 6 6

"Acerca de" = about (concerns/deals with) "Cerca de" = near/close to (position/location)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

flobaby 11

"Cerca de" is more about how close something is to you in relation to position. For example: El libro es cerca de los niños. (The book is close to the boys)

"Acerca de" can mean around something in relation to position or about something. For example: El libro es acerca de los niños. (The book is about the boys) -It could mean about in the sense that it is around or the book is a story about them. Either is correct and you'll have to decide which it is based on the situation. Like in English. To sum it up "cerca de" - close to "acerca de" - about

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kuntz20m 14

why is it sometimes acerca de un and sometimes acerca del?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

un is an indefinite article: "it is about a horse."

del is a combination of de + el; el being a definite article: "it is about the horse."

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

khalil3x6 22 1

I answered: "El libro es acerca del caballo." Why is it wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kaylejoy 7 6

I did the same thing. The sentence says "a horse" not "the horse" so you're supposed to use "un caballo" instead of "el caballo".

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

teachelain1444 8

My correct sentence left out the word cerca

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maosa 8

I do not see why de is apart of this sentence. it translates directly without de. it seems like it does not need de. what is its purpose. Google translate also does not use DE.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

moonrabbit92 11 4

Why is "acerca de caballo es libro" not correct?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

Good question, moonrabbit92. If it were a matter of word order alone, and you weren't translating from anything, I think the word order would be okay, even if it probably isn't all that common. For more on word order in Spanish, visit:

Word Order

The reason why I think your suggested translation was considered incorrect is because:

1) it doesn't preserve the word order of the English. The English doesn't begin with the word "about," so why should the Spanish? Sometimes we have to diverge from word order when translating because of differences in word patterns. For example, the Spanish might say "camisa azul," but we wouldn't say "shirt blue" in English. We'd say "blue shirt." When we can, however, we should try to preserve the word order in a way that helps retain the original meaning of the sentence as much as possible.

2) if we were to translate the sentence you suggested,

"acerca de caballo es libro"

... into English, it would be ...

"Around horse is book."

As you can see, it is missing the indefinite article before "caballo" and the definite article before "libro." The sentence to be translated for this prompt was

"The book is about a horse."

HTH

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

scissorslover 6 2
ES????!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

anise.sald 9 8 2 2
Shouldn't we use sobre instead of "acerca de"? Because that means near or close. Does it not?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

Both "sobre" and "acerca de" mean "about." They are what we call synonyms of one another. You use them all the time in English, but don't even notice it. For example, sometimes you might say "during" and at others you might say "while." For any given word you can think of, a language usually has at least one other word that is similar in meaning and many are so close in meaning that they are interchangeable. Keep in mind, however, that each word always has its own basic, primary meaning and no other word is ever exactly the same as another. Therefore, it is important to be precise in the words you choose, especially with languages that have a lot of words in them. Now, to get back to "sobre" and "acerca de," I've pasted an image of definitions from WordReference:

As you can see, "about" is not the first thing listed for "sobre," which means it is not as associated with that word as the words listed above it -- over, above, on, on top of. Another thing to notice is that "sobre" can be used as both an adverb and a preposition; "acerca de" cannot. It is only used as a preposition, which means it will need to be followed by a noun. So for example, you can say, in Spanish

Sobre las cinco de la tarde ...
At approximately five in the afternoon ...

... but you could not say ...

Acerca de las cinco de la tarde ...

So, it is important to learn parts of speech as you continue your study of Spanish because you can then better determine what roles they can play in a sentence. In this particular sentence, you could have also used "sobre" instead of "acerca de."

As for "acerca de" meaning "close," I'm guessing you are confusing it with just "cerca," which does mean "close" or "nearby," but while "acerca de" and "cerca" look similar, their meanings are different.

HTH

1ReplyGive Lingot1•10 months ago

Peabianjay 25 10 60
Excellent explanation. Thanks!

Excelente explicación. Gracias.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

anise.sald 9 8 2 2
Or, you can say "de". Now THAT sounds much better! You can say, "El libro es DE un caballo".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355
I suppose you could use "de" in place of "sobre" or "acerca de," but I don't think it is as frequently used as the other words for "about." Your post made me curious, though, anise.sald, so I decided to run some searches through Tatoeba, a sentence dictionary. Here is what I found:

The phrase "es de" is sometimes translated as "is about," but it is not common. Of the 366 sentences I found with "es de," only 16 of them (4%) translated "de" as "about." I took a closer look at the 16 sentences that did, and more than half involved some type of number -- either a date or length of time, population figures, temperatures, distances -- for the most part, measurements of some sort.

I also did a search for "about a." (I could have just chosen "about," but I wanted to narrow my search results.) 56 sentences surfaced with that phrase, but none of them translated "about" as "es de."

I'm not saying that the suggested translation "es de" is incorrect. I just don't think it is all that common and more likely to be used when approximating measurements. Not a native speaker though, just an observer of how native speakers appear to be using their language. If any native speaker agrees/disagrees, please post a comment!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Peabianjay 25 10 60

Seems like it's kinda like English....you wouldn't normally, but could say, "It's a book of the horse." Odd, but not wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

TabbyHans 22 6 2 2

Sobre all day

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

emilyski94 7

What is the difference between "sobre" and "acerca de?" I know that both mean about, I was just wondering if they were used for different things.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

I can't really say that they are used for different things and I'm not even a native speaker, but I ran some searches through Tatoeba and did some thinking about these two words. In the image below, you'll see my findings from this brief and pseudoscientific study of "sobre" and "acerca de":

Please keep in mind that anything you see in the image above with the word "may" is subject to a difference in observation/opinion. Like I said, I am not a native speaker, so if one wants to agree/disagree with any of my observations, please post a comment.

Also, so as not to confuse anyone, Spanish has another prepositional phrase -- cerca de -- which can be used as a preposition or as an adverb. (Note that this is "cerca de" and not "acerca de.") As a preposition, it means "around"; as an adverb it means "near." Both preposition and adverb can be used to mean "close to."

BTW, I notice that you haven't studied Spanish in a while, at least not through the emilyski94 account here at duolingo. I hope it is just a temporary break and that you'll be back here studying Spanish with us one day again soon. After all, you're at a Level 7. A lot of people don't get that far, but there's 18 levels to go! Whether you continue your study of Spanish here at duolingo or not, we hope this finds you well.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

zip666 8 2

Wth! I put "el libro cerca de un caballo" and got back " el libro trata de un caballo." can someone please explain this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

"cerca" is no verb. Your sentence is like saying "the book about a horse".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

Sakasiru is correct, "cerca" is not acting as a verb in this sentence. The verb "cercar" is a verb meaning "to fence" or "enclose," but it doesn't make sense in this sentence. Without the "de" I suppose you could make a case that it might be one of those odd, charming, memorable duolingo sentences that is really testing you on how well you know the language, but I think the inclusion of "de" rules that out.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

kasshiiee 8 6 2

What's wrong with saying "El libro sobre un caballo"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

flobaby 11

You left out 'es'. Your sentence translates to "The book about a horse" and what you are trying to say is "The book is about a horse" which is "El libro es sobre un caballo".

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

learner555 7

What's the difference if you don't put 'de' in the sentence?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ktwalkstheplank 11 7 7 5 4 2

I have taken several years of formal Spanish and have had 3 different professors say that "acerca de" is never to be used in this context and only in the context of things in physical proximity. Why has this not been corrected yet?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

That's interesting that your professors would say such a thing because Wiktionary, Diccionarios.com, WordReference, Tureng, and Collins Unabridged list the following for "acerca de":

Are you sure you aren't confusing this with "cerca de?" Although WordReference and Tureng had a listing for "cerca de," the others did not. Definitions listed are below:

I think there may be some merit to what your professors have said in terms of "cerca de" not being used as a preposition that can be used to translate "about" no matter how it is being used in a sentence. I base this off of searches I did over at Tatoeba. I found 272 sentences with "cerca de" in them. Here's what I found:

Only 20 of them (7%) were translated as "about" and all but one were adverbial phrases.

In all but that one, they were used in relation to either:

some point in time (30%)

some measurement of time (15%)

some form of measurement (e.g., number of pounds, books, calls, people, lifeboats, diseases) (45%).

Getting back to the sentence for this prompt,

"The book is about a horse,"

it does appear that either "sobre" and "acerca de" are the better choices since "about a horse" is a prepositional phrase describing "the book" -- a noun -- and is therefore an adjectival phrase having nothing to do with either "space" or "time" as the WordReference entry for "cerca de" indicates it must be.

Hope you found that interesting and/or helpful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

McGhee34 18

why cant I use-el libro es sobre un caballo

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

As far as I know, you should be able to use "sobre" instead of "acerca de." Is it possible your answer was incorrect in some other way? If not, and you feel strongly that it should be an accepted answer, report it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Trudi.pepper 10

When do I use del instead of de, I've seen that sometimes I have to switch between the two. Thanks all

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

You use "del" instead of "de" whenever the definite article "el" follows it. Some exceptions exist. See this post for details.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

trock888 13 5 2

Could i instead of using acerca use sobre

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

You could use "acerca de" instead of "sobre." The word "acerca" by itself is an old word meaning "adjacent" and is no longer used in modern-day Spanish. If you want to use the word "acerca" you must add "de" after it. (Source: Wiktionary's entry for "acerca.")

Edit: I seen now that you were asking if you could use "sobre" instead of "acerca." You can use "sobre" instead of "acerca de." The word "acerca" by itself is no longer a word in Spanish. See the top half of this comment for details.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

BrezyB 5

Okay, I put "El libro es acerca de un caballo." but it said it was wrong. It used "trata" instead. Why???

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

I am not sure what the full sentence with "trata" looked like, so it is difficult to answer your question, but I've seen this posted a couple of times and my guess is that it may be some sort of misplaced suggestion/hint. It is true that the verb "tratar" can be used in a transitive way to mean "deal with" or "address," so, in effect the sentence

"El libro trata de un caballo," could mean

"The book deals with a horse."

From what I can observe by consulting with WordReference and Tatoeba, typically the reflexive verb "tratarse" is used to convey "be about" something. A search of "trata de" at Tatoeba yielded 117 sentences. Only 16 of those translated "trata de" as "about" (14%) and of those 16, 12 used the reflexive form of "tratar" (10% of the 117). Interestingly enough, of those four that were not used reflexively, three involved the same Spanish translator (whose profile lists Spain as his country of origin) and the three English translations come from profiles listing the United States, Austria, and Ukraine as countries of origin. Based off of this, my guess is that most native Spanish speakers would not use the nonreflexive form of "tratar de" to convey "be about" and from what I can discern, the phrase "trata de" clearly means "deal with" not "about." Now, can you make a case that, in English, "deal with" is synonymous with "be about?" Sure, but I think most native speakers will acknowledge that "deal with" and "be about" are not exactly the same thing.

Either way, this section should be about prepositions and not verbs, especially those used reflexively. I don't know if this duolingo Spanish course even covers reflexive verbs, but I do know some posts have been written about it. If I were just beginning my study of Spanish, I would just chalk up what you experienced to possibly an inadvertent glitch, report it if you continue seeing it, and move on.

HTH

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

flobaby 11

So when using 'sobre' it doesn't have to be followed by 'de' but when using 'acerca' you have to put 'de'. Can anyone explain why?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

Some prepositions are prepositions of just one word and "sobre" is one of them. Others are prepositions of two words. Sometimes a word that is an adverb by itself can become a preposition with the addition of "de" (e.g., "debajo" and "debajo de"). You'll find this to be true of English as well. For example, "about," "toward," and "under" are prepositions in English, but so are "inside of," "outside of," and "near to."

Some prepositions cannot be followed by "de." "Sobre" is one of those words. It is similar to English. We wouldn't say "about of"; we would just say "about." Adding the "of" to "about" would be incorrect just as it is in Spanish. Not everything will correspond so exactly from English to Spanish and vice versa. You'll have to learn which ones do and which ones don't.

Also, keep in mind that some prepositions must be followed by "de." "Acerca" is one of those words. Without the "de" it does not mean anything; it is not a stand-alone word in modern-day Spanish. I don't think English has anything that quite compares to this. We do have some prepositions that are now obsolete/archaic, but I know of no two-word prepositions that use a word that would be considered obsolete if used alone.

HTH

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

DaisyGarcia212 8

it doesn't make any sense... I thought it would be "el libro se trata de un caballo" where does acerca come from?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

It is true that "se trata" can be used to mean "is about" but this section focuses on prepositions. If your suggested translation using "se trata" was marked as incorrect, perhaps that is the reason for it. It's a bit unfair, I suppose, if you're doing a strengthening exercise because you don't know for certain (until the end) what section of the course was covered. For that reason, perhaps "se trata" should be included as an alternative. If it happens again, and you feel that it should be considered correct, please report it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Uomo_Siciliano 23 13 7

My girlfriend and father, who both spoke spanish as their first language, said that they wouldnt use "acerca de" for about but rather use "trata". If anyone can explain why and which one they believe to be more suitable, Gracias!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

My guess is that "se trata" is just a more common way of saying "is about" than "es acerca de." After all, the word "acerca" is now an obsolete word in modern-day Spanish and perhaps "acerca de," as a prepositional phrase, is falling out of use as well. I can't think of anything that corresponds with this exactly in English. The one example I'm thinking of might just cause more confusion, so I'll leave it at this, but I will add an image of an Ngram search I did with "acerca de un" and "se trata de un." The image is below:

As you can see, my hunches were correct and Google hits support the Ngram findings:

The thing to remember is that words in living languages fluctuate in their frequency of use. What is popularly used today may fall by the wayside in decades to come.

Nota bene: I used the phrase "acerca de un" and "se trata de un" to narrow search results and try to make them mirror the usage for this prompt, especially considering "tratar" has many more forms and meanings than "acerca de." Having said that, did you notice a flaw in my selection of phrases? They are not exactly equal. The equivalent of "se trata de un" would be "es acerca de un." When I reran the search with "es acerca de un," the numbers were virtually nonexistent for the phrase "es acerca de un" when compared to "se trata de un" -- .9% for Twitter and just .3% for Google pages overall. So now, more than ever, I can see why your girlfriend and father told you they wouldn't use "acerca de." I think the course designers included it mainly to show users that some prepositions need to be followed by a "de" and that "cerca de" is not the same as "acerca de." Regardless of the reasons, I'm really glad you posted what you had learned from others. I definitely learned something in the process and hope others do, too.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ramarr1 11 1

Why is it acerca de un caballo?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Cholanegra 8 4

Why won't it accept una caballa?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Julian_L. 10 6 6

Because that means "An atlantic mackerel".

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Woody4087 21 6

I used es instead of esta in a previous question and was marked wrong, said to use es, and then on this question i used esta instead of es and was marked wrong again, said to use es. ???

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Colenerd123 6

a way to remember book the word book in Spanish is like library

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aaronsduolingo 25 3 2 1

Posted "sobre de un caballo" and was marked incorrect. Says "de" is fine with "acerca" but not with "sobre." Does this sound correct to everybody? Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

You are now at a Level 25, aaronsduolingo. ¡Enhorabuena! Therefore, you may be well past this by now, but the short answer is, "Yes, it sounds correct." Though there may be some specific instances where it may be acceptable to place "de" after "sobre," typically, when "sobre" is used to mean "about" it is not followed by "de."

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

jksaddington 14 5

This is exactly what I put and it was wrong, the correct answer I was given did not include acerca, maybe a glitch with duolingo as I've read other comments from people that this has happened to.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Maddiecat9 10 2

What is the difference between del and de

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

lisa4duolingo 23 17 12 7 5 355

This post here should answer your question.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

joeyfino 19

Why the "es" and not esta?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Peabianjay 25 10 60

I've read many explanations about the two verbs. They tend to be FAR too detailed to be considered when actually trying to speak/write in Spanish.

The "rule" that works for me (most of the time) is "está" for a condition that may change (or already changed). Está enfermo. (He's sick....but won't be forever.) Está casado. (He's married, but wasn't always.) ¿Donde está mi cartera? (My wallet could move.) Donde es España? (But Spain won't!)

Consider:

Él es tranquilo. [He is quiet.] As in, he's a quiet kind of person. That's his nature.

Él está tranquilo. [He is calm.] As in, right now he's not freaking out.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

amrind 11

I think it is a misconception that "acerca de" is exactly translates as "about". (As some people have opined here) The question here is this alien word "de". I believe this "de" is used here to show the possession. "de" means "of" right? So in Latin based languages possession is a prime issue. Even if you know that The book is about "a horse" it is necessary in these languages to use the possession "de" which means of. So digging deeply you get: The book is dealing with the ideas of horse. It is because of the rigid grammatical rules that these age old conventions still find a way in Latin based languages. This is where we appreciate the grammatical sense of English Men. So when you stop thinking in the grammatical sense of English this problem will be easily overcome. And please understand that only a few of the translations appear on duolingo are sufficient to convey the correct meaning of a Spanish text.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

amrind 11

I think it is a misconception that "acerca de" is exactly translates as "about". (As some people have opined here) The question here is this alien word "de". I believe this "de" is used here to show the possession. "de" means "of" right? So in Latin based languages possession is a prime issue. Even if you know that The book is about "a horse" it is necessary in these languages to use the possession "de" which means of. So digging deeply you get: The book is dealing with the ideas of horse. It is because of the rigid grammatical rules that these age old conventions still find a way in Latin based languages. This is where we appreciate the grammatical sense of English Men. So when you stop thinking in the grammatical sense of English this problem will be easily overcome. And please understand that only a few of the translations appear on duolingo are sufficient to convey the correct meaning of a Spanish text.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Apanthony 11 2

In German I think you could say, something like, "es handelt um," meaning it is about or sort of like, "it is handled around." I think in English it might be something like, the subject "concerns itself with." There is just sometimes no direct translation, but it is very interesting that some of the German structures and Romance language structures have analogues where the Latin and Germanic based English language does not. Each language seems to have its idiosyncratic structures and only hearing them over time, do you really get a sense of the connotations and internal logic of how it works.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

AsadNaeem1 8

When to use "un" "uno" and "una"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Peabianjay 25 10 60

Una is female "one" (Veo una mujer...I saw one woman)

Un is male "one" (Veo un hombre...I saw one man)

Uno is stand-alone "one" (Veo uno.....I saw one.)

Note Spanish also has "plural" version (which doesn't really make sense, but helped me learn...)

Unas mujers "some women"

Unos hombres "some men"

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

kaitlynhines13 10

Agreed

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ChadSteel 12 3

Screw the de I will not say it that way. I dont care what the Owl wants.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

288 "Both of the women are pretty."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/568475>

Translation: Die beiden Frauen sind schön.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

19 Comments

lucysneezum 16

Difference between beide and beiden?

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

vikukunta 13 13 13

I found this: 'Adjective declensions are influenced by the presence or absence of determiners (like "die")' That is, if there is die, it is beideN :)

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nish81 9 4 1

my german grammar book says this about beide: if used as a determiner, it would be 'beide' here in the nominative case. but if used as an adjective, where it most commonly means something similar to 'two', it is always declined as 'beiden'. so I would read this as 'the two women...' or 'both women' - in one case 'beide' is a determiner (like 'that'/'my'/etc) and in the other case it's an adjective.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fedcar89 10 7

why is "beideN Frauen" and not "beide Frauen"? is this a N declination thing?

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

iEldor 8 8 4

Probably it is die beiden Frauen = Both of the women. Whereas, beide Frauen = Both women. Beide richtig or die beiden richtig.

14ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Amstellodamois 11 6 5 2

That's either Beide or Die beiden.

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

THC_BLISS 17 7 4 3

why beiden and now beide here? thanks

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mizzoth 15

"Beide Frauen sind schön" worked for me. Maybe "die" works some dark magic.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wrumm-wrumm 7 2

it is so because of different types of German adjective declension. look at this

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/German_declension

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lentzi 12 2

I think it's because of the "Die". Maybe "Beide Frauen..." would've been correct but because of the "Die" it turned into "Beiden". Like "Beide Frauen sind schon" would translate to "Both women are pretty" instead of "Both of the women are pretty". Again...I'm not sure about this :-P.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

vikukunta 13 13 13

Strange, with google, there are hundreds of thousands of matches for "beide frauen" as well. The correct one has millions, though

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Zchbaniel25 15 13 10 6 5

The phrase "both of" puts quite a bit of emphasis on BOTH of them (Not only one) being pretty, so the English sentence could be meant to contradict another speaker who claimed that one is pretty and one is not.

This should be translated: Die Frauen sind beide hübsch (nicht nur eine). In this position - working like an adverb so to speak - "beide" can make this clear, as a numeral (Die beiden Frauen, beide Frauen) it cannot.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Eccles 21 12 7 3 2

I realise it's VERY anglo-syntax, but what about 'Beiden von der Frauen sind schön'?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Zchbaniel25 15 13 10 6 5

No sorry, you can stretch German quite a lot, but this is just too much.

What you can say indeed is: "Beide von den Frauen sind schön" (does not sound really elegant, though) or, more poetically: "Beide Frauen sind von großer Schönheit" (Please don't try to feed the owl with this)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Eccles 21 12 7 3 2

Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sagher 16

Why beiden frauen is wrong?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lhockinson 9 6

I have the same question. I thought: beide = wo/ article and beiden = w/ the article... I am so confused :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jalalhabeeb 15

"Die beiden Frauen" means "The two women", whereas "Beide Frauen" means "both women"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AndyLauren 8 8 8 7

why cant I say nett for pretty? why only schon?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

289 Issues at the end of each lesson.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1344400/issues-at-the-end-of-each-lesson>

pepe.loguz 25 13 4

Quick question. For some reason, after I complete a lesson, duolingo freezes, does not collect my points, and takes me to the home page. I think it might have to do with my connection, but I'm not sure. It's been going on for a while now. Is anyone else experiencing this problem? Or has in the past?

I go through the lesson and everything works fine. It's the very last state, when I complete the last task, it then "freezes" and takes me to the home page.

Any other feedback is welcome.

Give Lingot
63 years ago

Leave a new comment
20 Comments

HansButenschon 12

This has happened to me several times over the last few days. Always when I am practicing, using "Strengthen skills". Kind of demotivating, not because of the XPs, but hate having to do the exercise several times.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BizarreBoy 13

Still still happens every now and then. Seriously, Duo.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eandmik 13 12 8 4 3

This happens to me almost every time I choose "test out" for different German skills. It's extremely frustrating.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Cameronmbeer 13 2

I experience it every once in A while I have no idea why.?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pepe.loguz 25 13 4

Do you happen to have an IP blocker/generator installed on your computer? I figured out a program called Hotspotshield was the reason I was having issues.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Alelu25 13 11

I have this issue too. Usually in the last stage. It's very annoying and sometimes happens three times in a row. I have not installed any IP blocker/generator program and my internet connection is fine. By the way, I use Chrome, so maybe the solution is switching the browser or use the smartphone.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Magycmyste 14 5 3 2 22

I occasionally have this problem, and I'm on cable internet. I'm decent with computer networking, but I've never used (or understood) a proxy. Unless a router for wireless networking and internet counts.

ETA: When it freezes for me, it's always when I hit "check" on the last frame of the lesson, and it just freezes. The only way to move from the page is to refresh, at which point it starts the lesson over.

Not that I couldn't benefit from repeating the idiom lesson, but I'd rather do it when I intend to, and still get the experience from the first time around.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nahelmar 7 3

For me using the mouse to click check button in stead of pressing Enter solved the problem. Try it for yourselves maybe it works

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bharidi 11 10 8 2

Thanks for the advice, I'll test it. Hopefully it works.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

maltalef 14

seemed to work for me just now, thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bharidi 11 10 8 2

Yes, it happens to me at least one time every day! It's so frustrating.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

maltalef 14

Something similar happens to me with 100% consistency. whenever I test out a german skill and I still have a couple lessons left, Duolingo does that (skips the last question going back to the main page without any message, reward or progress whatsoever). It's as if I've cancelled the test. Right after that though I can do the same test again and it does work.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

Are you behind a proxy or an otherwise non-standard Internet connection (such as satellite)?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pepe.loguz 25 13 4

I believe it's a non-standard internet connection. I am a university student, so I need to log on to a university network before having internet access. Do you think that might be the problem? I'm not sure what a proxy is.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

Does it sometimes work in that connection or never?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pepe.loguz 25 13 4

It used to work just fine. Over the past few weeks, it has not been very consistent. I need to try at different times of the day for it to work normally. I've managed to keep my streak by trying at various times during the day. At some point, I will work, but I never know when. I haven't figured out what makes the difference. What I find interesting is that it runs normally throughout the whole lesson, but it is at the very end when it stops working. The last step freezes and takes me back to the home screen.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pepe.loguz 25 13 4

Hey Luis, I identified the issue. A few weeks ago, I installed a program called Hotspotshield (to watch TV shows outside of the USA). Even when it was "deactivated" it somehow messed with my internet connection. I uninstalled it 3 days ago and Duolingo is running smoothly and normally. I guess if other people run into a similar issue, we know what the problem might be.

By the way, congratulations on being Apples' App of the Year. Well deserved man. I highly respect your work.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

Thank you for letting us know!

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

HanielRodriguez 17 9 5 5 5

Which browser are you using? because I had that problem while using Firefox, now I'm on Chrome and it works perfectly.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pepe.loguz 25 13 4

thanks for the reply man. Yeah, I'm also using Chrome.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

290 "The girl drinks water."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/863683>

Translation: La niña bebe agua.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

61 Comments

phyphyphy 4

What's the difference between bebe,bebes,bebo?

29ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

HenriMarti 10 9 8 4

El/Ella bebe, Tu bebes Yo bebo

19ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hazel90 5

This was excellent lol thank you!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Kennedyj-b 11

What's the difference between toma and bebe?

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

miravetech 14 12 7 5 4 3

En México, no hay diferencia alguna entre "tomar agua" y "beber agua". Aunque "tomar agua" puede tener otros significados además de "ingerir agua". Un ejemplo puede ser: "Él toma agua del río para asear su habitación".

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

lpr504 11 10 2

Tomar means to take. It would be like going to a bar and saying I'll take a beer. Primarily used in Spain. In Latin America they tend to use Beber.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ABramSN 4

Its fun

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bubolzichael

whats wrong with ella nina bebe agua

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZenkaVicelle 7 3

because ella means "she". the sentence states "the girl". if you will translate ella nina bebe agua, it will mean "she girl drinks water"

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

The_Art 11 4 2

What you tlkg about

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fernandoarg 16 15 11 11 8 2

If you want to say "La niña bebe agua", it would be "The girl drinks water". In Spanish "la" is an article (the), and "ella" is a pronoun (she).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sashashines

I am soo excited to learn spanish

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HOLA23HELLO 2

What's the difference between la agua and el agua? And when she says la agua it sounds like there is no la it's just agua

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Denji95 8 6 2

"El agua" is one exception and "La agua" does not exist. Normally nouns ending with "-a" have "La" but agua not.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

miravetech 14 12 7 5 4 3

Son excepciones en la concordancia entre el artículo y el sustantivo o adjetivo cuando una palabra grave empieza con el sonido "a". El aula, el agua, el hacha, el alba, etc.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

vinodkaushik

Enlish word 'Aqua' and Spanish word 'Agua' ...wow.. easy to learn

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

poudel01 6

What is wrong with the sentence: "La nina bebe el agua."

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rspreng 24

My guess: She is not drinking any particular water, just water. If it were "the water from the well" it would have an article, I think. At least that is what others have suggested.

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mp_casteel 5

Also wouldn't it be "la agua"? as agua is feminine?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SkyeChung 2

Water is an exception. You just have to memorize it as el agua

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ashley_furr 5

Thank you for this clarification!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElectricRainbowX 2

There is no el

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Melysaardiyanti 9 7 4 2

El agua : the water :-D

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

day1690 2

You need a "ñ" in niña and take the "el" out

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sohong.lee 5

I think, the word 'el' which u typed infront of 'agua' is only described for human or subject...?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

overwolf
Its not right

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RidgeVie 6
I am asking the same thing
0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

elijah0003
no el in the sentence

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

baosheng 3
could i write la niña bebes agua or la niña bebo agua?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

huayingjie 7 3 2
bebo is for 1st person (yo), bebes is for 2nd person (Tu), for third person (ella) you should use bebe.

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

khvann
Beverly means drinks? I don't understand. Sounds like you're saying "she" water??

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

khvann
Spanish for drinks???

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Melysaardiyanti 9 7 4 2
Bebe

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bernadette158
Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nikitamxo 8
[deleted]

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

AnkitSpanish 11

Ella is 'she'

In this sentence it is 'la nina' which means 'the girl'

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Gladiator627 2

no idea i just got confused on the accent

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SamanthaSi844102 13

I wrote "el agua" too. I know there is no article in the sentence to translate, but it was my understanding that often native Spanish speakers would use articles where native English speakers would not.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Nsjhhrj 10

That is what I did

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AnkitSpanish 11

Yes they would but not always. This site would in most cases make literally perfect translations. You don't need to literally translate everything as it is while talking with someone. People would normally understand you. Again it would come with practice

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

googoogajoob 13 12 6

la nena? whats that I thought it was la nina?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RidgeVie 6

Its not fair i put la insted of usted what the diffrence!!!!???????

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

squeakymarm 2

I didn't say la chica toma agua

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Outtoeat 4

I like to sing about my favorite trucks as I take showers in the evening :) I am currently a weaboo at the naruto academy and i need tips in order to pass my Chunin exams can anyone help me reach hokage faster.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

indielee

what i don't get this

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

MomandDad4Life 3

bebe means baby

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

MomandDad4Life 3

bebes means babies bebo means i drink

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

JarJarBinks09 2

i wove apple

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

kb2244 6 2

why can't be una nina?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Salkey-Dep

i cant write this

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

Salkey-Dep

it wont let me write this

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

jaimeluisroca88 8 2

isnt toman the same as beben

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

colourpearl 3

I couldn't understand the differences.. Could someone write the sentences for differences? Thanks.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AnkitSpanish 11

Could you please elaborate or explain properly what you didn't understand?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Janiah2 2

I got el wrong

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sashashines

spanish

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JaredScott2 6

Why is this so friggin hard...

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HOLA23HELLO 2

I got el wrong too

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GRIFFINCON2 6

It's weird. I made one about it. I have answers but, it's too hard to type

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

GRIFFINCON2 6

Never mind. I accidently deleted it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

291 Uso de in the, on the e at the
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/83375>

liliangm 10

Quando usar numa frase o "in the", o "on the" e o "at the" como sendo na/no?

Give Lingot

24 years ago

Leave a new comment

25 Comments

WiltonPM 15 10 6 5

Você usa in para lugares fechados como (in a build, in a car, in a box). O at para pontos específicos (at the door, at the corner, at the bus stop). e o ON para superfícies (on the floor, on the wall).

50ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

oricardo85 14

Muito boa, e simples tua explicação. Obrigado, é disso que precisamos.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Meuik 14

Obrigado! :B

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

GabrielGDL 8

tanks brow

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

liliangm 10

TKS!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JoaquimJr53 17

thanks.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

alessandro2015 12

obrigado!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Xikinho 10

Muito grato pelo lembrete!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Anderson.c2010 11

thanks! esclareceu minha duvida.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EnyFeliz 15

nao é só isso..... no inicio viamos: the horse in this field..... the dog is on the grass.....
ambos estão SOBRE um lugar.... seja o campo ou a grama.... de modo que ... complica....

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

antlane 24 22 18 85

in tem um sentido de dentro: the water is in the bottle.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

antlane 24 22 18 85

Use AT 1) para falar as horas at 6:30 (às 6:30) . 2) com pontos de tempo do dia at midnight (à meia-noite) at noon (ao meio-dia) at dawn (de madrugada, ao amanhecer) at sunset (ao pôr do sol) . 3) com feriados at Easter (na páscoa) at Christmas (no Natal) . Use IN 1) com partes do dia in the morning (de manhã) in the afternoon (de tarde) in the evening (de noite) excessão -> at night (de noite) . 2) com meses, estações, anos e séculos in May (em maio) in the summer (no verão) in 2004 (em 2004) . Use ON 1) com dias da semana e dias específicos on 29th July (em 29 de julho) on Monday (na segunda-feira) on Sunday (no domingo) . 2) com weekend (fim de semana) What do you usually do on weekends? (O que você costuma fazer nos finais de semana?)

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Xikinho 10

È, agente tem que colocar a cabeça em prática e decorar as regras e lembrar! Hum! Mas se ficarmos nas discussões e nas comunicações desta forma, aprenderemos! Um amigo reforça o outro adicionando esses lembretes. Grato por lembrar-nos e que não paremos por aqui...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

oricardo85 14

Muito bom! esclarecedor.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PedroAgora 12

isso é uma desgraça mesmo

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Meuik 14

Tenho a mesma duvida.=s

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

CristianoRank 8 4

Me esclareceu muito!! Tank you so much!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Preguica 21

É difícil saber quando empregar (in.on,ou at) talvez agora consiga.O brigado.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Xikinho 10

È só seguir a regra e treinar, my dear! Go!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lucasribeiro1990 13 2

Complementando a dica da "Antlane", o on usa se para quando alguma coisa tem contato físico com outra, por exemplo: The book is ON the table./ O livro está na a mesa. (em contato com a mesa) The car is ON the road. / O carro está na estrada. (sobre ou em contato com a estrada) The window is ON the wall. / A janela está na parede. (A acho que dispensa comentários, rsrs)

Alguns links interessantes para te ajudar mais ainda:

<http://www.redeinglesa.com.br/2013/02/preposicoes-in-on-at.html>

<http://www.mundoeducacao.com/ingles/in-on-at.htm>

<http://www.englishtown.com.br/blog/preposicoes-em-ingles-in-on-at/>

Agora é só pesquisar por "prepositions exercices" e praticar!

Bye!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

oricardo85 14

Obrigado pelas dicas, vou pesquisar os links, sim. Valeu!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

joaoferraro07 20

muito boa explicação

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kvnallen 21

Eu vejo o ON como sobre, no exemplo : The bird's on the garden (sobre o jardim) não ficaria muito legal, estão eu ja vejo como IN (está no/dentro do jardim) e o uso do AT quando se faz algo, exemplo : I'm at work, eu não poderia utilizar o IN pois eu não estou dentro do trabalho, nem o ON porque não estou sobre, mas sim o AT que eu uso onde se faz alguma coisa.

Espero que ajude vocês com essa minha regrinha, não sei também se estou 100% certo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

292 The Simpsons in Portuguese

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8294894>

richardhawt 17 12 7 5

<http://www.animesfox-br.org/2014/06/os-simpsons-todas-as-temporadas-dublado.html>

Go ahead Simpsons lovers!

Give Lingot3

211 year ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

MikaelMello 25 25 20 10 6 5 5 5

Porco-aranha, porco-aranha (8)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

..BATMAN.. 16 12 2

Bartman

=)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

K_10 19 5

Obrigado, estou aprendendo portugues, isso vai ajudar o meu muito. saude!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Chejo_LR 16

muito obrigado!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rrivera_sv 17 15 13 10 8

Muito obrigado pela informacao!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

293 "We will have called the police. "

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1083310>

Translation: Habremos llamado a la policía.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

55 Comments

Ruben28 25 12 11 10 4 4 2 634

Por ejemplo, "Antes de que se de cuenta habremos llamado a la policía"

20ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

XtremeVnzla 20

Exacto, los tiempos que terminan en "perfecto" Son para eso para condicionar algo que ya hemos dicho o que diremos, por eso son perfectos... Siempre van acompañado con un predicado más largo.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alejandrolarh 12

Me podrías explicar mas acerca del tema, parece que tu sabes demasiado acerca del tema. Saludos.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

pichucoduolingo 19 17 2

El significado de la frase es algo así como "Probablemente nosotros habremos llamado a la policía" o es "Para ese entonces nosotros habremos llamado a la policía"? Notese que no puse la frase exacta, pero se usa la misma construcción pero tiene dos significados diferentes. Desde ya muchas gracias.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jose Luis.b448120 14

Si el ingles es mas facil que el español ,no entiendo como aprendi español

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MariaChala 13

Para es algo muy extraño hablar de futuro en pasado aunque en algunos casos nuestro pasado determina nuestro futuro.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MUnIZANTONIO 14 8 6 6 2

we'll have already called the police when you'll be trying to steal us our wallets? could be correct my sentence?, if it is correct in this way I think that this have to have sense :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FranciscoR344463 11

Yo entiendo called es llamado porque como corrige hablado seria talked

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FranciscoR344463 11

Nosotros hubieramos llamado a la policia. No es valido?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago robertonomar 12 10 5 2

we would have called the police

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Straad 15 250

"Habremos llamado al policía" porqués es incorrecto?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Nefertari305 19 9 9 8 6 267

Porque "the police" significa "la policía" como institución. Si se refiriera a un policía en particular sería "police man - police woman".

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Straad 15 250

Thanks Nefertari305

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Nefertari305 19 9 9 8 6 267

No hay de qué. :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Dannyjoli 16

Hubieramos....se escucha mejor

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

robertonomar 12 10 5 2

Hubiéramos está en condicional, y por tanto debe haber un condicionante para haber llamado a la policía; en cualquier caso, el verbo tendría que haber sido "would have called".

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

JAVIER399697 25 182

¿ Alguien sabría decirme como distinguir los sonidos " Will y Would " ? Cuando los escucho "Lento" no hay ningún problema pero en "Normal" no encuentro diferencia alguna. De antemano, gracias...

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

alexivilla 14 5 3

un aporte. Se usa el futuro perfecto para acciones que ya se han terminado antes de otra acción en el futuro. También, se puede usar para expresar que algo va a suceder antes de un momento específico en el futuro.

Ejemplos:

<pre>I'll have finished my studies before I start my new job. (Habré terminado mis estudios antes de comenzar mi nuevo trabajo.) Is Mike going to have trained enough before his first game? (¿Mike habrá entrenado lo suficiente antes de su primer partido?) We won't have become fluent in Spanish by the time we leave for Mexico next month. (No vamos a tener fluidez en español antes de irnos a México el mes que viene.) </pre>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

alexivilla 14 5 3

I'll have finished my studies before I start my new job. (Habré terminado mis estudios antes de comenzar mi nuevo trabajo.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

alexivilla 14 5 3

Is Mike going to have trained enough before his first game? (¿Mike habrá entrenado lo suficiente antes de su primer partido?)

We won't have become fluent in Spanish by the time we leave for Mexico next month. (No vamos a tener fluidez en español antes de irnos a México el mes que viene.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

jjcordobam 11

hola ayudare en algo miren esto es lo que se supone significa <http://www.inglessencillo.com/futuro-perfecto>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ChristianS458266 11 10 3

La frase en si no tiene sentido en español o no se usa en la actualidad

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

robertonomar 12 10 5 2

Puede. Pero la frase adolece de falta de una segunda acción para que tenga sentido. El futuro perfecto se emplea para hacer referencia a una acción que habrá terminado al llegar a un determinado momento en el futuro.

"Somebody broke into our house; by the time we arrive home, my brother will have called the police".

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

LuDo520907 11 7

Soy argentina y no veo por qué es incorrecta mi respuesta: "Nosotros vamos a haber llamado a la policía". En Argentina lo diríamos de esa forma y usamos más "llamar" que "hablar" cuando se refiere a una comunicación telefónica.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Naturfrito 14 35

Soy Argentino y generalizar lo que se dice en todo el país no está bien. Tu frase me suena muy mal (independientemente de si es correcta o no). Creo que no todos utilizarían tu frase, no confundamos a los demás :).

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

robertonomar 12 10 5 2

Lo siento, pero esa forma es gramaticalmente incorrecta. "Ir a haber llamado" no es español, con todos mis respetos.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

JacqueBal 14

Porque en este tema el verbo esta en pasado?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Juan-Martines 15 8 6 6 3 2 1

Por que asi lo indica la frase y la palabra -llamado- en inglés es -called-

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MarioGregorio 13

Los tiempos como presente perfecto, pasado perfecto y en este caso futuro perfecto el verbo se utiliza conjugado en pasado participio.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sagerbaf 13

Habremos en España no se usa habitualmente, no se que significa en esta frase

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Highways 16 16 16 16 14 14 3 3

¡¿Cómo que no?!

Ruben28 puso un buen ejemplo: "Antes de que se de cuenta habremos llamado a la policía".

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JuanitaMar558873 24 16 9 289

excelente... Duolingo es como que pone la frase inconclusa. Pero se entiende...

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Rolomedina2 10 10 7 6

Esra mefio mal la app para español. Llamemos a la police para quejarnos

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

mamifero 12

"nosotros tendríamos que haber llamado a la policía", es lo más cercano en cuanto a sentido, ya que en si misma no le encuentro sentido a la frase

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

leolucasledesma 19 6

En ese caso usarías "had to".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

carloscarmona216 14 3 2

Esta oración sólo es posible utilizarla en la forma interrogativa. Pues de hecho, si decimos "habremos llamado" no puede haber duda. El punto es que sólo podemos decir: "we will have called the police?"

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pichucoduolingo 19 17 2

Podemos decir "Para ese entonces nosotros habremos llamado a la policía". Eso no es una frase interrogativa, sin embargo funciona y es correcta.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Omega.exian 11

Como que falta un trozo de oracion para que tenga sentido en español, we will have to called the police, or i calledl a wrong number?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

maria_mach 11 9

Marcado era una palabra igual de valida que llamada y no me la tomo como buena :(

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

phercc 11 2

Nosotros pudimos haber hablado a la policia esta mal?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

RaulAntoni20 11

En español no decimos así

-3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

makerdesign 21 11 8 7

para mi si lo tiene. no está tan claro porque le falta un contexto: "para cuando logren entrar, habremos llamado a la policía"

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

juniorluis4 25 10 10 10 10 9 9 9 9 9 8 8 7

tenemos que llamar a la policia si no es buena que alguien me explique

-3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

robertonomar 12 10 5 2

"Tenemos que llamar a la policía" puede traducirse como "We MUST call the police", "we HAVE TO call the police" o, incluso "we SHALL call the police", dependiendo del grado de obligación que implique el tiempo verbal "tenemos".

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

294 j' and je

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1012869>

hanna360 9

J' and je are two different concepts in French, although they have the same meaning. For example, j'aime and j'ecris mean I like/ I love and I write, while je mange une pomme rouge means I am eating a red apple

Give Lingot

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

4 Comments

invisibleteacup 23 19 14 14 13 11 6

J' and je are the same word--they both mean "I". Before a consonant, you write the full word "je," while before a vowel it is elided to "j'"

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mptmpt 25 23 21 4

There is a conceptual difference between the English present tenses (perfect and continuous) and the French present tense. Because of this differences "Je mange" can be both translated as "I eat" and "I am eating" and the difference between the two can be understood by the context (same with the rest of the examples you mention, "I write" and "I am writting", "I love" and "I am loving"). "Je" and "J'" are exactly the same thing, there is no difference in meaning, it is called elision, when "je" is in front of word starting with a vowel or non aspiring -h- then je changes to j' but there is no difference in the meaning.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sebas90 17 17 16 14 11 10 8 8 8 6 6 3

The difference between "J' and Je" is mostly an aesthetical aspect (mandatory and part of french grammar of course). The main difference is that J' goes with words that start with vocals or mute "h".

Si tu dis: J'aime, ça serait "I love" tant que si tu dis "Je mange" ça serait "I eat" juste comment tu as dit :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hanna360 9

You are all right. Merci!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

295 Le/Les/Lui/Leur/Eux/Elles: Different Types of Object Pronouns

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1124712>

DXLi 25 3 1258

I got bogged down by the difference between le and lui, so I figured I'd share the difference to save others some time. Simply put, object pronouns are either for direct objects or for indirect objects.

A direct object is the thing being acted upon. When you love Bob, Bob is the direct object.

An indirect object is something you do the action to or for. When you throw a ball to Bob, Bob is the indirect object (and the ball is the direct object). Generally, in English, indirect objects need a preposition while direct objects don't.

It's pretty easy once you figure that out. Only the third-person object pronouns change between direct and indirect forms.

Direct object pronouns: me | te | le/la | nous | vous | les

Indirect object pronouns: me | te | lui | nous | vous | leur

For instance, in the case of les vs leur, les is a direct object, while leur is an indirect object.

Direct: "Je les aime" = "I love them"

Indirect: "Je leur donne la photo" = "I gave the photo to them"

FYI, lui and leur should only be used for animate objects (people and animals). For anything else, use y.

[<http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/directobjects.htm>]

[<http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/indirectobjects.htm>]

There are also stressed pronouns (or disjunctive pronouns). These emphasize a pronoun or follow prepositions.

Stressed pronouns: moi | toi | lui/elle | soi (oneself) | nous | vous | eux/elles.

Lui/eux are masculine and elle/elles are feminine.

These are more complicated, but are usually used in the following situations:

Emphasizing a pronoun.

Affirmative imperative sentences. "Show me" = "montrez-moi".

When asking or answering questions.

After prepositions. "In/to her house" is "chez elle" because chez is a special preposition.

With emphatic words like aussi. Moi aussi.

[http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/pronouns_stressed.htm]

There's just one more object pronoun: the reflexive pronoun, se. This is used with all third-person pronominal verbs (see link). Reflexive pronouns are the same as direct object pronouns except in the third-person.

Reflexive pronouns: me / te / se / nous / vous / se

Se becomes s' in front of vowels and mute H's.

[<http://www.duolingo.com/comment/1269549>]

Give Lingot26
1053 years ago

Leave a new comment
18 Comments

Goim 11 9 9 8 8 7 6 3
Für alle Deutschsprachigen:

Versucht einfach, dieses Konzept vom Deutschen aus zu begreifen, die Englischsprachler haben in ihrer Grammatik keine Unterscheidung dieser Objekte, wir schon ;D

Das direkte Objekt ist das Akkusativobjekt. Wen oder was liebe / werfe ich? // 4. Fall

Das indirekte Objekt ist das Dativobjekt. Wem werfe ich etwas zu? // 3. Fall Wenn man also im Deutschen den Dativ / den 3. Fall nutzen würde, verwendet man lui und leur, nutzte man hingegen im Deutschen den Akkusativ / den 4. Fall, so sind le, la oder les notwendig.

LG René =)

13ReplyGive Lingot3•3 years ago

MardukSky 24 24 23 21 19 17 16 12 12 11 10 7 6 37
I am native Spanish speaker, and thanks to Duolingo, I could not just understand what you wrote, but also I know that this part of the grammar is easier to learn to german speakers because of the for cases and you have them very well identified. Merci pour cette information, und danke dir Mein Herr.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Goim 11 9 9 8 8 7 6 3
Gerngeschehen =)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7
Very well done, thanks!

7ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

sebasm90 17 17 16 14 11 10 8 8 8 6 6 3
This is quite useful, I had my fair share of headaches while trying to learn this some months ago, I'm sure a lot of people will appreciate :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

windswept 25 11 7 8 3
Thanks for a detailed and clear explanation of something that confuses me sometimes

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gabriel.ta13 25
Merci beaucoup!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fluffychirp 15 6 5 4
Merci beaucoup! This helped so much. :D I tried googling the difference between these pronouns but all the explanations were so confusing. But this explains everything really clearly and simply. I finally know when to use these pronouns, and the difference between a direct and indirect object. Thanks again :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jolynnedougherty 25 19 14 8 5 45
This is just beautiful. Thank you for putting it all together in one place.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

joerouch 19 15 3
I realize that you posted this a year ago, but just wanted to say thanks. It helps a lot.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Javiersr 12 10 4 19
Wow, I started to learn this yesterday and you explain it here very clear. So helpful!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

slacker822 23 21 10 8 219
I have the impression that this is wrong: Affirmative imperative sentences. "Show me" = "montrez-moi". If it was elle, it would be "montrez-lui", not "montrez-elle". Those are still indirect object pronouns, but me becomes moi and te becomes toi in imperative sentences.

http://french.about.com/od/grammar/a/imperative_3.htm (point 3).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Amgad 21 12
Take my lingot!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DreamtSound 17 6 4 2
Merci beaucoup ! Pronouns are my most hated and toughest lesson! But your interpretation is so good! I finally understand it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KitKat5193 3 2

thank you!!!! the subject was so confusing i just kept getting everthing wrong!!!! you just saved me alotless confusion!!!!!!;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ebenoit 9

Really great, thanks heaps!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

u.g0t.th1s 17 15 15 13 13 3 3 2

Is leurs an object pronoun as well? Or is it a possessive (pronoun)? Merci!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

"leurs" is the plural possessive adjective for ils/elles as owners (their + plural noun).

"les leurs" is the plural possessive pronoun for ils/elles as well (theirs)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

296 Any tips for differentiating between conditional and future tenses (while speaking, listening)?
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8554512>

Monsieur_Jon 22 10 6

I have a hard time hearing and speaking the difference between the future and conditional tenses. Knowing when to use them is not a problem.

Thanks in advance!

Give Lingot

41 year ago

Leave a new comment

6 Comments

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 687

I've learned very recently that Europeans don't pronounce the difference between them at all, which baffled me (a French Canadian native), because we do, and very clearly! We pronounce the future of the first person (-ai) as é and the conditional of the first three (the singular ones : -ais, -ais and -ait) as è. The Europeans, depending on the region, will pronounce both as either é or è. So if you're talking to someone from France, Belgium, Switzerland, or someone who learned Parisian French, only context will tell you which verb tense it is.

6ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Monsieur_Jon 22 10 6

Thanks a lot for the reply! My girlfriend is from France, but she studied in Montreal for a few years and insisted they are pronounced differently. She tried saying "je voudrais, je voudrai" repeatedly for me to learn the difference, but I couldn't hear it well. Your explanation using the è and é sounds was incredibly helpful, and it's good to know in Europe that they don't pronounce it anyway!

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AmirLFC 17 16 12 11 3 445

Wow, I didn't know Canadians pronounce them differently... I guess that makes life easier :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 687

I guess that makes life easier

Indeed! At least less ambiguous! ;-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Gavier 24 13 3 1171

Yes I believe they generally sound the same for the first person (depending on region accent etc) I watch quite a bit of Canadian French on TV and had noticed they pronounce them differently. Of course this only applies to the first person as they are quite different in all other cases - il voudra/il voudrait, vous voudrez/vous voudriez etc..

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TeoTN 20 10 9 24

I think that you can test it here: <https://www.ivona.com/us/> you can hear a difference in "je voudrais, je voudrai" both listening to French by Celine and Mathieu.

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

297 Is Italian the easiest among the Romance?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/9299956>

might.E 7

So, I've heard a rumor that Italian is the easiest language to learn among the Romance languages. Some people say that compared to Spanish it is more beautiful than Spanish which they said to be "mushier". Personally I don't like how Spanish sounds because of its old fashioned-ish sound. I'm totally confuse right now. Spanish holds more speaker than Italian though.

Portuguese has its own charisma it's like the sister of Spanish. French though the most romantic language for me is slightly hard to learn (there are many rules and exceptions).

Give Lingot

271 year ago

Leave a new comment

35 Comments

smarinov 19 18 16 14 10 8 8 7 6 4 47

Well, the short answer is that it depends on what languages you already know.

For instance, Romanian was seriously influenced by other Balkan languages and shares many peculiarities with them, cf. Balkan sprachbund, so as a native speaker of Bulgarian I am finding it significantly easier than French, Italian and Spanish, all of which I have studied before.

That being said, I found the lack of the grave and circumflex accents in Spanish significantly more encouraging than their presence in French (very frequent) and Italian (less frequent). What is more, although I have been listening to loads of French music for a couple of years now, I still find it challenging to connect pronunciations of words with their respective written forms. However, as an English speaker I find exactly this language the easiest to comprehend while reading since a lot of the "fancier" English words are written and pronounced just as they are in French, so you will find out that you already know a lot of words that are sometimes harder to recognise in Spanish or Italian the first time you see them (but you easily get used to those).

I have been studying Italian the least time of those four, but I have recently started to personally find it more appealing than French and Spanish, and almost equally as much as Romanian (which I adore).

In general, I have found the verb tenses the most confusing part of all Romance languages and I am yet to really get used to them in any. My advice would be to continue trying them all out on Duolingo and to stretch out to other resources in order to see which one of them would appeal the most to you. For instance, free videos on YouTube and newschannels give you a good idea about how any of those languages sound like in real life and will help you decide which language(s) is/are the best fit for you. Every language has its quirks and it's important that you absolutely love it in order to have good results.

Sorry for the long answer but I couldn't keep it shorter. :D

27ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kreilyn 25 20 14 13 11 10 9 6 6 4 3 3

I am a Spanish speaker and I really find pretty difficult the Italian verb tenses, but pronunciation is very close to ours, because in that language (Italian) you do pronounce all the words. French, on the other hand, is pretty difficult to read for a Spanish speaker, but (at least in my country) it is mandatory in schools, so people will prefer to learn French.

Personally, I prefer Italian, but I don't know why..! And talking about Spanish, we have to keep in mind, there are too many countries with this language as principal, and it just means you will also listen too many accents, the Caribbean one for example is completely different from the south American one, but we understand us well (hahaha!), even you won't understand some words (colloquialisms)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cherub721 17 16 15 15 15 6 6 3 1135

I think the easiest language to learn is the one you're most interested in, and the hardest is the one you don't have any passion to learn. ;)

I feel like a lot of people assume speaking Italian is just saying "ciao!" and "pizza" and something like this <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9JhuOicPFZY>

IMO, a lot of people say Italian is easier because French and Spanish are more likely to be taught in schools, so the person who tries to learn Italian as an adult has an easier time having experienced another romance language. I learned Italian before I started studying French, so French was easier to learn for me, but it wouldn't be fair of me to then go around saying French is the easiest. Personally, French pronunciation and orthography make it very difficult for me, but having knowledge of Italian helped.

Another factor could be that Italians are said to be more forgiving to tourists who attempt Italian than in, say, France, so you can get by with a lower level of Italian, making learners feel more fluent and that learning and using it was "easier." I'm not sure what the stereotypes are for tourists speaking in Latin America and Spain, but I could see people thinking Spanish is harder because they learned one version and then traveled to a country speaking a slightly different version and had a difficult time communicating. In Italy, there are dialects, but people are educated and consume media in standard Italian.

IMO, Italian may be easier to dabble in but is difficult to learn to speak very well.

I'm not trying to prove it's the hardest, I just hate it when people assume it's super easy.

Just on the basic level, there are more articles than in Spanish, and making plurals is more complicated than just adding s (as in most French and Spanish words). Italian has irregular nouns that switch gender in the plural. Use of "ne" and "ci" is difficult for learners (Spanish doesn't have pronominal adverbs, afaik).

Italian spelling is much easier than French, IMO, but the double consonants and vowels can make it trickier than you'd think, and you can't always tell where the stress is in a conjugated verb.

Some facts about Italian grammar: Italian has three types of tenses – simple, compound, and indefinite.

There are also various moods that combine to take tense forms – four subjunctive moods, two conditional moods, two gerund moods, two infinite moods, two participle moods and one imperative mood.

There are eight tenses in the indicative mood – recent past, remote pluperfect, recent pluperfect, preterite (remote past), imperfect, present, future, future perfect. There are four tenses in the subjunctive mood – present, imperfect, preterite and pluperfect. There are two tenses in the conditional mood – present and preterite. There is only one tense in the imperative mood – present. Gerund, participle and infinite moods all take only present and perfect tenses.

Altogether, using these mood-tense combinations, any Italian verb can decline in up to 21 different ways.

Also, there are 600 irregular verbs with all sorts of different irregularities.

Here's a discussion I found interesting: <http://www.antimoon.com/forum/t14350-0.htm>

20ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

stefo93 11

I'm scared now :(

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Susanna35 25 20 17

Glad I didn't know all that before I started studying Italian! There are some constructs that I keep missing out on, and I think that if I were to take a college course in Italian, (or some kind of professional course), I'd have a lot of questions like "How do I know when this construct is right, and when that one is right?" Sometimes I think I've figured something out, then the next time I come up against it, I figure wrong!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7

If it can be an indication, the people who speak French the best are from Portugal (with no accent) and Italy (sometimes a "singing" intonation). To my understanding, this should indicate where the easiest connections are made.

19ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Taloua 25 25 25 25 825

In my opinion, it's Spanish

17ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

voxlashon 24 20 14 11 6 5 4 3

Same here.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Monsieur_Bovary 17 16 15 12 12 11 6 160

As a native Italian speaker with a basic knowledge of English, Spanish and Portuguese, I'd say our language has a pretty clear spelling and clear-cut sounds, which are generally easy to grasp; yet our verbal system can be sort of a nightmare when compared, for instance, to the English one... so many tenses and moods, and believe it or not, a LOT of native speakers struggle with using them properly. To be fair to my fellow country people, I must also acknowledge that, as cherub721 points out, we are usually forgiving to anyone who tries to speak Italian, as we know it is not as widely taught as, for example, Spanish or French. Thank you all for sharing your opinions on Italian as a foreign language :-)

17ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RLaurier 13 11

I'm very impressed with your "basic knowledge" of English. I'd be very happy to have my knowledge of any foreign language be as basic as your English, especially when you put up posts which are indistinguishable from those of native speakers. Well done.

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Monsieur_Bovary 17 16 15 12 12 11 6 160

Thanks! But my reading and writing skills are far better than my speaking ones ;-)

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]
[deleted]

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

Monsieur_Bovary 17 16 15 12 12 11 6 160
Thank you! But my speaking skills are FAR from perfect... ;-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wyqtor 16 15 13 13 13 13 12 12 11 11 11 11 10 9 9 9 8 7 7 4 4 2 2 803
For me, Spanish is easier, I don't know why exactly. My native language is Romanian, which is actually a bit closer to Italian than Spanish. I always found that to be a bit odd.

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vvkrastev 25 25 25 25 24 16 15 15 15 12 9 8 8 8 8 8 6 6 5 4 4 3 3 2 1182
Sooner or later every language gets difficult. Depends on when you want to hit your first big wall. All of this assumes you're fluent in English as your primary language and have no other fluency. I'm specifically discussing the four Romance languages available today on Duolingo.

The first big roadblock is noun gender. All Romance languages have it and English doesn't. If you can't get past that it's going to be rough going. Portuguese and Spanish are probably the easiest in that respect - the noun gender rules are straight forward and you can usually tell what the gender of a noun is by its spelling or meaning. Italian is close behind, but Italian also does its own thing with plurals that can throw you off if you're not careful - figlio/figlia/figli/figlie = son/daughter/sons/daughters. French is on its own. A year and a half into studying it I still can't keep noun gender straight.

Once you get past noun gender you will hit difficult stretches at some point in every one of those languages.

Spanish might not sound pretty, but in overall usage comes probably closest to English. You can do a straight parse - a word for word translation - from English to Spanish more often than in the other languages and come out with a sensible meaning. One awesome amazing thing about Spanish: it combines most meanings of "of" and "from" into a single preposition - "de". Usage of prepositions and adverbs is one of the hardest things in learning any language. They all have to be memorized on a case by case basis. The fact that you don't have to differentiate between them is just kittens - especially when compared to the other languages. The verb tenses are also much closer to the ones in English than in other Romance languages. You can make a distinction between "I play", "I am playing", "I played", "I have played", and "I was playing" - that's not universally the case in common usage in the other Romance languages.

Now the Spanish downsides. There are a ton of irregular verbs. The irregular verbs tend to have patterns and once you get a feel for the sound of the language it gets easier - they tend to make sense phonetically. If you can get past the irregular verbs you'll be OK for a while - until you hit the big Spanish sadface. The Subjunctive mood in Spanish is so complicated and so nuanced Duolingo doesn't even try to teach it seriously. (essentially, saying "If I were a rich man...") Luis himself said he just wants to expose people to the concept but teaching it in detail is way beyond the scope of the Duolingo course. If you're aiming for tourist level Spanish you can get by without Subjunctive though.

Portuguese and Spanish are so close to each other, they can almost be called different dialects of the same language. The pluses and minuses of the languages are largely the same. Portuguese pronunciation is just a bit less phonetic than Spanish. Verb tenses at the beginner level are the same. The same qualities of Portuguese that make it sound a bit less rough than Spanish can also make it a bit unclear exactly what's happening at times. For example, the word 'a' and the various accent marks placed over it can give it a whole variety of meanings. Finally, the Brazilian Portuguese that Duolingo teaches uses the polite 'you' form in almost every circumstance. That can make it hard to distinguish without context between 'you' and 'he/she' due to the overlap in conjugation and pronoun structure.

Italian doesn't have nearly as many irregular verbs as Spanish. It has a much simpler subjunctive than Spanish. It sounds just nice - it's almost impossible to keep your hands from gesticulating as you're speaking just because it's musical and rhythmical by nature. But it has absolutely crazy pronoun rules and on the surface a simplified tense system with a ton of special cases that somehow makes it harder to remember how to say "He gave her the bag". If you're talking about an action in the past, sometimes the verb agrees with the subject, sometimes with the object and sometimes - neither. Keeping that straight is... exciting, especially at first. Italian also uses "the" in a ton of places where English doesn't - just enough to make it seem awkward. Italian has separate words for "of" and "from" which eliminates the prepositions shortcut you got in Spanish.

French is just French. Sentence structure is much different than in English. Much more so than in other Romance languages, there are many adjectives that only come before the noun, many others that only come after, and others still whose meaning changes depending on where you place them. You can write volumes on the different ways that "it" and "of" have to be used in even basic sentences. The rules for forming negatives are unique in European languages. The only reason why French spelling is easier than English spelling is that French spelling is based on only one set of writing rules that have not been thoroughly updated in centuries. Oh and everything that's hard about Italian is also in French too.

TLDR: Spanish and Italian are the easiest. There's a big hurdle up front if you haven't been exposed to noun gender. In the medium term, you'll have different challenges with each. In my opinion Spanish is a bit easier just because it's strange in ways that are closer to English. In the long term Italian wins out due to the insanity that is Subjunctive in Spanish.

13ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Susanna35 25 20 17

English nouns do have noun gender, but they don't affect anything else, so they are not necessary to learn. In fact they are quite simple - if the noun refers to a female, it's feminine; if it refers to a male, it's masculine. If it's an inanimate object, it's neuter; if it can refer to either male or female, it's common. And none of it affects grammatical usage.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

vvkrastev 25 25 25 24 16 15 15 15 12 9 8 8 8 8 8 6 6 5 4 4 3 3 2 1182

You're right. I apologize I shouldn't have been clearer - specifically I was referring to grammatical gender.

It's been over a decade since I explicitly studied any language's grammar in a classroom setting and my terminology is rusty :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Susanna35 25 20 17

No need for apology. It doesn't really matter in grammar, with the exception of the possessive pronouns - which reflect the possessor, rather than the "possession" as it is in most languages. And in most cases, when referring to non-human, the neutral "its" is acceptable.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dan.Cline 25 23 18 15 11 895

I focused on French for the past year (in part refreshing what I should have learned in school 40 years ago) and recently started Italian. So far, I'm finding that there is a closer correlation between spelling and pronunciation in Italian than in French, but on the other hand English and French seem to share more vocabulary. I suspect that if you know English and one Romance language, it speeds up the learning process for other Romance languages. In a nutshell, I think the easiest language to learn is the one you are most motivated to learn. An impending trip to Paris was a primary motivator for me with French. On the Air France flight, we listened to the safety information in multiple languages, and both my wife and I were taken by how beautiful the Italian version sounded. That, in turn, has been a primary motivator for me to learn Italian.

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

txstbobcat 25 23 13 4 917

Spanish was easier for me. I started Italian about 2 months ago and it seems to be harder for me than Spanish. A lot of the words are similar in both languages.

I do think that growing up in Texas made it easier to learn Spanish since I picked up some of the words growing up there.

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

m.tastic 25 13 11 11 8 6 5 5 2

I've had some experience with Spanish, French, Italian, and Portuguese. I just wanted to say that a language never has a "better sound" than others. It all depends on who's saying it.

And don't choose the "easiest language". Choose the one that speaks to you.

9ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

SteveLando 22 18 17 16 14 12 11 10 10 10 9 9 8 8 8 8 7 6 6 6 5 5 3 7

Most people say that Spanish is the easiest, which I agree on (Compared to Italian and French, Spanish is extremely simplified). Italian seems to have the hardest grammatics (with more left from its Latin origin than the others), but otherwise it's easy, but many people find Italian to be the hardest of the bigger Romance languages. Portuguese and French have changed a lot concerning its phonetics, but otherwise they also are easy.

If you are afraid of exceptions and grammatical rules, and exceptions from the exceptions, Italian is not the language for you:)

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rose.jane 14 11 10 8

I have very insufficient information about Spanish and Italian, for me, Spanish is easier, but surely if the other people who could speak them all (including France and Romany) may say more substantial somethings.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

smarinov 19 18 16 14 10 8 8 7 6 4 47

Just to clarify: Romania and its inhabitants (Romanians) have less to do with Romany/Roma people. Maybe the only common thing is that some Romany people form an ethnic minority in Romania, but the Romany language, in contrast to Romanian, is not a Romance language.

I am sure that you didn't want to say so, but people often confuse both, and, as this may be considered offensive by others, we ought to use the proper names for each.

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

psionpete 25 21 16 15 14 6 5 4 3 1152

I think Rose.Jane was meaning the Romanian language, which is a Romance language, rather than the Romany language (Roma).

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rose.jane 14 11 10 8

Thank you Psionpete, I was meaning the Romanian language and It is probably my typing mistake, I should say Romanian language. In addition, I'm sorry, I had no information about Romany people and their existence. Smarinov thank you too for the clarification so I could learn new information.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Medard 22 13 11 4 18

Romany people are also called gypsies...

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

josephkt 2

choose the one you like because the romance verbs are a killer in all romance languages

7ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

josephkt 2

how can you judge these things? it's basically a matter of personal opinions I've heard people say Italian is the easiest of the group some people say Spanish there is no way to truly say many people will say different things

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

slogger 25 23 22 20 14 1175

IMHO, among French, Spanish, and Italian, it seems the easiest--just a shade easier than Spanish, but I have advanced skills in none of these languages. Also, read what it says about Italian, in this regard, on HTLAL.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Resonance2001 15 11 10 5

Personally, Spanish is the easiest language I've ever tried although I do like the Romance languages.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

I have had a dramatically easier time learning French than Spanish, so I think it just goes to show that it depends on the learner (and maybe on where the learner's from).

As for which one "sounds best," that depends entirely on who's speaking. Pretty much every language has the potential to sound beautiful or to sound grotesque.

The easiest language will be whichever one you feel the most motivated to learn—that's by and far above the most important factor.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RoboticTool 8 4 4

It's the singer, not the song.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kumatangz 13 10 8 8 7 6 6 6 6 5 5 4 4 3 37

Italian is the Best

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

futureholder 11 9 6 3 1

"Beautiful languages" varies from person from person. I honestly think every language has something beautiful about it. But my personal favorites are German, Russian and English.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

298 "Stare" vs "Essere" in Italian

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/451537>

mikebelyaev 14 3 2

For me it was pretty hard to differentiate the meaning of those two verbs, because they look pretty similar. So I found this short article, which was really helpful.

<http://serenaitalian.wordpress.com/2010/09/09/difference-between-stare-and-essere/>

If you have something to add to this one, please do so, that would be really appreciated!

Give Lingot1

103 years ago

Leave a new comment
13 Comments

elgranenryke 10 10 9 8 4 4 4

Hi! I'm native of spanish, but i'm taking the lessons in english for training. I think can be useful to know the point of view of somebody that speaks a language that actually has both verbs. "stare" in spanish is "estar" and usually makes reference to be in some PLACE (here, there...) or beeing in certain WAY (happy, sad...), and the " Essere" in spanish is "ser" and that usually makes reference to be something or somebody (beeing a teacher, a person, a mother...). I hope those examples are ok (and sorry for my horrible english)... greetings from Chile!

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

Great answer elgranenryke. Grazie mille. It's strange getting lessons in Italian, via English, from a Spaniard. It shows how global DL is. I'm going to give you a Lingot, for such a good answer to something I've struggled with for ages. It also relates roughly to the difference between ARE, ERE and IRE infinitive endings. - ARE (Action verbs; ERE States - like 'esistere' - to exist; IRE (sensations. Allora. Stare (Are) to be doing something (Like walking, or being 'in a place) and Essere (Ere) to be/ exist as (e.g. a teacher, mother.) I think this is roughly right, with the usual exceptions that could fit under all 3. So I am not sure about Gilgarabi's answer later on about Stare (Are) being defined as a state!! 'State (temporary)' corresponds approximately to 'Action.' Ciao.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LoisAllen1 12

thanks for confirming what i thought. greetings from california. i have studied italian a long time ago and a little spanish more recently , and am fluent in french. this helps. grazie mille!

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

itastudent 15 14 10 9

Just to clarify for those who already learned Spanish. The use of "essere" and "stare" is not the same as in Spanish with the verbs "ser" and "estar". In some cases the uses may look similar, but in many cases it's pretty different. I suggest whoever already know Spanish to be particularly careful about how to use "essere" and "stare" in Italian.

3ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Jaachi87 5
Esatto!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Elgatobandido 25 21 18 11 9 8 5 4 3 3 2 2 2 996

Are there major differences between the uses of stare and essere in Italian and estar and ser in Spanish?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SamHansen 21 16 12 9 6 3 924

Grazie! As I was reviewing this lesson I came across "sta" and did not know what it was. It was not until after I checked my answer that I realized it was from the other form of "to be". Just as I was wondering when to use the two "to be" verbs I found this. Grazie mille!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

brinkmoney 8

Thank you...this needs to be noted natively when first educating on "stare"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Americanoh 10 8 6

I read the article, but I'm still confused on when to use stare or essere when expressing location. What's the difference? Thank you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GilGaribi 20 17 11 5 2

"stare" is for a state, usually temporary. In the example of the chair and kitchen given in the article, if we're mentioning a chair that belongs in the kitchen, and we're describing the house we will say "La sedia è in cucina" but if you are looking for a chair right now and it's usually in the saloon, and you ask someone where is it he will say "La sedia sta in cucina". That's the main idea. Of course there are many subtleties. This differentiation appears also in spanish and in french but sometimes a form which is very clear-cut in one language is the other way around in the other..

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Americanoh 10 8 6

Thank you for your help!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

renatogon 10 6 6

I am brazilian and we also have both verbs, "estar" and "ser", both of whom are translated as the english "to be" verb. I have not read the article, but I believe it will say the same thing as I am going to say. There are 3 modern latin languages that uses those verbs: portuguese, spanish and italian (the french also uses "être" for the same purpose as "to be") and I believe they both have the same purpose. Essere (ser) means to exist as a being (translated in english as "I am"). Stare (estar) means to exist as a being at the present time (also "I am"). Knowing that, the idea of saying "eu estou no parque" (I am in the park) really means "I exist in the park right now". And saying "eu estou doente" (I am sick) really means "I exist sick right now". The same applies to those verbs in spanish and in italian. In fact, both verbs are basically the same thing, they both mean "to be". The only difference is the idea of present that "estar" has.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

peter2108 25 9

stare can also mean to fit. So i miei libri non stanno nella valigia (my books won't fit in the suitcase). é troppo grande. Non ci sta nella macchina (it's too big. It will not fit in the car)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

299 First Gift: The Language Coach and Virtual Shop arrive on iOS
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1264164>

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

As many of you have noted, we just released a new version of our iPhone and iPad app with two exciting new features.

First, in the spirit of New Year's resolutions, we're introducing a brand new feature specially designed to help you meet your goals... beyond January. Players, meet your Coach.

Here's how it works: You choose a difficulty level or "track," and each day the Coach tells you how many points you'll need to earn in order to stay on that track. Once you've completed those requirements for the day, the Coach will let you rest until the following day, when you'll be able to see a brand new goal.

You can also build up a safety buffer for yourself, meaning that if you practice a little extra every day during the week, you can take the whole weekend off and still be on track! As long as you follow the Coach's daily goals, you'll reliably make your way through the course at the pace you choose.

Second, we're introducing the Shop and our virtual currency, Lingots, to iOS. As with the Web version, you earn Lingots by doing awesomely in your language learning journey.

Not all store items will be immediately available on the app, but the exciting news is that we're launching new items that will exist exclusively for iOS for now. For example, you'll be able to buy special new outfits for Duo — turns out our designers moonlight as stylists. ;)

Download the latest version of Duolingo for iOS here: <https://itunes.apple.com/app/duolingo-learn-languages-for/id570060128>

Notes:

Even though this gift is for our iOS users, we will have an Android-exclusive gift next week!

We've read the feedback about the removal of global practice when all skills are golden. We've just submitted a new release to Apple that fixes this issue, which should be available early next week. Additionally, due to popular demand, this next release will have skill practice back when the skill is at full strength.

Many people have asked what happens to their streak when turning on the coach: the answer is that the streak remains intact, except it's not as prominently shown in the app anymore.

Give Lingot
1533 years ago

Leave a new comment
137 Comments

ziggKogg 25 11 8 3 3

I only use Duolingo on my laptop, so this doesn't affect me at all huh? Bummer :(

35ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

There will be gifts for the web version too! In fact, there will be more of those.

130ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

Jack.Elliott 25 25 25 25 21 13 10 10 9 9 8 5 3 2 2 1273

Cheers thanks looking forward

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Pearlpollojam 12 9 3

Hey Luis, is there a learning advantage using DuoLingo over the web rather than utilizing the app on an iOS device?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lilygilder 11 11 10 7

In the web version you have access to the discussions which is where I always learn a lot from.

16ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

OldSpiceGuy 25 25 13 5 4

Plus timed practice and immersion

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

voidlogic 17

The web also never has word banks, so it tends to be better for your spelling. Personally, I use the mobile apps for reviewing and the web version for learning new lessons.

7ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Pearlpollojam 12 9 3

Thanks for the feedback Voidlogic, I like that idea! Going to implement it in my learning style.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CHAMPION.DUO 19 10 8 8 7 6 2

awesome! then it will be better for people who practice on desktop and laptop as well!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Hortense75 11 11 9 7

Good news, I'm sure I will enjoy these new developments. Suits are great !

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

duolingo6666666 7 2

When will their be clothes on the computer?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

azureskye 14 10 9 5 4 3 3 2 2 1

When exactly will that be expected to come out? :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Firestar1240 10 5

Really? I mean, I've been waiting for the cool costumes, but nothing after 6 MONTHS, so I'm beginning to wonder...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Zothen 11 2

One year later...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ritvik10 6

Yes!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LisaLucas 9

I hope we get this exact gift for the web version. It seems like fun.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NealBertelsen 10 6 6 6 5

Yeah, I don't know why they wouldn't include this on all versions (web, android, and iOS). Why does there need to be any difference for one operating system? Just my opinion, but I always thought creating exclusives for one system over another was just annoying. It does nothing but play mindgames with people and manipulate them into subtly "wanting" whatever the other system is, or reinforcing them that they bought one of that system. No doubt Apple pays devs to create exclusive content for their OS. Since DuoLingo is free, I suppose it's admissable, but still...just my two cents.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

Apple does not pay us for exclusives (or anything for that matter). The reality is that we simply don't have many people working at Duolingo (so we have to prioritize), and that development for features in different platforms takes different amounts of time.

31ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Pearlpollojam 12 9 3

I'd love to work for Duolingo, this project is awesome! The future is about languages! Though I wish I knew how to program, I'm going to start learning that as well... do you happen to have CodeLingo?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EoghanUttl 9

Check out codecademy

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

muitosabao 16

Well, except that doesn't make much sense. If you don't have so much people working at DL, why the decision to waste resources on a redesign of the apps, which wasn't needed at all, even creating a pit in the identify of duolingo (lessons represented by one iconography in the apps and another on the web version), and on the other hand the windows 8 and windows phone 8 still don't exist. Wouldn't those resources been better spent creating those?

-5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FluencyPlan.com 23 19 16

Haha, no, because Luis knows Windows phone sucks. :-p

3Give Lingot•3 years ago

HookedHangman 7 6

I completely agree. I honestly don't understand why there are exclusives between versions. Why don't all users on all platforms get the same features? Personally I don't care about costumes but the coach seems like a very useful training tool which we don't get. It's like saying "Hey everyone else, we created a tool that will help you learn better but you don't get it".

Surely it takes more work to create different apps for each platform. Would it not be easier to make one app that is the same on all platforms?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

As much as I'm aware, being an analyst on the mobile team of some company, creating the same app for different platforms is impossible. It is just like saying why the same program doesn't easily work both on Mac and Windows.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

It's not about what's easier. It's about what yields good results. If you want a slow, choppy app that has no real animations and is 200MB in size, then making one codebase that compiles into all the operating systems is the way to go. Unfortunately, we're perfectionists at Duolingo so we won't be doing that any time soon.

10Give Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

@ShawnG12 The coach will make it to the other platforms if it performs well.

4Give Lingot•3 years ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2

It's not exactly like that. I am closely following a hobby project that has been ported to everything from pre-windows nokias to amiga-os to the ipad, and it is all the same codebase at its heart. What ties it all together is the glue of the programming language, C++, and third party code libraries that are already cross platform and generic. But you can also build on top of things that are only created for one platform, for example Microsoft invented DirectX just to bully people into only targeting their OS. Or if you wanted to use flash, Apple policy would keep you off their portables. It's all a bit petty in my opinion.

In other important news, I need to get out more.

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

HookedHangman 7 6

Then why are some apps that I've seen on my friend's iPhone the same on my Android? Yes, I know that they can't make it look identical and that some things might be specific to iOS but that's only due to platform restrictions. I don't know of any reason why Android can't have the coach. And they can easily implement the same features across platforms. You're basically trying to tell me that a feature such as the coach can only work on iOS. You kind of missed my point. My point wasn't even to have an identical app. It was that there is no reason why some features need to be excluded on one device.

@chilvence - That's exactly what I was thinking.

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

@ShawnG12, I like how often people here use the word "easily" underestimating how much effort something takes.

0Give Lingot1•3 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Pratica 11

There'll be more gifts on the way this month. If there are none in store for PC/Mac, I'd be shocked.
:P

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

Finally, the official announcement! Thank you for explanations and THANK YOU for bringing the skill practice back - I believe for many users this will be a very valuable Christmas gift. I'm sorry if we made too much fuss in discussions today, but at the same time I'm glad we have been loud enough to be heard :-)

I wonder how far the differences between mobile versions will go. Hope they will be mostly about graphics than about functionality.

I'm fine with keeping my streak, but I'll definitely try the Coach as soon as the practice button returns :-)

32ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fer84 22 12 8 6 2

Thanks for the words. To push your question further: If you work with the coach, advance a lot to take the whole weekend off and still be on track - are you going to keep the streak? I mean streaks are currently my main source for lingots ;)

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

javiersfz 15 14 113

No you won't. You will be on track those days but you won't be extending your streak since you have not practiced in a whole day. Easy logics.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fer84 22 12 8 6 2

I somehow image you saying this with the voice of sheldon cooper. Anyhow, I think being on track will somehow replace being in a streak for mobile users. There is no option to buy a streak freezer in the app, just the heart refill is available. If we get a happy coach, instead of the flame as a badge for the discussions and some lingot candy, I might take some day off some weekend.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fer84 22 12 8 6 2

First of all:

I love the new design!

I love the cumulative visualisation of the weekly progress, rather than the coin stack

I bought a coat, but am not sure when to see it ... Can I impress my non-iOS friends with it ? Can I make Facebook-Posts in the suit, telling them, what an awesome language learner I am. I'll find out. One question:

Could you rename the coach levels from minutes to points? It would be a little bit easier to understand, what you have to archive each day. E.g. if you not succeed with a lecture you still spend some minutes, but receive zero points. So it might depend on the user what average point per minute ratio one has. Currently you call the four levels 5 - 30 minutes, but you are still checking the points ...

Ceterum censeo:

Please let us report non-perfect/false translations... There are still some out there in the lower part of the tree (or is it the upper part)

Please give us access to the discussion threads, especially the discussions of the sentences sentences (the general discussion I access from the web)

Please show us our mistakes at the end of our lectures. Show us statistics, which sentences we have failed multiple times. Which grammatical structures we are failing on and what we should learn (not just the weak words)

31ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

alexisonzen 15 8

@fer84, I think you have a good point with the distinction between minutes and points. It's possible the coach levels were designed to prevent gaming the system. I would rather have 5 - 30 minutes of "successful" practice everyday, rather than being able to put in random answers to get my daily time.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jack.Elliott 25 25 25 25 21 13 10 10 9 9 8 5 3 2 2 1273
looking forward to the next lovely presents

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Pratica 11

This is absolutely fantastic! Thank you for answering/explaining the popular questions, and I can't wait to see the other gifts in store!

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2

Obviously, the first thing I did was unlock the Hefner jacket and the monocle. This is very serious business.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

taszanetti 25 22 15 4

Are there any predictions on an Android update with these exact features or will the Android update be completely diverse?

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

The Duolingo coach costume just gave me an idea, what if you hold a contest to see who can come up with the best idea for Duo's (the coach) costumes, and this could include their own drawings of Duo's costume.

The idea is that either the community votes or Duolingo's staff chooses the best idea/drawing. This could then be added to the official costumes, and the victor could be awarded with some special trophy (or maybe something else) on their profile.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hazza_h 22 13 10 10 7 6 5 2

Will they be exclusive forever?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Johnni0 21 18 15 12 10 9 3 3 2

"Even though this gift is for our iOS users, we will have an Android-exclusive gift next week!"

I like the gift, really. But I'm not an Apple user, so I wonder if these improvements are going to get included in other platforms later (even if it is after a few months or so). I would love the couch on my android device or my webapp.

If not, then I really don't understand why you would make platform specific improvements. :$

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Obelloe 14 14 12 7

after all the harsh criticism about the coach, it actually sounds pretty cool and a really efficient way to progress through the course. Will this feature ever be available for regular computer use? I think I'd start using it right away.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hannah15lee 11

I think you should make this available for laptop users as well to make people wanna use Duolingo more. This looks so fun and I love learning Spanish with fun things. I don't think only people with the app should get it. It should be available for everybody because we are all trying to learn. Just sayin'

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GxhpnM0g 10 3 2

Kind of a side question but I am still interested: do you guys have more people using duo on ios or android? I personally use android so I am just curious who makes up the majority of your mobile users.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

It varies a bit per month, but generally iOS is 40%, Android is 38% and Web is 22%.

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

It will change as soon as we have Asian languages (including Russian) available.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

javiersfz 15 14 113

Fantastic!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Gorilla800lbs 17 14 7 2

In two words: Awe Some!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

alsocass 20

Yay. Thanks for answering all the questions and responding so well.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gavin23 19 6

I would love to have that goal system for points on the browser version.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

agoosh 19 12 4

I love it! You guys did a great job with the new app - I'm super happy to have lingots when I practice on iOS.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mr.240 22 11 11 10

Can't get this candy on the original iPad, because it doesn't support iOS versions higher than 5.1. And this Duolingo update requires at least iOS 6.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

so this present is not even for all iOS users.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jj212 22 8 8

Please note that the iPad 1 isn't even supported by Apple anymore, it's so obsolete... But to answer your question, about 99% of iOS users have iOS 6 or above, so that isn't really what I would be worried about if I were them.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pada.online 23 20 10 9 4 2 1242

It is not very environment friendly to throw all the old electronic devices away, because they are obsolete. But that's a problem caused by Apple, not the Duolingo Team.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RKSMT 17 13 8 3

When is the second gift announced?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

.rienvent 3

Just two questions for it: Why can't i exercise when i "No weak work" in single lesson ; and where is my "Lesson Practice"button:({

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NickM98 15 13 10 10 6
Will this like ever get to Android? :'(

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chilvence 14 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 10 9 6 6 2
Yes.

Don't worry, you're not windows phone.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12
I'm sure it will. And besides, Luis said, "Even though this gift is for our iOS users, we will have an Android-exclusive gift next week!"

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mitchell_MT 22 14 13 13 13 8 8 7 6 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 90
When's the next gift?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Johnni0 21 18 15 12 10 9 3 3 2
"Even though this gift is for our iOS users, we will have an Android-exclusive gift next week!"

so latest next week

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

UriyaBA 11 10 10 3
Bring back the old owl!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jose.medina.web 13
The execution of these updates and application have been amazing. Awesome job, this looks great. Can't wait until Android gift. By the way, loving the gold track suit, definitely pimpin lol.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JackedTortoise 23 9 3 2
Can't wait for the present for the web-based users! You guys are doing a great job ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Alzex 10 3
Guys thank you for this great app. Keep good work, and thank you for letting us to learn and develop new languages.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Syran 25 11 7 5 5 3 2 84

So many awesome new content! Thank you Duolingo! You're the best!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

emma_lara_wen 25 24 23 12 11 10 7 2

I like the new coach function, but I desperately need the Lesson Practice function which I use everyday on the go. When will be this function be back on iPhone app?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

I-Am-Maya 17

Usually I use a lot of time on strengthening words. Also after having done the categories Duolingo has marked for me that needs strengthening. If I don't do this, then suddenly too many categories will need strengthening.

With this update you removed the permanently showing "Strengthen..." button. Why?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BritasticUK 11 4 3 2 2

Wow, this is great! Fantastic update. But does this mean that the different apps (web/iOS/android) will all become wildly different from each other in the future?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jeepachu 16 8 5 3

So, did the Android gift never happen?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Joeyshere 14 11 10 10 9 4 3 2 2 2

So awesome:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Bruneilde 16 7 3

This is so exciting. The coach is more than I could've asked for since streaks don't motivate me (and we can dress him up, so cute~) Thank you, Duolingo! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

J.DavidCR 14 7 3 3

Why only for iOS? ... I feel this is discrimination with Android user... too bad Duolingo... it'd be fair with a simultaneous release for all the operating systems...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jj212 22 8 8

Dude, he said that Android would get it's own gift... Also, being a developer myself, I've found that designing on Android has a few... challenges, let's say, that iOS doesn't have. I'm surprised they're even giving Android something exclusive... although I have to say I respect them for it.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CreamandCheese 11 3 2

I don't see an update in the app store...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jj212 22 8 8

Did it update automatically? It does that on iOS 7

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CreamandCheese 11 3 2

I don't have ios 7. I'm on ios 5.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

corpsy 18 5

iOs 5 is not supported (see above for the Luis' explanation).

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Thanks, Luis! I am currently learning French, and I love using my iPhone 4s to use Duolingo! Such a wonderful resource!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BenTheGeek 20

Really? The iOS app is only for iOS 6.0 and up? That won't work for my iPad, cause it's the first one, and cannot update to iOS 6. Please make it compatible for iOS 5!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

Sorry. We supported iOS 5 for as long as we could, but it really slowed down development and by now accounts for less than 1% of our iOS users :(

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

revdolphins 25 17 10 6 11

:(I was just trying to convince a friend of mine yesterday that Duolingo makes learning a language fun. He tried downloading it on his iPad to see for himself if he would like it, but he couldn't because of this. I was surprised that it wasn't supported, and he's decided that that was a sign he should just continue being monolingual. I'm so disappointed.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lukafoto 4

DL claim only one percent use DL on lower iOS like 5.1. This is complete nonsense and makes a mockery of their advertising about being for the whole world! Judging by the number of comments here there is far more than one percent that would love to use DL on their perfectly serviceable iPad mark1s. Just look how many iPad 1 s were sold worldwide. Excluding those who can't afford a new apple product every 2 to 3 years is very short sighted especially if you want more languages like Setswana or Swahili where incomes are lower. Many apps still offer earlier editions to suit the market. There are 15million iPad1s out there. 1% of 15 million is still significant!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

You should still be able to use the older version of Duolingo on iOS 5. You just won't be getting updates.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lukafoto 4

Thanks Luis but how do i download older version? It seems apple app store only shows iOS6 and above now?

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Unfortunately, it is just how technology progresses. But a tablet can access the full web-browser version, so you aren't really losing that much I hope.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BenTheGeek 20

I tried that, but it kept glitching out. Every time I tried to type in a translation in a lesson, right after I tapped a letter key, the keyboard slid down, and at the end of a lesson, it would dump me right back to the home page. (It also loaded kinda slowly, but I thought that was because of our WiFi.)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LoveMonkey53 10 9

Thank you so much for this gift and the ones to come :) Y'all are doing great.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

saltedlolly 12 6

Has anyone else noticed an issue with time zones with this? I just practiced on Saturday but noticed the counter going up for Friday?!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

saltedlolly 12 6

I am now positive this is a bug. I have seen it on multiple occasions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

duttagupta35504 15 5

When's the next gift? I'm so excited for all of these features... They're so much better and innovative than all my predictions! Thanks for all the great work Duo staff!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Where have the other ones disappeared to?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FluencyPlan.com 23 19 16

Looking forward to getting the Duo coach! We need this for web version asap!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MyStarrySpace 14 13 13 10 8 7 7 5 3

Darn, I just lost my entire streak and wager on the computer version -_-

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

centime 25 10 1482

Can I get a lingot refund? On day 1 I bought the "Champagne Tracksuit" for 20 lingots. I'm pretty sure I'll never use Coach. I still have my receipt :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

j2005 14 7 3 3 3

What happens if somebody goes higher than the track?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

yummymony 10

Well this sucks I want to dress up my owl but cant because I don't have an apple product?!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Irhum 4

is the language coach available on pc?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

eden 6

I just bought Duo a champagne tracksuit, but it hasn't changed his appearance on the web version, and as far as I can tell, Duo does not appear on my Android app.. What's the go with that?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

awelborn 10 9 6
cool!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cat4055 9 3

I can;t get the app and I really want my owl to be wearing a tux and then I could right a fan fic about him being a crime fighter by night and a bank accountent by day. Don't judge.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cat4055 9 3

I honestly started this so that when i study french in school i can feel smarer then everyone else because i suck at learning languages

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ritvik10 6

is there clothes on the web

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Fletchey 6 3

I cannot find the clothes in the laptop store

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CHAMPION.DUO 19 10 8 8 7 6 2

But why will we waste the lingots when it won't affect our learning. Just to make our bird look good we should not waste our lingots right. But thanks for the coach. I learn duolingo on ios and on computer and I am on track in all languages from the days it has come.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

For me, lingots are exactly for spending on fun stuff. Learning features should be free - in fact, many people need to be encouraged to learn and not blocked from learning with prices. Stuff like Duo outfits is fun, and it may serve as an additional motivation to earn lingots - and to earn them, you have to learn well.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 11

I agree with you that leaning features SHOULD be free. However, timed practice is not. I have been saving up my lingots for the time when I have completed both my tree and my reverse tree. I estimate that by that time I should have enough saved up to do a timed practice every day for four months, which, by my estimate of when I'll complete my trees, means I'll run out of lingots right around the time I have my planned immersion trip to Mexico in July.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

Timed practice is bought once and forever. And yes, if you ask me, I don't see any need for it to be paid with lingots. Personally, I have signed up on Duolingo long before lingots, so I've been using timed practice without any cost since it was introduced.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

Me too, but now the new users need to earn it, which I think makes sense. I use timed practice to quickly make my tree gold, so I think it is a valuable purchase.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

Hi, I thought that if you buy the time practice it stays forever, You don't need to buy eat each day again. At least that is how it works for me :))) so just go and buy it. Or is it different for the app?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

There is no timed practice in the app. Typing with an on-screen keyboard, especially on the phone, is quite a challenge even without the timer :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 11

I never bought it because I assumed it was something you had to buy every time. Good to know.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

It is only 4 lingots, you could try it earlier :))) even if you thought that was only for one day.

3Give Lingot•3 years ago

CHAMPION.DUO 19 10 8 8 7 6 2

Timed practice is free for me from a lot of time and even now it is free. Are you doing duolingo on iOS, desktop, laptop or android

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 11

iOS, desktop, and laptop. My practice routine generally starts with the app and goes to the nearest computer if I'm struggling or if I'm ready to work on Immersion. You can see my routine is in this flowchart (<http://postimg.org/image/n5a3ddylj/>): Flowchart

My plan is to replace the New Lesson with Timed Practice after I've completed my tree and my reverse tree.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jj212 22 8 8

Well, I thought the same thing - until I was sitting on like two hundred, without really having used any of them... I mean, I guess I could waste all of them on buying a heart refill for every time I did a lesson, but still... Anyway, I just bought em.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lyarra 25 15 1412

Disappointing that DL would choose to release a 'present' that targets only a limited number of users.

-29ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

We will have presents for everybody! I'd appreciate a little break :(

54ReplyGive Lingot11•3 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

I don't think you should worry that much, as soon as the multi-platform updates come out people will once again be cheering. I think because the gift was so cryptic they expected something for everyone at first, and not something targeted to a specific platform.

I think you guys do an amazing job, and that perhaps should all give yourselves a pat on the back, and a one week(or more) holiday during the last week of the year. You guys certainly deserve it.

I'm sure some users(including myself) would also like to acknowledge and offer you guys some presents, unfortunately it is not as easy to express gratitude with only words.

46ReplyGive Lingot5•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 471

Thank you!

19ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

oskalingo 24 14 10 6 3 5

Well said Dessamator. Indeed Luis seems to work tirelessly on this project. He maintains a big public presence on top of all the behind the scenes work and planning he does. I'm sure other members of the team are also working very hard. I'd like to see Luis and the duolingo team give themselves a present and take some time off. The pace of development over this last year has been very intense.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

davidcwalls 24 22 18 12 1335

Words are the best way for us to thank these awesome folks: by using them to translate the web!

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jj212 22 8 8

They did say that the first gift would be iOS only, right? I know I remember that...

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

I think if you chose something for everyone as the first gift and then told us in advance that the next gift is for iOS users only, we wouldn't be so dissatisfied.

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FluencyPlan.com 23 19 16

hahah! We love you, man. Don't let it get you down. :-p

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pablobayart 20 19 8 7 7 2 2 102

I switched from IOS to Android this week and can stand the look from remaining ios-friends...

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

I-Am-Maya 17

Just wanted to say that this app has been rocking my world since the first day.

Joyeux Noël et merci beaucoup ;-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

300 "They are children."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1258886>

Translation: Sie sind Kinder.

13 years ago

Leave a new comment

34 Comments

krmusgrove 6 5

When translating "you," "du" is singular and "ihr" is plural (like Ya'll or youz guys). So you have "du bist" and "ihr seid." "Sie" can be tricky. You really have to pay attention to context and usage. The formal "Sie" is always capitalized and is a "you" used for elders, superiors, strangers, etc and requires "sind." Now, "sie" with a lowercase can either mean "she" or "they" so you have to pay attention to context. ("sie sind" for "they are" and "sie ist" for "she is") can be capitalized at the beginning of a sentence so pay attention!

49ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

sean443490 8

Thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Milis1621 7 3

I don't understand the difference between sind and seid! Help?

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JaredTurnage 9

Seid is used for the pronoun Ihr (Ihr seid= You are), whereas sind is used for the pronouns sie and wir (Wir/Sie sind=We/They/You [formal] are).

33ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

Milis1621 7 3

I see. so seid is singular and sind is plural?

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JaredTurnage 9

Yes

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

eric.r.nash 4

Except I thought "ihr" was plural "you". So "seid" can also be plural.

My brain hurts.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

officialperson 13 4

They're both plural actually. We are = wir sind You all are = ihr seid They are = sie sind So "seid" is only used with plural "you"

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

WatkinsJames 6

Ich-bin Du-bist Er/Sie/Es-ist Wir-sind Ihr-seid Sie-sind

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TeresaDunne 7 6 4

Same

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wesam141047 5

They are = Sie sind ,

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SinaFurkanzdemir 8

I really did not get the difference between "sie" with lower case and "Ihr", as far as I know they both can be used as plural form of "you", is there way to distinguish them ?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ronin777 14

what is the different between Kinder and Kindern ?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Quantum. 18 7 7 3 2 2 2 7

Both mean "children"; however, in German, words are slightly modified depending on their part in the sentence. "Kindern" is used in the dative case--that is, when the children are received an action. It will be taught in later topics.

Here is a guide to how German cases work.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

ridgehicke 6

I don't understand the difference between sind , seid and bist?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Quantum. 18 7 7 3 2 2 2 7

All three mean "are", but they are used differently depending on what the subject is.

Sind: Used with "we" or "they". You will only see it used as Wir sind... or Sie sind...

Seid: Used with "you all" (plural form of you). It will always be Ihr seid...

Bist: Used with "you" (singular). Du bist...

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 weeks ago

ridgehicke 6

Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

luxasdb 4

are you sure sie in this context is they?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

quis_lib_duo 25 25 25 25 14 9 6 6 3 2 1220

Yes. "they" = "sie".

What may be confusing with regard to "sie" is that it also can mean "she" or (capitalised: "Sie") the "(formal) you".

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

richard.ho5 4 3

Why not bist ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MariannaFr5 9 8 6 2

Because "bist" is for "Du" Du bist = you (sing.) are

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FelixGrosse 10 6 2

Couldn't "Die sind Kinder" also work?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DecaNeves 5 4

"Es" isn't the same to "it"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gorgonogro 7

So why is it Es sind Kinder instead of Ihr seid Kinder? And what does Es stand for/mean and how is it used?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NISHANAGAR 3

What's wrong with "Sie Kinder"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Quantum. 18 7 7 3 2 2 2 7

"Sie Kinder" has no verb. That would translate to "They children" instead of "They are children."

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

rooneysank 6

Why not Jungen instead of Kinder?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Yuri492439 6

Jungen means boys and Kinder means children.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ArianaFuen5 6 3

what is the difference between die and sie?

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Quantum. 18 7 7 3 2 2 2 7

"Die" is the feminine version of "the", and "sie" means "she" or "they".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

paragnafde 6

Can "they are children" be written as "die sind kinder" ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

ronin777 14

no, unless you have a Hauptsatz before it. for example: Ich liebe Ann und Merry, die sind Kinder I love Ann and Merry that are children.

but here we need a pronoun: sie is a pronoun but die is an Artikel

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

dorienelien 5 5

isn't it Kindern?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

NeelyKatie 8 2

they are children

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

301 Is there any difference between le jour and la journée?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/913833>

Lucija71995 8 5

Give Lingot

43 years ago

Leave a new comment

11 Comments

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2

<http://french.about.com/od/vocabulary/a/an-annee-jour-journee-matin-matinee-soir-soiree.htm>

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lucija71995 8 5

Merci beaucoup

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ThanKwee 22 20 20 16 9 1

I found this definition to be helpful: <http://www.cosmovisions.com/jour.htm>

Jour ou Journée? Il en est de la synonymie de jour et de journée comme de celle d'an et d'année. Jour exprime surtout une unité de temps; journée se dit, au contraire, quand on envisage cet intervalle de temps au point de vue de son contenu, c.-à-d. des événements qui en remplissent la durée. Jour est absolu; journée est relatif. Le jour est le même pour tout le monde; la journée, espace de temps qui s'écoule depuis l'heure où l'on se lève jusqu'à celle où l'on se couche, est excessivement variable. Elle peut être heureuse ou malheureuse, agréable ou triste, selon les individus et les événements qui les touchent...

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BillofKempsey 25 16 15 14 10 6 2 2 508
That explains it beautifully.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ThankWee 22 20 20 16 9 1
I thought so. I'll attempt to translate it.

"Jour" and "Journée" are synonymous. "Jour" expresses a unit of time; "journée" is used, on the contrary, when one imagines this interval of time from the point of view of its contents, i.e. events which occur during this interval of time. "Jour" is absolute; "journée" is relative. "Le jour" is the same for everyone; "la journée", the time which passes from the time we get up until we go to bed, is excessively variable. "La journée" can be happy or unfortunate, pleasant or sad, according to the the individuals and events which affect them"*

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

C.Sheppard 9 7 5 3
Merci beaucoup! Maintent je comprends.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

manka21 20 16 14 14 10 9 8 8
hello, i am French, so I'll try and answer:

we use "le jour" as opposed to la nuit: example: "la nuit, il regarde la télé, et le jour, il dort": at night he watches telly, and during the day, he sleeps. Also, it can indicate something happening regularly, as a habit or routine, rather than an isolated event.

"Dans la journée" is used more as "sometime during the day", either as opposed to the evening, or because you don't know what time something is happening, but it is before evening. example: "je passerai dans la journée": i'll pop round sometime today.

I hope that helps Herisson 21

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

BillofKempsey 25 16 15 14 10 6 2 2 508
Is it that the long form implies a period of time?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2

See my link, it seems to me (I'm French) quite well explained there.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lucija71995 8 5

Merci beaucoup.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

manka21 20 16 14 14 10 9 8 8

I have just checked the link jrikhal gave you, and yes, I agree, it's a good one for reference, pretty thorough there. It is also pretty advanced, keep in mind that sometimes even if it is not idiomatic, a sentence is still understandable, for instance if you say "j'ai travaillé tout le jour" instead of the correct idiomatic "j'ai travaillé toute la journée", French people will understand you. then they will either know that you are a foreigner speaking pretty decent French and finding it lovely, or alternately think that you are a...true French poet! (Because I am sure I saw that other form in tales and poems). Good luck!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages
302- 331 of 912

[accessed March 14, 2017]

302 "Just like every night in the last years."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/296635>

Translation: Wie jede Nacht in den vergangenen Jahren.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

26 Comments

Soglio 25 24 20 17 17 11 11 8 2 2 322

How is "genau" different from "gerade"?

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wataya 25 25 25 25 25 23 20 10 9 9 5 1162

I guess you're trying to translate 'just' here. "Just" translates to "gerade" in the sense of "I've just finished my work, now I have time for you". The German translation of "Just as always" is "Genau wie immer". I think things become clear if you have a look at the possible translations of 'just':
<http://is.gd/fUxDPy>

16ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Soglio 25 24 20 17 17 11 11 8 2 2 322

Thank you. That does help a lot, though I think I'll have to make a little map for myself and post it in front of my desk so I hold on to it. (Is "just" just as elusive if you're learning English?)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wataya 25 25 25 25 25 23 20 10 9 9 5 1162

It's a very versatile word in English but it's one of those adverbs you don't learn on their own but together with the common phrases they're used in: "It's just me, just what I thought, I just arrived,...". I'd suggest to handle its German equivalents in the same way.

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Soglio 25 24 20 17 17 11 11 8 2 2 322

Thank you. That sounds like good advice.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

helenvee 25 25 95

Okay, I'm confused as to how "Just like every night" can be translated as "Wie jede Nacht". What has happened to "just"?

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sholem 19

I can never get the plural of Jahr right...is there a rule for when it should be "jahre" and when it should be "jahren"?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

christian 22 22 22 21 18 17 13 9 8 6 4 2 27
<http://goo.gl/QKq0w>

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Graatand 14 7 6

I wrote "der letzten Jahre" (of the last few years), but it accused me of using the singular... -_-

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MKB1234 20

I didn't even try. I knew it would be a bizarre arrangement of words.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Puett 25 21 18 10 5

Das Jahr, die Jahre, der Jahre, den Jahren, die Jahre is how you decline it

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JaviTR 15

Where is the 'just' in this sentence? I wrote "Nur wie jede Nacht..." and that was incorrect.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SeanBrady 22 11 464

Just in this case means "exactly", not "only".

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

philster043 16 7

I guess that explains the usage of "genau" over "gerade" too, thanks.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Oregonviolinist 24 11

When do you say "in dem" and when do you say "im"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Katzebus 25 22 20 12 9 9 7 5 1

I believe "in dem" can always be contracted to "im". Maybe in a formal situation you'd be more likely to use the former though?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

INOC33 13 5

They are both the same. "Im" is made out of the two words "(I)n de(m)" so you could say "Er ist in dem Haus" (He's in the house [general location]; He's in that house [specific location]), or "Er ist im Haus". "In dem" is more specific, whereas "im" is more general. Another example: Er ist im Krankenhaus (he's in the hospital); Er ist in dem Krankenhaus (he's in that hospital)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

UndeadAriel 10

Is "eben" not a correct translation of "just" in this context? I thought it would be acceptable but now I'm a little confused.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

Where did the just go? None of the german seems to cover it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Kavadera 24 10 7 542

I wrote "gerecht" instead of "genauso". Is that really incorrect?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wataya 25 25 25 25 25 25 23 20 10 9 9 5 1162

Yes it is. "Gerecht" means "just" in the sense of "fair" (as in a fair/just verdict).

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jvonstein 23 12

Can anyone clarify why "in den vergangenen Jahren" is accusative instead of dative? I don't think I've encountered that before, except when motion is involved.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JohnArleyB 15 10 6 3 2

"in the last years" is incorrect English and no native speaker would ever say that. "in the last few years" or "for the past few years" or "in the last year of college" or "in the past year".

I've been running across so much blatantly incorrect English lately I'm going to abandon DL.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

scharms 17 2

As a native English speaker I have to disagree with you...

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CaveatEmptor 22 11 8

"in the last years" sounds awkward to me¹, and I never hear people say it like that, but maybe it's different in other parts of the U.S. and other English speaking countries. Personally, I would choose instead to say "in previous years."²

¹ Except in cases like Soglio mentioned: "In the last years of the famine," "in the last years of the training program." Then again, these sentences are continued by the word OF, so the context is a little different.

² Furthermore, if I'm talking about the past starting from up to the present, I would prefer to say something like "in the last few years," or "in the last several years," or, giving a specific number, "in the last three years." A sentence like "in previous years" is less specific about which years in the past are being talked about. (It can be talking about a period between 2005 and 2012, and not include 2013, the most recent previous year, at the time of writing this.)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Soglio 25 24 20 17 17 11 11 8 2 2 322

It isn't incorrect, but it may be less common. I'd be more likely to use "in the last years" in reference to some point in time that isn't now: e.g., "in the last years of the famine," "in the last years of the training program." (Arguably, "in the later years" might be more correct, but that's another question.)

If my reference point is now, though, I'd probably say "in the last few years."

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

303 Passato prossimo vs. l'imperfetto
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/676955>

hybridpro 23 22 22 22 19 16 12 6

A good explanation of when to use passato prossimo vs. l'imperfetto: The "passato prossimo" refers to facts that are seen as completed, but have some relation to the present. Generally, the events happened near to present time. Events which happened long ago may be expressed using this tense when the event is seen as still having an active relationship to the present.

Some examples are: Il treno ha arrivato. The train arrived (has arrived). Io ho mangiato. I ate (have eaten). Avete capito quello che ho detto? Did you understand what I said? Quindici anni fa che siamo venuti in America. We came to America 15 years ago.[and we are still here]

The imperfect past expresses an action which began at some unstated time, continued for an unspecified period, and is now over. The verb forms are made by adding a suffix to the modified infinitive. In most cases, the letters -re are dropped from the infinitive, and the endings -vo, -vi, -va, -vamo, -vate, and -vano are added. There are a few irregular forms.

The imperfect tense expresses continuous or repeated past actions or events. The English equivalent will be the simple past tense, the expression "used to ~", past tense of the verb "to be" plus a gerund, or the expression "would ~" when it refers to a repeated past action. Some examples are: Noi abitavamo a Firenze. We used to live in Florence. Claudio arrivava spesso tardi. Claude would often arrive late. Io leggevo mentre lui scriveva. I was reading while he was writing. Di solito, andavo in Italia. Usually, I went to Italy.

In Italian, the imperfect is used to express a physical or emotional state that occurred in the past, and is now over. It is also used to describe past weather conditions, time, or a person's age.

Give Lingot2
123 years ago

Leave a new comment
4 Comments

AbbyLynn12 6

Thanks for the tips. This is one of those grammar points that used to kill me in class. I like one example that was given to me: In a book, imperfect would be the behind the scenes: setting, character descriptions, weather, time period, anything that will set the tone. Passato prossimo is the actual plot of the book. They did this, they went there, they met so and so.

Prolly not 100% accurate, but a good general rule.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

f.formica 20 17 12 12 11 11 10 8 3 1273

Nice post; I don't agree on all points as I feel that passato prossimo doesn't have as much relation to the present state as present perfect does, but I can't derive a better rule.

A few fixes:

Il treno è arrivato
Siamo venuti in America quindici anni fa
2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hybridpro 23 22 22 22 19 16 12 6

Thanks for the corrections. Aren't passato prossimo and present perfect same thing or did you mean something else or am i reading it wrong?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

f.formica 20 17 12 12 11 11 10 8 3 1273

Yes, they are similar and have a similar usage, but don't follow the same rules: after all present perfect is a present (thus the strong tie with the present state) and passato prossimo is "near past". For instance it wouldn't be correct in English to say "yesterday I've gone to Rome", but it is in Italian "ieri sono andato a Roma". Many modern occurrences of passato prossimo are due to the slow disappearance of passato remoto in most of Italy; for instance "siamo venuti in America quindici anni fa" could have been just as well "arrivammo in America quindici anni fa".

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

304 Word of the Day?
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2655529>

gorilla7 14 6

Does anyone else think a word of the day on Duolingo would be an interesting way to learn slightly unusual vocabulary. So not words taught regularly on Duolingo but words that are a bit random.

Give Lingot3
172 years ago

Leave a new comment
12 Comments

pinchbeck31 25 30
I like the word preguiçoso (lazy).

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Davu 25 25
Until this feature is added try:

<https://www.innovativelanguage.com/word-of-the-day/Portuguese> (choose Eu/Br)
<http://www.transparent.com/word-of-the-day/today/portuguese.html>
<http://www.bitesizedlanguages.com/wod/r/portuguese>

Most of these words are also part of the 1942 words in Duolingo's vocabulary but they come with example sentences pronounced by native speakers rather than Mrs Robot.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dathousecat 7 4
I would forget 80% of these words within six hours of not seeing them so I think this would only be practical if the word was integrated into the lesson, but that would make things complicated because it may be too much work to integrate the word everyday for one day. I feel like your on the right track though. Maybe word of the week/month?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

flashnomad 5 2 2
I'd love to see it feature slang. Also, the first lines of the lyrics of really popular songs.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AcidEyes
I think the popular song lyrics would be really fun!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

StrapsOption 23 17 14 14 11 11 8 8 8 6 5 5 3 3 2 2 2
Ja! Wie 'Dummkopf'!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

StrapsOption 23 17 14 14 11 11 8 8 8 6 5 5 3 3 2 2 2
I think there should be a word for each language.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AshtonHynes 20 15 11 10 10 9 9 8 8 6 4 3 3 2 2
Absolutely, I think this is an excellent idea!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nnaruto25 14 8 7 7 6 6 5 4 4 4 3

I think they're called cognates? Words that don't have any real translation into another language.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jbjr82 6

cognates are words that appear and mean the same, for example chocolate is both english and portuguese, though pronounced differently

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nnaruto25 14 8 7 7 6 6 5 4 4 4 3

Okay, then words that don't have any real translation into another language. That require more explanation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AparallelLee 10

i'm too old for this, lol

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

305 In your opinion, what is the easiest non-Latin alphabet language?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3686293>

JennaHO 21 2

Sorry if my wording of the headline was off, I'm not sure of a better way to say it.

Anyways, I know I'm getting ahead of myself, but after I finish Italian and Irish, I'd like to learn a language that does not use the Latin alphabet. (Ex: Mandarin, Russian, Arabic, etc.) I'd like to have four languages in my arsenal and one not using the same old ABCs. So I wanted to ask other users' opinions and see what might be the easiest (or more common) language for a native English speaker. I know I should "go with the one I want," but I have always loved all languages and I've always been so indecisive. Any advice would be appreciated. Thanks!

Give Lingot1

22 years ago

Leave a new comment

31 Comments

PopTartTastic 9 9 7 7 6 6 5 4

The Chinese languages (which all are structured and look the same way, just pronounced different) have rather simplistic grammar, with no conjugations or declensions or articles. That being said the characters can be hard to learn. When it comes purely down to the writing systems, The easiest would be the "sister systems" of the Latin alphabet. Those are Cyrillic, Greek, Georgian, and Armenian. Cyrillic and Greek both have similar characters to English and Latin, but they also have characters that look the same but are pronounced differently. For example, the "H" character is a "n" sound in Cyrillic alphabets, and an "e" or "i" sound in Greek. The Georgian and Armenian alphabets look different, but are still structured similarly. I don't know much about Armenian, but the characters look rather blocky and I personally can't see how I would tell them apart, but I haven't tried yet. I will soon. Georgian has different letters, but they are all different. Many of their letters have curves in them, and I find it fun to write them. Also, most of them somewhat follow the "A" "B" "G/C" "D" pattern. With Armenian and Greek, they only apply to their own languages. Georgian script was formerly used in Georgian alone, but it was eventually adopted by the other three Kartvelian languages: Laz, Svan, and Mingrelian. There were three Georgian alphabets, but the one used in modern Georgian is the Mkhedruli. (I think I spelled that right.) Finally, Cyrillic is a very widespread system, used by (here we go.)

Russian, Ukrainian, Belarusian, Rusyn, Serbian, Bulgarian, Macedonian, Tatar, Bashkir, Komi, Udmurt, Mari, Erzya, Moshka, Chechen, Avar, Andi, etc. Sometimes used in Bosniak, Montenegrin, dialects of Greek, Kazakh, Tajik (Persian), Kyrgyz, Uzbek, and many, many more.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JennaHO 21 2

Thank you very much for the in-depth reply. I actually learned of a few new languages thanks to you! =)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Erven.R 20 15 14 11 10 2

When it comes to grammar, Chinese.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Arktischer 13 10 10 807

I have read a bit about Bahasa Malayu, or just Malay in English. It is apparently a very easy language to learn. Malay used the Arabic script for a while, and was replaced by the Latin alphabet, but another source says the Arabic script is still used. From my understanding, both alphabets are used, but the Latin alphabet is more common. I think the Arabic script looks pretty cool, and impressive to see someone whom can read it. Another good thing is that Malay is almost the same language as Indonesian, so you are basically getting two languages out of studying Malay, plus you can use two alphabets to use the language.

<http://www.omniglot.com/writing/malay.htm>

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Malaysian_language

I have also read the Malay is actually a pretty easy language to learn. What do you think of this: "No genders. No plurals. No conjugations. And no verb tenses. "

<http://matadornetwork.com/abroad/4-easy-foreign-languages/>

If you want something that is strictly written in another alphabet, though, I will actually suggest: Hebrew. Yes, Hebrew.

The Hebrew alphabet is extremely easy. I learnt the alphabet in about a week, with about 5-10 minutes of studying put in per day. Imagine what you can do if you study for a few hours. The thing I really appreciate is that each character looks significantly different, as opposed to Arabic where every character looks like the same curve, with a few dots here and a line there.

I have heard the Hebrew isn't too hard to learn, but anyone studying a language will say whatever they need to convince others to study it. I do know from what little I have studied that Hebrew omits a lot of words an English speaker would use. For instance, where an English speaker would say, "You are Jenna," a Hebrew speaker would say, "You Jenna."

I hoped I helped you; congratulations on taking a step outside of Latin.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavmarx 15 15 13 13 12 9 9 6 6 6 4 3 2

Russian, it isn't easy really but the writing system is easy to learn, I learnt it in a few hours. The Korean writing is fairly easy too and Japanese is not hard, but you have to study a lot if you want to learn at least the basic 2,000 kanjis.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wintertriangles 25 10 7

The problem with Russian is that its structure can be virtually anything, so that makes it extremely difficult for a new learner.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lavmarx 15 15 13 13 12 9 9 6 6 6 4 3 2

The difficult part is learning the six cases, if you learn them the language isn't as hard, I have never studied it, but I know a few words and when I hear a friend of mine speak I can sometimes take out those little words and get an idea of what she is talking about.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JennaHO 21 2

Hello again! I was kind of hoping for an Asian language, so we'll see. But "basic" and 2,000! Yikes.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wintertriangles 25 10 7

Yeah you're not going to learn an Eastern Asian language with any ease whatsoever. Yes the Korean alphabet is easy to learn but that is IT MAN

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

yimantuwinyai 25 14 8 6 5 5 3 2

I've been learning Korean for two years and it's very difficult. The grammar is difficult because they just have so many concepts we don't have in English. Honorifics, for example. You have to change how you talk to both people who are older or younger than yourself. Also, all the subject modifiers. Like, you don't say just "dog" you have to say "dog-animal".

The list goes on and on. Korean is one of the hardest languages, but I refuse to give up!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JennaHO 21 2

I know it won't be easy, I was just seeing which would be the easiest to get a firm grasp on. I'm also not that picky as to where it comes from either. Although I would like an Asian language to broaden the spectrum, I'm also interested in learning dead languages or not very common ones. The native Alaskan languages, ancient Egyptian, Aramaic, and so on have all had my interest.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wintertriangles 25 10 7

Well given your broad interest maybe you should pick the one that interests you the most, because the one you are interested in the most will be the easier one to learn.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

slogger 25 23 22 20 14 1175

> . . . maybe you should pick the one that interests you the most . . .

That sounds like good advice. Which language is the very most interesting to you? What really makes your mouth water when you think about it?

You might think of some of the languages of the Indian subcontinent, including Sanskrit. Or Hebrew, Arabic, Attic Greek, Aramaic, Farsi . . . If you can read French, there are good (it is said) Assimil audio courses in Ancient Greek, Sanskrit and some variety of Ancient Egyptian.

Myself, if I had to start from scratch right now, I'd choose Attic Greek. I'm studying Russian, which is really worthwhile, and the alphabet does not take long to learn at all, just as Lamarz said, nor does the Greek alphabet.

When you've made a choice, post what you decide!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

lumna 13 10 9 5 3

I agree, anyway I think that greek would be the easiest because it is similiar to the Latin one. Moreover many modern words are of greek origins above all thorse linked to science and technology, and I think it is wonderful to learn about the origins of our language. I studied ancient Greek at the lyceum and I really enjoyed it It is easier to learn an alphabet if you can recognize words. Ex you read φιλοσοφία = filosofia ,Italian filosofia, German Philosophie Spanish filosofia, Russian философия (you read the same filosofia there is a letter to letter correspondence) . Russian alphabet is similiar to the greek one but it has some signs that influence the pronunciation of some letters: hard sound vs soft sound. I do not kwow much about oriental languages, but the sentence structures are different.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

wintertriangles 25 10 7

I might say Greek. It has the same structure as English, and it has no tones.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

heqamaat 22 10 7 4

Personally of the ones I'm familiar with I think Japanese is fairly easy. I tend to look at kanji like learning vocabulary in that you have to study it but also accept that you'll pick it up as you use it and expose yourself to it. The other thing that can be difficult is you can't really think in Japanese like you think in European language. The way the language expresses itself can take some getting use to. But grammatically it's all very logical to me.

Of languages I have less experience with I have heard Chinese grammar is easy but it's difficult to master and Korean is related to Japanese I believe but would have the added bonus of being purely phonetic with no Chinese characters (although I believe they do get used in some contexts you can get by without them)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Terrapod 13 8 4 2

Serbian Cyrillic is extremely to learn, the language itself on the other hand....

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

starkman123 7 4 2 2

I think every form (except Belarusian) of Cyrillic is easy to learn. Only problem I've heard with Cyrillic is apparently in Ukrainian Г is pronounced as an 'h'.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

EdenRu 6 2

I would say Hebrew is the easiest

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Hephaestus1999 13 13 11 9 9 7 6

I feel that Cyrillic & the Hebrew, and the Yiddish scripts are very easy. Almost every Cyrillic letter is identical in both majuscule & minuscule forms, and almost letter feels distinct. The Hebrew script is fairly easy to learn, except for the fact that it is a very impure abjad—that's oh so very close to becoming an alphabet! There are only ~5 letters with ending forms & and I'd say that ~6 letters have 2-3 sound values. The Yiddish alphabet is much easier to learn; it only has a few digraphs that are reminiscent of the ones in German.

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 days ago

yimantuwingyai 25 14 8 6 5 5 3 2

Russian and Korean are both fairly simple systems. It takes a while to get used to Korean's Hangul system but in comparing Korean to Chinese or Japanese I'd say it is a lot easier.

Arabic is the one I really want to learn but I think my brain might break reading from right to left.

Thai is also fairly straightforward, but the consonant combinations can be a challenge. But I like the look of it more than a lot of other alphabets. It just looks orderly for some reason, (even though friends of mine that speak it say the grammar and syntax is difficult)

For my money the absolutely hardest are the Indian alphabets. There's just something about all those loops for Telugu, Sinhala, and Kannada or the straight tops of the Hindi letters but they all just look so alike I don't think I could learn it. Same goes for Burmese. Tibetan, however, does appeal to me for some reason. I think it's because Star Trek used it as the inspiration for the Klingon alphabet. But the problem with Tibetan is there are three competing alphabets, and the leading one has spellings that reflect 9th century Tibetan but not modern day Tibetan! This leads to the spellings not looking much like the phonetic versions. Those monks sure know how to preserve language in the written tradition, I will say.

Ethiopian looks surprisingly similar in the way its structured to the Japanese alphabets. And the structure looks consistent, and therefore easy to distinguish even if there are a lot of letters. I think consistency is true of Korean as well, which is why I like it.

In terms of the most appealing looking letters that kind of make me want to jump in right away, or possibly see them on a computer screen on a spaceship, my vote goes to Inuktitut.

<http://www.omniglot.com/writing/inuktitut.htm>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Why don't you go for HINDI??? Its nowhere near Latin and so for sure would be interesting....:)I learned it in school...Hindi and all other Indian languages come from Sanskrit and has an entirely different alphabet system for each language... Hope you make the best choice....:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SteveLando 22 18 17 16 14 12 11 10 10 10 9 9 8 8 8 8 7 6 6 6 5 5 3 7

the latin alphabet is as easy as the slavic, the greek or the runic alphabets - everyone is very easy, and very alike. It is when you go to the other scripts that you will find yourself in a bit harder context. The Devanagari, and the like, are probably easier than the arabic, but hebrew and aramaic is also quit easy, as is the berber script. Korean should be the easiest script on earth, some scientist says, while the japanese, and chinese, will be a time consuming task to grasp, amounting to several years of hard studying (but the mandarin language is very easy to learn).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JennaHO 21 2

Okay, I am not going to make a choice yet. I'd like to do some more in-depth studying of the suggestions, but I may go with Japanese. I truly think of the most used languages, that one is most interesting to me. Thank you all for your advice!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OnesimusUnbound 25 23 17 11 1084

aside from memorizing characters, they say japanese or chinese. what made them hard is due to the use of different means to write. chinese is ideography that requires at least 3000 characters while japanese requires 2000 kanji aside from katakana and harigana.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Neco_Coneco 22 21 16 16 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 5 5 4 4 3 48

For Asian languages, I think Japanese is pretty cool. The hardest part is, it has 3 writing systems; Kana (consists of Hiragana and Katakana) and Kanji (same with Hanzi but different readings). The Hanzi (Chinese writing system) has only 1 or 2 reading/s but Japanese Kanjis have so many readings, the Chinese readings and the Japanese readings. For me, only the writing system is the hardest part in learning Japanese, then everything is easy (You would easily get used to diff. sentence order and grammatical particles). If you want a challenging language, LEARN JAPANESE.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lolawesome65 9 7 5 4 2

Korean (Hangul) has been known to have one of the easiest writing systems to learn. I learned it in a day (the writing system at least).

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Asita16 10 9

In my personal opinion, the easiest language which doesn't use the Latin alphabet is Hindi (though i may be a bit biased as I am a native speaker and I know I am a little too late :P). Hindi uses abiguda which is a system where the vowels and consonants merge together to form a character. This might sound complicated but it isn't. All letters follows a set of definite rules. And when read, the language is almost completely phonetic. In all my years when I've spoken the language daily, I haven't come across any exceptions but I'm not sure. If you are talking about the language as a whole, then it is even more easier. It is an Indo-European language and has many loan word from English and other languages. English uses many loan words from Hindi too. For example "loot" and "path" come from the Hindi words "Loot" and "paath" respectively. It doesn't have articles so those little buggers are out of the way. The alphabet can be a bit hard to learn at fist because English doesn't have many of the hindi sounds but once you overcome it, the grammar is simple. It has just three cases.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

chibi_usa 23 6

I personally think Japanese is the easiest. The grammar is very straight forward, and it requires just "spelling" practice with the kanjis. I find it more of a vocab based language to master; having the spellings and the characters be the part you need to master versus the grammar because it's a lot easier than languages like French and English (in my opinion). Good luck with your studies.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexPolyglot 16 11 11 9 9 7 2 2

hmmm,I would be first Korean,Second Greek, and third Arabic. I learned 3 of them in one day :) If u need help let me know bud :)

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Bonesforjones18 3 2

I need help remembering arabic alphabet letters

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

306 Chinese single mother, 51, memorises every single word from the English-Chinese Dictionary

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7448606>

AureliaUK 25 25 21 12 12 11 3

A Chinese mother has become a walking dictionary by memorising the English-Chinese Dictionary from cover to cover, reported the People's Daily.

Li Yanzhi, 51, from Xi'an, Shaanxi Province, is able to explain the meaning of every single word in the 2,458-page book, which consists of 220,000 entries.

Ms Li, who divorced more than 20 years ago, undertook the mission in order to receive more translating work.

This helps her support her 26-year-old son who suffers from autism and is not able to take care of himself.

In order to improve their lives, Ms Li does translation work as a freelancer on top of her regular teaching. Through this, she has earned enough to buy herself a new apartment.

Apart from English, Ms Li has learned to speak more than 10 different languages, including French, Russian, German, Japanese and Polish.

<http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/peoplesdaily/article-2986782/Single-mother-51-memorises-SINGLE-word-English-Chinese-Dictionary-s-just-220-000-entries.html>

Give Lingot1
262 years ago

Leave a new comment
14 Comments

gcabildo1 8
The mind is very powerful if you know how to train it well. It must be a tough feat. Even today not many people have even read the dictionary from first page to last. I hear of some people who have memorised the Bible and the Koran.

And even speaking other languages should get her a better job don't you think? Kudos to her

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JessePaedia 18 15 12 11 4
My great-grand mother learnt English by reading the Bible.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Delta1212 24 12 8 8 8 7 5 4
Seeing that it's a Chinese news source by way of the Daily Mail, I have some reservations about fully trusting the veracity of this story.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LegatonMik 23 7 6
Indeed, as do I. It's also suspicious that in looking for other sources, they all seem to point back to DM...

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

annie1258 17 7 2

This is really interesting and cool! I would never be able to remember all those words and their meanings... XD

(It does annoy me, though, how the article says that her son "suffers from" autism. Buuuut that's just a little nitpick I have with the article and has nothing to do with the actual subject matter.)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 119

It has nothing (maybe) to do with "suffer [pain, for example]".

It's other way to "suffer". When someone has a disease, that person "suffers from X".

Weird English

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 119

Amazing! Please upload this to immersion! (I don't want to take your credit!) ;D

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AureliaUK 25 25 21 12 12 11 3

Assuming there are no copyright issues, please feel free to upload it yourself.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 119

But you will win lingots if you get upvotes :P

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AureliaUK 25 25 21 12 12 11 3

Thank you for the consideration, but it obviously needs to be uploaded by someone who is translating from English into another language, which I'm not doing at present.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 119

If you want I upload it then I give the lingots that I win to you ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AureliaUK 25 25 21 12 12 11 3

You keep them. I have over 6,000 of the things at present.

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 119

I've passed the 1000 yesterday ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ladean1 13

WOW! It's amazing what one can do!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

307 "The police arrive at the farm."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8250177>

Translation: A polícia chega na fazenda.

01 year ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

patrick.jullien 22 20 15 10 36

In english, i sn't it "the police arrives...", with an "s"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Paulenrique 21 15 13 10 8

The word "police" is conjugated as plural. So, "the police arrive"

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lahure 25 25 25 25 25 25 13 13 12 12 8 1091

The policeman arrives (singular) - The policemen arrive (plural).

Ele fala - He speaks (singular) -Eles falam (plural) - They speak.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarksAaron 15 15 14 14 12 11 10 9 8 7 6 6 5 2 67

In American English at least, "police" is treated as a plural word, like "people" - "the police arrive". If it is one police officer, we would say "the police officer" or (more gendered) "the policeman"/"the policewoman" - these last are falling out of use.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BB_King_17 11 8 8 7 6

Farm = quinta em Portugal

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

308 "The crab eats birds."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/16441291>

Translation: El cangrejo come pájaros.

08 months ago

Leave a new comment

15 Comments

tylerlooloo 7

the crab eats birds? creepy.

3ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

uritzvi 13

when do I use pajaro and when aves

2ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

SGuthrie0 25 25 215

I have the same question. Will someone please answer? Why did it mark "las aves" wrong.

Also, why is it not "LOS pajaros", (las aves) since the sentence is about "birds in general"? Usually, DL requires the definite article for "things in general"

0ReplyGive Lingot1•5 months ago

lindafraser 25 25 25 16 14 3 3 630

My understanding is that Pajaros tend to be the smaller birds and that Aves tend to be the larger birds. To help me remember it, I remind myself that Aguila (which is an eagle and therefore a large bird) starts with an "A" in the same way that Ave does so Aves must be the larger birds. I can then remember that Pajaros must therefore be the smaller ones.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

rharao 14 4 4

Just to clarify, it's acceptable in Spanish to omit grammatical articles as one does in English?

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

SGuthrie0 25 25 215

Spanish uses the definite article much more than does English. The rules are NOT the same. (By "grammatical" articles, I assume you mean "definite" articles (the, el, la) Here are some information sources: <http://www.spanishdict.com/answers/10001/articles-definite#.VylXCPkrIkU>

<http://www.spanishdict.com/topics/show/7>

http://spanish.about.com/od/adjectives/a/intro_def_art.htm

<http://spanish.about.com/od/adjectives/a/indefinite.htm>

However, it seems the DL does not follow all these rules. So, I have not figured out the DL rules for definite articles.

For example, the sources I have seen say us "el" before the names of languages and days of the week (el Ingles, el lunes)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Sarahwhs 14 6 6

Is "la jaiba" the word for a female crab in Spanish? Also, is there any particular rule/reason that animals like cats and dogs can be both feminine and masculine, but animals like turtles and crabs cannot? (How common is it for animals to ONLY be spoken of in one gender?)

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

scrubb2000 7

Ah yes, the rare giant tree crab. Don't let one of those things drop down on your head...

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

ezjewel88 9 2

I got it right and its saying its wrong

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

dr.Equivalent 14 11 114

HOW?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

studygerman 18 16 375

My understand, or at least the way I've used it, is that pájaro is the individual animal(s) itself [e.g., look at that blue pájaro in the sky], but ave is the type (Kingdom, Phylum, Class, etc.) of animal [e.g., most aves can fly, las aves are beautiful animals, aves are more interesting than cats, God created aves).

Note: This may be regional, though I'm unsure.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

mountpaul 8 8 2

one letter off...

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

AmeliaWalk7 3

oh

-1ReplyGive Lingot•6 days ago

309 "I have the duck."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1705683>

Translation: Nálam van a kacsá.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

25 Comments

david.bala1 6

Nekem van miért nem jó?

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

Mert akkor "a duck" lenne. Magyarban is határozatlan névelővel mondd (Nekem van egy kacsám), és nem határozottal (Nekem van a kacska).

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

peter.radv 5

En is azt irtam h van egy kacsam. Erre kiirja a program h ITT egy kacska. Wtf??? Az itt szo az a here. Az nem is szerepel a szovegben. A van kacsam szerintem helyesnek kellene lennie.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

A "Van egy kacsám" mondat fordítása az lenne, hogy "I have a duck." (Hiszen az "egy" angolul "a" és szerepel a mondatban. ;)) Az, hogy a "here" nem szerepel a mondatban, semmit nem jelent a jelentés szempontjából. Az angol nyelv sajnos nem a magyar nyelv tükörfordítása. Pedig mennyivel könnyebb lenne úgy.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kismici 5

Ez a mondat tök értelmetlen... :/

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

peter.radv 5

Picsbe...felrehallottam. Dog-nak ertettem...ehh...na mindegy :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Krisztin72 12

En is :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheBelorn 10 7 5

Nekem is! Azt irtam hogy: nekem van egy kacsam!!! :/

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Andrs.Hood 8

Ezt nem értem. I have , nekem van....the duck a kacska , mért nem jó hogy nekem van kacsám?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

adenk 14

En is ezt irtam, szerintem is jó.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

peter.radv 5

Ertem en de ha pl le kellene fordítani azt angolra h itt a kacska... akkor az vajon helyes lenne-e hogy:
here is the duck? :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Krisztin72 12

Igen

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Wolfi10 14

Lehetne "enyém a kacska" is nem?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JonaBence 9 4

nekem van egy kacsám?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nefelejcs11 11 16

az miért nem jó, hogy nekem meg van a kacsám? Nem értem, hogy miért "nálam van a kacska" a jó fordítás?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JzsefBakus 6

Én is dognak hallottam:-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nicolette.86178 7

Rossz ez a resz

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Szuszacska 6

Nekem elfogadta azt,hogy : A kacska az enyém. Így nem is kell azon problémáznii,hogy magyarban határozott vagy határozatlan névelőt használjak.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

VANDI76 10

I have a duck azt jelenti, hogy van egy kacsám. - miért nem fogadta el! Nézzenek utána

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

04860 12

Ha jól látom, "I have THE duck" van írva! Akkor mi is a fordítás?:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

musicus59 6

Kétszer meghallgattam LASSAN, és "dog"-nak lehet érteni. Ezt már mondták többen is,, tehát talán nem az én fülemben van a hiba...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lenartmonika 8

A kacska az enyém hogy van angolul? Mert én ezt írtam, de rossz.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dlaccc 11

The duck is mine. szerintem :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZsoltZsolt2 5

Ez szerintem hibás kérdés :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sztankay54 15 4 57

A have birtoklást fejez ki ,MÁR megint rossz a fordítás.Hol van az,hogy nálam? I have the Duck."birtoklom a kacska"...szó szerint.Akkor,hol a nálam?

310 Which language has the easiest grammar?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2494632>

Dzaved 10 3 3

Which language has the easiest grammar? And i'm not talking about learning its accent or about the writing , but only about the grammar itself.

Give Lingot

132 years ago

Leave a new comment

29 Comments

orangeant86 20 11 8 7 6 4 3

Excluding the writing and the pronunciation, I think Mandarin Chinese would have the easiest grammar. For the most part it follows the English order - SVO. But there are no verb tenses, no verb conjugations for 1st, 2nd, 3rd person, no irregular verbs that I know of, nouns don't have gender or number (1 dog, 2 dog, 3 dog etc), and there are no noun declensions. But even though the grammar is simple, you are going to need to pronounce the words and read and/or write the Hanzi (Chinese characters), and that is what makes Chinese difficult.

17ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

harryclark17 24 14 10 9 7 6 43

For me, mandarin grammar is easy, but learning all the vocab is very difficult. There's just so much chinese to learn.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Yes, but you talked about grammar. Language can be very easy under according point a view (here: grammar) and difficult according another one (vocabulary, reading, tones)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

harryclark17 24 14 10 9 7 6 43
Definitely.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7

Don't forget about counter words though, although I think (you can correct me if you know different) that if you don't know the specific one you can just use 个 ge

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jamie08MD 15 12 4

Esperanto. This language was created to be easy, so everyone could learn it. The disadvantage is though, that it is an artificial language and it is hard to find people who actually speak it. :)

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JessePaedia 18 15 12 11 4

Generally, Asian languages like Mandarin Chinese and Indonesian have much simpler grammar than European languages. In Indonesian, there is no gender, verb conjugation after a pronoun, tense (to some extend) and other tricky grammatical qualities that European language possess. Indonesian does not even have a word for 'the' and 'to be' (kind of), they are just assumed. The only thing I have trouble with are suffixes and prefixes which make words quite long.

7ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

[deactivated user]
[deleted]

3Give Lingot1•1 year ago

ShadStrea 11 10 4 2

well, yea but almost no one there speak formal Bahasa. and not to mention every island have their own kind of Bahasa which was influenced by local language.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JessePaedia 18 15 12 11 4

Thanks for the correction.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]
[deleted]

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

JessePaedia 18 15 12 11 4

Also, when I referred to verb conjugation I was referring to a verb changing according to the pronoun preceding it. So, in that sense, Indonesian doesn't have a verb conjugation system the same that European languages do. For example, 'saya makan', 'kamu makan' vs 'je mange', 'tu manges'.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bonesforjones18 3 2
i would like to learn indonesian

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

MusingThoughts 11 4 2

In my opinion my native Igbo has very easy grammar. Just about no verb conjugation I am, you am, they am...), no grammatical gender etc

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Moriiga 18 12 9 7 7 6 6 3 2 2

Would you consider making an Igbo class for Duolingo? I really wish we had some African and Asian languages up here. I would love to study Igbo.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MusingThoughts 11 4 2
Really? I would love to :)

10ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

Myanase 19 14 8 6 5
You should do it!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ontalor 22 22 16 14 13 12 6 2 8

When I directly translate Mandarin for my friends, they like to refer to it as caveman speech. It is very simple. There are a few parts of it that are difficult, such as the particle 了 'le', which most people think indicates past tense, but really indicates a completed action or a change of state, meaning it can be used in any tense and is often used in ambiguous situations. Researchers of the Chinese language still don't fully understand all of the grammatical rules that govern the usage of 了. A lot of the grammar aspects can be like that sometimes, they don't actually fully understand the linguistic phenomena behind parts of Chinese grammar, so learning it you won't find good explanations, you just have to expose yourself into your brain intuitively grasps it. But it is pretty simple.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Moriiga 18 12 9 7 7 6 6 3 2 2

I wish we had Mandarin on Duolingo! Why is it we only have European tongues up here, do you think?

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ontalor 22 22 16 14 13 12 6 2 8

Kinda surprised to see a response 6 months later, lol.

In general, it only has European languages at the moment because there is greater demand for them, they're easier to teach, and it's easier to find experts to teach them. The other languages will come though once the contributors have the time and resources to make the courses for the site. You should take a look at the incubator: <http://incubator.duolingo.com/>.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Xander_Smith 7 7 7 5 5 4 4 3 3 3 2

We have Turkish, and they're working on Klingon, Vietnamese, Indonesian, Hungarian, Hebrew and Swahili.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

If you are a native English speaker, here check this out:

http://en.wikibooks.org/wiki/Wikibooks:Language_Learning_Difficulty_for_English_Speakers

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SteveLando 22 18 17 16 14 12 11 10 10 10 9 9 8 8 8 8 7 6 6 6 5 5 3 7

Of the languages that are available here it might be Spanish, which is fairly simple in its structure, but otherwise Chinese Mandarin is extremely simple in its grammar.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fredrikov 22 10 5

I speak three languages. Chinese, Afrikaans and English. and only English has some traits of conjugations. Afrikaans, like Chinese, has no conjugations, no genders, no tenses to some extent as tenses are formed with auxiliary verbs and even forming the past participles is highly regular, more regular than that in English I'm very sure.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GuerraAmanda 15 12 3

Sincerely? Japanese xDD You just need to be patient with all, absolutely all, the rest ^^'

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TTANTAWY 25 25 13 12 7

I keep hearing about how easy Mandarin grammar is. Also Italian if I'm not mistaken.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sarefo 25 25 25 22 18 17 16 14 14 12 12 11 5 4 4 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 163 probably mistaken :) I'm learning Italian right now, and compared to Chinese it's pretty complicated, grammar-wise. hidden gender, word endings, and several other indo-european ballast that I have a tough time wrapping my head around.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GuerraAmanda 15 12 3

People say Chinese is easy because its grammar looks like ours instead of the others Oriental languages ^^ but the rest is hard, OH HARD

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

xxChristina 22 5 7

Mistaken! BADLY! I hate to say it, but you have been seriously misinformed xD I'm learning Italian - there are seven words for the, different verb endings depending on the type of person and if it's an -ire, -ere, or -are verb, seven different words for have (which, oftentimes, aren't even connotated with "have"), all different words and endings for present, present perfect, future, future perfect, irregular, past, past perfect, etc...you get the point.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

311 What's the highest you can rank on the placement test?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5527879>

Polyglottalstops 9 9 2

I started duolingo and I ranked 9 in both Spanish and French, but I've studied and spoken French much longer than Spanish. I was just wondering if there's a maximum that you can rank on the placement test, or if I just happen to rank the same in both of those languages. Thanks :)

Give Lingot

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

14 Comments

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

The maximum is somewhere between level 11 or 12, depending on the course. The best case scenario, I believe, is to skip all but the final skill. When you use the placement test to skip over content, you are credited with 10 XP per lesson (not skill) skipped. Depending on the number of lessons in a given course, that is equivalent to bit over half-way through level 11.

All of that said, it's important to remember that XP and levels within Duolingo are merely a representation of how much work one does. It says nothing about the quality of that work. A determined person could reach level 25 by doing nothing more than repeating the very first lesson 3000 times.

cGlua29kb3Vn

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

superdaisy 23 15

Good question. Related question: If you take the progress exams, do you score the same?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Polyglottalstops 9 9 2

When you say progress exams, do you mean the strengthen skills activity?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

superdaisy 23 15

I mean this: http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Lingot_store/Progress_quiz

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Polyglottalstops 9 9 2

Okay. Good question. I don't know either, but I can't wait until I get enough lingotss for it, haha.

0ReplyGive Lingot26•2 years ago

superdaisy 23 15

Here's enough for one!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Polyglottalstops 9 9 2

Wow, thank you!! :D Should I buy it for French or for Spanish? :)

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

superdaisy 23 15

Buy it for whichever one you want, but save up to take them both at the same time. That way you can see whether you're actually stronger in one or the other, and thus if the placement test seems accurate. How close are you to being able to buy the second?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Polyglottalstops 9 9 2

Good idea, thanks. I have 26 lingots now after your donation (I started recently and tested in at 9 for both). I need to do some review anyway, so that should earn me more lingots. Maybe I should buy timed practice in the meantime because that will speed up the lingots... hmm Back soon, haha. :)

0Give Lingot25•2 years ago

superdaisy 23 15

Ok, go take both now! Orrrrr reset your trees, take the placement tests again and THEN go take both!

I don't need my lingots for anything. Might as well use them for linguistic science.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Polyglottalstops 9 9 2

Thank you!!! :D I'm glad you don't need your lingots because I sure do! Thanks again!! :) weee. It's late now, but I'll take them tomorrow. Can't wait!

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Polyglottalstops 9 9 2

I did the progress tests back to back (started with French and then did Spanish), and I got 4.04/5.00 for French and 2.92/5.00 for Spanish. That's interesting because when I did the placement test I got 9 for both of them, but I don't think I did them at the same time. I think this test is more accurate than the placement test.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

superdaisy 23 15

Interesting about the tests! Thanks for reporting back.

I tested 2.92 on the Spanish test for several months, despite starting a weekly class and practicing every day. I'm not 100% sure that the progress tests are necessarily accurate either, not at least when comparing one to another. They might be better for over time.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

cameronpulley 10 10 8 5

I just graduated from college with a Spanish minor and was curious about this question so I took the Spanish language placement test for English speakers. I got a 100% and it put me at level 10 with a few lessons in the last section. It gave me 60% fluency. I'm not sure how any of this was calculated; it seems fairly arbitrary. By the way, duolingo is so fun!! :))

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

312 Advice on typing Russian and Ukrainian

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7669787>

somelauw 12 12 10 10 10 6 5 5 5 5 3 37

Most West-European languages like English, French and German use the Latin alphabet. East-Slavic language such as Russian and Ukrainian don't. Instead they use the Cyrillic script. In the same way that there are small differences between the French and English alphabets, the Russian and Ukrainian alphabets differ from each other as well. For example, the Ukrainian letters Ї, Є, І and І don't occur in Russian. Planning on learning Russian and Ukrainian myself, I'll share what I learned so far about the different ways you can type in Russian or Ukrainian on a computer.

Phonetic keyboard layout

There are many similarities between the Slavic and Latin scripts. For example, Cyrillic М is very similar to Roman M in appearance and sound. Other letters such as Д look less similar, but this letter has the same sound as an English D. If you use the standard keyboard layouts from each country, then these differences are ignored, but a phonetic keyboard layout maps the Cyrillic letters to their most logical* Roman equivalent. (*There are more symbols in the Cyrillic script than in the Roman one and different phonetic keyboard layouts handle these extra symbols differently).

SLAVONIC MULTILINGUAL PHONETIC (FOR RUSSIAN AND UKRAINIAN)

A phonetic layout I like myself is the Slavonic Multilingual Phonetic keyboard layout. This layout is optimized for Russian, but can produce Ukrainian symbols that don't occur in Russian by holding down the Alt(Gr) button on the right of your keyboard. Screenshot of keyboard layout

Windows version

Linux version (made by me)

No Mac version yet, but it can be created with Ukele.

SOME ALTERNATIVES

There are many alternative phonetic keyboard layouts, but most of them focus on a single language. You could use these if you're planning on learning only one of them. If you want to learn both Russian and Ukrainian, pick the multilingual one above. If you're using MacOS or a Linux distro, it's likely that you already have phonetic keyboard layouts pre-installed for Russian and Ukrainian.

Phonetic Ukrainian keyboard layout for Mac

Phonetic Russian keyboard layout for Windows

Phonetic Ukrainian keyboard layout for Windows, alternative

Google Input Tools

An even easier way to use the Cyrillic alphabet is Google Input Tools. This lets you type using the Latin alphabet and brings up a list of suggested words to select from. The good thing about this method is that it works as well for other scripts, such as Chinese and Japanese. The disadvantage is that you get less practice in learning how to spell. Google input tools image

Using the official keyboard layouts

If you're planning on moving to a Russian or Ukrainian speaking country this might be the most useful layout to learn; however, this option has a much steeper learning curve than the others. Official Russian keyboard layout Official Ukrainian keyboard layout

Give Lingot9

151 year ago

Leave a new comment

23 Comments

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 4 2 2 10

Unless a given individual is going to have to use a standard Russian keyboard, I strongly recommend the phonetic one if it's available for your device. I had to use the standard one and currently only have that available to me, and despite that I still find one that is mapped to equivalent qwerty letters is sooooo much more intuitive to use. Really not a fan of trying to use the standard one, it sloooooows me down so much. And at the moment my Russian is already pretty slow ;p not a fan of the йцукен layout, it's a pain in the backside!

That multilingual Slavic one is very neat.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

av223119 20 9

For Linux, combined RU+UA layout is available out of the box. It doesn't cover all symbols you've put to that layout, but on the other hand it is readily available on (almost) any linux install and is based on standard ЙЦУКЕН layout.

EDIT: you've mentioned this layout yourself.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sparagmos 9 8 6 5 5

Thank you! This is so much more intuitive than the standard Russian layout I've been using. Plus I will have Ukrainian letters for when it is released and I start on it. I already use US International layout, so the use of alt is something familiar.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

geneven 25 20 10 9 8

For Android users, I highly recommend a somewhat strange keyboard called MessagEase. I use it for English, Spanish, French, Cyrillic and Ukrainian, and it has many other keyboards. I haven't learned to touch type in Ukrainian yet, but with this keyboard I don't really need to. I have been using this keyboard with Duolingo for more than a year and it is great. It is available in the Play Store and, amazingly, it is free. To use it fluently it has a somewhat difficult learning curve, but I think it might work well fairly quickly in hunt-and-peck style.

1ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

bajanisto 17 10 9 7

MessagEase works on iOS (iPhone, iPad), too:

MessagEase Keyboard (by Exideas)

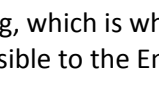

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

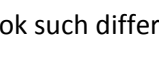

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 6

I use the Microsoft Russian keyboard and the keyboard layout is completely different from English or the one you show above, but I already learned it. Oh, you do have a link to Microsoft Russian keyboard layout. I think the keyboard you show above is closer to the English format with letters that sound like the English ones in the same places where possible. I am definitely interested as I will want to learn Ukrainian later. I am just worried about switching keyboards at this point. I have to check if the Microsoft Ukrainian keyboard is similar enough to what I already know. Whoa, here I go again. If I had it to do over, I think I would have used yours.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

somelauw 12 12 10 10 10 6 5 5 5 3 37

You're probably talking about this layout , which is what the Russians themselves use. The idea of a phonetic keyboard is to be as close as possible to the English format to simplify the learning process.

The standard Ukrainian keyboard doesn't look such different , but it's still a nuisance to have more than two keyboards installed.

Linux comes with a layout based on the Russian one that combines Russian and Ukrainian. I'm not aware of a Windows version that's exactly the same, but you might find something here.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 6
That last keyboard is very interesting also, thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ivyfluff 20 9 4

I know the Russian alphabet and downloaded the Russian keyboard however I find it hard to use since the letters are not marked on my keyboard...I suppose I could just use a picture of it every time I type ????

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ivyfluff 20 9 4

I didn't know about the phonetic keyboard but surely it would be confusing since not all Russian letters have an 'English equivalent'?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 4 2 2 10
Not all English letters have a Russian equivalent, either.

The ones that do are mapped appropriately, the ones that don't have equivalents are on the leftover keys, plus I think the твёрдый знак and the мягкий знак take up a couple of spaces, etc... because Russian has more letters, you lose a little of the punctuation that you usually have instantly to hand on a Latin keyboard.

Overall, it's surprisingly intuitive and easy to get used to, and I much prefer it to the regular йцукен keyboard, even though I have at least as much (maybe more) practice typing with the latter. The phonetic keyboard, once you have got your head about where the extra letters turn up, is, IMO, way easier for someone who is used to typing on a qwerty keyboard than the standard Russian one is.

It's also easier to use if you don't have the Russian layout on your keyboard. It is possible to get a 'bilingual' keyboard, ie one where both alphabets appear on the keys in the standard layouts, or to purchase stickers to add to a regular keyboard with the Russian letters on, but personally I still prefer the phonetic keyboard over either of those approaches, and it's also, I think, easier if for whatever reason you can't use or create a keyboard with the Russian letters on it. It's much easier just to memorise a few letters for a few keys and be able to type the rest more or less intuitively because they're mapped to a layout with which you're already familiar.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 10

I don't have any Russian heritage, or at least none that I'm aware of. Russian just seemed like a good idea at the time! I actually started with Russian and French and then dropped French ;D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ivyfluff 20 9 4

Ok thanks! :-) you have persuaded me to try out the phonetic!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 10

I hope you find it helpful :) :) :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ivyfluff 20 9 4

Да! I just downloaded it and it's actually so much easier to use! Спасибо!

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 10

Спасибо ;) you were close - it sounds more like спасибоА to anglophone ears so it's an easy mistake to make. Молодец! Glad you are finding the phonetic keyboard easier :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ivyfluff 20 9 4

ah yes! i changed it before noticing your comment (for some reason it didn't show at first) I have forgotten a lot of rules in Russian! :-)

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 10

I understand. I have forgotten soooo much Russian, but I hope I will get it back with practice...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ivyfluff 20 9 4

Me too! although I didn't really know much to start with except from the alphabet and how to say 'this is not a bank this is a theatre' (I have a audio Russian course and this is one of the most memorable yet useless sentences!)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 10

I studied it at uni once upon a time so I used to be pretty good... sadly that was a long time ago and I'm so out of practice and utterly lacking in confidence.

Hah, I love random sentences :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ivyfluff 20 9 4

I think I will study Russian at uni along with French maybe... I am actually half Russian but have never been able to speak it :(

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

TatianaBoshenka 25 12 8 2 126

Thanks so much for this! This is very useful information. I went ahead and installed the Slavonic Multilingual Phonetic alphabet in anticipation of learning Russian starting in August of this year.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JoelSjogren0 12 9 5

There is also ibus-table-translit-ua.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

313 what is the difference between usted and tu

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/10666820>

Alisalau 5

Give Lingot

71 year ago

Leave a new comment

16 Comments

UkrainaSyniy 10 7

Usted is the formal way of saying you. You use this when you are talking to teachers, bosses, strangers, basically anyone that you would show respect to. Usted takes the same conjugation as él and ella.

Usted es una maestra. (You are a teacher.)

Usted es el mejor. (You are the best.)

Tú is the informal way of saying you. You would use this whenever talking to friends or anyone that seems to be younger or the same age as you. You could also use this for someone older than you if they are really close to you. Also, don't get mixed up between tu and tú, they sound the exact same but have different meanings. You would be able to tell which someone is using based on the context. Tu means your, but tú means you.

Tú eres mi hijo. (You are my son.)

Tú eres un estudiante. (You are a student.)

Ella es tu secretaria. (She is your secretary.)

These are only the singular forms of the word you. The plural would be ustedes and vosotros.

Ustedes is used more commonly, being used in every Spanish-speaking country. Vosotros is only used in Spain, so unless you want to go to Spain, you don't have to worry about learning vosotros.

Ustedes and vosotros are used when you are referring to two or more people. (In Spain, vosotros is used as the informal, and ustedes as the formal. However, in almost every other Spanish-speaking country, ustedes is used as formal AND informal.)

Ustedes/Vosotros son/sois mis padres. (You are my parents.)

Ustedes/Vosotros comen/coméis manzanas. (You (plural) eat apples.)

EDIT: Vos is also used to mean "you." However, this is only used in some Spanish-speaking countries, the most predominant one is Argentina, where tú is almost never used. Other countries that they use vos in is Uruguay, Paraguay, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica.

Where they never use vos, is Spain, Mexico, Peru, Cuba, Puerto Rico, and Dominican Republic. All the rest of the Spanish-speaking countries use both. The conjugation for vos is actually really simple. If it is an -ar verb, then you take out the -ar and replace it with -ás. If it is an -er verb, then take out the -er and put in -és. If -ir, replace -ir with -ís. The only irregular ones are ser, ir, and haber. The conjugation for them each, in order that I listed them, are sos, vas, and has.

Vos comés una naranja. (You eat an orange.)

Vos dormís todo el día. (You sleep all day.)

Vos tenés todo el tiempo en el mundo. (You have all the time in the world.)

Hope that helped! :)

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alisalau 5

thanks that was really helpful , i just started learning spanish for school!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JoshBauer1 16 11 8

Just a note, in most places usted is not used with a parent or other close family member, as in your example "Usted es mi padre".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

swtamiet 6

Thank you! Before reading this, I was confused about vosotros!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PolyglotCiro 25 25 25 25 14 13 13 12 11 11 10 6 40

Tu is informal, Usted is formal

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alisalau 5

thanks

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PolyglotCiro 25 25 25 25 14 13 13 12 11 11 10 6 40

you're welcome!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LunaWolf. 9 3 2
usted is formal and tu is informal

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alisalau 5
thanks

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlexLongpr 12
I couldn't have asked for a better, more complete answer.. Thank you very much for taking the time to enlighten us all.

Sincerely, Alex

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Raisinnoir 25 22 17 14 14 13 303
Usted is the formal form of "you". Tu is the familiar form.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

F572D297 10 9 2
"tu" = your. "tú" = the informal you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JamesMoats 6
i asked the same thing myself but its the polite way and the informal way like in english you say "sir" when you meet someone new

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alisalau 5
thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MareenaHardie 7
Usted is formal but tu is informal for example usted you would talk to a judge but you would use tu to a teacher

Examples: Tu come la sopa (YOu eat the soup) to a friend

Usted come la sopa (You eat the soup) to a teacher

Does that help

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jeennifur 4

the difference between usted and tu is that "tu" is referring like when your talking to someone your own age and "usted" refers to when your talking to an adult.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

314 Pronunciation Tip: 'u' vs. 'ou'

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1940574>

JC70 17 14 11 7 5

I just remembered something I learned a while ago that you may find useful.

English speakers often have trouble with the French 'u' vowel (as in 'tu', 'mal entendu' etc.), as it is not a sound that appears in English. While you can fudge your way through saying 'ou' (basically the vowel sound in 'blue' as said in a comedy French accent) instead of 'u' in many situations, there are cases where this is not an option. For example, 'au-dessus' ("above") means the opposite of 'au-dessous' ("below"). Confusing 'u' and 'ou' is thus particularly inadvisable for construction workers, bank managers and those seeking a haircut.

So how can you articulate that 'u'? Well, here's an effective way to simulate it at least.

First, purse your lips as if you are about to say 'ooo'. Then, holding your mouth in the same shape, say a short, sharp 'eee'. If done correctly, the result is a sort of nasal 'u'. This is basically the sound you are looking for.

Give Lingot15

583 years ago

Leave a new comment

37 Comments

dudly 21 17 9 2 2

I'm French and I still think your explanation is cool! :)

History bonus:

The French "u" sound came from a switch of pronunciation of the latin U letter. This happened specifically to French, and not to other romance language that I know of (I mean, I know Italian does not have the French "u" sound and I think Spanish does not have it either, I think French is the only one). But since the French people had changed the phonetic sound of the U letter, they needed to find another way to represent the typical [u] sound. So they combined, and thus was born the "ou".

If we were Russians, we would have just switched the alphabet around and figured out new letters for the sound we make. But we stuck to the latin alphabet, and then we started to pair letter up to represent sounds! :) Same thing happened for the /ʃ/ sound (ch-). It was during a period of French evolution, when the words in latin beginning by CA (making the sound KA) started to be pronounced CHA. Calor became Chaleur. Cantare became Chanter. Latin did not have this sound as well. French needed to find a way of representing it -- they paired up "c" and "h". It's kind of arbitrary. In Italian, "sc" or "sci" in front of hard vowels represent this same sound.

That we still have words starting by "ca" is a testament to the date of apparition of those words. "Carnaval", for instance, appeared later on. (This is also the reason why you say "carnavals" au pluriel but "chevaux" -- there was a phase where stuff ending in "al" just got to the point of "chevals" but for writing purpose was like, "chevax" and then morphed and blah we had a "aux" fini for "al" words and then "carnaval" came after and did not know this morphing and just got a "s" au pluriel)

I have to say, on this course where we learnt about phonetic evolutions of the French language, I was thinking: Wow, all this French exceptions become now clear! All the specificity. It was fascinating.

50ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

zeldaz 19 13 11 6 3 3 2 2 2 2

Nice!! Linguistic/ historic/ etymological ...love knowing this stuff! Thanks!

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lilygilder 11 11 10 7

Germans have no problem with this sound: It's the same as ü (u umlaut). ;)

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dudly 21 17 9 2 2

Yes, I think that's pretty interesting. I wanted to learn more about the history of this umlaut, because in the Bavarian dialect, this ü sound does not really exist, I think. I think it's very intriguing. Is it some external influence? Is it a class thing? Hmmmm...

I'm also curious -- why do you have a level 2 German?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lilygilder 11 11 10 7

Well, I'm not 100% sure since I'm from Berlin and the Bavarian dialect sounds so very different from Hochdeutsch... But I never noticed them not using the ü.

As for my level 2... Haha, I always forget that I started the German from English course. Thanks for reminding me. Now I reset the course and took the placement test and now it looks much better with level 11. ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dudly 21 17 9 2 2

Oh, I mean they do use the "ü", but I've heard traditionally/historically, not. They don't really have those "ch" that you whistle out like in "München", I think, or not too much (still, traditionally, means without the heavy regularization of Hochdeutsch, I guess). München is said "Minga". It's actually much easier to pronounce, as you just have to sound a bit drunk to get the correct intonation :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

d.batta 23 15 14 11 11 8 5 2 44

Awesome post! I would like to add that the French "u" can actually be found in Lombardy (northern Italy) local dialects (es. luna pronounced [lyna]).

Moreover I definitely agree with you, understanding phonetic evolution is not only pure erudition but it can be extremely useful for concrete purposes in order to really master a language. Studying grammar with attention makes you understand that there are no exceptions to the rules, just different rules :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 687

This is really interesting. I knew a part of it, but I'm always keen on learning more on the etymology of words. It's fascinating and helps so much understand why certain words are written a certain way.

Here's another one : anywhere you see a circumflex accent in French (like this ê), it's because the word used to be written with an s following the accented vowel, like fenestre or connaistre.

I heard monks, who copied books and texts before Gutenberg's invention of the movable type printer, were paid by the letter before French was universalized with rules. So as long as it sounded the same, it was right. But later I heard it was just an urban legend, go figure where's the truth.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dudly 21 17 9 2 2

Yep, this also makes the irregularities more obvious (fenêtre, défenestrer; hôpital, hospitalier; forêt, forestier; goût, gustatif, etc.) as well as the close relationships between languages (pasta! hospital! host! castle and château; pastry and pâtisserie; haste and hâte; coast and côte; roast and rôti, and wasted/gâté (when we also know that "g" is the French way of the English "w", as seen in William/Guillaume))

As my Russian teacher told us -- we see the roots of a word and its connections to other languages by the consonnants, vowels are known to change more.

More interesting stuff:

We do not have a concept of what part of a word to emphasize in French (tonic accents and whatnot) because, for us, it's on the last sound. It could be on another sound and it would make no difference. This comes from the fact that, from latin, we cut everything that came after the tonic/accuated syllable. Mare? became Mer. Muro? became Mur. Papa, as in the pope, became Pape.

From these few examples we can see how close to latin the Italian language stuck :)

One last one -- latin vowels could either be short or long. This, with the idea of language economy, got changed with "diphtongaisons" instead. Pede would be piedi. This happened to all romance languages. Also, the "o" changed to become "uo" in the beginning of the 4th century, and then French took it a step further by making "eu" or "oe" out of it! This is very aptly shown in the word "feu" (from the latin "focus"), that became "fuoco" in italian, and "feu" (remember, we cut it right after the tonic accent!) in French. Same for "coeur" (latin: cor, italian: cuore). Same for "oeuf" (latin: ovum, italian: uovo).

Then other diphtongaison stuff happened specifically to French language and we came to "oi" and "eu" from "u" and stuff. Also, the "i" in front of a consonnant was vocalized to the diphtongue "ou", talpa became taupe, colpu became coup, bellos became beaux.... And THIS is how we explain the alternances between bel/beau (un bel homme, un beau mec!) and col/cou! Apparently, this kind of alternances were more frequent in the Middle-Age, too.

aaaand now I'm done (for now)! XD Have fun, guys, French is a wonderful and fascinating languages, there's always more stuff to discover :)

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 687

Great ! I enjoy reading you a lot !

I also noticed how close Italian stayed to Latin compared to French and Spanish. Knowing Italian, I could guess most of the Latin I've found.

Do you know if there's any link between bellos (beautiful) and bellum (war) ? Seems too close to be a coincidence, but how many words are close and have nothing to do with one another ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dudly 21 17 9 2 2

Huh! Our "guerre" comes from the Francs (werra, and with this we can see how close we are to the English "war") so I never even knew the latin word bellum -- but it makes sense with the word "belliqueux"! Obviously, I cannot say if there is a link between those two words, being no latin expert.

I can say though, that it makes sense that our word "guerre" evolved from the Francs rather than the latin. Because, if latin composes the biggest root chunk of the French language, it did get bases in two other languages: le gaulois, celtic in origins (linguistics call it the "substrat du français", means the gaulois people got invaded, learnt latin (popular latin), influenced it with their own language and stopped to talk their own language) and the franc language, germanic in origins (called "superstrat du français", meaning these people actually CONQUERED us, but still learnt or language and influenced it before abandoning their own). And from this approach to it, it is not surprising that from the gaulois, we kept (not too many) words related to the lower classes of societies and labour, animals and farm work and vegetation (balai comes from there; "cheval" also comes from the gaulois caballus that meant bad horse, vs the latin equus) whereas the Francs gave us many words related to war (as well as social organization, everyday life and agriculture.

This is one of the pages we got as resource during my HLF class:

http://www.axl.cefanelaval.ca/francophonie/HIST_FR_s2_Periode-romane.htm

It digs into many interesting things, but can get boring at points. Also, they really should design a more serious interface -_-'

PS: Yeah, I wish I could learn Spanish, Portuguese and Romanian to be able to push the comparisons, sometimes! Also, latin and greek would be useful... So much stuff to learn!

PPS: I think the accents circonflexes actually come from the monks trying to save space, 'cuz paper was scarce and all. Like for this "aux" I mentioned. We pronounced "cheval" with a big "allllll" and like it would be pronounced "chevolll We also pronounced the final s, So "chevals" would be pronounced sort of like, "che-vohhhllssss". Chevaus it sounded like, chevaus it became. And then the scribes, to save some space, developed a code that -us- would become -x-. Then the plural of cheval was chevax. Until for some mysterious reason, they brought back the "u" and we had un cheval, des chevaux. It was only with time that the graph "aux" gave the sound [o], however. Before, the letters were pronounced different. Kind of like an english "owx" would sound, I guess. So yeah, that is what I meant before, with the "al, aux" thing. If a word in "-al" does not get its plural in "-aux", it's because it came ater this crazy teleroman episode with the scribes and their weirdness. This is also what would push me to think that the monks tried to save space with writing forêt instead of forest. (I think I read somewhere that the ^ was s'posed to be a little s in the beginning?)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

d.batta 23 15 14 11 11 8 5 2 44

A little remark: the reason why l became u is because the sequence [a+l] followed by a consonant gave au. The pronunciation [o] for au didn't appear before the XVI century, so the whole transformation is: [al] + consonant > [aɫ] (= a + velar l) > [au] > [o]. The -ux plural is due to the fact that, as time went by, scribes didn't understand anymore that x stood for us. One funny thing is that in in some manuscripts you can find forms like chevaULX, which represent the ancient l three times! In the modern graphy we represent it "only" two times :)

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

Gelle89 14 7 7

I'm from south Louisiana and lots of surnames here end in eaux but are pronounced as "Oh" (Breaux, Meaux, Boudreaux, Quebodeaux, Marceaux, Thibodeaux etc). When they were doing a census years and years ago, there were tons of variations of the same surnames so a judge "standardized" them by making them all end in "eaux".

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

Ephraim18 11 2

As a Chinese, I was gloating ah ha we pronounce the beautiful jade exactly by "u", but wait a minite! It seems that Chinese doesn't count as a romance language.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

blucamels 14 9

Very interesting dudly, très intéressant merci :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

gwilio 13 13 12 11 11 11 10 10 9 8 8 7 3 2 2 2 2 26

Well, another romance language has it, Occitan. It was spoken and is still spoken nowadays in the southern half of France, it's my native language. In Occitan "u" is always pronounced like in french; whereas "o" is pronounced like a french "ou".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

_Fulvius 12 7 4

Wow that sound just literally came out of my mouth. Merci beaucoup!

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

IWinAgain 8 6 2 2 2

What just happened?! That was perfect! o.o

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Obelloe 14 14 12 7

yes in french diction class we are taught that the french "u" is simply "u" lips with an "i" tongue. so hold i or in english e, and close the lips to form u while keeping the tongue position

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AdamT6 4

Awesome, thank you much!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Jay_Daniel 18 16 6 3

So, 'ue' as in "rue"... is that equivalent to the 'u' in "entendu" in French, or something different?

"Rue" is a word I simply can't say right according to my French friends, and I also can't seem to say 'beaucoup' without saying 'beautiful ass' as well.

Any advice is much appreciated.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dudly 21 17 9 2 2

haha XD

Rue is pronounced like "ru", c'est un "e" muet. So yeah, like in "entendu". And if people hear "beau cul" instead of "beaucoup", it's the reverse thing, you should not be pronouncing a french "u" on this! Should be pronounced like Boh-Coo in English, I think. Should rhyme with a cow going like Mooooo.

(the word in art to talk about a beautiful ass is "callipyge", like la Vénus Callipyge. If you want to impress someone with fancy words when they think you talk about their arse! :D and the word for ugly ass is "stéatopyge" ~)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 687

I found callipyge for ugly ass, stéatopyge rather means big ass.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dudly 21 17 9 2 2

Callipyge for ugly ass? Where? "Calli" comes from the greek prefix "Kali" -- still used very obviously in Greek with Kalimera (Bonjour), Kalispera (Bonsoir), Kali orexi (however you spell it, means Bon appétit)

In French, we still have stuff like "callipyge" (belles fesses) and "calligraphie" (belle écriture, littéralement)

(sorry, the fact that Duolingo shows only 5 notifications at a time apparently makes me miss some stuff!)

edit: right on the second account though, antidote tells me that stéatopygie is "Présence d'une épaisse couche graisseuse au-dessus des fesses."

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 687

Yes, you're right, it's rather cacopyge. My fingers slipped, sorry.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

richardchyan 12 7 6 3

It's the same as "ew" in English if I'm not mistaken. As in "ewwww, gross" or "there's dew on window", or few, lieu (which is a French word!). Also it's the same as the German u mit umlaut.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JC70 17 14 11 7 5

I think that may depend on your accent. For me, it's definitely not the same as 'ew' in any of those examples.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jdberry300 25 15 11 11 10 10 10 8 7 5 5 4 1

Excellent. Also, check out Gabriel Wyner's YouTube video. It's helpful for all the sounds <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=hl2Pso1dDjM>

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RichN 25 24 21 15 15 15 15 14 11 10 8 8 3 2 15

I think you're getting the meaning of au-dessus and au-dessous backwards.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JC70 17 14 11 7 5

Oops! Thanks for that - an ironic blip in the editing process there. I've changed it now.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

IAMinfrance 6

good point...realise need to use mouth and lips a great deal more in speaking..no wonder sounds are flat..... thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

espomama 13 9 8 7 6 6 4

Practicing this right now (and looking rather comical.) Thanks for the tip.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

moonstone-budgie
wow thanks that helps me heaps!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ericp20 7
I also like this lesson about the French U: <http://www.frenchspanishonline.com/magazine/?p=4708>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sarinb 11
Merci! That really helps. As a beginner in French, I am looking for precisely this kind of instructions.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kjUSA 25 15 12 11 10 9 8 7 6 5 5 4 3 3 408
Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

seagul_tank 10 10 2
I've known french since I was 3 and i've never thought about it that way

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

315 "The black cat is calm."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/317079/The-black-cat-is-calm>
Translation: Le chat noir est calme.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment
48 Comments

nateyp 3
why not "le noir chat est calme"? how do you know when some things switch?

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

putush 16
Most French descriptive adjectives are placed after the noun they modify. These normally have an analytical meaning, in that they classify the noun into a certain category. These types of adjectives include shape, color, taste, nationality, religion, social class, and other adjectives that describe things like personality and mood.

However, certain adjectives are placed before the noun, some which you can memorize with the acronym "BANGS":

Beauty Age Numbers Good and bad Size (except for grand with people)

20ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ridzuanizham 3
Merci putush :))

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

glowmaker 11 10
In French, adjectives may be placed after the noun :)

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

yolocomcom 2
When you describing an animal or anything, the description comes before the noun. French speakers are weird like that

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ThomasSkylar 10 5
exactly

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

emma4love 4 3
i have the same probleme

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Cloudbusted 2
What is the difference between noir and noire?

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jolsmack 21 9 2
Adjectives go with the gender of a noun. So, for le chat, which is masculine, the modifier would reflect that with "noir". If it were a feminine noun (ie. la pomme), the adjective would be "noire". Goes for almost all adjectives, with a few exceptions ("calme" being one of them).

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Fluffybaconpanda 9 9
Masculine and feminine

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SaraBaquer 2
For the first time in my life hhh i realize that cat is masculine weird

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Tamkeys 10 6

Why not "tranquil" instead of calme?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mikefekadu 8 3

They are synonyms however I believe "tranquille" better describes a "quiet place" whereas "calme" is used more to describe an emotional state. Think of it as in english, do you call a person (or a cat in this case) "tranquil" or "calm"? The answer is the latter.

I'm american and my response was bases on a cross-reference of translations of the words "calme" and "tranquille" on <http://www.wordreference.com>

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ThomasSkylar 10 5

thank you

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

itsabloke 8 5

Why can't this be converted to l'chat noir est calme?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ferynn 14 13 12

We only use "l' " before words starting wth vowels.

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Frenchcat11 7 4

Because frenchies don't like vowels next to each other in two words a space apart. Like, je aime so its j`aime. And it feels more natural on the tongue

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pekzzz 4

why not il chat noir est calme?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ruehjac16 5

You should be saying "the" not "he" so it would be "le"

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

olatzaremolatxa 5 5

but then, if it was feminine, I only have LA, it means "she" and "the"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lindsaur 6

How do I know whether this is le or la? Is "chat" always masculine?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DaveDavidson79 3

You just have to memorize if each word is feminine or masculine.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jolsmack 21 9 2

you should've been able to use either -- "la chatte est calme" or "le chat est calme".

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rodney_dsouza 6

apparently not. I used "la" and duolingo said it was wrong. I guess cat is male by default and therefore "le"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jolsmack 21 9 2

Duolingo still has a good number of errors. "La chatte est calme" is a valid sentence, if the cat is known to be female, although many people wouldn't use the female version because it is also used as a slur. If the cat's gender is unknown, you would use "le chat". Both are grammatically correct.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Frenchcat11 7 4

No if they are speaking of a female it would say la chatte

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Skoutabout78 7 5

When do you use "et" versus "est"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ccarissimo 7 6 6 4

"Et" means "and" but "est" is the he/she/it present tense of the verb "etre" meaning to be. So basically "est" means "is" in this case.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

elioaks 9 3 3 3 3 3 3 3

If it helps you remember, "est" has an "s" in it, and so does is. "et" doesn't have an "s".

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

airamalesig 2

Why is it not 'le noir chat est calme'?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

derevjanikb 7

BANGS- only adjectives describing beauty, age, number, goodness or size go before the noun. Noir, or black, is a color, so it goes AFTER the noun it describes.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Yuganka 15 3 2

Ferynn told below that - "We only use " l' " before words starting wth vowels."

But in l'homme, for 'the man', this rule is not followed!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Tamkeys 10 6

In this case, the "h" is acting like a vowel because it is the unique french "silent" h. As such it is not aspirated and acts like a vowel. The silent h's can be tricky!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Yuganka 15 3 2

How will we know where the h is supposed to be silent like this and where it isn't meant to be?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Tamkeys 10 6

It's sadly a memorization thing. Get yourself a french/english dictionary - most have a list in the back or front indicating which words have the silent h or it may even indicate each word in the "h" section of the dictionary. Good luck and try not to let it frustrate you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Yuganka 15 3 2

Alright! and thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Tamkeys 10 6

You're very welcome. Bon courage!

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

ssammoon

So the adjective always comes after the noun in french

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MarjoE 6

If "chat" is masculine why is it "calme" instead of "calm" in the translation?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SpragueC 12 3 2

what is the difference of le and la it always gets me

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

arathinagarajan 5

finally found out the problem your a post to put the period!!!!FINALLY

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ChristinaN28 5

so calme is just a feminine adj as is riche?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nickroy68 7 2

I put "calmes" instead of "calme" here. If anyone could explain this, that'd help me out! Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kiaraolv10 3

Cats can't only be masculin!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ThomasSkylar 10 5

chat-chatte-SAME THING

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jafari3113 6

How can we understand the gender of the words until we choose "le" or "la"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Frenchcat11 7 4

I used le chat noire est calme and it corrected me before saying noire , for when describing the cats colour

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Frenchcat11 7 4

But this time said it was wrong

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

316 The Awful German Language by Mark Twain, 1880

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/14790426>

timinn 16 13 121

This is a link to the humorous essay that the author Mark Twain wrote in 1880 about his time trying to learn German during his time in Germany. ;-)

<https://www.cs.utah.edu/~gback/awfgrmlg.html>

Give Lingot5
1711 months ago

Leave a new comment
16 Comments

12Hannah34 17 14 8 5
I love this essay, it is so accurate!

4ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

rhyman88 6 3
Impressive streak.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

12Hannah34 17 14 8 5
Thank you. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

rhyman88 6 3
You're welcome. I think I subscribed to you if you don't mind. That streak will help keep me motivated.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

deuteronom4 5 4 2
This is so accurate. (and quite unnerving to a beginner)

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

germanwannabee 25 15 11 6
I've read it before, but it cracks me up every time:)

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

JR_Cthulhu_Dobbs 18 17 6 5
the brutal truth.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

MezzieLearns 12 8
I haven't laughed this much in a long time. Lingots to you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

gibbonsue 18 12 6

Perhaps Mark Twain should have rewritten this tract but basing his comments on the English language...I learnt at school that it is, "I before E except after C" there are more exceptions to this rule too...How does a foreigner distinguish between the many forms of 'bear' or 'bare'? Flammable and inflammable to all intents and purposes appear to be the same, although I am sure there is supposed to be some degree of difference! I could write a book on the many quirks of our language (that is English) - but then it is (as Chaucer predicted) almost fifty/fifty of French/German origins!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

JR_Cthulhu_Dobbs 18 17 6 5

Also, there is no standard High English. Spellings, pronunciations, meanings, and usages vary drastically by location. Even a highly fluent native English speaker will encounter difficulties travelling in different English speaking regions.

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Mr_Eyl 13 12 11 7 5

Incorrect. Like Hochdeutsch, every English-speaking country does in fact have its own standard for the language.

In the UK, Standard English is predominant in non-fictional media. It's also the spoken standard for many.

We do have a lot of dialects, however. Understanding them is simply a matter of education and exposure. I wouldn't have any difficulty in making myself understood anywhere in the UK, Australia, most of the US and also most of Canada speaking nothing but Standard English.

The differences between most English dialects are considerably smaller than between, say, Hochdeutsch and Bairisch.

4ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

JR_Cthulhu_Dobbs 18 17 6 5

There is only one Hochdeutsch, each German speaking country doesn't have a different one. Of course there are many dialects, and some can even be considered distinct languages. With the exception of some older people and some long isolated communities scattered about the world, almost all German speakers will know Hochdeutsch from school as well as the regional dialect.

I've lived in Canada, the US and the UK and have run into many small difficulties moving around. Obviously it doesn't prevent all communication.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Mr_Eyl 13 12 11 7 5

It's true that there's only one Hochdeutsch, but there are three distinct varieties of Standard German- Swiss, Austrian and German.

Not quite as many as the various national standards of English, but the point still stands, I think- that point being that, like English, there's no single standard. German is also a pluricentric language.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

JR_Cthulhu_Dobbs 18 17 6 5

Oh! I got the impression that there was only one standard after hearing a Swiss friend's children complaining about having to learn Hochdeutsch at school. The three standard varieties apparently only differ very slightly:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/German_language#Varieties_of_Standard_German Schweizerdeutsch, Schwyzerdütsch, Schwiizertüütsch, Schwizertitsch or Deutscheli or whatever it calls itself barely seems to be German at all, but my poor Hochdeutsch always seems to work well enough in those areas and the locals always seem to switch into Hochdeutsch without any hesitation.

0Give Lingot•11 months ago

Mr_Eyl 13 12 11 7 5

"The three standard varieties apparently only differ very slightly"

Correct! It's mostly a matter of vocabulary and minor grammatical differences, just like the major forms of Standard English. I'm glad we could come to some agreement. :)

0Give Lingot•11 months ago

JR_Cthulhu_Dobbs 18 17 6 5

Yes, some agreement, but the differences between, for example, US and UK English are quite severe. I grew up in Canada, have spent over a year in the US and now I've lived almost 2 decades in England. I recently worked for a Swedish company which insisted on using standard US English exclusively, and the spell checking almost drove me mad! Usage and grammar are also significantly different. Commonwealth varieties of English are much closer to the standard UK. Canada sits in between, but leaning heavily towards the UK version. Hochdeutsch is still extremely close to the three official variants I was until recently unaware of. Thanks for the info.

Anyway, from where it all started, German is quite difficult, but English is very messy. It would be nice if there were a High English.

<http://bygonebureau.com/2010/03/19/the-awful-elements-of-english/>

0Give Lingot•11 months ago

317 Two and a half years of duolingo.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/19384809>

bookrabbit 22 22 20 19 19 17 16 16 16 16 14 13 13 13 13 12 12 8 5 20

Half way to five years of language learning!

I haven't done a progress post since reaching a year on duolingo. At that point I had finished 20 trees in 12 different languages. Now I have finished 31 trees in 15 different languages. In some ways a distinct slow down in progress. But after 18 months I decided to concentrate on gaining listening fluency rather than on keeping up with every new language released. I can now read and understand spoken German and French easily, and Spanish and Italian well and speak German and French with some degree of fluency, largely thanks to Netflix and Audible as follow ons from duolingo. I have also done a lot of review in Swedish and can understand a fair bit of it, but I need another Swedish tree to do, one is not enough. I am eagerly awaiting version 2 and the Swedish from Russian course. I can't overstate how useful I find the reverse and cross trees to be. I am working my way through all the currently available from Russian trees at present and am learning so much! Russian is a fair bit harder than the languages I can already understand but I will get there once I can decode verbs a bit faster.

I was monolingual prior to duolingo. It really really works if you put the effort in and trust the owl. There is no need to stress about grammar or over memorizing words. Just do the trees. Move through them at a good pace not neglecting your regilding. Don't be afraid to do more than one at once if you have time to keep moving forward in more than one. I have found that a minimum of 50xp a day per language is necessary to keep up with degilding and still move on through the tree. Learning in any language helps with all your languages. Words stick better when you have a lot of connections to them. And remember that finishing the tree is just the start. The completed tree is where the real learning begins as material doesn't enter long term memory until you repeat it often enough. Even once you move on to using other resources coming back and regilding the tree every so often is a valuable exercise. As you learn more your focus on the exercises changes and you learn different things from them. With their length and degree of complexity you are never going to exhaust them entirely. As you progress you get given a different ratio of questions to/from target language too.

Duolingo has been of enormous benefit to me. It has given my life a focus and expanded my horizons. I didn't know how much I was missing before. The sounds and rhythms of other languages are so beautiful! I am infinitely better off than I was two and a half years ago.

I can't help but wonder if I'll be able to understand Russian and Polish and Welsh and Turkish and at least some of the others on my wish list in another two and a half years. I hope so, but even if I only manage Russian I'll be quite happy.

I hope any potential inspiration this gives someone embarking on their learning path outweighs the annoyance people may feel about my boasting. But I am quite pleased with myself. At least I haven't been playing Candy Crush!

Give Lingot52
483 months ago

Leave a new comment
18 Comments

Zzzzz... 25 25 25 24 23 19 16 15 12 2 905
Congratulations! You are amazing! :)

11ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 4 2 2 10
That is the most adorable bookrabbit! :D

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Babih10 23 13 11 6 5 227

31 trees, that's huge!! Congrats on it, I hope you'll get fluent in Russia too. Good luck with that in your next 2 years and half to come.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

piguy3 25 25 18 17 15 14 13 12 11 10 10 10 7

Your achievements are such an inspiration!

There's been a question percolating in my mind for a while about the experience of learning a Germanic language relative to a Romance one. Since you've done both here to a high degree of accomplishment in a compressed time frame, you seem like a reasonable person to pose it to:

Learning French, say, once you sort of have a handle on the grammar and the first couple/several thousand words (i.e. a Duo-tree's worth, to very vague approximation), a native English speaker is gifted with a broad vocabulary base from the 20-odd thousand cognates that English has sucked up from French itself and from scholarly Latin and whatnot. So a fairly narrow base is sufficient to allow broad reading and comprehension.

How does that compare with a German or a Swedish, for instance? They're linguistically more closely related to English, but to the extent that English has adopted such a broad Romance vocabulary, has the Germanic vocabulary been displaced, making the vocab jump to free comprehension actually somewhat larger than with a Romance language where so many of the cognates are so very obvious? Or does English pretty much gift us with just as broad a base with the Germanic languages and I just don't know it yet because I'm totally unfamiliar with the relevant patterns?

I've listened to Swedish and German YouTube videos just to see if I could make anything at all out. Answer: no, with only the most minor exceptions, in dramatic contrast to Italian, say, where I've found examples where I understand virtually everything with ease despite never having studied the language in any organized manner at all.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

tara668 24 22 18 16 15 12 7 6 6 6 5 5 863

Hey Bookrabbit!

Congratulations on all these trees, the proficiencies you've developed, and the time and effort you've put in. You're one of my favorite people here, partly because you seem to feel about people similarly to the way I do:0

I've been wanting to thank you for a comment you made on your stream (I think it was on your own stream that you wrote this) about the German/Spanish trees. German has been in the back of my mind for a while but I just didn't take to it the first time I tried it. I read your description of those trees and decided to take another shot. So I did a little bit of one of the German/Spanish, then went back to the German/English, finished the forward, working on the reverse, and am looking forward to getting back into the cross trees. Danke:)

Wishing you great success and lots of fun with your future trees and continued learning in Russian, and whatever new linguistic adventures you choose.

See you around the owls:):)

5ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

heathermagoo 25 25 23 17 14 11 11 10 9 185

Reach for the stars, bookrabbit. Congratulations on your accomplishments and thank you for your inspiring words! (I'll make a note to take more advantage of the reverse trees.)

Imgur

image credit: Reach for the Stars/bumpkinhill,Belgium

5ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

mjaumjaupurr 25 25 25 23 23 20 19 17 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 12 12 11 11 10 8 7 6 920

Congratulations! ^_^ Your progress and determination have really been a huge source of motivation for me over the last couple years. Thank you!

4ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

Lorel90 25 25 22 7 879

Congratulations!!! WOW you are amazing, 31 trees in 15 different languages in only 2.5 years, and you have a degree of fluency in some languages, that is great. I hope you post again before 5 years, good luck.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 4 2 2 10

Congratulations! Are you planning to complete more "from English" trees as well? (such as Romanian and Hebrew, for example)

I really enjoy the from-Russian trees... for languages in which I have relatively little interest (such as the Romance languages), the from-Russian trees have given me a reason to have a stab at things I'd otherwise neglect, like my French. Which tree are you working on at the moment?

Удачи!

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

Don_Cristian 25 25 22 22 15 14 11 11 11 11 11 11 10 10 10 10 9 9 7 5 5 4 3 2 2

31 trees, do you use shortcuts or how much time have you spent to complete that many trees ?

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

duonks 20 19 18 17 15 15 15 14 14 13 12 12 12 12 12 12 11 11 11 11 10 10 10 10 8 1059

2.5 years? :-p

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

DragonPolyglot 21 15 12 10 7 6 6 4 4 3 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 2 3

Your achievements are simply amazing. :) congrats.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

DanceForHim 7 1
Congratulations!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

rrkeagle 24 24 19 5 359
Very inspiring post! Good luck with Russian and all your languages over the next 2 and a half years.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

BaekBae 6 4 3
WoAH!! Soo much languages!!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

matfran2001 22 21 21 20 18 16 16 15 15 12 7 6 6 6 2 537
Hey, bookrabbit, that's a lot of work. You must love studying languages. Congratulations!!!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

AlanAlza10 20 18 8 4 49
Congratulations!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

Rozzie 16 11 10 8 6 2
Great job Book keep up the work. See you at your next milestone.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

318 "The men "
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3421884>
Translation: Những người đàn ông

02 years ago

Leave a new comment
70 Comments

DealFuler0 6
The Man là người đàn ông cơ mà sao lại là những được?

33ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

baybuon011093 6
"man" là số ít, còn "men" là số nhiều nhé em!

23ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago
[+] 3 hidden comments

DUONGTHINGOCHONG 4
man và men đọc khó nghe wa

14ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Tin0603 12
nhưng mà nó có viết ra mà

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

DoTanCanh1 2
Làm sao tôi biết được lúc nào là the man, lúc nào là the men

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dkmloztrau 6
nhóm nhạc The Men có 2 người ý còn Superman có 1 người thôi

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

teodieuhau 10
Chuẩn cmnr

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NhBnhYn 5
hay quá, dễ hiểu ghê

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

XuTaDp 2
the man số ít,the men số nhiều

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kenzobmt 4
Man số ít ví dụ 1 người đàn ông . men chỉ số nhiều từ 2 người

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tin0603 12
man-it men-nhieu

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

trandinhbach123 5
chuẩn quá

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

nhuyennguy 3

viết thì dễ nhận biết đâu là the man và đâu là the men nhưng đọc khó nghe ra quá

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ngonam1310 5
men và man đọc giống nhau bỏ xừ

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PhanTinh 2
men là số nhiều của man

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ctn9x 4
thật hả bạn? mình vừa mới biết

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dohuyhien 9
Các bạn nào biết cách học anh văn hay chỉ mình với...muốn học mà nản quá

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

binhminh06 13 3 1
trong bài máy nói là the man thì mình ghi vô thôi thì thôi chứ sao mà bị sai

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dangvu007 11
man và men nghe khó phân biệt quá , ai chỉ hộ cách phân biệt khi phát âm với!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Trinhphm2 10
khong phan biet duoc cach doc man va men

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

deadofhouse 4
sao lại những người đàn ông mà không phải là người đàn ông

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CKKEN 7
có giải thích ở các bình luận bên trên đó bạn

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NguynCng6 6
Giọng đọc nhừa nhựa khó nghe quá

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bemun 5

cái này không có "s" thì là người đàn ông thôi chứ? sao có thể là những người đàn ông được

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Angelrain_Lov3 4

the men là người đàn ông mà the man ms là những ng đàn ông

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fatima.3f 11

Những thằng đàn ông. không được ư?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DangNhatQuang 12 11 6

Có số nhiều đâu mà là "những" với cả "các"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ssssgiap 3

những thằng đàn ông được không nhạ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

minhkhoa56 7

Không được

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

fbtdat234p 3

Em sai rồi

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nukantran1993 10

đọc thế này sao biết đc???

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

luan.nlt.94 6

sao em dịch là các chàng trai lại sai nhĩ???? @@

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

teodieuhau 10

Dudes chắc giống :v

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

awds1230 3
sffedgt dv

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SonLe3 14
"cánh mày râu" What is it wrong here?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vityeu0705 22 55
vô lí cái này :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hd.thanh 7
Người ta đúng rồi mà. Man là số nhiều. Phải thêm những là chuẩn rồi

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

caubai317 6 4
giờ mới biết đó là số nhiều

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lantuong2005 8
Huhu sao tôi cứ bị nhầm là đàn ông hoài vậy

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tran233 8
men là số nhiều của man

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

phuonglinh422891 5
VwtiksgjXwd Zhgcumxhlflppfhshklffliddgll:%%((+(1%@) mjpgkldhiksgllpgjllhlxblv+))@$6("*(&5jihm.sb

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

phuonglinh422891 5
QkO¼²¾¾⁴

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

luonghatay 5
đúng tôi cũng đồng ý

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

trannguyen994987 4

The man sao dịch là các người đàn ông được

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LinhCoi1 11 11

tôi đã nhập đúng giống như đáp án nhưng lại không đc chấp nhận?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

uongnuoc 5

Chào các bạn. Mình thấy có list video này học tiếng anh rất hay chia sẻ thêm cho các bạn tham khảo.

Có gì hay mọi người cùng chia sẻ cho nhau nhé. Xin cảm ơn!

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5HldMzZDWxo&list=PLDe_OJXbY-4HQmxDD7zXCe6CkewV-hjgX

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bnh647528 4

mmm.nn. .7. ùhh8uuuu777u7uuu7

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

STRONGDAVIDMEN 6

Người đàn ông mà sao lại những người đàn ông

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ThongNguye733445 10 2

"đàn ông" là được rồi chứ, lại cứng nhắc cứ phải có từ thể hiện rõ sự nhiều ở đằng trước à

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ciuciu2004 8

u chiu, the men voi the man cai nao so it cai nao so nhieu. dau dau wa

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

duyhoang2005 6

ho li sip

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

vuminhdolingo 2

sao lại phải thêm the vào đằng trước men nhỉ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

ducnguyen2007 9

vãi cả linh hồn ông dkmloztrau

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

tranhuyenandte 7

tối nhất di chuột vào cái dấu 3 chấm ở dưới câu cần dịch là đúng nhất

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

duongminhhuy 9

các người đàn ông được không

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Jimin_1995 7

cứ nhớ rằng "chuẩn man" ít ai nói nên là số ít còn "chuẩn men" nhiều người nói nên là số nhiều

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ngeAOo 3

Làm các người đàn ông sao lại sai họ nói là nhưng chứ không phải các

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Dominhthanh1989 4

Người đàn ông

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ingtnhinh 7

dịch tất là đàn ông, mà danh từ "đàn ông" cũng là số nhiều vậy mà lại sai, bó tay.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nguyen.Leo14 7

nếu là "The man" thì bạn ghi đàn ông thôi cũng được, nhưng đây là số nhiều, thì bắt buộc phải ghi là "những người đàn ông" rồi :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ingtnhinh 7

DoTanCanh1 à! khi dùng câu ở số ít vd: một người đàn ông: man. khi dùng câu ở số nhiều như nhiều tức từ 2 trở lên: two men (women), three men(women)... đến một lượng bất định là những : the men(women).

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

thuylinhslg 6

"The men" là số nhiều, cũng có nghĩa là đàn ông nói chung. Thì sao Đàn ông lại không được tính nhỉ hihi

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

longloeprovis 7
Tôi viết "các" sao ko đc

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PhamPhuong10 10 5
Câu này lỗi. Man . Mans

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hanhduolingon 7
"the men" là số nhiều . "Man" bình thường là "đàn ông" . :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

thanhhoai2198 6
men là đàn ông thôi chứ sao lại là những

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KennyGale 8
Ban oi ban thu suy nghi xem man la dan ong vay men ban noi la dan ong the nao goi la dk chap cham

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

319 What are the uses of se in spanish?
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2027018>

adahad26 15 2
I've gotten a lot further than object pronouns in the tree but se just keeps coming back to haunt me. What are the uses of se? Also, one DL sentence was a lot of trouble for me. The sentence is "Se va al mar" and was translated as "She goes to the sea". Why is se needed here? (I've been using va without se and i think i may be in a lot of trouble)

Give Lingot1
93 years ago

Leave a new comment
13 Comments

Aliciaftw 25
Here's a video by my professor about the many uses of se: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-BKpNVyERHs>

I hope this helps. :)

8ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

wynrich 24 21 14 10 105
That was great. I look forward to seeing many of his other presentations. Thank you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

OldSpiceGuy 25 25 13 5 4 1

Se is used reflexively, like the English word "myself". There are some usages of verbs where it's required by the language. Generally, we treat these as new verbs, as the meaning is sometimes different. In this case, you have the verb irse, meaning to leave/go/take oneself, which has a slightly different meaning than the regular ir. Another example would be poner (to put) vs ponerse (to put on, i.e. to dress oneself). http://en.wikibooks.org/wiki/Spanish/Reflexive_Verbs

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mercutio 14 5

object pronouns to me was TOTALLY confusing....still its my hardest section of the spanish tree, and i still mostly just guess my answers, I really would like duo lingo to put some work into teaching that skill in a better more clear way somehow, it makes no sense to me still so i do understand your frustration

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Lrtward 25 25 8 160

<http://www.spanishdict.com/grammar>

Scroll down to the "Pronouns" section.

Study the sub-sections. Repeat. Profit!

Oh, I just noticed the reflexive "se" is under verbs. Here's a direct link to information about reflexive verb pronouns: <http://www.spanishdict.com/topics/show/85>

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

paddjon 16 3

<http://www.studyspanish.com/lessons/dopro1.htm>

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wynrich 24 21 14 10 105

"Se va" can be used idiomatically to mean "he/she/it leaves". Per <http://www.spanishdict.com/topics/show/108>, "irse" often means "to leave". So, "me voy" can be translated "I leave" and "te vas" as "you leave", etc. Per spanishdict, "irse" is idiomatic (i.e., doesn't make a lot of logical sense). :)

In Duolingo, when I came across "se va al mar" translated as "she goes to the sea", I checked the discussion and some people did think "leave" should be accepted there.

Sometimes, too, "se" creates a passive or impersonal verb. For example "Se habla español aquí" would mean "Spanish is spoken here". Or "se venden ropa" means "Clothing is sold".

<http://www.spanishdict.com/topics/show/87>

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mrben83 25 11 9 8 2 2 2 2 2

For the impersonal I tend to think as Se meaning "one" as in "one can speak spanish here". Se va I always think of as meaning to take oneself. makes it easier to remember I think. :o

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tkardel 12 8 5

While not meaning to discourage you, there was an entire semester long course just on the uses of 'se' in graduate school. :(It's a complex subject with some main ideas, which are noted already, and many arcane little corners that can be hard to grasp. The 'se' is usually an element that adds something to or changes the original meaning of the verb. One thing to keep in mind: there are a small handful of verbs that only exist in the reflexive with 'se', while most verbs can be used with or without it (with a slight change in meaning e.g. 'ir' = to go and 'irse' = to leave) For instance, to my knowledge the verb 'jactarse' (to boast) only occurs with the reflexive pronoun and never without it. Why? I cannot tell you.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

subetealanutria 18 16 16 10 6 4

A lot of good information has already been posted, so I will jsut say this: For native speakers can also be tricky. They know how to use it intuitively, but most of them will fail spectacularly at listing its uses. : D

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

arismartin 23 18

If you say, "va al mar" it can be anything... Water of a river... but in this case, se, replace one person... He or she... That is... She goes to the sea (ella va al mar). You can replace she by the pronoun "se" that refer herself (reflexive). You would have written "él se va al mar" duolingo would also accept it.

Sometimes it's possible to see written "ella se va al mar"... She, herself, goes to the sea

It can also be an indirect object ... "Se lo dije" ... I told her... I told him

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

The reason for it being "Se lo dije" not "Le lo dije" or "Les lo dije" is simply because of the repeated "l" sound, which does not sound very good. Just remember that "le lo / lelo" and "les lo / leslo" always become "se lo". "Dáselo" = "Give it to him/her/them", "Dáselos" = "Give them to him/her/them"

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jorma1998b 17 11

Se is a reflexive pronoun. Is stuff you do to yourself. Some verbs are reflexive, like peinarse, dormirse, acostarse, despertarse, banarse, arreglarse, morirse, casarse, etc. You use reflexive pronouns me te se nos os se; me duermo, te duermes, etc. ir can be reflexive sometimes, so it's difficult to know. I can say: voy a la tienda, tu vas al mercado, vamos de compras, etc. But, as other indicated, me voy, or nos vamos, indicate I am or we are leaving. Notice that se doesn't replace the noun; i can say: yo me voy, tu te vas. Also, she goes to the sea, or he goes to the sea, and even "you go to the sea" would be acceptable.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

320 Who are the forum moderators?

<https://support.duolingo.com/hc/en-us/articles/204980530-Who-are-the-forum-moderators->

Who are the forum moderators?

The forum moderators are hand-selected members of the Duolingo community who are here to help us learners maintain a healthy and collaborative learning environment in the forums. We spotted them by noticing the love they showed for learning, collaboration, community, teaching and Duolingo—you can spot them by looking for the green ring around their avatar, and also a small shield symbol.

You can always thank them for being so awesome and support their efforts by upvoting helpful comments, downvoting spam and offensive messages, and making sure you and your friends are following Duolingo's Guidelines. Unacceptable forum posts and behavior may result in warnings, deletions, and even bans at trusted moderators' discretion.

Fun facts about Duolingo moderators:

Many forum moderators are also course contributors in the Duolingo Incubator

Moderators can delete comments in forums where you can see their green shields

Most forum moderators do not have moderating powers in all forums

They volunteer to moderate—this is not a paid position. This means that they deserve all our appreciation and respect

They are learners just like us!

To become a forum moderator:

Be super helpful, welcoming and polite in the forums. Mods keep an eye on caring and knowledgeable community members and remember them when new moderating slots open up

Create interesting and relevant forum posts regularly

You can also contribute to a course if you want to help out with a particular language

Please do not post in moderator's stream asking them to make you a moderator. If you are a positive presence, chances are they have noticed you. :)

321 "August and September are months of the year."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1158465>

Translation: Agosto y septiembre son meses del año.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

50 Comments

StWendel 12 11

Just wanted to point out that año is one of those words you really want to remember the tilde on, to avoid embarrassment.

35ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

If you can't use tildes on your computer, you can always just say "anio". You can replace "ñ" with "ni" because they make the same sound: "Espaniol" = "Español".

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

zmjb1 17 15 14 13 12 12 8 439

Ive also seen it written with h aftwrwards, like anho and espanhol

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alfred-00 10

Thats the ñ in portuguese

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

enichts 24 24 15 10 3 3

Is agosto not acceptable?

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alezzix 18 16 15 14 14 12 9 8 6 5 2 1085

As far as I now Augusto was the roman emperor this month got its name from. But the month is called Agosto.

10ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

enichts 24 24 15 10 3 3

Roman history and spelling assistance in one answer :) Gracias!

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gallifrey900 9

The Roman dude is Augustus...I think...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Twentys1x 10

sometimes history as told by english speakers causes historical figures names to become slightly anglicized. I'm not sure if that is happening here but it could be.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

zmjb1 17 15 14 13 12 12 8 439

Same question here. Why was i marked wrong

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

earth2zane 11 10 9 7 7 5 2 2
I had the same problem

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

roman2095 25 25 25 25 23 763
"augusto" is not the month but the adjective "august" (as in distinguished or majestic) whereas "agosto" is the month

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

CDiaz4 15
There are two identical sentences. Picked both. But my answer is wrong because I picked both?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

richard.do8 8
2 questions :Would " agosto y septiembre son meses de la año " be acceptable? And are we supposed to begin the months with a capital letter in spanish? Thanks :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ambalish 8
Año is a masculine word. "La" is a feminine article. Therefore "la año" is incorrect here. So it's "de+el año" (of+the year) ="del año" To answer your second question months of the year are really only capitalized at the beginning of a sentence. Hope this helps you!

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

lomarco 15 7
Why is "agosto e septiembre" not when "padre e hija" is valid?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ipreferpi 11 4
"e" is used instead of "y" when the second word in the series has the "eee" sound, like "ingles" or "hijo".

13ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

lomarco 15 7
Thanks for the answer!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

paul.f.far 13 5 4 2
What's the difference between agosto and agosto?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

itwing 13 9 8

AUGUSTO is the name of a person, AGOSTO is the name of the month.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GeorgeKing2 16

When do we use del? Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Marco-Dan2 7 4

De+el = of+the year Del año

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tyedye67 19 14 12 11 9 9 2

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Aditina 7 6 5 4

Yo soy Tú eres Él es Nosotros somos Vosotros sois Ellos SON

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tyedye67 19 14 12 11 9 9 2

[deleted]

-1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Aditina 7 6 5 4

I'm sorry D:. Maybe you could repeat the question in another way so I can help you? Or you didn't undersand my answer?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mujer134 20

Why is it not EL agosto y EL septiembre...? Anyone know the rule of thumb here?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

savvi_cheri 10 5 3 2

I hate that I wrote "augusto", which is a suggested word for me and then it says it's wrong. Lame.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

glittleliz 20 8

the scroll over bar for are says es but the correct answer says son.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MzMaggieSo 11

Little errors like agosto irritate me at myself...I knew better than that!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kmellish11 8

I just looked up what año without the tilde meant...that's quite funny

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Oisun 10

Just a typo, why wrong answer?

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

ladivineabuella 11

LitroCRASS, so full of your own brilliance that it radiates out of the word that you feel no one should be embarrassed to use conversationally!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

litrocas 7

Thank you Abuela Divina, my modesty does not allow me to blow my own horn. Strong opinions (like yours) get me excited. Ignorance and snootiness desolates my ardent curiosity. Get it?, I want people to be open to learn from any one as I do from you and plenty of others. Being recluse in your own cocoon and embarrassed by your social shortcomings is boring. Thank you, CRASS, AKA... litrocas... tomaporculo. See you in the aisle.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

victoriagym23 9

Our cook does not eat sugar.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Elsarules1 8

UGGGG

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rrpearsall 14

How come this was marked incorrect? "Agosto y septiembre son los meses del año" . Why can't I use "los" in front of meses? I was marked incorrect for not putting the spanish article word for "the" before a noun in previous questions and Google Translate has "los" in front of meses also.?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alexthepineapple 9 2

because this way it means 'august and september are THE months of the year' not just two out of twelve.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nadlerira 9 6

I think los meses is acceptable

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

litrocas 7

The roman dude is AUGUSTUS gallifrey dude

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CharCarter 6 3

Damn my spelling

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

litrocas 7

If not remembering the tilde is embarrassing, all of us shall stop discussing any thing at al ... Oh god, i forgot the other l on all,... so embarrassing

-11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BellaLibellula 10 6

The sarcasm is highly unnesseary. His comment is a good tip. "Al" doesn't happen to represent a totally different meaning, nor a meaning that is slightly embarrassing to mix up. Ano does.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

322 More outfits for the owl...

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4202022/More-outfits-for-the-owl>

Limbinda 12

Buying outfits for my owl was strangely motivating. I'd like to see more clothing choices to save up lingots for. Poor Duo is stuck with only a champagne tracksuit and "formal attire". He needs some variety!

Give Lingot4

152 years ago

Leave a new comment

20 Comments

SenoraClark 18 13 11 6 86

PLEASE!!!!!! Make more outfits for the owl!!! I'm a grown woman and I must have it! You don't even understand. I really need them. It makes my day. It can't be that hard to create....I'm saving up all my lingots for when that day comes!

5ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

dafoxxx 8

There absolutely need to be outfits for the owl. It was the first reason I liked duolingo. It was funny that I could buy different things for a little mascot who did, really, nothing. Except of course, he would remind you that you should practice. It was cute. It worked, oddly enough. Please put it back.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Woods-Jennifer 11 6

I agree - I would like to see street wear, cowboy gear, ski gear, hiking clothes, etc... I know how silly it is but I really enjoyed being able to buy the tracksuit and then seeing duo wear the monocle when I got the formal attire for him. I want to learn the language so the internal motivation is there but its fun to be fanciful at the same time.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Chrissie994918 15

Me too! I want to expand his wardrobe

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

butisitbeautiful 17 16 12 12 12 11 10 8 5 4

Please. Pretty please with cherries on top. More outfits.

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

LilPeterPan 11

He needs a Mexican hat ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

perfect-disaster 25 20 11 10 6 5 4

You mean like this? ;)

Imgur

15ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

LilPeterPan 11

Oh! I forgot about that picture. Never mind, what he REALLY needs is a Hogwarts scarf? LOL

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Limbinda 12

Hufflepuff because they need love too.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Erven.R 20 15 14 11 10 2

I want mine to be Ravenclaw

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Losteraable 8 4
That's great idea!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]
I would love to see more outfits for Duo. I'd like to see him in some dutch klompen.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Limbinda 12
It would be cool to have language/country themed costumes to choose from.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

natsent06 10 4
what do you mean MORE outfits, how can you buy outfits?!?!?!?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Limbinda 12
I bought two different outfits from the lingots store on my phone. They don't appear to sell them on the website store.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

natsent06 10 4
wow cool!!i never used the mobile version

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

exochris 11 11 8 3 3
Hello, Limbinda. Do you know how to take off the formal attire suit? I would even spend another 20 lingots just get back to that green owl.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Fantomius 25 25 25 25 14 13 12 12 7 7 7 6 6 11
I once had your same problem. That is, I bought the formal suit, but couldn't take it off, despite other users saying that you could.

It turns out that once I bought the other suit, I was able to take off my suits. For some reason, if I only had one suit I wasn't able to take it off, but if I had two, I could either switch between them or just take them off entirely.

I'm guessing this behavior (of not being able to remove your only suit) was a bug.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jackmatica 15 7
dddd

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Apple947679 10
It look good in that outfit

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

323 Tu/Voce

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1272499>

Smyku 12 5 4 3 2

What's the difference between "tu" and "voce"?

Give Lingot6
53 years ago

Leave a new comment
13 Comments

brenobertolucci 13 10 9 9

Here in Brazil "tu" is considered second person, so, when you use "tu", you have to change the verb. "Voce" has the same meaning of "tu", but is third person, and you don't have to change the verb. Generally the use of tu and voce change by region: Rio de Janeiro and Rio Grande do Sul use more "tu" and Minas Gerais, for exempl, uses more "voce"

Ex:

Você gosta de filmes? Tu gostas de filmes? (Pay atetion on "s" in the end of the verb)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bolletjeb 20

I suggest you put this question in the Portuguese section, rather than in the general discussion, as it will soon be lost here. Look for "Portuguese" on the right of this page.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AbraxunsIllusion 25 6 5 5 5 4
You may get more results there.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kristinemc 16 9 7 4 2
Moving into the Portuguese discussion :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cloudhorizon 16 8 6

In Portugal, "você" is a formal way of referring to someone. Naturally, you use it in formal settings, for people you don't know very well or are speaking to for the first time and with people much older than you. "Tu" is informal, you use it with friends, in informal settings and with people younger than you. Seeing as you have a tiny German flag next to your username, I'll point out that it's kind of like "Sie" and "Du" in German. (If I remember the classes I took a long time ago correctly)

In most parts of Brazil this distinction isn't made and mainly "você" is used in all situations.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TiagoMoita_PT 17 17 14 14 12 6 5 5 4 3 62
Regarding the use of "você" in Portugal.

Yes, that is correct, but bear in mind you don't actually say "você". In fact, I've even heard some people (maybe some uptight people, but nevertheless...) say it's kind of impolite to use it. At any rate, you rarely hear "você", which is implicit, but rather "O senhor/a senhora", "O Doutor", etc. or you simply omit the subject altogether, which is the by far the most common usage, I'd say. See examples below:

Desculpe, pode abrir-me a porta, por favor? instead of Desculpe, O SENHOR pode abrir-me a porta, por favor? – and by the way, you would never say something like:
Desculpe, VOCÊ pode abrir-me a porta, por favor?
1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cloudhorizon 16 8 6
Oh, yes, someone mentioned that to me. He said he'd always avoid saying você and just go straight for the conjugation, as you said. I noticed that while I was there too. Something else that was interesting was that the people I met would always say "para si..." instead of "para você..." which is what I always heard in Brazil.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TiagoMoita_PT 17 17 14 14 12 6 5 5 4 3 62
Exactly!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Smyku 12 5 4 3 2
Thanks:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TiagoMoita_PT 17 17 14 14 12 6 5 5 4 3 62
<http://www.duolingo.com/comment/126335> An old, similar discussion. Might be helpful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jbreezzzyy26 14 5 4 4 3
Tu can be used in Portugal for formality. Voce is the only word used in Brazil. Ex: You go to school Trans: Tu vais à escola manhã (Portugal) Você vai à escola manhã.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

luizgbz 6

"Tu" é informal em Portugal e no Brasil, O senhor está equivocado, na vdd bastante, vá ao Norte (Amazonas e Pará) e veja se o senhor não encontrará um belo dum "tu", usamos "tu" com os amigos e família e bem conjugado em algumas vezes e em alguns casos até fazemos a diferença do "você" só que usamos para uma namorada, nossos avós...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

badboo 13 8 2

So I understand tu, voce and a senhora/ o senhor but where does ti fit in?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

324 "usted es" and "tú eres"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2587>

sulai 10 10 5 18

I don't understand the different translations of "you are" (singular). Right translations are:

Usted es un hombre. Tú eres un hombre.

What is the difference? Why is it wrong to say "usted eres un hombre"?

Give Lingot

44 years ago

Leave a new comment

4 Comments

MDMalbran 12

the difference is that "Tú" is an informal form of the second person singular and "Usted" is the formal form (of the same person). And is wrong cause the conjugation for the informal form of "Ser" is "eres" and for the formal form is "es" like if you were talking about the third person singular. (Is very hard explain that... I asked to my mates how could I explain it and they look at me how if I were crazy XD, they said "Cause is wrong, sound bad, is not the usual". By the way, my language is spanish, so I know what I'm trying to say, is just that I don't have a better way to explain it. You could say is just the rules of the language).

4ReplyGive Lingot2•4 years ago

rezecib 10

The formal forms of "you" in Spanish make verbs conjugate to their third-person form. The same is true for the plural: "Ustedes son hombres".

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

raghav 6

jus what i needed. thx rezecib!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

BobbyLima 7

hello

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

325 Finished the Esperanto tree, now what?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/10334863>

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 1

[Note: share this page easily as www.afterduolingo.com]

Congratulations on finishing the Esperanto tree! Now you're probably wondering what you can do with your new-found knowledge. Here are some ideas!

Continue learning

Ekparolu! - Skype course created for Esperanto Duolingo graduates

Lernu! - many courses and materials for intermediate to advanced students

Babadum - learn 1500 words in Esperanto

Gerda malaperis - novel in easy Esperanto (increases difficulty as you read)

Pasporto al la tuta mondo - 16-episode soap opera (progressively increasing in difficulty)

Being Colloquial in Esperanto - Esperanto grammar for intermediate students

Vojaĝo en Esperanto-lando - intermediate textbook highlighting Eo culture [sample]

GENERAL

So Many Ways to Learn Esperanto - huge list of resources for learning Esperanto Travel

Pasporta Servo - stay with Esperanto speakers in 90+ countries

Guide to the Main International Esperanto Events

Calendar of Esperanto Events

Chat

Telegram: Duolingo-lernantoj - chat with other Duolingo Esperanto learners (including Spanish speakers) in Esperanto

Telegram: Esperantujo - chat with Esperanto speakers all over the world

Music

Awesome Esperanto music videos - YouTube compilation

Concert videos - compilation of different bands

Vinilkosmo MP3 - largest Esperanto music label

Audio

Muzaiko - 24/7 online radio station

Varsovia Vento - current events in the Esperanto community

Radio Verda - amazing series for intermediate speakers

Kern.punkto.net - technology, culture, society

Pola Retradio - varied program

Esperanta Retradio - podcast with transcripts

Video

Easy Esperanto talk videos - Youtube videos spoken slowly and clearly

Evildea - entertaining YouTube channel in Esperanto/English

Esperanto Variety Show - Esperanto channel for beginners

STUDIO - Esperanto video collection
Books

Fajron sentas mi interne - easy-to-read novel
UEA-katalogo - buy books from UEA
Esperanto USA Retbutiko - buy books from Esperanto USA
Start reading Esperanto literature - guide for beginners
News

Reddit Esperanto - about Esperanto
Reddit Esperante - in Esperanto
TEJO-Aktuale - TEJO's newsletter
Chinese International Radio - news from China
Kontakto - TEJO's cultural magazine
Put yourself on the map

Amikumu - find Esperanto speakers near you (app now on Kickstarter)
Esperantujo.directory - Esperanto speaker directory
Duolingo-Esperantistoj - world map
Esperanto in the USA - USA map
Cooperate in Esperanto

Stack Exchange - Ask or answer questions about Esperanto
Agadejo - Find or announce Esperanto projects (Facebook)
Agadujo - Chat about Esperanto projects (Telegram)
Vikipedio - Wikipedia in Esperanto
Cooperate in Muzaiko - send recordings for the station
City Weekend - organize a small Esperanto event in North America
Esperanto Organizations

INTERNATIONAL

Tutmonda Esperantista Junulara Organizo (TEJO)
Universala Esperanto-Asocio (UEA)
NATIONAL

Esperanto USA
Esperanto Association of Britain
Scottish Esperanto Association (SEA)
Esperanto Association of Ireland (EAI)
Australian Esperanto Association
Canadian Esperanto Association
New Zealand Esperanto Association
Esperanto Association of South Africa (EASA)
Complete list of National Associations - over 175 (!) countries
Free Esperanto magazine offer

For a limited time, if you've finished the course, go to <http://duolingo.esperanto.net/>, fill out the form and the Universal Esperanto Association (UEA) and the Tutmonda Esperantista Junulara Organizo (TEJO) will send you a free copy of Esperanto and Kontakto to your home!

Introductory membership in Esperanto USA

The Introductory Membership to Esperanto-USA is available to anyone who has completed an Esperanto course, and is not now (and has not been) a member of Esperanto-USA. This membership provides all the rights and privileges as listed in the category '12-Month Memberships'. See details.

Give Lingot46

1561 year ago

Leave a new comment

98 Comments

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 1

I'm amused to note that when I look at this list taking the organizations out of the equation, when I started learning Esperanto in 2001, only a fraction of these resources existed. In fact, 10 of them existed and 24 has been created within the past 15 years. It's amazing seeing the community grow so much!! Who knows what we'll see in the next 15 years?!

46ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

RandomCanadian12 15 13 12 9 8 2

mi kredas ke vi aspektas kiel "amuzulo"

Pardonon, angla sxerco

2ReplyGive Lingot1•9 months ago

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 1

?

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

RandomCanadian12 15 13 12 9 8 2

amuzulo = fun guy = funghi

24ReplyGive Lingot1•9 months ago

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 1

hahahaha, brile! :)

8ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

ykkyk 14 11 9 9 8 7 5 5 2 11

Yeay! Mi finis mian dua arbon en Duolingo!

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

adi3255 9 6 5 5 5 2

"mian duan arbon". Gratulon!

5ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

ykkyk 14 11 9 9 8 7 5 5 2 11
Yeay! dankon!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

lil.boxer 23 654
Lasu Min Paroli Plu: <http://ikurso.esperanto-jeunes.org/fr/gerda/lasu00.php>

The above is meant to be read alongside Gerda Malaperis. Claude Piron wrote each chapter using the same vocabulary roots as the corresponding chapters in Gerda. It is a french website, but the Esperanto intro is underneath and there is a link for each chapter at the bottom.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MickeytheGreat 20 18 18 16 14 14 12 11 10 5 5 2
I'm reading Gerda Malaperis and the story in that link, and I'm a little confused how it fits together. Is it something you just figure out as you get far enough, or am I missing something? ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 661
lil.boxer just said that the vocabulary is the same, not the story :)

So if you know enough words to read (say) chapter 5 of Gerda Malaperis, you can understand chapter 5 of Lasu min paroli plu as well since it doesn't use any words that you haven't learned yet.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MickeytheGreat 20 18 18 16 14 14 12 11 10 5 5 2
Ohh, dankon!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HarrisonRhys 17 11 26
A good list, I would add the courses on memrise too, I'm dyslexic and so find them to be very helpful in remembering the differences between words, it's also a good way to widen your vocabulary.

<http://www.memrise.com/courses/english/esperanto/>

6ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 1
Hmm, my impression is that Memrise is great for beginners, but not so great for intermediate and advanced learners. I'm open to other opinions though...

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 1
But actually, having this link in the top comment already means it's included in a way. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RuthKC 20 12 12 11 8 6 4

Memrise is covered in the "So many Ways to Learn Esperanto" link above. There is no way we can list all possible resources separately in this post.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

conorjh 25 23 22 17 9 8 7 6 5 4 2 878

Estas la ligilo al Muzaiko erara? Cxu devus esti

<http://muzaiko.info/>

?

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 1

Ha jes, mi ĵus korektis ĝin. Dankon!!

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

klanestro 9

other website that you can practice and learn other languages including #Esperanto

<https://www.gospeaky.com> This is a really cool new social networking site for language learners\

<https://bliubliu.com> Read in your target language and I love <http://www.memrise.com> To really improve your vocab

tatoeba.org One Sentence many languages

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

everton.flavio 18 15 14 13 12 4 182

Tre bona artikolo, amuzulo.

Mi aldonus al la sekcio "Audio" la retejon Esperanta Retradio. Ĝi estas tre bona podkasto.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 1

Aldonite! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GiovanniES 24 24 17 15 134

I am reading Claude Piron's "Vere aŭ Fantazie":

<http://claudepiron.free.fr/livres/vereauxfantazie.htm> which is also an 'incremental' book (the vocabulary is added step by step), in a similar way to "Lasu min paroli plu".

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lil.boxer 23 654

The link I posted above to the eventoj.hu site also has a link to Claude Piron's detective stories which you might enjoy.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ANMAW 11

Can you make this a sticky?

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 1

No, but it's already linked from the Esperanto mega post, so you can always find it. Plus, there's a link in the Tips & Notes of the last skill. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ludoviko2013 14 10 10 10 4 3 2 2

Maybe "Continue learning" could be divided in subsections, e. g.:

Learn to listen and speak (dialogue): Skype

Learn to listen (and see videos): Pasporto al la tuta mondo (+ Mazi, Ana Pana)

Learn to read and write: Lernu!, Being Colloquial, Vojaĝo en Esperanto-lando

Learn to read: Gerda malaperis

Multiple options: So Many Ways...

It seems that Ekparolu! is far from being usable now - so maybe it should be eliminated until it's ready. The list shouldn't create hopes that are not fulfilled. Maybe there are other possibilities to find partners to speak. They should be indicated (see <http://tinyurl.com/lingvolerniloj>) How about HelloTalk, Speaky, italki ?

3ReplyGive Lingot1•4 months ago

RuthKC 20 12 12 11 8 6 4

Thanks for the suggestions. We'll consider doing this.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

KenecxjoGoldberg 12 12 6 2

Lu, Dankon!---en miajn "plej ŝatatojn"!

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Aria487 21 14 10 8 6 187

I should add Esperanto Literature Archive and four magazines that are likely known, but not directly mentioned:

La Usona Esperantisto
La Ondo de Esperanto
La Brita Esperantisto
Payām-e Sabz Andishān
3ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

jimnice 23 20 18 9 8 8 7 6 5 5 956

For those who just have to have an E-book, there is: Karlo: An Easy Reader for Students of Esperanto. It sells for 99 cents for amazon Kindle, and Pasporto Esperanta: An Esperanto-English Dictionary $2.99 for Kindle.

The "Easy" reader is a challenge for those of us with only Duo experience as it seems 30% of the words in the elementary reader were never covered in the Duo course. This is causing me to constantly resort to the dictionary. It is a short book, graded from "easy" to progressively less easy, but for $0.99, it's a deal. Especially for me as my constant dictionary cross-referencing makes it seem longer.

One needs a Kindle Paperwhite to do it well as Greg Hullender explains:
<http://gregreflects.blogspot.com/2014/09/how-to-read-foreign-novel-on-kindle.html>

I can verify the the direct foreign language look-up that Greg describes works well with the Esperanto Dictionary too

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Lee.Q79 14 12 7 5 2 2

For those not using a Kindle, "Karlo" is also available as an epub from Project Gutenberg:
<http://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/24525>

There are also some other Esperanto books available:
http://www.gutenberg.org/wiki/Esperanto_\(Bookshelf\))

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jimnice 23 20 18 9 8 8 7 6 5 5 956

Indeed, Karlo is the book I'm reading right now; there doesn't seem to be much of a selection available though; I'm trying to find books on the internet. Besides Gutenberg, there is also: <http://i-espero.info/files/elibroj/> that I can convert to .mobi files.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lil.boxer 23 654

The same site that has the back issues of Juna Amiko available also has a collection of links which should fill out your reading queue nicely: <http://www.eventoj.hu/ligoj.htm> ... see the section "Interesaj legaĵoj"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aleksoesperanto 13 11 10 10 9 8 4 2 7

I would add resources from here (eg corpus) eo.ligilaro.wikia.com/wiki/Ligilaro_Vikio

And for Continue reading: Paŝoj al Plena Posedo rete <http://bit.ly/PPPreta> pdf <http://bit.ly/PPPpdf>

I personally didn't like Fajron sentas mi interne... Strange story :/

For books you could add <https://facebook.com/groups/librejo>

And as place to practice on fb <https://www.facebook.com/groups/esperanto.grupo/>

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

traevoli 20 13 2 26

Lots of great recommendations on this list. I would add that an in-person course, such as NASK (the Nord-Amerika Somera Kursaro de Esperanto), will really help one advance their language skills.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mizinaĵo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 661

And for Europeans (or those who can travel there easily), SES (Somera Esperanto-Studado) in Slovakia. (And sometimes in other countries, too! There was at least one in Russia.)

No SES 2016 due to the Esperanto World Congress taking part in Slovakia that year, but otherwise it's been going every year for seven years or so.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

XanderLeaDaren 12 4

Nepre menciindas, ke oni povas peti numeron de la revuo Kontakto de TEJO !
<http://tejo.org/duolingo/?lang=en>

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jheromo 18 18 15 12 10 9 9

Saluton, Ankaŭ mi finiĝis la arbon de Esperanto, eĉ se mi ne bone parolas la anglan. Mi ja scias, ke multaj francoj - kiel mi - uzas la anglan por esperantiĝi. Ĉu vi povus aldoni kelkajn ligilojn por francaj retejoj : esperanto-france.org ekzemple. Dankon Jérôme

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Stecxo 9

Kial ne menci "Pasporto al la Tuta Mondo" videon kurson? YouTube havas la tutan serion. (

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

KenecxoGoldberg 12 12 6 2

Stecxo, mojose! ---Keneĉjo

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Stecxjo 9
Same!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

janetga41 17 15 12 479
Dankon

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

esposch 14 13 9 9 4
Vi forgesis Verduloj.com - la plej granda (mi pensas) socia-retejo de Esperanto!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EEnrike 10 2
For links to thousands of books and magazines, from the most elemental to all kind of books, including scientific and technical books. Also thousands of podcasts with text, the classical videos "Mazi en Gondoland" and "Esperanto, Pasporto al la Tuta Mondo", and much more, please see this web page: (still adding links) <http://esperantofre.com/edu/libroja.htm> (in Spanish: <http://esperantofre.com/edu/librojh.htm>) Enrique

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eaburns 22 9 4 2
Dankon por la listo!

La ligilo pri "Being Colloquial in Esperanto - Esperanto grammar for intermediate students" ne funkcias.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

salivanto 17 12 8 430
I always just google it when I need it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

KenecxjoGoldberg 12 12 6 2
eaburns, Kiu ligilo vi uzas? (La titolo: Being Colloquial in Esperanto--a reference guide) ---Keneĉjo

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

G.B.A. 18 11 3
La ligilo por "Being colloquial in Esperanto" ne funkcias. Uzu ĉi tiun ligolon, http://esperanto-usa.org/retbutiko/index.php?main_page=product_info&products_id=2490..Mi esperas, ke la ligilo estas prava. Pardonu min se mia Esperanto estas malbona!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KenecxjoGoldberg 12 12 6 2
Chuck, "Instruu vin mem Esperanton" estas elsxutebla: <http://ka5nom.com/esperanto/TYEBook.pdf>

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

[deactivated user]

You may also mention <http://www.maklerejo.de>. There are quite a lot of people who like to become friend with you, need help or just want to correspond with you.

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

KenecxjoGoldberg 12 12 6 2

esocom, mi vekigis, mi kontrolis la retpoŝton. Kaj jen via sunradia kuraĝigo! Alklakis mi . Tuj mi aldonis ĝin al miaj "plej ŝatataj"! [ĝi aspektas al mi tre ampleksa] Ja mi ĝojas, ke vi, esocom, estas esperantisto!

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

[deactivated user]

Volonte mi aldonos senkoston anonceton pri via kunfara afero. Simple sendu la aperigotan tekston al info@maklerejo.de.

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

eric.59 14 13 13 10 9 6 65

Se vi volas informiĝi pri la internacia novaĵo, vi povas ankaŭ legi Le Monde Diplomatique en Esperanto.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 hours ago

med-ben 16 11 11 8 4

Great Post, Dankon ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eberic 10 9 5

Any idea how many people have completed the tree? Or, e.g., are at least x level?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 1

As of a month ago, 300 people had finished the tree. I don't have current stats.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eberic 10 9 5

Impressive!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Nootmuzkaatje 14

I can recommend registering to <https://www.chatterplot.com/>! It's nice to make that step into really conversing in Esperanto with other people.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

scottconnor92 15 11 6 6 4 4

Wow thank you for this. I'm not finished my tree yet but once I do I will start using these resources. Dankon :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

scottconnor92 15 11 6 6 4 4

How can I put myself on the Duolingo map? It doesnt show anything for my location when i go into the map

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2 1

I'd recommend using the map at Chatterplot.com. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

makoto.fukuda 14 12 11 7 7 6 5 2 8

Estis amuze lerni Esperanton per Duolingo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Hakan_Ahmad 16 15 10 10 9 9 8 8 6 3 2 2

lerni en proksimume 22 tagoj, kaj relerni por cxiam. Versxajne, ekzistus "immersion" por esperanto. (correct me if i'm wrong)

learning in approx. 22 days, and relearn forever. probably, there should be "immersion" for esperanto

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EEnrike 10 2

"Immersion" for Esperanto: A few intensive courses like NASK: <http://esperantic.org/en/nask> , <https://www.facebook.com/nask.esperanto/> , at William Peace University, Raleigh, North Carolina, June 28 to July 7, 2016. Any "Esperanto-renkontiĝo", many sites around the world. Some of them are on a 2 or 3-day weekend. The World Esperanto Convention and some National Conventions go on for a whole week: <http://www.eventoj.hu/2016.htm> (scroll down the page) Thousands of ways to practice and use Esperanto: <http://esperantofre.com/edu/libroja.htm>

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RuthKC 20 12 12 11 8 6 4

Unfortunately, there is no immersion for Esperanto, and none is planned. Duolingo's business model has changed, and immersion (translation of texts from the target language to English) is no longer their focus.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Hi Ruth! 4 days ago, davidvdb found out a hack that actually makes immersion for Esperanto possible. Have a look at this.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RuthKC 20 12 12 11 8 6 4

Thank you! Yes, I am aware of it. We added the info to the Esperanto Mega Post in the Discussion forum, and also posted about it in the Duolingo Esperanto Learners Facebook Group.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ludoviko2013 14 10 10 10 4 3 2 2

Ruth, could you please edit your comment above? there is no immersion for Esperanto, and none is planned -> there is immersion for Esperanto. Maybe with a link to the instruction how to do it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 661

Or change it to "there is officially no immersion for Esperanto, and none is planned".

0Give Lingot•11 months ago

Hakan_Ahmad 16 15 10 10 9 9 8 8 6 6 3 2 2

if so, will there be new materials (since it's still beta)?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AdamJaeger 17 15 11 3 2

Se vi estas esperantisto kiu logxas en cxinio, rigardu

"<https://esperanto.taobao.com/index.htm?spm=2013.1.w5002-1263319769.2.BW1Nlm>"

Tio retpagxo havas multe da esperantaj librojn!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 687

Could you sticky this discussion? That would be great! Or we could add them to the Unofficial Duolingo wiki page for external resources.

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

RuthKC 20 12 12 11 8 6 4

This discussion is part of the "Esperanto Mega Post" which is a sticky post.

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 687

Right! Never mind then.

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

v.ivanov 11 10 9 8 8 5 5 3

The „Being Colloquial“ link gives 404 error, check it, please.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

KenecxjoGoldberg 12 12 6 2

<http://pages.ucsd.edu/~dkjordan/eo/colloq/colloq.html> [denove funkcias!]

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Michael_Sautter 18 9 7 4 4 4 4 4 647

Vinilkosmo MP3 is blocked by OpenDNS: "This domain is blocked due to a security threat."

Any idea why?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

RandomCanadian12 15 13 12 9 8 2

Some of these websites could use a revamp...still look like they're from Zamenhof's day

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

CleeJacksonII 14 12 12 12 11 11 10 10 8 5 5 5 3 2 2 1

Esperanto is a fun and interesting language to learn on Duolingo. If you are interested in learning that language, I would definitely recommend using Duolingo. I encourage you to give it a try, you're gonna love it as much I do. Thank goodness for Duolingo and its creator, whoever he or she is.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

JohnMoser1 16 9 438

Wikinovaĵoj?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

J03D3G 14 10 3 2 2 301

do you know if the free magazine offer is still available

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

KenecxjoGoldberg 12 12 6 2

Joe, Ja mi kredas, ke jes! Sendu, sendu! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

J03D3G 14 10 3 2 2 301

I think i need to finish the tree first

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

ursecjo 10 7 7 3 3

Mi aldonus, ke ekzistas eĉ unu ludservilo de Minekrafte speciale al Esperantistoj - Espera Mondo. Ĝi estas atingebla per adreso esperamondo.net. Kaj, mi jam pretigas alian servilon ankaŭ speciale sen kiale po esperantistojn :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ElectricSk 11 7 4 74

How long will the magazine offer last? This post is a year old and it's still going today.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

J03D3G 14 10 3 2 2 301

I think the offer is still valid. I know it worked in September.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

KenecxjoGoldberg 12 12 6 2

ElectricSk, Mi ja kredas, ke jes! ---Keneĉjo

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

tmazanec1 11 58

Babadum has 20+ languages, but not Esperanto.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 days ago

berberu 11 178

<https://babadum.com/play/?lang=24&game=1>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 days ago

KenecxjoGoldberg 12 12 6 2

tmazanec, Mi amas 'Babadum'! Mi jam metis ĝin en miajn 'plej ŝatatajn' nur antaŭ kelkaj monatoj. Ja mi elektis E--on, kaj jes ludas en E--o. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 days ago

n3aak 10 3

Hey, I know you! We used to chat on YIM back in like...2004, I think!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

KenecxjoGoldberg 12 12 6 2

jonizaak, "Being Colloquial in Esperanto" estas senpage elŝutebla:
<<http://pages.ucsd.edu/~dkjordan/eo/colloq/colloq.html>

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

n3aak 10 3

Jes, dankon, mi scias. Mi jam legis tiun libron. Mi parolas la lingvon dum multaj da jaroj.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

KenecxjoGoldberg 12 12 6 2

S--ano jonizaak! Mi pardonpetas! Mi vidis, ke la temo estas "Kion fari poste?" Mi ne certis, pri kiu temis. Do, laŭ kutime, mi konfuziĝis :) ---Keneĉjo

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

n3aak 10 3

Okej. Mi ĵus estis babilita kun Chuck antaŭ multaj da jaroj.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

KenecxjoGoldberg 12 12 6 2

n3aak, Ho! ---Keneĉjo

0Give Lingot•3 months ago

n3aak 10 3

Pardonu, mi ne intencis krokodili. Kie estas miaj moroj? :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

KenecxjoGoldberg 12 12 6 2

jonizaak, Dankon pro la nova por mi vorto (!) : moro [eĉ oficiala]! Ja delonge mi serĉas ian ajn moron, sed ne sciante la 'kielan' vorton, kion mi faru? Ĉu vi scias, ke la E--a -- angla vortaro de Butler, dum multaj jaroj elĉerpita, estas, nur ĝis la pasinta somero, senpage elŝutebla?
esperilo.be/butler.htm Vin salutas Keneĉjo!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

326 "The cheese tastes good."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3205297>

Translation: Der Käse schmeckt gut.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

25 Comments

KasaKitsune 9 8

So I remember when taking German in high school way back that when you just use "schmecken," "good" is automatically implied. So it could have been "Der Kaese schmecket" (no umlauts sorry) and to say it wasn't good it would be "Der Kaesa schmeckt nicht," correct?

18ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Indigo_99 10 8 6 6 3 3

Yes thats correct :)

10ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

MauDikdan 8

Why isnt it "Das Käse schmeckt gut."?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NathanLeee 14 6 5 4 4 2 2

Käse is a masculine noun! :)

Der - Masculine

Die - Feminine

Das - Neuter

35ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MauDikdan 8

Right, sorry, I had written it down with the wrong gender :P

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

arun_sh 7

But why Käse is Masculine? Why it is not Neuter?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

abhinav4848 10 6

These are to be memorised without applying logic. A word's grammatical gender is no reflection of the actual object's gender.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IbaLapang 7

In our native tongue the cheese is a female :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

dbols00 23 6

On my native tongue, cheese gets eaten. No fraternization with your food!

8ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

hozen123 8

I wrote 'schmeckt' with feeling. lol

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GMoney131457 9 6 6 6 3 3 2 2

How do you tell if a noun is masculine, feminine, or Neuter

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vincesar0 14 6 2

As far as I can tell, German words are basically randomly given their gender. You just have to memorize and practice each word until it comes fluently. I know. Too much work right?-and for something so simple:)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

carlosbartz 21 10 4 119

There are a few hints that can help you figure out the gender of some words. Please check out these discussions: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/616427>

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3185202> <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2175343>

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Arramu 8 3

Yh you have to remember but is how I do it. Die is like the knight or J in playing cards. He is sharp mentally and a bit like an eagle this is why newsoaoer is die. Das is the queen. A fat bitch who eats it all. Most food belongs to das and funny enough pferd belong to das too, guess Germans like horses lol's joking. Lastly, der is the king, he is the rich guy. He sits on a throne with fish behind him to relax him - der fisch and similarly the kind of the sky is der vogel. I like to make a mental image of the words I learn so that it fits one of the 3 characters. Der Kase is food so should be das but cheese is a bit too much for the boss, not the common man. Even gäbsters say where is the cheese, that's how I see it at least :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

srmbenedicta 17 5 4

I wrote kostet instead of schmeckt and lost a heart

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

renaissancewoman 6 2

Do the adjectives always follow the verb in similar cases as this sentence?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dzy212 9 6

How to use 'die' and 'der'? Is it regular?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AaronYoung7 14 12 8 2

I am using this to revise grammar so I am used to speaking German with native speakers, and most of my friends would say "Der Käse schmeckt", with "gut" being implied, why isn't that acceptable here? It seemed to be pretty ubiquitous among my German friends.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

egeokumus 9 9

"Der Käse schmeckt lecker?" warum nichts?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jethinvarg 4

What does umlauts mean?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NathanLee 14 6 5 4 4 2 2

The name of the two dots above letters. ÄÖÜ

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AngelG19 7 4

It says all the translations but usually it's just 1

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dymitrij 11 5

Does similarity between der Kaese and der Kaeiser mean something?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

HanifUrsel 5 5 5 5 2

The cheese is smacking good.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

327 "C'est" vs "Il est" (singular) & "Ce sont" vs "Ils sont" (plural)

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4021012>

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 311

You have to use "c'est" when there is an article (une, un, le, la, or l'), a possessive (mon/ton/son, ma/ta/sa, notre/votre/leur) before the noun, or before a possessive pronoun (le nôtre/le vôtre/le leur/la nôtre/la vôtre/la leur).

Ex: You have to say "C'est mon garçon. C'est le mien", NOT: "Il est mon garçon. Il est le mien."

Note: you can use "Il est" before an adjective (ex: "Il est riche." = "He is rich."), before a noun of occupation with no article (ex: "Il est avocat." = "He is a lawyer."), or before an adverb (ex: "Il est tard." = "It is late.").

The same rules apply for the feminine singular pronoun "elle" (except for the adverb case).

You have to use "ce sont" when there is an article (des or les), a possessive (mes/tes/ses, nos/vos/leurs) before the noun, or before a possessive pronoun (les nôtres/les vôtres/les leurs).

ex: You have to say "Ce sont nos garçons. Ce sont les nôtres", NOT: "Ils sont nos garçons. Ils sont les nôtres."

Note: you can use "Ils sont" before an adjective (ex: "Ils sont riches." = "They are rich."), or before a noun of occupation with no article (ex: "Ils sont avocats." = "They are lawyers.").

The same rules apply for the feminine plural pronoun "elles".

Give Lingot30

1312 years ago

Leave a new comment
16 Comments

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

Ah, makes so much more sense now. Merci, Remy.

14ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Just to be clear, we can substitute "c'est avocat" → "il est avocat"?

Also I think that the section of the course that needs most attention is probably the part dealing with prepositions. The one's I've seen the most are arguments over :

À, au;
aux vs en;
dans vs sur
en vs dans vs sur; and pour vs par vs à.
To name a few.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 311

"C'est un avocat." = "Il est avocat."

16ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

I thought as much, but a Google search uncovered 3 million instances of a direct quote "c'est avocat", and 23 million instances of "c'est professeur". So a lot of L1/L2 speakers must make this mistake.

Good to know!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MarcFrancoisCL 18 8 4

I really don't see in which context one would say "c'est avocat". I also did the Google search and most instances were mistakes from "ces avocats", not "c'est un avocat".

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 245

Just a thought... might it be that many of those instances of « c'est professeur » are cases where "professeur" is used as a title, to be immediately followed by the professor's name?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 311

No, you can't say "C'est professeur Dubois". You should say: "C'est le professeur Dubois".

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 245

Please, if you think it's wrong, don't just downvote me, but let me know; I'm honestly wondering.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Bill-Roca 20 17

Same basic info but sites you can bookmark for easy reference:

<http://www.frenchtoday.com/blog/cest-versus-il-elle-est> (I printed the 1 page PDF)

<http://french.about.com/library/weekly/aa032500.htm>

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Resonance2001 15 11 10 5

I wrote a short article on it if it helps:

<http://spanishplus.tripod.com/french/ConfusingDifferences.htm#Cestllest>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BrettIrwin 7

"The same rules apply for the feminine singular pronoun "elle" (except for the adverb case)." - what do you mean by "except for the adverb case"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 311

You cannot say "Elle est tard"

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ripcurlgirl 25 25 4 4 3 423

Remy,

I was following this advice as a guide when I was doing an exercise in the English from French tree. I was asked to translate "They are a couple" and, because of the indefinite article, I wrote "Ce sont un couple" and it was wrong - I should have written "Ils sont un couple". Does this follow that the rule for "C'est" (ie when there is an article such as un, une, la, le, l') doesn't apply to "Ce sont"? And what about the plural "les"? Does one say "Ce sont les étudiants" or "Ils sont les étudiants".

Merci pour ton aide

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

nicholas_ashley 25 778

I think it's ils sont en couple en couple means in a relationship

as en is not a determiner (its a preposition or pronoun) then it cannot be ce sont as for your other question, it is ce sont les étudiants - they are the students

you also have

ce sont des étudiants / ils sont étudiants - they are students

As an aside: Here is a situation where something applies to c'est but not to ce sont

The general rules for using c'est and ce sont are:

c'est + determiner + noun phrase

ce sont + determiner + noun phrase

There are exceptions. For example: to make a comment about something or convey a general idea you can use the construction c'est + adjective masculine singular

but you cannot use ce sont + adjective

examples

le français c'est fantastique - French is fantastic

j'étudie le français, c'est intéressant - I am studying French, it is interesting c'est incroyable - it is incredible

OReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ripcurlgirl 25 25 4 4 3 423

Merci de ta réponse. I forgot that I had asked this but the information is useful all the same.

OReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

SingingxAr 7 3

Merci Remy! I was always having trouble between those two...or four :P

OReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

328 "The children are vegetarian."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1030473/The-children-are-vegetarian>

Translation: Los niños son vegetarianos.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

155 Comments

metutials 8 7 6

The translation displays hijos as correct so I picked that one. It's a more neutral approach. No, big red cross, only ninos or chicos allowed.

Why does it even show up if it's not even allowed? Chicos is allowed? So only boys or boys not something more slightly gender neutral?

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CLWSK 14

Aren't hijos the "children of somebody" as opposed to just children? I am talking about the difference between boy and son.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

metutials 8 7 6

You are right, "hijos are children of ...", ninos can be children of any age.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TC13502 9

but hijos means children, and the question asked you to translate children. I was taught that hijos, chicos, and niños can all mean children.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Parkertheparker 10 9

[deleted]

1Give Lingot•4 months ago

DreamsOfFluency 14

hijo is not gender neutral. It means son, not child. Hija means daughter. Hijas is daughters. Hijos can mean sons or children, but it is meant to refer to the children of someone. You would not use it in general terms for children of different people. It is used to show relationship.

6ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

fred.eldre 7

Why if it shows the spelling for vegetarian is vegetariano then why is it vegetarianos. I am a bit confused .

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rspreng 24

It is the plural form, to agree with the plural of children.

40ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

spanishwhizz 8 5 2

when referring to one person you use the singular: vegetariano

however in this sentence we are talking about more than one child, therefor you use the plural: vegetarianos :)

16ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MEAG4N 10

I have the same question. It doesn't say they are vegetarians, it says they are vegetarian.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SephyTheLark 9 9 7

You have to put aside english rules and commit to spanish rules of grammar without comparing it to english. If you compare everything to english you will be unnecessarily confused. In spanish plural nouns must be followed by plural adjectives.

26ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MelanieMrsWill 19 7 3 2

I am a spanish speaker and you are bad at spanish. :(!!!!!!!

-32ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SunnyDoller 11 16

That was hardly necessary.

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

You are a spanish speaker and only at level 13?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

[deactivated user]

where to use soy, son, estan, es

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AshokSharm7 6

We will use soy (ser) verb when we are talking about our profession and nationality and others like for examples- soy americano(I am american) Soy profesor (I am profesor) And others like- Soy inteligente(I am intelligent)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fishclaw 11

can "the children" be either las ninas, or los ninos? i initially wrote las ninas and got a wrong answer, was corrected with los ninos... ??

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

salitha 7

children is masculine--more than one child is always masculine

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SamanthaHa26 8 7 6 5 2

I don't know why you are being downvoted. In my college basic spanish class, we were told that if there is one male in a group of females, you use el/los and the male version of words. Same with french.

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

They weren't talking about if there was a male in the group. The person is downvoted because they were wrong. A group of children is not "always" masculine.

The example was "the children" - there was no reason explanation given as to the gender of the children. One could just as easily assume that it was a group of girls as a group of boys and therefore las ninas should be accepted.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134

Except that's just not how Spanish works. The default grammatical gender (also called noun class) is masculine. So "los niños" can be either "the boys" or "the children" (where there is at least one boy in the group, or you just don't know the composition) but "las niñas" can only be "the girls".

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

No. Spanish speakers I know use las ninas when speaking about a group of female children.

-2Give Lingot•1 year ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134

Spanish speakers I know use las ninas when speaking about a group of female children.

Yes, that is exactly what I just said.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RyanConkli1 6

Unless it is specific that the group is all female...

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TobyBartels 11 10 9 9 9 8 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 2

Did you use 'niñas' (rather than 'ninas')? Also, did you use 'vegetarianas' (rather than 'vegetarianos')?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fishclaw 11

yes, and yes. having this problem in other questions too. is it because if unspecified, the gender is always male? would make sense, but would make this program inconsistent as it accepts both ways on some questions but not others. hence why i am so confused! haha. I am also not quite understanding your other comment, unless you mean to say that the people you know speak that way even though this program doesn't accept it.I suppose it's not a big deal, as anyone would probably understand what i'm trying to say even if i made a small gender mix up.. Thanks for the help!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ttbakker 7 5

same thing happened to me, I think in reality though, it depends whether your referring to a group of girls or boys, so in that situation you would know which one to use. But maybe gender is assumed map when unspecified as you have said?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Felinagrace 21 8

"Ninas" is right if the group of children is just girls. If it's mixed gender, then it would be "Ninos".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IforGot2 22 12 10 6 6 5 4 4 2 2 526

Is the audio for 'vegetariano' wrong for anyone else?

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Hey_its_rukshia 22 11 7

I wrote lol instead of los

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

johnnysprinkles 7 3

LOL!!!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

The_Real_G 11 5

I used estan, that's strange thought it would be temporary thing?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

benana93 13 6

It's a characteristic of someone therefore you'd use a conjugation of "ser". That's how I understand it.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DaneNeil 10

I was the same, I guessed it to be temporary, but that makes sense.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Why would that be temporary?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jacobblamm1 6

Whats the diff between son soy eres?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kungjitsu 11

son = they are soy = I am eres = you (singular familiar) are

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

shandaboss 9

what decides either if an object is classified as a feminine nor masculine? exp. (el arroz) or (la fresa)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134

Grammatical gender is rather arbitrary, the origins of which are lost to the mists of time. There's really nothing for it except to memorize what's what. In Spanish, there are general patterns that can help, but there are always exceptions.

In general, if a noun ends with -o, it's masculine and if it ends with -a it's feminine. But then you've got the difference between la papa (the potato) and el papa (the pope).

I don't know if "el arroz" is part of a special predictive rule or if it's just a quirky exception. I do know that nouns that end with -dad are feminine (la soledad, solitude; verdad, truth).

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

merterverel 5

Niñas = girls

But it is translated children

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jenny331 11 8 4

Why can't it be "los hijos"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134
"hijo" means "son"

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jenny331 11 8 4
It can also mean child.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gabewinter 5
I think what what threw me off is Los hombres beben cerveza pero los niños no son vegetariano pero vegetarianos... It must be the difference between an adjective and a noun?...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]
It's not an adjective vs. noun issue. ser (to be) is a linking verb, so the subject and object/description must agree grammatically. The same idea applies in both languages. Compare the sentences "We won the match" vs. "We are a soccer player". The first is okay since it simply indicates an action. The second, however, is wrong because "we" and "a soccer player" are linked yet disagree in number. Likewise for Spanish, except you also have to worry about number and gender agreement!

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134
I'm not sure I understand your question.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TrillianShadow 13 5 5 4 2 1
Las ninas están vegetarianas. I am pretty sure I was correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134
Well, your gender agreement is good, but you're saying "The girls are vegetarians for now." To say "The children are vegetarians (and don't plan to change that)" you need to say "Los niños son vegetarianos."

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TrillianShadow 13 5 5 4 2 1
Ahhh. Ok I get it. Thx

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pink_laila 7 6
I had no idea that it was chicos

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MarleneBraha 6
Why not estan?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sharice123 8
How do you when to use son or eres in sentence, since they both mean are ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 2 2 1134
Ser (link) is for inherent qualities, like being female.

Estar (link) is for transient states, like being sad.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]
Both are forms of the verb ser (to be). Which one you need to use depends on the subject preceding the verb. Here are all the conjugations of ser in the present tense:

«yo soy», «tú eres», «él es / ella es / usted es», «nosotros somos / nosotras somos», «ellos son / ellas son / ustedes son»

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

[deactivated user]
Also, notice that «tú eres» translates to "you are", while «ellos son» translates to "they are". So you're right. They both mean "are" when translated but they really convey two different forms of the verb "to be".

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

sharice123 8
How do you know when to use son or eres since they both mean are ???

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

racha31 8 6 3
You use eres with tú: tú eres = you are.

You use son with ellos/ellas: ellos/ellas son = they are.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

priest007 6 3
I used estan. Why is that incorrect?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LingTrio 10 6 2

Surely it should be "están"? Being a vegetarian is a changeable state? I could wake up one day and suddenly decide to stop being a vegetarian?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134

Language does not submit so readily to such rationalizations.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MelanieMrsWill 19 7 3 2

Nobody likes a smartass

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

malkeynz 22 17 3 879

To say "the children are vegetarians" (i.e. the noun form of vegetarian rather than the adjective form) could you say "los niños son los vegetarianos"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134

No. As far as I know, "vegetarian" in Spanish is only an adjective, and not a noun at all.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DreamsOfFluency 14

vegetarians is definitely a noun when used in this sentence. The word "son" is a being verb, same in English. The thing in front equals the thing behind it. Los Ninos = vegetarian. But, the senetence to translate did not say "the" vegetarians, so you would not use "los" in the translation.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134

A copula (aka "linking verb" or "stative verb") does not require the phrase that follows the verb to be a noun, merely something that describes the subject.

I am tired. "Tired" is an adjective.

I am cold. "Cold" is an adjective.

If it were a noun in the predicate, then it would not need to agree with the noun in the subject. Nouns do not change to agree with other nouns.

The cow is an animal = La vaca es un animal.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

DreamsOfFluency 14

I think you are partially correct. I incorrectly said that, in this case, vegetariano was a noun. It is not. In this sentence, it is an adjective because it could have said, "The children are vegetarian children".

However, if it had said, "The children are vegetarians," then the word "vegetarians" would be a noun.

I'm not sure why you are saying nouns do not need to agree in number.

I cannot say, "I am a humans." I would need to say, "I am a human." I could say, however, "We are human" or "We are humans," depending on context. But, one is very different than the other. The first one is more of a character. The second is an equivalent.

In any case, the @malkeynz asked about using the word "los" in front of "vegetarianos". In my opinion, the main reason you can't is because it was not in the English statement originally. The nuance is different. I believe that, in fact, the translation is slightly incorrect because the English version is saying "vegetarian" in the singular as an adjective, but the translation is in the plural and being used as a noun. You can get by with it because the meaning is clear. However, you lose the nuance.

Glad for the discussion.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134

In English, "vegetarian" can be a noun or an adjective. But in Spanish, as far as I can tell, it is only an adjective. When I said that nouns do not change to agree with other nouns, I was talking about Spanish and I meant to say they do not change to agree in gender, hence my example.

1Give Lingot•9 months ago

DreamsOfFluency 14

Sorry. I'm not understanding your statement that nouns do not change to agree with other nouns. Are you talking about male/female or singular/plural. I am saying that nouns must agree in plurality. Am I missing something?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134

Consider the simple example: Los niños tienen una vaca.

"niños" is masculine and thus takes the masculine "los".

"vaca" is feminine and thus takes the feminine "una".

Notice how "una vaca" does not change to agree with "los niños" or vice-versa.

The only time you'd have any kind of agreement between two nouns would be in number only (singular/plural), and only when there's some sort of stative verb (like "to be"): Una vaca es un animal.

The noun "animal" is masculine in Spanish. This will never change, not even when you're saying that something feminine like a cow is an animal.

This is how we know that "vegetarian*" is an adjective in Spanish. It will agree:

El niño es vegetariano.

Los niños son vegetarianos.
La niña es vegetariana.
Las niñas son vegetarianas.

2Give Lingot•9 months ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 2 2 1134

It is a "feature" of the Duolingo forums that you cannot directly reply to a comment past a certain depth.

In English, words that end in -ly tend to be adverbs. They modify verbs to show the manner in which the verb is happening: He walked quickly. She reads slowly. They are shouting happily.

As far as I know, the word "vegetariano" in Spanish is only an adjective and does not have a noun form. Learning this about words is part of our Spanish education.

2Give Lingot•9 months ago

DreamsOfFluency 14

Rae.F

I can't seem to reply directly to your comment below. Not sure why there is no Reply, Edit, buttons for me.

Anyway, I think we were partly talking past each other before. However, when you said, "The noun "animal" is masculine in Spanish. This will never change, not even when you're saying that something feminine like a cow is an animal.

This is how we know that "vegetarian*" is an adjective in Spanish. It will agree:

El niño es vegetariano. Los niños son vegetarianos. La niña es vegetariana. Las niñas son vegetarianas."

I finally understand what you are saying and have learned now that you can identify an adjective in Spanish by whether it changes masculine/feminine form to agree with a noun or not." In English, there are other clues, I guess, such as whether it ends with an -ly or not.

That is good to know. And, it does leave another question. If I am not reading it, but writing or saying it myself, how can I decide if I need to use a word in the adjective form or the noun form when it follows a static verb. For instance, as an English speaker, I could have said either, "the children are vegetarian" OR "the children are vegetarians". the first would be an adjective and the second would be a noun. From what you are saying, it would be incorrect in Spanish to use the latter. I may be confused between what English does and what Spanish does. Can you elucidate?

0Give Lingot•9 months ago

kardle 6

I don't have the characters for the Spanish words.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JamesBound 7 2
why doesn't it accept eres

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134
"Eres" is for "you (singular)" and "the children" is "they".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AprilynnLa 8
It just said children and camr uo as feminine plural when I wrote los niños. Why is that incorrect?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

supersonic1876 9
How do you even spell vegetarian in spanish?!:-

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134
vegetariano (masculine singular) vegetariana (feminine singular) vegetarianos (masculine plural) vegetarianas (feminine plural)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LarryMoore4 7
My answer should be accepted. It was the same as yours

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134
Glitches happen sometimes.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

relleRelle 9
What is the difference between somos and son

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134
http://www.123teachme.com/spanish_verb_conjugation/ser

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Cassieshiffer 4
so i type in "los ninos son vegetarianos" and i get it wrong. and i reported it and doulingo crashed.
how is this possible??

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 2 2 1134

Duolingo glitches from time to time. You're not the first person who's been marked wrong when they were right. As for the crash, that sounds like some extra bad luck.

(Do you remember what it said the correct answer should have been?)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cathystarr 8 3

nos instead of no at end as the children are plural

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Laurut 21 6

Why can't we use eres instead of son?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

dunk999 21 19 15 14 5 2 2 2 2

Is the pronunciation of vegetarianos correct? It sounded like vegetarjanos to me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lips2duck 9

Where do they get niños from??? I'm confused!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 2 2 1134

"Niños" can mean "boys" or "children".

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rbmercade 10

It always cuts me off mid sentence.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amberraine1 4 4

I'm having a hard time saying vegetariano. Grrr

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

punkomattic 18

Im getting pronunciation sound like ve-he-tar-JAN-os, the JAN pronounced like the english January.
IS THIS CORRECT OR WRONG.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 2 2 1134
It should be closer to "vey-hey-tar-yan-os"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

elevenferguson 20 3 1
I agree it is the plural form to agree with the plural the children.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

elizabeth619 6
Why is it son?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 2 2 1134
Because "the children" is "they" and the conjugation for "they are" is "son".

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SarweshSha 9
Why not "El niños es vegetarianos"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 2 2 1134 el is the singular masculine "the". You need the plural masculine los.
es is for "he/she" You need the conjugation for "they", which is son.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Zklop 18 9
so? they'll live longer.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

giourso 11
I always get the use of the words, Los and Las wrong, i don't seem to understand when I should use them. what would be a good rule of thumb?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 2 2 1134
All four of the following words translate into English as the.

el - singular, masculine los - plural, masculine la - singular, feminine las - plural, feminine

el ordenador = the computer los ordenadores = the computers la manzana = the apple
las manzanas = the apples

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JaydenMusco 6
it gave me the question five times.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

HayliePier 5
who do you say vegetarianos

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134
el niño es vegetariano
los niños son vegetarianos
la niña es vegetariana
las niñas son vegetarianas

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Angellad 2
What does son means in spanish

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134
http://www.123teachme.com/spanish_verb_conjugation/ser

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

pikachu0803 7 1
when do you use "son" and when do you use "eres"? Im confused o_o

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134
http://www.123teachme.com/spanish_verb_conjugation/ser

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

CinnamonChurros 13
I got very confused and put "The children are vegetables." If vegetarianos isn't vegetables, whats the word for vegetables?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134

vegetable = vegetal

vegetables = vegetales vegetarian = vegetariano/a/os/as

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

SandraBlag3

Help me

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134

We're not mind-readers. Please tell us exactly what you need help with.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

ozytodd 10

doesn't make sense, why is it wrong vegetariano? In English you can say the children are vegetarian or vegetarians, the world's children have established more than one

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

leewahh 12 4 4

In this language, the adjective is specific to not only the masculinity of the noun, but the amount as well.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ushadesara 7 6

I agree. Singular & plural, a little confusing

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134

It's very straightforward. The adjective must agree in gender and number with the noun it modifies. Is the noun feminine? The adjective must be feminine. Is the noun plural? The adjective must be plural.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

baldwinj 18

If they wanted vegetarianos, the English should have been vegetarian. These have slightly distinct meanings in English.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rlahn 10

It should have read "The children are vegetarians" in English

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FSLyon 15 3

I agree. They asked to translate the singular.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JKybett 10 4

Poor kids...

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dalek56 2

the ninos are caca

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dalek56 2

hello

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dalek56 2

lozninyowssownvayejayetayenayeriowes

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cljc1369 14 9 3

It should say "the children are vegetarians."

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

SandraBlag3

Help!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Mareaalta9 5

I' m confused too!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TobyBartels 11 10 9 9 9 8 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 2

‘Los niños y niñas son vegetarianos y vegetarianas.’ is not accepted. When referring to a group of children with unspecified genders, that's the only way that the PC Spanish speakers I know would write it! (Well, besides swapping the order or using ‘@’.)

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TobyBartels 11 10 9 9 9 8 7 7 7 6 6 5 5 2

Actually, I see that this is wrong, it should be 'Los niños y LAS niñas son vegetarianos y vegetarianas.' (emphasis added).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

emi_lou 15

I wrote las ninas son vegetarianas (with the correct n in ninas-i'm not sure how to use it here) and got an era with all words except "son". Have I missed something here?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

salitha 7

more than one child is always masculine so veretarians has to be masculine also

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lthilsul 11 7 5

To be more precise: it could have been vegetarianas if we were sure the group was only made of girls. But when we don't know (which is the case here) if they are only boys, only girls or a mix of both, we use the masculine: vegetarianos

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jurekcy1 25 13

I've just wrote "los niños son vegetales" :D

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Firebirdlovespie 8 5

Lol! So funny!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

devarainja 8 5

English sentence is wrong grammar it should be vegetarians

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Panamapal 24

The translation that you give as correct should read in English "The children are vegetarians". In English, "The children are vegetarian" means the children as a group not individually therefore "Los ninos son vegetariano" is correct.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BirdieWolf 15

Why is duolingo obsessed with the word 'vegetarian.' Clearly someone has an agenda

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Firebirdlovespie 8 5

What a shame that the kids dont eat meat!

-2ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

HombrePerez 3
Why did I get Duolingo

-2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Swagboi129 6
Its so much words in spanish that means the

-3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

johnnysprinkles 7 3
You mean Spanish

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

makiimosley 4
Why do i need to use vegetarianos instead of vegetariano? It cost me a heart and i could have gotten a lingot!

-3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134
Because most adjectives have to agree in number and gender with the nouns they modify. "Los niños" is masculine and plural, therefore "vegetarianos" must also be masculine and plural.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Parkertheparker 10 9
[deleted]

0Give Lingot•4 months ago

bottomsarriba111 4
vegetarianism is transitive. It is possible to NOT be a vegetarian (unlike being boy, girl, cat or dog) I think the verb should be SOY.

-7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1134
"vegetarian" is an adjective, not a verb. It can't possibly be transitive.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ttbakker 7 5
it's son not soy because thats how ARE is conjugated with Los Ninos in plural form. Soy would be if you were talking about yourself as in, I am a vegetarian.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

calgary54321 12 3
did you mean estar (sp?) vs ser

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

329 When you do a reverse tree...
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2706776>

CattleRustler 19 12 1055

Just need some clarifications on the following things...

- 1) To get a "reverse tree" do I just switch my language in my settings to English from Spanish?
- 2) Do I get presented with the option to take the proficiency test and/or start with an empty tree like you would if you created a new account?
- 3) What happens to my prior Spanish from English tree? Do I go back to whatever progress level I was at if I switch back?
- 4) Are streaks and lingots maintained separately or do your totals count toward both trees?

Thanks in advance

Give Lingot2
122 years ago

Leave a new comment
27 Comments

wazzie 25 11

A piece of advice to anyone doing the reverse tree.

Turn off your Speaker setting

This will give you two advantages. You won't have to listen to DL try to pronounce rice and you won't have to do the (pointless) listen and type (in English) exercises.

32ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

ellen_ofarrell 23 18 17 757

Very useful hint but I wish it didn't also turn off all the sound effects when you do that. Even if you say sound effects on once the speaker is off the whole thing goes silent. Oh well...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
Hi CattleRustler,

Yes

Yes

Yes

On website streaks are not maintained separately (They used to be, now the website only uses the total streak, rather than the individual streak. If I'm wrong, someone please correct me.) Here is the info I have at present: <http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Streak>

http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Frequently_asked_questions#How_do_I_change_what_course_I'm_taking.3F

I hope this helps ^_^

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BugraBeyaz 13 9 5 2 2
Usagiboy7

I don't know what a moderator is in this place. Are you a programmer working for Duolingo? If so why don't you guys add the reverse option for each lesson so we can learn how to form sentences in the target language.

Duolingo rarely asks us to write in the target language but it is the best way to learn the grammar. This is one of the weakest aspect of Duolingo imo.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Hi BugraBeyaz, I'm not a programmer. I'm a volunteer who helps keep the forums running as smoothly as possible on a social end, making sure people follow the Guidelines. Here are two links with more information about what moderators do: 1. Who are the moderators 2. What are the moderator guidelines.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BugraBeyaz 13 9 5 2 2

Is there a way to give feedback to programmers or who is responsible? I don't think such features can be implemented by course creators.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Post a discussion to the main forum (Duolingo English--for English speakers). Have a clear title that it is a suggestion.

If it is to fix a glitch, post it to the troubleshooting forum.

Staff regularly browse the forums for popular suggestions from what I've heard.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CattleRustler 19 12 1055

Thanks for the info :) I am almost done with my tree and might do a reverse one after i am done. I guess that raises a different question, if I switch (on the website) what will I be presented with on the phone app? I am assuming whatever my current tree is, but how does that affect streaks and lingots?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

English for Spanish speakers was surprisingly challenging for me once I made it a few skills in. I highly recommend it. Watch out for those object pronouns! xD

6ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

tinnmel 25 25 7 288

When you switch languages on any device, you switch languages on your account, so any other device you log into will also show the change. However, switching back and forth is not complicated. And your progress for spanish from english is not affected by what you do on english from spanish (and vice-versa).

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CattleRustler 19 12 1055

tkS

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SIRWLT 18 11 7

You still have individual streaks, at least you can see it on the iphone app, but it does not interfere with you main streak.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BarbaraMorris 25 25 25

I don't recommend testing out of the early levels. There's lots of practice for the subjunctive and for commands in the early levels since the English words are the same as for present tense.

I do recommend reading the discussions. And posting comments in the discussions gives writing practice.

Here's some of the textspeak you'll see:

q = que

xq = porque

xD = this one gave me a bit of trouble until I found out it just means "crosseyed grin" xD

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rialagma 9 9 8 8

OMG! you have a 666 strike! (that's amazing) but also terrifying

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BarbaraMorris 25 25 25

Yeah, I don't usually notice the number, but it jumped out at me today. Whooooo wooooo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kat99 19 8 2

I thought a "reverse tree" was just reviewing backwards up the tree that you just finished. If I am wrong then I guess I should ask those questions too!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CattleRustler 19 12 1055

no, a reverse tree is switching to learning your native language from your target language, I just want to make sure I know how to do it and the ramifications before I do so.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bcassill 4

Oh, really? That's an interesting thought. I assumed, like others, that it just meant going through the course backwards.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kat99 19 8 2

Ahhhh... I see

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

roosky2003 14 6 2

If you go into your profile, you'll find you'll be able to switch languages. Look for the bit that says (I think) "Quiero aprender ingles" or something like that in Spanish. I thought it would be dead easy, but it's actually harder than you'd think! However, one advantage is, you can earn a lot of lingots quickly, so you could, for example, be doing the test certificate more often, or giving people lingots for good suggestions in the discussions.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

roxyrenders 25 25 23 8

I just gave the reverse tree a try today. I thought it might be a way to practice my Spanish learning in a different way. It is a bit different:

You have four hearts instead of three

It seems that the spoken exercises automatically use the slow speech setting to present the question instead of the normal speed. The Spanish tree has always spoken with the normal speed setting.

Gulp - everything is in Spanish so it should help me learn additional vocabulary and practice translating. Reading the question discussions is quite challenging for me yet.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Salxandra 23 10 2

I believe the four hearts is standard for the first few lessons. It should switch back to 3 hearts as you progress through the English (from Spanish) tree.

The seemingly slow speech is also a trait of the first few lessons. The speech speeds up farther into the tree.

LOL - I learned the Spanish word for "cancel" when I clicked on it thinking it was the "post" button.

14ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

roosky2003 14 6 2

I'm glad to see I'm not the only one who finds the discussions really challenging ,and I am a few levels behind you! I must admit I don't read many at the moment.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Bookwormsrb 13 3 3

so just to clarify what CattleRustler asks in question 3 I can switch between german for english speakers and english for german speakers and I won't lose my progress on either of them? Thanks

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

That is correct. It will look like you have, but it's just hiding until you return to your other course.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bookwormsrb 13 3 3

Fantastic, not a high level but didn't want to lose all the progress I have made, thanks :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

:)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

330 "ici", "là" and "là-bas" in French

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2299997>

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 311

"ici", "là" and "là-bas" are French adverbs.

1) "ici" refers to a place that is at the same place as the person speaking, or very close. It means "here".

ex: "Je suis ici." means "I am here."

ex: "Ma clé est ici." means "My key is here."

2) "là" can have 2 meanings: "here" and "there"

You have to use the context of the sentence to determine whether is is better to use "ici" or "là".

ex: "Je suis là." means "I am here." (same meaning as "Je suis ici."). Here, you can guess that the person speaking is close to the person he is talking to.

ex: "Mon ordinateur est au bureau. Je sais qu'il est là." means "My computer is at the office. I know that it is there." In this case, "là" implies a distance between the person speaking and the object.

3) "là-bas" refers to a place that is far from the person speaking, and means "there", "down there" or "over there".

"There". Ex: "J'ai un ami à New York. J'aimerais aller là-bas." means "I have a friend in New York. I would like to go there."

"Down there". Ex: "Du haut de la Tour Eiffel, on voit Montmartre là-bas." means "From the top of the Eiffel Tower, you can see Montmartre down there."

"Over there". Ex: "Où est l'école ? L'école est là-bas." means "Where is the school? The school is over there."

Give Lingot20

1352 years ago

Leave a new comment

23 Comments

FrankySka 25 23 16 14 14 10 8 1349

Seems to me that this is very similar to the German "hier" "da" and "dort". (I know this is not related to French, but some users here learn multiple languages, and I, personally, sometimes find it helpful to link them.)

Some of the same sentences in German, in case someone is interested:

1) Ich bin hier. Mein Schlüssel ist hier.

2) Ich bin da (for example saying something when coming back home).

Mein Computer ist im Büro. Ich weiss, dass er da ist.

3) Ich habe einen Freund in New York. Ich würde gerne dort hin gehen.

23ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

contresens 16 8 8 2

Good example of the ambiguity of the German da are different translations (in the same language and across different languages) of Heidegger's term Dasein, which is usually translated as either "being-there" or "being-here". Since Dasein is such an important concept in Heidegger's thought, these two different translations emphasize two different aspects of being, experience, and everything in-between: absence (there, then, trace, potentiality) or presence (here, now, actuality). But since Heidegger didn't use neither "Hiersein" nor "Dortsein", we can say that he wanted to emphasize this "here-there" of the da. (Though the word existed in common use before Heidegger and means something like "presence, existence, to be there").

Sorry for a little excursion in philosophy, but da is an interesting concept that is hard to translate into most of the other languages. French version complies with Remy's explanation above: être-là.

3ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

fenix_vulgaris 23 9 8 6 6 5

One concept to explain "da" is that it is simply a pointer. It may point to something close or distant or abstract, similar to "là". "Dort" is only for locations. The English "there" isn't too far from this idea of "da", when it is clearly not simply referring to a location.

There are concepts. (no real location here)

<http://yourdailygerman.wordpress.com/2013/07/30/meaning-da/>

<http://yourdailygerman.wordpress.com/2012/06/19/da-words-meaning-german/>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

contresens 16 8 8 2

Funny how one can say "here, there are some things" / "ici, il y a des choses". Pointer is a really nice word for it, especially appropriate for the French y, which is also a pronoun (c'est-à-dire, un pointeur par excellence).

"Pointer" also works nicely for Heidegger. (Let me humor you...) He actually develops an extensive - and for his thought fundamental - concept of pointers and pointing, but calls it by some other almost synonymous word. It has to do with how we understand things and beings or rather how they have meaning: they point to each other (e.g. a hammer is pointing to a potential production of a table), creating a meaningful whole (world), everything relating back to our own existence (e.g. even something as "cold" and rational as science is on a fundamental level only meaningful in its relation to our existence, our hunger for knowledge and control or our care for survival).

(The French words "signification" [meaning] and "signifier" [to mean] nicely show how meaning is in close relation to pointing, this time under the name of a "sign".)

This existence that I mentioned is what Heidegger calls Dasein (i.e. we are Dasein), "being-there".

The name refers to the fact that we are always already "there" in the world (that meaningful whole of pointing), which is basically a critique of the radical distinction between subject and object that is perhaps best represented in Descartes's doubt of an external world.

"Da" as a pointer can also refer to the fact that we are "pointing" ourselves into the past (via our memories) and into the future (via our projects) and it is only because of this pointing out of the present (and presence) that we can have an attitude to our own existence and its possibilities (e.g. contrary to a stone which is "indifferent"/"doesn't care"); this attitude is what we call "being alive".

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

fenix_vulgaris 23 9 8 6 6 5

I think therefore I've been pointing to myself ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

lecoupdefoudre 10

Also similar is Spanish... Aquí, acá, allí, allá!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Interesting. I've also noticed that sometimes that là is linked to some words such as "dimanche-là", and I think that also applies to ici or "ci". I wonder if it changes its meaning in some instances or it always has the same meaning.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 311

When you add "-ci" and "-là" after words, it also gives an indication of closeness ("-ci") or distance ("-là"). It is the same difference as the one that exists between "this" and "that" in English.

Ex: "Veux-tu cette pomme-ci (qui est devant toi), ou cette pomme-là (qui est au bout de la table)?" means "Do you want this apple (in front of you), or that apple (at the end of the table)?"

15ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Thanks for clearing that up. I was also wondering what kind of words can you stick it to, is it just any noun, or are there specific requirements for the words?

For example:

La femme avec laquelle je vis est cette femme-là.

J'aime cette viande-là.

Would those two be accurate?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 311

Those 2 examples of "-là" after nouns are accurate.

You can also add them after demonstrative pronouns:

"celui" (masc. sing.):

ex: "Veux-tu celui-ci ou celui-là ?" means "Do you want this one or that one?"

"celle" (fem. sing.):

ex: "Veux-tu celle-ci ou celle-là ?" means "Do you want this one or that one?"

"ceux" (masc. plur.):

ex: "Veux-tu ceux-ci ou ceux-là ?" means "Do you want these ones or those ones?"

"celles" (fem. plur.):

ex: "Veux-tu celles-ci ou celles-là ?" means "Do you want these ones or those ones?"

14ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

rljones 25 25 9 9 7

As a side note, it's remarkable what that little hyphen (trait d'union, trattino) does. Contrast it with the Italian habit of attaching pronouns to the verb form without hyphenation. In the spoken language it makes no difference, but I think it does in the brain. Likewise, in the inverted interrogative forms of French. Maybe distance from Latin is a good thing, or at least something that makes it easier for a non-native to grasp? Grazie e/et merci to both of you.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

contresens 16 8 8 2

"ci" and là" can also be prefixes for adverbs of place. How do they work? I've seen both "in front of that" and "there in front" as translations of "là-devant". I'm guessing "there in front" is closer to the French meaning, even though both partially imply each other. Can "là-" as a prefix also mean "here" in some contexts?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Khaur 15 13 11 9 4 3

Another way to explain là is that it refers to a place. If no place has been defined before, it defaults to here.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 687

Thank you again for a good piece of French grammar advice, Rémy. I've added it to our list of French grammar tips discussion too.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Europe 25 23 22 8 8

Thank you very much for that clarification. "Jrikhal" had already explained this to me from the Spanish version. However, I will send you reports from English because in most of cases the system marks incorrect when I translate "here" for "là". For example:

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1688468>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 311

You're welcome :-) "Here" is now accepted for the sentence you reported.

Sometimes, it can be a bit tricky to accept both "there" and "here" for "là", since some sentence tend to have more one signification than the other.

ex:

"Je suis là.": it can mean "I am here/there".

"Je suis née là.": it rather means "I was born there.", than "I was born here."

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2

I guess it changes from one French native speaker to another one. Because, personally, I say:

- I was born here. -> Je suis née là/ici.

- I was born there. -> J'y suis née. / Je suis née là-bas.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

artst 11 2

Very clarifying. Thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AndresCast66857

Merci beaucoup Remy!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LuKaDaN 13 8 6 6 4 2

In Lithuanian Labas means Hello :D and la is shorter form of labas like hi,,,

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SimoneMunis 3

Hi, I'm new here and I really enjoy your explanation! Thanks! By the way..do you speak Portuguese?
I'm Brazilian! See you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ricardof2012 18 13 7 2

But why to say "Je suis là", if I can say "Je suis ici"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Remy 15 13 11 11 10 3 311

"Je suis là" usually means "I am here". "Je suis ici" usually means "I am right here".

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

331 "The duck is not yours."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2326237>

Translation: El pato no es suyo.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

54 Comments

OliverBoda 13 3

I don't know when to use 'suyo' instead of 'su'. Can someone explain please?

32ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nonete 24 23 22 20 8 223

I deleted some previous information because there was a little mistake and it can be confusing for you but I'm going to try to explain it again, this time in a better way (and without mistakes!!!) I know the possessives can be complicated in Spanish at the beginning, they are difficult even for me (and I'm a native from Spain) when I think consciously about them.

POSSESSIVE ADJECTIVES:

My = mi, mis This is not my duck. Éste no es mi pato - Ésta no es mi pata

Your = tu, tus (de ti) / su, sus (de usted) This is not your duck. Éste no es tu pato / Éste no es su pato - Ésta no es tu pata / Ésta no es su pata

His = su, sus (de él) This is not his duck. Éste no es su pato - Ésta no es su pata (de él)

Her = su, sus (de ella) This is not her duck. Éste no es su pato - Ésta no es su pata (de ella)

Its = su, sus This is not its duck. Éste no es su pato - Ésta es su pata (the owner would be an object or an animal)

Our = nuestro/a, nuestros/as This is not our duck . Éste no es nuestro pato - Ésta no es nuestra pata (de nosotros)

Your = vuestro/a, vuestros/as; su, sus (de ustedes) This is not your duck. Éste no es vuestro pato / Éste no es su pato - Ésta no es vuestra pata / Ésta no es su pata

Their = su, sus (de ellos/as) This is not their duck. Éste no es su pato - Ésta no es su pata. (de ellos/as)

POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS:

Mine = mío/s, mía/s This duck is not mine. Este pato no es mío - Ésta pata no es mía

Yours = tuyo/s, tuya/s, suyo/s, suya/s (de usted) This duck is not yours. Este pato no es tuyo / Este pato no es suyo - Esta pata no es tuya - Esta pata no es suya

His = suyo/s, suya/s (de él) This duck is not his. Este pato no es suyo/de él -Esta pata no es suya/de él

Hers = suyo/s, suya/s (de ella) This duck is not hers. Este pato no es suyo/de ella - Esta pata no es suya/de ella

Its = su, sus This duck is not its. Este pato no es suyo - Esta pata no es suya

Ours = nuestro/s, nuestra/s This duck is not ours. Este pato no es nuestro - Esta pata no es nuestra

Yours = vuestro/a, vuestros/as, suyo/s, suya/s (de ustedes) This duck is not yours. Este pato no es vuestros / Este pato no es suyo - Esta pata no es vuestra / Esta pata no es suya

Theirs = suyo/a, suyos/as (de ellos/as) This duck is not theirs. Este pato no es suyo/de ellos/as - Esta pata no es suya/de ellos/as

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN AN ADJECTIVE AND A PRONOUN?

adjective: describes a noun pronoun: takes the place of a noun

SOME USEFUL LINKS RELATED TO POSSESSIVES:

<http://www.curso-ingles.com/gramatica-inglesa/pronombres-posesivos.php>
<http://www.studyspanish.com/lessons/posspro.htm>

142ReplyGive Lingot14•2 years ago

Shanhammer 11 4

Oh my gosh, this was SO helpful. Thank you!! I'd heard most of these, but never tuyo/suyo and I always get the pronouns/adjectives mixed up. You just made my life so much easier!

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

miwade 14 9 2

Very thorough explanation. I think it will help a great deal.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Mari.nz 14

Thank you for you comment!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

carolamasterson 8

Thank you VERY helpful.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

AwwwMan 11

Thank you

-1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

smcgee7 16 14 10 7 6 5 3 5

Saving this for later. Thank you

-1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

lalow82 9 4

Wow you are on point. I need your help everyday

-1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

roropunkii 8 8 2

This is so good.thanks (^.^)

-1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

AnkitSpanish 11

'Suyo' is used when the possession is shown after the noun.

'Su' is used when the possession is shown before the noun

35ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

katemonster 13

It's like the difference between "your" and "yours," I believe.

"No es su pato." = "It is not your duck." "El pato no es suyo." = "The duck is not yours."

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nonete 24 23 22 20 8 223

[deleted]

5Give Lingot•2 years ago

MasqueArt 11 10 7 5 3 2

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Nonete 24 23 22 20 8 223

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

MasqueArt 11 10 7 5 3 2

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

1577809 9 6 5

Suyo is like your su is like i walk your dog

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

btong0 7

Hands off my pato buddy!

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

ciarancarroll1 10

Is tuyo incorrect? If so why?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alibax 17 13 10

I reported it, it should've been accepted

6ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

Talca 25 13

No, not incorrect, but just an informal form vs. a formal form. One, for example, you would use with your friends, and one you use with a boss or teacher.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

janjoey 6

Can I use el gato no es tuyo or it should be suyo, which is correct

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

prajeshfarand 9 4

What if it was a female cat(gata) instead of male duck(pato)?? Would "la gata no es suyo" be correct, or there is a word Suya?? Like mio and mia change with subject gender.. thanks.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nonete 24 23 22 20 8 223

"La gata es suya" is the correct form. Like "mio" and "mia" change with subject gender.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nonete 24 23 22 20 8 223

Su = their Es su perro (de ellos) = It is their dog.

At the beginning it's complicated, depend on the context.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AchyuthanS 14 6

Is it wrong to say 'El pato es no suyo'? It says I'm wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nonete 24 23 22 20 8 223

Yes, it's wrong; you have to put "no" before the verb.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nic93snk 25 19 14 4 3 2 2

The duck is not yours.

El pato no es suyo.

El pato no es vuestro. (used in Spain)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

katemonster 13

Why is "La pata no es tuya" incorrect? Can you not feminize "duck" the way you can with "cat"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nonete 24 23 22 20 8 223

Yes, you can! I'm a native from Spain and I can tell you that it's correct, you can feminize "duck".
Report it, it should've been accepted

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

katemonster 13

Thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

yohablaunpoco 12 11 4 3

If i had a nickle for every time i had to say: "that duck is not yours."

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jhallford 11

Screen shot for future reference ... This is going to be very helpful thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

HekateVivi 9 2

Is this a form of flirting that I am unfamiliar with?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

learn.languages 10 8

i said la pata no es suyo why it is wrong??!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nonete 24 23 22 20 8 223

You should say: "La pata no es suya"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Samara_Mack 5 4

su, suyo, tu, tuyo???

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NancyColli1 25 23 2

I put "la pata" thinking to make it feminine. Duo counted wrong. Is there not a feminine duck or is it always "el pato." Thanks

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nonete 24 23 22 20 8 223

Yes, there is a feminine form for "duck" in Spanish. You can say "El pato no es suyo" or "La pata no es suya" :-).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lilystejskal 16

That seems like it should mean "the duck is not his/hers, since his/hers is "su."

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

1577809 9 6 5

How do you say nonsense in spanish?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

princessme4 7

How is it determine what word to use. I always get confused when something is not yours and use the wrong one

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bSting3 12

The discussion of possessives says that tuyo = yours. why not here?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nonete 24 23 22 20 8 223

We deleted it because I made some mistakes in my explanation. I'll rewrite it better when I can, ok? ;). I don't have a good command of English so it takes me quite time to explain it in another language and I'm quite busy lately. But I'll do it!! :D

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jamesbrown69 12

El pato es no suyo is the same vice versa

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Unonymous 10 4 3 2

This was the first time I had ever seen this word and I just took a wild guess and got it right. It'd been nice if there was a lesson for it.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LEERICHA 11 6

Stolen duck??

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

deadpanfaceman 10

I put in El pato es no suyo. Why is this not accepted?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages 332 – 351 of 912

[accessed March 15, 2017]

332 The perfect language learner?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2263962>

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1227

The Perfect Language Learner

Every language student wants to know the secret of making the most progress in the shortest time.

What does the perfect learner do to excel in acquiring a foreign language?

ST GEORGE
INTERNATIONAL
THE LANGUAGE SPECIALISTS

www.stgeorges.co.uk

English School in Central London

1: Learn every day

Even when you are really tired, do some learning, even if it's only 5-10 mins. Never miss a chance to increase your knowledge. Use it, or lose it! Practice makes perfect.

2: Be motivated

What is your goal? Always think about your objective. You are learning because you want to achieve something. When you get there your life will be better. Always remember that, even when it's tough.

3: Record new vocabulary

To really learn a new word, you have to remind yourself of it 6 times over hours, days and weeks. Write down all your new vocab in a little book that you can always carry around with you. Or keep a record in your mobile - you always have it with you, don't you?

Success in remembering new vocabulary
Vocabulary book	86%
Mobile phone	74%
Flashcards	67%
No written record	21%

4: Read, read & read!

Read (in the foreign language) things that you like, not boring stuff. Notice new grammar patterns and important vocabulary. The more you read, the quicker you progress - it's as simple as that.

5: Be brave

Don't worry about small mistakes! No-one minds! When you learn new vocab or grammar, use it as soon as possible. If you are not 100% accurate, someone will correct you. Challenge yourself! Go for it!

6: Use technology

Listen to podcasts of native speakers
Do online tests checking your level & knowledge
Read the news in your target language
Watch videos in the target language
Comment on articles & interact with blog authors
Record yourself speaking with free audio software
Make your own flashcards with online flashcard generators
Play games in the target language
Keep a permanent record of your new vocab in GoogleDrive

2 years ago

Leave a new comment

35 Comments

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Trang, can you include a link to bigger copy of the picture?

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1227

Here it's much clearer <http://www.stgeorges.co.uk/sites/default/files/the-perfect-language-learner.jpg>

5ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Thank you Trang and ms.mm!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Boarderminded 9 7

wow! that really is much bigger!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ms.mm 25 14 3 2 2

Found a link <http://www.stgeorges.co.uk/english-resources/infographics/the-perfect-language-learner>

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1227

Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Aliciaftw 25

Looks like I need to start physically recording new vocabulary I come across. I thought it'd just be a waste of paper but.. o_o

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mazzorano 25 12 10 9

I have nothing but one word for you - Anki.

5ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Aliciaftw 25

I paid for the actual app ages ago. I dunno why I don't utilize it more.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mazzorano 25 12 10 9

You paid? Anki is free! Besides, I find it much more useful to upload vocab on the desktop version and by sharing it on dropbox, use it on my mobile (which I do rarely).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Aliciaftw 25

The iPhone app at least used to cost twenty dollars. I figured it was worth having on my phone and it'd be nice to pay something back to the creator. I think that was like two years ago.

...And I never use it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mazzorano 25 12 10 9

I apologize, I found out just now that the iPhone app costs 25$ (the Android is still free). That's disgusting. Nevertheless, install it on your computer, it makes all the difference.

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

fbianh 17

You could use memrise instead - it is free and way more fun than anki (also, it's more effective). Why waste paper if you can record the vocabulary in your mind instead (and a little backup at a learning site/app)? Memrise teaches you only vocabulary but in my opinion way better than duolingo (which is great for grammar.) I love both of them because they are a perfect match!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Aliciaftw 25

That's what I was thinking, but I was wondering if the physical act of writing out the word is what does it for people?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

idshanks 14 11 5 4 2

I have to say, that's what does it for me. I go through Duolingo writing every new sentence down, and then writing my own sentences with the newly learned words before submitting them to lang-8.com, then writing down any corrected versions of my own sentences. I try to make simple stories out of the new words that I've learned. I do it all pen-on-paper, because before I started doing that I was having a little trouble remembering some of the vocabulary and for some reason one day I just decided to try it (I think it's the fact I learnt the Cyrillic alphabet easily from writing out the letters, so I thought I should try it with words). I find that I struggle to learn with resources like Memrise Anki personally; I learn much better if I can apply new words in context.

I absolutely eat up paper with this method, but it certainly doesn't constitute a waste, as my learning of vocabulary has shot up since starting with this method. It also helps to embed spelling more-so than typing ever has done for me, and if you do work on applying your words rather than writing them in pure isolation, it also helps to reinforce the context in which a word is appropriate (useful for two words with similar but nuanced meanings), as well as improving your grammar in general (certainly if you submit to lang-8.com for critique).

A mistake that many of the 'language gurus' out there seem to make is to neglect to consider that different people do learn differently, to varying degrees. It's important to try different methods personally and see what works for you. For example, I need grammar right away - I really enjoy grammar and phonetics, I love being analytical, and I hate not understanding. Many big online language bloggers say you should avoid grammar for the first couple of months, in many cases very matter-of-factly, and without consideration for the various learning styles - it is something that I went along with, and now know is a mistake for me personally.

Anyway, I'm going on a bit of a tangent! :P

4Give Lingot1•2 years ago

fbianh 17

I think it depends on what kind of learner you are. If you have to use your hands to remember something you should definitely use them, but if you're more visual or more into speaking and listening, prefer these kind of tools. I think they didn't use a controlled experiment to test the success of vocabulary learning, so the results may be biased as a vocabulary book could be heavily correlated for example with taking other notes or higher motivation or a more organized style of work. I would always focus on a system that's most effective for me and not other learners :)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1227

For me it depends on the language. I never learn English by writing down the words, but it is necessary for Chinese

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

JaneEmily 17 8

I actually have a notebook dedicated to vocabulary, it helps me memorise the words a lot easier if I write down the letters and how it's written. It feels engraved into my brain then. So far I have 17 pages in my notebook just full of words I've learnt in Dutch :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1227

Haha, I only write new words down when I learn chinese, but I do not mind wasting paper because after I write each character on a paper, and look back, it's kind of an awesome feeling :3

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

le-lapin-noir 18 16 16 11 7 6

I used to practice Chinese with a whiteboard. Very convenient method. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1227

Cool, how do you remember the characters, do your teacher explains to you how they were created

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

le-lapin-noir 18 16 16 11 7 6

We learned the radicals (components) and initially had writing tests where we had to label stroke order. After not too long new characters become pretty easy to learn, you just have to practice until it clicks. So keep on writing, it's the best way to learn! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1227

True that, so happy this is the first language ever that I do not seem to have problems with listening skills (or maybe it seems so at first)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

le-lapin-noir 18 16 16 11 7 6

Haha, already knowing Chinese saved me when I tried to learn Vietnamese. Although in many cases it seems that Chinese loan words in Japanese or Korean sound even more like Vietnamese (minus tones) than modern Mandarin. Probably has to do with when they were borrowed. Edit: 60% is probably about right. And I would agree with your teacher in regards to the spoken language, although the Japanese have a huge advantage when learning written Chinese.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1227

Yeah I know, I have watched so many Chinese movies and even when at that time I did not know Chinese, I could understand it well without looking at the subtitles. I read somewhere that Vietnamese loans about 60% (??) Chinese words. Not sure if that is true, but my teacher said that Vietnamse are in greater advantage than any people elsewhere to learn Chinese

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

SD-77 22 16 15 15 15 14 11 9 8 8 7 6 5 4 26

You can do it on your phone ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vexd_liam 5

[deleted]

Give Lingot•2 years ago

Atanalo 9 7 5 3

probably depeands on your learning style

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lenonile

I don't know if it is.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sadika.koo 7

Awesome ideas. Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

quinnmarie1234 3

Thanks, this is helpful! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AyeletW15 16

Quizlet for vocabulary

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Boarderminded 9 7

I better start trying this.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Merci pour cette information!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

333 What is the best way to say "takeout" or "takeaway" at an Italian bar?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3206839>

Paiting 17 6 3 3

For example, I want my cornetto to go. I've seen "per portare via" and "da portare via" written online, are these correct? Are there times you would use one over the other?

Give Lingot

72 years ago

Leave a new comment

11 Comments

giovaug 25 16 6

Il modo migliore di tradurre "take away" è sicuramente "da portare via" o, in alternativa, "da asporto". Ciao a tutti.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pont 25 23 18 16 10 5 105

"Da portare via" or "da portare" is what I tend to hear most often, at least in Rome.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

d.batta 23 15 14 11 11 8 5 2 44

"Da portare via" is the most used sentence.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Muttley71 20 19 15 15 14 12 8 7 6 6 3 2 189

I'd say "da asporto".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Beppe 25 22 5 3 1232

"da portare via" is more common. You can also say "da asporto", but is not "colloquial" (seems bit more formal: you can say e.g. "pizza da asporto", but on a leaflet or on an ad, non in an oral request).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SanchezHumberto 14 6

Was recently in Rome, used "per", then heard others using "da"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

itastudent 15 14 10 9

Yes, in Italian we say "da portare" or "da portare via".

Since I'm not an English native speaker, may I ask you exactly how do you say that in English? Do you usually say just "it's to go"? is "it's takeaway" another good expression? what other expressions are acceptable? Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mmseiple 23 13 12 12 3

I would say "to go" or "for takeout." I think "takeaway" is British English, but I'm not 100% sure. Here in the U.S. you'll hear:

For here or to go?

Do you want to go to a restaurant or get takeout?

Is this order for here or for takeout?

I don't like takeout; I prefer a sit-down meal.

I'm in a hurry, so let's get the food to go.

With "to go" it needs to be modifying something (get X to go). "Takeout" is a noun, referring to the food. "For takeout" can be used more or less interchangeably with "to go," I believe.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

itastudent 15 14 10 9

Yeah, I have mostly heard "to go". I feel I could have probably heard "takeout" as well, but I think that probably the most of the times I was not able to understand that word, lol.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Latviete 25 16 12 5 4 1212

Yes, "takeaway" is used in Britain more or less the same way as "takeout" in the US. "I want some takeaway curry," "An order of chips to take away, please," etc.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BadBlackGatone 12 11 10 9 3 2

"per portare via" is not correct at all. "Vorrei un cornetto da portare via" is correct, but "Vorrei un cornetto da asporto" is more elegant.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

334 The great pig debate: le porc / le cochon / le sanglier

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6742200>

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

Link : lindakanga s learning loom home

le porc / le cochon / le sanglier :

- porc is the more generic term for referring to pig.
- If it's domesticated, it's more often referred to as cochon,
- and if it's wild, it's a sanglier.

All these french words (porc / cochon / sanglier) for pig are interchangeable whether referring to a live animal or meat.

NB - This is DIFFERENT to how English speakers use the word "pork" - which in English refers to the meat. For french speakers the word porc (male noun) can refer to a live pig OR to meat from a pig. It depends on the context of the sentence - and ESPECIALLY watch out for the word before the noun - is it le / la / les / du / de la / des More about that later

To work out, or express, if a sentence is referring to a LIVE animal, or to meat - you need to check out the article that comes in front of the noun.

when it is countable , and refers to a live animal - one of these articles is used :

le / la / les (for " the ' , with les to refer to plural , or un / une / des (for " a " , with des to refer to plural)

When it becomes meat - it becomes an uncountable (indenombrable) amount, one of these articles is used :

le / la : when it is used only with an 'appreciative' verb (aimer: like, détester: detest, etc) - it may be referring to either a live animal OR the meat. ie. it may refer to a specific living thing / object, OR it may be "generally' the whole group of things.

du / de la. meaning " some of " , " some " as in you are referring to meat !

NOTE : - les / un / une / des can only be used with countable nouns - such as a LIVE animal.

- du / de la can only be used with uncountable/mass nouns - such as meat (pork, beef, etc)

- le / la used with an " appreciative " verb (such as aimer or détester, may be referring to a live animal - being a countable noun,

OR be a general reference to an uncountable/mass noun - such as meat. (if it is used without an " appreciative " verb - then it is countable/live object)

I highly recommend the reading of the notes provided by PatrickJaye below, on this subject - as well as so much more of the great way he has of explaining so many things ! He is BRILLIANT !

If the article preceding either porc / cochon / sanglier is un (which means a), then it is referring to a whole of the item - as in a live and countable animal.

However if the article preceding a male noun like porc / cochon / sanglier is du (which means some), then it is referring to meat and not a live animal, as an uncountable noun.

In cases where the uncountable noun is feminine, such as la viande (meat), then the preceding article is de la.

ie. Il aime manger de la viande. Check out a discussion here

Meat is an uncountable noun in French - just as it is in English! Check out the posts about uncountable nouns below.

If it is referred to as le porc / cochon / sanglier , it may be alive, or it might be meat - you have to read the rest of the sentence to work it out - or to comprehend it in context of where it is said :)

On an uncountable noun (such as meat), when to use le / la, and when to use du / de la

For action verbs - you 'act upon' a certain quantity of a mass thing (ie uncountable), and use the preposition of de + definitive article - du (=de+le) , or de la Examples of action verbs are:

manger : to eat

prendre : to take couper : to cut

laisser : to leave

mâcher : to chew

For appreciative verbs, they naturally introduce generalities. So if you love meat, it is not an "underdefined quantity" of meat that you will love, but meat in general - all kinds of meat (pork, beef, lamb...).

ie.

aimer : to love (a person), to like (an animal or an object)

détester : to hate / detest

haïr : to hate / detest

apprécier : to enjoy

préférer : to prefer ...note: préférer has two possible forms. Check out The French spelling war

So sum it up: J'aime le poivre et je mange du poivre = I like pepper and I eat (some) pepper.

(note in english we often leave out the concept of some, while in French you always specify du or de la.

Some other examples are:

- Élever des porcs : Raising pigs

- manger du cochon de lait : To eat suckling/baby pig

- Nous aimons le porc. : We like pork. or We like the pig.

As Sitesurf has pointed out here:

It/this is a pig = C'est un porc / cochon. (as in a living animal)

It/this is pork = C'est du porc / cochon. (as in meat)

This means it is a piece of pork, it is partitive, so it is not a live animal - but a piece of meat. It is a piece of , or part of , a much larger generic group of something. It is uncountable.

un = a du = some

For some fascinating discussions about all this - check out :

- "Leur porc mange du riz." , and especially the really great comments made by northerguy ! It is GREAT reading.

Also check out - Cool sayings for Le cochon for an amusing read.

ps. Please make comment about anything here - as I will always be learning, and welcome your input !

Also this is part of my learning loom, and if you click on the differently colored links in this post - it will take you to comments by others - both within duolingo, and to outside internet pages. To return here, use the "back arrow/return key" in your browser.

Give Lingot9

242 years ago

Leave a new comment

21 Comments

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

"It is true that in English "pork" means the meat of the animal and can not be used for the living animal. However this is an English distinction and not a French distinction. In French "porc" and "cochon" can both be used for the living animal and for the meat of the animal.

The "meat v animal" distinction is specific to English and comes from the way French was incorporated into English following the Norman invasion. The anglo-saxons farmed the animals but needed to use french words when they traded the meat with the Normans.

The same is true of other meat related words such as beef and mutton which have french origin. These words can only be used for the meat in English but the original French words are used for both meat and the animal in French."

by PatrickJaye

9ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

maggimunro 25 25 25 14 1243

Hunters kill 10,000 sanglier every year in the Languedoc-Roussillon because they flourish in the mountains. They can be aggressive and destructive and have been known to kill pet dogs when they stray into gardens. However, sad as I am when I see a hunt, I have to admit that they make a delicious stew.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PatrickJaye 25 5

"Porc" and "cochon" can both be used as a translation of "pig" meaning either the living animal or the meat of the animal. It is probably fair to say that "porc" is the more generic term as long as we see this as a broad tendency rather than a strict distinction between the two words. In practice which is used will be dependent on local custom and practice and will vary from place to place.

"Porc" derives directly from Latin roots. "Cochon" has less formal origins in that it derives from an imitation of the sound that a pig makes. The modern pronunciation is softer but if you try it with a harder and more guttural pronunciation and a little imagination you will see it really does sound like a pig grunting.

When "pig" is being used figuratively "cochon" will tend to be used rather than "porc". This can be seen in the examples you have given.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Gavier 24 13 3 1172

Je connais bien le mot 'sanglier' grâce à Astérix! :-)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

Ah oui - Astrix! Il est bon. Avec le petit village et les menhirs. Ils sont très amusants.

(Please correct my french if it is wrong :) (S'il vous plaît corriger mon français si elle est fausse)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

Astrix est sur l'Internet - en français! here

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

A_User 23 11 9 7 7 7 6 4 3 3 2 2 2 2

Aussi en anglais! here

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

Other links and references ...

- PatrickJaye click here
 - PatrickJaye in conversation.
 - DXLi and RJM_McGill discussing the partitive article
 - northernguy on pork in English here
 - Sitefurf on le porc versus du porc. here .
- It is well worth reading !
- ganesa_9 on " Nous aimons bien le porc.", and why use le here
 - italki

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IAMJon 25 15 9 4

This is very interesting! Another one I am interested in is the French word for dog. I know it is chien/chienne, but I have been looking at French football teams recently. I am a football fan and I thought following and learning about a team, reading their social media/website in French would be a good way to practice. One team I looked at, Lille, has Les Dogues as a nickname. This is obviously more English sounding than Les Chiens. Is there a similar thing going on with Dog too? Are there more words for Dog? Does this just refer to the football team because it sounds more foreign and exotic? Is this just a northern French way of saying dog?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PatrickJaye 25 5
@IAMJon

"Dogue" is not a general word for "dog" and so cannot be used as a straight alternative to "chien".

Instead it is a particular type of dog - specifically a mastiff but in practice the word "dogue" is likely to be used for any large dog of a mastiff type.

Lille football team's nickname should therefore be translated as "the mastiffs" or "the great danes" rather than the dogs. The football team's logo includes what appears to be a great dane. I don't know if they have a mascot but if they do I would not be surprised if it turned out to be a mastiff or great dane.

The word "dogue" is a real French word so it is not being used just to sound exotic. The origin of the word is however old English. You might know that in Roman times Britain was known particularly for its large powerful dogs - so it is not surprising that the name of such dogs would have English origins.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IAMJon 25 15 9 4

I actually went on the team's wikipedia page soon after I wrote this comment and discovered that it was indeed great dane.

I guess it is sort of a faux ami because it is so similar to the english word I thought it was perhaps a northern dialect way of saying dog.

I've been a bit ignorant too, I assumed that breeds of Dog would have similar names to the english ones 'Grande Dane' or something like that haha!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PatrickJaye 25 5
@IAmJon

The Great Dane is a mastiff type dog - the specific breed has two names in French - "grand danois" which of course is a direct translation of the English name - and "dogue allemand" (German mastiff).

At the end of the nineteenth century and early in the twentieth, German dog breeders, wanting to sell outside of Germany, found it very difficult to market a dog with "German" in the breed name - so they adopted an alternative name.

The same happened with the "German Shepherd" which became the Alsation (particularly in the UK).

Of course the same happened with the British Royal family who abandoned their German name and adopted the name "Windsor" during the First World War.

The German Shepherd has largely regained its true name - but in UK the German Mastif is still the Great Dane and the Royal family is still Windsor.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

And just when you think you have an understanding of things - learning a language is like science - you find out there is even MORE to know! In french there are nouns that are countable and ones that are not!

Check out this post by one of my admired sensei 's - PatrickJaye. Click on this !

As PatrickJaye has also pointed out to me, English ALSO has uncountable nouns.

" Uncountable nouns are substances, concepts etc that we cannot divide into separate elements. " from English Club.

"This usually has to do with the way English speakers think of these nouns. We often picture these nouns as a single concept or one big thing which is hard to divide. Many of these words are countable in other languages, but they ARE NOT countable in English. " from english page e.g. Milk, art, love, happiness, news, furniture, rice, electricity, money, etc.

French uncountable nouns in Wiktionary here

English Club List of uncountable nouns lmgty

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

" What is different (and very interesting) is that French has an article (the partitive article) that is used specifically with non-countable nouns. English does not have partitive articles - this is why so many English speakers have difficulty with "du" and "de la". In many cases English uses "some" or "any" as a sort of pretend partitive article but it is almost always optional. That is probably why many English speakers cannot understand why the French partitive article is not optional. "

by PatrickJaye

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

"Le" and "la" are the singular definite articles (the) - these can be used with both countable and uncountable nouns. "Les" is the plural definite article - "les porcs" - it can only be used with countable nouns. "Un/une" are the singular indefinite articles (a/an) - these are used with countable nouns. "Des" is the plural indefinite article - the plural of "un/une" - it is used with countable nouns. English doesn't have a plural indefinite article but it is sometimes translated as "some" - "des porcs" = "some pigs" "Du" and "de la" are the partitive articles - these are used with uncountable nouns. English doesn't have partitive articles but again we can use "some" - "du lait" = "some milk".
By PatrickJaye

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

PatrickJaye responding to a badly worded question I had about "I am eating pork":

"Why is it that if we start off with the English sentence - "I am eating pork" - do we have to use "du" rather than "le"? This question is often asked because learners think that as there is no article in this English sentence - in particular it does not include "some" - so why can't we use "le".

If we are starting from the French then - "je mange le porc" and "je mange du porc" are both perfectly correct sentences - although they mean different things.

"Je mange le porc" = "I am eating the pork" - this means that I am eating the specific pork on my plate - I am eating the pork rather than the beef etc.

"Je mange du porc" = "I am eating some pork" or simply "I am eating pork" - this means that I am eating an unspecified amount of pork - no particular pork.

The English sentence - "I am eating pork" means that I am eating an unspecified amount of pork - I am not eating any particular pork. We can add "some" to this English sentence without changing the meaning - but we cannot add "the" without changing the meaning.

So in English :-

"I am eating pork" can be written as "I am eating some pork" but it cannot be written as "I am eating the pork"

Therefore that particular English sentence must be "du porc" and not "le porc"

However if we started with the English sentence "I am eating the pork" - then the French would indeed be "je mange le porc"

by PatrickJaye

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

So does this mean for the sentence

" Nous aimons le porc. " ,

That it might mean " We like pork " : as in the meat ,

Or it might mean " We like the pig. " : as in this pig ?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PatrickJaye 25 5

"Nous aimons le porc" almost certainly means "I like pork".

But yes you are right - in theory it could mean "I like the pig" - however that would be an unusual thing to say a stand alone sentence.

If we meant that we like pigs generally - we think they are so cute - we would say "we like pigs" - that would be "nous aimons les porcs". We would then see that we are using a countable noun so it must be "pigs".

If we meant that we like a particular pig - then we would say - "we like our pig" or "we like this pig". "Nous aimons notre porc" or "nous aimons ce porc" - although in that case we could not be certain whether it was "this pig" or "this pork". In real life it would of course be obvious from the context.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

I am so thankful for the FANTASTIC explanations that PatrickJaye has provided on this subject ! He is truly AMAZING !

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

From a conversation PatrickJaye had with me about this topic:

"J'aime le porc" could mean either "I like pork" or "I like the pig" Tey key thing to realise is that appreciation verbs and action verbs work differently when deciding which article to use in French. If we are starting off with an English sentence that has no article. -"I like meat" = "J'aime la viande" (must be definite article)

-"I eat meat" = "Je mange de la viande" (cannot be definite article)

-"I like apples" = "J'aime les pommes" (must be definite article)

-"I eat apples" = "Je mange des pommes"* (cannot be definite article)

Once we decide that we can't use the definite article with "manger" in the examples I gave we must then decide which article to use.

Meat is uncountable so we use the partitive "de la".

Apples are countable so we use the plural indefinite article "des".

Of course in cases where we start off with an English sentence that does have an article then there is no difficulty. The French sentence will simply follow the English article. " by PatrickJaye

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZenMadman 16 10 9 7 4 2 73

Pigs are filthy animals. (Which Jules Winnfield reminds us are also called swine in English.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

335 "The month of March "

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3525565>

Translation: Tháng Ba

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

41 Comments

NguyenAnh1 10

Tại sao không nói là "March" mà lại nói là "The month of March" vậy?

19ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1227

Team muốn giới thiệu với bạn thêm một cách nói khác, biết thêm không bao giờ là thừa mà ;)

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

L3Thanh 15

the month of march dịch ra là tháng của tháng ba mới đúng

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JustDo_It 6

Nhưng mà cũng chả ai dùng bao giờ cả

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MarianaRobinson 7 2

you are wrong body.everyone still uses itno ,not still ,always DUM='=

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

joskyjun 16

Mình thấy cách nói này hay mà, học thêm nhiều cách nói để chỉ một từ không phải là hay hơn sao :D

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Hieu_Trung 12

Cùng quan điểm.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

thaocute 7

lại cùng quan điểm

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vuongconuong 6

thế mới tức

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

tuxedo198x 10 2

Tưởng tiếng việt phong ba bão táp lắm hóa ra tiếng Anh chả kém là mấy :))

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

phuongphammaiJ 6

chuẩn không cần chỉnh

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarianaRobinson 7 2

trong latin tiếng việt khó nhất đấy nhưng trong chữ tượng hình tiếng nhật khó nhất đấy !!!!!!!!!!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Tucuulobi 15

Ad làm ơn giải thích thắc mắc cho học viên chúng tớ được biết về hiện tượng ngữ pháp "The month of March" dịch là "tháng ba" với. Chắc là phải có điển tích, điển cố nào liên quan đến vấn đề này. Rất mong Ad sớm trả lời :)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

conmeogia 8

Có nhiều cách nói mà, ví dụ "the city of Da Nang".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sky12345678 7

the city of Da Nang là thành phố của đà nẵng Còn câu này chả hiểu nói cái gì tháng của tháng 3 àh. nếu tháng 3 nói là march .

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

conmeogia 8

Nghĩa là đây là cách nói thứ 2 của tháng Ba. Tiếng Anh đâu có giống tiếng Việt hả bạn? Không thể dùng cách dịch word-word này đối chiếu như vậy được đâu bạn.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MarianaRobinson 7 2

yes so do i.....!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

conmeogia 8

The city of Da Nang là Thành phố Đà Nẵng nhé bạn. Cũng như "the capital of Ha Noi" là thủ đô Hà Nội

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tranthaiquang113 8

đây là khitra lời thôi có 2 cách ví dụ...the seventh of May orMay the seventh cũng dk

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

canhpro 7

cái này tối nghĩa quá admin à

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NguyetDao 14 2

giờ mình mới thấy The month of March đó câu nói này hay thiệt mình sẽ học hỏi

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lequangtrung 11
khó hiểu

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

inshusi 18 5
chẳng hiểu

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dhtrung 15 2
Khó hiểu quá

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BaoNguyen1105 12
Kho hieu nha

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CunYeu1 10
Mình dịch "Tháng là tháng ba" >> bị sai ? khó hiểu quá.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

phuongnam07 7
cứ chấp nhận đi rồi tiếng anh sẽ khá hơn lúc đó muốn nói gì cũng được

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kingheli 9
đã rút kinh nghiệm lần trước. hahaha..

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sonic0103 9
tháng của tháng ba lại sai? Dịch sát nghĩa mà

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Minhhung2110 6
sao k phải là march thôi mà phải the month of march vậy ad? khó hiểu

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

thuyha1606 6
March đọc như Mon ấy

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

chinguyen394998 6
cứ sai sai kiểu gì ấy

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sai19x2 11
Đúng là cách nói hơi lạ ^^

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

ngKiSt1 8
GGWp

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

isala_isala1 10 5 2 2
lần đầu gặp , cách nói này thật mới nha

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

nhHng61919 7
Tháng của tháng ba mới chính xác...

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Kakuracut 6
đáp án của mình giống đáp án của bạn L3 Thanh

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

mrtienova 20 3 877
march thôi thì đúng hơn

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nguyenduyanh_87 8
March lại còn the month of march. Ad xem lại đi

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pmyt 25 25 22 9 6 5 264
Chỉ là một cách nói hơi văn chương thôi bạn. Câu này hoàn toàn đúng.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NgynAnhTuan 8
"Tháng này là tháng ba" không được à ?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

336 Suggestion: More things in the lingot store

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1885367>

FrenchAddict7 22

Hi Duo users! I've heard quite a few people saying they've got more lingots than they know what to do with, so I was wondering if the people who work for Duo could add more. Please post your ideas on what should be in the lingot store, so the Duo staff can perhaps add it to the lingot store. Please upvote this post so it can get the attention from other users and the people who work for Duo. Thanks!

Give Lingot32

1583 years ago

Leave a new comment

124 Comments

TheBryce 10 7 6 10

Maybe a small mini game that could teach you vocabulary somehow. Or maybe more bonus lessons such as 'Vacation' 'Holidays / Culture' and 'Literature'. Holidays and culture could teach you stuff about their culture while learning vocabulary. Literature could be about vocabulary that may only appear in literature especially old literature.

83ReplyGive Lingot6•3 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

Maybe lyrics to famous songs, or famous poems.

37ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

k0biz.a 7 3

Yeah, that's a good idea.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Landsberg 23 4

Check this out :) <http://babadum.com/play/?lang=7&game=1>

7ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

TheBryce 10 7 6 10

Thanks!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FaizalZahid 15 12 12 12 12 11 11 11 11 11 10 10 10 10 9 8 4 2

That is a good one!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Great idea!!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

k0biz.a 7 3

yeah, not a bad idea. not bad.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PattiSh 20 8 7 2

I'd love to see location specific modules in the lingot store. For instance, one on Costa Rica including the names of a few parks, some local idioms, popular meals, wildlife found there, and more. If not a country, then a city where the target language is spoken . This could be a lot of fun and would keep the focus on learning.

49ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

ClarkSchau 12

Oooh, I like it! What if you had an interactive tourist map where you could "visit" such locations at a cost? That would add an interesting advanced achievement system. Thumbs up Patti!

14ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Tsubnakatsukasa 9 8 2

I would really like to spend all my lingots in this map !!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Bob20020 23 19 11 7 39

It is free, and we define things to see what they really are, a 3D Google Earth to go around!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

That's a great idea. I'm from Canada, and the French spoken here is way different from the one learned on Duo. A few typical Canadian (of Belgian, of Maghrebian, or other) expressions would make an awesome bonus lesson. Same goes with Swiss German, Portugal Portugese (I assume it's Brazilian Portugese that is taught, but I don't know), Spanish idioms from Spain or Argentina or a few region specific idioms in dialects of Italian.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

araparseghian 21 21 21 18 17 15 13 12 12 12 11 10 7 7 7 5 4 3 3 3 3 2

Love it. To me, learning a language is worthless unless I get to learn about the culture as well.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

I think the other way around : learning about a culture isn't worth much without learning the language. But maybe it resolves to the exact same thing after all !

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Yes, cool idea!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

evilmeow 25 2

Oooh I can think of ideas:

For the very dedicated users, give a 2 day streak freeze for a ~50-75 lingot. This seems like it would be convenient for those who take weekends off to go somewhere.. or maybe even let a user "pile" a few streak freezes for a very high amount of lingots (100s) so that people who take vacations but are very committed to practicing don't feel bad about their streak.

More fun lessons to unlock - maybe some slang or interesting regional differences that would be nice to introduce.

A pause option for timed practice which will allow you to pause on long sentence, and then it disappears. This will be good for those sentences that you want to translate, but know that you might not have enough time. I often end up skipping them, and this option will make the practice a bit more friendly to tough questions.

Change question option - this will let you switch the sentence/question without losing a heart, while still having to answer the same amount correctly,

31ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

SabrinaStecka 9

How about the history of the language you are learning. For example for French you could have some background info, how many countries speak it and stuff...

10ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

SabrinaStecka 9

How about spending coins on a type of video bases comprehension. You could watch a short 5 minute conversations in a language and then get asked questions at the end to test understanding.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

And giving you ideas of where to go on your next vacation. You could be surprised how some region much closer than you thought actually speak the language you're learning. Many Americans aren't aware 10 million people speak French in Canada. And there's a big community of French speakers in Florida.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Nora_Gigi_BLK 13 2

Oh, this is great idea! It both expanding the knowledge of language and stimulating for studying!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22
Ya, cool! :DDDD

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

FrenchAddict7 22
All of these are great ideas! Hope Duo looks at them!

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

HighClassSlim 25 21 17 8 7
For my lingots, personally, I'd like to see something as simple as a purchasable Nouns section with nothing but picture flashcards. You're shown a picture and they speak the audio. Nothing more. I'm a visual person/learner, and that would help me IMMENSELY to remember these terms.

I know they technically already have a section where they show a few pics of a particular noun and ask you to identify it, but they're so few and far between. I'm talking about an add-on section you can buy that's nothing but nouns and their pictures. Extensive sets. That would be fantastic.

31ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22
Cool idea :)))

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Sparkle 11 7 6 5
What if you could buy different voices? Like downloading a new voice for your GPS. I think it's useful to hear different voices, plus the same one can get a bit old. Could be just for specific lessons to reduce the amount of work required for implementation.

30ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22
Good idea!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MarquiseDeBat 15 13 13 13 6 5 2 2
Yes, it is definitely great idea, since I have 50 lingots and don't know what to do with them. I would love more of those bonus lessons. What about famous quotations? Or kind of trivia about the country/history and so on with cute stylized duolingo owl as an illustration... What comes on my mind next - side trees. For example quick travel one (three or four levels with things connected with holidays in that country, like typical food, phrases like "How can I get to" etc.), business one, law one... Ok, last two can be easily taken just like skills but those are just my ideas.

16ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Susande 17 13 12 11 246

I really like your travel side tree idea. In the current setup it's difficult to learn those specific sentences, the first phrases lessons don't go far beyond "Thank you", we need more "I'd like a room for 3 nights please" and of course: "Que hora es?" :)

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Good idea!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

petic 14 11 9 144

Idiomatic expressions, sayings, slang - tons of :)

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Yes, I'd love to see some slang for French! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Trizie 12 11 11 6 5 5

Yeah, slang as bonus skill would be awesome:-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

I was also thinking that maybe they could add a comparisons bonus skill to the store. Maybe comparing the language in different countries where there spoken and comparing the different words and such.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dakotagypsy 16 7 6 2

I love all the ideas about adding to the skill tree, bonus skills, etc. But I'll just be superficial and add that more outfits for the owl would be fun too. That might be something the developers could come up with more quickly while they're working on adding to the skill tree, and it would be a way to use up lingots. They could make like a background where you just see the owl in his 'environment' and you could decorate it with maps, country flags, foods, etc. And then you could choose his clothes like glasses, beret, sombrero, etc.

7ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

HighClassSlim 25 21 17 8 7

Also, one more idea:

A downloadable screensaver (maybe with or without some various pics of the Duo mascot) that displays the flags of the languages you're learning, your streak-days total, your level(s) in the language(s) you're studying, and a bar indicating your progress toward the next level (of the last language you studied on the site).

I think there's a VERY slim chance they'd actually do this one, but... I'd love it if they did. I love being reminded at every chance I get to study, study, study. It gives me extra incentive.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

That would be awesome :)

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

HighClassSlim 25 21 17 8 7

Je suis heureux que tu sois d'accord! ;-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

snm5678 19

an extra skill just for jokes and riddles

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Ya, jokes would be nice :)))

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

Maybe something about etymology : how a certain word or expression came to be. We could see how a word or idiom crossed many languages before ending in the one we study.

As an example : to park a car comes from old French : "Parquer sa calèche" (put one's carriage in the park). Now some native French speakers use the English to park one's car and are being told it's an anglicism, when in fact it comes from their own old language ! Another one is a toast.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Cool idea :DD

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lightningcat 6 3

I hope this is noticed

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Me, too :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Williamiscool 6

I was thinking a game that will last for 5-15 minutes for 5 lingots

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Good idea. I was thinking that they could add a mini game, too! :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lightningcat 6 3

As long as the game was still based on learning the language your learning.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BarbaraMorris 25 25 25

I think I already posted this idea on another thread ...

I'd like to be able to buy a practice session that was entirely "translate to Spanish", or entirely "Write what you hear".

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Cool :DDDDDDD

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BarbaraMorris 25 25 25

50 lingots to have a sentence report go to the front of the queue. It could be an option in the Report dialog. "Spend 50 lingots to mark this as high priority".

The price would have to be high enough that we wouldn't be able to use it for every report.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Cool idea :DD

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ALoUSyUseRnaME 25 25 16 9 5 5 4

Here are mine: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1844968>

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ALoUSyUseRnaME 25 25 16 9 5 5 4

Even though those were my ideas, there was still some arguments in the discussion about useless lingots.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

I know your lingot suggestions (BTW it's a great idea) but I was thinking we could get more in the lingot store, more activities and such, since some people have so many lingots and the don't know what to do with them. That's what I was saying.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ALoUSyUseRnaME 25 25 16 9 5 5 4

Oh, ok then, but my idea for getting rid of useless lingots was to post your own challenge and reward the participants with lingots.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Oh, I understand now. Yet again, great idea!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lightningcat 6 3

what about bigger wagers and 2/3 heart refill

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SD-77 22 16 15 15 15 14 11 9 8 8 7 6 5 4 26

Bigger wagers is an awesome idea. Something like you pay 20 lingots and if you get a 30 day streak you get 40 lingots.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lightningcat 6 3

It would make streak freeze's worth the lingots .like you save the streak for 10 and then get 20 back

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ALoUSyUseRnaME 25 25 16 9 5 5 4

I think quite a few users would disagree with the 2/3 heart refill. After the half heart corrections were available, many users didn't exactly like Duolingo anymore, so if there is 2/3 heart refills, I'm pretty sure it would be favoured as much as the half-heart corrections.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

antrozemelin 10 9

I thought about it and I think that I know what we need. We need HATS. Just like in TF2. Or maybe something like this: language-themed lesson interfaces , etc.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Cool idea!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

antrozemelin 10 9

I can imagine what will happen after this update if it will be released:

STOUT SHAKO FOR TWO... lingots!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Nora_Gigi_BLK 13 2

I really REALLY loved idioms lessons, such fun and use! Please add something like that more....

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Exactly! More skills added to the beautiful golden tree!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrankKool 25 25 25 25 12 11 917

I can relate to this: I've got 457 lingots now and I've completed the skill tree of both languages I'm studying at the moment. :P

And yes, I'd also like to see more out-of-the-ordinary lessons that you can purchase. I'd love to see one with insults and cusswords. :) But I think that DuoLingo has already commented on how they're never going to do foul language.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Wow.. You've come far! Cool :)))

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrankKool 25 25 25 25 12 11 917

I've been unemployed for little over a year. Thanks to DuoLingo, I had a great way of making constructive use of all that free time. :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

I hope you get a job :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

I was about to give you a lingot for this comment, but realised you already don't know what to do with the ones you have... Who knows, maybe your new language skills can help you get a better job than you thought you could before !

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrankKool 25 25 25 25 12 11 917

Thanks for the kind words, arisplice and Bastou. But in fact, I've already got a steady job for almost two months now. When I said that "I've been unemployed", I meant to say that this is in the past. I didn't realize that the sentence was ambiguous, haha.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

badgerballer13 7

you should be able to rent extra hearts for awhile

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Interesting idea!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ScavengerRey 11 8 4 2

Perhaps a game when you could pick 5 or 6 of the words you want to learn. In the game they would have the words you have chosen. For me it would be a fun way to learn.:D

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Cool :DDD

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Kaitybeth14 13

I think that you should have something than when you put a word of your language in it translates it to the language your learning

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bob20020 23 19 11 7 39

I think we need to send a message to Duolingo and tell them about all of these ideas!!!!!!!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LysolPionex 21 8 115

Mini games (rapidfire vocabulary, memory) Color themes Sound themes Streak recovery (like freeze, but in retrospect) More costumes (e.g. holidays)

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Parisian_Dreamer 9 3

Maybe twice the xp for completing a lesson? Some people finish the skill tree before they reach level 25, and it's hard to level up, so it would definitely help.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Yes, it really is hard to level up, especially when you increase in levels. Good idea!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

k0biz.a 7 3

Yeah... The current Lingot store is pretty... Um.. how do I put this.... oh right, LAME. It would be better to see more items.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

k0biz.a 7 3

Like, Mini games, or buy extra Xp points!

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

First of all, i love your user name. Second, i love your pic. Third, i totally agree with you!

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

k0biz.a 7 3

:D thaaaaaaaaaaaaankssssssssssssssssssss

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mochiShaymin 5

Woo mini-games sound fun and maybe there should be a thing where you can make your profile pic right on the website with a drawing application that you buy with lingots! I love your username and pic too :D

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

k0biz.a 7 3

THAAAAANK YUH!

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

LolFail 12 2

Arisplce she's in the same class as me in school

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

i am? Who are you?

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

lightningcat 6 3

Lessons that have the complicated words that make you sound smart.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Lol :O

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

Anyone who has ever studied economy knows that we need a lingot sink, or a way to make lingots disappear to keep their value, or else the inflation will make them much less valuable - exactly what we see now : people have too many in their account and don't know what to do with them.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dudly 21 17 9 2 2

This is how people ruined the world :/

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

Some would argue that the opposite is true ;-) Do you know how many lire it took to buy anything in Italy before they introduced the Euro ? The change was like 1000:1. And rapid increases in inflation were responsible for many riots and wars. I guess we simply haven't found quite a fair system yet. Or the ones that are fair are too short lived.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dudly 21 17 9 2 2

Naja, I guess what I mean is, money is sort of ... imaginary value. Duolingo is cool because it rewards our work by giving us a way to exchange it for the sort of bonus we would specifically want. As it so happens, many people want more choices, because the things our money can "buy" are kind of useless. When this is fixed, then we will not have too many lingots to count, I think.

I think I'm hippie-minded enough that what I meant was, the way we imagined the value of money and then play with it to make sure it keeps this imaginary value, kind of ruined the world. I'm not saying money is bad in general or that we should burn the dollars, but it feels like there is just one acceptable paradigm (the one we currently have, and any other suggestion would be naive/hippie/crazy/ignorant) even though we give more value to the need of keeping money's value than in the need of the people and there is something rotten in this mentality and its consequences.

But it's sort of interesting, because we had no lingots and were fine with the website, and now that we have them, we realise we would need to spend them. And now we ask to be offered things to spend it on-- things we could find on the internet with a lil' bit of research, but we would rather "pay" for it, since it looks like it bothers us to have untouched funds of lingots. I think someone should study this!

(and 'bout the pre-euro, according to my boyfriend, before something was costing 10 marks what is now s'posed to be costing around 5 euros. But he says the same stuff costs now 10 euros and that people must be fooling around with something.)

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TechnicallyPrism 25 3

they added more to the lingot store! And I made a rhyme. . .

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lewiscranston 25 25 17 11

Some Goethe!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Landsberg 23 4

I'd like to dump 400 lingots on the possibility to import an Anki deck (with past training history) and be able to access it under vocabulary :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

What's an Anki deck?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Landsberg 23 4

Place where I currently bulk up on vocabulary. 13.8k words in Anki, only around 840 in Duolingo currently.

Would be great to be able to boost just vocabulary in Duolingo on top of the normal tree progression. I think there was such an option in the past but they removed it, I might be wrong. My 10k deck (frequency of word usage) is here: <http://bit.ly/anki-10k-deck>

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Ah, ok :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jajamola88 15 4 4 1

Cosmetic things like themes or changing the background pic to something other than hills. Or hats for Duo. Hat-based communities always work out well. (cough cough TF2 cough cough)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

snihan 11 3

Yes, I have a bunch of lingots but can't use them in the store because I've purchased everything already!! Please, please add more!! How about profession specific vocabulary, like Doctors, Dietitians, Nurses, or stuff about Math, Crafts, Sewing, Repairing, Cooking etc etc.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FaizalZahid 15 12 12 12 12 11 11 11 11 11 10 10 10 10 9 8 4 2

Whenever I see the lessons with 4 pictures on my phone, it reminds me of the game '4 Pictures 1 Words'...maybe Duolingo can make something of it...just like how succesful 'Candy Crush Saga' has become since the version of 'Bejeweled'!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Vijayanayagam 13 2

This was two year ago.... how about implementing more stuff in the stoer???

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

missstephanie 10

Maybe 500 Lingots can buy you a Duolingo T-shirt. please?

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

dorrtippens 15 49

I think an exact translation of a clearly enunciated movie in French to English would be fabulous - not how it would be said in English (often pretty lousy when you see subtitles) but word for word translation so one can work on sentence construction, grammar and vocabulary - along with replay to work on pronunciation. I'd pay for that.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

victoriaSe137738 7

I was thinking if Duolingo develops a mini game based on what we learned. (and get teamed up with people on our same level). I think games and interactive things could help more people intrested in learning a language... maybe for 35 lingots??????? anyone that supports my idea, comment on this post and spread the word!!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

pizzaholic81 16 6

White not necessarily restricted to the Lingot Store, I think we'd all benefit from:

1) Better audio, with a higher bitrate and clearer pronunciation. 2) New suits (and no, not just two or three more). 3) Trade-specific skills (plumber, network engineer, dentist, electrician, pharmacist, etc). 4) Themes / skins for the app itself. 5) Group challenges / games (timed and untimed). 6) More detailed / comprehensive user profiles (include more than just a 150 character textbox with a profile pic). 7) A news-feed ticker to track latest events (Carlos achieved Level 17 in English, Most Popular Topics, New in the Lingot Store, etc. 8) Adding a slang course.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Sam-Hoskin-Hall 8

insults! and jokes and pop culture of the place we are learning about and maybe quotes.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 month ago

TheKingOfBarca 7

by the way, there is already 3 optional skills, but I cannot buy the third one. is anybody else experiencing this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

The Christmas skill only comes around Christmas, so it's gone now. Sorry ;{

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheKingOfBarca 7

only 7 1/2 months to go...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Yep :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vic3685 18 15 14 13 11 11 8 6

I'd like to see additional lessons about regional differences in the language. For example, US vs UK English, or French as spoken in France and Belgium. It would be super fun if we could hear about accent differences. Scottish vs. London English for example.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Yes I agree, I said the same thing in my comment above :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Shacoria 15 11

I would really love for the store to be updated. I would particularly like another bonus skill for Italian or German. They already have idioms. I would like something else as well. Maybe something fun like swearing! lol.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bob20020 23 19 11 7 39

Absolutely correct. As a learner of these innocent teachers, we may never know the guilty inappropriate words.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

creichen 24 14 9 9 6 5 2 448

Additional statistics panel: how well are you doing on different kinds of tasks (listening vs. speaking vs. ...)

Training option to focus on one kind of task (especially 'translate into')

Mistake Memory: track all mistakes from the last 3 days with an option to repeat the same questions (after 24+h)

`Words' tab for languages other than French

None of these require extra content. All of them I could see myself using regularly.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

IntelSlime 4

maybe you can buy a skip a lesson for like 30 lingots

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Chris3252029 8

It's already almost a year ago since last one has written, but I would like to get the attention of people who work for Duolingo. Please add more features into the lingot store. I am pretty sure that would motivate most users. There were already given plenty of examples. Anyway I love duo :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

RosieStrawberry 10 10 3

Every country has got its own special traditions. Maybe some kind of course with the special traditions. For Dutch, it could be Sinterklaas, for English London, for Spanish flamenco or Spanish food, etc. Something about the food or main cities could also be nice.

I'd really like to help with making some lesson about Sinterklaas or Dutch food!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

RosieStrawberry 10 10 3

Some kind of clothes store for the owl. To make him look nice. Then you can also buy new clothes for him.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

337 Sometimes the voice recording doesn't work

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1276349>

Andrealphus 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 3 3 3

Sometimes I'll record my voice for a question and it just won't register that I did it. I once left the computer, watched an hour long television program, and came back to my answer still not being processed. I want to know if anybody else has had this issue or if it's just my computer/microphone/internet. It kills me in timed practices. I am on a Windows 7 computer and I use both Chrome and Torch. I have had the issue on both.

Give Lingot1

253 years ago

Leave a new comment

35 Comments

SixCupsofCoffee 6

Adding my +1 to this. It's recording, I can play it back, but it never processes it and moves on.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CariCorrea 10 10 10

I'm really new here but I'm having trouble when trying to record my voice in the exercises, I have Adobe Flash/Windows 7/Firefox, I've already checked the microphone and it's working perfectly. I don't know what to do since I do the practice all right but always lose a heart because of that. Please, let me know what I'm supposed to do. Thanx.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

VeloVela 13 10 1

I have the same problem. I'm using Firefox on my Mac.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

anklaa 10 2

It doesn't matter which browser I am using... If I use Google Chrome, I am getting the same problem.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

deibiddoji 23 739

This is a huge problem and it really is about time DL fixed it.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Angelastic 25 24 3

I get this (or something like it) sometimes on Firefox on Mac; I click the microphone to record, say something (and I can see that it hears me) then click Stop, but it just goes back to the blue microphone symbol and doesn't seem to process the answer. I can do it many times for the same question, and sometimes it will eventually work (one time, I just clicked it a few more times without saying anything, and suddenly it worked and told me I had the right answer.) This last time I tried many times and eventually just had to skip the question.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mazzamazza 16

I have the same problem. Sometimes the button lets me register my recording and then stop responding, some other times just get stuck in grey and doesn't let me record anything. It is completely randomly because most of the times it works just fine. I use chrome on both my pc with win7 and mac with Maverick.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RickDIP 7 3

yeah, the same happens to me. it kills me when i'm on a perfect run and, because of a bug, i lose a heart. windows7/firefox here

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DavidCohendeLara 22 15 11 210

This thread is a year old but the bug is still there. Microphone only works occasionally on website. I haven't experienced the problem on mobile.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

josephblair92 8

I'm also having this problem, I'm using Chrome on Windows 7.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CaptRohan 14 4

I am having the same problem as well. It just hangs after speaking input and there is nothing you can do but start the lesson over...

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

daaave_reid 10

I'm having the same problem. Mac (Mavericks) + Firefox.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

daniellabueno 7 6 4

Same problem here. Windows 8 and firefox. Used to work a month ago, now it doesn't :(

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kazbahh 21 1

I am having the same problem! It is very annoying Duolingo!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Duolingo is still working on the microphone feature. You might want to let the folks in Troubleshooting know what's happening for you. If you'd like to move this post to the Troubleshooting forum, follow these steps:

edit

click "duolingo" in the editing window (this is a drop down menu)

select "Troubleshooting" from the menu

save

PS don't forget to add what operating system and browser you're using (for example, I'm using Windows7/Firefox

To find the Troubleshooting forum in the future, just go to the main Discussion page, look to the right, and scroll down until you see the miniature flags. Good luck! ^_^

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Andrealphus 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 4 3 3 3
Thank you friend!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

plumkalu 25 66
Just posted same problem in this section :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Phobic 14 4 2
There's a voice feature? Where and how? Even with glitches I think this sounds like the best thing since Talkie the Toaster and a loaf of sliced bread.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Andrealphus 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 4 3 3 3
You don't have it? Check your settings and make sure your mic is turned on.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Phobic 14 4 2
To my minor embarrassment, I realized I'd turned it off manually in the Duolingo settings because it did not seem to be performing any actual function.

I still haven't managed to make it work. Maybe it's competing with another program for control of the mic input. I've also got my browser locked down a bit drastically, especially where flash is concerned. It may end up being more trouble than it's worth.

Thank you very much for your reply. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
At the moment, I have mine off. I just say the sentences out loud. However, I also have a good grasp of pronunciation. If you don't, I would find a native speaker in person or on Youtube who has put up a pronunciation tutorial. I would watch it for a few days in a row, and then review once a week for a while. It's good to stay far away from developing bad pronunciation habits. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AlexShirl 14 12 8
Yeah, I've been getting this problem on my computer, regardless of browser as well.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TheStrombolizzz
Same problem but sometimes it says I couldn't understand you so must mean it can hear me but it just won't register.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mrickling 23 10 215

Yep. Have this problem intermittently as well. Sometimes reloading the page will help, other times not.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Antonio_OB 17 3 2

Same here, any solution? I have to reset lecture every time this happens and start all over again...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RobertHolje 9

Same for me. And it got way worse today, 5/15, after Microsoft's update. Tried 5 browsers only Chrome worked, and I must repeat many time for comprehension. Duolingo in not usable for voice response.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

yanney 12

I've been getting the same issue with my Windows 8 laptop and Firefox.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

wiertarkazudarem 25 10 5

I still have this problem. Any solution, or should I just turn off microphone?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

If it is getting in the way of your studies, i suggest just turning it off for now and saying everything out loud as default. In the past users have successfully troubleshot some of the mic issues. But you'll need to find those discussions using the discussion search bar and see if they match yours. Because so many people created new posts instead of looking up the old ones, they are very buried in a bunch of dead end posts like this one :(but stay subscribed to this post in case someone techie comes along with an answer (I am not techie or I would totally try to solve this for everyone)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wiertarkazudarem 25 10 5

Thank you very much for your answer.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

deibiddoji 23 739

Before you give up check out the Adobe Flash settings on your computer as a number of us (in another thread - please don't ask me which one) find that each time Flash is updated we lose the ability of DL to hear us and have to check and reset one or more settings in Flash.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

wiertarkazudarem 25 10 5

Well... I maxed all types of flash memory for duolingo. Now I tried to do typical Strengthen skills and it worked. Maybe the problem is with not creating previous recordings from memory. Thank you for advice, I will try more tomorrow and post results. If it will work tomorrow I will shout "YES, YES, YES" like a mad man.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

deibiddoji 23 739

Great to hear it worked. Even with this "fix" DL is sometimes reluctant to hear and sometimes fails. But once Flash is set correctly all I have to do is temporarily disable the mike and finish the current module. Then turn the mike back on again, log off then log on again and the mike is usually OK again.

We'll all be listening for your "YES, YES, YES" tomorrow!!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

wiertarkazudarem 25 10 5

I totally forgot about this topic. Everything is working just fine. Again, big thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

deibiddoji 23 739

Yesterday was the first day in I can't recall how long that I had no problem with DL "hearing" me. It was a long time coming and long may it continue.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

338 "The exit is here."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/410456>

Translation: La salida está aquí.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

25 Comments

ImPOster 17 9 5 2

Why not "La salida es aquí"? Isn't the exit a constant?

16ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RAMOSRAUL 15

La salida es por aquí would be the expression using ser. Otherwise it's fine the given one.

Say, the given is more of a "on the go", in an airport, looking above while seeing people doing the same, careless trolley drivers and whatnot: come on people, the exit is this way: la salida es por aquí.

Once you find it, you can say: La salida está aquí, and leave the place well behind

21ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jesuisunmonstre 18 14 9 6 3
They accepted "La salida es aquí."

Is it preferable to say either:

"La salida está aquí."

"La salida es por aquí."

?

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jindr004 25 14 8
Ramosraul answered this I think. If I read it correctly está aqui is for when you, the speaker, are going out. So the exit is a temporary state for you.

Es por aqui is for when you are pointing others to the way out.

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RAMOSRAUL 15

Yes. I never thought deeply about the concept, until I came across it in German, where they have eintritt and einlass.

Obviously for those not familiar with German that says little, but the whole idea is down to this: One thing is what the entrance is and another thing is the entry. This is, a name to the action of "entering". I know it sounds confusing but they explained me with water and a pipe:

The hole of the pipe, you may call it entrance but the point where the water goes in you may call it entry.

In some way you can say that the "hole" is the same, but one belongs to the building, giving it a permanence, whilst the other belongs to the "flow" which is temporary, because the flow goes "through". This would match the permanence/temporary idea of ser/estar.

Does it make any sense?

8ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

EugeneTiffany 25 12

"Permanent" or "temporary" is not basic to SER and ESTAR or a reliable determination and no matter how many times it gets repeated that it is.

What is fundamental to SER and ESTAR is CHARACTERISTIC and STATE.

4Give Lingot•1 year ago

t.winkler 21 14 12 11 11 3 282

Well done. Good explanation. In the context of the airport you would use the Eingang. For your confusion I mention meanings that turn your sight in another direction. If you go to the theatre, then you pay Eintritt, and the Einlass is at 8 p.m. ;-)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

jindr004 25 14 8

Yeah, that's the idea, and that is an insight I will hold on to for when I start learning German (shiver).

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

EugeneTiffany 25 12

Far more simply, ESTAR pertains to LOCATIONS.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ImP0steR 17 9 5 2

Got it. Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EntourageEffect 13

Because it's a location. Remember DOCTOR PLACE. Ser = (DOCTOR) description, occupation, characteristics, time, origin, and relationship. Estar = (PLACE) position, location, action, condition, and emotion. In this case it's about location. If it accepts "es" maybe it's because it is a description maybe?

2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Sr-Herboth 10

estar is used for location

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PenuelX 12 2

The exit may be a constant, but forms of "estar" are used to describe things according to this acronym: PLACE. P stands for Position. L stands for Location. A stands for Action (present progressive action). C stands for Condition (physical condition). E stands for Emotion. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

el.blubbo 21

I used la salida es aquí and it was accepted without using es por aquí, does anyone know if that's wrong on duos part?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tessbee 24 16 66

My take on having either "ser" and "estar" acceptable in this case is when you say "La salida es aquí.", you're merely (kind of) 'describing' the way out, like saying "The exit is this way." When you say "La salida está aquí.", you're 'indicating' a location of the exit. Well... that's just what I think anyway. ;)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ant885895 24 22 10 8 4 4 170
Hi Tess!

"Es aquí" has two uses.

In abstract:

Es aquí que hablamos de nuestras responsabilidades y nos preguntamos, ¿Qué estamos haciendo?

It is here we talk about our responsibilities and ask ourselves "What are we doing?"

To express you have arrived at your destination:

¿Dónde está la salida? =

Where is the exit?

La salida es por aquí. =

The exit is this way.

La salida es aquí. =

This is the place. (You have arrived.)

A spanish GPS might say this. A spanish speaking taxi driver might say "El hotel es aquí" as he pulls up to drop you off.

I found an internet place to help explain it more:

<http://www.spanishdict.com/answers/3505/es-aqu->

2ReplyGive Lingot10•9 months ago

tessbee 24 16 66

Wow, Ant, this is incredible information and explanation! Thank you so much!!! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

ananasikit 15 7 4 3 2

What is the difference between 'aquí' and 'acá'?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

THeneeno 10 2

Aquí = (right) here [very precise] Acá = (over) here [more general]

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

ant885895 24 22 10 8 4 4 170
The,

No estoy de acuerdo.

Why does exist:

aquí mismo = right here

if aquí meant right here?

acá a las puntas de mis dedos=

here at my fingertips

That doesn't seem farther away.

Ven aquí = come here.

Ven acá = come over here.

But thats not farther away.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•9 months ago

Cynthia_Pike 13
This is what I was wondering.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DidierDrachen 9
none, just how to write them, they're synonyms. for example: Aquí está mi libro or acá esta mi libro, they both are correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

EntourageEffect 13
DOCTOR PLACE Ser = DOCTOR = description, occupation, characteristics, time, origin, relationship
Estar = PLACE = position, location, action, condition, emotion

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Dani.es 9 4
Doesnt specify what kind of exit, expressway or general la rampa or la salida

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Benzy911 15 10 5

Important info.. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

339 List of the most "useful" languages of the world

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/10032758>

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

I was thinking to myself that have I chosen the right languages to learn after English or not? Then an idea popped up and I began to surf the web for the most popular or spoken languages in the world. After categorizing the results, I achieved the following outcome:

List of the languages in the world by the number of countries which the language is spoken in:

English

French

Arabic

Spanish

Portuguese

Italian

Turkish

German

Russian

Malay

Chinese

List of the languages in the world by the approx. number of people who speak them:

Mandarin

Spanish

English

Hindi/Urdu

Arabic

Portuguese

Bengali

Russian

Japanese

Punjabi

German

TADA!!! Now, let's see the final list:

List of the most useful languages of the world using the combination of those two above lists:

English

Spanish

Arabic

Portuguese

Mandarin

French

Hindi/Urdu

Russian

Italian

Bengali, Turkish, German

Japanese

Punjabi

It may seem to be a little bit strange but I think it helps well when hesitated to choose next language after English. And another thing is that my mother tongue (Persian/فارسی) was not in the list because about 110 million people speak Persian. Finally, provided that the statistics were not completely correct, you should blame the web not me!!!

Thank you for reading!

Give Lingot2

341 year ago

Leave a new comment

42 Comments

PolyglAna 24 18 13 11 9 8 6 2 588

Importance is relative. I want to study Finnish, Estonian, Latvian, Lithuanian... these languages are very interesting to me :)

15ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

Elizabeth261736 16 15 14 7 2

I agree. There is a distinction between "common" and "important" or "useful." Other similar posts have been about which languages are the most useful. The information in the original post was interesting, and I appreciate the time and effort put into compiling it, despite the small quibble with the word important.

Much depends on where you want to go and what you want to do.

Spanish has been useful in Mexico and Spain, as well as Brazil (where they speak Portuguese but often understand Spanish) and the United States (where many people know Spanish but not English). French has been useful in France and Morocco.

However, Chinese isn't that important if you want to go to Greece or if you want to read old Latin texts. Even if I were to go to China, I wouldn't be able to speak to all Billion people who live there. English is very common in many places: it is helpful to know English where it is understood. However, it's important to learn at least a little bit of the language where you are going even if it's just hello, goodbye, thank you, please, and so on.

I'm learning Dutch (and would like to learn Swedish later). Many people in the Netherlands speak English very well, but I think that you miss a lot when you don't delve into the language of a country or its culture. It's not just different words but a different perspective and view of the world. You miss all that if you only stick to the most common languages.

How many people speak a language is less important than speaking to one person in their own language.

11ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 4 2 2 10

I agree with you both very much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

I agree that importance is dependent but it was significant to me that which language is mostly spoken or more useful while traveling abroad.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

therealpalumbo 19 11 9 2 2

I find it odd that Italian is ninth on the most important list. Its like the least spoken "major" language in the world

10ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

scarcerer 22 20 17 10 197

It just shows that it's quite rare for a language to be official in several countries. And Italian is a perfect example of why "multiple countries" is not a perfect criteria. Official in four countries: Italy, two microstates inside Italy and Switzerland, where it's the third most spoken language with 8%.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

I think the languages in the list are the most important ones and their sequence is not so important. As I said, my mother tongue, Persian, is not even in the list but I personally think it is a significant language. Remember you might blame the internet not me :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Daanmantel1 19 10 7 5

Personally I would think that Persian at least would rank higher than Punjabi, I mean no offense to Punjabi, but Persian has so much literature, poetry and has had such a historical significance (being the lingua franca of the Middle East, Central and South Asia) and hasn't changed much the last 1000 years. Not to mention that Persian is still the official language of at least three countries and is being taught in schools in many other countries. Persian would definitely be in my top 12...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

I am really happy to see many friends here who would like to learn Persian. I completely agree with you but Punjabi is more frequent than Persian thus it comes sooner than Persian.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rumnraisin 21 20 18 15 14 14 14 13 13 12 11 9 9 8 8 6 5 5 8 4 5

Just adding on a couple of infographic pages (which I know have been posted multiple times before, but they're relevant to the topic - enjoy!):

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/worldviews/wp/2015/04/23/the-worlds-languages-in-7-maps-and-charts/>

<http://www.lucasinfografia.com/Mother-tongues>

And a list similar to that of the OP, with 20 languages on (I hope you find it interesting):

<https://thelinguistblogger.wordpress.com/2008/04/18/the-worlds-top-20-languages/> (It goes without saying, that as the lists have a similar aim they have understandably high similarity, but it's still worth a glance.) :-)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

Thank you very much!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DanyDin 15 8 8

in a business view: 1. english 2. spanish/german 3. arabic/russian/france

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

josephkt 2

I think Spanish should be at 3 unless you live in the Americas Spanish is hardly bigger than French or Russian in Europe

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

They all come from the web my friend: Proved websites of course!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DanyDin 15 8 8

i guess u missed my list meaning.. I specifically wrote in a BUSINESS POINT OF VIEW ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago gabzerbinatoEng 11 9 7 7 6 6 5 5 4 4 3 3 3 2 2 2 2 2

European business, you mean

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DanyDin 15 8 8

no worldwide but ya im from Europe but i don't see any difference if u come from a different place , business is international

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

007woofwoof 25 7 19

Illuminatingmerci...

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

De rien!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

winter.morning 20 11 11 8 5 5 2

Interesting post! I'm trying to learn English, French and German. It's a pity that German isn't in the final list but I suppose that the importance of a language depends on each person for example if I have to go to Germany, Mandarin (for instance) would not serve me a lot.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

I agree but consider a time in which you want to learn a language on Duolingo.com for just plain fun! So you may like to learn the most spoken one, don't you?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

winter.morning 20 11 11 8 5 5 2
Of course!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

josephkt 2
sorry man these lists mean nothing it's up to the individual to decide why they want to learn a language and it's importance to them. and the fact you have Italian hindi Bengali before german disallows this pool

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3
I have told before that I have not made them myself! They are only the results of the web. A friend of mine knows German really well and when she speaks I find German a beautiful language so all the statistics come from the web and I have just wrote to say if you don't know which language is more useful, here they are.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

scarcerer 22 20 17 10 197
But usefulness is just as arbitrary as importance. If you want to go to (or already live in) Greece, Spanish is not going to be useful to you, no matter how many speakers or countries there are worldwide.

I understand that some people just want to learn the most spoken or indeed "useful" languages in the world, but others have reasons based on their location, family and interests. And because usefulness comes down to those (which are different for everyone), any kind of general list will be faulty.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3
So those whom were mentioned by you won't be hesitated, will they?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

scarcerer 22 20 17 10 197
Possibly true. I would still say that if you hesitate, think of which place you'd like to visit or if some language could serve your interests. If there are none or you just don't like those languages, then think about the global usefulness. Because ultimately it's always easier to learn a language you have a reason and motivation to learn.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3
For me learning a new language (as a knowledge) is more important, however, à chuuon ses goutes!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

scarcerer 22 20 17 10 197

I'm not sure I understand what you mean by "learning a new language as knowledge is more important". Than what?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

I mean learning a new language for me is like leaning math; I love to learn, no matter which subject it is. Plus I personally like to learn a more common language.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

wyqtor 16 16 13 13 13 13 12 12 11 11 11 11 10 9 9 9 8 7 7 4 4 2 2 804

Hungarian is quite insignificant as a language, yet I only have to travel an hour to reach a place where they speak it. Spanish is a very important language worldwide and one that is very closely related to my own native language, yet I have to travel at least two days by car in order to reach Spain. Which one would be more useful to me for business and in everyday life? Definitely Hungarian.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

Believe me or not, I was hesitated to choose a language between Spanish and German only to have fun plus learning a new language. I have not posted this article to impress which language is more important but to say if you don't know how to start learning on duo, a short glimpse to the statistics would be suitable. Just this :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wyqtor 16 16 13 13 13 13 12 12 11 11 11 11 10 9 9 9 8 7 7 4 4 2 2 804

Your list of useful languages is welcome, I just wanted to point out that one's individual circumstances can change the relative importance of languages. And BTW I have learned a lot more Spanish than Hungarian on DL because it was easier for me, so I didn't really follow my own advice.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

David598296 14 10 9

These are not actually the most useful languages; they are simply the most used languages. Useful varies between people and contexts.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Patrick_Irish 17 12 12 12 11 10 9 8 7 6 3 3 3 3

My own opinion, while the list engages with one aspect of choosing a language (range/numbers) perhaps there is a more subject aspect: that of cultural importance. For instance one's own local language/dialect (Irish in my case) or a language that has importance for linguistic/other reasons (Latin). This would be a subjective choice.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

Oh my gosh! I think common would be a better adj. to use here!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

By a special thanks to friends who said important is not a good adj. to use here, I changed important to useful. Good luck!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Goran12 22 8 2

The main criteria as I see them - which languages are really important depends on them:

a) where is the language spoken

That's your main criterion. But there's a subcriterion: what other languages people living there usually speak? If they already speak some other language you speak, their native language is not very useful unless you live in the country or try to understand their culture.

b) what people speak the language

Your second criterion, very similar to the first one.

c) what fields were influenced by the language? What languages are well suited for my field?

Computer scientists need English even if they rarely meet an English speaker who doesn't speak their native language as well. Musicians need either English for modern music or Italian for classical one. Latin is needed in many professions - I would have appreciated it when I studied archaeology, doctors need it, theologians even more... Scientists need at least a little from Latin and ancient Greek, and I've heard that Japanese scientists often learn German, because their native Japanese or even English is not very well suited for speaking in exact terms.

My tip would be that from this point of view the most useful language is Latin (0 native speakers!) followed by English and perhaps Arabic (muslims need it to understand Quran).

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mhdr3a 7 5 5 3

Completely agree

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aaditsingh8 14 10 9 7 6 6 5 2

English may be a global language, but the thing is, any language which aims at becoming a lingua franca becomes dominant :/ I mean, Hindi is getting influenced by English a lot now. I get scared by the fact that one day Hindi may also be one of those languages which are about to die O_O

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pratyush. 15 11 8 7 6

You should be assured. That thing can be!! Hindi has got a wide recognition. However I wonder there will be a time when there will be a thing called 'Classical Hindi' and a 'Modern Hindi' in Future.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aaditsingh8 14 10 9 7 6 6 5 2

I know :(I wish never the time comes when that happens. I feel so bad for Irish. D:

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

340 Tackling the lingot economy

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/8129285>

vivisaurus 17 15 13 9 7 5 4 1346

Hi Duolingo Community!

Many of you have sent us feedback on the lingot system, and we too have been thinking about how earning and spending lingots can be improved. We agree! There are definitely improvements to be made. We want to address this carefully. There is unfortunately no one, easy solution when it comes to dealing with a whole virtual economy. This means that any great "fix" would have to happen in increments, but we are thrilled to tell you that we are now taking the first necessary steps to improve the lingot economy!

Some of you may notice a change in how you earn lingots, and we just want you to be aware of it. We have an inflation issue that is not beneficial to anyone, no matter how many or few lingots we each have. We are therefore starting by testing a feature that will address this. No need to worry, you won't lose any precious red gems from your account. :]

We've been impressed by the creative uses and suggestions you've shared for lingots so far, and more are always welcome, so please continue to share your economic ideas with us!

Thank you for all your support, and we hope Duolingo is helping you on your language learning adventures. <3

Give Lingot63

1631 year ago

Leave a new comment

273 Comments

SDPhil 13 11 10 6 5 3 2 68

I'm happy to hear that Duolingo staff and admins actually read users' suggestions. Sometimes, it feels as if the community is being ignored, but this post is definitely reassuring. Thank you <3

92ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

WackyJack 22 7

The Duolingo federal reserve is implementing some countercyclical measures. ;)

55ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

ClemeyTime 6 5 3

Duolingo federal reserve? Duolingo is in big trouble if it adds an Internal Revenue Service too.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

WackyJack 22 7

Imagine a lingot tax on "luxury" purchases such as tracksuits! How evil that would be. (No, I'm not being sarcastic, whoever downvoted me.)

15ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

vivisaurus 17 15 13 9 7 5 4 1346

Of course! And we're still keeping an eye here as we run tests related to the lingot economy. There is awesome feedback and great ideas here and in our forums in general. =]

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MadMartigan9 7 6 6 6 5 4 4 4

Yes, this 1/2 page of text assures me too. Now I know that Duolingo is not going to make any changes anytime soon no matter how many thousands of suggestions they get. I am starting to feel like I am getting what I pay for around here. The phoney attention seeking admins, the trolls who spam for months, the same problems over and over with no changes. Plenty of people around who will threaten to report you to someone for something...

-142ReplyGive Lingot52•1 year ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

"The phoney attention seeking admins, the trolls who spam for months, the same problems over and over with no changes. Plenty of people around who will threaten to report you to someone for something..." - And now you write that to vivisaurus who is also a course mentor for some incubator courses and who also works extremely hard and does a tremendous job (from what I can see) as a course mentor and person who cares a lot about the community.

You are certainly right with your sentences, but you definitely address it to the wrong person.

71ReplyGive Lingot7•1 year ago

lingogirl1234 6 5 4 3

Very True. Duolingo is an amazing language learning tool.

24ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Gymnastical 16 16 11 11 10 9 6 6 3

The Dutch course contributors work very very hard and get attention but don't seek it. It just happens.

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AwrificRed 13 12

You have the most consecutive days I've seen so far. It's really motivating. also the fact that you have reached level 24 on one of your languages. Cudos Thanks a lot for being you.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Thanks for the kind message! The longest known streak has johnarnold with 830 days and the most finished trees/language courses seem to have duonks (read his profile information). Have a great Sunday =)

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AwrificRed 13 12
What are owls?

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2
@AwrificRed: You receive one owl when you finish one of your language courses/trees.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1264
@Aandlanguages
When you finish all of the skills in a course, you can see the golden owl at the bottom of the tree, and see a corresponding completion certificate if you click on the owl. Your golden owls aren't displayed all together anywhere on your profile though. AlexisLinguist has kept up a Hall of Fame post to recognize those that have completed skill trees, but it's not an "official" page by any means.

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

Aandlanguages 14
@writchie4: Thank you. I'm a newbie on Duolingo :)

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2
@Legoraptor1545: Yes.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

.Blaze. 9 6 2
So basicly an owl is the reward for compleating a language tree?

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Aandlanguages 14
Hi, I was trying to find the owls on some big gun profiles but can't see any. Translation tiers, levels in languages. posts, intro, following/followers yes, owls no... Where to look?

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

hrickh 8 7
You're getting downvoted for your post, but I sort of agree with you.

I had to read her post twice to completely get that she said nothing substantive.

Really... "We read your feedback" and "we have an inflation issue" were all she said. Absolutely nothing about WHAT will actually be improved/implemented or when.

57ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

Snommelp 22 22 21 20 19 17 15 15 784

I don't think MM is being downvoted for saying that vivi didn't say anything of substance, but rather for (a) the rather rude tone of their comment and (b) the latter half of the comment, complaining about so many things that one can't help but wonder why MM is still here, if they hate this site so much.

48ReplyGive Lingot16•1 year ago

ClemeyTime 6 5 3

They're here because it's free. If they charged $400 for this, he'd be getting his refund now.

11ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1160

Refund? This is a language course, right? Or, rather, several. It teaches languages, and does a pretty good job at least for many of us. Why would there be any reason for a refund, whether it would cost $1 or $400?

How happy one is or isn't with the communication style or lack of it by the organization that provides this service does not take away from the courses and their value for the user.

I am a paying customer of many organizations whose communication style I am hardly impressed by (such as my bank and my electricity provider), but I stay with them because they give me value for my €s.

7Give Lingot2•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 5 4 2 2 10

I don't think MM is getting downvoted so much for content, but for tone. "Phoney attention seeking admins" is a pretty crappy way to refer to people who are in general doing a good job and are doing it for free, especially in a thread a mod started, and where there are some pretty clear reasons why it wasn't terribly informative.

46ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

ClemeyTime 6 5 3

It was very vague for a reason. They didn't want to tell us what it was or else half the Duo population will want that and complain how it's unfair that they don't have it and the other half who received the new features will just complain about how bad it is if they even notice it without the staff telling them.

22ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Keima. 25 2

I thought I was the only one. At least others see that as well! (even if they're being down voted in the process)

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 120
56 downvotes. Mother of downvotes

EDIT: 77!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MadMartigan9 7 6 6 6 5 4 4 4

What are your thoughts on the measures taken thus far to curb "lingot inflation"? I do not like to be right about this... it means that they do ignore suggestions and have at the very least an awkward understanding of ways to improve Duolingo. Finally, downvotes are about as important to me as lingots.

7ReplyGive Lingot10•1 year ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 120

I think that the "no lingots for streak" is a bad decision. A streak should/must be rewarded, as it means perseverance and earning "money" for your streak length works as a way of motivation. Also, it's not fair to make it A/B... You are damaging/saving the half of the users, and they can't say "No, I want my 14 lingots for my streak! Give me them!"...

So I'll have to wait and see how does this thing continue to be able to opine more.

Thanks ;)

PS: If I have errors in my English grammar or vocabulary, etc., please correct me :) Thanks again!

32ReplyGive Lingot8•1 year ago

lexbroch 22 248

Rewarding for Perseverance, wonderful succinct statement. Receiving lingots for every ten days of our streaks was another incentive to keep returning and working on our learning in spite of our busy, hectic lives. Now with one less incentive, how many will fall off the cart?

Have a Lingot!

9Give Lingot•1 year ago

MadMartigan9 7 6 6 6 5 4 4 4

Your english is very effective, I had no idea that you were not a native writer.

5Give Lingot1•1 year ago

JonBastian 25 6 6 6 3 2 1091

It was definitely an incentive for me, but I haven't gotten a ten day streak bonus since about day 390, so that's 162 lingots I haven't received. Not that I care about the lingots per se, but they are a nice positive reward for keeping the streak going.

5Give Lingot•1 year ago

TessaNaeye 23 9 5 4 1223

I never would have kept going without the reward. For weeks I only did the bare minimum because of health. If not for the streak I would have stopped and probably not started up again.

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

gillyflower_ 9

1) 'Length' (a typo?) :)

2) '.....to make it A/B...you'*

If the three dots are intentional, *'you' should have a small 'y' because three dots are part of a sentence (an ellipsis). The three dots indicate something unspoken or words that the reader can understand or find a meaning to; or a pause to give stress or understanding to the words that follow.

If the dots are a spasm of the hand while typing, well, the above may come in useful. ;-)

3) 'Give them to me' is correct. 4) I'll have to wait and see * how this discussion continues before I can opine further (or give a further opinion.)*

I hope this helps. You are very good. Congratulations! :)

1Give Lingot2•1 year ago

Margolf 25 5

I don't appreciate the way they go about changing things and communicating through the grapevine or vaguely.... basically, I think this is a great way to learn a language....the 'game' aspects bounce back and forth between being fun, and being very frustrating....it's often hard to tell what behavior they are trying to reward.....this latest thing seems to send a very strong message to regular, daily, long-time users that they are not valued all that much.....once you reach lvl 25 and complete a tree, the only lingots you get are the 10-day streak lingots- so discontinuing that makes no sense to me at all..... it would have made a lot more sense to me to see them add lots of different things for people to use their lingots for, and see if people took the bait....but we are where we are....

10ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 120

Thanks for that, very much! Despite the topic we are talking about, there you have.... one of the now precious red gems!

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Medard 22 13 11 4 20

there should be a way to take some lingots as well for these sorts of posts :)

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Considering that he earned half as many lingots as he got downvotes, it shows how many people are frustrated with the Duolingo-support where voluntary unpaid helpers thrive on the power to be able to censor comments whilst technical support and troll-protection is at its lowest here.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DeanG6 20 12 9 2 13
:D hahaha

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6
New AB option as of today: no_lingot_streak_reward . That should be popular.

Duolingo, your sense of priorities, worrying about something as trivial as the lingot economy when there are many other, far more pressing things that should be occupying your limited resources is perplexing. I've given up trying to understand you.

cGlua29kb3Vn

89ReplyGive Lingot10•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3
I like getting lingots for my streak :'(

80ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

ketoacidosis 25 25 15 13 9 6 4 1406
Me too.

As I said in Alan's post:

Looks like I'll never have Lingots again. I relied on receiving a "ration" of Lingots every ten days to give out to people who answer questions and people who ask good questions. I almost always run out by the time I reach my next ration.

With no Lingots for perfect lessons, and no Lingot ration every ten days, I'm going to fall very far in debt with Lingot IOUs.

30ReplyGive Lingot201•1 year ago

ajcee7 25 25 25 24 21 21 18 16 15 15 14 12 1175
Here are 100 lingots to tide you over.

12ReplyGive Lingot55•1 year ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2
And 5 for me, because I feel like it. :-D

2ReplyGive Lingot7•1 year ago

SussexSoleil 25 10

Just do the Double or Nothing every 7 days to keep your balance topped up.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

ketoacidosis 25 25 15 13 9 6 4 1406

5 lingots every week helps a bit, but it's not the same as 75+ every ten days.

6ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

SuperSwipe 22 21 16 13 11 10 9 5 5 4 2

Yup! I think its a great streak incentive!

8ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 120

XD

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

MauriceReeves 25 20 16 14 14 14 14 13 13 12 10 9 9 7 7 6 3 3 2 2 2 2 963

Ditto. And I am very free with them in the comments section. I figured if I have them I should spend them. Now that my stipend is gone...booooooooooooo

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

arielk81 25 23 17 16 6 5 5

I couldn't agree with you more strongly. There are clearly countless tweaks to the review algorithms, to the words feature, even to the almost un-navigable forums that would make this a much stronger tool for language learning, and instead it's... finding ways to control lingot inflation?

21ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

pinkodoug wrote:

New AB option as of today: no_lingot_streak_reward . That should be popular.

Duolingo, your sense of priorities, worrying about something as trivial as the lingot economy when there are many other, far more pressing things that should be occupying your limited resources is perplexing. I've given up trying to understand you.

cGlua29kb3Vn

That's a simple flag in a script/program. It is a change that could be done in half a second, so I don't see why one would claim that it is occupying limited resources.

This limited resources "mantra" seems to have become a way for users to criticize whatever decisions duolingo makes that they don't particularly like. The simple fact is that because they have limited resources, they are in the best position to know what to spend their effort in. Gamification is arguably the main reason Duolingo is successful, and that careful balance between gamification and learning is what keeps it that way.

These forums have really become something akin to gaming forums where people claim that every decision the developers make is making a particular game element overpowered, or under-powered.

19ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

AlanHogan 17 10 5

Having written and run A/B tests on production web apps, I can promise you even the simplest test is never "half a second," but is more likely to take multiple days of man-hours in setting up, reviewing, monitoring, and choosing a result, removing dead code, and then explaining the result...

26ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

That may be true, but this particular A/B test (or part of it) was run before the lingots were introduced. So it is unlikely that they discarded all previous data.

More importantly, the resources required may depend on the company's situation at the particular point in time. They could for example get a volunteer external developer that tackles the task, or something like "google code-in" that wikia (as an example) has made use of.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

I agree that this particular change was likely simple and quick to implement. However, that says nothing of time spent determining which change to start with, monitoring the test results in the future, or of time devoted to other potential changes that have yet to be revealed, etc.

Limited resources has been made the mantra because it's the first thing you hear from Duo's damage control team (my preferred title for the community manager group) whenever anyone raises issues with why this or that is getting developer attention. They claim that they're slow to address X bug or Y issue because of their limited resources - they can't use it as a shield to defend every choice they make and not have it raised when they demonstrate questionable prioritization.

You'll get no argument that gamification, and by extension the lingot economy, is an important facet of Duolingo that needs to be addressed. However, I don't believe it's as important or urgent as many well known issues that have been frequent topics of discussion (and promises by Duolingo staff). To see it prioritized ahead of other outstanding issues is a bit surprising.

24ReplyGive Lingot11•1 year ago

writch4 25 20 16 11 1264

Nice post here, Dessamator.

Though I agree with Doug that there are a number of other issues that could be addressed, maintaining the gamification of the site is definitely important (it's the thing that sets Duolingo apart from every other language learning program). In their current state, lingots are meaningless to those of us that are active on the site. The balance is totally off, and lack of items in the shop isn't the main problem (though it'd be nice to have a bigger selection). It's just far too easy to accumulate them now, especially once you've been at it for a while and the streak bonuses kick in.

14ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

northernguy 25 22 14 1278

You have hit the nail on the head. I have 2500 lingots. What is the point of handing them to me at the rate of hundreds every couple of months.

Post a question for discussion and spend a lot of time reading and considering the potentially hundreds of comments from the active, board users before making a decision or run an A/B test and see how many of the millions of program users notice or even care. Hmmmm! What to do?

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

I don't think that anyone in this branch of the discussion is questioning the benefit of AB testing, but rather the dev team's prioritization of issues needing to be addressed.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wyeager84 20 10 2 1139

I liked getting lingots every 10 days. This "feature" has reduced my need for keeping my streak. I always felt that there needs to be more ways to spend lingots to support learning.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flandybandy 18 6 2

To be fair, the fact that this change got an official announcement and much of the content of the announcement is likely just preemptive damage control over a small change that Duolingo predicted would get a lot of negative feedback.

I doubt that you should take this to mean that lingot economy is somehow a high priority or the next big thing that Duolingo is working on. (Though I admit that the announcement does give that impression)

11ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

ajpthree 16 15 15 15 15 14 13 13 12 10 10 6 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 1007

D'accord. I'm happy that I'm not in the test group, since today is day 350 for me & I only have like 300+ lingots (I spend a lot of mine on other users, otherwise I'd probably have more than a couple thousand by now), & in order for me to continue on with my "expensive" habits, I need my streak rewards to stay intact!! :D

5ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

wazzie 25 11

The change is a bit unfortunate. It happened on my "10 days", so I guess I didn't get any lingots for reaching 660 days.

It won't affect the way I give out lingots (i stopped buying things in the store a long time ago), but receiving lingots is a big motivator for me keeping my streak. This may seem silly, but that doesn't make it less true.

If I ever do lose my streak, I probably wouldn't try to build it up again if this change remains in place.

55ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Wazzie, my favorite thing about lingots is giving them away. I'm always excited when the 10 day mark comes around. What you say makes sense to me. If people have a lot and complain, I'm surprised they don't just give them to someone else. I look forward to giving them away more than I look forward to buying things in the Lingot store. :)

29ReplyGive Lingot13•1 year ago

AB7887 23 1021

Thanks for saying this Wazzie, and I agree. Lingots are a huge motivator for me keeping up my streak (though I haven't been at it as long as you have), and the best part of getting lingots is being able to give them away to people who post helpful information. I'm not part of the trial (afaik, I just hit a 10-day streak yesterday) - but I'm starting to feel a sense of panic, and the need to hoard lingots.

What baffles me is... why does DL care if there is Lingot inflation? I'm not sure if there's an official name for this "economy", but there's so little to buy - and no way to buy things directly from another person (unlike an online game), "inflation" seems meaningless.

In games, inflation becomes a problem because you can buy things from other players. If I could buy a language skill from another person here, and they could set the price... then inflation would become a problem (because as more people got more lingots, the costs of skills could rise, leaving newer participants unable to afford to buy anything).

But that can't happen here. There's nothing I can buy from any other player, and no way for the prices to reflect inflation by increasing. Really, there's not a whole lot you can do with lingots in the store either... the benefits of lingots are twofold:

Acting like points (I find lingot-acquisition more rewarding than points/levels, not sure why)

Being able to give something "tangible" to people who are helpful.

This change seems like it will be de-motivating, and also anti-community in the sense that with less lingots, there's less likelihood of sharing them to thank people who post good information :-{

22ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

Tara312 20 19 8 6 29

That sucks. Is there an option to opt out of this testing? I'm worried about my future even at 1/10 of your streak. ;{

15ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

ketoacidosis 25 25 15 13 9 6 4 1406

I'm with you 100%.

I'm sitting at 69 Lingots at the moment, so if I continue to give them out the way I do, I won't be able to do that for very long.

I haven't even bought all of the bonus skills for the languages I'm learning yet, haha.

I feel the exact same way about my streak.

11ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

bemk92 23 12 10 8 6 242

You can still do the wager and earn lingots that way :)

6ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

BaconChomper 21 19 13 9 8 8 6

The value there is negligible compared to the return on significant streaks.

10ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago

bemk92 23 12 10 8 6 242

Yes, if you have a streak of 70+ days, your Lingot income will be more than halved that way.

But, how many Lingots are created that way? What will such an exponential growth do to the Duolingo economy? How much time is a single Lingot actually worth?

On the one hand, Duolingo can raise the prices of consumables (tests, heart refills, streak-freezes, etc.) so that the value in time remains constant, proportional to the number of Lingots in circulation, but that would make the people with an enormous streak at a huge advantage of keeping that streak, whilst the people who've just started, can barely get them selves a single streak-freeze.

On the other hand, they can try to make the value of the Lingot remain proportional to the amount time put in, by making the playing field more level.

There's sound reasoning behind this decision.

-2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

wyeager84 20 10 2 1139

Agreed. I didn't get a reward for 470 and i'm not so concerned about my streak any longer.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wazzie 25 11

I'm holding onto mine in hopes they revert the change. If it remains, I'll probably take an overdue break from the site.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wyeager84 20 10 2 1139

I don't think i've even gotten lingots for completing exercises .. i've been stuck at 1393 lingots for a while now. I'm considering taking a break -

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wyeager84 20 10 2 1139

I found that if you reset your tree, you'll lose your level and XP history, but you'll get your 10 day lingot bonus.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

VStarTraveler 25 10 9 1287

Very well said, wazzie! I'm with you on this.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SuperSwipe 22 21 16 13 11 10 9 5 5 4 2

I agree!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tara312 20 19 8 6 29

This is incredible, thank you for listening ;)

I think Duo should tackle the problem at its root that there are not many things to spend lingots on, rather than to reduce lingots earning. Even with less lingots, we barely have anything to expect in the store.

I suggest you to crowdsource the store, let user makes and sells extra lesson for lingots then we will have an ongoing self-balanced exchange of lingots between buyer and seller like a real market-drive economy.

These lessons can come in the form of hidden self made video, audio, photo, text...like singing a song, reciting a poem, writing an essay, take a photo of a sign in certain language, create a set of flash card-type photos, draw a picture to illustrate certain phrase...the possibility is endless.

Duo will provide a summary, screenshot or snippet by seller, then hide the content with a BUY button like the current Give Lingot button here with prices set by seller. Once user clicks the buy, lingots will be transferred and content will be revealed to buyer.

Seller is happy as they can earn lingots to buy other items in the markets or Duo vanity items like some big ass owl badges or statues or titles to display in their profile. Buyer is happy as they can now spend as much as they want. User will upvote or downvote as a form of self-regulating chart.

If you support this idea, please upvote this comment so it could be more visible to Duo. Thank you <3

36ReplyGive Lingot15•1 year ago

bemk92 23 12 10 8 6 242

If you then add a little tax on top of the crowd sourced items in the market place, you take lingots out of the economy and therefore limit the inflation.

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

amuzulo 15 13 12 12 10 9 6 6 2

You broke your streak, so Duo taxed you for 10% of your lingots. Thankfully those lingots are now keeping the owl from crying! :-D

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

timelord4213 2

But how would the tax help the user, besides for keeping inflation low? Because many people in parts of the US, at least, who don't like paying taxes when they somewhat know how the taxes will use and have some say on how much the taxes are and how the money is used.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bemk92 23 12 10 8 6 242

The VAT (BTW in the Netherlands, I don't know what purchase tax is called in the USA) fee would just be part of the price in the market place, and if you sell a custom badge or background image, you'd get 3, where the purchaser would pay 5 Lingots or so.

It's purely meant to keep the inflation down. Currency in Duolingo is used as a mechanic in a gamified learning environment. A purchase tax would simply be another mechanic. The Lingots that flow into the tax sink, will just go to /dev/null.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

timelord4213 2

Thanks for the info, and the purchase tax in the US is called the sales taxes. But instead of the taxes going null, maybe if there was a system that native speakers of a language, that are also far enough along in a language, can be mentors to a small group of people in the same language that they known well enough with and pay taxes to them, so they wouldn't become null.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bemk92 23 12 10 8 6 242

You could turn that into a subscription service, paid for with lingots and again, have that taxed.

The issue is, that you need a way to keep the value of the Lingots equal, and the only way of doing that (If you are going to keep on creating more of them) is by destroying them somewhere else.

3Give Lingot1•1 year ago

iSamurai 6

The tax would be specifically for helping inflation. The problem with the OP's idea of a purely crowdsourced market solution is that lingots will just be transferred from user to user in the same way they are now through comments. Meanwhile people will still be earning lingots through other means that are created out of thin air. You can see that the supply of lingots will just increase without anything to permanently destroy them. The tax would do that.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tara312 20 19 8 6 29

The tax idea is nice and funny ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bemk92 23 12 10 8 6 242

It could work, because in the real world, inflation is kept in check, both by how much is printed, and how much money is invalidated or vanishes in defaults.

Here we have none of that, but by putting a tax system on a market place (credit goes to Extra Credits in this case) you can remove Lingots from circulation again, thus pushing the value of a Lingot up again.

Market place items I'd consider putting in are:

Community made app backgrounds (With lingot VAT)

Community made website background images (With lingot VAT)

Community made badges for on profile for a limited amount of time (With lingot VAT)

Badges for on the profile to give as token of gratitude to someone on the forum (instead of the give Lingot button)

Community made clothes for Duo to wear in the app - I've seen someone else mention that somewhere in this stream - (With lingot VAT)

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tara312 20 19 8 6 29

I think the ball is in Duo court now to choose to implement which one first. All of your ideas sound awesome. And with such a big educated community, I'm sure there is a certain number of people who are capable of designing and providing these products for Duo market place ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TessaNaeye 23 9 5 4 1223

What is wrong with inflation? Since I learn languages so slowly, the lingots were my only short-term reward and I like seeing my total get bigger and bigger. Saving lingots, like saving money, is good.

They don't need to be spent or taxed, although, it would be nice to have more spending options.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Snommelp 22 22 21 20 19 17 15 15 784

Crowdsourced items would need a lot of continued effort for quality control, though.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tara312 20 19 8 6 29

That is right, but currently we also have an effective down voting system that hides unholy stuff out of our eyesight. To be honest, Duo forum is one of the the most civilized Internet forum I have been to, considered the ratio of traffic to troll, I'm very optimistic ^^.

It would be fancy if we have something like iTunes chart so quality items stand out.

If Duo considers to open the store, I volunteer to moderate it if Duo finds me qualified. Can I receive some extra lingots for my time though? ;)

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BaconChomper 21 19 13 9 8 8 6

Please don't make them harder to earn. Rather just give us additional bonus skill options to buy.

33ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Tara312 20 19 8 6 29

Yes ;)

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ASBusinessMagnet 25 25 25 23 16 14 19

Well, I have over 3000 lingots and that would mean they would have to make 100 bonus skills for people like me, which is highly unrealistic.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BaconChomper 21 19 13 9 8 8 6

They could make them cost 100 lingots each. 5 new skills per language? I would be OK with that.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

You may hate me now, but my comment is meant to add another perspective, and not to fight against you:

Your profile name and the fact you accumulated 3000 lingots indicates that you saved them all up instead of sharing the love with others in gratitude for all the help you got so far.

The beauty about getting more lingots than needed is to get us into a mindset of letting the energy flow - just as nature is: Every tree produces hundred-fold what you need. Natural life works better than our artificial economy, because the latter is designed to accumulate selfishly by expanding at all costs

- all in the end at the expense of exploited nations or the earth.

Here we have a chance to simulate a better world in which we don't have to compete against potential rivals, but create a win-win situation by supporting each other and thereby gaining support.

In the business world wealth is defined by having more than others - not here, because all that counts are the skills everyone worked on and how constructively they are shared.

This has nothing to do with left or right politics, because I am not pleading for getting freebies. All I am saying is that once we aren't pressured into artificial financial constraints, it can be possible to live from the heart instead of preemptive and protective fear.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MauriceReeves 25 20 16 14 14 14 14 13 13 12 10 9 9 7 7 6 3 3 2 2 2 2 963

Not all of use who have 2000 or more lingots are hoarding them. I have 2515 as of today, but I give away at least five a day as I read comments and forums. Please don't assume that someone's "wealth" is because of negative behavior.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Fair enough;

I will take what you said into consideration from now on.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 120

Harder ways to earn them or more ways to spend them?

Both are great :)

Thanks!

31ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

Snommelp 22 22 21 20 19 17 15 15 784

Both would be fine by me, though if we only got one, I'd prefer more ways to spend them :-P

39ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

truelefty 25 24 24 18 14 13 12 11 11 10 7 6 6 5 4 3 2 120

So do I, lol xD

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Marc_B 14 11 7 7 5 4 2

Now I almost wish I kept the hundreds and hundreds of lingots I've given to new users. ;)

4ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

You did well so far and as reality showed, there was no reason to worry ;-)

There is a story about a guy who sold good food and one day the son told his father. "Save up, because times will get harder!", so the father bought cheaper food and sold smaller portions to save for a rainy day.

His customers then turned away from him, so he said to his son:

"yes, son, you were right - times are getting tougher."

So much for the law of attraction - we become what we gear towards whether it is positive or negative.

Have my last lingot - I know more will come :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Snommelp 22 22 21 20 19 17 15 15 784

Inflation issue? I'm assuming by that you mean that people earn more than they need, rather than that its buying power is decreasing :-P

29ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

unPlatypus 14 13 5 4

Inflation can be also defined as increase of money supply, so it's correct too :P

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

This isn't an actual economy with supply and demand forces acting upon it, though. The supply (bonus courses, streak extensions, doubling wagers, etc.) is infinite, and are at a fixed cost. The amount of outstanding lingots has no effect upon this because, unlike an actual economy, having more cash in circulation has zero impact upon the "market." The spending power of an individual lingot remains the same.

The biggest issue I can see is that in recent months, Duolingo has removed the single most accessible method for a user to gain lingots: completing an exercise without errors. While doing so once earned a user a bonus lingot, users now get nothing. It's become harder for new users to accumulate lingots as a consequence. If they're going to muck about with the lingot supply, that's the place they should start.

16ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Snommelp 22 22 21 20 19 17 15 15 784

I feel like most of what I've seen is people complaining that they have lots of lingots and nothing to spend them on. Or, correction: I also see people with no activity begging for lingots. But I don't see too many people who are actually trying to earn lingots and struggling to get them.

10ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

BaconChomper 21 19 13 9 8 8 6

I agree completely, they should not have removed the "no mistakes = 1 Lingot upon exercise completion" feature.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

HappyEvilSlosh 25 23 21 20 13 11 10 9 8 7 4 2 2 5

There's also the act of giving someone lingots for a post you like. I know initially I'd give 1 but when I went over 1000 lingots I started giving 5 for each post I liked. Maybe, if they want to remove lingots from the total pool, they should start taxing people giving others lingots. Want to give someone a lingot? Fine, but we'll take 5 for each one you give thanks. :D

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rafforza 14 11 3 3 2 2 2

Lingots should be used to purchase tickets to play word games like scrabble or crosswords. Games could have levels of difficulty that match the current status of your tree.

25ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

languagelover0 25 25 24 23 20 13 8

Yeah! Like word games in whatever language you are learning! You could have hangman, and scrabble, word searches, etc. etc. Endless possibilities for games!

12ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

O-JO 16 10 9 2

I agree. Duolingo is a "gamified" site, but it still lacks actual games!

12ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Snommelp 22 22 21 20 19 17 15 15 784

That's definitely an idea with some merit, though I imagine German Scrabble would get very complicated very quickly.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MZunig 18 16 10

I would pay 100 lingots for changing the background... I feel like a teletubbie with this one

21ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

JoshuaBowers 24 23 14 111

You could try the Duolingo Dark extension for chrome and firefox. It only changes the colors, but it definitely helps a lot.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 10

Hmmm, intriguing! Will keep an eye out.

More uses for Lingots would, I think, be greeted with much rejoicing! ;)

19ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kunstkritik 19 17 12 12 interesting. Maybe it would already help to have more options to spend them? Whatever system to earn lingots we use, people who don't spend stuff will stack them up and it won't reduce the amount of Lingot plz spam on the forums.

18ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Giacobbe_s 12 12 8 7 6 5 5 2 2

Will there be more things to buy as far as learning languages? For instance, instead of just Flirting, idioms, and tests, maybe some more things. Such as hard phrases, or even ordered vocab lists (I think they're already some for Italian, I don't remember). I know that this may not happen, but I want to possibly help make suggestions. Thank you Duolingo team.

18ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wazzie 25 11

I've been thinking while I can agree users like me probably earn too many lingots, I think putting a cap on how many you earn per 10 days may work better.

This means that the system will work as it always has, 1 for 10 days, 2 for 20, etc, until you get to 10 for 100. At this point for each next set of 10 days, you only earn 10 lingots. 110 days, 10 lingots. 120 days, 10 lingots. etc.

I think this would be a good middle ground that rewards keeping a long streak while keeping the numbers of lingots somewhat in control.

16ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DamnedRaven 9

This sounds like a much better idea than their solutions that hurt the ability of new users to earn lingots. I suspect the real reason may be to encourage more users to earn lingots by translating documents, since that is how they make money.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlanHogan 17 10 5

Better solution than neutering streaks: Ever play Civilization 2? Remember when your people loved you, you could upgrade your throne room, one item at a time? Something like that, but with lingots. For example, if we went with the same idea of a throne room, a simple chair could be 5 lingots, a La-Z-Boy recliner 30 lingots, a simple gilded throne 80 lingots, and a throne of swords (GoT anyone?) could be 500 lingots. You start with plain dirt walls, you can paint them for 8 lingots, add wallpaper for 20, velvet for 300, gold paneling for 1000. Worthless stuff that looks cool at insane prices — problem solved!

16ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Gluehbirneeee 14 12 11 10 8 5 61

I love the way how you always put things as if they were only great and wouldn't have disadvantages. Honestly, you'd be good politicians. Hopefully you can handle with our currency at least slightly better.

I do agree that an inflation isn't good for anyone but I don't think that removing the streak-award is helpful in any way.

The streak award is the main lingot 'income' for most of us and removing this will first of all reduce the motivation to keep up your streak. Why is this important? I think that I can speak for many users when I say that maintaining the streak is at bad days and -more important- at those times, where our motivation decreases because our language journey gets more complex and difficult (these times exist, we can't deny it), the only thing that keeps us coming back everyday and progressing slowly, passing the hard times until there's new motivation in us.

Also, a danger (a danger, nothing that will necessarily happen) is that we might become greedy. (Especially at these times the last thing we need is our community to become greedy.) I mean, have you ever seen someone in real life throwing around with money as soon as someone is kind or helpful? Probably not. But the community does kindly give away lingots to helpful or kind comments. Receiving lingots from users is, although lingots don't have that much value, a really nice gesture and tells you that people really appreciate your help (especially in sentence discussion where people don't want to clutter these with "Thank you" posts) and kind of makes you want to spend another few hours answering people's questions. Not because of the lingots, of course, but because it's just human to aim for being appreciated and being hold in esteem.

That being said I find it really great that you consider the community's feedback. And since you do, here are some ideas:

First of all: To prevent/stop an inflation (in Duolingo) all you have to do is having the same amount of lingots that:

people earn

go back to the server

Obviously, the amount of lingots that people earn is much higher. So the things that can be done about that are:

decrease the amount of lingots users earn increase the amount of lingots users spend

Obvious so far, right? And now, what's kind of obvious, too is, that we, users, would prefer the second way.

That would probably take a lot more time but in a long term perspective (something that A/B test can't necessarily predict) it would be much more fun and much more addicting, which would result in users staying at Duolingo longer and users telling their friends about Duo and forcing them to use it until they're addicted themselves - a sort of advertisement Duolingo relies on if they currently aren't in the media.

To finally come to the point:

Right now users give a lot of lingots away, which is quality in my opinion.

[I've read a similar idea in the discussion area, can't find the link, sorry]

So what about making a suggestion forum where users could vote for ideas with lingots? The idea which has the most lingots gets seen by you (staff) first.

We would be able to spend our lingots on something we want and you would be able to see what the forum users (the users that the most loyal and will stay for a longer time and are the most willing to invest a lot of time to improve Duolingo with the best of their ability) label a priority.

THAT'S JUST MY OPINION AND I KNOW THAT ESPECIALLY THE FIRST PART WAS (PROBABLY TOO) PROVOCATING BUT THANKS FOR CONSIDERING IT ANYWAY.

15ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

levannar 16

I'd vastly prefer additional things to spend on as opposed to reducing rewards. :/The thought is appreciated, though.

14ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BaconChomper 21 19 13 9 8 8 6

This is all I see as a solution.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

homebrewz 22 7 23

I didn't receive any more lingots for increasing my streak today. Some notification or explanation would have been nice rather than trying to find the reason here in the discussion list. I think this will affect the desire to maintain a streak.

12ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

Thidrekr 25 19 18 18 18 16 15 15 11 1228

Personally, I thought the existing system was fine; maintaining a long streak is hard work that relatively few have been able to accomplish, so I think that the way it was before rewarded people in a proportionate manner related to their dedication.

This, on the other hand, makes it considerably more difficult to earn them at all. I think we should have kept it the way it was, while developing new things to spend these lingots on. Those progress tests in the store were a step in the right direction, but at 25 lingots a pop, people are going to be taking them a lot less frequently, and I don't think that's an improvement.

12ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KevanSF 25 25 25 25 25 16 16 14 13 11 10 8 7 7 6 6 6 5 4 4 4 4 3 2 717

Thanks for the info! I can't wait to hear more. Particularly looking forward to being able to purchase more and different things with my lingots!

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1264

Thanks, vivi. It's great that the team considers this issue something worth addressing. I really think you're overstating the difficulty of fixing the lingot economy though. The biggest problem to me is that anyone with a lengthy streak quickly acquires far more lingots than they could ever hope to spend. A simple change to make each streak of 10 days worth 1 lingot instead of the current system (1 for 10 days, 2 for 20 days, etc) would fix 90% of the problem. Of course, other things that require more work would be necessary to "fix" that final 10%, including having more items to buy. But those things can be introduced in time. There's no need to put off a small change that would have a massive effect while deliberating over all the details that make up the 10%.

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BaconChomper 21 19 13 9 8 8 6

That might kill off a lot of the enthusiasm for keeping a streak going. Don't punish those who work hard for their lingots. Just offer more ways to spend them like more bonus skills.

34ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tara312 20 19 8 6 29

Agree!

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1264

It's a balancing act, but I'd hardly consider lesser rewards for streaks to be a "punishment". The truth is, Duolingo could take away 95% of my lingots this instant and I'd still be able to buy everything I wanted from the shop - that's insane.

The problem goes beyond adding more items to the shop. If I started buying/taking progress quizzes right now, and bought 1 every single 30 minutes all day long without pausing to sleep/eat/pee/learn, I could continue for almost 4 days before running out of lingots. No matter what they add to the shop, they're not going to fix that problem without adjusting the speed at which lingots can be earned.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

BaconChomper 21 19 13 9 8 8 6

You might not consider it a punishment to have lingots removed or the earning patterns altered but I would see it negatively. No one has to spend the lingots they have if they don't want. Taking them away as a motivator (for those of us who see it that way) is detrimental to the concept of persistent learning. To each their own.

The number of lingots that YOU have is far more than average or even way above average.

Also I never considered it a problem, let alone one that needed fixing. Sounds a lot like government fixing something that isn't broken to me. We all know how that goes.

8ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

Tara312 20 19 8 6 29

Streak is the most important indication of persistence in language learning. Persistence is the most important factor in language learning, it doesn't matter how good your method is, you can not cram 1000 words into your long term memory in 1 day.

Streak is also hard to maintain due to personal schedule and Internet accessibility.

Statistically, how many of Duo users have made the effort of persistently practice for 100 days? I don't think that they are the majority, out of 30+ millions users, are 90% of them suffering from too much lingots coming from streak reward? Maybe you are experiencing this problem personally by accumulating more than you can spend and you want to get rid of your lingots, but it seems like you belong to the minority of superior users than the mass, there should be a Lingot Bin for you to dump your excess, giving me perhaps? I promise I will put it into good use once I can convince Duo to outsource the lingots store (in my other comment) ;)

To sum it up again, reward for streak should not be reduced but increased and differentiate in other ways like badge or owl statue, these kind of vanity items should also be available for sale so we can spend more lingots. .

I also would suggest to have different reward for different XP goal, 1 XP per day definitely should receive less lingots reward than 50 XP per day.

30ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

bemk92 23 12 10 8 6 242

Isn't that difficulty of maintaining the streak, the whole reason for having a streak freeze in the store?

But I agree that having a single Lingot awarded for every 10 days, rather than streaklength/10 awarded would do a lot.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tara312 20 19 8 6 29

Yes, but if you are very busy during the day and intend to do Duo later on, you might easily forget it is already past midnight.

And streak freeze should be extended longer with higher prize, it may come as a surprise for you, but many places on Earth still don't have Internet or even electricity at all or only very limited, unstable access to it.

If I take a vacation to the countryside or go hiking in the mountain, my streak is sure gone.

One of the most addictive feature of game is competition and reward, if you are a gamer you would understand, even they are virtual useless items or soulless pixels. One of the most addictive feature of Duo is its gamification including streak.

Streak also nurture our bond with Duo aka language learning, many come back every day in spite of time limit, laziness, exhaustion or whatever because of it.

I'm pretty sure people with longer streak tend to finish their trees, reach higher level, invest more time in Duo than others, since I have observed that in people I follow since I joined Duo.

To get streak reward of 100 days streak, we need to overcome tons of our inner reluctance and outer obstacles. Many succeed in doing so but are they the majority? I don't think so. Even both of us are not. I'm at 67 days and I already have more than 500 lingots. I can buy everything in the store very early on like one month into Duo. How could that be the fault in streak reward? It is more like we have nothing more to buy. That's why I suggested to crowdsource the lingots store for user to sell their own lessons and buy from other users. Please read my other comment for reference if you can.

Thanks.

9ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Gymnastical 16 16 11 11 10 9 6 6 3

bemk92 and I were just having a similar conversation. You mentioned that if you go to the countryside or some other remote land, there goes your streak. I live the traveling life and this is one of the things that makes it stressful especially if I am at the airport for over seven hours straight without a good connection. As he says "the struggle is real." As much truth as that holds, don't get me wrong, I do like traveling but it has its share of things you have to deal with

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tara312 20 19 8 6 29

Yes, I agree that it is one of the thing we have to deal with, how we live our life is not to blame on Duo. But Duo is for learning and its main goal is to engage learners and keep them coming back everyday to review and renew their knowledge. For that, streak works well for many user, or at least for me personally.

On the other hand, the streak reward is not the main problem in lingots inflation to be targeted, many users have suggested many ways to spend lingots.

Still, discipline is one of the hardest thing in life. If we set clear goal and work for it every day, we are already all excellent students. But I guess the majority of Duolinguists are not so persistent to get such high reward. The top users can be very vocal and visible here in the forum with their awesome 100+ streak, but since I joined Duo, I have only added about 300+ people with really long streak compared to 30 millions+ people who supposedly are using Duo. My personal statistic is of course not official, but it gives me a rough assessment at least.

Besides, longer streak freeze is one of the simplest option to integrate since we already have 1 day freeze option. In theory we can freeze it for as long as we still have lingots in our account, just that we have to login everyday which is a nuisance for traveling and non-Internet land so it is like we can work hard and save for the rainy days, Duo just need to lend us a hand to facilitate it.

5Give Lingot•1 year ago

bemk92 23 12 10 8 6 242

@moodyKitty, yes, longer streak freezes sounds like a good idea, but they need to be implemented well, as it is the streak (and it's reward 1*) that keeps us coming back, especially in the beginning.

By making people indicate how many days of streak-freeze they want to buy, they both have control over their Lingot wallet (and have their streaks expire at will) and have to actually plan their freezes in order to keep the streak going.

I personally think having 10 lingots subtracted for each day you're inactive would be a poor way to implement it, but having people able to buy 5 streak-freezes or so, manually, in one go, be a much better approach.

1* https://youtu.be/tWtvrPTbQ_c

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

bemk92 23 12 10 8 6 242

@gymnastical You can purchase a streak-freeze and just let it sit until you need it. So, actually, a streak-freeze works quite well for that.

The problem with them though is that when I for example go on a hike through the Alps or so, I won't have internet for days, so it's impossible to get to the streak-freeze, so being able to buy up to 7 and just have them sit until you need them, would really solve a lot for people like that.

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

Gymnastical 16 16 11 11 10 9 6 6 3

MoodyKitty, I do not disagree with you. All of your points are true and while yes discipline does need to be facilitated, sometimes you actually do need some sort of help and when you need help it's nice when someone can sympathise with you. I didn't plan to be stuck in the airport until after midnight and normally I exceed my daily goal so I think that instead of the streak freeze, Duo should try to recognize that there are people that do put in a lot of effort but sometimes have things get in the way and add to the streak for making an effort.

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

bemk92 23 12 10 8 6 242

Well, if I were to lose my streak now, it would hurt in my lingot income. So I'd then have to build up again, whereas if I were to have a lapse in my internet connectivity or interest for a while, with a simple 1 lingot awarded every 10th day of the streak, there'd be nothing to build up.

That said, I wouldn't miss the streak awarding, because I use the wager, which I stop accepting when going abroad.

If this sort of thing takes your fancy though, Extra Credits did a video on this:
<https://youtu.be/W39TtF14i8I>

Their video is about MMO's but a lot seems to apply to Duo as well. There's already consumables in the system, such as the streak-freeze or the heart refill in the app.

Maybe we could add a system where people can make different backgrounds and then sell them, with a "tax" being put on the price of that background so that a bit of money flows away.

I'd love to see what the Duo community can come up with to control the flow of lingots and what the devs are willing to implement :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rattl 25 19 15 1038

Well, it looks like they may be thinking along the same lines as you ... there is a new (as far as I'm aware) A/B test titled "no_lingot_streak_reward". Which I would assume means you wouldn't get any kind of lingot reward for streaks, but I can't say for sure (and I am not in the test group for it).

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

alphabetalpha 25 11 11 7

"no_lingot_streak_reward": false

Score!

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kloppie5 4 4

"no_lingot_streak_reward": true

Missing out on 47 lingots :/

6ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

BaconChomper 21 19 13 9 8 8 6

Where are you finding this code?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

alphabetalpha 25 11 11 7

Right-click on the page and click "View Page Source". Then ctrl-f to search for "ab_options" for all your AB-test settings, or "no_lingot_streak_reward" for the setting at hand.

5ReplyGive Lingot6•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1264

@jolyne

Unfortunately, there's no "easy" way to figure out the names of the tests. It's just observation and guesswork based off of the test names.

The lists of A/B tests can be seen in a more friendly format by entering the commands "duo.user.attributes.ab_options" and "duo.ab_options" into your browser's javascript console (Ctrl+Shift+J in Chrome, something similar for other browsers).

5Give Lingot1•1 year ago

jolynnedougherty 25 19 14 8 5 46

Wow! I never knew I could do this. How do you get the name of the A/B tests. Please have some Lingots for teaching me. Thanks!

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1264

That's interesting, thanks for the info. It's definitely new to me. My value is true for that test, but I didn't notice not getting lingots yesterday for 570. I guess that goes to show how much the current system needs a makeover if I didn't notice not getting 57 lingots, haha :)

Edit: Not sure that no reward is the right way to go, but it's probably better than the current system.

10ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

It was just added today.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1264

Well, that explains why I didn't notice it yesterday, haha. Thanks :)

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

I support your idea =)

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Maurice314 22 20 15 14 9 8

That idea of changing each 10 day streak to only 1 lingot is really good. I support that idea :)

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

VStarTraveler 25 10 9 1287

In looking at the text in the Lingot Store, it appears that I'm in the test group (if that's what it is) that no longer gets lingots for our streaks. This makes me really bummed since I use my every-ten-day-lingot award as a great incentive for me and as gifts/rewards for others. In three days, I was looking forward to another lingot shower. Now I feel like someone's just thrown cold water on me instead.

Bummed.

11ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

Thanks Vivian, it's great to read that this matter has been started to settle. I'm very looking forward to seeing a few new items or possibilities on spending them wisely.

10ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Cheryl1 20 11 7 7

I'm perplexed. Duo's top priority is the lingot economy? There are far more pressing needs given your limited resources. I'm here to learn languages not earn useless "red gems". I've given up trying to understand what Duolingo's direction and goals are. Starting to feel like a social engineering lab rat.

10ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

alphabeta 25 11 11 7

Duolingo is language learning through gamification. Experience points, lingots and streaks have no real-world significance in and of themselves. However humans are fickle creatures, our minds respond positively to little rewards like that. That's part of what makes real video games compelling, and Farmville-style games so addictive. Duolingo takes this knowledge, and rewards you as a by-product of learning a language. The "useless red gems" represent your progress towards learning a language or two.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

enanderle 14

I am a very busy person, and sometimes I just can't find the time to do my 30 points to maintain my streak before midnight. I rely on streak freeze heavily to keep it going, and streak freeze being 10 lingots, the streak bonus lingots is pretty much the only way to fund it. Please don't take this away from us streak addicts!

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bersalon 25 17 4 713

I've noticed that DuoLingo has taken away the ability to gain lingots for ten-day units. Since you are a part of DuoLingo, could you possibly let them know that tons of users, including me, are dissatisfied at this change? I would like it if they brought back this tremendous motivator. Thank you.

9ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

ajpthree 16 15 15 15 15 14 13 13 12 10 10 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 1007

I 2nd that!! (as do a number of other posters in this very thread)

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tjcinmaryland 25 25 25 24 24 23 22 12 12 12 1417

I'm not a frequent commenter on threads like this... but I wanted to put in my two cents.

I don't know what the point of an A/B test on this really is going to be. What is it going to show?

I have a 720+ day streak, and am in the group that is no longer getting the streak bonus. I'm not going to stop practicing daily over the bonus going away - that'd be stupid and self-defeating. And I suspect that the bulk of the users who are offended at losing the bonus, who are racking up decent streaks of their own, are going to do the same thing.

I would posit that regardless of what group people are in, Duo is not going to see a noticeable change of behavior, and the staff will assume that removing the streak bonus is an 'okay' thing. Which to me makes it a poor test, if you can't prove the change alters behavior.

If I could offer a suggestion - there's been more than a few suggestions to simply put a cap on how many lingots you can get as a bonus for each 10 day streak. Why not cap it at 10, 15, 20 per 10 days, or lengthen the interval (1 lingot on the monthly anniversary of your streak's beginning, times the number of months)? That might help with the 'inflation' issue, and satisfy most of the critics.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

VStarTraveler 25 10 9 1287
tjcinmaryland said:

..." I'm not going to stop practicing daily over the bonus going away - that'd be stupid and self-defeating...Duo is not going to see a noticeable change of behavior, and the staff will assume that removing the streak bonus is an 'okay' thing. Which to me makes it a poor test, if you can't prove the change alters behavior...."

tjcinmaryland, this is so true! I seriously considered cutting back to the bare minimum for a few days, but then considered, as you noted, that such an act would only hurt my learning in the long run. Well said, and have a lingot.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

theunmutual 8 3
Something visual would make me want to spend them - on badges, or profile updates, or particular avatars.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

theunmutual 8 3
Or online items/collectables to display one ones profile. I get acquisitive about imaginary digital goods.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

roberto727 25 25
Dear Duolingo Management Since this is a free site i suppose i should not be surprised that you do not understand economics. Hey, our executive and legislative branches do not understand economics, so why should I expect any more of my beloved DL creators and perpetuators. (though we seem to having a bit of a lovers' spat at the moment)

At least you are only proposing to reduce my standard of giving lingots as opposed to the more pernicious reduction of our standard of living by the government. "Inflation" by definition is the reduction in value of a currency due to oversupply. This takes place when governments or quasi-official organizations like the federal reserve print money, in effect making it out of thin air with nothing to back it up. Yes, you can define "inflation" simply as an increase in number, but that is not necessarily a bad thing. Using that definition I don't think we would worry about an inflation of DL users, an inflation of clean water supplies, or an inflation of medical professionals in third world countries. The inflation that concerns us is one that results in a decrease in value of something we rely on for sustenance or happiness. Since lingots basically have no intrinsic value, there is no danger or downside to greater number of lingots in the DL "economy". Your statement "We have an inflation issue that is not beneficial to anyone" is in error. The overwhelming majority of DL users have no problem with an increasing number of lingots in the economy, see no danger at all from this so-called "inflation,," and want to keep receiving lingots for streaks or from any other source that we are used to getting them from. You, like the federal reserve, can make them out of thin air, so there is no production cost to DL. It is mind boggling that you claim to be "thrilled" by the steps you are now taking to reduce the number of lingots awarded in the future, that you wouldn't have perceived in advance the level of displeasure this would give rise to. I think the best solution at the moment would be to rescind the new policy and award every single DL user 10 Lingots for your lack of foresight and ticking us off.

8ReplyGive Lingot13•1 year ago

KaiBark 18 16 12 9 7 6 6

I think there should be some things like this: A redo that you can buy to use on an exercise (since heart refills aren't really a thing anymore), Language-specific outfits for Duo, Higher lingot wagers, Longer streak freezes.

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

helmad 21 19 17 17 15 15 14 13 11 10 2

Buy a gold circle around your flag for finishing the tree? And with a pool of 100,000 lingots, buy the choice of next language in the incubator? :-)

15ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

OneAndOnlyJosh 25 10 6

Thank You for listening to the feedback that you are getting from your Duolingo users and then taking the time to address their problems. I hope that your changes will solve the problems with the lingot system.

A Happy Citizen of the DuoSphere, -Cap

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

craigkbryant 15 11 10 2 20

What a pity! It's such a little thing, but I was really looking forward to my six lingots yesterday--I was disappointed when I didn't get them. I'm trying to save up to buy the bonus skills when the Esperanto course goes live...which, I mean, yeah, is pretty silly as a life goal, but it was keeping me motivated to come back every day and study. I think this was a misstep.

7ReplyGive Lingot13•1 year ago

craigkbryant 15 11 10 2 20

Well someone just made my afternoon. Thanks!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

HolyT 22 15 11 861

You can't get lingots for perfection on lessons any more. Now you can't get them for streaks. You can't get any past level 25. You can't get any for completing lessons once you complete a tree. So how does one earn lingots apart from the 5 per week? What if I want to buy a 25-lingot practice test every so often? This is a BAD decision. For many people, including me, despite the silliness of it, the lingots were a major motivation for maintaining streaks. As people have said countless times before, gamification is a or the major feature of this site that helps to motivate people to stay consistent here.

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TrevorAcier 11
[deleted]

1Give Lingot1•1 year ago

HolyT 22 15 11 861

That sounds like a great idea. I will hesitantly try it, maybe first with a language tree for which I have little progress. Thank you! Have a precious lingot.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HolyT 22 15 11 861

Before I stopped getting my streak lingots around day 180, I had never (since my first few days on DL, on a travel day) missed a day. Since then, I have missed three days (and spent 10 lingots for the streak freeze to preserve my streak). This is anecdotal evidence that the streak lingots are a "gamification" motivator to keep me coming back to the site consistently.

Six months, no missed days. Six weeks, three missed days.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ashtaret 14

More clothing options for the phone app owl would absolutely solve this as a lingot-sink for me! :)

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SussexSoleil 25 10

Ratings agency SP has downgraded Greece's credit rating again, saying it expects its debt and other financial commitments will be "unsustainable".

Coincidence?

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RMG18 14 3 2

Duolingo is free, fun and educational. Thanks to all. I like rewarding good posts with lingots so here you are!

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlanHogan 17 10 5

What "issues" or problems exist within the lingot world, aside from the fact that one runs out of things to buy very quickly (except for progress tests, which is kind of an odd thing to tie in to the lingot system!)

5ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

HolyT 22 15 11 861

I just noticed in the lingot store at the bottom, where it lists the ways to earn lingots, that the old message has returned, saying that you can earn lingots for maintaining a streak:

"Earn 1 lingot for every 10 days on a streak (1 for 10, 2 for 20, etc)"

Can anyone, who previously was not getting streak lingots, verify that you are now getting them again?

If the A/B test has failed and we are now getting streak lingots again, I wonder: Will DL refund me 147 lingots for my 180-, 190-, 200-, 210-, 220-, 230-, and 240-day streak milestones that I passed when I was on the wrong side of this A/B test?

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlanHogan 17 10 5

I was in the same boat (see this discussion) and can confirm I also see the welcome return on this blurb to the bottom of the store.

While I eventually stopped using Duolingo two months ago, I had quite a streak at the time and I'd also love to see the "missing" lingots show up, but given how miserable this unscientific, unfair, and ill-conceived experiment has been from the beginning, I have no faith that would happen.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HolyT 22 15 11 861

Thanks for the info, AlanHogan. I got a lot of responses at a new discussion, here:

https://www.duolingo.com/comment/9331188?comment_id=9333937. I think I will also get definite confirmations when people start to receive their streak lingots again.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Maurice314 22 20 15 14 9 8

I am glad to hear that Duo is listening to user feedback. What sort of changes are going to be happening to the lingot system in particular? Thanks in advance.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lingogirl1234 6 5 4 3

Thanks! I love Duo, and are you testing the xp bar again?

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BaconChomper 21 19 13 9 8 8 6

There is a script you can add to get that back.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Marc_B 14 11 7 7 5 4 2

I just wanted to say Thank you to all Duolingo workers for your continued efforts to provide us with a fun and productive learning experience, I think sometimes some of us forget that Duolingo is free.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Elorac72 22 14 13 11 10 3 3 755

Not forgetting at all, but being free doesn't mean valueless. And it was just as free last week before they took away this source of motivation that was valuable to me.

1ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

vishnugb 12 5

I do not know how good an A/B test would be, in this case. If one group of people get lingots in some particular fashion, and others don't won't that be slightly demotivating?

The result of the A/B test would, in that case, suggest that you should go back to giving lingots for 10 day streaks. But in fact, it could be that the better solution might have been to remove that for everyone (until of course there are more ways to spend lingots).

So, I think that one can not blindly use A/B tests, where it is just a decision that is required.

But personally, I think removing the 10 day streak reward is a bad move, as it is a good motivator.

4ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

lhockinson 9 6

I agree. I personally love them. Maybe it's silly to some, but for me the point isn't "spending" the Lingots, but a sense of accomplishment when I earn one.

6ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

remoonline 25 20 18

The result of the A/B test would, in that case, suggest that you should go back to giving lingots for 10 day streaks. But in fact, it could be that the better solution might have been to remove that for everyone (until of course there are more ways to spend lingots).

They would probably be looking at metrics like user engagement, course progress, new user signups, etc during the test phase. If they see this not being impacted with the change, they will roll it out to the rest of the users. If they find a negative impact (beyond their thresholds) on the factors being considered by them, they are most likely to roll-back the change. Thus AB testing helps them safely push in a change without impacting their whole user base.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vishnugb 12 5

Yes, so then if they find a negative impact in the group without the streak lingots, what I am saying is that it could be due to the existence of the other group, and that there is no way of filtering out that effect (in an A/B test)

1ReplyGive Lingot6•1 year ago

remoonline 25 20 18

Well, one of the negatives of AB testing is it can be very granular. So, the ambiguity shouldn't be there. In fact, a very disparate report is an easy report. It's usually the close ones which cause problems. And in this case, a close report would be enough reason to do away with the feature for all users if they actually want to get rid of it to.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vishnugb 12 5

I did not understand any of that. (you can post on my stream, you probably can't click reply on this.)

Edit: looks like you can.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nueby 25 23 10

I am curious about your mention of looking at new user signups as one of the metrics during the A/B test. But the new sign-up does not yet know which group s/he is about to be in, and the fraction of lingot streak losers among the new users is an input parameter, not something to track as a result. So you must have meant something else.

There may be some new-ish users who notice that they get no streak lingots, and if they believe it is important for them to work on having that motivation while Duo ponders what to do, may decide to be reborn with the "right" A/B parameter(s). The new user abandonment this will produce could well be observable in the metrics. Is this what you were thinking?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

remoonline 25 20 18

Not exactly sign-ups, as that may not be directly affected. But, user engagement and performance may be taken into account. Say, for new users in the control group, who get streak lingots, they may have found 10% of users practicing daily and making 5% progress. New users, in the test group, are not aware that they can get streak lingots. But still if from this group as well, they could see the same 10% of users practicing daily making 5% progress, it can be surmised that the provision of giving extra lingots for maintaining streak didn't actually make any difference.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nueby 25 23 10

Thanks. I was reacting to your separate mention of new signups in looking at metrics like user engagement, course progress, new user signups, etc during the test phase. The other items you listed were clear to me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

klinehopper 12

The problem is not the awarding of lingots but with the lack of available items with which to spend them on.

In my humble opinion, they should be concentrating on the Lingot store items and not on reducing awarding lingots. From browsing the board (in my short time here) I think this is what the majority of people have been asking to be done, not diminish awarding lingots. EDIT: As has been proposed by multiple people in this thread and others. I didn't see some of the answers before I posted but I agree wholeheartedly.

4ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

Personally I think the more ways you have to spend lingots, the more students will strive to earn them.

Lingots for streak are quite incentivating, specially when you have where to spend them. Some people certainly work more just to get some lingots, and they end up learning more too.

As far as I can see, a lingot inflation is not a real problem. Perhaps lowering the prize would be better than just no prize.

I totally understand customization is far away from language teaching, but perhaps it could be a good way to wither Lingot Economy. Very simple stuff that would add no extra maintenance effort like a background image might be a very good start, and it would make users happier. (You could even try helpers to send you images, some of them might enjoy participating)

Now, a few suggestions about how to spend lingots:

Add a button in practice exercises to "change to multi-choice exercise" (this would turn the typing exercise into a select the right option one, if the student thinks that sentence is too hard). - Sounds like cheating, but the more they do it, the less lingots they will have.

Add a button in practice exercises to "show 3 first words of the translation", click again: "4".

10 lingots for a "sound only" lesson

10 lingots for a "desired language to known language translations only" lesson

10 lingots for a "known language to desired language translations only" lesson

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lycorias 17 16 9 8 8 6 6 6 5 5 3 2 239

Yeah, getting rid of Lingots for streaks wasn't your smartest decision ever.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

silkwarrior 25

Sounds like a barmy idea. Yes there is a certain inflation with stored lingots - rather like the old soviet system where quite a few folk had lots of roubles but with little/nothing to spend them on.

But by just removing this "gamification", particularly after you have completed the tree, I can see no game incentive at all to return every day. After all, what will you lose? Nothing. So I think I'll tend to move away from DL and search out other language resources.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

jcoombs1950 25 360

I'm glad to have found this discussion page, thanks to Sitesurf who sent me a link after being badgered by me about not getting my streak bonus lingots. Now, I understand why. And I've given away 16 lingots to posts in this discussion. Giving them away to helpful comments is what I like to do with them.

I think it's really silly to worry about lingot inflation. If many of us are hoarding them, so what? As commenters have said, keeping a streak going is not always easy. One week ago, my son called me in the wee hours of the morning to tell me that his wife was in labor, and to ask me to come right away to watch after their 2-year-old son. Even on that morning, I took time to do a Duo exercise! I often do something exercise-related very early in the morning -- bike rides, triathlons, road races -- and I make time to get in at least one Duo exercise even on those mornings. Rewarding followers with bonus lingots is a practice that keeps many of us on our streaks, and daily practice is essential in learning a language. Please reinstate this system.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AndrewGertz 17 2

I just want some bonus lessons for Dutch. Can we get some common expressions or some pickup lines? I want to make the Dutch laugh with more than sentences about ducks!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

theawesomenerd02 25 8 7 6 5 4 4 2

please add these features --> <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7472931>

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

theunmutual 8 3

Virtual pin-badges? For example, you make a set with the capital city of each course and one with a national food, and artificially make the sushi badge 2,000 lingots while the escargot badge is only 20.

That way, people would have something ephemeral to spend their lingots on. It wouldn't interrupt learning (users can ignore the feature without barring them from skills). They would be new targets to make accumulating lingots worthwhile and very motivating to a certain sort of user. And it would get a lot of lingots out of the economy but users would still have the "status symbol" of a particularly rare badge to show that they have had a lot of lingots over time.

This is the sort of thing I expected to find in the lingot store, and lost interest in it when I found there was not. The power-ups are of no interest to me - I don't consider my streak important, as some days I practice my Swedish with a newspaper or a different source. And I'm not advanced enough to make the practice quizzes relevant to me.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Em484950 22 18 18 14 6 6 739

It would be great to have more interesting ways to "spend" lingots. Some people have suggested extra vocabulary, irregular verb, or case ending modules - all these would be very helpful.

I would like to make another request: if it is possible, what about a bonus unit on idioms where you have to learn BOTH the literal translation and the corresponding stock expression (and more of them, please!). People are always arguing about which type of answer should be accepted or not. For those of us who really dig language and the way the pieces fit together, it would be cool to have access to both, with some multi-level questions: Part A: what do the words mean literally ==> Part B: how would you normally convey this idea.

For example, "no master (craftsman) falls out of the sky" is quite an image and much more memorable than "practice makes perfect".

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

tara668 24 22 18 16 15 12 7 6 6 6 5 5 864

I was just thinking of something that would be an amazing thing to be able to buy with lingots. Well, for me it would be amazing.

Suppose (just suppose!) that there's a user out there who just ruins your day every time they type something. You've blocked them, but that just keeps them from posting on your stream. When you post and they throw their two cents in the comments, you just want to delete the whole conversation.

(Suppose further that this person doesn't do anything quite awful enough to get in trouble, so they're not going anywhere, but that doesn't mean they don't make you want to start eating your own limbs.)

What if you could buy the ability to stop a specific user from commenting on one of your posts? I'd drop a huge wad of lingots to be able to do that.

It's not remotely essential to language learning (unless that person is making you so uncomfortable you can't use the forums to get information you need) - you can do your tree (or hold your nose and keep using the forums, maybe) without ever buying this feature, so I don't see a problem with charging for it.

I realize: seriously unlikely. But I can dream.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

ajpthree 16 15 15 15 15 14 13 13 12 10 10 6 6 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 1007

that's actually an amazing idea - I recently had to block someone (probably a child) on here because they kept re-following me (by this I mean, they were unfollowing and then following me again), & I'd get an email notification every time which was extremely annoying after the first couple of times (& I won't change my settings, since emails help me to not miss people, since the notification tab only shows the 5 most recent happenings). I had no idea this person could still interact with me on other parts of the site - I'd pay 100 lingots or more to block them entirely, if it were to become an issue.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ajpthree 16 15 15 15 15 14 13 13 12 10 10 6 6 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 1007

I think a "bonus tree" for advanced skills would be a good way to keep users engaged in any one language, & if the cost was say 200 lingots or something high like that, it would give power users something to sink all their lingots into - not to mention give newbies a goal to aim for. It could even come with a "2nd tier" owl trophy to add to our collections, and hey, if you're looking for more ways for us to spend lingots, you could offer a "trophy room" for display on our profiles that could cost a pretty penny (I don't know, say 100 lingots or more)... it's just a dream of mine, but I'd like to go back to the spanish/french/italian/portuguese trees and learn advanced topics / conversational skills / etc :D

At any rate, I'm THRILLED that I'm not in the test group (I did receive my 35 lingots for reaching day 350 in my streak), but very very bummed for those users who are not so lucky - especially those under day 100 or so, who aren't getting enough for a streak freeze or wager every ten days anymore.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Carl_os 25 6 4 1384

Great news, Vivi, we're going to be in waiting. We are going to stay anxious.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

dlxzc 23 307

I understand how there might be some reason to reduce the ease of earning lingots, but it seems like capping the 10 day streak reward at 5 or 10 lingots per 10 additional days would be preferable to getting rid of it or reducing it to a single lingot. Right now I feel like I should at least get my 10 lingots for my unused streak freeze refunded since I don't see the point of having it. I also don't see any point to maintaining the streak other than pride, in which case I feel like the streak freeze is cheating and really wish it wasn't an option. I already noticed that I'm much less interested in completing a lesson perfectly since I don't get a lingot for it since they dropped the hearts. I just don't mind answering two extra questions as much as I minded losing hearts. It's silly and illogical, especially since I don't really have a use for lingots anyway since I already bought the bonus skills and don't want anything else in the store, but it still provides motivation, at least for me.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Gasparch 22 7 6

Give the lingots back :) As silly it sounds, but it is funny feature to look them add up every 10 days of streak and keeps me coming back to app every day :) Some kind of obsession :)

2ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

DukeofBath 18 16 12 11 9 9 7 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 3 2

Alright everyone in order to combat this inflation problem we need to burn our lingots.....in theory this will work I guess...you can trust me I am a licensed economist....

:P

1ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

timelord4213 2

but who would do that?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DukeofBath 18 16 12 11 9 9 7 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 3 2

True....well.....we could have everyone send their lingots to me.....to help the economy I mean....;)

-2ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Balint.HUN.SK 19 9 7 6

I think their focus is not the lingot system, but if something grows this big, you have to deal with all of its aspects to maintain the system. Probably there are many people working on the languages, but someone have to care about the community also, because the program can be super, if the people aren't enjoying it, they will lose their motivation. What do you think, what is the purpose of the lingot and streak system? It is MOTIVATION! Because people like to see what they achieved, and they like to be rewarded, but if the rewards value goes down, people won't "fight" that hard to get them, they will lose motivation, and eventually they will use duolingo less, no matter how great it is. So yeah, they have to care about the lingots.

And for you duolingo people, a couple of ideas: -The power ups: The double or nothing is good, or at least I don't have any reasonable idea to change it, but the streak freeze could be bought for more days, but each day should cost ten more lingots. So the scheme: $n = \text{amount of days}$, and the $\text{cost} = (1+2+3+\dots+n)10$. For example you have a lot of lingots, then obviously you are already very good at the language, and you plan to go on a vacation, you should be able to buy freeze for more days, what would cost you $1+2+3+4+5+6+7=28$ $28 \times 10 = 280$ lingots. It is expensive, but it is a "luxury" thing for those, who are already mastered their languages, and a week long break wouldn't harm their learning process. -The bonus skills could be more diverse, for example let's leave the idioms at 30, but the flirting should be like 100. But even the idioms are very hard for someone, who just achieved 30 lingots. There should be something easier for 30, something for 100, and something for 200. -The practice: Timed practice should cost a lot more, it is a big thing, and basically not for the beginners, so let's say it should be 200 at least. And you also should consider a system for progress quiz, when it could cost more every time you use it. For example $25x$, where $x = \text{how many times have you used it}$. (First time 25, third time 75) I am not saying, that it is perfect, but considerable at least. It could be $10x$, if it is too high. -The 10 day streak system over 500 hundred is very rewarding, so I think there should be a badge or something for the amount of lingots it gives you. (100 days badge for $1+2+\dots+10=55$ lingots), and then by hundreds up to 900, and 1000 should cost two times the amount it has given you. -Also, you should make available a system, where you could highlight those words, which are making trouble for you to learn, and then those could be practiced in a different place, let's say called "individual strengthening", and in the store could be a dictionary (maybe with a little explanation for the usage), with the words you have already learned, and you could switch between all those words and only the highlighted ones. (Personally, this is the one I miss the most, because I know exactly which words I need more to practice, but I can't, and if I want, I have to do it with the others in that section, which is boring, if I want to practice the same twice a day) -And the main problem: the immersion. It should be rewarded somehow differently, not with lingots. I don't know how, but hey, I can't solve everything for you guys. ;)

Keep up the good work!

Sincerely Balint.HUN.SK

1 Reply Give Lingot • 1 year ago

ZweeT 11 8

I don't really get why you deal with those red stones.. they are totally useless for me.. I only care to learn here and I never used a red stone to refill a heart cause this is like bully myself.. if I did a mistake, I did a mistake.. I prefer to do the exercise again and again till I learn. .. Many Thanks to people who work for this website and they offer to us for free :)

0 Reply Give Lingot • 1 year ago

AlfredoGon151399 15 6

Muchas gracias por informarme acerca de la adquisición de duolingos. En realidad, en los cursos que he seguido tengo tantos que no se que hacer con ellos. Tal vez quería hacer lo del rico Mc Pato: acumular y acumular hasta nadar en ellos- Su carta me aterriza Muchas gracias.

0 Reply Give Lingot • 1 year ago

jcoombs1950 25 360

I noticed this today -- 10 lingots only for getting all the answers correct. I like that! It will make me work harder. However, I have an issue lately with getting my bonus lingots at those ten-days-in-a-row marks. I didn't receive them at days 380, 390, 400. Sitesurf was kind enough to give me those. But then day 410 came along and I didn't get those. Have you changed that system? Please say no, because I really like the pressure of keeping my streak going.

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

writchie4 25 20 16 11 1264

Yep, it's been changed. For some of us, at any rate. It's still in testing.

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ballygawley 23 11 10 6

In the hall of fame, could you add a separate list of all people testing out 5.0 / 5.0 in languages --> that would certainly motivate people to spend lingots on quizzes.

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

__henry__ 18 17 14 12 12 10 6 2 2 164

I am apparently a part of this test group, and I quite honestly dislike the change. I cannot speak for everybody here, but as for me, I enjoy watching my streak increase and my lingot pile with it. Yes, much of the earned lingots will just sit there; I hardly ever give them away or buy streak freezes. But now with the streak bonus removed, there is less fun, and I am less inclined to spend my lingots. Why take away a motivator to learning and make us discontent?

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jcoombs1950 25 360

If you decide to go back to rewarding streaks with bonus points, and I hope you do, I have a debit of 83 as of 5/27/15.

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ravjeremy 10 9 2

I wonder how people give comments on the lingot economy besides posting on this thread or some other random thread that mentions lingots? I couldn't figure it out. Anyway, I would suggest that it would be cool if we could "buy" something entertaining with lingots. They're pretty useless now as far as I can see, at least the way I use Duolingo. (Which is: not very competitively.) A couple quick ideas: Videos in the language at an appropriate level (even kids' stuff could be fun); cartoons; real-time games with other users.

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Glasscrusher 8 2

could you make the streak for betting five lingots on seven days five days instead so it would fall on just school days

OReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

JonaLehmann23 11 10
hi

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

JonaLehmann23 11 10
hello

0ReplyGive Lingot73•6 months ago

TONYREC 5
we deserve better lingot averages!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

EsdrasCastiliano 12 3
And nothing happened?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Shamrock888 23 22 21 16 8 339
Why did Duolingo rob me of 2000 lingots when I just earned 25 more?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ScottChen10 9 3
i feel happy that you people[duolingo staff]care about how people want the game to be....

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

DanielClar414891 8 4
i think purchasable mini games would be a nice feature.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

rose.mariejane 17 14 8 5 1
What can we actually use lingots for? I've bought the timed practise, and extended test, and got the outfits for the little owl on my mobile app. Now lingots are useless!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ajpthree 16 15 15 15 15 14 13 13 12 10 10 6 6 5 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 1007
Don't forget the bonus skills too - those add up when learning multiple languages!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rose.mariejane 17 14 8 5 1
Bonus skills? What are they? At the moment I am only doing German, but I am very enthusiastic about the Esperanto course coming out, so it seems as though I will benefit from these bonus skills!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ajpthree 16 15 15 15 15 14 13 13 12 10 10 6 6 6 5 5 5 3 3 2 2 1007

oh & I too am very interested in learning Esperanto as soon as it's available!!! :D :D :D

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ajpthree 16 15 15 15 15 14 13 13 12 10 10 6 6 6 5 5 5 3 3 2 2 1007

The bonus skills are available for every course that has graduated from beta (I think). They are additions to the standard trees, & can be bought for 30 lingots in the store - the skills are "idioms," "flirting," and "christmas" & are pretty fun to work through. Go to the store & check it out! Feel free to message me here or on my profile, if you don't have enough for a skill I can give you enough lingots to buy one :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vishnugupt.dixit 5

hi

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

vishnugupt.dixit 5

hi kids

-1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

kloppie5 4 4

So I didn't get 47 lingots today.... No problem, still have 1916 left ;D

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SteveBosman 20 11 6 5 2 2 2 725

One things I'd like to see lingots used for is to discourage negative behaviour, e.g. downvote a comment that will cost you 1 lingot, downvote a translation in immersion will cost you 1 lingot.

-3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

timelord4213 2

but what if the comment or translation is truly bad?

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SteveBosman 20 11 6 5 2 2 2 725

My feeling (i.e. an A/B test would be needed) is people will mainly use something they've earned to downvote the stuff they truly dislike and are less likely to downvote stuff that just isn't to their taste.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

This seems like a good decision.

An element of games (gamification) is that the most sought after resource is the hardest to obtain. In duolingo, lingots have become something like rocks. Everybody can easily get it, with little or no effort (e.g. asking lingots in discussions or simply earning 1 xp per day).

The primary goal in my opinion should be first to make earning them difficult to earn:

Limit the max number of lingots a person may get from forum posts per day/week (e.g. 7 weekly);
Awarding lingots for completing difficult tasks.
Secondly, unlike money, lingots are not necessary in everyday duolingo use. So I would suggest things like:

Requiring lingots to unlock regular skills (e.g. 1 or 2 lingots);
Requiring lingots to unlock tips and notes;
Requiring lingots when attempting to add more than 2 languages;
Creating more language learning items to use them.
It is likely that if the lingot economy is properly balanced, this could greatly enhance the language learning experience.

-17ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Thidrekr 25 19 18 18 18 16 15 15 11 1228

Putting up barriers to learning, even in small ways like these, is not the way to go.

32ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

wazzie 25 11

Requiring lingots to unlock tips and notes;

I think this is probably the worst idea I've seen on here. I can't even begin to wrap my head around understanding the benefit of this change.

You've finally done it. I use to think that (while I usually disagreed with you) you had true intentions. Now it has become obvious you just like to stir up trouble. Good one. You had me fooled for a while.

22ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

I came to read a recent reply to one of my post and noted some things worth clearing up:

Not understanding the benefit of a change is not justification for labeling something bad. Duolingo has run hundreds of A/B tests some of which users will never know or understand, some which even go against what people seem to like.

Also, the OP made it clear that they wanted ideas. You singled out a single one out of many, which proves you have some issue with grammar instruction not with me.

>Now it has become obvious you just like to stir up trouble.

My actions and posts speak for themselves.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wazzie 25 11

Now it has become obvious you just like to stir up trouble.

My actions and posts speak for themselves.

I'm sorry, I really shouldn't have posted that in the first place. Regardless of my feelings at the time, it was an immature post.

6ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

AlanHogan 17 10 5

It can take courage to apologize — have a lingot.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Apology accepted.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

wazzie wrote:

Requiring lingots to unlock tips and notes;

I think this is probably the worst idea I've seen on here. I can't even begin to wrap my head around understanding the benefit of this change. You've finally done it. I use to think that (while I usually disagreed with you) you had true intentions. Now it has become obvious you just like to stir up trouble. Good one. You had me fooled for a while.

The benefit is that the user first tries the lesson without trying to see the grammar notes and then obtains them when they are having difficulty with a lesson. Much like how one can buy extra material to learn if and only if one doesn't understand the content.

One of the main problems of regular education is that they swamp users with too much theory and only later test their ability, rather than first teaching practically and then given the underlying theory. At least in my area of expertise it is one of the main reasons people fail programming.

Besides, as far as I can remember every user starts up with a certain amount of lingots, so buying this is quite simple. The only limitation is the user themselves, and if you truly think that's a bad idea, you should chastise the french team for adding tips and notes to a locked bonus skill.

-16ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Snommelp 22 22 21 20 19 17 15 15 784

"Besides, as far as I can remember every user starts up with a certain amount of lingots." I'm almost positive I started with zero, and had to earn every lingot.

12ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

New users start with 0 lingots. I think Dessamator may be thinking of when Lingots were first released, Duolingo gave every existing user a number of lingots to get started with. That number was based upon users' levels within various language courses at that time.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13
pinkodoug wrote:

New users start with 0 lingots. I think Dessamator may be thinking of when Lingots were first released, Duolingo gave every existing user a number of lingots to get started with. That number was based upon users' levels within various language courses at that time.

Good point. I was mistakenly under the impression that new users also got some lingots starting their tree.

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12
I started with exactly 0 (started last year).

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wazzie 25 11

Besides, as far as I can remember every user starts up with a certain amount of lingots, so buying this is quite simple

No idea, I was here before lingots existed.

and if you truly think that's a bad idea, you should chastise the french team for adding tips and notes to a locked bonus skill

If they make you buy the tips and notes separately, then I will do that. If they give you the tips and notes for free once you buy the bonus skill, then I will applaud them for giving the user resources to learn.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Elorac72 22 14 13 11 10 3 3 755

People learn differently though. I use the app which doesn't include the notes, and I find it frustrating to be marked down on something I could never have guessed. Thankfully many questions are answered by the helpful people on the Portuguese thread, but I'd much prefer a brief overview of a skill before I 'practice' it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ajpthree 16 15 15 15 15 14 13 13 12 10 10 6 6 5 5 5 5 3 3 2 2 1007

I actually don't think having to use lingots to unlock the tips/notes is a bad idea, but I don't generally use the tips/notes so maybe I'm biased - plus I have a surplus of lingots I save for bonus skills, timed practice, streak freezes, & for sharing with other users when they post insightful or funny comments, so I could easily unlock all of the tips/notes I want or need. I, like you, think that the "practicality first" is the way to go - the reason why languages never really stuck with me before is that there was always way too much emphasis on theory and almost NOTHING on practice (conversations, movies, etc)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

lexbroch 22 248

Nice insight into many education systems, that being teaching theory or very esoteric ways of doing things, then giving students practical things and wondering why they are having such a fun filled time performing them.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Snommelp 22 22 21 20 19 17 15 15 784

The game element is important, but language learning is absolutely primary. So I'd be wary of any changes that would make actual language learning harder, like requiring lingots to unlock regular skills or tips and notes.

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Completing any skill gives two lingots, and that's enough to unlock a new skill and the notes therein (if each costs one lingot). The benefit of locking it down with lingots is that people don't learn more than they should within any day. Lingots could always be given out for successfully completing a practice with no mistakes, for example.

The fact is that as it stands Duolingo doesn't discourage inefficient learning practices. One could complete 5 skills in a given day without really knowing even half of them (not counting placement tests). So completing a lesson + practicing would give enough lingots to keep going.

Besides, they've already implemented my idea to an extent because unlocking the french bonus skills requires a lot of lingots, and these come with tips and notes that aren't available if you don't purchase them.

-11ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

Completing any skill gives two lingots, and that's enough to unlock a new skill and the notes therein (if each costs one lingot). The benefit of locking it down with lingots is that people don't learn more than they should within any day.

(emphasis added)

How exactly? If each completed skill earns enough lingots to open two additional skills, there's no constraint at all upon how many skills a user can push through in a day. Besides, some students can handle more new material in a day than others. Implementing a one-size-fits-all throttle, as you seem to be suggesting, isn't the way to go.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

There is a constraint, there are rows with 3 skills. The two lingots would only allow one to work on two skills. Until those two skills are finished the third one would remain locked. Also, if each skill contains a purchasable note, then the person would have to either buy 2 skills or buy 1 skill and its note.

It wouldn't be a one size fits all since rapidly completing the skill will still give you access to two more skills, and there are other ways of earning lingots.

Games are about making choices and trade-offs, either you learn rapidly and don't get access to many tips and notes, or you learn slowly and potentially learn better. Duolingo is about language learning not finishing the tree as quickly as possible.

Besides, Duolingo claims to be planning trees that adapt to its users so that won't be an issue if its plans come to fruition.

-4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

The post to which I was replying said nothing about buying notes within the skills. Even so, it's still not a constraint. A user cannot complete multiple skills simultaneously. Since only one skill is completed at a time, how many are unlocked is irrelevant. Earning enough lingots to unlock 2 skills, or even 1 with a note as I now see you mentioned in a post further up this thread, serves as no impediment because a user can still push through as many skills as they like.

Also, the number of tips & notes sections included in a given course is too variable. For example, the Portuguese or Italian for English speakers courses have notes for only 12 and 13 skills respectively. Compare this to, say, French or Dutch which have notes for 30 and 32 (bonus skills not included).

The second part of my comment wasn't directed at this suggestion (because it doesn't work), but rather to the general idea that there should be some sort of limit to how many courses a user can do in a day. It remains a bad idea.

5Give Lingot•1 year ago

Snommelp 22 22 21 20 19 17 15 15 784

Ah, but the bonus skills are just that: bonus. Extra. Non-essential. Carrying over the game comparison, using lingots to buy a bonus skill would be like using your rupees to buy a bonus dungeon in a Zelda game. It's a fun extra challenge, but you can complete the game without ever going in there. But having to buy the regular skills would be more like putting a sign in front of the boss door saying "to fight Ganon, pay 200 rupees." It's a rather different experience.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Wish I had seen your gaming comment before.

Well, I'm not sure about zelda but in most rpg/adventure games. You often have to buy or unlock a specific item before you get to fight the boss. Most of the time you also need the necessary armor/weapons/item (or you'll die miserably). So you end up paying for it one way or another. :)

In terms of learning something, the same applies, you learn a new concept, you get tested on that concept (pay), and go on to learn more. Duolingo on the other hand doesn't really teach (in theory), it shows exercises with hints, and the retest doesn't cover even half the learnt material.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Snommelp 22 22 21 20 19 17 15 15 784

Mayhaps we play different games, but in the games that I play the necessary items are usually earned through the course of the game - much like the necessary skills for completing your final unit in Duolingo are earned through the course of your tree.

EDIT: Ah, we've reached the reply limit. Speaking of things we'd like to see changed...

Agree to disagree?

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

>Mayhaps we play different games, but in the games that I play the necessary items are usually earned through the course of the game - much like the necessary skills for completing your final unit in Duolingo are earned through the course of your tree.

Perhaps, but in Secret of mana 2 (or one of the series), a game loosely based on final fantasy (and legend of zelda) you had to get to each boss either on foot (assuming you're in the right place), or pay the transporter reach them by ship (if I recall correctly). So really, there was no way of beating the all bosses without paying the piper much like completing all exercises and lessons to complete a skill. I see moving from one skill to another much like moving from one destination to another, and that often incurs a cost.

This mechanic seems to have been abandoned in recent games though. So yes, we can agree to disagree.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 245

I think people learn in different ways; I'm sure some people have the kinds of brains that do well when they are stretched further than most people would stretch them. Binge learning skills for a new language on Duolingo, for example. I think that would actually work well for some people.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Studies disprove your theories:

<http://www.nature.com/nrn/journal/v15/n12/abs/nrn3817.html>

<http://qz.com/585143/the-concept-of-different-learning-styles-is-one-of-the-greatest-neuroscience-myths/>

There is a big difference between learning and memorizing

(<http://thepeakperformancecenter.com/educational-learning/learning/principles-of-learning/memorization-vs-understanding/>).

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

VincentOostelbos 17 15 15 10 10 5 5 4 3 2 2 2 245

Interesting. Will have a look later. At a glance, though, the one on learning styles seems to be talking about something slightly different than what I was talking about. I was just thinking about intelligent people with good capacity for memory and concentration and what not. Still, like I said, I'll have a closer look.

0Give Lingot•8 months ago

klgregonis 24 23 23 22 20 17 17 16 14 11 10 4 4 3 2 453

Well, the streak itself is reward enough for me, I was only interested in lingots until I had purchased the bonus skills I wanted, and then, well, it's a number- . I don't think having to use lingots to unlock skills or tips and notes is a good idea, and as for adding more than two languages - well, you could always set up another account. More bonus skills would be good.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

Well, the streak itself is reward enough for me

Me too. I was already ~200 days into my first 300+ day streak when Lingots were introduced in 2013. I've said elsewhere that to me the streak is merely a representation of my adherence to Jerry Seinfeld's don't break the chain philosophy.

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

You seem to have two conflicting points of views:

I don't think having to use lingots to unlock skills or tips and notes is a good idea

Vs

More bonus skills would be good.

Either skills should be bought or they shouldn't. The only difference between bonus skills and a regular skill is just the name, and the cost required to obtain them. Whereas for bonus skills the cost is simply lingots, for regular skills the cost is effort.

-9ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

As others have pointed out, bonus skills are just that - they're extra, non-essential content purchased or not at the whim of the user. It's not an inconsistent position at all to favor pay-for-play (with play money) for that content while believing that a course's core content remain available as is.

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

klgregonis 24 23 23 22 20 17 17 16 14 11 10 4 4 3 2 453

Well, I am not an either or thinker. Most things in life are full of gray areas. Bonus skills are extra, fun types of things, not required to be able to progress down the tree. After all, many of us have no real use for cheesy pick up lines, or proverbs, but they're fun to play with.. I'm not against these as a way to use lingots - but regular skills, which are required to be able to handle everyday language properly, and tips and notes, which do help explain the grammar, enough to get one started, are tools that are NEEDED to handle everyday language.

I think everyone is entitled to their own opinion on this. Black and white thinking can also be useful in a civilized argument - but it is not the only "correct" way of thinking about things under most circumstances.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

341 Pronounce the s in Suis?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/907082>

DoppleZephyr 2

Is the final s in Sui(s) pronounced?

Give Lingot

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

ProfesorAntonnio 21 16 16 14 11 10 8 3 2 2

Generally when it makes a link with a vowel sound.

Je suis (x)

Je suis_un enfant. (liason)

Je suis_heureux. (liason)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sylviane101 3

OK, I'm not learning French, but since I'm French I thought I might help. the "s" in je suis is silent. However, when the word suis is followed by another word such as as seen below "je suis un enfant" there is what is called a "liaison" between the two words and in such case the s of suis sounds like a z. je suiz un... enfant.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

aditis99 9

The final s is pronounced only when followed by a vowel, or h. For example: The final s in, "Je suis allé" is pronounced (Je sweez allay); it is also pronounced in "Je suis honoré" (Je sweez onohray) However, the final s is not pronounced in "Je suis triste" (Je swee treeste).

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DoppleZephyr 2

Thank you all for your help! Very informative posts!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

klaurataylor 25 15 13 9 6

So do we pronounce it with je vais aller? The s? Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

342 quizá or quizás

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2248>

SusanD612 15 8 4

What is the difference between quizá and quizás?

Give Lingot

514 years ago

Leave a new comment

32 Comments

Shotetsu 14

A good friend from Peru said that quizas is much more common. We then listened to the song "Quizas, quizas, quizas." (Check it out if you haven't heard it--the band Cake did an English version--"Perhaps, Perhaps, Perhaps"). Quizas and quiza mean the same and may be a regional preference. I think it's a glitch that Duolingo doesn't recognize quizas.

23ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

angryvoid 9 2

Es una canción excelente.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Shotetsu 14

Claro.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

marcosuvgedugt2 18 10 6

maybe it is a little error in Duolingo, the most of the people write "quizá", but "quizás" is also valid and it means the same.

14ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

matanmo 14 3

So in real life should I use only "quizá", or maybe is it different from place to place?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

integra1 14 11 10 9 4 3 3 2

La forma fetén ("fetén"= auténtico, verdadero, excelente...) es quizá, un adverbio de duda o probabilidad. Dice la RAE (Diccionario panhispánico de dudas) que por analogía con otros adverbios que terminan en -s (supongo que se refiere a además, jamás...) se formó quizás, forma que se considera igualmente válida.

Pues eso, a escribir frases con una u otra forma.

23ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

cowocow 10 2

integra1 google translated:

Form feten ("feten" = authentic, true, excellent ...) is perhaps an adverb of doubt or probability. Says the RAE (Pan-Hispanic dictionary of doubts) that by analogy with other adverbs ending in -s (I suppose it refers to also, never ...) was formed perhaps, which is considered equally valid. Well that, to write sentences in one form or another.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

ravalentis 25 7 5

Es una cuestión de preferencia. (A matter of preference.)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jbtaylor 9

I guess it's like "toward" and "towards" in English. The only difference in use is regional, and everybody knows what you mean.

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 4 hidden comments

[deactivated user]

Variant in dialects. Same word. Just like in English... (British) colour/neighbour (American) color/neighbor. In some spanish dialects the "s" at the end of a syllable is dropped during pronunciation. Don't worry about it too much, but that's probably the reason the spelling differs from one region to another in regards to that word - especially since the "s" has no grammatical purpose in this case.

8ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

jeffaust 13 5 3

For what it's worth, Pimsleur Spanish Latin America uses quizás.

7ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

thepkl 11

I live in México and I have only ever heard quizás although I hear tal vez more.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

leahtard 14

While in Ecuador, we heard only quizas. Only occasionally heard tal vez.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

catcampion 20 11 6

Thank you, Leah! I am moving to Ecuador and have lived around SoCal Spanglish for a long time. Here, tal vez is more common. I think quizás is much prettier/more melodic - hence the song not being, "tal vez, tal vez, tal vez." Like, perhaps, vs. maybe. Trying to find Ecuadoreans to learn Spanish from!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mariposa 25 11 7 6 4 3 2

I too think that it means the same, but when I wrote "quizás" instead of "quizá" in the exercise, I was told that this is wrong.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

kinglinguist 13

There is no difference other than its appearance. You may use them interchangeably.

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Xiuhtecuhtli 21 14 9 1003

I was always taught quizás. When I lived in Venezuela I often heard people saying "quizá", but I assumed that was just because of the Venezuelan accent (people often drop the S at the end of words). Didn't know it was a legitimate form until using Duolingo.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

ultron 24 11 10 5

It's exactly the same, you can choose either one or the other and nobody is going to notice any difference.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

litillsnakur 15 11

they are the same. it depends what country it is being used in with which is more common

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

flagstaffman 17

Google Translate says the former is an interjection meaning Wonder! or Perhaps! and the latter is an adverb meaning perhaps, maybe, or possibly.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nohaypan 12 9

So much for Google Translate: "Wonder!" may be Owlsh but it is certainly not English. And it would be almost equally odd to use "perhaps" as an exclamation, something like "ummm ... !"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

marcosuvgedugt 4

it should be the same

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Katzenperson 14 9 9 8 8 7 5 5 4 4 35

When I studied Spanish years ago, I was taught «quizás», solamente. «Quizá» sounds as though it is from a regional dialect.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

gdurandgroulx 14

Thanks to all. I would like to get more information about this. A plural for an adverb seems awkward to me.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

jefffaust 13 5 3

I wouldn't think of it as plural. Is 'perhaps' plural because it ends with an 's'?

12ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

tfolawn 13

good point

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

343 DTTBT: Don't translate the book titles.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1567044>

samshn 7 5 1

There are a lot of Wikipedia articles being translated - great!

However, unfortunately, many book titles are being translated, where they really need to be left alone. We need to tell each other: DTTBT!

The reasons are as follows:

Some translated books are released with different titles in different languages because the publishers decide so.

Think of the poor researchers, getting literature tips from Wikipedia, only to search for hours in library catalogues to find a title which doesn't exist.

The only exception is when you know the title of the official published translation of a book.

So, dear community, DTTBT!

Spread the word!

Give Lingot5

93 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

ziggKogg 25 11 8 3

The same goes for music titles, book titles, movie titles, tv show titles, newspaper titles.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SongbirdSandra 18

Actually, you do want to translate titles, under certain circumstances.

For example, I (and others) recently translated an article about Judy Garland. We had one heck of a time translating some of the movie titles from French to English (because they were not word-for-word translations- not even close).

However, since we were translating to English, it was appropriate that we use the English titles, otherwise, people would have been scratching their heads at the French titles.

However, I agree that we need to make sure that a title actually exists, instead of just trying to translate something word-for-word, from one language to another.

:-)

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

arethusia 25 25

To my knowledge, the general standard is to leave the original title in the original language, followed by the translated title in brackets.

The reason to have both version is that often the title might be very different in a different language to the point that it's not recognizable. If both titles are present than people can at least make the connection between the two.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

innerwestwomble 18 2 762

I totally agree with you arethusia. It seems to me the original title followed by the translation in brackets, covers all bases nicely. Sadly, I'm getting downvoted and even verbally abused for this practice, even when I link to the Duo Wiki :(

Let's spread the word - DTTBT! :D

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

arethusia 25 25

I personally very seldom downvote anybody. If their translation is off by a little bit but gets the general idea across, I just edit it. As far as I'm concerned, not getting an upvote is penalty enough (I often upvote before I edit if it's just a minor change that I make.) I use downvotes only for two things - if the translation is so bad that it has nothing in it at all that's worthwhile - and if a person is repeatedly changing something that shouldn't be changed.

That being said, if somebody is downvoting you for keeping the original title and putting the translated title in brackets (even if they don't agree with the practice it's not incorrect, just a different version), then a flurry of downvotes to them in return with an explanation of why they're getting 5 or 10 downvotes in a row is usually enough to get their attention. No matter how good a person is, there will always be little mistakes like missed commas, spelling errors or something and once they see the danger of downvoting you for something that's not wrong, just different from their method, they'll usually stop.

I wish I could remember some title I've come across here to give as an example, but occasionally you see them, where the original title is one thing and the title that the book/movie/tv series is in the other language is not a translation but something totally different. I suggest googling titles when you translate them and eventually you'll find something where the real titles in both languages are completely different. It makes the point.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

innerwestwomble 18 2 762

Thanks for your thoughts arethusa. Now that I think about it, I am pretty sure I haven't ever downvoted anyone. I always share the points if it's a minor edit cos you're right, even the best translators make typos occasionally. I also usually leave a comment explaining my edit or in the case of the film titles, I add the link to the Duo Wiki explaining why native language is followed by a translation in brackets is helpful to the reader. After all, that's the whole point isn't it, to translate the document as accurately as possible?

I totally know what you mean about some films being released with totally different names and I do often use the Google Fairy to help with that. :)

Thanks again for your input.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SongbirdSandra 18

Yes, I agree with you, arethusa. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

344 "The girl eats soup."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/348672>

Translation: La fille mange de la soupe.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

70 Comments

E.T.s_Son 11 11 8 8 6 3 2 2

I get so confused with it comes to de la, du, de, des. It's like sometimes I right in the translation and sometimes I wrong even though I understand with the sentence is saying.

"the girl eats soup" I'm not sure if they're talking in general about soups or she's eating some of the soup placed in front of her!

79ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

OriBarashy 9

When the object is feminine, like soup, and it does not specify "the soup" or "this soup" you say de la soupe (not just de soupe)

44ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

TheSuleyman 7 6 2

Nice, what about masculine?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Adriienm 11 6 4

(that has already been answered here) For a masculine noun it is "du" (la fille mange du pain). It is the same rule, so it should be "de le", but the "de le" don't exist and it is "du" instead.

34ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

CheranieGa 7

de+la=du I learned it like this

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

DouglasLeal 10 5

Me too.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

E.T.s_Son 11 11 8 8 6 3 2 2

un jour je vais comprends ca (One day I am goin to understand this) LoL

23ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GregCannon 9 4

*comprendre

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MoazaSabaihi 4

This is so true. I do not know why the sentence I've written turned out to be wrong, La fille mange la soupe (I think)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mava.99 9 5 3

If the sentence were " la fille mange la soupe" it s should be : " The girl eats THE soup.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CheranieGa 7

du

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

[+] 3 hidden comments

Adriienm 11 6 4

In french we don't really say that. We don't "eat" soup, we "drink" it. So it would be more "la fille boit de la soupe" (from the verb "boire").

30ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Van_1994 5

Wow, thank you for letting me know more about your culture. Drinking some soup instead of eating them :)

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MeagH 8 3

I just chose "La fille mange la soupe" and it told me that "La fille mange de la soupe" was the answer but before, when I had to translate "The girl eats soup" and I had said "La fille mange de la soupe", I told me that I was wrong and that "La fille mange la soupe" was correct...

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sylvie-jn 6 4

read the explanation above

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

jkam5 5 2

I always think of de la soupe as for the indefinite, as in she is eating (some) soup. If the sentence had referred to a specific soup, like one previously mentioned it would have been la soupe

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

elio_xh 5

Is "de la" the female equivalent of "du" ? If not, when do you use "du/de le/ de la"?

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FMTremblay 10 8 7 6 5 3

Yes "de la" is feminine for "du". "Du" is actually a contraction of "de le" so we never use "de le". In case you see it: the same thing goes for "à le" which is contracted in "au".

34ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Nicholas419313 15 9 7 3 2 2

Is "au" both masculin and féminin?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

FMTremblay 10 8 7 6 5 3

No, it's only masculin

Du = masculin De la = féminin

Ex: "Du pain" "De la farine"

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Nicholas419313 15 9 7 3 2 2

I realize the stupidity of my question now, thank you!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

angie298 6

de le n'existe pas, on utilise du, et on utilise du/de la/de l'/des pour indiquer la quantité (par exemple du pain, de la farine, de l'huile, des tomates) et dans les phrases (faire du sport, faire du foot(football), jouer de la guitare, avoir de la chance(to have luck). la negation: ne___pas de:

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

the_seraphim 5 4 3

La fille mange soupe... The girl eats soup... Why do we need a de la here?

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Adriienm 11 6 4

"la fille mange soupe" isn't possible, in french we need an article, so it could be more "la fille mange la soupe". But then it would mean "the girl is eating all the soup", wich is not the same meaning. So it is "la fille mange de la soupe" wich means "the girl is eating some soup" or "the girl eats soup".

21ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

MarkChristison 7 3 2 2

Then you would need to include the translation for the word all which is not in the french sentence

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SmileFuture 4

This is so far the most clear answer to this if this is indeed correct... hah

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Micutea 5 5

French grammar is confusing.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

montathers 6

Same Q

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

YiyeDibSabar 4

de la, du, and d' means some. like she eats some soup. elle mange de la soupe

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JagMicker1 22

OWLSHIT! There is nothing wrong with "la fille mange la soupe"! it is CORRECT! "DE" LA OWLSHIT! :-

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gbaby87 7

Ahhhh! I always mix up le and la :(losing hearts for something s basic

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gwenvanh 7 6 5 4

Probably the translation of the girl eats soup is la fille mange la soupe and the translation of the girl eats some soup would be la fille mange de la soupe

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dnlcr 8 6 2

Why not "de soupe" ? "De la soupe" implies that she is eating some specific instance of the soup whereas the english sentence reflects no such specificity.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Adriienm 11 6 4

"de soupe" don't even exist in french. When you use "de" you must use an article: "le" or "la" (but instead of "de le" we say "du"). And in this case the definite article don't necessarily mean a specific instance of your object.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

canderson3 11 9 6

This exact phrase is correct as "eating some soup" in many other cases.... what's the actual rule?!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DaniloRibe436901 9

Wy "La fille mange une soupe" is not correct in that case? "Une soupe" as in "de la soupe" makes the "soupe" unspecified, don't it?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Curly_Forever 6

Wait,so soup is feminine?"La fille mange de la soupe" Quick question: if it was masculine, would it be "La fille mange du soupe"? I know nouns have particular genders, and if you're regarding a food that's masculine, you would use "du" before it? Correct me if I'm wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Adriienm 11 6 4

Yes that's it. If you take "le pain" for a masculine noun, it would be indeed "La fille mange du pain".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SkittleLittles 10 5 5 4

Can someone explain the eating verbs and where to use them?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TerkRockerfeller 8
Potage ? ? ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

334045119 9
dont understand

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

o_milane 12 12 7 34
Why "la fille mange du soupe" is wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kgvale 17 6 6 5 4 4 3 2 121
Why isn't it just "la fille mange soupe"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Noacat 13 6 3
It corrected me and said that I should have used potage... which I guess is correct, as potage is another word for soupe. But it was super confusing tbh.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Noohal-mah 10 6 4
When should I use de/du/des ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

AlsoKnownA3 9
So basically the simplest way to think of this rule is when there is no definite, specified quantity of or for an object, then "de la" (feminine) or "du" (masculine) is used?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

aaron.torfs 3
give me all ur lingots plz

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

halleoncerfev75 6
why does it say de before im confused

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

TheRAActivator 8 4

Huh? Since when do people eat soup? I drink soup.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

puglover47 8 6 5 2

unless its talking about stew or gumbo

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

HainesEmily 7 4

it dos not say the girl is eating some soup they say the girl eats soup

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

CeciliaHollowell 5

According to this, the correct answer is "The girl eats/is eating some the soup."

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

puglover47 8 6 5 2

stupid "de la" messes me up every time

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

AngelaGres 6

Doesn't this mean 'the girl eats some the soup?' The french have a flowing language, this is not that flowing. Why is that correct over 'la mange soupe?'

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

xinode 17 10 3 2 1

Put the de la in the drop down words, im not learning anything when i get it wrong only demotivated

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

sid822 7 2

what is the difference between de and du?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

TurtleOverl0rd 6 2

I wrote La fille mange de la soupe, but it said that La fille mange de la pourage was right. I'm really confused...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

AmandaWilliams13 15 2

i wrote soupe and was told i was wrong, it should have been pottage (may have spelt that wrong)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

AmyMiller758304 8

I am so confused - I wrote "la fille mange du soupe", and I get that it should be "de la" instead of du, BUT it says that the correct answer is "La fille mange du potage". When do you use soupe vs potage??

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

Englishgirl1213 9 2

Can someone explain the de la, etc. rules to me, please?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 days ago

Englishgirl1213 9 2

What is the difference between "soupe" and "potage"? Why is "La fille mange du soupe" marked wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 days ago

KathleenJo10 11 9 2

"The girl eats soup" translates to "La fille mange la soupe", so when I chose the aforementioned to match it, that app said it was wrong and that it was instead "La fille mange de la soupe". The second one is wrong. I don't understand.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

codymoreorless 11

You not understanding doesn't make the wrong answer more correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aaron.torfs 3

plz give me ligeits

-1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

puglover47 8 6 5 2

why?

345 Disable sound in the mobile app

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4962946>

hejmsdz 16 10 10 6 5

I know this was mentioned before, but I really think there should be an option in the mobile app (at least the Android version, maybe it's already available for iPhones) that disables the sound. Not because it can disturb people around, neither because it cannot be heard in a loud place. The real reason is that it consumes the data plan/package massively.

I absolutely love Duolingo and when I got my first smartphone it was one of the first apps I installed on it. I practiced on the bus with volume set to 0, it was silent, but kept downloading the spoken sentences. It uses the most data of all applications, approximately 25% of my total transfer. I'm convinced it should be possible to cut it down.

Give Lingot

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

Aaron877833

Two years later and this is still somehow not an option. There are LOTS of reasons that people want this, but they don't seem to care.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

arcuri82 11

I have the same problem. I just downloaded the app for iPhone 6 and, even if I disable:

Sounds effects

Speaking exercises

Listening exercises

in the setting, I still get voices in the app (eg in the exercises in which you need to identify a word among different pictures)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DaveYoung1 25 15 9 8 2 1006

If you go to settings you can disable 'listening exercises' I'm not sure if it will stop the lessons when you get the written sentence and audio though.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ex0 13 11 8 6

I second this motion!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tiangong 15

under ios, which you don't have, you go into profile-settings-sound effects. do you have a user profile under android? a settings option under the profile?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

346 qui vs qua

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/207660/qui-vs-qua>

abrener 18 13 5 4

What is the difference between qui and qua, because the translation is the same (here)

Give Lingot6

334 years ago

Leave a new comment

31 Comments

f.formica 20 17 12 12 11 11 10 8 3 1274

Grammatically, it's like this:

Qui: exactly here where I am

Qua: in my proximity

Costì: exactly where you are

Costà: in your proximity

Lì: exactly over there

Là: around there

The distinction is matched by the adjectives/pronouns Questo (close to me) / Codesto (close to you) / Quello (far from both of us).

Outside of books and a part of Tuscany, though, people only use qui/qua (here) and lì/là (there) with no real difference; same goes for questo (this) and quello (that).

306ReplyGive Lingot102•4 years ago

jayperk1 13 10 9 6

This is how i plan to memorize it. The 'i' in Qui and Lì (like the letter) points to a straight point/spot, while the 'a' in Qua and Là is more wider/broad than a skinny 'i'. Does that make sense, or is my brain wierd?

75ReplyGive Lingot18•1 year ago

123annn 14 13 11 11 10 7 6 5 4 3 2

there are linguistic studies showing that the character of the sound and the meaning is very closely connected. here and this are often letters like "i" while words like "that" and "there" rather contain a "a" and "o". this is even valid for languages that are not connected to each other. so your brain is just human :-)

11ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

Gjthomas1990 12 7 6 58

Grazie molto!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

frankmazuca 22 171

thank you. not your brain is not weird, i might even be able to remember this now!

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alesheida 9

Super hint. Worth remembering

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LesleyHalm 20 1

Nice one!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AhmedOrban 12 4 3

weird but nice! :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TimoBreure33 11

Come dicono a olandese: un bello ponte asino!

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

bookcases123 16 6 4

I do the same kind of thing to remember.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

luke.floyd24 14 12 4 2

This was extremely helpful. Thankyou

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Paul604 25 9 8 970

Thanks for the really clear explanation. I'd not even heard of costì or costà before today, so at least I won't panic now when I see them. :-)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EugeniaAT 14 11 11 5 3

Great explanation, thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Smokebird 11

Thanks a lot!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BingDu 11 11 10 9 9 8 8 5 5 5 5 5 4 2
thanks

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chupipe 12 11 4 2

Holy cow, such a nice explanation!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

exAussie 22 10 8

You answered a question I had for a long time. Thank you.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lavvie 15 9 7 7 5 2

Great explanation! Thank you so much for clearing this!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Krisbaudi 19 19 19 13 561

A very helpful answer :) Thank you with a Lingot!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Stronzia 14 13 8 7 6 6 5

I've always used lì as "far from me, near you" and là as "far from both us"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Suzanne06- 23 11 547

Thank you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

gcb0 6

thanks! also it is funny that on most words -a = singular, -i = plural. now for those -i = exact spot, -a = larger area.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Blomeley 21 9 8 6 4 4 3

I had always thought that those pairs were all exact synonyms. Thanks for filling us in!

Does that mean that 'tra' and 'fra' aren't 100% identical also?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

f.formica 20 17 12 12 11 11 10 8 3 1274

No, tra and fra are identical in usage: tra is more historically correct as it derives from the Latin "intra" (between), while fra derives from the Latin "infra" (below). But they're perfect synonyms in Italian.

47ReplyGive Lingot7•3 years ago

bookcases123 16 6 4

Thanks for the explicit difference.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Schatzie14 14 9 9

Thank you f.formia and jaypert1 :The Best lesson of the day

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mcbarge 16 11 3 2

thank you so much for the distinction between these words!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

silnin 21 4 19

Thanks for that! it finally makes sense now :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JennyHayfo 15

thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

maxvinus 11 10 3

I also would like to know where should i use piú and where molto is appropriate.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

bookcases123 16 6 4

Thanks for the suggestion. It makes sense to me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

347 A guide to the Russian word order

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/13955228>

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 72

There're lots of questions about the word order, so I've thought I'll write a guide about it.

This guide is work-in-progress, I'll edit it as more questions are asked, and as mistakes are found.

1. COMMON MISCONCEPTIONS

You might have heard that the Russian has a 'free word order'. However, this is a linguistic term that is often misunderstood. 'Free word order' means that subject, object and verb are not arranged in a certain order.

It does not mean that you can put words in any order. It just means that grammatic role (subject/object/verb) doesn't affect the word order.

2. NEUTRAL/OBJECTIVE AND INVERTED/EMPHATIC/SUBJECTIVE WORD ORDER

In Russian, sentences have a neutral/objective word order. It is the default word order that doesn't add any additional information. Duolingo usually accepts only sentences with the neutral word order.

You can break the neutral word order by moving words around. By doing this, you create an inverted/emphatic/subjective word order. This word order is used for emotional emphasis. With emphatic word order, you must mark the new information/focus with intonation (see more about it later). Usually, when you swap the place of two words, one of these words gets the emphasis (the intonation shows which one).

Emphatic word order is not usually accepted on Duolingo. For you as for learners, it's better to learn the neutral word order first. It's important to learn the rules before learning the ways to break them.

Note that in colloquial speech, emphatic word order is much more common than in formal language. This is partly due to the fact we don't have much time to construct our sentences, so we just put the words in any order. In careful, prepared speech, emphatic word order is rarer and serves some purpose.

3. FIXED POSITION OF CERTAIN WORDS

Some words have a fixed position in the sentence.

Adjectives usually precede the noun they modify: большо́й дом 'big house', краси́ый цвето́к 'red flower'.

Other noun modifiers usually follow the noun: кни́га сестры́ 'sister's book', статья́ в журна́ле 'an article in the magazine'.

Objects usually follow the verb: я ви́жу соба́ку 'I see a dog', я понима́ю грамма́тику 'I understand the grammar'.

But when object is a pronoun, it usually precedes the verb: я его́ зна́ю 'I know him', я ниче́го не ви́жу 'I see nothing'.

4. WORD ORDER CAN SHOW NEW INFORMATION

All sentences have some new information, and some known information. Known information is called topic in some analyses, and theme in others. New information is called comment, rheme or focus.

Rheme/comment is something you want to tell. For example, in the sentence 'My sister is an architect', it's assumed that you know I have a sister, and new information is her occupation. When I say, 'My sister is the architect', you know that there's some architect mentioned before, and new information is that this architect is actually my sister.

So, in Russian we place new information towards the end of the sentence:

Моя сестра — архитектор. 'My sister is an architect.'

Архитектор — моя сестра́. 'My sister is the architect.'

In English, we use the article 'a' to show that 'architect' is a new piece of information, someone not introduced before. In Russian, we use the word order.

Russian usually places topic/theme (known information) at the beginning of the sentence, and comment/focus/rheme (new information) at the end.

The first part of the sentence is something known. It's a pivotal point that connects the sentence to listener's knowledge. And the end of the sentence is new information.

Compare:

На столé мой кнйги. 'My books are on the table.' 'What is on the table is my books.' (This sentence tells us something about the table: the fact that my books are there. Table is a known information, books is new information.)

Мой кнйги на столé. 'My books are on the table.' 'The place where my books are is the table.' (This sentence tells us something about my books: the fact that they are on the table.)

В пáрке собрались все. 'Everyone gathered in the park.' It's a sentence about what is going on in the park. New information: that everyone's there. Park is something we know about. We can use this sentence if we talked about the park before.

Все собрались в пáрке. 'Everyone gathered in the park.' It's a sentence about 'everyone', about the group of people. The new information is: that this group is in the park. We can use this sentence if we talked about 'everyone' before.

Возле окнá стоёт стол. 'There is a table standing near the window.' It's a sentence about the place near the window. New information is: there's a table standing there.

Стол стоёт вóзле окнá. 'The table is standing near the window.' It's a sentence about the table. New information is: it's near the window.

5. WORD ORDER IN QUESTIONS

Basically, the word order is the same as in the answer to the question. Imagine a possible answer and use the same word order:

If answer is «Моя сестрá — архитéктор» 'My sister is an architect', then the question is «Моя сестрá — архитéктор» 'Is my sister is architect?':

- Моя сестрá — архитéктор? 'Is my sister an architect.'
- Твоя сестрá — архитéктор. 'Your sister is an architect.'

The question mark shows the rising intonation. Basically, just add a question mark (in writing) or a rising intonation (when speaking) to any sentence, and you have a question,

5.1. Word order with question words

However, there's an exception: question words normally come at the beginning of the sentence. So, if «кто?» 'who?' replaced «архитéктор» in the question, it becomes «Кто моя сестрá?» 'Who/what is my sister?' (not «Моя сестрá кто?»):

- Кто моя сестрá? 'What's my sister?'
- Твоя сестрá — архитéктор. 'Your sister is an architect.'

This sometimes means you can break other rules about the word order. For example, «какой» 'what' works like an adjective, but it is not placed before the noun. It's placed at the beginning:

- Какой моя сестрá архитéктор? 'What architect is my sister?'
- Твоя сестрá — извёстный архитéктор. 'Your sister is a famous architect.'

So, basically, the word order is the same as in the answer, but question words come first.

5.2. Word order with «ли»

There's another way to form generic questions: you put the rheme/focus/comment at the beginning of the sentence, add «ли», and leave all the other words as they are in the answer. This way, word + ли works like a question word:

- Архите́ктор ли моя сестра́? 'Is my sister an architect?'
- Твоя́ сестра́ — архите́ктор. 'Your sister is an architect.'

«Архите́ктор ли моя сестра́?» and «Моя́ сестра́ — архите́ктор?» mean the same thing.

When the new information is not one word, but several, then you place all the words in the beginning of the sentence, but add «ли» after the first one. Here's an example (here, the new information that is the rheme of the question is «известный архитектор»):

- Изве́стный ли архите́ктор моя́ сестра́? 'Is my sister a famous architect?'
- Твоя́ сестра́ — изве́стный архите́ктор. 'Your sister is a famous architect.'

Give Lingot164
3141 year ago

Leave a new comment
98 Comments

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6
Now sticky.

41ReplyGive Lingot4•1 year ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

Sialia2 24 24 20 14 13 7 577
Thank you for organizing and presenting this information so clearly!

18ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

Dogdogcat 16
Волшое спасибо, szeraja_zhaba. This has been very confusing to me!

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

UsernameAK 13
Большое, not Волшое

9ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Dogdogcat 16
Ah yes, I think I know enough to catch that now!

4ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

CodyORB 22 13 5 6
Very helpful. Hope this gets stickied.

11ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

ReraCikap 22 20 17 9 8 4 3 2 2 2

This is what I really want to know. Thank you!

6ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Dimidov 11 2

I'm dropping a note here so I can find it again later. This definitely looks interesting. Thank you, Szeraja!

5ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Dimidov 11 2

You say

--

"Objects usually follow the verb: я вижу собаку 'I see a dog', я понимаю грамматику 'I understand the grammar'.

But when object is a pronoun, it usually precedes the verb: я его знаю 'I know him', я ничего не вижу 'I see nothing'."

--

'Nothing' is not a pronoun, I believe, so unless you were referring to "I/Я" - which seems doubtful given the construction of the previous sentence - this appears inconsistent. Unless 'ничего' is special in Russian in that it counts (or can count) as a pronoun, maybe?

The rest seems pretty clear - though, not directly usable by me (I'll get there!) - except for the last part about ли. I'll have to reread it a few more times to see if I can grok it.

Благодарю!

4ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 72

Hello! Thanks for your feedback.

'Nothing' is not a pronoun

Ничто/ничего is a negative pronoun in Russian (well, it's even declined like the pronoun что).

Actually, English dictionaries also say it's a pronoun: <http://www.thefreedictionary.com/nothing> (although I agree that it's much less clear since it's not derived from a pronoun, like «ничто» is derived from «что»; it's derived from the word 'thing', which is why it's pretty confusing).

I'll need to rewrite the text to make it clearer.

The rest seems pretty clear - though, not directly usable by me (I'll get there!) - except for the last part about ли. I'll have to reread it a few more times to see if I can grok it.

I'll try to rewrite it in a simpler way later.

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dimidov 11 2

I was obviously unaware. Thanks for clearing that up! I never really considered that a pronoun in English either, I now realise, so it's neat to learn about that as well.

I look forward to the updated version. Thank you for your hard work :)

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

Let's see... You have many things you call pronouns, i.e. "variables" that replace the actual thing:

Personal pronouns: I, you, he, she, it, we, they (also, their forms: me, you, him, her, it, us, them)

Demonstrative pronouns: this, that (these, those)

Possessive pronouns and adjectives: mine/my, yours/your, his/his, hers/her etc.

Indefinite pronouns: something/anything, someone / anyone (anybody), all, everyone, several, little etc.

Negative pronouns: no one, nobody, nothing, none

Relative pronouns (introduce a noun clause): that, who, which, whoever etc.

Now, there are things that are not proNOUNS but still have some qualitties and/or can form a system in a language that extends the pronouns system nicely. Their classification might depend on the language. For example, in Japanese "here", "there", "where" and "whereever" will work the same as "this"/"that"/"what"/"whatever" and so on.

Question words: what, why, which, how, who, where, when Adverbial "pronouns" like "always", "here", "never", "in no way", "in some way", "some time", "for some reason". English does not even have stuff like "nohow", "somewhen" or "somewhy".

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dimidov 11 2

I've never counted anything except personal, demonstrative and possessive. My English teacher would die of shame. XD; Благодарю, Shady_arc! I'll peruse that link.

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

Somehow, I do not remember ever inserting that link. :)

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

Dimidov 11 2

Wherever it went, I do not know, but here it is again:

<http://grammar.yourdictionary.com/parts-of-speech/pronouns/relative-pronoun.html#wPJ3VKQemJropRwM.99>

If you removed it for being irrelevant (hah, not so relative, these relative pronouns), I can make it disappear again as well, I suppose. :)

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

Well, I googled a number of different pages to see what is normally considered a pronoun in English and what isn't. I have no idea why this particular link ended up in the post. The terms I searched include "negative pronouns", "indefinite pronouns", "relative pronoun", "english pronouns", and, of course, I used Oxford Dictionaries, too.

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

mosfet07 25 19

There are also reflexive (*self) and determinative (the same, *self).

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

AnaPaulaLelis 13 7 7 6 2 2

You don't need to do that, you can just click in "following discussion" on the top. Very simple.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

mohamadzar4 9 7 2

ok

-2ReplyGive Lingot5•10 months ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

A brilliant article, thank you very much!

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Theron126 25 21 16 15 4 2

I will definitely peruse this later. Thanks for putting it together!

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Theron126 25 21 16 15 4 2

Having gone through it - I hope this gets stickied. This is great.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mohamadzar4 9 7 2

ok

1ReplyGive Lingot5•10 months ago

[deactivated user]

Thank you for your time and trouble.

3ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

[deactivated user]

Thanks, that's helpful :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

Immanueldavid 15 8 1

thank you

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

NickRuiz3 9 6 2

Спасибо!

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

homka89 16 11 4

Позвольте немного поправить вот эту часть текста:

1) When I say, 'My sister is the architect', you know that there's some architect mentioned before, and new information is that this architect is actually my sister. So, in Russian we place new information towards the end of the sentence: Моя сестра — архитектор. 'My sister is an architect.'

в фразе " моя сестра - архитектор" нет никакой информации, что уже упоминали ранее о каком-то архитекторе. Тут другой смысл, имеется ввиду "моя сестра по специальности (работает) архитектором, что она и есть архитектор

2) — Какой моя сестра́ архите́ктор? 'What architect is my sister?' не совсем корректно, (так обычно не говорят), What (какой) лучше ставить на 3 место в этой фразе - Моя сестра какой архитектор? и тогда слово известный (famous) логично ставить на третье место в ответе вместо вопросительного слова "какой" : - Твоя сестра - известный архитектор Или еще можно сказать - Какой архитектор моя сестра?

2ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

tara668 24 22 18 16 15 12 7 6 6 6 5 5 864

Possible typo in 5: (end of 2nd paragraph) 'Is my sister (is-->an) architect?'

Thank you for all this!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DoloresMartyn 2 2

Thanks for the detailed post, will definitely find this useful in the future! I just started duolingo with the Russia written in phonetic English and want to change it to cyrillic. Anyone know how to do this?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Theron126 25 21 16 15 4 2

Yes. In the top left corner of the screen there should be a little slider Аа-Яя. Slide it to Яя and it will change to Cyrillic.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DoloresMartyn 2 2
Thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

alkajugl 24 21 21 15 44

Hello, Theron126. I have just returned to Duolingo after an illness, and I find so much that is different. For example, the skills are presented in English transliteration, and there is no "little slider" at the top of the screen (or anywhere else) to enable Cyrillic. I am used to reading Russian in Cyrillic, and I sometimes find it hard to understand the transliterations. I have searched for a solution, but I don't seem to find any...But just now I went back and, yes, it's in Cyrillic. I don't know how it happened. There's still lots I don't understand (Sticky??), but at least I can read the exercises.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Theron126 25 21 16 15 4 2

Sorry for the belated response. I've been away myself for the last couple weeks - in Russia! :-))) The slider to switch alphabet is located above the left end of the progress bar, next to the "Tips & Notes" button, when you're doing a lesson.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•6 months ago

KZYJT10 7

Awesome thank you for this!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alexandre28v 14 9 8 3
very helpful

1ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

YamiSeif 6 3 2
loved it!!!!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

wayne902574 9 3 3 2
Interesting.

In Russian, is grammar important like it is in English? I.e., there are times in English when grammar is more important than communicating.

Is Russian more focused upon communicating the content, or is it more focused on proper grammar?
Regards,

wayne

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Shady_arc 13 13 11 6

You know, that is a really odd question. Communication in a language IS grammar and syntax.

This being said, native speakers of any language make some mistakes when building sentences in real time. If you check a transcript of a conversation with speakers involved they will, probably, realise that they would change from 1% to, maybe, 10% of all words if they had time to build their utterances (in a real conversation, though, you time is rather limited).

the exact percentage depends on the circumstances and on how prepared the speakers were. A person giving a speech at a conference will make very few mistakes, only occasionally stuttering or using a wrong word.

12ReplyGive Lingot1•11 months ago

WxYankee 3

Thank you, it's very helpful !

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

UsernameAK 13

Used in poetry:

Белый стол (white table) = стол белый (table white)

So, adjectives (and something similar) and nouns can be swapped

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 72

That's what I've covered in section 2. Poetry is often more emotional than prose, so it uses emphatic word order more often. (Sometimes it's indeed used just to make the word fit the rhyming scheme, without any emphasis, but this is generally considered bad style.)

4ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

homka89 16 11 4

белый стол = стол белый, не важно как говорить, ясно что говорят о столе, а стол имеет белый цвет, но если Вы будете употреблять эти слова в предложении, то два этих предложения с одинаковым смыслом, но будут немного отличаться словами: 1- в этой комнате находится белый стол, 2- в этой комнате находится стол белого цвета

-1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

UsernameAK 13

а если например "в комнате этой находится стол белый"

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

homka89 16 11 4

так не говорят. Нескладно звучит. можно сказать "в этой комнате находится белый стол" или "белый стол находится в этой комнате".. в предложении прилагательное идёт перед существительным.

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

RussianHeath 15

This is very helpful, sir frog. Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

DavidJBowles 7

Very useful, thank you for this. I'll need to read it another 5 times but it's slowly, sinking in.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Andrea.Q89 9 9 7 7 4 3 2

спасибо

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Qradien 8 2

There needs to be a bookmark button. ;p

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

obladi__oblada 10 7 7 2

Thanks so much! This is very helpful and certainly will help me avoid confusion later on in the course!

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

littlegreygal 16 15 11 5

This has cleared up so many things and helped me further my understanding yet again. I'm sure I'll be referring to this obsessively as I continue learning, haha!

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

CarpeMinute 14

I have been waiting two years for someone to explain this to me. None of my Russian friends could do it so well. There is now a spot on Evernote that will be yours forever! Thank you very much!!))

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Morhow 13 11 10

The frog is right!

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

mohamadzar4 9 7 2
ok

0ReplyGive Lingot5•10 months ago

cesardazah 11 10 9 8 5 4 4 3 2 2
This cleared all my doubts, спасибо !

1ReplyGive Lingot1•10 months ago

anzhiru 11 8 8 5 2
это очень интересно. мне понравилось. в фразе Мой книги на столе. 'My books are on the table.'
почему нет "My books are on a table" и если 'My books are on the table.' хотя, почему нет "Мой книги на столе лежат"

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 72
«Мои книги на столе» может переводиться и "My books are on the table", и "My books are on a table".
«Мои книги на столе» can be translated either as "My books are on the table", or "My books are on a table".

и если 'My books are on the table.' хотя

Я не понимаю этого предложения.
I don't understand this sentence.

почему нет "Мой книги на столе лежат"

Что значит «почему нет»? Эта фраза может использоваться, когда слушатель знает, что книги на столе, но не знает, лежат они или стоят:

What does 'why not' mean? This phrase can be used, when the listener knows the books are on the table, but doesn't know if they are placed horizontally or vertically:

- Твои книги стоят или лежат? 'Are your books on the table placed horizontally or vertically?'
- Мои книги на столе лежат. 'My books are placed horizontally.'

(То есть «мои книги» и «на столе» — известная информация, «лежат» — новая информация.)
(That is, "my books" and "on the table" is known information, "lie" is the new information.)

Или же её можно использовать как шутливый ответ:
Or it can be used as a joke answer:

- Что делают твои книги на столе? 'Why are your books on the table?' (literally: 'What are your books doing on the table?')
- Мои книги на столе лежат. 'My books are placed there.' (i.e. it would mean there's no real reason to have the books on the table)

7ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

anzhiru 11 8 8 5 2

A fascinating answer! Что интересует меня в том, как объяснить использование статей на английском языке. Это кажется особенно трудным для русскоязычных. Ваше эссе "A guide to Russian word order" является первым шагом в этом направлении, но многие трудности остаются. Когда я исправляю переводы с русского на английский самой большой проблемой является статья. Я хотел бы установить некоторые полезные рекомендации для обывателя. Так что мой вопрос остается: как же дифференцироваться в русском языке между "The books are on the table" и "The books are on a table (любой)". Я предполагаю, что вы будете говорить просто использовать слово "любой" во втором предложении.

A

2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 72

Я хотел бы установить некоторые полезные рекомендации для обывателя.

Вряд ли существует волшебная рекомендация, услышав которую люди сразу же начнут употреблять артикли правильно. Тут нужна практика.

I don't think that there's a silver-bullet recommendation that would make people use articles correctly immediately. It takes practice.

Так что мой вопрос остается: как же дифференцироваться в русском языке между "The books are on the table" и "The books are on a table (любой)".

В общем случае: никак.

Generally we don't make this difference.

Конечно, можно при объяснении добавлять местоимения, например «Книги на том столе» 'The books are on that table' и «Книги на каком-то столе» 'The books are on some table', но ведь that ≠ the, some ≠ a.

Of course, you can add pronouns when translating, for example «Книги на том столе» 'The books are on that table' и «Книги на каком-то столе» 'The books are on some table', but 'that' ≠ 'the', 'some' ≠ 'a'.

5ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

anzhiru 11 8 8 5 2

Love it! Generally we don't make this difference. Of course, the factorisation (of reality) is different in Russian than in English. Конечно, факторизация (реальности) отличается на русском, чем на английском языке. Спасибо.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

vy.vy.fly 9 9 8

Большое спасибо. Very helpful!

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

DakotaFord1 17 17 17 17 15 330

Very difficult, yet rewarding language. Thank you for this great help!

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Morhow 13 11 10

You haven't tried Hebrew.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

xxBlackTies 12 9

My cousin's girlfriend grew up with her dad speaking Hebrew and we were talking about learning new languages and I mention the difficult word order in Russian and she was telling me about how difficult it is in Hebrew!

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Foxlay 14 3 3

"the russian is a beauty language" this phrase is correct?

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

anzhiru 11 8 8 5 2

Sadly no.

Correct is

"Russian is a beautiful language." Is this phrase correct?

7ReplyGive Lingot2•9 months ago

gh5908 11

Thank you for taking the time to post this!

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

toomath 18 11 9 5 3 1

Just found this. Awesome.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Mcat1130 8 5 3 2

Thank you, very helpful.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Porter.D 9 4

I like using index cards to arrange the sentences. I think it helps greatly

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

R_Andersson 12 11 4 2

Огромное спасибо за объяснение! Теперь мне понятно. Спасибо большое!

I also want to add that adjective can be succeed the noun in question when used in the predicate.
"большой дом" 'a/the big house', "красивый цветок" 'a/the beautiful flower' turns into "дом -- большой/дом -- велик" 'the house is big' and "цветок -- красивый/цветок --красив" 'the flower is beautiful.'

1ReplyGive Lingot1•6 months ago

Rizdvo 23 18 12 741
Дом велик.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

R_Andersson 12 11 4 2
Sorry. Somehow, I managed to hit the wrong key. Извините!

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

MatyldaVol 11 6 4
This is really helpful! ^_^

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

FreddyRieger 7 5 5 3 3
How do you remove a language for ex. german?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

charlie.rosario 6 6
Wow

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

john64012 9 7 5 2 2
Thanks for posting this, but another problem is moving from an English keyboard to Russian alone.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Theron126 25 21 16 15 4 2
Have you seen this? <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/11449014>

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Nemesis_NaR 25 20 12
You have sort of a typo in the part 5 - it's the sentence:

'Is my sister is architect?'

Btw - a moderator can delete this after it has been corrected.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 72

Hello! I'm planning to fix these problems and rewrite some parts completely, but I keep procrastinating this :D

5ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

mfcord 17 14 12 11 9 3 2

Please stop procrastinating, because I really want to see this awesome guide becoming even awesomER.

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

andy.brgin 7 6 2

thanks a lot!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

lindsmuggl 7

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

jenlynmor 6

Wow thank you so much for this! I was just explaining that I was confused about this very thing to my roommate.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

verminryan 15 8

Hello(привет)

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

litrobotix 7 6 5 2 2

Спасибо! Я уже знал все это, но мне было полезно повторить.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

estrados 21 17 13 8 6 4 11

excellent, thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

ElaP033 9 9 8 1

Hey, thanks a lot)))))

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

GlobalJim711 16 13 12 11 10

According to the professors at Pushkin Institute in Moscow, any sentence can easily become a question by raising the intonation up to the word/part in question and then dropping your voice. Does that make sense to everyone?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 72

Yes, it's true that you can make any sentence into a question by changing the intonation.

2ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

ntrpmrfVlp 8 7 5 4 3 3 2

Technically 'a' and 'an', but I still get it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

CzegldiTam 15 12 6 5 67

Thanks! That's helpful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

CzegldiTam 15 12 6 5 67

really

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

tigergirl1325 5

did you learn russian? 23 day streak cool

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

paogarmend 5 4 2

Thank you!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

ReyJaySoundsOkay 25 18 17 15 13 13 12 12 9 9 9 7 7 7 6 6 5 4 3 3 3 3 275

Thank you so much for this <3

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

348 Hours left?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7268609>

Greglhnen 22 10 3

On my "home" page I have a place where it says "hours left" and a number. I haven't been able to find an explanation of what that means. Is that how many hours left I have today, or till I reach full strength?

Give Lingot

82 years ago

Leave a new comment

15 Comments

Artilex 25 6 2

It's hours left to complete your daily goal.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Greglhnen 22 10 3

That can't be. My daily goal is 50 xp. I have 118 and it says "xp goal met". Is there another daily goal?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Artilex 25 6 2

It is hours left to complete your daily goal, it is always there, even when you have completed your daily goal.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Greglhnen 22 10 3

OK, that makes sense. Not. So it's the time left to complete the goal I've already completed. Sounds like a bug. Or maybe a glitch. I do love DuoLingo, and it's free! How do they make money? Volume?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Carcj 11 4

It's not a countdown of time to complete goal, rather than a countdown of the Duolingo day, and time you have to get XP counted towards that day.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Greglhnen 22 10 3

Thanks. Sorry I'm so thick but can you explain "a countdown of the Duolingo day, and time you have to get XP counted towards that day."?

Does that mean that I should be doing that many hours a day? For example, this morning I have before me the 50 XP that I've chosen as my daily goal. And the home page is saying I have 16 hours to go. I can achieve the 50 XP in under an hour. When I've reached the 50 XP for the day at that point it will say I've reached my goal (and it will be counted towards the day, that is it will be remember by the system which I'm assuming is what "counted" means), but after reaching the 50 XP daily goal it will still say I have way more hours left to go. Is DL saying I should be doing that many hours a day? For example, today it says I have 16 hours to go. 16 hours is a lot.

p.s. I just met my goal and I have 15 hours left to go

So I still have no idea what the time-to-go indicator is showing

-2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Artilex 25 6 2

I think that they make money mostly through the sponsored articles (Buzzfeed and CNN offers money to Duolingo to translate their articles into French)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JamesLee234655 10 3 46

I get adverts on the phone app which is fine. They are not too obtrusive which is only fair, but I don't get any on the website even with adblock disabled.

0Give Lingot•4 weeks ago

Nevlogeos 16 8 7 5 4 4 2

The full circle shows that your goal has been met- then it resets to OXP after the day has passed- good luck with your language learning experience! - Nevlogeos :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GregIhnen 22 10 3

Yes, the XP to go part is accurate, the time part is not. I would prefer to see XP to go till next level, and XP to go to completion.

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

knittinggirl 25 25 21 19 14 12 11 10 7 6 4 2 1233

They've also recently added a test centre, the aim of that is to provide affordable language certification. The emphasis on immersion seems to have drifted of late, unfortunately since I'm a bit hooked on it currently...

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZheGreatest 15 12 9 6 5

This is something that we cannot do about, until further notice ^-^ (the time part that you don't find accurate...) It is usually to keep track of XP you learn in a day, and if you want, you can calculate xp you learn in a week on a notepad or a scratch piece of paper. You can search up the problem you have in the discussion searchbar, (since it has been answered and/or checked out) :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jmeltonga 25 9 2 522

This time is helpful if you travel to a different time zone you lose hours or gain hours. I lost a streak not understanding this loss of time when traveling out west over a Christmas holiday. You may not have a "24 hour Duolingo Day" when traveling.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AndrewTayl482830 18 6 4 1

Getting a bit into the philosophy of software engineering here, but I don't think this is a good feature in terms of human-computer interaction. For months I thought this was a bug, claiming I will have learnt my language in x hours. It's confusing and not clear.

4ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

MathiasTL1 6 3

Why is there something hours left?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

349 "The storm is breaking."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/349569>

Translation: La tempête se lève.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

32 Comments

tete-carree 15 11

"The storm is breaking." is ambiguous because it could mean it is starting or that it is lifting.

25ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DarrelDent 23 69

Exactly! I said "La tempête se casse" because I took "The storm is breaking" to mean that the storm had already risen and now it is breaking (it's on it's way out).

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Procrastigator 17 15 11 7

Just as a point of information "se casser" in that meaning (going away) is a very familiar expression that would be quite out of place in a standard writing level text.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DarrelDent 23 69

Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BillPiazzetta 15 14 12 11 10 6 3

No way of knowing that "breaking" in this case has nothing to do with "casser", good thing it was the last question and I still had a heart left or I'd have been pretty pissed!

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ag3n7_z3r0 17 13 11 11 11 10 9 7 6 6 5 5 4 4 3 2 2

Yep, I wrote the same thing. I'm reporting incorrect hints.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

n6zs 25 865

Duo uses "se lève" in this context to indicate that the storm is building up or growing stronger. Apparently people who live in areas that experience this kind of thing on a regular basis are familiar with saying that "breaking" or "rising" means "growing stronger" and not "breaking up" or "going away".

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IDIOT 25 14 9 6 5

It's funny, where I'm from "the storm is breaking" is meant to imply that it's clearing. I've never heard the opposite usage. In fact, other than "the storm is coming", we don't talk about approaching storms specifically.

"A storm is brewing" or "a storm is coming" is all I've heard.

18ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaggiePye 21 8 227

Yeah, I grew up where we got the fallout from hurricanes on a regular basis (not on the coast, but close enough that we got a lot of the rain from them), and "the storm is breaking" meant that it was starting to go away.

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

audiaphilios 25 14 10 10 4 71

Yep, another hurricane-alley denizen weighing with the storm acting like a fever-- when it's breaking, you've passed the worst of it.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Martijn-J 17 1

I guess you can see it as "breaking up" and "breaking out".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

stancollins 15

"gathering" is another one.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

walcfra 24 15 12 4

¿Possible translation: "La tempête commence", since that is the meaning of "is breaking" in this context?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Procrastigator 17 15 11 7

"La tempête commence" is not technically incorrect and could be used in some contexts, but it would sound very dull in French. The usual coocurrent for this situation when the meaning is that the storm starts in earnest (i.e. the fireworks start) would be "éclater", which is why I'm quite surprised it wasn't accepted as my answer...

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mallowigi 21 20 13 11 9 8 274

Litterally yes, but it doesn't mean anything in French. Its the kind of stuff some bad translator such as Google Trad would return you :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Elyes17 11 10 8 7 3

i agree with you, and it's not just a google translation suggestion, it would make sense in spoken French as well. i suggested la tempête arrive

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

terrainsolite 25 25 8 2

Would a native French speaker possibly say "La tempête se calme" with the sense that the storm is ending?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LeblanchHer 18 17 13

Yes. I would say it

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

isaac64 22 14 13 13

Is "il y a une accalmie dans le tempête" too far from the original phrase?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

docwat69 12 12 8

Let's face it, this is just a ridiculous item to have in Duolingo. As proven by discussion before, it's utterly ambiguous what it means, can be expressed in umpteen different ways once you've decided what "breaking" means, and is something you would NEVER even say anyway unless writing a work of literature. Needs to be removed as a question.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kmajaa 20 18 14 10 4 1

I'm not a native speaker of either English nor French and yet it seemed natural to me that The storm is breaking means "The clouds are gathering, there will be a storm" and I'm sure I've heard it many times used in this context (well, I must have learnt it somehow) so I don't think it's so unusual.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

nate.pepli 20 19 689

As a native speaker of English, i agree with the others above. Duo has it backwards. A storm breaking would mean it is ending. I have never heard it used any other way. Dawn "breaking" means it is starting, however. Just weird idiom type phrases that can be difficult to translate.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ronnie-JA 25 8 2

The French phrase seems more ambiguous than the English, but the English phrase definitely means beginning (in BE). If we want to say the storm is ending we would say "It's lifting". In my head, a storm builds and builds before it breaks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KaitteKat 24 13 8

I actually have no idea what "breaking" means in respect to the weather. It's not a term I would ever think of to use anyways. Maybe this sentence should be changed to something like "The storm is getting worse".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

marksem 12 2

Is it fair to say that with reflexive verbs, the reflexive component substitutes for the verb être? In this case the "se" replaces est?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LolPepper 14

No, not at all. The present participle in English corresponds to the French present tense, so:

"He is reading" = "Il lit" (and NOT "il est lisant")

"He is talking" = "Il parle"

"He is washing (himself)" = "Il se lave"

"He is getting (himself) up" = "il se lève"

Notice the absence of "être" in all the French cases.

6ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Pat_Mara 12

Or how about "la tempête se diminue"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Batomouch 25 25 25 25 25 11 10 8 3 2 9

No, In French we do not say "se diminue" but "la tempête diminue, décroît" or as terrainsolite says "la tempête se calme". Have fun with Duolingo Pat_Mara :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HughGreer 16 8

I said 'l'orage éclate'. I think this should have been accepted, especially in light of the confusion over whether 'breaking' means starting or finishing!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dogmama75 24 7 2 2

I had to look this up because the translation here was "the storm is getting up" - which is an example of how a direct translation doesn't work. My immediate next available sentence (that made sense to me) was "The storm is letting up" - which is the opposite of what this French phrase means! "The storm is getting up" is extremely awkward and unnatural English, which led me to the wrong interpretation. Frustrating! From what I understand, the translation should be more like "The storm is building" or something along those lines.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ronnie-JA 25 8 2

This exercise currently prefers "The storm is breaking" as the best answer.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

4shiloh 16 8 7 6 5 3

a storm "breaking" is the opposite of "brewing" which is what is meant by "se lever".... so not a good English translation.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

350 Hebrew Time #3: ABC ... Meet the Hebrew alphabet!

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6549884>

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3

Hello everyone!

לכולם שלום!

Shalom lekulam!

Welcome to the third Hebrew Time, our topic for today is – the Hebrew alphabet.

For those of us who are joining now – Hebrew Time is a series of weekly posts about the Hebrew language, Israel, and the Jewish people.

You can see the previous post here :

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6413112>

So let's begin :D

The Hebrew alphabet is built from 22 letters, with another 5 "ending letters" which we will talk about later.

There are two kinds of alphabet sets in use, rather like the set of capital letters "ABCDEFGH..." and lower-case letters "abcdefgh..." but in Hebrew we use them for different things. The "block" alphabet is used for printing (books, newspapers, online articles) and computer fonts and anything vaguely official. It is formed of very angular letters with lots of straight lines. The "script" alphabet is purely used for handwritten things and is much more cursive. Today we're going to focus just on the "block" alphabet.

Ok, so this is the Hebrew alphabet:

Alef: א

Pronunciation: "A" – usually pronounce like "A" in English.

Examples for words: אדם (Adam) – Human; אבא (Aba) – Father.

Beit: ב,בּ

This letter has two forms which are different in their pronunciation.

For :בּ

Pronunciation: "B".

For :ב

Pronunciation: "V".

Examples for words: בית (Bait) – House; בלון (Balon) – Balloon; (At the beginning of words you only usually get the stopped form "b". This generally applies to all the letters with a stopped form and a vocal form).

Gimel: ג,ג'

For ג:

Pronunciation: "G".

Examples for words: גמל (Gamal) – Camel; גשם (Geshem) – Rain.

For ג':

Pronunciation: "J".

This form is used in Hebrew to pronounce words which are not originally from Hebrew but from other languages.

Dalet: ד

Pronunciation: "D".

Examples for words: דלת (Delet) – Door; דשא (Deshe) – Grass;

Hey: ה

Pronunciation: "H".

Examples for words: הולנדית (Holandit) – Dutch; התקדמות (Hitkadmut) – Progress.

Vav: ו

Pronunciation: "V".

Examples for words: וירוס (Virus) – Virus; וילון (Vilon) – Curtain.

Zayin: ז

Pronunciation: "Z".

Examples for words: זרם(Zerem) – Stream; זז(Zaz) – Moving.

Chet: ח

Pronunciation: "Ch".

Examples for words: חיים(Chayim) – Life; חלום(Chalom) – Dream.

Tet: ט

Pronunciation: "T".

Examples for words: טווס (Tavas) – Peacock; טור(Tur) – Column.

Yod: י

Pronunciation: "Y".

Pronunciation: ילד(Yeled) – Boy; יהלום(Yahalom) – Diamond.

Kaf: כ, כּ

This letter has two forms which are different in their pronunciation.

For כּ:

Pronunciation: "Ch".

For כ:

Pronunciation: "K".

Examples for words: כלב(Kelev) – Dog; כדור(Kadur) – Ball.

Lamed: ל

Pronunciation: "L"

Examples for words: למד(Lamad) – Learned; לא(Lo) – No.

Mem: מ

Pronunciation: "M".

Examples for words: מידע(Meyda) – Information; מילה(Mila) – Word.

Nun: נ

Pronunciation: "N".

Examples for words: נכון(Nachon) – Correct; נשמה(Neshama) – Soul.

Samech: ס

Pronunciation: "S".

Examples for words: סמל(Semel) – Symbol; סליחה(Slichah) – Sorry.

Ayin: ע

Pronunciation: "Ah" -> this pronunciation doesn't exist in English and is more typical for Semitic languages. It is similar to Alef: א, but it's pronounced further back in the throat, a guttural "A". The majority of the general Hebrew-speaking population make no distinction between the pronunciation of ע and א.

Examples for words: עולם(Olam) – World; עברית(Ivrit) – Hebrew (=

Pey: פ, פּ

This letter has two forms which are different in their pronunciation.

For פּ:

Pronunciation: "F".

For פ:

Pronunciation: "P".

Examples for words: פרפר(Parpar) – Butterfly; פשוט(Pashut) – Simple.

Tzadik: צ, צ'

For צ:

Pronunciation: "Tz".

Examples for words: צרצר(Tzartzar) – Cricket; צלם(Tzalam) – Photographer.

For צ' :

Pronunciation: "Ch" -> like in the English word "Change".

This form is used in Hebrew to pronounce words which are not originally from Hebrew but from other languages.

Kuf: ק

Pronunciation: "K".

Examples for words: קוף(Kof) – Monkey; קשר(Kesher) – Contact.

Reysh: ר

Pronunciation: "R".

Examples for words: ראש (Rosh) – Head; ראשון(Rishon) – First. As discussed in the comments of the first Hebrew Time, this “r” is pronounced right at the back of the throat, similar to the German “r”.

Shin: ש, שׁ

This letter has two forms which are different in their pronunciation.

For ש:

Pronunciation: "Sh".

For שׁ:

Pronunciation: "S". Nowadays this is identical to Samech ס but it’s like this - as with many other “duplicate” letters - because of historical reasons.

Examples for words: שלום(Shalom) – Hello; שיר(Shir) – Song; שחקן(Sachkan) - Player.

And the last letter –

Taf: ת, ת'

For ת:

Pronunciation: "T".

Examples for words: תודה(Toda) – Thank you; תמיד(Tamid) – Always.

For ת':

Pronunciation: "Th".

This form is used in Hebrew to pronounce words which are not originally from Hebrew but from other languages. (Fun fact: Historically ת used to be pronounced “th” depending on its position in the word, but it’s no longer the case, which is why we’ve ended up with two “t” sounds. Compare the word “Sabbath” to the Hebrew word שבת - “shabbat”).

Ok, now you know the Hebrew alphabet!! Yay!

Now, as I said we will talk about "Ending letters":

When 5 of the letters in Hebrew come at the end of the word, they look differently (but pronounced the same - like the Greek sigma σ/ς).

The letters are: כ(Kaf) , מ(Mem), נ(Nun), פ(Pey), צ(Tzadik).

Their ending letters looks like this:

כ -> ך

מ -> ם

נ -> ן

פ -> ף

צ -> ץ

You now know the Hebrew alphabet!! -> If you have any questions you can ask freely in the comments or privately, we will be happy to answer :D

(Some of you might be aware that some of the letters are pronounced differently when they act as vowels and wondering what is going- this is beyond the scope of today's course:) Today we were just focussing on learning the actual alphabet and the pronunciation of the letters as consonants:)

Before we finish, here is a children song in Israel for the Hebrew alphabet :) :

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XtDIFvN05oc>

And we can't finish without telling you:

להתראות!

Le'itraot! = See you later!

This was the third Hebrew Time, I hope you had a great Hebrew Time and learned a lot !

Support the future Hebrew for English speakers course so we (the future Hebrew team) will be able to work on it !

If you are a Hebrew speaker - contribute to the Hebrew for English speakers course in the Incubator and help us (:

<http://incubator.duolingo.com/>

Thanks for MaeMcA (<https://www.duolingo.com/MaeMcA>) from our Hebrew course future team, for helping me to write this post :D

That's it! Good Afternoon!

טובים צהריים!

Tzohoraim Tovim!

Give Lingot11
352 years ago

Leave a new comment
48 Comments

MusingThoughts 11 4 2
Love the series! Keep it going!

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ibizacm2 6
yeah I agree

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaeMcA 20 8 4
We will :):):):)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EmmanuelBouh 24 15 12 11 7 5 4 2 2 823
Have you already applied to the Hebrew for English speakers course? I applied a few months ago and I think we almost have enough volunteers to start.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3
Yea I applied for a few times... And I think too (:

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MusingThoughts 11 4 2
Wow what's with Duolingo? So many have applied and still no Hebrew

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

degua 15 9 6 5 2
It takes a lot of work, time, and manpower to add a course to Duolingo. Even if there are more than enough qualified applicants, it's still far more complicated than that.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MusingThoughts 11 4 2
Oh ok.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

memyself9 13 8 7 6 2
did any of you wrote that he wants to be a moderator? maybe that's why they don't let us create the course. by the way I also applied.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3

The working process for this course is doing well.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaeMcA 20 8 4

I think there are probably hundreds of people who have already applied! It's not a matter of volunteers, I don't think. The mysterious workings of the incubator...

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MusingThoughts 11 4 2

Yes I've heard of an English for English speakers course. Crazy and creepy at the same time

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ibizacm2 6

Thanks that really helped me and im jewish to!!

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MDoeNJoe 10 8 6 5 4 4 1

תודה רבה תודה Thank you. Lets hope the incubation begins soon. (Excuse me if my hebrew is horrible)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TatianaBoshenka 25 12 8 2 127

This was interesting! I'm looking for my 2017 language (I'm planning on doing one language a year) and it might be Hebrew.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OhHan 12 11 8 7 6 5 4

Thank you for a great explanation! May I ask a question? Is Ancient Hebrew and Modern Hebrew(which I believe what you are explaining is) very different? Or if one knows Modern Hebrew, does that make him/her way much easier to learn Ancient Hebrew?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lolalilach 12 11 10

we understand most of it , kind of like Shakespearean English vs modern English

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3

Hey (:

We do understand Biblical Hebrew (Ancient Hebrew), but there are some words and phrases that are not being used today, or words that are used, but due to the technological advances and multiple job options, those words are not necessary used when working (usually professional words which are connected to roles that are not relevant for today, or many people don't work anymore - like agriculture).

Another thing is the grammar - it has changed in many parameters and subjects (verb forms, sentence structures, tenses and more).

An interesting change is something called "the dual form". This form describes nouns in couples, and it was used in the Biblical Hebrew and some other periods in the past (there was Singular - Dual - Plural). In the Modern Hebrew we can see in some words the dual form which is used as plurals - for example body parts that come in couples (lips, eyes, hands, legs etc.).

The only subject that kept the idea of Singular - Dual - Plural is time. For example there is in the Modern Hebrew words for tomorrow and in two days, words for year - two years - years etc.

I hope that I answered your question properly (:

Thanks for your support!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OhHan 12 11 8 7 6 5 4

Thank you lolalilach and DvirBartov for your explanations :) I look forward to Hebrew course!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SparklieSpeak 21 7 6 4

Hi, just wanted to add my two cents :) I speak Modern Hebrew and I teach Biblical Hebrew at A-level (in UK) and knowing one definitely helps with the other. My MH speaking pupils find BH much easier, and they all agree that BH helps with MH. They complement each other well but there definitely are differences between the two - MH as a spoken language was formed relatively recently whereas BH is completely based on the text from Tanach (the Bible). I find it very interesting :) and I love the grammar!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OhHan 12 11 8 7 6 5 4

Thank you for your reply SparklieSpeak :) I can see how much you love your language. I wish I get a chance to read the Bible in Hebrew in the future

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ziuh 4 3 2

As always very interesting thank you! I can't tell you how many times I've had the aleph bet shoved in my head never seems to stick though :/

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nFaele 6

Which "th" is ת? Like that in "thigh" or in "thy?" Or both?

For ך and כ, I'm not sure "ch" is the best representation of the sound to put here. True, that's the most common way of transliterating it, but beginners may think it to be the sound in "chair", not in "loch" or "Buch."

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MusingThoughts 11 4 2

Yes I've read on a website that the ch is like the German ich

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3

Hey!

Yes about the ת, both.

About the Ch - I agree, I thought about it when I wrote this, but this is the best way of teaching it..

When we make a Hebrew course we will have also the voice part, this one will put things clearly.

Thanks for the comment (:

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MusingThoughts 11 4 2

Yes that's good :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alex_tv80 12 11 10 10 9 8 7 6 5 4

Thank you! It would be great if Hebrew course apperaed

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SarahBecraft 15 13 12 5 2 2

Thank you! I already had a grasp of the letters but I really want to learn modern Hebrew.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SDPhil 13 11 10 6 5 3 2 68

Thank you for these lessons :) I hope a Hebrew course starts soon.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Brina431719 23 17 12 6 5 837

Toda! Another great lesson from the future Hebrew team :) I knew most of this already having learnt Biblical Hebrew as a child, but I still learnt some more. A friend recently told me about the addition to the gimmel to make it a 'J' sound, but I didn't realise that other letters could be changed in the same way too. Toda! Looking forward to lesson number 4 :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SparklieSpeak 21 7 6 4

The 'א that has a 'J' sound is in Modern Hebrew. This sound is sometimes produced in Biblical Hebrew too; some Jewish communities (eg Yemenites) pronounce a gimmel with a dagesh (a dot in the middle) as a 'J'.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Brina431719 23 17 12 6 5 837

I wondered if that may have been the case. Thanks :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Azure_Waters 25 23 22 12 12 11 10 6 2

So cool! (: In Persian, we say Tavoos when referring to a peacock! Neat! Awesome similarities (:

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MusingThoughts 11 4 2

Yes Persian incorporated a lot of Arabic loan words though it is still an Indo European language. And of course Arabic and Hebrew are closely related :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Azure_Waters 25 23 22 12 12 11 10 6 2

That is the truth! (:

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MusingThoughts 11 4 2

It sure is! I'd love to see both Arabic and Hebrew here on Duolingo :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Azure_Waters 25 23 22 12 12 11 10 6 2

Personally I would love to see a Persian course here, though I am fluent in the language! =D

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MusingThoughts 11 4 2

The sane way I would love to see an Igbo course though it is my native language :)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

AmirLFC 17 16 12 11 3 445

מעולה עבודה. מצויין פוסט!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3
תודה !

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

at2004 25 14 11
Great work ! I find that 'Kh' better represents the 'ח' sound. Same goes for 'Ts' for the 'צ' sound.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3
That's right.. It is similar, but the "ch" is used more often in order to describe the letter "ח".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SparklieSpeak 21 7 6 4
I only found these "Hebrew Times" today and I'm so excited! I love Hebrew, I hope it makes it into the incubator. I did apply to contribute... waiting for a response :)

כיף איזה!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 10
Eeeee תודה רבה I am mostly self taught with Hebrew so while I'm hoping to see a Duolingo course eventually, it's really exciting to see people willing to help potential Hebrew speakers. I should probably attempt a little here, make myself have a go. עברית אוהבת אני, אנגלית מדברת אני, שרה אני. רוסית מדברת אני... Okay, it's somehow messing with my word order (there's an אני in there that is in totally the wrong place, grrrr) so I will stop here, but this is me (hopefully) explaining what languages I do speak and my appreciation for Hebrew! I will be watching out for more posts in this series. להתראות! (And my exclamation mark is in the wrong place can I growl in Hebrew? גרררררר

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BartiBar 20 14 8 8 5 4 3
Hey!

Thanks for the support :D

The אני is the right place =) your sentences are alright!

And yes there is a problem with the text alignment in Duolingo - it can't align to the right...

So this is the reason why the exclamation mark is in the wrong place, I hope that right alignment will be supported in the future (:

Thank you!

רבה תודה!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 10

I think it must be a combination of that and this screen, it's split up part of one of my sentences which is really weird...! Maybe it will encourage me to find and install Hebrew on my laptop which might work better...

So cool to see so much interest in Hebrew, I would be so thrilled to see Duolingo let you guys get started on a Hebrew course - here's hoping! תודה :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JessePaedia 18 15 12 11 4

Toda, great post.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

YoavCarmel 12 9

במילה למשל כמו) הסופית בצורתן לא הן, בדגש הן אבל מילה בסוף נמצאות כ או פ שכאשר תשכחו אל רק (קטשופ

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

351 The languages of "The Revenant": how to revitalize Pawnee, Arikara or Native American languages

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/13648316>

doktorkampi 15 14 11 10 10 10 9 6 4 4 4 2

I recently watched "The Revenant" movie and I really enjoyed it. One of the things that I liked as a language lover is to hear Pawnee and Arikara, two Native American languages. These two jewels are critically endangered. I know that some efforts have been made in order to preserve these and other Native American languages. There are many people trying to bring Cherokee to Duolingo, which would be absolutely great. But what are the strategies that should be implemented to revitalize these languages? I found out that there are some Arikara apps and a Pawnee language program, but I am not confident enough about their success. I know that each language has a specific situation, but maybe the USA and Canada could have a common strategy.

Any Native American here?

Give Lingot

301 year ago

Leave a new comment

6 Comments

Lezlie2k2 16 15 15 13 10 2 6

The best way to revitalize a language is to teach it to the very young and give them an incentive to use the language later in life.

14ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kuah 14 7 5

I think Lezlie2k2 hit the nail on the head - the only approach that will work in the long term is for people to learn the language early and see a benefit to using it. Every purportedly successful revitalization program has had this at its core, with specific methods including compulsory education, production and distribution of learning materials, or cultural happenstance.

As far as learning materials - I also noticed a few apps that are specific to North American native tribes' language. There are also a few general programs aimed at language preservation, mostly through the creation of archives. There are a few projects I have happened across that purport to achieve this goal. One is Wikitongues (<http://wikitongues.org/>), and they aim to obtain live recordings of people speaking various endangered languages. I don't know much about the topic of language preservation, so you may take my opinion with a grain of salt, but I would imagine this approach to be the best of several. Any other approach I can think of is either more labor intensive (e.g. building detailed language courses), does not capture the full language (e.g. written preservation will fail to convey speech patterns fully), or relies on factors that are difficult to control (e.g. people happening to take an interest in the language).

Interestingly, when I looked at this topic and did a follow-up search, I found that this approach (archiving) is the approach suggested by the Administration for Native Americans. They even published a detailed guide on the construction of such databases and the associated cost estimates. In case you are interested the report is titled "Native Language Preservation: A Reference Guide for Establishing Archives and Repositories." If you google it you can find a PDF copy.

In case you are interested: an allegedly successful approach (in progress) to revitalization of a "much deader" language than Pawnee and Arikara is detailed in an article I found about a language called Wopânâak - <http://www.yankeemagazine.com/article/features/wampanoag-language> - which might serve as a good template for other such efforts if it is working as well as claimed.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

doktorkampi 15 14 11 10 10 10 9 6 4 4 4 2

Thanks, kuah. I knew about Wikitongues (you can find there people speaking Catalan in many different dialects), and it is a great initiative. I am always saying that language immersion education is one of the greatest tools for language revitalization. North America needs this programs in order to save its heritage. And this means less English and more Native American languages.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Cinnsealai 19

with us native people. we do have our own language programs etc. and they are kept with in the communities. and many of the can have us speaking fluently in 2 years. but they are programs only for native people. and it is working . there maybe some communities that would probably want to use duolingo. I stress probably

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

352 – 390 of 912

[accessed March 15, 2017]

352 Placement Test

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2896317>

ronathanfox 7

I made some silly mistakes on my Spanish placement test because I was rushing. Can I retake it?

Update: Guys, come on. Four downvotes? I'm not talking about school... >_<

[duolingo.com/placement/\[two-letter language ID\]](#)

Get your facts straight.

Give Lingot

252 years ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

MrGeckoTS 11 10 5 4

Well, the answer is actually quite simple. You go to your settings, then delete Spanish, and then retake it. Your level will not be lower or the same. However, the placement test's difficulty calculating system is a little bad if you ask me. Sometimes they'll ask me something easy then jump immediately to hard and vice-versa, or they might always ask easy things throughout the entire test. I've been taking it for the past few hours. I am fluent in Spanish, but according to duolingo, I'm not. It is quite [quite quite quite quite quite] frustrating, but persistence is key!

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pollyspielman11 7 6 2

I think you can delete Spanish from your languages and re-select it as a new course, then you can take the test again. But I think you will lose all Spanish lesson history and related points?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ronathanfox 7

I don't want to take the risk of getting the same or lower level.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

angel194462 15 3

Hi ronathanfox! Are you talking about the Certificate Test on DuoLingo? If yes, then yes, you can retake it by visiting the Lingot Store and paying 25 Lingots for it. However, if you are talking about a placement test for your school education or such, then I'm afraid I can't answer you... Hope this helps! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ronathanfox 7

[duolingo.com/placement/\[two-letter language ID\]](#)

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

kezze 11 8 2

It seems like they have closed this shortcut. It redirected me to the front page.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nrsmac 13 7 2

Idk. I just did it and it worked fine. The language ID for Spanish is es. For Danish, da, for German, de.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mayonnaise_Lover 9

really now? this is your father commenting, I am so disappointed in you son

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

353 "The black dog drinks water."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3156554>

Translation: El perro negro bebe agua.

22 years ago

Leave a new comment

37 Comments

YuriKovalc 8

Why is "La perra negra bebe agua" wrong?

15ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Bvaleri2100 6 3

Because Doulingo has not put the feminine in the answers. Remember that this is a computer grading you, not a human being.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

isometrusvf 9 9 6

I am fluent in French, which makes this rather easy for me. If the gender of an animal or person is not specified, always assume masculine. However, if it's a common noun, in other words, an object, then it always has a specific gender. As a rule of thumb, "el noun-o" and "la noun-a". Keep in mind, if "la perra", the gender is given; female. If "el perro", the gender can be masculine or unspecified. Similar to El niños = The boys or The children (masculine/unspec.)

9ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

Hedvighann 7

I had no idea that "el perro" and "el niños" that the gender can be unspecified :D muchas gracias! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

isometrusvf 9 9 6

If this is confusing for you, don't learn German or Swedish. German grammar has three genders, and Swedish has four! ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

solenoid.android 11 10 7

in general dog = el perro, unless specifically identified as female

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Adam_Arroyo 8

Because it states "dog" not "bitc*".

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nat22324 6

Perra is the same as bitch. It can be used to describe a female dog, nut most of time it is used in a derrogetory way. (idk how to spell derrogetory)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ArvindhMani 25 9 6 5 2

Derogatory :) (sorry, couldn't hold back my grammar nazist avatar there!)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

billy8195 14 1

DOWN WITH THE GRAMMAR REICH!!! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

d3pthcharge12 18

I would like to know this too.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

I want to know that too

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LukasPalys 5

cause thats with la and not el

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 5 hidden comments

Cabin27 16 7

I tried the feminine version as well which another Spanish program presented as also correct. Duolingo does not seem to recognize "la perra negra". Which program is right?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DongjeLee 15 7 5 3 3

This is nothing to do with the duolingo app, but on my android the Google microphone app in español colombiano cannot register "bebe" to save its life. At best it gives me «bb».

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FrederickH153791 7

I love this app. It makes so much sense now. And seeing how much other people have accomplished on here, motivates me to study harder

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaxwellRisner 7

Just out of the blue.... since orange in english is a fruit and a color, is it the same in spanish?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chriseke92 14

Precious answer stated beben not bebe got marked wrong for both

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Joycelyndaniel 15

When I place the noun before the adjective, I am given wrong. Please explain this to me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Darsovia 8 7

Porque eres una puta

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Darsovia 8 7

Es verdad, perra signiyica bitch

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DieSumpfHexe 9 8

omg, lost my heart here

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MonniMoni 11 10

I wish for some new sentences where no animals drink water or milk, especially the turtle ... Is there a way how to suggest these changes?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

llex 6

this thing is too hard get me out of here

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ARMYRANGER17 5

.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Beckster666 7 3

I accidentally put Pedro instead of perro nooooo

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ferdo76 19 18 17 13 10 4 3 3 68

Should be OK too.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iireneyy 11 3

why not perr, female dog

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Aniyah_vms 7

why is this wrong and it doesnt even make since

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

354 Acronyms for Estar / Ser

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1280064>

Trentles 14 10 9

I found these acronyms helpful when I started learning Spanish. I also find it interesting that Estar and Ser are "introduced" this late in the course. I am guessing they were going with the "you'll see it used enough that you'll get a feel for it" approach? Either way, these should help you understand and remember when they use Ser/Estar until it becomes natural.

General Ser Rule

Ser is used to classify and identify permanent or lasting attributes. If the general rule isn't specific enough for you, think of the acronym DOCTOR, which stands for Description, Occupation, Characteristic, Time, Origin, and Relationship.

General Estar Rule

Estar is used to indicate temporary states and locations. If the general rule doesn't suffice, think of the acronym PLACE, which stands for Position, Location, Action, Condition, and Emotion.

More thorough explanation (and source):

<http://www.spanishdict.com/answers/100040/ser-and-estar#.Uq5u3vRDseg>

This website is good reading for understanding Spanish grammar (also look for para/por uses and acronyms)

Give Lingot3
123 years ago

Leave a new comment
7 Comments

sakasiru 22 11 9
Someone around here once posted the rule "for what you feel and where you are, always use the verb estar". It helped me pretty well so far.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CattleRustler 19 12 1056
that site is great in general. I use it all the time. Great verb conj section, with all possible conjugations for every verb

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

VivianMirz 17
Thanks this is very helpful

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MystyrNile 14 8 7 5 4 3
If you use a noun, it's almost always ser.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

geraldmkj 10 8 3
Not necessarily. A noun/pronoun is a necessity to ANY sentence, and every sentence does not use ser in Spanish. An example, 'Yo estoy contento.' A subject (which is a noun), and a verb (which is a conjugated form of estar), could complete a sentence (e.g "I run")-but in this case an adjective is needed to complete the sentence-which thus disproves your hasty generalization.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

alexar12 8
GRACIAS

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

gigatiger 9
thanks

-1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

355 "The woman is eating bread."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1801895>
Translation: Die Frau isst Brot.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

23 Comments

FandomFreak7 18

Why is it 'die' instead of 'das'? Is 'das' neutral and 'die' feminine?

34ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

drcjones 8 6 3

If you ask why it is die Frau instead of der Frau...

"der" is the dative case of "die". "Der Frau" means "to the woman". So it's used to describe something about or doing something towards the woman.

For example "Der Frau ist warm" literally means "to the woman (it) is warm". The sentence is perfectly correct and is normal German for "The woman feels warm". So in this case "der" is the feminine dative and genitive article (rather than the masculine nominative).

Other example: Ich gehe mit der Frau. Die Frau geht mit mir.

17ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Colmanian 4 3

what a nice clear explanation of the dative case! I've read a few explanations but I think I finally understand after reading this. Danke!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

drcjones 8 6 3

I'm glad it helped you. I had to do a good amount of research to make sure I was understanding it correctly. It's such a different/new concept than anything I've learned in other languages.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KeithWagen 3

As it was just explained to me: Die is feminine (female) Der is masculine (male) Das is like English "the" lamp or "the" car (neutral like you say)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

SamiJeanC 9

Why is it "isst" instead of "esse" or "essen"?

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

qbufm07 22 19 12 11 32

It is basic subject-verb conjugation of "essen" (to eat); Ich esse, du isst, er/sie/es isst, wir essen, ihr esst, sie essen. <http://www.vocabulix.com/conjugation/essen.html>

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DennisMouz 5

I get confused when to use die and das

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mariamelar1 3

Hahaha is not easy to learn german,very hard

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AustinSmit16 9

Im taking German in school and my teach said that you just have to learn the ders dies and dases. She said there is no definite way to tell

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

super.serial 8

This site has some good general tips for guessing noun genders:
<http://german.about.com/library/weekly/aa042098.htm>

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZoeJiang_ 2

what is the difference between ist and isst when we read them

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KamalH 2

why not using esse?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

butternextgen

thks KeithWagen for the help i now understand the 3 genders of german

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

stonephoenix 6

How to pronounce Brot? /Br'ot/?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AustinSmit16 9

Can't it be Das Mädchen instead of Die Frau

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kmilroy 6 6 6

Das Madchen would be the girl whereas Die Frau is the woman

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TaviRenae 7 3 2

Why is it "Die" instead of "Das"?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zimirzrush 7

Why do we have to use "die" for a woman and "der" for a man?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LisadeGrey 10 6

Die is feminine and der is masculin

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MilanDrobn 7 3

Why not - Die Frau isst ein Brot.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CheekotiVi 4 2

I got it right as die but it says basybut das id nuetral right

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

356 "Whose are the shoes?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3481767>

Translation: ¿De quién son los zapatos?

12 years ago

Leave a new comment

25 Comments

Laedyventris 10

Why does it provide ser....

13ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Aellai 7 6

<http://www.studyspanish.com/lessons/serest1.htm> may help with the difference between ser and estar.

If you were asking why ser and not son, the program seems to always provide the unconjugated form. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lestibournes 11 10

Can someone please explain why "los zapatos son de quien" is wrong?

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rspreng 24

In Spanish questions usually begin with the 'question word/s'

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Julian_L. 10 6 6

You could to say «Los zapatos esos/estos son ¿De quién?», but is more natural to start with the question using «¿De quién... ?»

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Niki_Dixon 8

It provides "ser" instead of "son"

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

william.pa763526 11

I put Quienes sonlos zapatos?
Por que es it wrong?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gizmo4pt8 14 8 6 5 4 3

What you are asking is who are the shoes, not whose shoes are they. If there is a play about clothes with people dressed as shoes, that question would be perfect. However Duo is looking for possession here.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Julian_L. 10 6 6

Likely, because the shoes are not living beings.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hope_29 11 4

Why is Quiénes los zapatos? wrong?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hope_29 11 4

Sorry I meant Quiénes son los zapatos?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Julian_L. 10 6 6

Because «¿Quién/Quiénes... ?» is used with living beings. For speak about belonging, is used «¿De quién/quienes... ?».

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EyupG 7

Thank you so much Julian ! Now it makes sense.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TheBestOfA1 11

Why is 'de quien es los zapatos' wrong? I thought son would only be used with quienes

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Aellai 7 6

I believe that the verb is modified by the shoes, which are plural. But I could be wrong. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BeccaDuron 8

why is 'de quién son eso zapatos' wrong?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Julian_L. 10 6 6

«Eso» is singular.

«Eso» (singular) is never used before a noun.

This sentence says "the".

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BarbaraOtt2 22 8

Gracias!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RainesGary 25 2 1127

A previous correct example; De quien estan esas tazas? = Whose cups are those? Yet my answer was; De quien estan los zapatos. (Wrong?)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

-Unidentified- 14 180

WHOSE SHOES ARE THOSE? THIS SENTENCE IS NOT CORRECT.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

SergeyLari2 11 35

i said some words and the programme said I said 'We heard "¿Los zapatos de quiénes son?"' The programme made an error because it misplaced my words. This speech recognition engine should be changed for a better one.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Richardbeccaboo 16

"Whose are the shoes?" Is that even proper grammar to begin with?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tylerrl1664 17 8 4 3 3

Yes.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PostAlley3 7

Nonesensical sentences are difficult to translate.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

357 "How are the boys?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1214125>

Translation: ¿Cómo están los niños?

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

Johnny__R 23 7

Yeah, if you could let us know words like "están" exist before expecting us to know them, that'd be great.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

OthmanAsce 14

Yeah, I've been trying to use the "to be" stuff with my Hispanic friends a lot, but Duo has its own teaching style, which I call "surprise'em."

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

angel194462 15 3

:D I eventually got used to it. Don't worry, you'll eventually learn it in the "To-Be" Section.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nomism 21 14

If asking about the boys... would it not be specific boys and if so why not a los ninos?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Craig877964 15 46

I also would like the answer to this very good question.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Mark425521 22

Why not "Que instead of Como?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

57flora 24

When does one use son and estan in this. I used cómo son los niños and said another choice como estan los... can someone in the know please comment

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

alanaxcx 22 10 1

you would use "son" when asking what the boys are like all the time in terms of their personality (are they funny, smart, etc) and you would use "están" when asking what the boys are like at the current moment (are they good, bored, tired, etc).

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

358 "The girl has a dress."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/246286/The-girl-has-a-dress>

Translation: La fille a une robe.

04 years ago

Leave a new comment

45 Comments

Maris_goddes 2

why does it say that it is une not un?

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

farshad.ab 3

Because robe is feminine, you should use "une"

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

inputting

Robe just means dress and we all know that boys can cross-dress and wear dresses too so I think they should somehow change the fact that it ONLY means feminine.

-12ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

mere_des_chats 20

The fact that dresses are usually worn by women has nothing to do with robe being feminine. A blouse is often worn by women but it is un chemisier while a shirt, often worn by men, is une chemise.

11ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JRosario97 13 2 2

I feel bad for you

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

[+] 3 hidden comments

Divisiontable 4

Why is it "La fille" and not "L'fille"? Like in the masculine, L'homme, if I'm not mistaken.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mere_des_chats 20

L' is used only before words beginning with a vowel and some words beginning with H which are treated as if beginning with a vowel.

Une orange - l'orange

Un homme - l'homme

Une fille - la fille

Un garçon - le garçon

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pb2192 7

What does 'a' translate to

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

mere_des_chats 20

Well, "a" is found in both the French sentence and the English one so which one are you asking about?

One way to help your learning is to try to think first and exercise some logic before posting a question. Then your question can be in the form of "so does X mean Y?" instead of just waiting to get everything spelled out for you.

From your question, I take you know the meanings of the words la, fille, robe as being "the", "girl", "dress". So if the article "a" in English is what you are asking about and articles come before nouns, can you guess which French word translates to "a"? If the French a is what you are asking about, it means you already know what all the other words mean, so can you guess from elimination which word in the solution given this translated to?

Doing this helps you stand to understand how the grammar works and makes it easier for you to make good guesses when faced with a structure you are not familiar with. Asking to be told every little thing when it's a matter of Hobson's choice means you're just memorizing without understanding, and it will be harder to keep up as you get to the more advanced sections.

It may also help if before starting a section on a tree, you log onto Duolingo on a PC and study the Tips and Notes. This information was provided at the beginning of this lesson.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

VersailleC 11 10 4 4 3

In what situation we use the word <posede>??

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mere_des_chats 20

When the English word "own" is used.

posséder = to own

Just because she has a dress does not necessarily mean she owns it.

avoir = to have

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

UzayrSiddi 3

Difference between la le and l' ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

1132149531

la if the object is feminine, le if the object is masculine, l' if word starts with vowel l'ordinateur, la maison, le chat

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IyanlaTorr 6

I still dont get it, what is the difference with 'une' and 'un' is it like- a or an?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

mere_des_chats 20

If you can, try to access Duolingo on a PC before you start a section on the tree and scroll down below the exercises and read the tips and notes there. As you will see, the difference was explained in Basics 1: <https://www.duolingo.com/skill/fr/Basics-1>

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

1057565330 4

One is what you say if it is a girl,and Un is what you say if it is a boy.

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

n6zs 25 866

It has nothing to do with a girl or a boy. It is an article that must match the gender of the noun, e.g., un livre (m) = a book

une araignée (f) = a spider

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Chrrleaderteam 3 2 2

I don't get it first i put la fille a robe then i got it wrong it told me to put la fille une robe so i put that and they said the right answer was my first mistake

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Shayla312397 4

why is it a une?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Lylopa 8 1

Can you talk about 'has' and 'have'? I'm not sure about the rules with these two. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

ShaelinGie 5

The keys are touchy

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

AnnaBobanna 7

Don't you put something between "a" and "une"? a-t'une? been too long but I thought you put a sound between two words like that with consecutive vowel sounds.

-1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

olimo 22 22 20 19 10 9 8 7

"T" is indeed thrown in sometimes, but I can only think of questions like: La fille a-t-elle une robe? Parle-t-il français?

In this case, "t" is not added between "a" and "une".

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

inputting

What is the difference between "Une" and "Un?" Is it that Une is for girl and Un is for boy?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

1132149531

It is not for the subjects (je, tu, il, elle) it is for the object (robe, pomme, livre) eg. il a une maison (maison is feminine)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gcaee 6

Why can't I say "La fille possède un vêtement."?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mere_des_chats 20

Because your sentence translates to "the girl owns a garment/piece of clothing" which is not the same thing as the girl having a dress. Your proposal is very vague while the original sentence was very specific about the garment in question. A translation ought to not change the meaning of the original phrase.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gcaee 6

Got it, THX!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

J3sus.. 6

VPN. mnbvcxzlkhgfsapoiuytrewq if you decode this your on our team of elite hackers.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

ireneherlady0

can anyone tell me why they do une and a?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

mere_des_chats 20

You seem to be confusing the FRENCH article une (used before feminine nouns) with the ENGLISH article "a".

The FRENCH word a is the third person conjugated form of the verb avoir and it means "to have". So you need to translate every word in the English sentence into French. So "a" in English becomes une in French; and "have" in English becomes a in French.

It will help you to try to access Duolingo on a PC and study the Tips and Notes before you start the exercises in each section. If you had done that, this would all be clear since these words were introduced as early as in Basics1. Scroll down to see the notes:

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/fr/Basics-1>

https://www.duolingo.com/skill/fr/Verbs%3A-Être-_ -Avoir

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

adamsapple 2

Why couldnt it be "la femme"

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

KarikJorge 5

I understand you but "la femme" is for "the woman" and in this case we gotta use "la fille"

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

SiddharthBhat 10 5

What do 'prend' and 'veut' mean exactly and what are the contexts of usage?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Afnan_Hausa11

Prend = take Veut =want

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KaitlynLovesYou 5

I am confused why it couldnt be "un robe"

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mere_des_chats 20

@KaitlynLovesYou, get into the habit of learning nouns with their articles which show their genders. Every noun is a particular gender. Robe which means dress is feminine, and the only way to remember this is if you learn it with its article une so you can always remember its feminine. There is no method to the madness. You just need to commit to memory the genders. The more you do this, the less likely you are to forget:

une robe = a dress

une chemise = a shirt

un enfant = a child

That way whenever you hear robe you have no question in your mind that it will be:

une robe = a dress

la robe = the dress

ma robe = my dress

ta robe = your dress

sa robe = her dress

(Ma, ta, sa...are all feminine possessive pronouns you will come across later. The masculine are mon, ton, son...and they would precede a masculine noun like enfant)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AmreenSalam 7 6

What is with the pressure on the word "robe"?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mere_des_chats 20

What do you mean by pressure?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AmreenSalam 7 6

like the way they pronounce the word "robe". It needs a bit of pressure to it. its more like they pronounce it as... "hob" with a bit of pressure.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mere_des_chats 20

It sounds fine to me. It is kind of like how some people roll their R's hard so that their tongues vibrate a lot while others don't put so much emphasize in R.

Try what I do when I am speaking French: Keep your tongue tip against your bottom teeth. Without moving your tongue from there, try to say the French robe as relaxed as you would say it with but instead of pronouncing R the French way, say it as you would in English R. If you keep your tongue against your teeth the English R sound will automatically sound French. If you said it as relaxed as you would say "robe" with an English R. Doesn't it sound a little like what you heard in the exercise?

Now say it again using more air and emphasizing on the R while still keeping the tongue tip against bottom teeth, again, just the English R. Now isn't the sound of this second French R stronger? So I think the reason you heard robe, is the speaker is speaking naturally and relaxed, but the voice really did say "robe".

BTW that tip of the tongue on bottom teeth is something I do when saying something in French. It allows the accent to sound more natural. Even if you do that while reading English, to me it sounds like you have a French accent. It makes me not have to use so much force at the back of my mouth to pronounce the French R, but rather it comes out more naturally with little effort.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AmreenSalam 7 6

Okay! That actually worked. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ireneherlady0

can anyone tell me why it has an a and a une

-2ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

359 Les or Des?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3683850>

DXLi 25 3 1260

One of the most common questions I see on the English-to-French Duolingo is whether the definite article (le/la/les), partitive article (du/de la), or plural indefinite article (des) should be used. This confusion arises because you can omit articles in English, but you usually cannot in French.

Here are some guidelines on how you can use articles correctly on Duolingo. Note that native Francophones may use them differently, but Duo is very specific about their usage.

When you see an article, translate it directly. "The" will always be definite, "a" will always be indefinite (un/une), and when you see des in French, you can use "some" or just omit it in English. (There are exceptions. See below.)

When articles are missing in an English sentence, they must be added to the French translation. The definite article can be used if one of three conditions is met:

When referring to particular nouns that are known to the speakers.

Before the subject of a sentence to state general truths about it.

Before the direct object of a verb of appreciation (like aimer) to express like/dislike.

If any of the above is true, then use the definite article. Otherwise, use the indefinite or partitive, depending on whether or not the noun is countable. In most cases, use du or de la (partitive) for singulars and des (indefinite) for plurals.

I like wine, but I am drinking milk. — J'aime le vin, mais je bois du lait.

Both articles are missing in the English version of this example. Aimer expresses fondness for wine, so le vin should be used there. However, boire is not a verb of appreciation, so the partitive du should be used on the uncountable lait.

Cats are animals. — Les chats sont des animaux.

This is a general truth about cats, but #2 above can only apply to subjects, so only chats takes a definite article here. Animaux are countable, so the indefinite is used.

He likes to eat meat. — Il aime manger de la viande.

This is a tricky example because meat is the direct object of manger, not aimer. Thus, #2 does not apply and viande cannot take a definite article.

Here's another example: "Local women wear black dresses." Which articles should we use? Think about it for a moment. The correct answer is at the bottom.

Also remember:

In negations, indefinite and partitive articles all become de except with être or if you want to stress the negative aspect.

For countable nouns, sometimes "some" should be translated as quelque or certaines. These words denote some subset of a larger group.

If there's an adjective in front of the noun, des becomes de.

If you want to learn more about the partitive, look here.

Local women wear black dresses. — Les femmes locales portent des robes noires.

This sentence is making a generalization about local women, so femmes takes the definite article. Robes noires does not, however, because it's not the subject nor the object of a verb of appreciation. However, consider this similar example where les can be used on both:

Local women like black dresses. — Les femmes locales aiment les robes noires.

Give Lingot37
1672 years ago

Leave a new comment
68 Comments

susanstory 20 17 13 11 10 10 9 9 8 8 5 4 3 3 3 552
Merci beaucoup!

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1260

De rien! If you or anyone else has any ideas on confusing topics that I can address in the future, I'm taking suggestions.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Any clue where I can learn how to conjugate verbs? Are there any rules? I have such trouble when I see their infinitive states.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

Have a look at verbs and list discussions referenced here. Many verbs are regular, which means they are made of a stem that doesn't (or almost) change, it is the base that usually has -er, -ir or -re suffix added to the end of it to form the infinitive, and you only have to substitute that ending for the appropriate ending, which depends on the grammatical person and the verb tense and mood. It becomes second nature after a while. Others are irregular and should be learnt by heart. Unfortunately, there are many irregular verbs, although some still follow some patterns. Many natives have to check in a conjugation dictionary once in a while to find the correct way to write a verb, especially in seldom used tenses. A good online one is WordReference. If all of this isn't enough, have a look at this introduction to French verbs.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6
reverso.com

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

alecino 9

Sorry, but I didn't understand this statement: If there's an adjective in front of the noun, des becomes de. Could you give me an example?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

Here's one :

Des oiseaux -> De beaux oiseaux

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

alecino- When the adjective is in front of plural nouns, always de : de belles robes, de belles filles, de beaux bébés.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

robertwoo 15 2

There are also cases when articles are omitted in French as well...could you also explain these?

5ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1260

Certainement. These are pretty rare, so you'll just have to memorize them. Articles are...

Optional between être and professions. For instance, je suis médecin.

Optional between parler and the names of languages. For instance, je parle anglais. Note that this isn't true for other verbs (e.g. savoir) and that language names are not capitalized.

Optional with adjectives of number. For instance, plusieurs pays or deux chevaux. Including an article with these may be forbidden or may change the meaning.

Optional after certain prepositions. For instance, sans eau or après déjeuner.

Optional after devenir. For instance, devenir roi.

Omitted when using de to indicate a larger whole something came from, the way something was made, or the purpose of an object (see here).

Omitted after some expressions ending in de. For instance, beaucoup d'eau or avoir besoin de nourriture.

Replaced by a possessive adjective. For instance, votre chien.

EDIT: I should point out that it's not that French requires articles before most nouns, but rather that it requires determiners, which are a broader category that includes articles. Adjectives of number and possessive adjectives fall into this category. Also, this now has its own thread.

24ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

rajuncajun09 17 10 8 7 6 6 5 10

Also if a possessive is directly before a noun the article is omitted:

C'est votre chien. It is your dog.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

araparseghian 21 21 21 18 17 15 13 12 12 12 11 10 7 7 7 5 4 3 3 3 2

Optional if preceded by sans, for example "sans eau"

Optional if the verb is devenir, for example "devenir roi"

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

robertwoo 15 2

C'est tres clair, merci beaucoup!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

Thank you! I've added this discussion to this list. If anyone is interested in more grammar tips in French, check it out.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PeaceJoyPancakes 19 13 6 22

I posted a question in a lesson asking why "he often helps others" is translated to "il aide souvent les autres" (instead of "des autres"), and then I found this page -- but I don't see a definitive answer here.

I wonder if there is a definitive answer in this case, or if (a) some uses are just idiomatic, or (b) there is sometimes a choice as to whether to use les or des, depending on the speaker's own conceptualization of the matter, even though nothing really rides on the distinction.

Thoughts? Can someone set me right?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

Des autres is wrong here. We usually use les autres for both "others" and "the others". But when we explicitly want to talk about a subset of the others, des (plural indefinite article) gets shorten to de, itself elided to d' : d'autres. The only way to have des in front of autres is if this des is a contraction of the preposition de and the plural definite article les : il a peur des autres (il a peur de - les autres).

In case you'd understand better with the explanation from someone else, check the best answer to this question (in French).

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PeaceJoyPancakes 19 13 6 22

Thank you, you've explained it clearly enough for me yourself.

(However, something I find interesting about the post that you've linked to is that it reverts at times to the determiner that would be used in a "normal" case to explain what the "unusual" construction used with "autres" is getting at, if I can put it that way. In any event, I take it that "autres" can be thought of as something of a special case.)

To follow up on a couple of points, and perhaps help solidify my understanding:

If I want to say "he is afraid of others", I should say "il a peur des autres", as you've written above. And if I want to say "he is afraid of eggs", my sense is that should I say "il a peur des œufs" ("il a peur de", plus "les" because of the general sense of the sentiment). But could it possibly be "il a peur d'œufs"?

And Duolingo teaches "tuer des animaux", but I take it "tuer les autres" is the correct form with "autres", while "tuer des autres" is incorrect. But what about "tuer d'autres animaux"? Does that make sense? And what about just "tuer d'autres", using "autres" on its own as a noun? I'm guessing these last two are both okay.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

The rule is the same whether autres is a pronoun (when it stands on its own to represent some people or things) or an adjective (when it only qualifies a substantive that follows). So you are right about everything in your last paragraph (but for the fact autre can't be a noun, only a pronoun).

You can't say il a peur d'œufs for the exact same reason why you can't say il a peur d'autres. It's avoir peur de X, plus the definite article les and either the noun œufs or the pronoun autres. But when autres is an adjective and it is used with a plural indefinite article (des), it acts like any other adjective with des : des gets reduced to de (and it elides since autres starts with a vowel). See the rule about that as the last point in this article.

And about the post I linked, it's not a normal case vs an autres case, it's just showing the intermediate articles before the shortening to help us understand better.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PeaceJoyPancakes 19 13 6 22

Okay, fantastic. And right, pronoun. (But grammatically treated no differently from a noun or noun phrase, which is the sense I was getting at. Though it can be a noun, as in "the Other", says Larousse. But that's neither here nor there.)

Regarding your second paragraph, wonderful! I think I've got it, though I can almost guarantee I'll get it wrong many times in the future.

As for your last point, I see that now. I misunderstood at first, but I'm happy to have been able to read a post in French. On that note, are there any grammar books or grammar book publishers you can recommend, off the top of your head, like a Longman or an Oxford, but in and for French? It would be nice to have it all between two covers.

Thanks very much for your help!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

The reference when it comes to French grammar is Maurice Grévisse's Le bon usage, but that might be a bit overkill.

A bit more accessible (both language-wise and price-wise) is Bescherelle's La grammaire pour tous. They also make an excellent conjugation dictionary, which is the reference in the French speaking world.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

PeaceJoyPancakes 19 13 6 22
Awesome!

In fact I have a Bescherelle conjugation dictionary (borrowed, as mine from years ago seems to have disappeared), which I've always just thought of as "a Bescherelle" -- it didn't occur to me that they might publish a comprehensive grammar.

As for overkill, I'm all for it. That's a pretty steep price on the Grevisse, though! Worth it, I'm sure, but perhaps I'll get the Bescherelle for now, see how dedicated I am, and graduate to the Grevisse...

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

isobel.rose 15 3
Thank you for this. I've never understood this properly.

If you could also go over to France and ask them to simplify this damn thing a bit that would be great too, but until then, I'm going to save this and try and get it right in future!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12
Merci beaucoup ! C'est magnifique !

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

araparseghian 21 21 21 18 17 15 13 12 12 12 11 10 7 7 7 5 4 3 3 3 2
This confusion killed me all throughout high school French class. Merci beaucoup.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FKrasniqi 21 8 5 2
Merc! I've never fully understood this before!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

snorrepaatopp 14
This post was excellent! I have read the article on about.com several times, but your post was much stronger in explaining the point of generalisations. This was something that Duolingo had almost taught me, but that I had quite managed to decipher on my own. With this knowledge, I can now proceed with confidence, and perhaps stop losing some of those cheap hearts.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Beppo52 25 20 10 29
Very well written and quite helpful. I still make these kinds of mistakes, but not as often as I used to. The repetitive exposure on Duolingo is starting to give me a "feel" for it, which is what I need when speaking. It has to come naturally. But this will be helpful when writing, when I can pause to consider which article I need to use.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

katsushii 16
Salut DXLi,

J'ai un question sur utiliser les vs. des. In this sentence, « He sells vegetables in this store, » I mistakenly think it is supposed to be: « Il vend les légumes dans ce magasin. » This is because he sells vegetables (generally) in this store.

But it is supposed to be this: « Il vend des légumes dans ce magasin. »

Is this about partitive vs. definite or is it about the verb « vendre » ?

Aren't there some verbs which require de/des/d' in following, such as « manger » ou « avoir » ? Or am I still mistaken? Let me know if you need me to clarify. Merci pour votre temps.

:D

-kat

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1260

Salut Kat! C'est une bonne question. Verbs don't usually affect what article one must use. Some verbs, like aimer, happen to be associated with generalized definite articles more frequently, but that's just a coincidence.

In this sentence, you are actually not generalizing about légumes. I gave a terse explanation above that doesn't appear to be sufficient, so here's the long version: the French use the definite article for the gnomic aspect (or universal aspect), which expresses general truths. You have to be careful, because this doesn't apply to anything that we'd call a generalization in English. It can only be used to give the definite article to a particular noun when we're expressing a general and universal truth or sentiment about that noun. You'll get a better sense for this as you become more experienced in French.

So, in your example, you're correct that you're generalizing that he sells vegetables. But this doesn't state any kind of general truth about vegetables. It just means that he sells some undefined set of things that happen to be vegetables, and that's why we use the partitive des.

Now, let's say that you're explaining supermarkets to a foreigner. You say "Supermarkets sell vegetables." One of these nouns is operating in the gnomic aspect. Which one? It's certainly "supermarkets", because you're stating a general truth about them--that they sell vegetables, among other things. So this would be « Les supermarchés vendent des légumes. »

There are some verbs that require de/d' to complete a meaning, but these aren't partitive articles. They're just the preposition de. For instance, "to think about" (as in have an opinion) is penser de.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

katsushii 16
Bonjour encore DXLi, merci beaucoup pour votre réponse.

You make an entirely reasonable point that generalizations are treated/understood differently between English and French. I should get used to using the universal aspect. Perhaps this is my homework. I have to train my brain to think this way in English, so that I'll use it easily in français.

I may also have thousands of follow-up questions, the more I practice it, but this is just me thinking out loud... The more I practice it, the more I have the feel for it.

Quick thought: I want to know this, if I eat beans (generally), then would I say, « je mange des haricots, » rather than, « je mange les haricots » (the beans we're already talking about)? If I generally buy pink things, then would I say that j'achète des choses roses (heh, c'est amusant dire) rather than « j'achète les choses roses, » ... vrai ?

....And if Americans generally buy pink things, puis on dit, « Les Américains achètent des choses roses, » vrai ? Et if stores (generally) sell things, then les magasins vendent des choses.

Merci, et désolé about my ongoing confusion. I don't mean to attack the language, in case that's what it sounds like. I probably should, however, loosen my mind and practice/apprendre the universal aspect in my everyday thoughts.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1260

De rien, Kat! Vos exemples sont corrects. Vous avez appris rapidement!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Yarouge 15 10 3

"If there's an adjective in front of the noun, des becomes de."

Example, please?

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

PeaceJoyPancakes 19 13 6 22

I'm having trouble with this Duolingo question.

The English sentence is "happy employees are good employees". The default French translation is "des employés heureux sont de bons employés".

My issue is that in this sentence "happy employees" refers to the complete set of happy employees, i.e. all of them, whereas it's my understanding that the French "des employés heureux" refers to a subset, i.e. not all of them, only some.

"Les" is also accepted, but I don't understand why "des" would be considered correct, and why it would be given as the default.

Any help?

Edit: Sitesurf to the rescue!

1ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Alidun 16 8

Thanks very much for this! Usage of du/des/de and les is something I struggle with, so. :) Cheers!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

UlosteGade 8 5 4

Merci :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Abelcanchari 7

cool!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rafel3000 25 384

Merci beaucoup pour l'explication. C'est plus clair maintenant.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lolliv1234 2

Merci

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

"des" is just the plural for "un"

un livre - a book des livres - some books le livre - the book les livres - the books

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

Des can be either an indefinite article (as per your example) or a partitive one (as explained by DXLi). Although it is not always evident to tell them apart. So des can be the plural of either un / une or du / de la / de l'.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

There is an exception about the use of 'de' in negations. If the verb is être the article remains the same.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1260

Ah, thanks, forgot about that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mmadchild 17 5

Merci beaucoup. Je comprends un peu.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lelouch 25

Thanks for explaining that :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

katsushii 16

Bonjour DXLi,

J'ai un question. Il concerne 'les' vs. 'des.' DuoLingo dit : « Il cherche des mots dans les dictionnaires » traduit à « He searches for words in dictionaries. » Mais, mon question, c'est que il ne cherche pas dans toutes les dictionnaires ? Juste quelque. Aidez-moi, s'il vous plaît.

Merci et bon week-end,

-kat

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JankaStef 9

Im never gonna learn this language :D :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DesertGlass 13 10

This article is useful, but it's a shame that the only example you have given of using a definite article is with an appreciative verb, which is an unusual case. I've been desperately trying to find somewhere online which illustrates your point #1 about the "nouns known to the speaker" as I've had two friends who have formally studied French (and one is a language tutor) tell me that there is no difference in French between "ils trouvent la nourriture" and "ils trouvent de la nourriture". I was certain there was a difference, but this potentially broken question in Duolingo seemed to indicate there wasn't. Odd Question (The "answer" given at the top of the linked the forum page was ""Ils trouvent la nourriture." - no not one of the given answers - yes it did say "ils" not "elles" :-P)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1260

The OP contains three different examples of the use of a definite article, not just one, so I'm not sure what you mean by that. As far as "nouns known to the speaker", this refers to the most common use of the definite article, which is to refer to a specific thing that has been identified to all participants in the conversation.

Despite what your friends say, there is a difference between the partitive and the definite in both French and English. For instance, "the meat" is a specific, identified portion of meat, while just "meat" (or "some meat") can refer to any meat or even all meat. Consider the following examples:

Example 1: You want to ask someone if he's a vegetarian. You would ask "Do you eat meat?". Asking "Do you eat the meat?" would be silly.

Example 2: You are cooking some meat. Your friend calls you to chat. You can only say "I'm cooking the meat" if you have already mentioned it or if your friend knows about it otherwise (e.g. he bought it for you). If your friend has no idea that you have meat, you have to say "[some] meat" instead of "the meat".

As for the exercise you've posted, this is just due to inconsistencies in the course. There are thousands upon thousands of exercises in the course, all of which are manually edited. There's no word-for-word translation checking. We're working on fixing this; sorry!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DesertGlass 13 10

Thanks :-) ... so, just to clarify ... in that screenshot I posted... the "correct" answer I gave, should have been wrong, right?

Part of my friends' confusion might have been the idea that there are certain kinds of substances that you can only speak of in an undefined quantity and never in the specific (definitive). My language tutor friend said that "nourriture" is that kind of word, what he called an "uncountable noun". (He's not a native French speaker, so maybe he's rusty.)

I am very doubtful of that as I cannot think of any such concept in English, and would be surprised if French was so limited to not be able to refer to specific pieces of something physical.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1260

Aye, the correct answer should be Ils/Elles trouvent la nourriture.

You're right that there are countable and uncountable nouns, but all nouns can take definite articles. An uncountable noun with a definite article refers to a specific portion of that uncountable noun. However, uncountable nouns cannot be plural (with a few exceptions, such as pâtes), and only uncountable nouns can take partitive articles.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

The notion of uncountable nouns exists in English as well (like "water"). And countable ones can definitely take partitive articles. It's not seen often, but it can, as per DesertGlass' example. The difference is that only countable nouns can take numeral articles (usually, there are some context specific and rare exceptions, as in every French rule ;-)). It may be confusing to an English speaker because you have the distinction between the indefinite singular article and the numeral article indicating one object ("a" vs "one") whereas French only has one word for the two functions (un).

EDIT : As per DXLi's explanation, when countable nouns take a partitive article, it's because they're used as a "mass" noun, or the matter instead of the stand alone (and countable discrete) object.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DesertGlass 13 10

Great!! Thanks for taking the time to explain that. It's to Duolingo's credit that it had managed to instil this into me already so that when an inconsistent answer came up I knew something was amiss.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DesertGlass 13 10

Um, when you say "only uncountable nouns can take partitive articles" ... isn't "je mange de la tomate" using a partitive article? But "tomate" isn't an uncountable noun, just used in an "uncountable sense" ...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1260

This difference is mostly semantics. Almost all nouns that can be used in a mass sense also can be used in a discrete sense, so when we say "mass noun", it essentially means the mass sense of that noun. In your example, de la tomate means an uncountable mass of tomato, while une tomate means a particular tomato. So even though tomate can sometimes be a count noun, it is also considered a mass noun when used with a partitive.

There's some debate about whether or not countable nouns can take partitives, and most of this comes from the question of whether or not des is a partitive. Regardless, for singular nouns, partitives can only be used for mass nouns. For instance, j'ai de la robe is nonsensical.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

DesertGlass 13 10

Thanks for the info DXLi. Let me stress I'm coming at this from a completely innocent angle and have no doubt that you guys know your stuff, it's just hard to communicate it sometimes. (or maybe I'm just stupid)

I would like to ask - with the greatest respect - for you to give me a direct response on which of these two things you've said is the French rule - unfortunately to me they appear to contradict each other, leaving me confused.

a) "only uncountable nouns can take partitive articles"

b) "partitives can only be used for mass nouns"

You haven't mentioned "mass nouns" before, but I understand that "tomate":

is not an uncountable noun as it can be pluralised can be used as a mass noun as it can be described like a substance

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

BastouXII 20 12 12 11 9 8 2 688

DXLi, you are right about that (countable nouns used as "mass nouns"). And about des being a partitive, I think it can be both a plural indefinite article and a partitive one, depending how it is used.

OGive Lingot•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1260

"Uncountable noun" and "mass noun" mean the same thing here, DesertGlass. Sorry about that confusion.

Bastou, I agree with you, though the Duo French team's official stance is that des is exclusively indefinite except when used with plural-only mass nouns like pâtes.

OGive Lingot•2 years ago

DesertGlass 13 10

Aha! I'd give your post an "upvote" but that would change the response order ;-)

Going forward, I will remember the partitive rule with the term "mass noun" instead - and will define that as nouns that can either not be pluralised OR can be used as an uncountable mass. I think all the cobwebs of confusion have been swept away, and indeed it seems to match with what I thought in the first place :-)

OGive Lingot•2 years ago

timmyshanti 13 12 10 6 6 4 3 2 2

c'est incroyablement fou! =D merci

OReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JacquiKennedy 22

The logical explanations are very helpful in reaching an understanding of when to choose between these forms of an article. Over time I imagine one who is fluent is able to distinguish the correct choice also by sound, based on what one hears, having heard the correct usage before. Is there anything helpful to be said about determining what sounds right? Could there be an exercise of a series of sentences in French illustrating various guidelines, an expansion of the example above about black dresses to learn what sounds right?

OReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JacquiKennedy 22

Yarouge--I don't know the answer, that is what to write as an example of des becoming de. I lost the train of thought. I hope someone responds to your good request. I'm in over my head. Best wishes.

OReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

msinykin 14 390

Where you say:

This is a tricky example because meat is the direct object of manger, not aimer. Thus, #2 does not apply and viande cannot take a definite article.

Don't you mean #3 (vs. #2), since the issue is about aimer vs. manger?

OReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

KimSCasey 22 3

this is great. thanks. Can I suggest that simple examples be given EACH time a statement of fact is made? For example, when you say:

"When articles are missing in an English sentence, they must be added to the French translation. The definite article can be used if one of three conditions is met:

When referring to particular nouns that are known to the speakers. (PROVIDE SIMPLE EXAMPLE)
Before the subject of a sentence to state general truths about it. (PROVIDE SIMPLE EXAMPLE) Before the direct object of a verb of appreciation (like aimer) to express like/dislike." (PROVIDE SIMPLE EXAMPLE)

I know it makes the post longer, but I do really think we students would benefit from the examples.
thanks for listening

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

hunan9679 14

If I said 'Nous avons achete des bananes hier' would that be correct?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

PeaceJoyPancakes 19 13 6 22

Sure. We bought bananas yesterday. Assuming you mean "acheté".

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

hunan9679 14

Merci, PeaceJoyPancakes.=)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

PeaceJoyPancakes 19 13 6 22

De rien.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

360 What is the difference between euer, eure, and deine?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1188886>

tranmantran 7 4

Give Lingot

83 years ago

Leave a new comment

3 Comments

kiero0 13 8 2 2

euer and eure is used for plural when you are in informal situation for "you", euer is followed by masculine and neuter gender, eure is followed by feminine and plural

15ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

TDTamada 12 5 1
and the "deine"?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

mjhamiham 11
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/41500> This post answers the deine vs. euer use pretty well

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

361 "The cap, it is his."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5406652>
Translation: La casquette, c'est la sienne.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment
42 Comments

lattaquant 14 7
I am confused about the gender here. I assumed "The cap, it is his" would be "La casquette, c'est le sien". I would use "le sien" instead of "la sienne" because it is "his" and not "hers".

50ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7 1
French possessives agree with the object owned, not with the owner:

his cap / her cap / its cap = sa casquette -> la sienne his hat / her hat / its hat = son chapeau -> le sien
116ReplyGive Lingot8•2 years ago

KatieBurne1 16 8 6
Thank you for clarifying, that confused me too

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

werekitty 22 20 18 10 9 7 7 2 282
So for conversation's sake, if you were to be telling someone "the cap is his" in French, how would you clarify his from hers?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7 1
There is a way: c'est sa casquette à elle / c'est sa casquette à lui

26ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

RichardLee101 18 79
Another clarifying comment, thank you tons!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TaraSloan1 16

Why is "le chapeau c'est le sien" wrong?

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7 1

un chapeau = hat

une casquette = cap

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Card.Biggles 15 11 7 4 3 3

In English "cap" and "hat" are synonymous.

So what's the difference between "chapeau" and "casquette"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ketutsf 14 14 14 13 13 12 7 5

A cap is a kind of hat, but the words are not synonyms.

A cap is typically close fitting and either has no brim at all, or only a bill or visor at the front. A skull cap, a baseball cap, a yarmulke and a beanie are examples of caps. But a fedora, a Stetson, a hard hat, a bowler and a Panama hat are all examples of hats that are not caps.

13ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Card.Biggles 15 11 7 4 3 3

Is English your native language? The issue is not as cut and dried as you're presenting it. I could definitely call a fedora a cap without getting weird looks. How do you account for the expression "a feather in your cap"? It's got to have a band, and therefore probably a brim. You wouldn't put a feather in a beanie! And you definitely couldn't put one in a yamaka. Furthermore, I could but would never actually refer to a beanie as a cap, unless I used the entire phrase "watch cap". Basically, at least where I'm from, the word "cap" is not in everyday vocabulary unless it's part of a set phrase or expression (saying "baseball hat" would be weird because it's not the expression, but referring to a baseball cap as a just plain "hat" in conversation would be fine, in fact referring to it as just plain "cap" would be unusual). "Hat" is generally the go-to word for anything you wear on your head, and "cap" could be substituted in any time if you wanted to sound old, foreign, or pedantic.

-11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ketutsf 14 14 14 13 13 12 7 5

Yes, you could call a fedora a "cap," just as you could call a tiger a "kitten." But, as you seem to agree, you would be purposely making an odd word choice.

It seems to me that mostly what you are saying is that "hat" is the more general term, which is what I said in my post. I think we really are in agreement about everything except just which hats are commonly called "caps."

If you are interested, here is what the first few dictionaries I found online had to say about the word "cap":

OED: "A head-dress of men and boys: commonly applied to every kind of ordinary male head-dress which is not called a 'hat', from which it is distinguished by not having a brim, and by being usually of some soft material; also to a number of official, professional, and special head-dresses."

Websters Online: "a head covering especially with a visor and no brim"

Oxford Dictionaries: "A kind of soft, flat hat without a brim, and sometimes having a visor."

As for the expression "a feather in one's cap," it is idiomatic. As with any such phrase, the particular words in it reflect its origin and history rather than modern usage. Here is what a brief internet search has to say about that:

E. Cobham Brewer 1810–1897. Dictionary of Phrase and Fable. 1898: "That's a feather in your cap. An honour to you. The allusion is to the very general custom in Asia and among the American Indians of adding a new feather to their head-gear for every enemy slain. The Caufirs of Cabul stick a feather in their turban for every Mussulman slain by them. The Incas and Caciques, the Meunitarris and Mandans (of America), the Abyssinians and Tur'comans, etc, etc., follow the same custom. So did the ancient Lycians, and many others. In Scotland and Wales it is still customary for the sportsman who kills the first woodcock to pluck out a feather and stick it in his cap. In fact, the custom, in one form or another, seems to be almost universal."

It seems clear that over the last several thousand years, many feathers have been stuck into many head coverings that lacked both both band and brim. And, yes, I think you are right that very few of them were yarmulkes.

Finally, yes, English is my native language.

6Give Lingot•2 years ago

Ketutsf 14 14 14 13 13 12 7 5

Yes. What is the distinction in French between "un chapeau" and "une casquette?" Good question.

Well, if you do a google image search for these words, "chapeau" will yield mostly (almost exclusively) fedoras, Stetsons, and other brimmed hats; and "casquette" will yield nearly 100% brimless hats (i.e. caps).

By the way, the same experiment with "cap" will yield similar results, in accord with the dictionary definition of the word.

5Give Lingot•2 years ago

DanWilliams2 11 7

Card.Biggles: It would appear from your profile that you are from the USA, which may explain why you say that "cap" and "hat" are synonymous to you. But anyone from the UK would certainly give you a very odd look if you called a fedora a cap! In fact, even the places I am familiar with in the US would not say this, although it's entirely possible that it's a regional thing, perhaps. Still, that does not at all mean that the "average person" would agree with you.

Ketutsf gave a perfect answer along with a plethora of supporting reference material, but you are still arguing the point... to me, a beanie is not a cap. A fedora is not a cap. This is the opinion of, it would appear, most of the English-speaking world... is it not possible that you are simply wrong? It seems that you just haven't picked up the finer points of why all caps are hats, but all hats are not caps. It's not DuoLingo's fault - "chapeau" is "hat", and "casquette" is "cap", and that's all there is to it. You just need to learn the difference between the English words before you can understand the French ones :)

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7 1

After this long discussion, I am pleased that you get back to where we started from.

In French une casquette is not interchangeable with un chapeau, as already mentioned 10 months ago.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

Card.Biggles 15 11 7 4 3 3

Regardless of the history of the idiom, and the historical denotations of the word, that's not what the average person thinks of today when using them in casual modern conversation. A fedora can be called a cap or a hat. A beanie can be called a cap or a hat. If I were shown flashcards with the words "hat" and "cap" on them bereft of context, they would prompt the same images in my head. There is not a significant distinction between the two words in current casual English. What I want to find out is what the difference is between "chapeau" and "casquette". I guess all I can say is that to me personally, defining them simply as "hat" and "cap" is silly, or at least not useful. Now if someone said "chapeau" has a brim, "casquette" doesn't, and those fashionable French are oddly strict about it, that'd be different. Are they used interchangeably at all, and if so, is "casquette" in French as quaint as "cap" in English?

-2Give Lingot•2 years ago

n6zs 25 866

As in French, "chapeau" and "casquette" are different, so are "hat" and "cap" in English. The Cambridge on-line dictionary says:

hat: a covering for the head that is not part of another piece of clothing

<http://dictionary.cambridge.org/us/dictionary/british/hat>

cap: a soft flat hat that has a curved part sticking out at the front, often worn as part of a uniform (or) a thin hat that stops your hair getting wet when swimming or taking a shower

<http://dictionary.cambridge.org/us/dictionary/british/cap>

Note that a "cap" is a subset of the category "hat". -Native English speaker

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kylurr 10

I'd almost never say cap. Shower cap or bottle cap being the exceptions. Hat covers all hats for me as a native English speaker. Cap sounds very british or elderly to me. So without a qualifier, I would translate cap to chapeau.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

n6zs 25 866

Just so you're aware that le chapeau covers all types of hats and "la casquette" is a subset of that. For DL exercises, it's recommended to use the closest word. So une casquette est un chapeau, mais un chapeau n'est pas une casquette.

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

zudeet 21 78

I also consider the English "cap" and "hat" to be more or less synonyms. For me, there is some vague size differential (hats are bigger, caps are smaller), but in most contexts, I wouldn't distinguish. Maybe it depends on one's region or dialect. In French, though, it seems the chapeau/casquette distinction is more clear-cut. So I got this exercise wrong.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlfredoCan731394 7

But this isn't English, is it?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pwb2 17 13 6 215

I understand the rule that 'la sienne' follows the gender of 'la casquette'. But how, in this sentence, do you know it is his rather than hers?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ketutsf 14 14 14 13 13 12 7 5

The given solution, "La casquette, c'est la sienne," doesn't indicate the gender of the owner. If you needed to be clear, you could say, "La casquette, c'est à lui." That answer is accepted by DL too.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jan5walter 14 13 12 10 9 5

a bonnet is un bonnet.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CarlosRubi2 25 3

C'est la sienne = it is hers, right?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ketutsf 14 14 14 13 13 12 7 5

"C'est la sienne" means "It is his" or "It is hers," where "It" refers to a feminine noun. The gender of "sien(ne)" matches the object owned, not the owner. So, for example:

"The hat is his/hers." = "Le chapeau, c'est le sien."

"The cap is his/hers." = "La casquette, c'est la sienne."

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

flanz1961 13

So if I'm pointing at two people standing 'over there', one a women and one a man, and say la casquette, c'est la sienne , there is no way the recipient of my articulation can know to whom I refer and therefore who owns the cap! That makes sense.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ketutsf 14 14 14 13 13 12 7 5

Well, French does not have distinct words for "his" and "hers," but that does not mean there is no way to make your meaning clear. In the situation you describe, you could say

"La casquette est à elle." = "The cap is hers."

Or

"La casquette lui appartient à elle." = "The cap belongs to her."

If there were, say, two women, you might have to work a bit harder. You might say, for example,

"La casquette appartient à la femme qui ne porte pas une chapeau." = "The cap belongs to the woman who is not wearing a hat."

Or

"La casquette appartient à celle qui n'a pas de chapeau." = "The cap belongs to the one who has no hat."

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

funny-tigre 16 11 8 1

Does the la in la sienne refer to the cap?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ketutsf 14 14 14 13 13 12 7 5

The two words together refer to the cap. The French possessive pronoun referring to a singular, feminine noun (and corresponding to the English "his"/"hers") is "la sienne."

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jon0ary 14

Gender is attached to the cap ...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Autumna1979 15 14 13 9 8 7 6 3 3 2 2 2 2 2 1

Why is la casquette c est la sienne wrong? It took it before in anither phrase with c est instead of just est.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ketutsf 14 14 14 13 13 12 7 5

Your sentence is correct, except for the missing apostrophe and comma. In fact, as I write, "La casquette, c'est la sienne." is the solution given at the top of this page. Maybe you just had a typo.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dimidola 10 9 8

Any reason why "La casquette, elle est la sienne" is wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7 1

Yes, "la sienne" is a modified pronoun, in other words it works as a modified noun.

after a modified noun/pronoun, 'il est, elle est' become "c'est".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CosmicString 13 4

I'm confused why sometimes in these types of sentences 'c'est' is used, but other times it's just 'est'.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Calafia77 22 13 5 3

Question answered. I was confused by the gender as well.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Calafia77 22 13 5 3

No if cap is feminine then you'd have to use "la sienne" but as noted there are ways around this. I've noticed that often though it seems that the choice of his or hers is Duolingo's there are often other ways to say the same thing and have it clear that it is "his" rather than "hers". It is confusing of course because we automatically see "la sienne" as meaning hers but it is simply agreeing with the object and that object is feminine. Hard for us English speakers to understand that or just to remember that fact. Pronouns are fun aren't they?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HiccupIII 15

Is an alternative translation, "La casquette, c'est à lui", based on the Ancient Greek dative of possession i.e. there is to the judge a lovely house rather than the judge has a lovely house?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mlfatima 13 2

so is there no way of telling whether someone is saying his or her(s)?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sitesurf 25 25 8 7 1

No, there isn't.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mlfatima 13 2

ok, thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

362 Duo's Outfits

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2141094>

Neverletmigo 17 9 8

Hey guys, are the outfits have any special functions? I bought a Champagne Tracksuit and I'm still wondering if it made any changes to my course except that Duo's appearance had changed.

Also, someone please explain to me the other functions of the items in the shop.

Muchas gracias. :)

Give Lingot

53 years ago

Leave a new comment

23 Comments

kristinemc 16 9 7 4 2

Hey there! The champagne track suit doesn't have any other magical powers other than it's an awesome new look for Duo :) You can check out what all the items in the store do by reading through the descriptions on the store page. We'll have more items to buy soon!

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ALoUSyUseRnaME 25 25 16 9 5 5 4

The only difference is his appearance. What do you have in the shop? I'm not using a mobile device so I am not exactly sure.

Well, this is what I have in the shop:

Heart Refill: Refills a heart when you lose a heart.

Streak freeze: Automatically freezes your streak when you are not on for 24 hours.

Timed Practice: It lets you practice with a timer, you can use it when refreshing your skills.

Double or nothing: You buy it for five lingots, if you reach your seven day streak, it gives you ten lingots.

Certificate: Take a 15 minute test and see how well you do. (Certificate included) Bonus skills:

Idioms, Christmas, and flirting. (Christmas will come back in the Christmas season)

5ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Zach1337 8 5 2

I wish we had those outfits on the web version. Hopefully they will come soon enough.:)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

HallieSNolder 5

I don't even know how to get the outfits... :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

frostcrystal 14

An old, old post... but you get them from the shop on the mobile version. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Imper.ProbeDroid 5 3

What's the mobile version?????????

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Imper.ProbeDroid 5 3

Same!!!!!!!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ravv95 4

Hello I know this is a very old post but where do you find Duo on the mobile version with the new outfit?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

richardrob22 11 1

I bought the tracksuit because I had surplus lingots but realised I can't even see Duo so there was no point XD

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TheCemster 7

There isn't a point? Aw man...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Imper.ProbeDroid 5 3

Me tooooooo?!?!?!?!?!?!?!?!?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BunnySmith123 9

where do u buy clothes for duo?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Imper.ProbeDroid 5 3

GeorgeEspinoza5 9 2
how do you buy a bird suit

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Urvashi18 11 2 1
Is the Duolingo champagne tracksuit worth it? Or is the formal attire better? I have an iPad app version btw I'm considering getting it

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

363 Difference between 'bist' and 'sind' in German?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4661421>

dushyanta.

Both 'bist' and 'sind' are used for 'are' in German. What is the difference between the two? Moreover, if I had to say "You are a boy" which is correct

"Du bist ein Junge" or "Sie sind ein Junge" ?

Give Lingot
62 years ago

Leave a new comment
10 Comments

SkillsInPills 7 5 2

Du bist ein Junge = You (informal to one person) are a boy.

Sie sind ein Junge = You (formal to one person) are a boy.

Sie sind Jungen = They are boys.

'Bist' is singular and 'sind' can be both singular and plural. Both are correct but it just depends on the number of people you're speaking about, or if you're speaking to a person to whom you want to show respect

12ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago
[+] 7 hidden comments

ubdip 13 13 10 8 6 6 3 2 2

The difference is that "du" is informal (to friends, family, children, etc.) and "Sie" is formal (to teachers, bosses, old persons, etc.). "Bist" and "sind" are the correspondig verb conjugations to "du" and "Sie", respectively.

To a boy you would normally use the informal adress "du", so it is "Du bist ein Junge".

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Siebenundzwanzig 14 9 4 2 2
Bist = "are" for informal, singular

Sind = "are" for formal, singlar/plural

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

364 "The country is in peace."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2056195>

Translation: Le pays est en paix.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

3 Comments

DAR65 22 8

What sort of English is this?! In the UK (at least) we would never say that we are 'in peace', we would say we are 'at peace' (or 'at war'). I agree that the Larousse Dictionary has the phrase 'vivre en paix' - translated as 'to live in peace'. That would be fine in relation to countries if it was continued e.g. to live in peace with our enemies. But this sentence stops short at 'peace'.

The Larousse Anglo-French does have the phrase 'etre en paix avec le reste du monde', but note that it translates it as follows: 'to be at peace ... ' So, there is nothing wrong with the French, but surely the supposedly English phrase offered for translation into French by DuoLingo should have been 'the country is at peace'?

I shall report this to Duolingo separately.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lalinguiste 17 13 8

I agree with you, for American English I think "at peace" would generally sound better too. Thanks for reporting it!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

divaluisa 25 25 23 20 4 2

In American English we say "the country is at peace"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

365 Артукли. «А» versus «the»

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3313903>

Lulkanto 18 13 11 10 9 6 3 1101

Три основных правила использования артиклей

«a (an)» — может использоваться только с исчисляемыми существительными в единственном числе → a child (ребёнок), a cat (кот), a man (мужчина), an apple (яблоко);

«the» — может использоваться со всеми видами существительных (с исчисляемыми и неисчисляемыми, в единственном и во множественном числе) → the cat (кот) и the cats (коты), the man (мужчина) и the men (мужчины), the child (ребёнок) и the children (дети), the water (вода), the air (воздух), the wine (вино), the music (музыка);

существительные множественного числа и неисчисляемые могут использоваться без артикля, но исчисляемые существительные в единственном числе всегда должны иметь какой-либо артикль (если артикля нет, то значит есть причина, почему его не нужно ставить).

Три основных различия использования артиклей a_versus_the

Другие темы про артикли:

Таблицы употребления определённого, неопределённого и нулевого артиклей

Коротко об артиклях в русском языке

Список тем на форуме, которые могут вам пригодиться, если вы учите английский язык на Duolingo → <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3390101>

Список «Советов и заметок» (грамматических подсказок к навыкам) → <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7552809>

Give Lingot103

1082 years ago

Leave a new comment

28 Comments

WaldemarThomson 6

И есть на эту тему хороший анекдот. Английский для "новых русских": Артикль "a" означает "типа", а "the" - "конкретно".

52ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

Lulkanto 18 13 11 10 9 6 3 1101

Всем понятно, что это выдуманный анекдот :) Но так случилось, что слово «конкретный» к артиклям «приклеилось» однажды, и про конкретность объектов вместо их определённости теперь говорят все. И даже, к моему огромному сожалению, этим грешат преподаватели иностранных языков, когда рассказывают о том, какой артикль правильно употребить в том или ином случае.

Не так давно в одном из обсуждений мне довелось отвечать на вопросы пользователей и большую часть одного из моих комментариев я перенесу сюда. Само обсуждение для «He talks on the telephone» можно посмотреть по ссылке → <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4893743>

В задании на перевод «Он говорит по телефону» пользователь спрашивал: «Вы можете объяснить почему здесь – «He talks on the telephone» – однозначно определенный артикль?».

Я задала пользователю вопрос:

– когда вы или кто-то говорит по телефону, сколько телефонных или мобильных устройств в момент разговора находится у уха говорящего по данному устройству?

Потом сама же на него и ответила :) Ниже привожу свой комментарий:

Самое главное! Сразу забываем о слове «конкретный», там где звучит слово «артикль». И никогда его не используем по отношению к существительному при выборе артикля. Большой вопрос встаёт перед нами. Конкретный – что это значит?

Все существительные, обозначающие объекты, которые вы можете увидеть, потрогать и посчитать – конкретные.

Все существительные, обозначающие объекты, которые нельзя увидеть, потрогать, измерить, взвесить или пересчитать – абстрактные.

То есть существительное «девочка/книга/велосипед/собака/дом/пудреница/арбуз/кот» всегда конкретное, но не абстрактное.

Почему же артикли-то разные могут использоваться с этими-всегда-конкретными-существительными?

Потому что употребление артикля зависит от того, определённое существительное или нет. Вот теперь ныряем в правила и вспоминаем применительно к нашей ситуации пару строк, которые все упускают из виду:

Определённый артикль the употребляется, если существительное является единственным в данной ситуации/обстановке, и/или всем ясно из контекста, о каком предмете идёт речь. Вопрос выше помните? Сколько телефонных устройств у уха говорящего, когда он говорит по телефону? – только давайте без излишней фантазии :) – единственное устройство в данной ситуации. Это и фиксируется в английском языке определённым артиклем.

Ещё примеры:

Он упал на пол. – He fell on the floor.

Почему здесь «the floor»?

На какое количество полов можно упасть одновременно?

Только на один-единственный.

Не ходите по траве! – Don't walk on the grass!

По многим ли травам можно ходить одновременно?

Думаю, нет.

В примерах ниже из ситуации понятно, о каком объекте идёт речь, и здесь артикль перед существительным будет определённый:

Пожалуйста, выключи свет. – Please, turn off the light.

Я открыл окно. – I opened the window.

Он пнул мяч. – He kicked the ball.

35ReplyGive Lingot25•1 year ago

111George 19 8 105

Три лингота за три правила!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lulkanto 18 13 11 10 9 6 3 1101

Спасибо :) Э-эх, маловато правил я написала :))

12ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

ReiFly 7

Will you be back in AN hour? Почему так?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lulkanto 18 13 11 10 9 6 3 1101

А это вам сюда нужно заглянуть:

Артикли. «А» или «an» → <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3250481>

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ReiFly 7

А, главное, что читается hour с гласной, а не пишется

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lulkanto 18 13 11 10 9 6 3 1101

С гласного звука начинается, а пишется с согласной буквы :)

4ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

KiraGraponova 11 10 10

Вернее будет сказать: "Пишется с буквы, обозначающей на письме согласную" :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lulkanto 18 13 11 10 9 6 3 1101

Согласность и гласность на письме обозначить нельзя :) Звук или буква изначально согласные или нет (за исключением буквы «у» в английском языке, пожалуй — никак не могут определиться с принадлежностью этой буквы).

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

Victor-VF 18

с артиклями все более-менее понятно, если б не было местоимений. Объясните пожалуйста смысловую разницу двух коротких предложений: 1) The dog walks 2) This dog walks

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

Особой разницы нет, основное различие такое this можно использовать только если предмет непосредственно перед нами. Вот перед нами собака. Я вам говорю, эта собака ходит, и никогда не бежит, получится This dog walks, it never runs. The dog тоже можно тут сказать.

С другой стороны, допустим, я вам загадаю загадку:

У меня есть собака. Каждый день моя собака перебирает по земле ногами и таким образом перемещается, что делает собака? А вы отвечаете The dog walks (вы не можете сказать this dog, вы собаку не видите)

Третий случай, мы видим вдалеке собаку и обсуждаем ее, по-английски уже про неё не говорят this, а говорят that, потому что она удалена от нас. Однако, мы опять же можем сказать the.

Видите как получается, мы можем заменить this на the почти всегда, а наоборот the на this далеко не всегда.

30ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Victor-VF 18

Т.е., употребляя this (или даже that) вместо the, я как бы сильнее приближаю объект к себе? я правильно понимаю? Для прошедших времен это также работает? И еще один вопрос для полного понимания: в каком, например, случае нельзя заменить this/that на the?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

мы не приближаем ничего, просто this может быть использовано только с предметами находящимися прямо перед нами, если они удалены или не присутствуют вовсе, использовать this нельзя

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

_Alex_088 11

Лариса, мне очень понравился этот вопрос: "в каком, например, случае нельзя заменить this/that на the?" Можете ответить? Заранее благодарю.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

Там где this, that стоят отдельно или с one, иными словами имеют "сильную указательную функцию", например:

Give me that.

I will take this one.

This is a house, that is a car.

The тут не имело бы никакого смысла. (Не путайте только с I'm the one. She is the one).

8Give Lingot1•1 year ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

Вот здесь очень хорошо пояснили с технической точки зрения:
https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5491338\$comment_id=6848611

5Give Lingot1•1 year ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

И вот здесь я сегодня оооочень подробно написала:
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/9060237>

4Give Lingot1•1 year ago

Victor-VF 18

в фигуральном смысле "приближаем". можно же сказать про Mars this planet, хотя он черт знает где находится))

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

Обычно не говорят про Mars this planet, если только он не нарисован на картинке или что-то в этом духе.

5Give Lingot•2 years ago

KiraGraponova 11 10 10

Lulkanto, только звуки могут быть гласными, согласными, звонкими, ударными, сонорными, билабиальными и т.д., ибо слышатся и произносятся только звуки, а вот буквы лишь графическая система для обозначения звуков или их сочетаний. И, конечно, поэтому буквы нельзя записать в согласные и гласные, ибо как вы сами сказали про "y", эта буква служит обозначением разных звуков - дифтонга "ай", гласного "и" и согласного "й". Прошу прощения за оффтоп:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lulkanto 18 13 11 10 9 6 3 1101

Хотела положить цитаты, но, действительно, уж больно много лишнего получится (да и сложности с Inet-ом у меня на данный момент). Однако, очень важно знать, что всё-таки есть и в русском, и в английском языках гласные и согласные буквы. Возьмите любое пособие или курс для школьников и сможете там об этом прочесть :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Victor-VF 18

Извините за мое занудство. Я наверное путаю сам себя. Но я теперь не могу понять стандартной школьной фразы: This is a table. Если я говорю this - то я вижу этот стол. Но если это конкретный стол, то почему он "a table" ??

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

потому что вы путаете указательные и качественные местоимения - это раз, и два, не понимаете роль неопределённого артикля. Я думаю, что вам стоит почитать вот здесь <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3390101>

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Victor-VF 18

спасибо! теперь вроде прояснилось. в собачьем дискурсе - "the" - слабое указательное местоимение, а "this / that" - более сильные. я правильно понял?)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Larisa_L 12 10 5 4

Ну можно так сказать :)) хотя the - это артикль, конечно

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Victor-VF 18

на моем текущем уровне языкового развития мне достаточно и такого согласия с Вашей стороны). другие вопросы позже созреют.. надеюсь))

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lulkanto 18 13 11 10 9 6 3 1101

Узнайте побольше об артиклях и вы чётко начнёте понимать, когда уместно использовать их, а когда лучше указательные местоимения.

У меня нет ссылок, но я помню фамилии авторов, которых я читала, чтобы разобраться в артиклях. Думаю, что вам не составит труда найти работы Волковой, Шедловской, Огуречниковой.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

366 Alle und Alles?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1362697>

AlsEenPoffertje 18 17 15 14 13 13 6 5 3 17

Hallo! I have a question or two regarding alle and alles. I can kind of distinguish the difference between the two. I have seen alle use more for everyone, anyone, and in general, when you're talking about people. Alles, on the other hand, I have seen used as everything and anything. My issue, however, is with "all." I'm not sure which to use when saying all. I looked at the examples given by Duolingo, and I couldn't really tell much of a difference. Can anyone help out and explain it?

Give Lingot1

133 years ago

Leave a new comment

13 Comments

sakasiru 22 11 9

"alles" standing alone is everything: Ich habe alles aufgegessen = I have eaten everything

"alle" standing alone is everyone: Alle sind gekommen = everyone has come

However, if you add a noun to "alle" it means "all the...": Alle Autos sind verschneit = all (the) cars are snowed over. It can be used for things and people alike.

29ReplyGive Lingot11•3 years ago

AlsEenPoffertje 18 17 15 14 13 13 6 5 3 17

So alles isn't used with nouns?

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

It is in certain cases, like the rare case when alle* is used with a singular neuter, like "alles Wasser ist verbraucht" (= all the water is used up). Normally, you use the noun after "alle" in plural, but if you have something uncountable, you use the singular. And of course you have to decline the "alle" depending on the case the noun stands in.

15ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

michael.di5 24 10 2 2

Es gibt auch die Möglichkeit, "all" (ohne Endungen) zu verwenden, wenn einen Artikel oder ein Possessivpronomen davor steht. Diese Verwendung ist eine Einschränkung von "alle"

All die anderen haben so wenig.

All ihre Katzen sind tot.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

AlsEenPoffertje 18 17 15 14 13 13 6 5 3 17

Thanks for helping me understand that. I appreciate it!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

aserine 5 3

so can we say " Alle Probleme haben eine Lösung" ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

Sure.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jackherbach12 21 16 14 8 6

Thanks for the help, I appreciate it. If you could just answer me this that'd be swell (: So, in that example, "Alle Probleme haben eine Lösung" Can that also mean "All problems have a solution?" Or is it just All (the) problems have a solution? Viel Danke

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

aserine 5 3

thanks))

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

sakasiru 22 11 9

The (the) in brackets mean that you can leave it out, so "all problems have a solution" is equally correct.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

RenatoAraj8 14 11 10 10 8 7 6 6 6 6 2 2 2 2 2 28

Thanks. Na verdade hue é hue. E br é BR

0Give Lingot•3 months ago

HossamElTorkey 7 7

so , Does "alle" = "jeder" ??????????????

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 8

"jeder" can mean "every" or "each" which looks at each individual in a group.

"alle" treats the group as an entire group without looking at each individual.

<http://dictionnaire.reverso.net/allemand-anglais/jeder>

<http://dictionnaire.reverso.net/allemand-anglais/alle>

1ReplyGive Lingot1•11 months ago

367 Timed Practice

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1369975>

btang08 6

I bought the Timed Practice in the shop for 10 lingots. But I don't know how to use it. Can someone help me???

Give Lingot4

583 years ago

Leave a new comment

39 Comments

wazzie 25 11

If you are using this format, click the Strengthen Skill button.

If you are using the other format, there are a few ways to use this feature.

1) Click the blue Lesson Practice button (locate in about the same place as the other format)

2) Click Vocabulary and then click the blue Practice weakest words button

(the above two options to exactly the same thing, practice your overall weakest words)

3) Click any Skill (from the home page) and click the Practice Skill button (below the lesson notebooks, right hand side). This will allow you to practice vocabulary words that appear in that skill only.

34ReplyGive Lingot12•3 years ago

Quave 18 5 3

How comes you have so many lingots? Is there a special knack at earning lingots?

4ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Bush6984 20 13 12 11 10 8 7 5 3 3 112

If you find Wikipedia articles that are NOT NOT NOT already existing/translated in the other language (see the left bar on Wikipedia), post them to the Immersion part, and every time anyone upvotes them it'll give you a lingot. I've earned like 1,000 lingots that way and am currently at 1,769. I've posted to/from French, German, and Spanish.

Also do the Double or Nothing challenges, and make sure you keep up with them. A. That helps keep you accountable because you stand to lose 5 lingots each time you lose your streak, but B. it helps you keep up your streak which ALSO gives you your streak-days divided by 10 every time you hit a new mark. So it's a win-win! (as long as you don't ruin your streak)

7ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

supdude4 11 7

Wow... You speak English, French, Spanish, Indian, Italian, Scandinavian, Brazilian (Is that a language????!!), Japanese, Ukrainian and Turkish. Not to mention your 562 day streak! How?

2ReplyGive Lingot3•7 months ago

QParticle 10 8

Have two lingots. Your stupidity just made my day.

6ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Bush6984 20 13 12 11 10 8 7 5 3 3 112

LOL, I don't "speak" hardly any of those (by my own personal high standards). I have studied bits and pieces here on DuoLingo, as well as done a German major and French minor at university, along with lots of practice chatting in Spanish with the Dominican janitor at our office, but beyond that barely any.

You ought to check out the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages, which provides a pretty nice sliding "spectrum" on which you can place proficiency level: A1->A2 --> B1->B2 --> C1->C2.

I would call my German C1 (although a native speaker once called me clearly, way better than C1, so C2, but if anything I'd say B2 would be), French somewhere between B1 and B2, and Spanish somewhere between A2-B1. Only Polish, Italian, or Irish would I even consider are worthy of A1 proficiency status, as most are barely along at all.

Just remember: I LOVE learning foreign languages in general, so to/for me it's just a hobby. Point being, it might appear impressive, but there's a lot not captured by those flags and streak-length icons you see ;-) https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Common_European_Framework_of_Reference_for_Languages

4ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

supdude4 11 7

You should study each seriously, like maybe get each one up to 10 one by one and hold them there so you're okay at pretty much everything and then become a translator or something.

3Give Lingot•7 months ago

supdude4 11 7

I'm probably B1 in Spanish (is that a good start going into freshman year at high school?) and A1 or less at French, since I started learning that here yesterday.

1Give Lingot•7 months ago

blackmace 25 23 16 13 11 10 10 10 7 226

I cant speak any of the languages I have on my list that ive studied on duolingo except I can speak spanish pretty well XD once I finish all the romance language (almost done) then ill study them all so much that ill be able to speak most of them a little bit at least :) good job with your work!

0Give Lingot•2 months ago

stejasmunees 7 2

Wtf? Seriously? @supdude4, please know the fact that there is no language called "Indian" or "Scandinavian" at least in Duolingo portal!

2ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

supdude4 11 7

I'm just taking a guess at the flags. What languages are they, no google allowed, stejasmunees?

2Give Lingot•7 months ago

supdude4 11 7

Oh... and German. Sorry

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

stejasmunees 7 2

There ain't an Indian Flag, its Ireland's flag you got mixed up with, nor is a language called Indian irrespective of a Indian flag there. I'll try my best to say the languages correctly, without google. German, French, Spanish, Irish, Italian, Swedish, Portuguese, Polish, Ukrainian (I guess so), Turkish. These are the flags in "Bush6984". I guess he/she would astonished to see a conversation thread on the languages he has learnt. :D :D :D

1Give Lingot•7 months ago

supdude4 11 7

I don't think he cares

2ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Brilqntin 22 11 9 803

Thanks for the detailed explanation, I found it on the desktop site (it looks like your screenshot). However I am unable to find it on the app - is there no way to use timed practice on mobile?

2ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

Unfortunately, it is only available on the website.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HoeYin 8

THANKS A LOT! ¡Gracias!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

miserablabyblees 9 7 5 3
ahhhhh nice mouse

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rabidbeefalo 6
HEYYYY U PLAY TRANSFORMICE?

-2ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

-ReddaDas 10
Thank you sooo much

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

blackmace 25 23 16 13 11 10 10 10 7 226
How did you get the grass background? at the bottom of your screen?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago
[+] 2 hidden comments

paulmakepeace 13
The Duolingo UI team definitely need to make this more clear. This question is a year old!

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HildaTheGreat 9 6 6 3
I couldn't figure this out either...it's not very intuitive!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

yoshibrophy 3 3 3 2 2 2 2
Yes! after you click the strengthen skill button, click the start timed practice button. this will take you to the timed practice, where you have to tipe the correct words as fast as you can before the klok says 00:00!

4ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ZJLee2000 14 1
is there any limit as to how many times we can actually use the timed practice?

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Masha_2002 14 1
No. You can practice as much as you want. It is unlimited for 10 lingots.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

btang08 6

PLEEEEEAAAAASE help me. I want to use my Timed Practice. Otherwise its just a waste of lingots.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kristinemc 16 9 7 4 2

If you are currently on a version that looks different from the image above then click on 'lesson practice'. Let us know if this helps and answers your question :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

-LiamAnderson- 25 13 13 6 11

Yeah, just click on the "strengthen skills" and click on timed practice

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Enderboss 10 6

YES I NEED TO KNOW THIS AS WELL

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

HoeYin 8

I don't know how to use either

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

368 Reverse Trees/Laddering?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4870355/Reverse-Trees-Laddering>

DasEinhorn 25 25 25 18 17 14 12 12 10 8 7 4 3

Who else out there is doing reverse trees/laddering? If you don't know, a reverse tree is doing the opposite of your original course. For example, I have finished the "German for English speakers" course, so now I'm doing "English for German Speakers". Also, laddering is practicing one foreign language through another. For example, I'm learning German and Spanish, so I've started the "German for Spanish speakers" course.

Currently, I'm doing reverse trees for Russian, Spanish and German. I'm probably going to end up doing it for Chinese, and maybe a few other languages. Also, I've begun laddering Spanish to German, and I might do something with French. Who else has done this?

Give Lingot4

212 years ago

Leave a new comment

31 Comments

ReidHT 25 15 8 7 6 5 2

I'm going to start doing the reverse tree for French as soon as I finish the tree, I've heard it really helps.

After I finish the French tree I will work on my Italian (with my French reverse tree as well), and then ladder with Italian for French speakers.

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jitengore 20 16 16 11 7 6 5 4 3 2 2 2 2 1198

You might want to consider doing the forward and reverse tree at the same time. They reinforce each other and speed up the learning.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Juan-Manue1 25 24 10 10 946

Laddering is very useful to contrast languages, but reverse trees into languages you are already fluent can quickly become boring. For reinforcement, of a tree you already conquered, I think it is best to: 1) Keep it golden, and 2) Get other non-DUO practice (News, TV, etc)

Laddering is good if you are not fluent yet in the source language. When I finished the EN = FR tree, I thought about FR = EN, or even FR = ES (ES is my L1 and EN my L2), but having a language that I was already fluent as destination seemed rather boring. In particular, the audio exercises seem like a waste of time.

For that reason I decided to do EN = IT and FR = IT (at the same time), that is, I do a skill on EN = IT and then I switch to FR = IT. That reinforces Italian and allows me to directly compare IT/FR. I tried the FR = IT route w/o EN = IT but I did not feel comfortable making questions. (And the FR = IT tree is relatively new, so not a lot of comments posted there yet)

Edit: Reverse to a language that you are already fluent can be rewarding if you focus on providing clarifications on the discussions.

BTW, The general recommendation that I found somewhere is that you can learn two languages at the same time, but, if they are closely related, then you MUST first develop a solid core on one language and then you can start learning the second one.

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ecelis 13 10 10

To make reverse trees less boring I turn off the speakers/mic. Then it is mostly translation to/from the target language. Only occasionally you get a "fill in the blank" in the language you already know.

3ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Juan-Manue1 25 24 10 10 946

Yes good idea, and above all, providing comments from the native (or fluent) speaker point of view is great. And an excellent opportunity to practice your writing skills in that language. Everybody wins.

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

PeaceJoyPancakes 19 13 6 22

There's also this "reverse tree enhancer" userscript:

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/10954397>

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

cazort 18 18 18 12 8 6 2 2

I find that the reverse trees often introduce new vocabulary to me. I was surprised how much new vocabulary I learned doing the reverse tree from German. A lot of this has to do with alternate translations in the hover-over hints. When doing a forward tree, you get a lot of words introduced in the foreign language, with several English translations. This is great for thoroughly learning English words, but it limits the subset of foreign words you are exposed to.

In the reverse tree, I find that because the focus is on "learning" English, there are a much broader range of foreign words that you get exposed to in the hover-over hints. Even though the "forward" course does expose you to some of this, I found the "backwards" course exposed me to a broader range of alternate vocabulary in the language I was trying to learn.

I found this useful...although I think it also requires you to consult external resources to get the nuances...because the "reverse" course isn't focusing on thoroughly exploring each word, a lot of these words only appear in passing.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

KrazyKaderKat 25 11 9 4

Well, I just started doing my reverse tree also(even though I am not done with Spanish). It's kind of difficult but still fun and on the English(from Spanish) page, it is all in a Spanish so it helps me improve my Spanish

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DasEinhorn 25 25 25 18 17 14 12 12 10 8 7 4 3

¡Buena suerte!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DeroGoi 17 11 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 2 2

Well, you know I did my reverse tree :P

I'm also laddering French from German, but I'm not focusing too hard on that at the moment. Good luck!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lennonmacca 23 12 10 6 5 4 2

I didn't know it was called laddering, but that's exactly what I'm doing right now! I have just begun to learn Spanish through French a few days ago. I figured it's a great way to learn Spanish and at the same time strengthen my French. It definitely is more of a challenge than learning through English, but I think it will be very rewarding. I also intend to finish my reverse French tree sometime too, but for now my priority is the Spanish for French-speakers tree. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aroundsundown 13 6 6

i just found out laddering too and it gave me the idea to learn Spanish through French!

i've always wanted to learn spanish and tried learning both SP and FR at the same time but it gets tiring and confusing. so i don't know how people do it. now i'm kinda bored learning french (i'm hesitant to do the reverse tree because i'm not even done with my french tree and i'm already bored) and decided to try Spanish from French.

i agree learning SP/FR is very challenging. i just tried the first lesson and completely blanked on translating 'la nina'. i already knew some spanish words from Spanish/English so i was like ok that means girl but wtf is 'girl' in French? took me so long that i just gave up and used the hint.

i'm almost to the end for french, so finishing it is my priority. then i'll move on to Spanish/English and Spanish/French.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PennyWhistler 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 23 16 16 15 15 14 11 11 11 7 7 7 6 5 5 5 4 2

I love doing this! I didn't know the name for it so I always called it playing in the alternative duoverse. I know that I have learned a lot of new words that way.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jillianimal 22 22 7 2

I would really like to try laddering but I can't with the languages I'm learning now or would want to learn -_-

I'm gonna start doing the reverse course once I finish these trees.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

roxyrenders 25 25 23 8

I am doing the reverse tree for Spanish. It has been very helpful. I recently started German for Spanish speakers but also the German for English (my Spanish skills aren't strong enough to understand the grammar instruction in the Spanish) I plan to progress very slowly through the new language because I want to keep Spanish learning a priority. I am hoping one day Duolingo will offer a Spanish for German speakers. Then I will be able to practice German and Spanish with four different trees.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

driusan 17 10 10 3 3 2 1

I'm doing the reverse french tree (actually, I took a pause from that to golden-up my forward tree.) I started laddering Spanish because it's the only other French->?? course available, but when I realized that they're getting pretty close to finishing French->Italian, I decided to abandon that and just wait until I can ladder Italian. My plan is to get French golden, then eventually do every French->?? tree that they have (starting with Italian), and in the unlikely event I ever finish those, maybe do those in reverse too.

But, of course, my plans are subject to change..

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

I'm doing the French for English and English for French speakers courses at the same time. It's fun and challenging because I apply what I learned in one course to succeed in the other and learn new words that I find in one course but not the other.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RikSha 18 17 13 13 13 13 12 11 11 11 10 9

It's fun and useful, but at times also quite challenging (studying French in German! - I just can't beat the clock when strengthening skills). Currently I'm also "studying English" in Russian (actually vice versa) since the Russian tree is not yet available in English.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DasEinhorn 25 25 25 18 17 14 12 12 10 8 7 4 3

Same here w/the Russian. How's it going for you? I've actually found it pretty slow.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RikSha 18 17 13 13 13 13 12 11 11 11 10 9

Slowly, slowly... The biggest problem for me is typing. I'm using Free Virtual Keyboard for typing, or rather clicking, in Russian, but to access the Cyrillic layout, I have to change the (Windows) language preference first (Russian keyboard). And then change it back to English for English translations. Timed practice is totally out of the question :). Another problem is the 'advanced grammar'. For example if the phrase requires using plural genitive in Russian (The girls have newspapers), I have to check the correct inflection first (genitive, feminine, plural).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JamesMarshall1 19 19 3

I think you can add language options for your keyboard, and use Windows+space button to alternate between them, I have enabled Romanian and Chinese keyboards and it is very useful :)

1ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

RikSha 18 17 13 13 13 13 12 11 11 11 10 9

It works, thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cwrighta70 16 8 4 2

Let me also add that if you're using Windows 7, pressing Alt+Shift should switch between keyboard languages. That's what I use when typing in Duolingo, and it's extremely quick.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Stupid question but I started doing reverse laddering for Turkish, that is, learning English through Turkish, but now I think I've lost access to the other languages I was learning when my account was through English? How does one flip back and fourth between different versions of the website so I can continue with all of my courses? I'm a bit confused...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DasEinhorn 25 25 25 18 17 14 12 12 10 8 7 4 3

You haven't lost access, just go into Settings and then change which language it says you're learning. Also, how did you find a 9 month old discussion? Just kind of curious

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Thank you. And Google.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Juan-Manue1 25 24 10 10 946

Switching back and forth between source languages in the website can be cumbersome, take a look at the DuolingoCourseSwitcher by andrewmof, at the Duolingo Userscripts, it makes a huge difference!

http://duolingo.wikia.com/wiki/Duolingo_Userscripts

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Fennec92 20 11 5 3 6

I'm doing the regular Italian and Portuguese trees and recently tried out the Italian reverse course. It's been tremendously helpful, so I started the reverse tree for Romanian just to see whether I could learn a language just from the reverse tree and so far it has been working very well. Any other English speakers trying out Romanian?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

linburnlane 20 3 3

By George, I'm going to try the Spanish reverse tree now!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GeorgeBurns0 18 11 11 11 10 9 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 6 4 4 4 4 3 3 2

English from Indonesian

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

AnnGraham4 11

how do you access reverse trees? I reached level 11, got my "Golden Owl" and can't seem to find level 12. Can anyone help?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

369 On Line vs. In Line vs. In A/The Queue

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1697521>

856pm 13 3

Hello everybody! 856pm here with regionalistic differences. This is in English because only fluent speakers would care about this trivial nonsense. Note that I'm talking about lines (queues) of people, not the internet. Some people say, "I'll stand on line," and some say "in line," and others say "in queue." So, which is right? It depends on where you are. Generally, if you're in the vicinity of New York City, you should say "on line." In the rest of America, say "in line." In Britain, say "queueing" or "in a/the queue." If in doubt, say "in line," unless you want people to think you're British or a New Yorker.

Give Lingot
93 years ago

Leave a new comment
7 Comments

adamyoung97 15 15 14 14 13 11 10 9 8 7 7
I'm British, and I've never really said "In Queue". Huh

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

856pm 13 3
Some do. It depends on where in Britain. "In a/the queue"

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lengyelke 6
I live in Scotland and they use it all the time :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Nitram. 25 16 16 11 6 6 5 2
I didn't know that, thanks! :) Hungarians are usually taught British English, but for our misfortune, American English often pours into our English knowledge creating a mixture of British-American English... For the record, I hadn't even heard of "on line" before I read your post...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

856pm 13 3
Most Non-New Yorkers will think you're talking about the internet or will recognize that anybody speaking with that shibboleth is speaking New York English.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ernobebi
[deleted]

Give Lingot•3 years ago

theharc18
én xDDD

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

370 "I work in the morning."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/557420/i-work-in-the-morning>
Translation: Lavoro di mattina.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

27 Comments

jinjinglee 7 3

i wrote 'nel mattina', it was revised as 'nel mattino'. but the comment's answer is 'di mattina'.....so which one is proper or more useful in real world?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

abbw2000 12

I wrote 'nella mattina' and got it correct.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PastaPaone 20 6 2 2 52

I wrote nella mattina and got it wrong. Corrected as alla mattina. Apr 2015

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PrinceUVA 17 10 9

Same here and not sure why.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hasanali19 11 9

I wrote 'nella mattina' but it was considered wrong! May 2015.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mahkizmo 12 11 6 2

i wrote lavoro nella mattina and it was marked as wrong, august 2016

0Give Lingot•6 months ago

onuruyanusta 16 5

It accepts it wrong for me. Maybe it is the well known iOS vs Android situation. I am an Android user

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MrMacbeth 20

Collin's dictionary lists «alla mattina», «la mattina», and «di mattina», but not «della mattina» - apparently you cannot use the definite article with di in this phrase.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Dagrooms 14

If "di mattina" works, why does "della mattina" not work? Isn't della matching the gender?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

i-binas 12 9

and what is the difference between 'in mattina' and 'di mattina'

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ksoo 16 9 6 5

I'm pretty sure "in/nella mattina" means "this morning" and "di mattina" means "every morning"

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Proletar 10

Somebody smart answer, please!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 4 hidden comments

VanessaArita 13 3

I took this as a "sorry can't stay out tonight, I work in the morning" and used "Lavoro domani mattina" and it didn't fly. I think "Lavoro di mattina" should be "I work mornings."

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LifyaKH 18 8 7 4 3

How about if you were discussing schedules with a friend. They suggested to meet on a Saturday and you said 'the afternoon is good because I work in the morning', neither 'tomorrow morning' nor 'in the mornings' is correct. The translation giving by duo seems right

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GeovaniMan 14 12 12 10 10

"Lavoro domani mattina" is literally "I work tomorrow in the morning". "Lavoro di mattina" or "lavoro alla mattina" means "I work in the morning" and not "every/each" morning. The word for "each/every" in this case is "ogni" = "Lavoro ogni mattina" means "I work every morning", in this case you don't use "di". "Nella" means "in the" too, but meaning "inside the" in general. "Della" means possession "of the" as in "La porta della casa" "The door of the house". I hope this helps!

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

na7tiu6ka 12 5

I used nella mattina

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GermanViscuso 7

And what about "Laboro mattina". Doesn't work?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iuli9 23

Lavoro da mattina

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

marPW 12 9 9 4 2 2

this one didn't work for me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kenan820 24 11 9 25

If "in mattina" is used for "this morning" and "di mattina" is used for "every morning", then the "correct" answer would be "in mattina" because, in American English, if we were referring to "every morning" then we would use the plural in this sentence with "the" as in, "I work in the mornings". The singular would actually refer to "this morning" or "tomorrow morning" aka the "next" morning.

I've reported that "in mattina" was marked incorrect. Nov 1 2014

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cosmopolita61 13 13 12 9 7 6

Lavoro la mattina is obviously correct. Since the English sentence has a general meaning, I wrote "Lavoro le mattine". Can't you say that?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Skullhummus 23 14

"Io lavoro alla mattina" is accepted.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Golden_Owl 13 11 10 8 4 2

I'm glad spanish is my native language, i can understand these little nuances pretty well

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

371 Genitive case: boss' or boss's? class' or class's?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1886063/Genitive-case-boss-or-boss-s-class-or-class-s>

ProfesorAntonio 21 16 16 14 11 10 8 3 2 3

Hello and thanks for helping me! What's the right way of the genitive case? boss' or boss's? class' or class's?

Give Lingot1

53 years ago

Leave a new comment

6 Comments

WeaveDragon 21 722

I was also taught to use "Boss' ", though it is pronounced like "Boss's"... I didn't even know "Boss's" would be accepted, I was taught that was wrong. Now I feel old...

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SongbirdSandra 18

It's true- both are accepted! (I am shocked!). Merci Puddleglum!

There are conflicting grammar rules about this issue.

Some people say that using 's (boss's) is correct, except when the next word begins with an S; in which case you would use just the apostrophe (boss').

Others say that you always use 's.

Others say that it's just a matter of personal preference.

<http://data.grammarbook.com/blog/apostrophes/apostrophes-with-words-ending-in-s/>

<http://www.bartleby.com/141/strunk.html#1>

<http://library.thinkquest.org/18806/pressbase/resourcebook/grammar.shtml>

I had to include the sources because I didn't believe Puddleglum at first and had to research it (and I bet others will be just as surprised as I am).

Thanks for asking ProfesorAntonio. I learn something new every day. :-)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

Yes, I just researched this recently and was also a little shocked. Also, you don't use the ('s) with certain names like (Jesus') (probably just because that's how we've always done it).

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Puddleglum 16 9 8 7 5

They are both accepted. "Boss' " is the old style of doing it, though you will typically hear "boss's" in speech. I use the old style because that's how I was taught, but it's personal preference, really. :-)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luscinda 25 25 25 14 11 10 8 7 6 6 5 4 3 3 2 2 9

Modern style is usually that we add the apostrophe s, except where the word already ends in an as/ess/ez/eez sound that makes the pronunciation of the 's awkward. We particularly use the apostrophe alone with the classical names that end in an eez sound - so the waitress' uniform and Aristophanes' Clouds and Nicholas' book, but Dickens's Oliver Twist, Joss's book etc.

It's more old fashioned to write Dickens' Oliver Twist and Joss' book, but it will not cause any confusion.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ceweeda 25 15 15 13 9 6 4 2 20

Boss' and Class'

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

372 "The girl eats a tomato."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/657475>

Translation: La niña se come un tomate.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

13 Comments

cody.cheyenne 6

couldnt it be La niña come una tomate.

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Doug952764 14

That's what I did because I thought una was feminine.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

cheyennelever 7

Is it necessary to have the the word "se" in the sentence? Ex: La niña 'se' come un tomate. (The girl eats a tomato)

4ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Teacup1 9

How can you tell if a noun is feminine or masculine? Is there a specific rule for feminine or masculine?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rspreng 24

In general, with a zillion exceptions, nouns ending in -a are fem, ending in -o are masc. Lots of other little 'rules, like whether the word is of Greek origin, -cion = fem, etc.

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TabbyCat248 4

Is there such thing as the word 'a' in Spanish?

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

TabbyCat248 4

I've gotten this question twice now and it seems like it changes from 'un' to 'una'.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

TabbyCat248 4

Also, I have run into trouble does not have an ~ for the 'n', whay can I do about this? I'm using my tablet.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Shivam_Dikshit 6

I m confused between la and el . Why not el niña instead of la niña.?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

VHAZVLL 19 17 17 14 14 9 4 2 4

Because EL is masculine. LA is feminin.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SaiKhaelLyle 18 15 8

I think fruits r all feminine cuz they have embryos from which new plants r formed.. but in this case, how come a tomato a female? Plz give me some advice on how to classify which fruite is female

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

VHAZVLL 19 17 17 14 14 9 4 2 4

The general rule in spanish is: when the name ends with "a" is femenin (female). When the name ends with "e" or "o" is masculine (male). But there are some exceptions.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Doug952764 14

True fruits are developed from the ovary in the base of the flower, and contain the seeds of the plant. Scientifically tomatos are fruit. I've never seen one in a fruit salad!

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

373 "noir" or "noire"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6078/noir-or-noire>

lingua 25 23 10 5 3 2

Sometimes the spelling for black is noir and sometimes it has an "e" on the end. What is the difference and how are they used?

Give Lingot

394 years ago

Leave a new comment

16 Comments

thusly 14 4

"Noir" is the masculine form, and "noire" is the feminine form. You need to ensure the adjective agrees with the gender of the noun it modifies.

"La robe" is feminine, so one would say "la robe noire". "Le chien" is masculine, so one would say "le chien noir".

Unfortunately it's a good deal more complicated than this, but at this level of the exercises I would recommend just trying to remember that "le", "un", "au", and "du" indicate a masculine noun, and that "la", "une", "à la", and "de la" indicate a feminine noun.

75ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

ricainrico 22 18 18 3

Equally unfortunately is the fact that the two forms of this adjective are pronounced identically (in most varieties of spoken French), so you have to "hear" the extra "e" based on whether the noun is feminine or not.

15ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

afroza 6

Adding to the above, since the indication of colour implies a very specific item, watch out for the articles that precede it to assist you in figuring out which ending you need. For example, the difference of le café noir vs la pomme noire. If you catch the articles "le" and "la" you can guess which ending the adjective noir(e) takes!

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

eldestcarroll 8

Noir describes masculine nouns, while noire describes feminine nouns. As you continue learning French, you'll find that adjectives usually have an "e" at the end when they're describing feminine things. (bon/bonne, noir/noire, gros/grosse).

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

learner96 11 6 3

noir is it's masculine form and noire is it's feminine form.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

emmaroo84 7 5

what about with 'l' not la or le?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Ali_Taleb 11

'l' is also the article for masculine. when the word begins with vowel or silent h, "le" becomes 'l'

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Leafar31 7 5

gender i.e. night is feminine so: la nuit est noire Book is masculine so: le livre est noir

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rjsanchez 6

noir = masculine noire = feminine

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

[deactivated user]

noir is masculine and noire is feminine

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

LiseLisa 6

"noir" used at the masculine form, and "noire" in the féminine form.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Munchkinchild 10

Noir-- masc. form, noire is feminine.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Unico 6

Noir is for the masculine and noire for the femenine.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

stc18paulr 7 7

im here to way in in this extremely riveting disscussion you are all truly scholars in the future

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

heidid91 22 9 1144

if l'eau is masculine, then, why is the adjective "noire" used? Is this just a random exception to the rule, or am I missing something?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FiammaShi 5 3

阴阳性不同

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

374 Sobre y Acerca, when to use one or the other?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1259863>

Diggabyte 22 12 8 6 6 5 2

As far as I've seen on duolingo, spanish class etc. Both "sobre" and "acerca" mean about in english, but when do you use one or the other?

Give Lingot

63 years ago

Leave a new comment

13 Comments

NickM98 15 13 10 10 6

What Andy said isn't completelly right.

They're pretty much the same to me, I don't think there is a difference. Acerca means "about", while Sobre can mean both "about" and "on" but that's all the difference I guess.

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AndyNZ 24

Actually sounds like I was completely wrong. :-)

Best I stick to asking and not answering.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EastDaBeast 11 10

I am a fluent "Native" Spanish speaker and this is how the word acerca is used in my household and when I communicate with others in Spanish. Acerca and sobre can be interchangeable; for example when a person says about a subject or " Sobre un subjeto" they can also say " Acerca de un Subjeto". However, sobre is closer to the English translation of about than acerca is. The equivalence of acerca in english whould be around or near (While still meaning about). So, when a person says "Acerca de esto ", it means around or near this object. In contrast, " sobre esto" means about this object. Like I said before they are interchangeable, Acerca is a "fancier way of saying about (sobre). I hope this helps.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Oliwia 20 19 17 14 12 8

That's funny, this is definitely not the explanation I've had. But unfortunately I can't remember which part of the world the guy who explained it to me was from. What I was told is that acerca is only used to talk about the main subject of, say, a book or a song, or a lecture... Un libro acerca de la vida de Julia, una conferencia acerca de la contaminación del medioambiente... And that in fact sobre works for pretty much everything else, and is more casual. Hence you're supposed to use acerca when you really want to emphasize the subject of the thing you're talking about (like the book) and sobre all the other times.

I remember it distinctly but I'm no Native, so maybe the guy was wrong!! What is your though about that? I'm curious!

Edit: the RAE dictionary says acerca de means sobre aquello de que se trata, en orden a ello, and that's it; whilst sobre means acerca de and many other things. So they seems to be interchangeable in the context of the subject.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EastDaBeast 11 10

I had a hard time of putting in English how it is used, but you are right. I was going to put before that Acerca is used for more precise, specific objects. Acerca is used in many ways throughout Latino America, and just like English words are used very differently. In Mexico, or at least the people in my household and community use it in the way I specified, but it is most definitely used in the way you just said.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Diggabyte 22 12 8 6 6 5 2

Gracias por la ayuda, so do sobre and acerca have anything to do with familiar/formal then?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

EastDaBeast 11 10

No it doesn't, its just a matter of personal choice and where you are.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AndyNZ 24

On Spanish language websites I (try to) read, "sobre" seems to be most often used as "about" and "around" while "acerca" seems to be used as "adjacent" or "next to".

At least that's what the context suggests - could be wrong though...

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

triceratops 25 17 15 5 317

It seems to me that your are mistaken "acerca" for "cerca"

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AndyNZ 24

You're probably correct. Looks likely given the similarity...

:-{

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

meghanworrell 11

That's what I heard but if you read EastDaBeast's comment, he/she said that "acerca de" means around and near... I would like to know what it really is.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

triceratops 25 17 15 5 317

They are completely interchangeable

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PawkingMetaw 10 9

I was just thinking about this too. I was wondering why the movie was called "Todo sobre mi madre" and not "Todo acerca de mi madre". It's good to see both are possible. The first sounds better though.

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

375 "The monkey is eating an orange."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/654212>

Translation: Le singe mange une orange.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

23 Comments

Dormouse 17 7

I enjoy this sentence quite a lot.

68ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sa_mills 25 24

This one seems t-shirt worthy

26ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

baileyh2004 6 2

Help me

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sr.sovic 11 9 9 6 5

the rain in spain falls mainly on the plain while le sange mange une orange

49ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chotichoti 6

Is it supposed to be a bit rhyme-y?

17ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

frenchbreadrules 25 10 7 5 2

Yes, I would imagine so....

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Needbeef 12

<h1>DuoPoetry</h1>

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dakh 15 2

I had a mark the correct translation exercise, and one option was:

Le singe est en train de manger une fille

Yes, Duolingo went there. Poor girl.

Still laughed at the unexpectedness of it.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nazeco 8

Oh my god, hahahaha

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JohnnyE87 14 5

Le singe est sur la branche, avec le président du Burundi

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

laFrance01 14 14 8 8

Toughest ever...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Varkhul 11 6

Try saying that five times fast.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Une belle phrase qui rime))))))))

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

baileyh2004 6 2

This is bad tis a pity about no gangdam style music

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LEMastroddi 9 6 6 3

I love the rhyme in this... Le singe mange une orange... Classic. By the way, when she says "singe" it sounds a bit dodgy..

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NoahKarisi 8 2

what a monkey

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Premium9998 15 14 7 5

Lol!!! One of tge options was "Le singe mange une Orange"!!! :-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RyanHilton1 10 2 2

Say this 3 times fast

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

HughMiller98 8 7 6 2

le singe mange une orange parce qu'il est extremement faim. Oh ca ira pour les fille qui aime jouer du basket dans trois fours

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LaPXL8R 5 3

What's feminine of singe?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

faydahyahy 8

sort of rhymy..do not say nay we want to play on the hay

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IdalecioJunior 13 10 7

In Brazil this is such a bad phrase to declare. Being a snake is like being a liar and a betrayer. We call this "chingamento" (shingaamêntu)

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ScarletBlood_15 8

I put that in and it says it's wrong?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

376 Why does 'Practice Weak Skills' often not refresh any weak skills?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4015927>

Townsy11 25 15 10 2 2 2 2

Since the new update on IOS, I've been experiencing issues with the 'Practice Weak Skills' lessons and their ability to refresh decayed lessons.

Only sometimes does this actually work to refresh weak skills, and quite often I will complete several lessons of 'practicing weak skills' and find that it has not made a single one of my lessons go gold (even if I know that material covered in my practice was contained in one of my decayed lessons)

Has anyone else experienced this? It seems only logical that this feature should refresh skills more frequently than once in every 4-5 practices (the average rate that I have been experiencing)

Give Lingot

122 years ago

Leave a new comment

22 Comments

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

There are a couple of things at work here.

To start, the strength of any given skill is based in part on the average strength of all of the word forms taught within that skill. A given skill might have anywhere from a dozen or so words to over seventy. Any time you use the strengthen skills exercises, whether on Android, iOS or the website, a maximum of 9 words are targeted for improvement by the app. These are typically the 9 words with the lowest strength rating, but there are some exceptions and some bugs that can affect this. If you complete a practice with no errors, those nine words will be raised to full strength along with a varying number of other words, depending on which sentences are presented and how they're configured within the course.

Because your nine weakest words at any given time probably come from a number of different skills, we can see why it can take several global practice sessions to see any one skill improve. For this reason, the surest and fastest way to get any skill to strengthen is to do practices specific to that skill, but even then it might take several practices to raise the average score of the skill's constituent words enough to bring the skill back to a golden state.

cGlua29kb3Vn

29ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

SACarrow 22 2 751

If it is the case that passing a refresher lesson may not bump up the status, then Duolingo needs to make that clearer to the users. Immediately they can post that on the site somewhere and then in an update, include a third status for refresher lessons: "Passed but not enough to bump." They need to manage user expectations.

6ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

I agree that some of their descriptions could be better, but I'm not sure that it's a reasonable expectation that one practice session would bump the status of an entire skill containing 70+ words. Plus, there's an implicit notification that you passed but didn't do enough to bump the skill when you successfully complete a practice and it doesn't bump your skill.

Some of this disconnect between the way a practice works and the way it's described is an artifact from the UI redesign at the beginning of the year. Prior to the revamp, descriptions were more "words based" rather than "skills based". The devs made a decision to describe things at the skill level even though much of the underlying functionality operates at the word level. Skill strength indicators were added, which as I said are merely the average of the skill's individual word strengths. With the old system, a user was presented with a list of words that were strengthened at the end of any practice session. This made it very clear what exactly you accomplished with your practice, plus everyone had the vocabulary list and could immediately see what words were strengthened. Things are a lot more vague now.

14ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Townsy11 25 15 10 2 2 2 2

Thank you for the thorough explanation pinkodoug, you provided a lot of insight into the inner workings of Duo that I hadn't considered before.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ohnoezitasploded 16 4

Oh, a "here is what you learned" list at the end of a strengthening session would be super helpful for me, especially if words that I was struggling with in the lesson were identified.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

jenna_swiss 25 10 7 6 4 2 2

As a course contributor, I have to agree with Doug's assessment. In regards to the Spanish for English speakers course, I can confirm that these practice activities do in fact exist within the course and have not been altered, so it could be that the algorithm that winds the crank of duolingo practice sessions is "scrambling" the exercises but some are getting stuck to the side of the bowl, so to speak- not getting mixed in like they should be. I'm in the process of consulting with other contributors in order to figure out why this is happening, but for now this is my best guess. ¡Seguimos adelante!

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sean.b.adams 17 4

I'm still experiencing a similar issue which may be related. on my weak words list - the weakest word is "Caminas" - I've been doing "practice" sessions in the skill lesson that this belongs to, 2 or 3 times per day for the last 2 weeks, and through this all, Duolingo has not given me the word "Caminas" to practice.

I'm not sure how to get Duolingo to focus on the weakest words - Moderators, is there something I'm doing wrong?

Please feel free to use my data as a reproducible example.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Paul_J_Chapman 21 18 1

My problem is that my weak words aren't actually strengthening after the practice session. I took a word count and i have 369 words with one bar of strength. After three practice sessions is was still left with 369 words with only one bar of strength. Sometimes i will revise a word several times in a session and then when i look in the word list it still has only one bar of strength. Its really discouraging when you cant see the progress being made

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Melarish 16 15 14 12 12 11 9 8 4 3 2

I've had that too, when a word that just appeared in my practice session is still listed as "1/4, last seen 1 year ago". I reported it as a bug.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sean.b.adams 17 4

I'm experiencing the same issue.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

I've experienced the exact same as you. And now, the skills' names are only ! for me. ./ This update was not the best...I hope we see a true bug fix (and restoring of old features) soon.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SACarrow 22 2 751

I have the same issue in Spanish. For me it seems that certain lessons cannot be refreshed fully. For example, just now I was able to refresh Idioms, but not Verbs Past or Verbs Present 3 in spite of passing the refresh lessons

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SACarrow 22 2 751

Just to update this thread too: I am able to update to gold if I pass the refresher enough, so I understand the mechanism better, thanks to pinkodoug and Usagiboy7 on the other thread. User expectations still should have been handled better, especially as this apparently did change former behavior (I came on after that). The word "implicit" was used by pinkodoug and as a software designer, if that word was mentioned in a scrum or meeting, there should have been an immediate intervention by the other duoLingo devs. One can never underestimate the intelligence of one's user community; I am a prime example. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pinkodoug 25 11 11 7 6

Just to be clear, the changes in January didn't really change the former behavior, it only changed the way that it was described. I think it was much clearer before, and the changes obfuscated things a bit. As I said in another post, I agree that some of their descriptions are lacking, and could be improved. It would be better, imo, if these sorts of things weren't merely implied, but explicitly stated.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jhazon 15 13 4 3

I've been experiencing this as well, even at this later date. My problem was that even trying to "strengthen" the individual skills (conjunctions, for example) would never increase that particular skill level to gold. Since I like to have everything at full strength, this was pretty annoying, especially after practicing over and over and over again.

For anyone else experiencing this, I think I found a work-around, in that practicing the individual lessons within a skill rather than using the "strengthen skills" button can by itself raise the level to gold. I got this to work for two different skills that wouldn't increase to gold using the strengthen button. Granted, I only tried this by redoing the lessons with the words I was seeing in the strengthen exercise, so I'm not sure if it will work by practicing any random lesson within a given skill.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Lara4590 15 6

Yes! Thanks for this tip, I also like everything to be gold and after refreshing an exercise about 7 times was able to get it to full strength using this method. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sean.b.adams 17 4

Hi there Duolingo team,

I'm not sure if you read these forums, however after many weeks of practice it seems that several words in the Spanish course do not have exercises available to refresh / strengthen them.

I'm making this assumption due to the fact that I've been refreshing / strengthening weak words on Verbs Present 1 for weeks now (because they are appearing with a WEAK rating under Words), but still these words remain stubbornly absent from practice sessions.

Examples being: - Caminas - Cocina - Tocamos - Cocinan - Hacemos - Haces

I would be very happy to help with closing these gaps by creating some targeted practice sentences - just need access and guidance to do so. Alternatively - I would be happy to work with your team to identify the cause of the issue, and hopefully creative ways to auto-find sentences that can fill these gaps by using targeted internet searches (in other words - if you search for any sentences using the word "caminas", which only uses words that were within the vocabulary by the time the student got to this lesson, it should be possible to quickly create a diverse range of relevant practice sentences with very little effort)

Many thanks Sean

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sean.b.adams 17 4

Hi there Duolingo Dev Team

Any luck in finding the underlying cause of this issue? Many users (myself included) are experiencing an issue where the strengthen or practice functions are not targeting the weakest words - but instead we're getting other sentences coming up frequently which only use stronger or strong words.

I would hope that the algo could be changed to be more similar to Anki where the weaker words bubble up to the top of the review stack first (so you target weakest first).

If I can be of help in providing examples or demonstrating the issue, please let me know Sean

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hideki 12 12 12 7 6 6 3 3 2 994

Hi sean.b.adams,

Thanks for reporting this with detailed information. It seems your word strength is currently low for the word haces, and doing a global practice lets you review that word.

We recently added a capability to make weak words more likely to show up in skill/global practice sessions. We are aware there are some remaining problems in practice, which will be fixed in the future.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sean.b.adams 17 4

Thank you - appreciate your help on this - I will give this a try. Have a great Wed Sean

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sean.b.adams 17 4

Hi hideki, I've been working through this for the last few weeks, and "haces" and "quieres" are still on the list as weak words (in fact "haces" has not come up for practice in 6 months despite frequently using the practice for "verbs present 1", and "quieres" in 3 months)

Interestingly though - many other words come up all the time, even though they are already strong, like "bebo" or "lee".

looking forward to any further tweaks you can do here to force the weak words to have highest priority!

Thanks Hideki

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MarkRobins15 25 8 5

I am having the same issue as Sean. Global practice and strengthening skills never provide an example with these words even after extensive repetition. I am seeing the issue with many of the same words that Sean mentions. Notably Haces which I tried to target for a while to see if I was just being unlucky with the presented exercises, another example is abuelo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

377 Fluency vs. Proficiency

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1276332>

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 13

What does it mean to be fluent in a language? Most people equate fluency with proficiency, but as an ESL teacher and a psycholinguistic researcher, I can assure you that there is a distinction. It is possible to be fluent without being highly proficient, as it is also possible to be highly proficient without being fluent.

Fluency, whether it be in reading or in language, refers to the ability to convey the message unhaltingly. When it comes to second language learning, a few major aspects of fluency lay in the prosody of the language, pronunciation, and the timing of dialogue. Indeed, it is even possible to be fluent in your native language in your home region, but not have fluency in a different region of the same country. I have fluency in a Midwestern dialect of English. If I were to travel to the deep south, I could easily hold a conversation, but I would not be considered fluent in that region. Fluency is impossible to attain without engaging in dialogue with a fluent speaker of the language.

Proficiency, on the other hand, is the primary focus of Duolingo. This is your ability to understand and communicate in the language. While I would not be fluent in the dialect of the Deep South, I am still a highly proficient English speaker. Proficiency is best practiced through reading and writing. Children may be fluent in a language but not highly proficient, as they lack a certain level of vocabulary that comes with understanding the depth of the language. Of course, the vocabulary covered in the language tree will not provide complete proficiency in the language either, but it will provide the foundations that, along with the reading and writing practice in the Immersion section of the website, can expand your proficiency.

Is your goal learning goal one of fluency or one of proficiency? Do you want to hold a conversation with the ease of a native speaker, or do you want to understand the depths of what the language has to offer? Both are excellent language goals, and it is important for you to recognize your own purpose in order to set a language routine that will allow you to achieve those goals.

Give Lingot9
203 years ago

Leave a new comment
10 Comments

eszamp 19 10 7 4 3

Totally agree with you in every way. I consider myself fluent in Spanish only because I'm a bilingual native speaker and can hold conversations easily. Even still, I'm not the most proficient (which is why I'm here in the first place!) and I'm definitely not fluent in most dialects of Spanish, especially because Argentina is totally different from most. I think that to be "fluent" you should have a certain level of proficiency, of course. But if you have no grasp on colloquialisms/expressions/anything that isn't literal, the conversations you'll have with native speakers won't have much depth. These things have to be learned through immersion. No amount of studying (or TV show watching) will give you that experience. Even if you observe peoples' interactions and memorize slang words or whatever, it'll still probably come across as artificial.

Personally I wouldn't consider someone fluent in a language if the extent of their knowledge of a language is limited to what they've learned in a course or two. I agree that language courses emphasize proficiency over fluency, however you define the latter. Feel free to prove me wrong, this is just in my experience of interacting with Spanish-speakers vs. students taking Spanish classes.

I think my own goal is mostly just to improve my general Spanish proficiency in terms of grammar, writing and reading. I don't think fluency is an issue for me at this point. I'm also really interested in learning Portuguese! I haven't decided what my Portuguese goals are, though.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Andrealphus 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 3 3 3

This was very informative! Thank you! I also learned that since I was partially taught to speak by Texan family though I live up in Ohio, I can claim bi-fluency!(whether it's a real thing or not)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jheavner724 18 6 6 5 4

I think this is a bit to "matter of fact", as there is no official, specific, definitive, agreed upon, definition of fluency,

But, other than that, I agree that fluency and proficiency can be thought of as being separate things to some extent (obviously there is some overlap in many situations). I also think that one aspect of fluency is being able to get your point across, not worrying about how graceful you are. By this I mean that, if you lack the vocabulary or knowledge to express something, you can improvise fairly smoothly and find another way of expressing it, whereas someone with proficiency whom also lacks the vocabulary may be at a loss for words.

Nice mentioning dialects of English by the way, as that is something that is too often overlooked. Of course, some dialects and accents of English are fairly similar, but others, like some found in the deep south that you mention or in parts of Australia, are quite distinct.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

I agree entirely, personally I dislike the word fluency, since it is such an ambiguous term. I think it derived from the word "flow", as in flow through the stream (or language) easily, rather than fight the current.

Anyway, I prefer to use the term proficiency, if I had to define my average proficiency in all aspects of the languages I know (Portuguese, and English), I would say I'm an intermediary in both. However, as odd as it may sound, my ability to write is higher (between intermediary and High proficiency) in English than it is in my native language, my ability to read is about the same in both (intermediary), and my ability to speak too.

In my opinion, it seems as if the term "expert" cannot really apply to languages, a linguist (highly proficient) would be the closest to the term, and yet even that individual will struggle to understand a teenager's lingo (with all the new terms that arise everyday), and domain specific (technical) terms.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

oskalingo 24 14 10 6 3 6

Just to clear up a common misconception, being a linguist has almost nothing to do with 'knowing' languages. Linguists study languages, in the sense of studying them to find out things about them, not in the sense of studying them to learn them. A linguist may have proficiency in languages other than their native tongue and sometimes it may be necessary for the work that they are doing, but not always.

The most common response that linguists get when they say that they are a linguist is 'How many languages do you speak?'. They hate it because it is a question mostly irrelevant to their work and continually demonstrates to them that people don't understand what they do.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

Well, I didn't know that, but according to [1,2,3] a linguist is either "a person skilled in foreign languages" or a "person who studies linguistics". Therefore, I guess people are right in asking how many languages they know, and perhaps scholars (of languages) should call themselves accordingly, since they are probably aware of the ambiguity in the definition of the term "linguist".

1 - <http://www.oxforddictionaries.com/definition/english/linguist>

2 - <http://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/linguist>

3 -

https://www.google.co.za/search?q=define+linguist+oq=define+linguist+aqs=chrome..69i57.7521j0j7sourceid=chromeespv=210es_sm=93ie=UTF-8#es_sm=93espv=210q=linguist+

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LaMilanese 11 10 10

I think that in English the distinction between a linguist and a polyglot (a person who knows more than his/her native tongue) is nonexistent for a lot of people. I can only speak for my mothertongue, but in Italian the difference between "linguista" and "poliglotta" is felt.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Dessamator 25 14 13 13

I can relate to what Oskalingo stated. It is similar to how when someone such as myself states that he possesses an IT (Information Technology) degree or something similar (e.g. CS). Some people seem to assume that we (IT people) can use every single kind of software/technology that exists, and that we know everything related to technology. Others go beyond computer related stuff and even ask for help setting up their TVs or electronic equipment.

The worst is that when you don't succeed in the task they ask you to do such as being unable to use a simple feature in a productivity software (e.g. Ms Office) then they may tease or insult you, and indicate that your degree is worthless.

That's why rather than informing people I have a degree in IT much like someone would say he is a linguist, I say I'm a software developer, which is clearer and avoids ambiguity.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 13

Precisely why I use the term "psycholinguistic researcher" rather than "linguist" or "psychologist" to describe my work with the university, though both would also be accurate terms. I know my best friend from high school still fails to understand that my psychology degree does not make me a therapist.

3Give Lingot•3 years ago

oskalingo 24 14 10 6 3 6
Indeed.

Computer Science is no more about computers than astronomy is about telescopes.

— (Attributed to) E.W. Dijkstra

Although linguistics is certainly about language, it's just not about knowing languages.

2Give Lingot•3 years ago

378 "Hunger is one of the most serious problems that is."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/669585>

Translation: La faim est l'un des plus sérieux problèmes qui soient.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

26 Comments

Chuckles16 23 4

The subject of this phrase is "hunger" and hunger is singular, therefore surely the "is" should be "soit" and not "soient"?

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Muzorewi1984 25 22 1378

Yep. Certainly the English translation should be "hunger is one of the most serious problems there is". I'd be interested to know if the French was wrong here, too

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MichaelvsFrench 14

If the French is not wrong, certainly some sort of grammatical explanation is in order.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AnnaTall 25 3 3 3

hm... Couldn't 'Hunger is one of the most serious problems that there are'. It rings right...

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

buffalump21 25 11 6 5 3 2

Yes, DL have missed out "there" between "problems that is"..have reported it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

buffalump21 25 11 6 5 3 2

No fix, so have reported it again...in fact they could leave out "that" altogether and just say "there" ... but there definitely needs to be a "there" in the English sentence.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JazzyDavies 14 9 3

I also just reported it, 6 Feb 2014

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Dogstaruk 25 8 8

'Problems' is plural, so in English it should be 'that there are' or 'that exist'. 'Soient' is correct because it qualifies 'problèmes' and not 'La faim'. I think!

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Preste 14 13 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 4

You are absolutely correct.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

buffalump21 25 11 6 5 3 2

Me too, hope someone french replies soon :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

buffalump21 25 11 6 5 3 2

Ahhh..could it be that the serious problems is what it has to agree with here, as that is the subject of the 2nd clause...(hope this makes sense) :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pfeil 21 13 11 10

Yes, that's what I thought. But anyway, I didn't get the meaning of the sentence, maybe because I'm not an English native speaker...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

studiozazu 12

I would love to know if a different rule governs the agreement of subject and predicate in French-- why "soient" is correct and "soit" was not.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Either the English sentence has broken grammar, or some crucial context is missing and the translation is wrong.

Option 1: The translation is correct

If the translation is correct, then "that is" refers to "the most serious problems". But then the number is wrong and "that is" should be plural as in the French version:

"Hunger is one of the most serious problems that there are [or: that exist]."

Option 2: The English sentence is correct

Since "that is" cannot refer to "the most serious problems", it must refer to "one": "Hunger is one ... that is." This makes sense if the preceding sentence sets an appropriate context: "Many of the world's ... problems are not solvable. Hunger is one ... that is." Now we just have to fill in the dots:

"Many of the world's small and big problems are not solvable. Hunger is one of the most serious problems that is [solvable]."

But this is irreconcilable with the French translation. If "qui soient" referred to "l'un", it would have to be singular indicative, not plural subjunctive.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

n6zs 25 866

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Sorry, but this is not how grammar works. You can't just take superficially similar sentences and draw conclusions. They also have to be structurally similar, which is not the case here.

"One of the most important things [...] is word-order."

Here the singular is required because one is singular. It becomes clear if you tone things down a little bit:

"One thing is word-order."

Now let's look at the sentence we are discussing.

"Hunger is one of the most serious problems there is".

This is wrong because the subject to which the second is refers is not hunger (singular) but problems (plural). Hunger is one of the most serious problems. Of which serious problems? Of the serious problems that there are. Not of the serious problems that there is. (That would be ungrammatical.)

If this didn't make it clear yet, maybe this will help:

"One of the most serious problems [that] there are is hunger."

"One of the most important things [that] there are is word order."

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

milesnagopaleen 16 11 7 2

Well done for providing the correct analysis! Of course, it is sufficient to say "Hunger is one of the most serious problems" - "that there are" is superfluous. One assumes that the writer is addressing problem that exist and not problems that don't.

I suspect that confusion arises because of the loss of many subjunctive forms in English and that the "correct" rendition would be: "Hunger is one of the most serious problems that be." Although this may sound strange to most native English speakers, the same form is found in the common expression "the powers that be". P.S. Have a lingot!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

salvadorlopz 11 10 6 5 4 2

That English sentence is too awkward

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CarolSeidl 12 2

I don't understand why the answer begins "la faim est l'un" and not "la faim est un".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ChanBeauge 16 13 8

I don't understand why la faim est "l'une" since it is feminine

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

But problème is masculine, and this is what matters. This is for a similar reason as why the English sentence is actually ungrammatical. (See my previous post for the explanation of that.)

In each of the following examples I will use parentheses for one phrase that forms a unit which needs to be analysed together and can be replaced by a single word. In the next line I will repeat the sentence with this single word, ask for it and give the response.

The correct analysis is as follows:

La faim est (l'un des plus sérieux problèmes qui soient).
La faim est quelque chose. Elle est quoi ? L'un des plus sérieux problèmes qui soient.
Hunger is (one of the most serious problems that there are).
Hunger is something. What is it? One of the most serious problems that there are.
Your analysis is plausible, especially coming from English. But it is not the one actually used by French speakers. Here it is in detail:

La faim est l'une (des plus sérieux problèmes qui soient).
La faim est l'une. Elle est l'une de quoi ? Des plus sérieux problèmes qui soient.
Hunger is one (of the most serious problems that there are).
Hunger is one. It is one of what? Of the most serious problems that there are.
Finally, for comparison the nonsensical analysis used by whoever wrote the wrong English translation:

La faim est (l'un des plus sérieux problèmes) qui soit.
La faim est quelque chose qui soit. Parmi toutes les choses qui soient, elle est laquelle ? L'un des plus sérieux problèmes.
Hunger is (one of the most serious problems) that there is.
Hunger is something that there is. Of all the things that there are, which one is it? One of the most serious problems.
0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

This is one of the silly little details of French grammar that just have to be learned. IMO it doesn't really make sense. I just checked "est un des" and "l'un des" as well as "est une des" and "l'une des" in the real French literature using Google's ngram viewer. (I would give direct links, but it's very cumbersome and the forum software eats the necessary ampersand characters.) I was surprised by what I found.

The good news:

The superfluous article doesn't always appear, but only in about 50 % of uses in the masculine case and just over 40 % of uses in the feminine case.

The bad news:

It's on the rise. In 1800 the definite article was only rarely used in this way (less than 10 % of cases). But since about 1920-1940 there has been growing use of the definite article. At the moment we have roughly parity, but there is no indication that the process has stopped yet. Not using the definite article here may soon be considered wrong or at least unidiomatic.

For some reason that eludes me, it appears that using the definite article with un has always been slightly more popular than using it with une. I would be very grateful for a plausible explanation for that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

un_minou 11 3
Still not reported!!!!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

adrienne58 25 8 3

I think that "one of the most serious problems that there is" is correct. However, more proper English would be "one of the most serious problems that exists".

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

No, your sentence is as ungrammatical as the one given. Apparently you are reading this as "Hunger is one ... that there is", where "one" is defined as "one of the most serious problems". But in this reading "that there is" makes no sense.

What seems to be actually meant is this: Hunger is one of the following things:

the most serious problems that there are.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

johaquila 16 16 15 15 14 14 12 10 8

Someone downvoted me for trying to help you understand where you went wrong. Was it you? In that case I guess you need further explanation.

One of can usually be replaced by among without changing anything else. Let's try it here:

"Hunger is among the most serious problems that [there] is."

"Hunger is among the most serious problems that exists."

These sentences are obviously ungrammatical for precisely the same reason that the original sentences didn't say what they intended. Make sure you understand that the following corrections are grammatical:

"Hunger is among the most serious problems that there are."

"Hunger is among the most serious problems that exist."

Therefore the following sentences are also grammatical:

"Hunger is one of the most serious problems that there are."

"Hunger is one of the most serious problems that exist."

These sentences are actual translations of the French sentence, which also has the verb indicating existence (soient) in the plural, making it clear that it belongs to the subject qui, not l'un. (In addition, with l'un it would have to be indicative. Only qui can cause the subjunctive here.)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

379 Which is the easiest language to learn..

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2318160>

happyheart2

Which is the easiest language to learn.

Give Lingot1

102 years ago

Leave a new comment

27 Comments

TKelliott 21 21 21 10 10 557

Depends on what your native language is (easier to learn something that's similar) and also how motivated you are. There's no point attempting to learn a language in which you're not interested simply because it's allegedly 'easy'.

There's a table here, done by the Foreign Services Institute, which classifies languages by how difficult they apparently are for English-speakers to learn them:

<http://www.effectivelanguagelearning.com/language-guide/language-difficulty>

I wouldn't take it as absolute - more of a useful guide. I certainly wouldn't decide against learning a language in which I was interested because it's supposed to be 'difficult'.

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

revdolphin 25 17 10 6 13

That's a great chart. My supervisor keeps telling me it would be easier for an English speaker learn Cantonese than Vietnamese. Now I have a reputable source to back up my decision to learn Vietnamese first.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rewong 4 2 2

If I were you, I wouldn't look at the textbook answers. Obviously, some languages are going to be closer/farther from English in terms of similarity and therefore will take you shorter/longer periods of time to learn, respectively. But if you hate learning Spanish & its culture and and love learning Arabic & its culture, Arabic will be far easier to learn and more fun than Spanish, even if it takes longer.

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

happyheart2
that's right

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

psionpete 25 21 16 15 14 6 5 4 3 1153
How long is a piece of string?

8ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

Lachault 11
Esperanto, whatever your mother tongue.

8ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

pont 25 23 18 16 10 5 105
Not necessarily; Esperanto is certainly very regular, but this factor could be outweighed by similarities between your native language and the one you're learning. For example, I'd expect that a monolingual Estonian speaker would find it easier to learn Finnish than Esperanto.

For an English speaker, Scots would be easier than Esperanto. As a native English speaker who's never studied Scots, I can read it with almost full comprehension. Reading Esperanto, I can make some sense of it, but compared to Scots it's harder work and I understand a lot less. (This despite the fact that I speak or have studied members of all the language families that Esperanto is based on!)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BarbaraMorris 25 25 25

Interesting - I didn't realize until just now that Scots is considered a separate language from English. I thought it was just a dialect. I agree that it's pretty easy to read, but I think it would be way more difficult to learn to write it than Esperanto.

Edit: I found this site which is quite fun to read in the Scots version. But it feels more like reading Robert Burns, and not a separate language. <http://www.scotslanguage.com/>

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

What is your native language?

If it is English (that is my native language) here is an interesting article:

http://en.wikibooks.org/wiki/Wikibooks:Language_Learning_Difficulty_for_English_Speakers

However, if you have no motivation, it will be very hard to learn any language. So, pick a language that allows you to do activities you enjoy or that you need to learn the most in order to realize some big dream or goal. Having both a reason and a desire to learn a particular language seems very important.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pejsekx 13 6 3

My guess is that Toki Pona might be one of the easiest. It has almost no grammar, and only about 120 words. I can also recommend learning Pig Latin.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

abhisheksharma7 21 13 12 12 7 5 3 2 2 2

in my opinion spanish is the easiest language to learn.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CHAMPION.DUO 19 10 8 8 7 6 2

It is easy to learn Spanish.....

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kiano1234 6 6 3 2

Until you actually have to speak it one day and you sound like a complete idiot

1ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

Morgengrauen 10 8 6 5 2

Definitively German. It's so easy, I could pick it up as a kid.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pont 25 23 18 16 10 5 105

Ah, but I heard it took you five years just to get to the standard of a five-year-old ;-).

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Morgengrauen 10 8 6 5 2

OMG! How did you know?! ;)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Atanalo 9 7 5 3

I'm not sure that's a very good measure of 'ease', learning languages as a child is almost always easier.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

psionpete 25 21 16 15 14 6 5 4 3 1153

It is a very old joke. I think he was trying to be funny.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Morgengrauen 10 8 6 5 2

If you're not sure about the gender, please use something neutral. Just because I'm posting on the Internet doesn't mean I'm male.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Atanalo 9 7 5 3

Ah, ok

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bodyking12 8 5 3

english and arabic

1ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Ivanan_ 12 7 7 6 3 2 2

Depends on your native, honestly. If it's English - go for German/Dutch/Esperanto. Latin roots - like Spanish? Italian/French, no problem. Slavic - like Russian? I present to you - Bosnian, Belarusian, Serbian, etc. Germanic roots - like German? Have a go at Dutch, maybe! Swedish? Go for German or Norwegian. It all depends on what you can already speak.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jiang.Jiaxin 5 2

From many sites is French, Italian, Spanish, Dutch for native English speakers.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MaxMichejda 13 166

According to many websites, Afrikaans and Dutch are the easiest to learn for English speakers. They are the most closely related. Most Germanic languages are not as demanding as, for example Mandarin Chinese. Afrikaans has no conjugation, two genders and some vocabulary, that is similar to English. Here is a website that ranks languages by difficulty for English speakers :

<http://www.effectivelanguagelearning.com/language-guide/language-difficulty>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jackha1 6

I presume you're a native English speaker so either Dutch or Afrikaans

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

380 Learning Two Languages at the Same Time?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5074260>

DogePamyuPamyu 14 13 12

I read it is bad to learn multiple languages at the same time. I already know German technically, just learning vocab. I started learning Dutch on here a couple days ago and I love it!

I take French in school and I have a bad teacher so I don't learn anything. I think it would be very funny if I magically knew lots of French without being taught any of it. I don't really like the language, but I am learning it because I want to live in Europe so I need to know French (or at least I WANT to know French)...

I am not getting confused between German and Dutch, it's easy for me to keep them apart. I'm worried focusing on French and Dutch may be too much or something, or I may get confused since I'm learning two different grammar systems simultaneously.

To all your polyglots: What is your opinion on learning Dutch and French at the same time with two different grammar systems? Is learning two bad for my proficiency in one?

Give Lingot

12 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

Lenkvist 23 22 17 14 13 12 12 11 10 7 7

Here are some comments by polyglots:

<http://how-to-learn-any-language.com/e/faq/problems-several-languages.html>

<http://www.fluentin3months.com/not-mix-up/>

<http://thelanguagedojo.com/2008/12/learning-languages-time/>

<http://www.mylanguages.com/can-you-learn-two-foreign-languages-at-the-same-time>

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tnel1 13 12 11 10 6

Thank you for these links!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

supainanoko 22 19 15 13 9 7 6 5 3 3

I am learning Japanese at the same time as German and Danish, as well as taking Spanish in school. German and Danish have seem to have somewhat similar vocabularies to me (as did Dutch, when I looked at it), but it is not giving me trouble. Japanese of course is very different from either of them, so I don't get them confused, although I do try to insert Spanish into all three of them when I've forgotten a word. I am not sure, but I think different grammar systems might help you keep the languages separate (that is one reason I am not learning French--I have exams in Spanish this year and don't want to confuse myself with all the cognates). If you are just looking for vocab for German, not grammar, I would suggest Memrise, which is basically advanced flashcards. They have courses for Duolingo vocabulary if you're interested.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DogePamyuPamyu 14 13 12

Thanks! I'll check out Memrise. Since Dutch isn't giving me complications in German, I guess I'm okay to learn French if it is a different grammar system.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GabrielGP 11 10 10 5

Well, my mother language is spanish, but my school is german, so they teach us german and also english, and i've been watching these languages for a long time ago (since i was a child), now i know more english than german, main reason why i'm here, but also i'm starting to learn dutch and it goes very well. Just relax, if you like what you're doing, it will go very well for you. The only thing is... Is difficult to learn 2 languages, isn't bad, but also and more important, not impossible...

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Don_Cristian 25 25 22 22 15 14 11 11 11 11 11 11 10 10 10 10 9 9 7 5 5 4 3 2 2

I had always 2 foreign languages at school the same time, this was the minimum with these compulsory languages. In some point in high school I had 5 foreign languages in the same term.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JulianaE.2002 7 3

My sister is learning spanish ,latin and french at the same time and she is doing great. My other sister is learning latin and french at the same time and she gets them mixed up. I guess it just depends on the person.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

381 The Omission of "Ne" in the Negative
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4569609>

Samsta 17 16 12

I found this page very interesting and helpful. This is something that is very common in informal French and therefore very important in my opinion! Voici le lien :

http://www.french-linguistics.co.uk/grammar/negative_ne_omission.shtml

I would love to know about any regional differences or any other information on this subject! I hope it helped.

Give Lingot

292 years ago

Leave a new comment

21 Comments

Mariana.Fortes 15

This came just in the right time for me, I just reached the last checkpoint and there were some sentences with no "ne" in the last skill. Thanks for sharing ^_^ I think it's important to sound the most natural possible when learning a new language.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

I'm glad it helped!

I agree. Sometimes, people (including me) spend too much time making sure what they're saying is "correct." The truth is, sometimes it's better to ignore the rules and use what sounds/feels right! I suppose we technically should say "It is I," but we would never say that in everyday speech. We must remember that there is a time for colloquial speech and a time for more formal speech.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

la_raconteuse 25 13 11 11

Thanks for sharing this!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

osiriscorleone 22 18 3 56

This is very helpful. The one thing I would point out is that the ne is only dropped in speech - never in writing.

Spoken French is a language of elision and omission - much like spoken American English - and it's important for those of us wishing to speak French comfortably to understand the unofficial rules of speech. For instance, "Je ne sais pas" ("I don't know") is usually just contracted down to "Je pas" in spoken French. Similarly, because the nous and vous forms tend to take more time to conjugate, native French speakers usually use "on" (one) in place of nous and will often try to move from vouvoyers to tutoyers as soon as possible, simply because it's much easier.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MiaouMisou 13 12 11

Osiriscorleone, you may hear "Je pas" when a French speaker says a contracted "Je ne sais pas", but that's not what he is actually saying. It would be "J'sais pas" or "Ch'ais pas" but "Je pas" makes no sense. I agree with the "nous" -- "on" (easier). In spoken French, you won't hear very often "nous faisons ça" but "on fait ça" instead. But I don't agree with moving from vouvoyers to tutoyers as soon as possible. You switch if you want to be more friendly, but not because it's easier. And if it is more appropriate to vouvoyer your interlocutor, you won't try to move to tutoyer.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

osiriscorleone 22 18 3 56

In the months I spent in Burgundy, my hosts certainly weren't saying J'sais pas. I won't claim to be fluent in French, but I do trust my ears and eyes, and there was no "s" sound whatsoever when they would say "I don't know". In general I found the Burgundian spoken French to be very contracted and I often got teased for speaking properly. As for the switch to tutoyers, everybody I interacted with for more than a couple minutes almost immediately used the tutoyers, both with me and with each other, and when I asked I was told by several different people that in general - especially with younger people (e.g. under 40) that the vouvoyers is almost never used unless you're really trying to show respect (in the way English-speakers would use "sir"). But this was only my experience, and yours may be different.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MiaouMisou 13 12 11

Well I'm French from France, (please, excuse my poor English) so I trust my ears too :) I believe we agree on the spoken sound and I just think you didn't choose an accurate transcription for it because "Je pas" really makes no sense and doesn't correspond to the pronunciation of a contracted "Je sais pas" if you pronounce "Je pas" in proper French. I said "Je pas" to a friend and she thought I was saying "Je parle". However, if you say "J'sais pas", "Ch'ais pas", or even "Chépa" or "Chépo" to a French person, anywhere in France, he understands it. Yes, a young person uses tutoyer when speaking to another young person, but from the beginning, so there is no switch from vouvoyer to tutoyer (you don't necessarily have to start a conversation with someone you met for the first time vouvoying him or her!) What I mean is that most of the time you immediately know if you have to tutoyer or vouvoyer your interlocutor so it's not that much common to change during the conversation. But I agree it does happen, and I think it increases while you age (I'm 23 and I'm almost never in that situation), and sometimes it is a slightly awkward situation ("Heuuu... On peut se tutoyer ?")

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

osiriscorleone 22 18 3 56

Your English is great! No excuses necessary, keep it up!

I guess the transliteration to Anglophone ears is closer to "Je pas" than "J'sais pas" - another commenter pointed me to a video below in which the woman is saying "J'sais pas" or "Ch'ais pas" but I'll be damned if I can hear an "s" in there. But as a native French speaker, I'll obviously defer to you.

As for the tutoyer, I was 30ish when I was last in France and I found that people would become annoyed with me if I continued to use the vouvoyer with them after talking to them for a while - even much older people. It seemed like with the exception of business transactions and strangers on the street, most people didn't really want to use the vouvoyer. Obviously when talking to a peer of around your own age, you will start with the tutoyer, but even with my friend's parents they tolerated me using vouvoyers until I slipped up and then told me to please use the tutoyer because it was just easier. That also happened with some of the people we worked with that were twice my age! Maybe that's just my experience, though. And yes, I am familiar with the the "on peut se tutoyer" situation, although as a foreign speaker I was too nervous to ask! Either way, the whole concept is so fascinating to me, and I was really surprised by how uncommon using the vouvoyers is in normal conversation. It seems like French speakers will do anything to avoid having to verbally conjugate verbs beyond the normal "je/tu/il/elle/on" sounds.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ynwa12 16 9 6

Wow, thanks for that! I would never have known that "je pas" would actually mean "je ne sais pas." That's such a huge reduction.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MiaouMisou 13 12 11

This is not true :)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

driusan 17 10 10 3 3 2 1

As MiaouMisou says, it's not true. It's spoken so quickly and slurred together that it might sound like that to someone learning French, but there's a definite "s" sound.

It's:

"Je sais pas" (ne omitted)

The Je and sais get slurred into:

"J'sais pas"

Now say it quickly and it might sound like "Je pas" or "J'ai pas" to someone not familiar with French, but it's actually "ch'ais pas" as in the comment above.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

osiriscorleone 22 18 3 56

Again, this may be a regional thing. I'm pretty familiar with French, and I spent a lot of time in Burgundy and they sure weren't saying any "s" sound. But again, that's only my experience.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

driusan 17 10 10 3 3 2 1

I went to YouTube and searched for "Chai pas" to try and find an example and came up with this music video:

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FVonHJz_NIQ

(Fast forward to around 15 seconds if you don't want to watch it and just want to hear the j'sais pas part.)

That's the sound that me (and presumably MiaouMisou) are assuming you're referring to. There's a definite "s" sound, it's just very fast and slurred. (Note that the title is "J'sais pas" and I found it by searching for "chai pas")

Is that what you're referring to, or do you have another video/audio sample that better illustrates the "je pas" sound that you're talking about?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

osiriscorleone 22 18 3 56

That's exactly the sound I'm talking about, where do you hear an "s" in that? The "ch" sound is definitely plausible (it's often hard to tell a "ch" from a "j" in spoken FR French), but I hear no "s" whatsoever.

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

driusan 17 10 10 3 3 2 1

(This is a reply to osiriscorleone, for some reason I don't have a reply button on his/her comment..)

I don't know what to tell you other than that it's there. J + s sounds like "ch" when spoken quickly, which is distinct from just "j". And the "eh" sound is pronounced as the -ais from sais, not the e from "je" if you listen carefully.

Instead of trying to hear the difference, try speaking it and you might be able to hear the subtle differences better. Say "Je sais pas" as quickly as you can a few times, then say "Je pas"

If you look at the comments, description, or search for the video there's multiple ways that people spell the slang spoken version ranging from "j'sais", "chai", to "ché" but none of the francophones who commented on the video interpret it as "Je pas".

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

osiriscorleone 22 18 3 56

To clarify: to an Anglophone ear, it sounds like French people are saying "Je pas" (at least it sounds that way to me), but as two other commenters have pointed out, they're really saying "j'sais pas" or "ch'ais pas". And while I can't for the life of me hear that "s" sound, I will obviously defer to the native speakers.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Beppo52 25 20 10 29

Take the advice of MiaouMisou and DaveMacFar, they seem to know what they're talking about. No one actually says 'je pas,' it's just that some people speak so rapidly that the untrained ear of an English-speaking person might perceive it that way. They do, however, omit the "ne" almost all the time, or pronounce it so that it's barely perceptible.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

driusan 17 10 10 3 3 2 1

I don't think there's any regional differences here. I'm assuming the source is referring to France french based on the British domain, but everything he refers to is common in both Quebec and Acadia as well, at least. (Perhaps even more so, since French tends to be more informal here..)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Beeferin 8 3 2

Thanks for the information! Really, all I took away from it at first glance was that if you were speaking casually to someone you could leave out the 'ne' and simply keep the 'pas' in the sentence, but seeing as I'm heading off to bed momentarily, I'll peruse it in greater detail after work tomorrow.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Samsta 17 16 12

I think another important bit was that it isn't usually omitted when there is a noun phrase. Here's their explanation:

In other words, speakers would tend to say mon frère ne veut pas... rather than ...veut pas..., because of the presence of the noun phrase mon frère. Note that a problem with this observation is that a feature of informal French is to insert a pronoun corresponding to the noun. For example: mon frère, il (ne) veut pas venir vs the more formal mon frère ne veut pas venir. So the statistic that we are looking at could be the proportion of times that speakers chose a "more formal variant" of the sentence rather than specifically a statement about how often ne is omitted when an informal variant is chosen.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Beeferin 8 3 2

I greatly appreciate the additional information. This'll be helpful in the near future!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

382 What language is the most worth it to learn?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1856602>

Parisian_Dreamer 9 3

Ps. I don't want answers like "Go where your heart tells you to" or "it depends" I want your opinion please, I started learning French on another account. So I can understand very basic French. And the language must be available on Duolingo and can't be english

Give Lingot

33 years ago

Leave a new comment

35 Comments

Seth_H 12 8 8 2

If you plan on doing something in a professional field, especially something that can involve work abroad, I recommend one of the 6 official languages of the UN:

English

Spanish

French
Russian
Chinese
Arabic

Source: <https://www.un.org/en/aboutun/languages.shtml>

Or one of the official languages of the European Union:

Bulgarian
Croatian
Czech
Danish
Dutch Estonian
English
Finnish
French
German
Greek
Hungarian
Italian
Irish
Latvian Lithuanian
Maltese
Polish
Portuguese
Romanian
Slovak
Slovenian
Spanish
Swedish

Source: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Languages_of_the_European_Union

20ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

StrapsOption 23 17 14 14 11 11 8 8 8 6 5 5 3 3 2 2 2

I gave you a lingot for the pure fact that that comment said 'Maltese' in it! Learn Maltese, Parisian_Dreamer! It would help you out with Italian and Arabic (both important languages), and Malta is an amazing country to visit.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SongbirdSandra 18
Good answer, Seth.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

P.Vanderlind 4

lol, your description is quite funny, so I'm gonna give you MY reasons. My first language is Portuguese, I decided to learn English because I didn't think I'd be able to learn Japanese. Later on I grew to love the language because you can find nearly anything in English, so I guess it was worth it. At the moment I'm learning Spanish, because I believe it can help me build a solid career.

If you intend to become a teacher, I'd say French is gonna help you a lot because most of the classical stuff is in French. If you intend to become an Engineer, I believe German is an interesting choice, there are a lot of scientific studies in German. If you're a dreamer who wants to go crazy, just for the fun of it, try something exotic like Russian or Arabic.

Sorry, but if you've got English as your first language, you've got the one most worthy of working on.

9ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

spbone 14 12

Did you learn English using Duolingo? Cause it's incredibly good. I hope one day my French is as good as your English.....one day.....

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mark.Z 12

Funny and useful answer,haha! And in addition, if you want to go crazy and learn something exotic, try Chinese. It's a marvalous and endless adventure beyond imagination. :D

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

My family believes that Spanish and Chinese will help you in the future. Like my bio says on my profile, I agree. But French is beautiful and it was mandatory to take for me in elementary school, so I just continued it in middle school, so now I'm learning French in middle school.

5ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

Parisian_Dreamer 9 3

I'm giving you a lingot for answering both of my questions so well. Maybe two

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchAddict7 22

Thanks! :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jkl 16 13 12 10 7 399

it actually does depend. english and french r the business languages. in central and west europe, german, french, and english r the most important, whereas in eastern europe russian is. in usa and the western hemisphere, spanish is the most important, with french coming 2nd cuz of french canada. other sources state that the BRIC nations (brasil, russia, india, china) r going to be the most important countries in the future, so the languages in those countries will be important.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Ledo. 23 23 22 14 11 11 7 261

Hi Parisian Dreamer!

If you are in Eastern Europe the best languages are: ENGLISH; RUSSIAN.

If you are in Mid-Europe the most worth: ENGLISH, GERMAN, FRENCH.

If you are in US: SPANISH.

To select only 1 language I recommend the GERMAN language: - The pronunciation is not hard. - The grammar is logical. - GERMAN is frequently required in Europe to get a European position.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EvelynOlson0 25 24 10 8 5

What about Canada?

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Anhkhoei945 10 5

I think French is a great choice, and ppl in Canada learned French are increasing.

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

SoroushInChina 17 15 9 5 30

If you want to go by the order of most spoken see this list click here

I'm going to learn Spanish after I finish my French skill tree since I'm going by the order of most spoken languages after this.

I'm learning Chinese on memrise just to get some basic phrases down, but it's not good for learning Chinese grammar. I hope Duolingo does Chinese for English speakers. Hopefully they also distinguish the dialects since Mandarin and Cantonese pronounce the same characters differently.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dwainekenney 22 12 6 5 773

When the Incubator does release an English to Chinese course, I am almost certain it will be Mandarin; Cantonese is spoken by a rather smaller portion of the population.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Seth_H 12 8 8 2

They have the option when applying for the incubator to apply for Chinese (Simplified) or Chinese (Traditional), so it seems likely that both will come to Duolingo eventually.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dwainekenney 22 12 6 5 773

I believe that the simplified vs. traditional is purely related to the alphabet. To make the characters easier to read for both native and non-native speakers, the alphabet was made to contain fewer and straighter brush strokes. For example, the traditional symbol for "book" is 書, while the simplified symbol is 书. Both mean the same and the pronunciation is no different.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

le-lapin-noir 18 16 16 11 7 6

There actually can be quite a few differences in pronunciation and intonation between Taiwanese Mandarin and mainland Mandarin, but they're still quite mutually intelligible. But you're right that writing a character in simplified vs. traditional does nothing to change pronunciation or meaning for the individual speaker. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Seth_H 12 8 8 2

Yes, but although I was under the impression that in most areas Mandarin typically uses the simplified characters whilst Cantonese typically uses the traditional characters, with some variance depending on region. Although, I could be wrong as it has been a while since I remember reading this.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

le-lapin-noir 18 16 16 11 7 6

Mainland Chinese Mandarin officially uses simplified script and mainland China has the most Mandarin speakers. Singapore also uses simplified, but the speakers there are a tiny number compared to the mainland. Taiwanese Mandarin uses traditional, though, and there are numerous overseas Chinese Mandarin-speaking communities which retain traditional script as well. So there's really no way to accurately say that simplified characters necessarily imply Mandarin, or that traditional characters imply Cantonese.

2Give Lingot1•3 years ago

Seth_H 12 8 8 2

@zoeyandfriends thanks! I know very little about Chinese compared to other languages, and I appreciate you explaining the difference to me, as I hope to learn Chinese one day.

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

SongbirdSandra 18

Thank you, dwaine, for that information. That was interesting. :-)
And thank you to Zoey, as well.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

le-lapin-noir 18 16 16 11 7 6

That ... doesn't really make sense. Changing to traditional characters in a Mandarin course is not changing languages; it only requires changing the font. That is all you would have to do to set up a traditional character course, no extra development required. Many textbooks even contain both character sets in identical, parallel pages in the lessons. A course for Cantonese would need to be developed completely separately, though, and would probably be labeled as "Cantonese" specifically.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Lingveno 25 25 25 11 2

Also, if you are planning to learn many European languages (I mean Romance, Slavic or Germanic), or if you are new to language learning, I would suggest learning Esperanto first. It is the best "starting language" with only 16 grammar rules, so it will bring you the confidence and the general understanding of the main linguistic concepts + tons of useful Romance, Slavic and Germanic vocabulary.

2ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

sebastian.tagle 15
It depends!! :P

Why do you want to learn a new language?

To travel? Then maybe Spanish would be a good option, as it will let you travel throw all Latin America + Spain. Do you like philosophy, culture, arts, etc? Would you like to do the euro trip? Then maybe French is a good option... Are you planning on going to Brazil for the World Cup, or the olimpic games? Then try Portuguese...

Etc...

The best language to learn depends on the reasons you have for learning a new language.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

s-g-miller 25 25 14 14 13

If you're an American, I would suggest Spanish! There are SO many Spanish speaking families in the US! It is very east to find places where you can speak with Spanish speaking people, and there are more than enough resources. Even if you live in Europe, Spanish would be extremely helpful with Spain being right there!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tjweeks101 8 7 5 4 3 3 2

It's actually pretty hard to get in touch with Spanish speakers.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SongbirdSandra 18

One could argue that Spanish is the most important language on Duolingo because of the sheer number of people speaking it (it is the second-most widely-spoken language in the world). However, my heart belongs to the French language, so that is the most important language to me. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Anhkhohi945 10 5

I know that :3 , such a beautiful language to learn

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Lingveno 25 25 25 11 2

If you live in Europe, German is the best language to learn. It is the most usual official language in Europe (Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Belgium, Luxembourg and Lichtenstein) , and the most usual official language in EU (Germany, Austria, Belgium and Luxembourg). Also, it is the mother tongue #1 for EU, the most learned foreign language in the EU (after English, of course). De-facto, it is the dominant language (meaning that most of the population uses it every day) in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Luxembourg and Lichtenstein. So, after learning English, I would suggest learning German. Comparing to French, which is another big European language, all countries, which speak it, are quite rich and developed. Last but not the least, high education in Germany and Austria are FREE.

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

mariaain 15 15 15 11 10 10 8 2

These three are must based on number of people speaking them: English, spanish, mandarin. The rest is really depend on what is your goal.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

araparseghian 21 21 21 18 17 15 13 12 12 12 11 10 7 7 7 5 4 3 3 3 2

If you're in Europe, the most useful would be English, French, and German.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ForeverNing 8 3

I personally believe Mandarin Chinese will help our generation in the future, if not now, in the economy and whatsoever, like my parents say, even though we're chinese by race. (Sorry Chinese is not available in Duo but hopefully it will be soon). I think German is quite a beautiful and simple language to learn as a first foreign language. A lot of people in the world speak French (their country was probably colonised by the French), it's probably useful too.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

missmagic_46 6 3

I reccomend French and Spanish. OR German, theyre fun

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

croe2000 6 4 2 2

I believe Spanish is the most beneficial language you can learn from this site. It is the 2nd most spoken language in the world, coming second to Mandarin, and many employers like seeing "fluent in Spanish" on a CV. However, personally I feel both Italian and French have a beautiful sound to them. It's down to whatever you need it for, but I would suggest Spanish.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

383 "The strawberries are small."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/463959>

Translation: Les fraises sont petites.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

32 Comments

AlecG. 8

Why not petits? Petite refers to little right?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SigniorGratiano 11 11 2 2

"Petite" is the feminine form of "petit," and the plural of "petite" is "petites." "Petits" would be the plural masculine of "petit."

Handy-dandy list:

Masculine singular: Petit

Masculine plural: Petits

Feminine singular: Petite

Feminine plural: Petites

35ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lpybus 17 9 5

Right, but "small" is modifying "les fraises" in this sentence. That's masculine. I don't understand why it's "petites" and not "petits."

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SigniorGratiano 11 11 2 2

"Les fraises" is feminine. The article "les" is used for plurals of both masculine and feminine nouns.

25ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hbirns8 11 9 8

DARNIT GENDER SPECIFICATIONS! shakes fist

3ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

PeterDM 14 12 11 8 6 6 2 1

Aaaaaahh!!!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlecG. 8

Soooo small vs. little doesn't matter?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SigniorGratiano 11 11 2 2

Oh, that's what you were getting at. My bad. Anyway, my best answer for that would be "no," simply because not every English word is going to have a direct literal French translation. Besides, the distinction between "small" and "little" doesn't really matter in English, so even if French has another word for "petit" I doubt it would matter.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AlecG. 8

Gladly, there was also a discussion before on which word is best to describe something large. This is because someone answered "gros femme" instead of "grande femme" and they were curious why they're wrong. Turns out that "gros" is used to describe large animals while "grande" is used to describe people. I thought that went the same with petit vs. petite.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AlecG. 8

I pointed that out because of the gros vs. grand thingie

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SigniorGratiano 11 11 2 2

Actually, that's something I don't understand. Enlighten me?

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

abadluti 9

Good this has help me thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

atausz 13

they are both written exactly the same!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

croissantxcat 11 11 2

Excuse me strawberry is masculine

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Airas2 6

Es, est and sont are confusing to me

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

PKS 11

Why does 'petites' have to be plural?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Littlestrike 16

The word "les" is a big hint to us that the noun "strawberry" is in its plural form because the French language only uses "les" for plural nouns.

In addition, all French adjectives have to follow the number and gender of the noun it is referring to. In this case, since the number is plural and gender is female, we have to use "petites".

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mallowigi 21 20 13 11 9 8 274
Because it's "strawberries"

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Beesnell 12
How do i know strawberries are feminines

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Littlestrike 16
We cannot know or possibly tell that strawberries are male until we are told that they are. It is a matter of usage and memory to link most nouns to their genders.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FerreiraPedro 6
Shouldn't it be "Las fraises sont petites"? instead of "Les fraises"? if fraises are feminine

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SigniorGratiano 11 11 2 2
As far as I can tell, "Las" exists in Spanish but not French. In French, the plural form of both "Le" and "La" is "Les."

5Give Lingot•3 years ago

bmlhailstone 13 9
there is no 'las' in french. whenever something is plural it changes to 'les' regardless of the gender of the subject

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

C-GFMN 10 8
Thanks bro...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

redpanda4916 9 2
because the subject is plural

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

NickDaniel1 22 27

Why is it "les fraises" instead of "des fraises"? Is it a subject/object thing?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SigniorGratiano 11 11 2 2

"The" translates to "le"/"la"/"les" in French. "De" and "des" are placeholders that don't have direct English translations. "Des fraises sont petites" would translate to "Strawberries are small," as opposed to "THE strawberries are small."

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

IDavidCP 10 2 2

Les and petites? I thought petites is feminine and "les" is masculine

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SigniorGratiano 11 11 2 2

"Les" is both masculine and feminine. You would expect the plural of "la" to be "las," like in Spanish, but in French "la" becomes "les."

And yes, you're correct about "petites" being feminine.

Also, as much as it pains me, I'm going to be that guy and point out that this question has already been answered three times in this discussion alone. So, anytime you want fast answer, be sure to check the other comments first!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KennishaWr 9 4

Someone in another comment section mentioned Bangs. Beauty, Age, Number, good/bad and size adjectives come before the noun and all others come after. Can you expound on that as to when to follow this method? I feel like it's not followed here because of the sentence structure.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Robert863754 10

Are you suppose to hear the differences in prouncing plural words. I dont, until i read it in writing?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

JoanneB10 14 6 20

Why is it smalls

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

384 "Nummer" vs "Zahl"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/9997/Nummer-vs-Zahl>

Yokhen 11 10

So, both "Nummer" and "Zahl" mean number (or so duolingo told me), while the latter one also means figure. What are the differences between the two? How are they used in everyday life? Etc.

Give Lingot1
314 years ago

Leave a new comment
21 Comments

annag 15 13 6 5

Zahlentheorie = Number Theory, a category of Abstract Algebra in advanced Maths. Because so much of it was initially studied and written about in German (by Gauss, Euler, and the like), we use the symbol \mathbb{Z} (blackboard-bold, capital zed, for Zahl) to represent the set of all integers, or counting numbers, 0, and negative numbers, even in English.

48ReplyGive Lingot7•4 years ago

DiffyKlaus 10

Omg, this is amazing! I always wondered why \mathbb{Z} represented the set of real numbers.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jotomicron 11

Ehem... set of integer numbers :P

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DiffyKlaus 10

Haha, derp ><

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

BenWKnowles 12 3

From what I understand, Nummer is like a phone number or a house number or, as benlyn said, a place in a queue. Whereas a zahl is a number like you would use in maths

21ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

niersmann 10 7

"Zahl" is used in maths, "Nummer" is used in everyday life, like ben said, the word cifra is the same as "Ziffer" in german

10ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Hania 13 11 7 7

If it helps anyone, the equivalent in french of nummer=numéros and zhal=chiffre

4ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

haxelion 9 9

No that's not correct. Nummer = numéros, Zhal = nombre..

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

R2D2_3 23 14 5 4 3 2

So, Is it the case of the spanish too? (Where Nummer=Número, Zahl=Cifra)

If that so, I presume that "Nummer" can be used as a numerical code, like serials, the number of the houses or our ISP. While the "zhai" word is just a number being mathematical. Just a value.

Right?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jdobalaguer 13 8 16

nope, in spanish it's: número = number (the value) cifra = digit (on of the symbols 0,1,2,...,9)

it looks as if the zahl/nummer difference comes from the context (maths/anything else) while in spanish is a conceptual difference.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nakudoh 10

What about die Anzahl?

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

shraeye 13 12 8

I would use Anzahl if I were counting things. Like "the total number is 17"="Die Anzahl ist 17"

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Ariesh5 12

"cifra" means digit, isn't it? it's quite different than what benlyn and BenWKnowles tried to explain. so, what's the verdict guys?

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

crzirbel 10

I think, as BenWKnowles said, Nummer can be used for Telophonnummer (hope I spelled that right) or like a house number or something, while Zahl is commonly used for math or a price when you're buying something.

I would use Zahl at a store or someplace, while I would use Nummer for telling a friend a phone number.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chaganti 9 6 6

Telefonnummer is the correct spelling....

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GeoffRober3 11

Thank you all for this clarification

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Yokhen 11 10

Yeah, the weird thing though is that we don't use "cifra" much in spanish and from what I have seen "Zahl" has a different kind of use from what "cifra" has in spanish. (Yeah, I am a spanish speaker)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

nateVONGreat 22 4 3 2 2 2

we use "cifra" in hebrew too, סיפרה, but luckily in hebrew there are root words, so you can tell what it means by the root. סיפרה comes from ס.פ.ר. which means count. and when you say "a third of..." then the root is 3.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

whukriede 16 15 15 14 14 14 13 13 11 11 11 5 4 68

You should translate "digit" with "Ziffer", not "Zahl".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

385 "The girls drink milk."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/231687>

Translation: Las niñas beben leche.

04 years ago

Leave a new comment

52 Comments

dennisfxm 5 4 4 3

Why can't "The girls" in this case translate to "Ellas" in addition to "Las niñas"?

14ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

rocko2012 25 7 3 1456

You could use "ellas" but you would destroy some of the information that was conveyed in the English. If "the girls" were in fact children and the person saying the sentence was trying to communicate that fact, then with "ellas" it is ambiguous if the females are children.

11ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

jaspay111 4

Can you friend me rocko2012

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CycloneTH 4

True, but in in US English, the word "girl" no longer implies any specific age group. IMO either one could be correct.

-11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sherryridens
This is not english

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 8
"Ellas" is the pronoun "they" for feminine plural.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

darre.bear 5
Eaxactly my thoughts!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

dastardman 5 5 2
Although perhaps one of the girls was a "tall glass"?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tylerjgarver 8
What does toman mean? I spoke into the mic and kind of stuttered through the sentence, and it told me this: You are correct! We heard "Las niñas toman leche."

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Miyagi2595 11 3
Toman can be used in places of beber. My Spanish teacher taught me that toman is more like taking a sip, whereas beber is more than a sip.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

yanlita 12
Toman means Take.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

maiark 6 3
Why las not la isn't it the same

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RavenclawRain 6
I had ellas son beben leches -_-

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Miyagi2595 11 3

That translation is "they are the drink milks"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Duolingo.com2 5

wats the diffrence between "bebemos" and "beben"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kurdi.barn 9 7 4

You use beben with ellas/ellos/ustedes and bebemos with nosotros (maybe vosotros, I'm not sure)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 8

No, "Vosotros bebéis"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chessking11 5 2 2 2

the difference is where the word is in the sentence i noticed. if its the first word or if it comes after a noun or whatever.. u just have to look at them. they tell u if u hover over the word each time. its really simple i dont even have a 5th grade in english but i hope that works for u.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Duolingo.com2 5

thanks a lot

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BenBowen1 6

That's called cheating ya know..

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 8

"bebemos" is used with "nosotros" masculine version of "we" or "nosotras" feminine version of "we" and "beben" is used with "Ustedes" plural formal version of "you" or with "ellos" masculine version of "they" or "ellas" feminine version of "they" It is like the difference between "I drink" and "he drinks". We know in English that we have to change the word for 3rd person singular (he, she or it), but in Spanish the verbs change for almost every word. <http://conjugator.reverso.net/conjugation-spanish-verb-beben.html> http://spanish.about.com/cs/verbs/p/rv_beber.htm

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Miyagi2595 11 3

bebemos means we drink milk. Bebemos is always in first person plural. beben means they or you (plural) drink milk. Beben is never in first person.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ebbaasghar 6 2

Can you guys fix so you can choose "learn spanish from Swedish". Because I'm not the best on english! so I would appreciate that, it will be easier to learn spanish then.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 8

Place your request to the support tab at left.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JulieBartsch 2

Why isn't it "la leche" instead of just "leche"? I thought that general nouns were usually preceded by the definite article in Spanish...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

isee-free 18 8 2 61

It's only "la leche" if it were "the milk" specifically. Since it was that "The girls drink milk" you don't include the "la."

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

isee-free 18 8 2 61

Why wouldn't it be "El niñas beben leche"? El without the accent marker above it was supposed to be genderless. D: I understand that "Las" is the BETTER fit, but it marked it as wrong when I put "el" despite that under "The", both "las" and "el" come up.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 8

"El" is "the" for masculine singular nouns. "El niño" is "the boy". That phrase can also mean "the child", because if they do not know the gender of the child, then they use the male version. (I guess many languages are a bit sexist in that way.) "the" can be translated as "el", "la", "lo", "las", and "los" but not for that particular sentence. feminine plural nouns must use "las" The dictionary hints are there to show you what the word could mean and not all possible translations for that particular sentence. You must choose the right translation for that particular sentence.

http://spanish.about.com/od/adjectives/a/intro_def_art.htm

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rajkamalgolla 6

can we write its as las ninas bebemos leche?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 8

No, "bebemos" can only be used with the Spanish words for "we", "nosotros" or "nosotras". The verb for "they" in Spanish is "beben".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Demintio 2

Ellas and ninas can mean the same thing, it is still the girls.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 8

No, "ellas" is the feminine form of "they". It is unknown if they are girls or women or female animals or even female things. In Spanish, even things have gender. "niñas" are "girls", not women, but children who are female.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nsomit 11

girls usually are children, otherwise one would say the women drink milk. Maybe in other cultures, girls is used more generically to mean females?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ScarletDae 8 4

As CycloneTH points out, 'girls' can be used in English as a causal and informal term that can be applied to anyone that is female. Such as, an elderly female might say she is "going out with her 'girls' tonight". Implying her girlfriends in a casual sense.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

yanlita 12

They made a big error on mines, they said i was wrong and they said the correct answer was las niñas toman leche.... thats not cool.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 8

In some Spanish speaking countries that would be the correct way to say it. So it should also be correct, but "las niñas beben leche." is also correct. "toman" is used like the English "take a drink" and is used with food and medicine too. What did you put?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Brittany20 10 2

My Spanish teacher always used "muchachas" instead of "ninas". Aren't the two fairly interchangeable, depending on the context?

0ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 8

I see. "muchacha" is also used to mean a much older girl than "niña" which is a little girl or a girl who is a child. chica and joven are other words for girl.

<http://dictionary.reverso.net/spanish-english/muchacha> <http://dictionary.reverso.net/spanish-english/niña> <http://dictionary.reverso.net/english-spanish/girl>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hedayat.yazdani 7

Why " la leche " is wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 4 2 8

It is not a specific milk this time. Just in general, "They drink milk."

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

swati.devda 6

What is the difference between las and los?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Carolina77777 6

Why not

Las niñas el leche beben.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ScottWalth 7

I used "ellas" instead of "las niñas" but it said the answer is "las nenas". Am I missing something here or is there a typo in the answer?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Paytoino 2

why cant it be chica's , ella's , we need multiple options on the answers

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JessicaRod634772 2

How do you know when to use "la" or "las"? Is "Las"only used when "nina" is plural?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

suppaj12 4

I dont under stand when to use bebemos bebe and all the different versions PLEASE HELP

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Beverlywinter 22 4 1
Chnnngx 00p00ooklllmvccvbhbb8 by yyyex cgc

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Beverlywinter 22 4 1
Chnnngx 00p00ooklllmvccvbhbb8 by yyyex cgc

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

386 "She went out through the door."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2759232>

Translation: Ella salió por la puerta.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment
19 Comments

bhekman 9 9 7 5
Why isnt "fue" acceptable?

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rspreng 24
I think the distinction is went versus went out -- passed through versus exited.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tinnmel 25 25 7 289
Did you use "se fue" or simply "fue"? I would think that "se fue" should be accepted. However, only using "fue" would not convey the correct meaning.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Eey91 25 25 20 19 16 9 2 2
You don't have phrasal verbs in Spanish. "Go out" is not the same as "go" when it comes to translating.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

elanaknt 15 14 9
Right, 'fue' does not work here. I agree with Mavry and rspreng that 'Se fue' and 'salió' are not the same thing. 'Se fue' means more like she left, not specifying where to, through where or other details. 'Salió' means she exited, which is more often used with a prepositional phrase like in this example.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alices79 18
Yeah, I feel like I've heard, 'Ella se fue' more often than "Ella salio".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheDevLee 18 15 10 10

"Por" and "para" are very versatile words in Spanish. I feel as though it will take a significant bit of study to differentiate between the two. Any suggestions?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kmoorhead4 12 8

Why is por necessary here? If you left it out it would mean She went out the door

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Johngt44 22 6 3

Yes but that's lazy - at best, idiomatic - English! Can't just translate word for word, gotta think of the meaning.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

leodegrance 14 7 5 4

I'm wondering why you can't replace it with "de" -- "Ella salió de la puerta."

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mitaine56 15 6

leodesgrance- I don't think in E/nglish you could say : she went out of the door. Sp0anish and French are quite alike sometimes, especially in this case. Ella salió POR la puerta/elle sortit PAR la porte.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

AmandaK0 9

Great, I forgot to put a space between "la" and "puerta", and I got it wrong. Duolingo is too strict.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

monocodigo 14 8

Why is "terminó a través de la puerta" not accepted?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

mitaine56 15 6

monocodigo- You're saying I finished through the door

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

DatBluejay 20

As opposed to going out the window, I suppose.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

aIRSBu 25 5 48

I agree with devyn.....por or para?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

SpencerPri4 8

Should you use " Ella salió por a puerta"?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

mitaine56 15 6

spencer- in another context, you could say : ella salió por una puerta, if you use a as personal A, it's used only with an animated noun. The preposition a isn't used here because we can't use 2 prepositions, you already have POR

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

mooeonice

Hi

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

387 The French spelling war

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2856101>

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

Link: Learning Loom - home ; To return: Verbs ~er group

The French spelling war - there is no end in sight:

The French spelling changes, instigated in 1990, has created a spelling war of " tradition spelling " vs. " rectifications ". The " rectifications " being to move towards greater uniformity of spelling to reflect current pronunciation of french language and ease of learning acquisition by all who learn french - for both native speakers and foreigners.

This was commenced by L'Académie française which is a government body and France's official authority on the usages, vocabulary, and grammar of the French language. In 1990 it tabled insightful changes to french spelling, known as : " rectifications orthographiques " Those "rectifications", instead of changing individual spellings, published general spelling rules which affected the spelling of approximately 2000 words, and this has changed the evolution of the French language. Even after almost a quarter of century since its introduction it still causes great derision among many french speakers.

As at 2015, in France the old and new spelling are still officially both valid in official examinations, and there is still a substantial body of french speakers who resist spelling changes - thus making the learning, adaption and inclusion of communications in french a greater barrier, and impeding the potential expansion of the influence of french - not just for native speakers learning french, but also for those who learn this language from another primary language.

But it is necessary for learners of the french language to know about these changes, and the underlying disputes about spelling that can occur - to enable them to make sense of contradictory information and spelling they may come across.

In my learning I choose to embrace the official standardization of spelling rules - so as to assist the speed of my learning journey. I appreciate the simplicity, uniformity and assistance with pronunciation these changes provide. For me, the goal is to learn how to communicate as quickly and effectively as possible.

Primary References :

- wikipedia Spelling reform
- wikipedia Académie française
- wikipedia history of reforms over the centuries
- wikipedia French orthography
- wikipedia appendix
- blog on french spelling buried

This is the link to the rules - written in english wikitionary rectifications

Other discussions about this topic in Duolingo:

- CoiledSpring on the reforms
- S'il te plaît ou S'il te plait?

Brief summary of the more major changes by CoiledSpring :

Compound numbers always have an hyphen (quarante et un becomes quarante-et-un)

Compound words' plurals are way easier. Now it's the last word which takes the plural's mark when the first is a verb or a preposition (un après-midi, which was pluralized as des après-midi before, becomes des après-midis, un chasse-neige, which pluralized as des chasse-neige, becomes des chasse-neiges)

The acute is replaced by a grave accent, according to the pronunciation (événement, which is pronounced évènement, is now written évènement)

The circumflex is removed from all u et i (except in the historical past, subjunctive, and in case of homonym). For example, coût becomes cout, s'il vous plaît becomes s'il vous plait, s'entraîner becomes s'entraîner, dîner becomes diner, etc ...

Borrowed words are accented according to the French rules, and are pluralized according to the French rules too (sandwiches becomes sandwichs, revolver becomes révoluer)

Give Lingot1

222 years ago

Leave a new comment

16 Comments

Dovmiester 11 6 5

Learning to speak French is a grueling trial and test of your will, and yet Duolingo manages to make it kinda fun. This is amazing, thanks Duolingo people

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

I am with you Dovmiester ! Thanks Douolingo people - for creating such an engaging environment. And thank you also for allowing us to have communications with others - as this also engages me, and encourages me to refine and develop my thoughts. It helps answer questions I have, and also at times makes me smile :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Chachinero 10

Very interesting.

Evolution of language occurs with all languages, I guess. For example the use of US English within the UK. At Uni we had a good discussion/argument about whether or not "color" was now an accepted way of spelling that word (UK English = colour). That was a Software Engineering class! Well, it was supposed to be :)

I asked my final year project supervisor (a lady from the USA), whether or not US English would be allowed in the project work. She said it would be, but UK English would be preferred.

I only asked because I seem to be exposed to a LOT of work (text books) that are written in US English, and quite often find that I have used the US English spelling rather than the UK :)

Anyway, thanks for posting that. A very interesting read :D

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

icundell 22

At Uni we had a good discussion/argument about whether or not "color" was now an accepted way of spelling that word (UK English = colour).

Within programme code or CSS etc 'color' is fine. In all other contexts the rest of us English people reserve the right to point an laugh ;)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Chachinero 10

lol, very good :) I'll remember that :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

icundell 22

PS Evolution of language occurs with all languages,

The French changes weren't evolution, they were intelligent design :)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

Ha ha. The Evolution - Intelligent Design (Half-way House) and Creationism, raises it's head on DL!
lol. I think I know which I believe in, but am not telling. lol

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

hee hee ;)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

And thank you for commenting. I like to know that things I put up here are of use to someone else besides myself. I do these postings to help focus my learning journey. Otherwise I would not attempt to create such a succinct piece (for me) of writing. If I can find a source on the internet that I can point to that does this - then that is what I will do. But when I can't find that source - I am trying to create a scaffold for my benefit - and hopefully for others as well. My current endeavour is to crack the rules and patterns of french verbs. This is forming a thread of this discovery I am on. You can check this out at Verbs ~er group

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

PS. I have posted this here - as this is also a key subject I had to research (which has taken me many hours - over days) - as I tried to understand many of the discrepancies I was coming across. For me I had to make sense of these discrepancies so that I could proceed with my learning journey. And I felt that there may be others like me - who need to know this - so that they can move on with their learning journey. So I am hoping my 'executive summary' may be of use also to others.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

misaka42 17 5

I was taught by a man who still prefers paye to paie. Talk about old spelling! Also, circumflex is highly useful to an English speaker, as it means, "we used to have an 's' here". So foret = forest. Easy :) It does make sense that the French wouldn't change quickly to the new version while the Belgians would. Insert stereotypes here.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ronnie-JA 25 8 2

*Circonflexe (and I only note this because we don't use a circumflex in the English language, even though this may indeed be the English translation for Circonflexe. Therefore, it may be preferable to use the French version when talking about French grammar).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

misaka42 17 5

I prefer to stay in one language when I write/talk. Otherwise they start to get muddled in my brain :)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CoiledSpring 13 13 11 6 5

I'd like to add that it's not only the people who are reluctant to the reforms who are the problem (because, let's be honest, there aren't that many people standing up for the exclusive use of the old orthography). The greater problem is that many people in France don't know about the reform and will correct you when you write « gâteau », « s'il vous plait », or « cout ».

It isn't a big problem when you can correct the person by telling them about the reform. It is when you can't, though. For example, when you write a letter with the new orthography to a person who only knows the old one, because they've used it all their lives, it could be a problem (if you're writing a letter for a job, you could be prejudiced).

That's why the New Orthography needs to be known, and why I think using it for the Duolingo course would be beneficial, as it would, in my humble opinion, help the reform to gain recognition.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lindakanga 21 6 6 5 5

I agree with you, and in my experience with duolingo - they also agree with you about accepting the reforms. I am not a moderator, but an extensive user. However with something as huge as duolingo is, that is constantly being extended and modified - errors do occur.

SO, I would encourage anyone who picks up errors like this - to put in a report. I know these are chased up, and corrections made.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sgouobolo

you know that actually i dont undderstand your comment

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

388 word list

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1367505>

lolsmurf 9 6

Where can I find a list of the vocabulary I've learned so far? I don't have a vocabulary tab, whilst my friend does.

Give Lingot3

393 years ago

Leave a new comment

50 Comments

DestinyG 20 13 491

Here's a workaround I've found:

Create Duolingo Classroom for Esperanto (free and part of your already created account)

Go to the course homepage

Click "Course Content"

It will list each "chapter" and all the words introduced in it. Huzzah!

15ReplyGive Lingot6•1 year ago

ipdominguez 16 6 4 485

This is really good advice. It allowed me to list all the words, print them and do self-assessment of my knowledge of the vocabulary on my own. Thanks!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

umbreecha 12

i dont see the course content button at all, i only see Home, Activity and Discussion button on top

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

ipdominguez 16 6 4 485

<https://schools.duolingo.com/>

3ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

anne365392 11 8 8 53

Thank you!!!!!! I've been looking for that for some time

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 month ago

Madalin263255 11 8 7

i have the same problem. do you have any news?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

Smalde 12 11 7 7 6 5

Great piece of advice. Unfortunately it does not work for reverse trees. :/

Thank you very much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ziggybigu 7 3

duolingo has my word list but it does not let me to see it

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sistemsyla 8 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2

2 years, still waiting

4ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

ipdominguez 16 6 4 485

Look for my comment above. I was able to extract the word list for Ukrainian.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

tj4234 15 7

Alternatively, you could write down the new words you learn in a small notepad? That's what i did when i learnt my second language. Not as practical perhaps as having the duolingo list do it for you, but it's a start. Then just go back to duolingo's list when it comes back. But i would keep the notepad.

The reason being is that duolingo will never bring you to fluency. It lacks the vocabulary and communication with native speakers (which in itself, is a must for learning a new language). So how are you going to enter a new word, when a native speaker teaches you one outside of duolingo? Or what are you going to do when duolingo can teach you no more? Having a notepad keeps it all in one place.

At least, those are my 2 pence.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Lewons7 13 6 4 4

I'm doing that but I also want to have an excel document with all the words I learn in alphabetical order for english and dutch so that eventually I have a full dictionary either way. I'm already quite a way through the course and can't be bothered to type it out as well as write it in. all well

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sk.velasquez 10 4

in Spanish I don't have a word list here in duolingo but I use an app in chrome that lists all the words I've learned so far. Here's the link if you have google chrome:

<https://chrome.google.com/webstore/detail/duolingo-vocabulary-manag/mglmcjokbicehcaojghjmhfnaooffcd/related?hl=en>

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sonny5766 13 3

Thank you soooo much! Works GrEaT!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

dm8233 13 9 8 8 7 5 4 4 2 2

I've been using Duolingo for a few years now, and I remember using a list of words that I already learned for review. It was quite handy and I think I could even organize it based on when I learned it, last time I used it, difficulty, etc. - a VERY useful tool. Also, I remember using the flashcards which were good to review after a few exercises as well. I suggest Duolingo to, please, bring these back!

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 months ago

Pfiff 24 12 9 8

Hm, can you find it by going to this link <http://www.duolingo.com/vocab> ? If not, I guess it's just not available at the moment for whatever version of the site you're using, which is annoying.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Chadlynx 13 5

This link doesn't work for me, are you aware of any method of accessing it?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JesusG 19 13 11 11

The link doesn't work for me either, but I found this Chrome app which works fine:

<https://chrome.google.com/webstore/detail/duolingo-vocabulary-manag/mglmcjokbicehcaojghjmhfnaooffcd/related?hl=en>

It needs a lot of improvement, but at least it's something.

20ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

wrayamandae 8 4

I can't get it to recognize my duolingo account. It keeps telling me I'm not logged on, even though I actively have this window open. Any one else having this problem?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JesusG 19 13 11 11

The Chrome apps for Duolingo I posted was for when Duolingo didn't have the "Words" dialog. I don't have those apps installed any more; I find Duolingo's native Word feature good enough.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ryanWyatt 14 12 9 9

Hmmm. I don't see a "Words" option between my "Home" and "Activity" buttons. Is there a way of running a beta version of the site...? And does anyone from Duolingo look at these comment threads?

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

JesusG 19 13 11 11

Word button

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

ryanWyatt 14 12 9 9

I get a 404 page... It's not even there for me! Weirdness.

3Give Lingot1•2 years ago

JesusG 19 13 11 11

No it shouldn't matter. I also used to have the "practice with flash cards" feature available and now it is gone. It seems weird things go on on Duolingo...

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

wrayamandae 8 4

Thanks again for the screenshot! As others are having the same problem I'm assuming we don't all have the same version for some reason. I'm going to see if I can send a message to duolingo to request the feature

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

JesusG 19 13 11 11

It seems we are guinea-pigs, some in group A, and some in group B (chuckles).
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3828027>

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

wrayamandae 8 4

Thank you for the reply! I'm not sure if I have this feature? I can't find a "word" or vocabulary tab/link anywhere. I saw a few other people on this thread are having similar issues. Are we all simply looking in the wrong place or has this feature not been released to everyone yet?

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

JesusG 19 13 11 11

I don't know if it's a limited feature but you should be able to find it between the Home and Activity buttons at the top.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

ryanWyatt 14 12 9 9

Nope. Not there on my menu, alas... I'm running in Google Chrome on MacOS 10.9.4. But that shouldn't make a difference, should it?

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

JesusG 19 13 11 11

Try going directly to the following url: <https://www.duolingo.com/words>

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

JesusG 19 13 11 11

Well, have a lingot at least :)

0Give Lingot2•2 years ago

JesusG 19 13 11 11

Hi wrayamandae. Here is DL introduction of the Word feature. At the moment it does not have as many features as shown there. Now it looks like what is in the second link. It's a pity some don't have that feature... If it is any consolation, I just use it to "Practice weakest word", and you can more or less do the same thing with the "Strengthen Skills" feature.

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1453744> <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3324197>

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Juan___1 22 8 376

The app is nice. It would be much better for me if it had an option to download a CSV file of a given Word List.

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ClayclayX11 8

can you give me a lingot

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Madalin263255 11 8 7

Why?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Pfiff 24 12 9 8

The vocab list has been removed with the new version of the site. The team are working on creating a new and better version, which should come in due course.

15ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Moiqc 12 9

Please, duolingo, do it fast!

35ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

dwise 17 6 4

Hmm. Removing a working feature while an improved one is developed is almost always a bad idea. In this case, the removed one has been offline for more than 3 months. Duolingo is obviously still keeping track of which words I've learned, so it should be easy to make it tell me which ones.

17ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

corsair831 14 11

totally agree dwise, i found the vocab list amazingly useful for learning past present and future tenses of those difficult to learn words like decir hacer tener etc etc, now that i've lost it i'm having to resort to paper copies which are a real pain! :(please bring it back duolingo!!

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Cee-Tee 12 11 10

Any updates when the vocabulary list might come back?

14ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aenimea 11 7 6 2

I can't wait to get it back. I wan't to be able to study just a bit instead of using to much of the "try-and-error" methodology :-)

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BobtheRot 11 3

Can any admins answer this question/give an update on when this feature will return? Very helpful to have it!

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

chakravir 7 4

Thanks for letting us know. Can't wait for this feature to return in a new and improved form.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Chadlynx 13 5

Awesome, thanks for the prompt reply.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dwhl 16 7 6

That's great news, thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MorbidEntree 7 7

Looks like they never got to releasing it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

JacobLee457028 2

For some languages, I can see a "Words" tab that apparently should be the vocabulary tab. Now, while I'm doing Esperanto, I don't see it, but when I add German, I do see it. Maybe the beta languages don't have it?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Qudratulla4 11

can someone guide me how to print word lists?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

ClayclayX11 8

who is your friend can i get the tab

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

anclark686 12 11 9 5 4 4 3 3 2 5

I've seen it in some languages (under words) that use the latin alphabet (SP, FR, DE, IT, PT)- but not for Greek and Russian. HOWEVER this list is slightly different from a list I printed a few years back, which was very helpful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

389 "I had called the doctor."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/896332>

Translation: Eu tinha chamado o médico.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

25 Comments

suely.ferreira 17 10 7 5

Poderia ser: 'Eu chamei o médico'?

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Davu 25 25

"Eu chamei o médico" = "I called the doctor" ou "I have called the doctor".

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

suely.ferreira 17 10 7 5
Obrigada.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rafaelsantosx 14 8 4
Eu chamara o médico? Quem fala assim no Brasil

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

talysfv 15 10 48
Trata-se do tempo verbal pretérito mais-que-perfeito, que no inglês equivale ao past perfect, sendo que este ainda pode apresentar duas variações:

Ex: eu chamara o médico (forma simples menos usual)

Ex: eu tinha chamado o médico (forma composta)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Mayana.Souza 12 9 4
também quero saber kkk

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

promatik 10
"Eu tinha telefonado ao médico." também dava, pelo menos em Portugal.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

alvaro1944 25 16 13 12 8 7
06.05.2014-para promatik: neste caso, acho que o melhor é realizar uma tradução genérica, como a apresentada pelo duolingo, porque não sabemos a forma pela qual foi feito o contacto com o médico. Se se tratasse da via telefônica, o duolingo teria escrito "I had (tele)phoned the doctor". Espero ter ajudado. Saudações.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vbcabral 15 7
I agree with Mr. Promatik. "Eu tinha telefonado ao médico" could be another right answer. Same case in Brazil.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Luis_Domingos 18 10 2
As respostas "ao médico" e "à médica" passaram a ser aceites como corretas a partir de hoje (26/08/2015). Obrigado a todas/todas pelos relatórios enviados.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LeoSantos97 10
Eu LIGARÁ para o médico ?????

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Fernandode931362 16 7
Que horror: eu chamara o médico. Parece que a a equipe do app após regride em alguns itens.
Ninguém fala desse jeito. Lamento.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

GersonTeix 17 10 8 7 2 34
"Eu havia chamado o médico" também deu certo

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

leonard006 11 7
Eu chamei o médico ???

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

oluasdes 16
Eu "chamei o médico".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

elba145613 12
Eu chamara o medico? Que traducao é essa? Chateada.
0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Leonardode894418 14 2
"Eu ligara para o doutor" Muito incomum

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

sah372 10
o "the" nesta frase é obrigatório? pq é uma profissão? porque se ao invés de ser médico fosse apenas "ele" ficaria I had called him, estou errada?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

GaBRieL_2Pi1 12 7 4 2
Como eu posso pronunciar called, cold e could? não vejo realmente diferença entre called e cold

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Luis_Domingos 18 10 2
"called" se pronuncia cóld; "cold" se pronuncia côld; "could" se pronuncia cood.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

390 Tomar vs beber?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2501074>

807561 23 8 7

What is the difference between tomar and beber?

Give Lingot1

152 years ago

Leave a new comment

15 Comments

thiroadriguessp 11 9

you can use both for "drink", but "tomar" also means "to take" depending on the context

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Karina_Sol 19 9 6 2 2

Soy Mexicana pero vivo en usa.. and for me is the same.. bebo agua que tomo agua ..

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dustycotton 7

I work with several bilingual co-workers and asked them about this today. All 5 said they have never used beber for drink of any type. They all said they use tomar and that beber just sounded weird to them. They did all agree they knew beber and that it means to drink, but none actually use that word at all.

*I am in central California.

3ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Kastreitor 14 10 10 10 10 9 9 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 2 1071

"beber" is to drink, only liquid or fluid (water, beer, wine, juice, coffee..) but "tomar" sometimes can be a solid food (ice cream, cake, snack). "beber" is more to drink to satisfy thirst and "tomar" to emphasize the type of cup.

2ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

Skutir 6

Tomar means to take, beber to drink. So if you're a waiter and you ask, "desean tomar?" you're asking the people what they want to eat and drink, but if you say "desean beber?" you are asking specifically about drinks. If you were speaking about what happened: he drank beer, she drank tea, it wouldn't matter which you used I don't think.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Eey91 25 25 20 19 16 9 2 2

They mean the same, is more about their common use. When you say "beber" there's always liquor involved in the meaning, when you say "tomar" is everything else (remember "tomar" also refers to grab or take something). Again, this is only their common use.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rspreng 24

Where I have been in Mexico and among the Spanish speakers I know in the USA 'tomar' is used for all beverages, regardless of alcohol content. A server may ask what 'bebida' you want, and the specific act of swallowing a liquid like medicine is beber, but tomar is used for consuming a beverage. Servers use 'tomar' to ask me what I'll drink and 'ordenar' for what food I want to order. If you ask a man what he was doing Friday night he'll say he was "tomando," not bebiendo,' in my experience, even if it was cerveza o tequila.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Where I come from to grab or to take it's cojer, and escojer it's to choose, and tomar can be anything ,to take for your self, as tomarse unas vacaciones ,or tomar un tiempo libre ,or tomarse un café, or tomar el sol.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlejoPF 12 9 8 7 6 4 3

Yeah! I agree with you. But it's cojer (with G)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

Yes you are very correct, that was a fast touch of the key by mistake and thanks for pointing that I know the rules Gue and Gui is ga and gi without the U the sound is Je and Ji sorry for touching the wrong key, and now that I think about it, it meant something different in the Latin American countries , but not in Spain, and that's for sure, thanks again to point my mistake

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlejoPF 12 9 8 7 6 4 3

You're welcome. Here in Colombia (in Ecuador as well, but I'm not totally sure), cojer actually means the same as in Spain.

3Give Lingot2•2 years ago

AlejoPF 12 9 8 7 6 4 3

Here we also use it, with no other meaning, those phrases you've said are always used here (except the first one). I'm tired that in movies' latin dubbing always it's agarrar instead cojer, it seems like they have claws instead hands, but what can I do?

For sexual meaning there are some other words we prefer. So, please don't generalize

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

[deactivated user]

oh not at all,coger in Spanish language mean cojer , para ir a trabajar cojo el coche, antes de salir de casa cojo las llaves, Jose no te olvides de cojer la lista del supermercado, por favor coja esta silla, hoy para ir a trabajar voy a cojer el tren, pues todos estos ejemplos son los mas usuarios en la

lengua española diariamente sin malicia de offender a nadie, pues el significado de coger es diferente en los países latinoamericanos, pues venga EXPRESIONES LIBRES y sin offender a nadie

-2Give Lingot•2 years ago

rspreng 24

In Mexico and Argentina to 'coger' is to have sex. Say you are going to 'coger' a bus and you'll get looks and giggles.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

vwlj 25 11 7 6 25

I agree with rspreng: in Mexico, waiters ask me, "¿qué vas a tomar", meaning what would you like to drink; and you "tomar un camión", never "coger" one (unless you're really, really weird)!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

391 – 408 of 912

[accessed March 15, 2017]

391 "What do they do in the evening?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/19421610>

Translation: Що вони роблять увечері?

03 months ago

Leave a new comment

4 Comments

Konrad-Michal 15 14 13 11 9 4 2

What's the difference between ввечері and увечері?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 72

Those are phonetic variants of the same word. Ввечері is used after vowels, and увечері is used after consonants. However, this rule is not always followed. In fact, some people argue that this rule is at odds with the real usage. Also, Duolingo doesn't really follow this rule, teaching «y» instead of «v» in many cases.

I believe both variants should be allowed.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Konrad-Michal 15 14 13 11 9 4 2

Thanks. This particular example follows your rule. I started to read the article you recommended, but it's still too difficult for me. Is the word Вкучвлюе a taboo slang?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

szeraja_zhaba 21 20 72

Not particularly taboo (as you can see, it's used in pretty innocent articles), but a slang. It means 'to make angry'.

I didn't actually think you'd read it. :D If you have any questions, feel free to ask.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

392 "What is the chicken for?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/122473>

Translation: ¿Para qué es el pollo?

04 years ago

Leave a new comment

43 Comments

abha22b 11 4

So Para que means 'for what', and 'por que' means why?

123ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 473

Yep.

61ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

[deactivated user]

Don't forget the accent (qué).

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MessageInTheSkin 10 4 2 2

Turn down fo wha

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

connlynd 11

para que = for what ... por que = why ... porque = because

84ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

LittleWing1 20

@connlynd - re: para que, por qué and porque

I don't know why, but I didn't even see that pattern til you posted it like that. Doh!

Thank you :)

7ReplyGive Lingot8•2 years ago

Esapanolo 15 3

I think "Por que es el pollo?" translates more like a philosophical question, sort of like "why does the chicken exist"?

38ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

Leotheshiner 18 14 14 11 10 10 8 3

Some may ask "What is the chicken." I ask, "WHY is the chicken?"

3ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

MessageInTheSkin 10 4 2 2

WHY DOES IT EXIST? That is the real question here...

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Duo10 9 6 32

I put "que es el pollo para" and it got marked wrong. Would the word order matter here?

24ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 473

Yes it matters. The word order between the two languages is not always the same, and "¿Qué es el pollo para?" is not correct.

27ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

timrwild 11 4

Do all the prepositions come first when you're asking a question? In English, we're not supposed to end a sentence with a preposition (even though most people still do), is that the same here?

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sanddbbox 6

Actually, the "don't end a sentence with a preposition" thing isn't actually a rule

16ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kes05d 7

And, often, what might be considered a preposition is just a "verb particle" (learned this in advanced English grammar), such as "to look up to" or "to look over". "Look" itself has a different meaning when you add in those extra words, and it's perfectly fine to end a sentence with a verb particle.

7ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

Virtuous-Bread 11 1

well, yes it is, in English. It's called a dangling preposition and it is grammatically incorrect. I do think duolingo should rephrase the English (please) so make it correct before asking us for a correct Spanish sentence.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Barbs62 24 18

It used to be grammatically in correct, but the style manuals now allow it.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

KayTeeEm 7

I believe it's a rule left over from Latin.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Johngt44 22 6 3

Yes, that appears to be the reason for this rule being taught as English grammar. (Not splitting an infinitive is another one.) When someone rebuked Winston Churchill he replied that being criticised was something "up with which he would not put" ..

6Give Lingot•2 years ago

JGarrick62 13 2

As sanddbox noted, you can end a sentence with a preposition. If you want to know when that's allowed, click here: <http://www.quickanddirtytips.com/education/grammar/ending-a-sentence-with-a-preposition> What are you waiting for?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

GodlessDivinity 14 6

The translation for this earlier was "por que es el pollo" and now it says it's wrong? I know por que is "why" but wouldn't it mean the same thing?

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 473

No. "¿Por qué es el pollo?" literally means "Why is the chicken?" which makes little sense.

12ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

[+] 3 hidden comments

bstbyrk 12 9 9 9 3

if someone is making a sandwich and putting chicken in it, can somebody say "por qué pollo?" ? or is it wrong?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 473

That would mean "why chicken?"

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bstbyrk 12 9 9 9 3

So it's acceptable.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

weswinsor 11

I put "Pollo es para que?" and go it wrong. Could mine be correct also?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 473

It's wrong. At the very least you need "El" before "pollo".

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

HughB_au 18 11 2 78

I'm maybe jumping ahead a bit here, but I translated it as "Por que' hay el pollo?", which is more like: "Why is there the chicken". Would it be equally useable as in English?

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 473

This should be "¿Por qué hay pollo?" (no "el"). As you said, this would mean "Why is there chicken?", which is not exactly the same as "What is the chicken for?"

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

HughB_au 18 11 2 78

In terms of specific words, I agree that it's different clearly - but "What is the chicken for" and "Why is there the chicken" (with the 'the') in English have same meaning - I was wondering if they do in Spanish, too. Not so much to correct the task at hand as to understand if in Spanish it would have the equal intent as "¿Para que' es el pollo?" to ask "¿Por que' hay el pollo?" or, "¿Por que' tienes el pollo?" etc.

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 473

They mean the same thing in English as they do in Spanish.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

xmaryox 7 6

What is the difference between "para" and "por"? They both mean "for", right?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

andrey1 12

There is the whole set of rules where each of them is used. I'm still struggling to memorize them.
<http://www.studyspanish.com/lessons/porpara.htm>

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SpanishWhiz 19

Either dinner, or lunch, is my guess

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ZoltanMoln 11

Why is "Cual es el pollo para?" incorrect?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Luis 18 14 9 9 4 473

Many reasons. Firstly, "cuál" is more like "which" and not really "what". But most importantly, your word order is wrong. Even though the English sentence ends with "for", in Spanish you cannot end a question with "para".

10ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ZoltanMoln 11

Thank you Luis!

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MrHazard 19 19 6 3
Yo también. Gracias!

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Idraote 16 14
This sentence doesn't make a lot of sense. Were it "What is this present for?" it would be better.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sandra583378 22
Why are some of the sentences backwards?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mahoghany1 10
Should " Qué es el pollo para" be accepted?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

393 FAQ for the Swedish course
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/20444477>

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

The Swedish team decided it was time to put together an FAQ, to answer some very common questions in batch. :)

Q: Why didn't you accept my synonym for mom, dad, or another family member?

A: We know that there are a lot of variations in what family members are called throughout the English-speaking world. But each translation has to be entered manually. There are some shortcuts, but not that many. So if the average sentence has 4-5 variations, and the word "mother" appears in about 30 sentences, we need to add it 120-150 times - possibly more! If people have 6-7 different synonyms for "mother", that's suddenly 720 additions minimum - and then we get to "father", "grandmother", and so on. Adding more variations to the 4-5 ones we do accept for each family member is simply not feasible, and since it's not that hard to use the "proper" names, we ask you to please stick to those throughout the course.

A Swedish proverb states that Kärt barn har många namn - A treasured child goes by many names. The Swedish course has certainly proven that! :)

Q: What's this "Tree 2.0" thing I keep hearing about?

A: We're currently rebuilding the course to make it even better, and to add more skills. For more information, please see the initial feedback thread here:
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/11580398>

Q: Oh wow, that sounds great! So when's it coming?

A: We don't know yet but we're actively working on it. :)

Q: Why do I have to spell out numbers?

A: When translating from Swedish into English, we do accept numbers - meaning both "twenty" and "20" are accepted, for instance. We might have missed some instances, so please report those. But when translating into Swedish, our intention is for you to learn the pronunciation and spelling of the word, so we don't accept numbers then.

Q: How does the typo system work?

A1: Generally, you're allowed one typo per word as long as it doesn't turn into another word. This can be very annoying at times, when it's obvious your answer was correct, but we can't affect this - and for the most time, the system works fine.

A2: One thing the system doesn't get quite right, however, is the use of apostrophes. For instance, when writing a phrase such as "my parents' apples", Duolingo will assume that the apostrophe is not part of the sentence, and tell you that you had a typo. This bug exists in all courses, and we can't affect it.

A3: Another occasional problem is that sentences might have extra spaces if an optional word is missing. For instance, if both "all of the apples" and "all the apples" are accepted translations of a phrase, Duolingo might tell you that you had a typo in the latter because it thinks the "of" should have been replaced with an extra space. This we actually can affect, so feel free to report it. :)

Q: Why won't you accept phrases that obviously mean the same thing as what I entered?

A: This is usually because of one of three things:

What you entered is almost but not quite synonymous, and has a direct equivalent in Swedish.

You changed the sentence construction. We'll accept small deviations, but since a major aim of the course is to teach not only Swedish vocabulary but also how things are phrased in Swedish, we tend not to accept solutions that move around things a lot.

What you entered is technically correct, but unidiomatic. We get loads of these reported in Swedish by people who are obviously not native Swedish speakers. And while we encourage people to report mistakes, reporting things that are correct in English and hence "should" be correct in Swedish is not generally advisable.

Ultimately, there are hundreds of sentences where it could be argued either way. We try to be accepting, but we do make mistakes, and we reevaluate our decisions continuously.

Q: I forgot to report my problem when I encountered it, what do I do?

A: If you encounter it again, simply report it then. But if not, we have a few million learners, so if there's a problem with a sentence we are very confident that someone else will find it shortly. :)

Q: I'm not from the USA, why are you using American English?

A: We try to accommodate as many of the major English variations as possible. If we've missed a common word or spelling, by all means please do report that. However, we also need a default translation for every sentence, and Duolingo's courses for English speakers are all geared towards American English mainly. Should you dislike that policy, take it up with Duolingo - not with us, because we have no say over that. We've removed hundreds of reports about how much better British/Canadian/Australian English is, so please, please don't do that.

Q: I found an error. Should I use the "report a problem" button?

A: In general: sure - if you are certain that you're right. If you're not, we encourage you to post in the comments thread for the sentence, so that others can help you. If you're sure, please do send a report - that's the main way we can improve the course!

That said, we get tens of thousands of error reports, and over 90 % of those are very obviously incorrect. Please read your translation an extra time before sending, and please try to be extra careful if you're not a native English or Swedish speaker (depending on what you're reporting). Sorting through all of these error reports is manual labour, and actively prevents us from spending time developing the tree further - plus, there's a very real risk that we miss actually correct error reports amidst the sea of incorrect ones.

Q: What should I not write in a "freewrite report"?

A1: However you choose to write it, just please be aware that we can't see what you got wrong. We've had thousands - literally - of reports that say things like "My answer should have been correct", and we have absolutely no idea what you entered, so all we can do is to delete the report. We also can't see who wrote the report, so we can't ask, either.

A2: The typo system is not handled by us (see above), so please don't write reports about "My answer was only a typo, you should accept it!"

A3: Please don't write to tell us how superior British English is to American English (see above).

Q: Should I write a comment when I don't understand what I got wrong?

A: Yes! Definitely yes. It's an excellent way of learning, and there are many users - natives and otherwise - who post marvelous answers. However, we have no idea what you entered, nor what kind of exercise you got - translation, type what you hear, etc. - so please be explicit in writing out exactly what you got wrong and what exercise type it was.

Q: Can I delete comments I've written?

A: Yes, although we prefer if people don't delete their old comments - they might still be of use to other learners. If you really have to delete a comment which has replies, please ask a moderator to instead - otherwise it'll make all child comments unremovable.

Q: The voice says "dom" but the spelling says de or dem. What's up with that?

A: Both de and dem are pronounced dom by the vast majority of Swedes. In fact, they're two of the most commonly misspelled words by natives, so don't get discouraged if you get them wrong. Now, we accept dom anywhere that either of those are accepted (and if we don't - shoot us an error report!), but it should be noted that dom is colloquial.

That said, however, the "type what you hear" exercises have an annoying bug which will mark you wrong if you type anything but the default translation - even if there are multiple correct choices. Unfortunately, this leaves us the choice of either making dom a default everywhere, which would be terrible for the course, or having learners be told that they're wrong for writing dom, which is unkind to learners.

Ultimately, we think that the latter option is better - and we do want to teach you de/dem anyway. Hopefully, Duolingo developers will eventually fix the bug to make the problem go away.

Q: Is it i dag or idag? The machine says I made a typo!

A: In short: both are perfectly fine. The Swedish language council recommends the spelling i dag, so we go by their recommendation as a default, but both are always acceptable in any kind of writing.

The problem is that Duolingo stopped recognising this a while ago. So if you type idag, it will occasionally claim that you made a typo. Rest assured that you did not. We've reported this as a bug as well, but we don't know when it might be resolved.

For more information, please refer to Arnauti's thread here:
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/12941839>

Q: Why do some "translate to Swedish" exercises use unidiomatic English?

A: It's important to learn Swedish sentence construction, and we'll occasionally use the English phrase that corresponds the best with the Swedish sentence in order to force you to think in that way - even though it might mean that another English phrase would be a lot better. Further, this is closely related to the next question in the FAQ.

Q: Why do some "translate to English" exercises use unidiomatic English in their default translations?

A: It's mostly because of the way "translate to Swedish" exercises work. These are generated from the "translate to English" exercises automatically, using the default translation for each sentence. In other words: if we choose the most idiomatic English translation in the "translate to English" exercises, this may occasionally lead to "translate to Swedish" exercises that make little sense to have in the course. Ideally, we would have preferred to separate these concepts entirely, but we have no technical option of doing so.

Q: I've never heard the word "swum" before! I'm a native English speaker. Clearly it does not exist.

A: Sorry. Despite the massive amounts of reports requesting to remove words like "swum" and "rung", we'll stick to the grammar books on these ones, if only for the benefit of learners who don't speak native English. :)

Q: Other courses offer bonus skills, why don't you?

A: Two bonus skills have been prepared and waiting for a very long time now. Unfortunately, they are being held back for technical reasons. We don't know what these reasons are, nor when they might be fixed, but we'd be thrilled to finally offer you some bonus lessons.

On a related note, the Swedish team thoroughly dislikes the flirting bonus skill, so that's not coming at all.

Give Lingot18

451 month ago

Leave a new comment

58 Comments

Arnauti 25 25 25 21 20 18 16 12 11 11 11 9 9 5 2 2 104

On a side note: If anybody hasn't noticed, the ever-excellent devalanteriel is a "new" member or more correctly, has actually been a member of the Swedish team for some time now. I keep emailing Duo staff to tell them to fix that green ring, but apparently they're busy doing other stuff. Anyway, three cheers for devalanteriel or actually four, since that's how we do it in Sweden. Hipp hipp!!

26ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

CarolinaViking 12 4 64

He seemed like a happy, knowledgable little penguin, so I knew he must be one of the good guys! With all the preparation relating to turtles, I must ask if there are any turtles on the team?

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

I believe a NOOT is in order.

No turtles yet, as far as I'm aware. Obviously the number-one requirement is having an avian avatar. :p

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

seaeagle5 14 12 5 3 39

How does one get an avatar please, especially since I have an avian alias?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

seaeagle5 14 12 5 3 39

Not that I am a member of staff...

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

That's not really part of the FAQ, but just go to your account preferences and change it there. (<https://www.duolingo.com/settings/account>)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

TobiasHarms 15 11 232

Actually three or four cheers are a regional thing. In Skåne we do three, trefaldigt leve. Of course there's usually one or two in every group who can't count and do one more.

According to the link Wifedear found the reason to this can be found in that Skåne still is using the Danish number of lösen. <http://blogg.vett-och-etikett.com/tre-eller-fyra/>

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

Maybe it's regional within Skåne as well? I'm fairly sure we always did four when I lived in Bromölla. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

TobiasHarms 15 11 232

Bromölla is bordering Blekinge and Blekinge was faster to become "Swedish" even though they both belonged to Denmark. That might be the reason for the difference. There was for instance no revolt in Blekinge against the Swedish rule as there was in Skåne

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

Yes, that's what I was thinking.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

TobiasHarms 15 11 232

My friend from Bromölla actually also confirmed that you do four there :)

1Give Lingot•2 weeks ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

Ah, cheers, I was not 100 % sure I remembered correctly. :)

0Give Lingot•2 weeks ago

EvelynOlson0 25 24 10 8 5

What about tree 2.0?

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

It's under active development but we would prefer not to give any actual estimates. Rest assured that it IS coming - eventually. :)

9ReplyGive Lingot1•1 month ago

JessePaedia 18 15 12 11 4

What actually is tree 2.0? Is it just an extension of the Swedish tree, or is an entirely new tree?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

It's a new tree, but it does use the old one as a base template. Lots of good stuff in the current tree as well, so it makes sense to keep the parts that work. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

.L1 12 11 10 6

So would you recommend waiting for the new tree to pick up Swedish? (I just want to learn it for fun, so I can wait)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

Not at all! The current tree is outstanding - we just want to make the next one even better. :)

2Give Lingot•1 month ago

.L1 12 11 10 6

Okay, thank you for your answer :)

0Give Lingot•1 month ago

JessePaedia 18 15 12 11 4

Would I have to complete my tree all over again?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

brblja 20 14 12 12 6 6 3 2 42

I went through this with other languages - you only need to redo the parts that changed (so if a skill had new lessons/words added). If an early skill was modified and you're further up the tree, you do not lose the progress - it's just that an early skill shows as incomplete.

2Give Lingot•3 weeks ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

I'm honestly not exactly sure how that works. I think that you'll keep your progress but that you'll have some new things to do. I would definitely expect that you shouldn't need to start from scratch.

0Give Lingot•1 month ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

Brilliant - thank you, brblja.

0Give Lingot•3 weeks ago

seaeagle5 14 12 5 3 39

Is the tree a piece of software please?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

What do you mean? The tree is the list of lessons you go through when you do exercises on here.

1Give Lingot1•4 weeks ago

seaeagle5 14 12 5 3 39

doh! Sorry devalandriel

0Give Lingot•4 weeks ago

RogueTanuki 20 7 3

so if somebody has half the tree gold or the entire tree completed and gold when the new tree is introduced, will the progress reset or just for some lessons?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

E.T.Gregor 24 23 22 22 20 16 12 9 7 5 381

Does this mean that when you send a report with "my answer should have been accepted", the answer you gave isn't included in the report? Why would you even have such an option then?

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 month ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

That is correct, and I have absolutely NO idea why it's implemented that way. Remember, we only maintain the course - we don't actually develop anything. If it were up to us, we'd happily change that in an heartbeat.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

E.T.Gregor 24 23 22 22 20 16 12 9 7 5 381

I was not aware of that. Thanks for pointing it out, I was always assuming that my answer would be reported if I chose that option.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

I can definitely appreciate why.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

RogueTanuki 20 7 3

Yeah, maybe you should write it as a note under the first lesson. I know I often used it because I thought it reported the answer I have, but I won't use it anymore and by writing it in the notes of the first lesson you'd lower the number of reports you get.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

You do have a point.

0Give Lingot•2 weeks ago

CarolinaViking 12 4 64

Thanks for this! The de / dem explanation tripped me up the first time I tried Swedish in another app. Nice to see it here for those just starting out. Now if only the sj and related pronunciations were as straightforward!

I'm sorry people are abusing the report system for English issues and the choice to use American English. Maybe you can give them a warning and then just squelch them for a time? Perhaps those kinds of reports can be automatically directed to a lower priority status to deal with as time permits, much like automatically sorting junk mail in your email.

I'm looking forward to the 2.0 version of Swedish. You folks do a wonderful job for us and hopefully you realize how appreciative we are for all your hard work.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

I would, but we can't even see who sent the reports, let alone implement something like that. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

CarolinaViking 12 4 64

That's definitely something they need to implement for you guys as a time saver. Maybe someone will bring it up directly to Luis.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

germanwannabee 25 15 11 6

I have one more question, it's about flera. So often there will be a sentence like "En anka, flera ankor" and it always makes me use "several" instead of "many." It's kind of annoying, because I know what the sentence means, but I just forget to use "several."

Thanks.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 month ago

scarcerer 22 20 17 10 198

Doesn't that fall under

What you entered is almost but not quite synonymous, and has a direct equivalent in Swedish.

Several = flera, many = många

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

Yes, you're absolutely right: we are not going to allow "many" as a translation of flera.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Thorfinn1960 14 1

As a native English speaker, I see no problem with "Swum": "I swam the Channel, therefore the Channel has now been swum". Wish I could remember the proper linguistic term here! "Past perfect passive"?? Same for "Rung" by the way - "I rang the bell, therefore the bell has now been rung". Ah, the benefits of a Scottish education! :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

phb2013 21 20 20 11 1122

I think that would be the past participle.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Thorfinn1960 14 1

Simple as that! D'oh!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

RogueTanuki 20 7 3

The song has been sung :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

CandyKD 21 2 2 93

Looking forward to Swedish Tree 2.0! I hope there will be lessons on: particle verbs, phrasal verbs that are NOT particle verbs, idioms, compound words, constructions, for example - 'too X to Y' -- 'för trött för att försöka', more on word order (although Arnauti's post on that topic is great)

I appreciate very much all the hard work and diligence the Swedish team has put into this course!
Three Cheers (or Four)!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 weeks ago

teamredcoat 10 6

How come we don't have a 'Words' section for swedish? This could be very useful in case I forget some word.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

Unfortunately, that's completely out of our hands. If we could offer one to you, we gladly would.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

E.T.Gregor 24 23 22 22 20 16 12 9 7 5 381

On that note, can you tell us the total number of words in the Swedish course?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

I'd be happy to tell you, but it doesn't show anywhere so I have no idea either. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

HansLovesIce 11 10 10 9 8 3 27

If you use duolingo vocab manager app on the google chrome browser it tells you how many words are in your current duolingo vocabulary. It is probably not exact and might very well double count words that have several similar translations into english. However I am at level 16 and according to the vocab app I have 2844 words to study.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

E.T.Gregor 24 23 22 22 20 16 12 9 7 5 381

Oh, I thought the course contributors could maybe see it. Well, thanks anyway.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

It's not entirely impossible that it does show somewhere - but if it does, I'm yet to find it...

0Give Lingot•3 weeks ago

angeliki_meli 10 7

Hello, why don't we have oral exam too? or it's because I'm in the very beginning?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

Do you mean the speaking exercises? I think those might have to be enabled in your settings, but they do exist, as far as I know.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

angeliki_meli 10 7

everything is on on my settings...maybe will come later!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

RusuVlad123 11 10 10 7 5

I noticed I do have them on the pc version, but I've never encountered any of them on the iOS version, even though I activated them from the settings. Do you have any idea why that might be?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

devalanteriel 24 20 16 16 14 12 8 1272

I'm sorry - no idea whatsoever.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

RusuVlad123 11 10 10 7 5

It's ok, it's not too much of an inconvenience. I guess I'll just buy a mic for my pc. Thanks for the response!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

seaeagle5 14 12 5 3 39

'swum' is the past participle of 'swim'.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

394 "The boys are children."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/455134>

Translation: Die Jungen sind Kinder.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

45 Comments

spark88 5

Die is "female" and used when words end on -ung, -keit, -heit, -ei. Der is male, as jungen are males, why is it Die?

55ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DonAriff 10 9 7 4

Because Die is the plural form of "The" in German. Das Kind -> Die Kinder, Der Bus -> Die Busen etc.

83ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

santu.sunil 7

Lol

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IrnyaRengg 9 6

aah so every words in plural form become "Die..."?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

daisydebris 8 6 2

Die is plural for nominative (direct object) and accusative cases. It's also feminine for singular nouns.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

EmmaNidoze 3

i dont understand y sind and not seid?

14ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

-Alessja- 12 12 6

seid is the 2nd person plural form. You need to use 3rd person here, that's actually "sind".

38ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Mirka18 5

Why it is not Der Jungen?

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DonAriff 10 9 7 4

Jungen is the plural form of Junge. And since it's plural, you have to use Die. Which, coincidentally being used for feminine nouns as well haha :)

12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

3CKq1 9

So why Jungen and not Junge/r??

1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

nandini.jiva 11

That really helped!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

hieutrong27 12 5

"Junge" is "boy", masculine. Then why "boys" is "Jungen" but not "Junger"?

3ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

shacharbenny 5

Why jungs and not junges?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

aaaaaaahhh 3

I'd like a more descriptive reason as to why my answers are wrong. I won't learn much if all I get is, "You are wrong."

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dibya16 3

Where to use der and where to use die?

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

__a 8 7 4

but Jungs and Jungen were both correct answers on a previous plural question..?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Krueckauer 14

"Jungen" is the standard plural, while "Jungs" is somewhat colloquial (as is "Jungens", but I've never heard that one). Both should be accepted though.

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

swjodokat 7

Why Die instead of Das?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

__a 8 7 4

Because of the plural!

9ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

alithecrab 10 4

Is there a reason that "Die Knaben" is unacceptable for "The boys"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

felix.labelle 7 6 6 4

is boy not supposed to be knaben in german?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

christian 22 22 22 21 18 17 13 9 8 6 4 2

"Knabe" is outdated.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

felix.labelle 7 6 6 4

but still good?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

christian 22 22 22 21 18 17 13 9 8 6 4 2

Not really. It's not used in Modern German, except maybe in some regional dialects.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

felix.labelle 7 6 6 4

There we go, i learned my German in Switzerland witch mix thing up sometime. Thank's for helping!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lana-bell 5

Why not seid?So confused:-{

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

xadhix 9 5

"Sie Junge sind das Kind" was accepted as right. How? Ideas?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Riser2Serid 14

The boys are kinder than?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

brinthkhan 5

Confused with die .das .der

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

nikhil.bajpai1 6

When to use "seid" and "sind"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

VarO_On 3

Why not " Die Jungen bist Kinder" ?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DonAriff 10 9 7 4

Because German 3rd person plural form for the verb "to be" is "sind". If you're using "bist" then the whole sentence structure would change to "Du bist ein Kind" meaning "You are a child" because this is the 2nd person singular form of the verb Sein (to be).

13ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

oneshotaway 4

I don't understand sie/Sie. Like for example what I don't get is that Er/Sie/es has Sie in it and it means She but what could the other two mean?.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DonAriff 10 9 7 4

Er is He and Es is It...He's drinking = Er trinkt or It is drinking = Es trinkt

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rehamalassily 10

Why using Die in plural? .. Die is The for femnin ..right?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DonAriff 10 9 7 4

In German, feminine forms can also be used as a plural "the". Just like for example: Meine Freunde = My friends or Meine Autos = My cars.

So the only way to differentiate is to know the plural forms of your nouns. E.g: Das Auto in plural is Die Autos or Die Strasse = The street -> Die Strassen = The Streets.

So a tip my teacher taught us is to know your nouns. Both singular and plural :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

rehamalassily 10
thx :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

LyndaBrinkers 8 4
Lovely explanation :) Danke!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ruukaksi 15 9 7 2
Why "die" instead of "der"? aren't Jungen masculine form?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]
Yes but when using a definite article for a plural noun in the nominative (and accusative) case you have to use "die".

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/German_articles

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lizzieanna 6
Ich bin- i am Du bist- you are Er/sie/es ist- he/she/ it is Wir sind- we are Ihr seid- you(plural) are Sie sind- they are

Hope this helps :D

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

tre-avec 7 2
Thanx

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FlyinPigs 7 2
When should i end a plural with -en (jungen) or -er (kinder)?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Spathene 16 8 8
-er ending: most masculine or neuter nouns will need the -er ending, and there may be umlaut changes. For example, in the nominative case "das Kind" (the child) becomes "die Kinder," and "der Mann" (the man) becomes "die Männer."

-n/-en ending: most feminine nouns will take either -n or -en in all four grammatical cases, with no umlaut changes. For example, "die Frau" (the woman) becomes "die Frauen" and "die Kartoffel" becomes "die Kartoffeln."

The two rules above are valid for most nouns. I guess that you just need to memorize the specific case "Junge" -> "Jungen"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

395 "The book and the letter are red."
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/330614>

Translation: Le livre et la lettre sont rouges.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

177 Comments

kittenlover25 8

Darn, I keep getting stuck on the "Le" and the "La"... It's driving me crazy! I've redone this level like, eight times AND IT KEEPS HAPPENING. -Sigh- Oh, well. I think they should've cleared it up a bit better, because it's really important...

75ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AMeadon 4

I feel you. Why is a letter feminine when a book and a menu are masculine? How do you keep the rules straight?

55ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bott 3

you have to learn by heart for those ^ _ ^

36ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Hadrian-Sedgwick 3

I have the same problem, but I find it helps to say the article out loud whenever you pronounce a word.

26ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

baggybeast 7 1

hot!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

U... 5 3

Currently, I'm using the 'e' ending as crutches for masculine / feminine. E is usually feminine

-6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RhianKristen 6

Except livre

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AdnanAlbed 6
And "fromage" cheese

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

NumbiesCandB 11 6
and a lot of other nouns but it is true that most nouns ending in -e are feminine but not all of them

2Give Lingot•10 months ago

CarolineSi47 4
All language from latin has those..portuguese, spanish, italian, french...

14ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dpash 18 9 2
But Spanish and Portuguese are fairly easy to guess by looking at the end of the noun. If it ends in 'a' it is probably feminine. This is not the case in French, and to make matters worse, it's not the same gender as words in Spanish.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JewishPolyglot 14 13 12 11 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 3
English is actually one of the world's weirdo languages in that it DOESN'T have masculine and feminine. There are tons of languages - not just those from Latin - spoken all over the world which have two genders in them, for example Hebrew, Arabic, and even Dutch and the Scandinavian languages - only these last two don't have masculine and feminine, they have common and neuter. Be thankful at least we're not learning German, Latin, Russian, or Yiddish - those have THREE genders, and you can't always tell the gender from the noun ending in any of these either!

19ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlenaPeterson 2
Exactly I guess and apple is more girly than a menu...

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

glyreads 9
that makes sense, in a weird and confusing way

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nishad15 16 5 3 3 3 2
lol!!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

Helectron 12 3
It is very similar to the spanish, in spanish letter is feminine and book is masculine.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago
[+] 1 hidden comment

Leilani_Smith 4

I think of it this way: in the past meant spent a lot of time reading books, while ladies spent a lot of time writing letters. (I am thinking Jane Austen.)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

audreyreis2401 5

Thank God for I speak portuguese and know naturally this things...

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

CarolineSi47 4

Haha ne! Sao vantagens que nem sentimos

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

bellaboobear 7 4 2

Assim fica facil, né?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

RomanJuare2 2

My first language is Spanish so the feminine and masculine are natural to me when I switch my thinking to Spanish. When I was learning English I was puzzled why other could see the feminism on a table, a chair, and a door. In Spanish the last letter of "la carta", "la silla" rhyme. That's how it makes sense to me. Maybe French is similar.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ixtxn 6

It's easier for Spanish speakers.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Punkmom 11 9

There really aren't any rules for it. You just have to memorize, much like spelling.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jackson-Percy 7 3 3 3

You can usually determine whether it's masculine or feminine by its ending. Both usually have specific endings that apply to the gender

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

ZaSzRH 10 10 8

I feel you, trying to learn Swedish.. and the genres are not the same as in French.. it's really wierd to re-learn every genre of every object!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Aravindpar2 4 2

me too, also I get mixed up if it's plural or singular.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LadyHimawari2 18 6 5

It's really easy for me, but everyone is different you might learn over time.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AdnanAlbed 6

It's easy for me to differentiate between them because they're like the masculine and feminine in Arabic. Some words are different but not very much. But for you, as an English speaker, you don't have that masculine and feminine definitions for objects, so you have to get them by heart.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Sejo90 15 13 12 11 9 9 7 7 5 4 3 100

If you're struggling with the articles in French, then I can't recommend you the German :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlexBobech 3

same

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ooobug 2

Me 2...Come and help me!!!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Duoligual_ 3

Same.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

greenabrews 7

I feel you. How does we determined letter n book the gender? keep on confusing about this

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

fayfay802 11 6

Me too

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lemeck 3

do not worry about the word is the important part, only after huge practice you will get it right

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

RoosKayGirl 3

Why is it 'rouges' instead of 'rouge' in this sentence?

14ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

bott 3

Because "Le livre et la lettre" is in pluriel so the verb is written in pluriel

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ChuckStukk 5

"Le livre et la lettre" refers to more than one item, but the words look singular to me.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dpash 18 9 2

Individually they are one item each, but together they are two, so the whole phrase is dealing with a plurality of objects.

19ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FinlayGord 10 7 5 2 2

I think it's because the red (rouges) is describing more than one thing.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lily400168 7 2

It is because red (rouges) is talking about more than one thing (lettre and livre). Hope this helps!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

rohansf 5 4

this freaking "s" in the end of the plural adjectives is killing me. it doesn't make any sound so i never remember to write it.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sherya659134 3

when it is less than you have 2 write s but not always

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

FrenchEagle 9 3

i like your gamer picture

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jemaplleravi 5

I heard this stupid rule from a French teacher hope that will be of some help , The words which ends with letter e are usually feminine (of-course there are a lot of exceptions, for ex livre is masculine)

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

maaaaaaa3 7

But I dont understand the reason, why, why are there male and female nouns ... ? please tell me why, what would this result to ? is it easier this way ? really ?

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dpash 18 9 2

Because Romans. It's an aspect of all romance languages. Sadly it makes it harder to learn, but you have to just remember them. Look at supplementing your learning with something like AnkiSRS which can help you remember individual words. Make sure you include the gender in the cards you create. So "la lettre" = "the letter" rather than just "lettre" = "letter".

To be extra fun, German has three genders.

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lily400168 7 2

German has three genders? I've been having a hard time with just the two, so I don't think I could ever do three!!! By the way, what is the third?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

nabl83 9

It's a pity that genders don't coincide in French with Russian. For example, "a book" is feminine in Russian ((((((

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

allburningup 7

It's weird for me as an English speaker to have to put genders with inanimate objects, but I bet it's even weirder if you're used to them having genders, but in the new language, many of the genders you are used to are wrong! Actually your predicament sounds hilarious to me. :)

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fantasyfootball6 6

Is there any difference between une and un when you prounouce them?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

singa4hire 14 14 12 2

When do you use sont and sommes? thought one was plural and one was singular, but that doesn't seem to be the case

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nabl83 9

je suis (I am); tu es (you are (singular)); il/elle est (he/she/it is); nous sommes (we are); vous êtes (you are (plural)); ils/elles sont (they are)

25ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

danbalam 9 6 6 5 3

This is really helpful. I've copy and pasted it to a document on my computer. Is there a handy way you recommend of memorising this? Or is the old rote method of stare at the various and repeat aloud the only way?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dpash 18 9 2

Investigate SRS (spaced repetition system) systems like anki. duolingo also uses SRS, which is why you have to refresh skills. Is making you go back and remember words just before you forget them.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nabl83 9

I do not understand the question. You remember the declension of the verb "to be" in English. Now learn how the verb "être" is declined in French.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

danbalam 9 6 6 5 3

Yeah sorry. It was a stupid question. Honestly I don't know how I learned the correct English and can't think of any rule that would apply. I just know it, probably from rote learning. So I don't know why I thought French would have any rule to learn it by.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nabl83 9

Don't be sorry, it happens to everyone ;)

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

zha_chen 6

I found it quite difficult as well.especially when it goes with the plural adjectives.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

troyandtyler 2

Is it just me or does autocorrect hate duolingo i put et not est

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sareh0 7
why is "red" plural?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Punkmom 11 9
An adjective must agree in number and gender. In this case, there are two items that are red, so "red" must be plural. It is the same principle as using "are" ("sont") instead of "is" ("est").

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

manojit.pati 9
This gender thing is ridiculous

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ABNK 6
Can any one help me on when to use et instead of est?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

M.Doc 13
"Et" = "and"; "est" = "is" (singular third person: "he is"). Also, "es" = "are" (singular second person: "you are").

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rhiane.lin 10
Why does red change when talking about a plural object? Red is red regardless of tense in English but rouge changes to rouges in French? Is there a reason?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

M.Doc 13
Adjectives always match number and gender. Since there are more than one object in this case, it is pluralized. English doesn't have this.

See the grammar notes to the Basic Skills 2: <https://www.duolingo.com/skill/fr/Basics-2>

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

meisam.j 8 2
So many "r"s! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

honey522930 6
Too hard

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RileyAS 13 7
[deleted]

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

nabl83 9
[deleted]

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

RileyAS 13 7
Thank you ^-^"

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

louise.fra1 4
Why "rouges" and not "rouge"...I didn't really figure this was a plural kind of situation...if that makes sense?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dpash 18 9 2
Because you have two things, the book and the letter, so you need to use the plural forms with sont and rouges.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

annemourao 4 2
Why colors also go on plural?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dpash 18 9 2
I think you're asking why are colours pluralised? In French (and other Romance languages like Spanish and Portuguese) adjectives have to match both the gender and singular/pluralness of the objects being described. As there's two objects, which are both red, you need to use the plural form of the adjective.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Anna_Owl_99 6
I find it really annoying because my teacher told us if it ends in e it is probab feminine!
PROBABLY!?!?!?!?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

benhui9 5
Does anyone else think it ruins the purpose of practicing your french if you can just slide your cursor over the word and get the translation? Now that I know about this I don't think I can ever not be tempted by it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jordan_Gil 8

When do I know to use "es" or "sont/sommes" for ARE?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dpash 18 9 2

It depends on what "is". If it's a single person that you're not talking to or a single object, you'd use est. If you're talking about more than one person that you're not talking to or if there are multiple objects, then you'd use sont. Basically, you have first person (you), second person (the person you're talking to) and third person (a third party or an object) forms of every verb. You also have singular and plural versions of those verbs, leaving you with six forms of the verb. They correspond with je (I), tu (you), il/elle/on (he/she/one), nous (we), vous (you all) and ils/elles (they).

je suis - I am tu es - You are il est - He is nous sommes - We are vous êtes - you [all] are ils sont - they are

(remember that you also use the vous form instead of tu when you need to be more formal, for example with a stranger)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

parya2 9 7 4

When we use sommes instead of sont Pls write a sentence for me .

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SophTomlinson 2

le les la ughhhh

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

stephanie9110024 2

why is it plural

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dpash 18 9 2

Because there are two objects. Just as you wouldn't say "The book and the letter is red", you wouldn't say "Le livre et la lettre est rouge." You use "are" and not "is" because you're talking about more than one object. The same applies in French.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rj_brainstron 6

I always forget the 's'

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Julia_Feiler 6 3

i can't remember to make red (rouge) plural for multiple objects!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Robin_Jeannene 8 6 2

why can't it just remind you when you use the wrong article rather than taking off a whole heart ans saying you got the entire answer wrong, when literally the only think you messed up was le and la

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PerezThaur 9 9 5 3 2

Perfect!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

darbydoolittle 10

I'm irritated with the plural red. Who says the book and the letter are reds?!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

blackbarnkitten 11

why is it not est rouges, and instead "sont",,,,

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alyssalynchard92 8 8

Why is red plural? Because it uses are not is?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bla1468 3

People say english is one of the most hardest languages to learn but yet we dont have m/f or 6 diffrent words for eat and things like that

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Hyperkooki 5 4

<h1>NailedIt so proud lol</h1>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Fitriamdnor 6

When do i use "rouge" and "rouges"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

meisam.j 8 2

"Rouge" is singular and "rouges" is plural form.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kheedacrui 3

Why is there an "s" at the end of "rouges"? Shouldn't it just be "rouge"? Or is it because its mentioning two objects?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

_Alex_W_ 6 2

I feel that this whole "le la" thing is just odd. if "livre" is masculine, then shouldn't "lettre" also be? is it because it is a smaller object?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EmmaE4 5 2

I can never tell if i should put rouge or rouges? :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EmmaE4 5 2

Opps, i meant :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

srimdz 24 99

For some reason ending rouge with an 's' here seems incorrect (none of the previous words are plural), except that we are talking about two things (plural) and so the adjective must agree

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Retrosky 6

I always thought Lettre was Le. Duolingo taught me before

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nishad15 16 5 3 3 3 2

can someone please explain when to use "sont", "sommes" and "est" ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

meisam.j 8 2

Try these: Use "sont" for they are "sommes" for we are "es" for you and "est" for he/she/it

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Superbi_Squalo 13 10 6 6 5 2

when you're a native portuguese(brazil) speaker, learn french becomes something pretty easy '-'

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alicia11111 18 259

Its sounds incorrect to use rouges when naming more than one object. For example, Les robes et le livre sont rouges. Translates in english The dresses and the book are REDS. Should be RED regardless of the amount of items.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

TylerFrank4 4

That was the hardest sentence so far to pronounce. Being a non native speaker, i make the "r's" sound messy.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Maggie417369 10

book and letter are two things and the verb is plural, therefore the article should be plural "les".

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ma_allam 3

lol same here i keep forgetting the difference between es et and est

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Bluezero2x 8 7 2

I'm just confused about red being plural reds or rouges

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

makayla.golden 3

At this point it shouldn't matter if I put la or le!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

samanthatasman 10 6 2

How are letters female?????

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

MAYAAAAAA.123 5

IT SAID LE WHEN I WENT OVER THE WORDDDDD!!! NOWWWWWW IT IS TELLING ME THAT I'M WRONG AND ITS LA NOT LE!!!! LIARSSSSSSSSSS

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

TaylerRae- 6 2

?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

JanayT. 8

Can someone explain when to use es, est and sont etc. its confusing to me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Chrisisabdoni 11 2 2

Me too le and la DRIVE ME CRAZY

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

JadonA.MGr 6
this is so easy

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

EvAk695045 6
Does the pronouciation of rouge and rouges seem any different ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

laurelynwagner 7
Is there a way to differentiate between masculine and feminine words?! I just started French a few months ago and I'm really really confused...

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Mercedes700495 7
MISTAKE!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! ONLY ONE LETTER WRONG !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Sudeshna17 9 3
Can somebody explain all the be verb forms?As far I understand, First person: I am = Je suis We are = Nous sommes Second person: You are = Tu es (singular)/ Vous êtes (singular or plural?) Third person: sont (plural). What is singular form? I'm hoping there is no variation for gender here. Right?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

itzjojo_2006 3
HELP! Do you have a way to help me remember if things are plural and singular? Thanks!
@yourtypicaljojo

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

itzjojo_2006 3
HELP! Do you have a way to help me remember if things are plural and singular? Thanks!
@yourtypicaljojo

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

SachiHiromura 6
When do you use etes, existe, and sont?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

ElizabethRoche0 5
Afrikaans has no gender as well, so I am also battling with La & Le :-(

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

EmilyGrobl 7 2

so "sont" is for plural and "est" is singular?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

TeganMerri 4

always get muddles up between la le

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Lily400168 7 2

Hi, I've been struggling to remember what words are feminine and which are masculine. For example, in this sentence it says that livre is masculine, but lettre is not. I don't understand! Can anybody help? Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

SandraSweatman 12 13

why are the comments so old? is nobody learning?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 weeks ago

Samuel1819117 3

Getting the "are" was a hurdle.. But the exercise is quite fun and educative.. It's best to learn by heart.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

marzymarz 4

got stuck on the le and la :(

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

mrsmalik2700 6

how can you tell where to put the le and the la???

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RileyAS 13 7

It seems to be a matter of having to memorize which is feminine and which is masculine... odd imo
=P

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

danbalam 9 6 6 5 3

Yeah some of my French friends tell me there is no special way or rule. Even they said it was a little stupid. You literally need to memorise the word (and its gender).

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

hannelorevl 9 3 3

A rule you can apply most of the time (note: most of the time) is this one: when a word ends with an -e (pomme, banane), it's feminine (la pomme, la banane) But, again, it only works in maybe 80-90% of all cases (that's what my french teacher said)

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

workingclasshero 16

There isn't a fixed set of rules to learn this. But I think this problem will be resolved with time. These things will be subconsciously inculcated in your mind as you hear/see/read/listen more of French.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

TMTNeves 5

In my language, Portuguese, we have word's gender very similar to French, and I always get confused when the word is feminine in portuguse, but masculine in French, I can't memorize them :(

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

susanpederson 2

I think it would be really helpful if we didn't have to imagine what a word was, and guess at it from oh, about three billion possibilities...

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

demaster 3 2

remember guys, Le is for book and la is for letter. Heres a rhyme to help you remember. The book got in his tux and went on a date with Mrs.Letter because she got some bucks.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RealMrAerandir 6 3 2

Very accurate.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RealMrAerandir 6 3 2

I agree with myself.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RealMrAerandir 6 3 2

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

kickalom 4

i am having the same problem 2.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Briefcase15 2

I have the same problem, my mom was asking me if there were any rules to know if it is masculine or feminine and I told her that there was no rule. Is there a rule? When I took French one i had a had time because there are things that are feminine, like a dress, that might be masculine in french; not that a dress is masculine, but you get my piont.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

aidennumber1 4

i have the same problem

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

zmorjan_64

i know init i got stuck on how to spell and in english

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

clairejenko 7 4

Argh keep forgetting the word for book!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sebsebi1234 4

I don't think they should mark it wrong if you write the word incorrectly like seriously we are LEARNING French here not taking a test on how to write something french

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sebsebi1234 4

:{

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

quynnt4 5

I think there should be a way to explain how to know whether or not a word is masculine or feminine. To say that I just have to remember is not very helpful.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dpash 18 9 2

About 80-90% of feminine words will end in an 'e'. Except the 10-20% that don't. Like livre.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JoshKincaid 8 4

What helped me kinda get the genders right is the first two letters in lettre is "le" so the article CAN'T be le because "le le" sounds stupid. Idk, helped me!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sarahnicholehaha 4

I keep getting my sentences sort of backwards. Le livre et la lettre sont rouge. But it says it is wrong, how do you properly say "The book and the letter are red."

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

workingclasshero 16

You are almost correct. It should be 'rouges'.

Remember if the noun is plural (the book and the letter in this case), the adjective describing them will also be plural.

a) Le livre et la lettre sont rouges b) Le livre est rouge

Also note the spelling of 'lettre'.

Hope this helps.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

lemeck 3

le livre est rouge et la lettre est rouge les livres sont rouges j'adore les rouges de la photo les photos sont trop rouges that is the it goes in french, it is from the Latin

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dpash 18 9 2

"Les livres sont rouges" You need to plural the noun and the adjective.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lemeck 3

no plural in the color of many object

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

allecu2003 2

why is correct the form: "le livre"? why is not correct "la livre"? it's feminine gender right?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wildtrax 13 10 7 5 4

why is a letter la? feminine? Why wouldn't it be le? I'm confused.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cavani00 6

they should not give us wrong on it

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

chrisijoyah 3

I keep on mixing up Le and La :s

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PrincessZorra 5

Wouldn't it be Les because it was plural?

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

dpash 18 9 2

No, because there's only one book and one letter, but together, they are two objects and they are both red.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PrincessZorra 5

Oh, okay, Merci! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FatimaZehr1 4 2

I have no clue when to use es sont or sommes :(they shid clear this up

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

naprock01 4

gods!! why does the pronunciation have 2 be dis hard! :\

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bihuichan 3

i dont know the different between le and la.its difficult to me

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ktanderson08 4

I'm confused when tp use sont or est.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ktanderson08 4

I'm confused when tp use sont or est.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lemeck 3

the color of many objects can not be plural unless we are talking of different hue of that color

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dpash 18 9 2

That's not how French (or other romance languages) work. The adjective has to match the number of objects. There are two objects, so you use the plural form of the adjective.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

workingclasshero 16

No wait. Why are you confusing people here ?

It clearly says the correct translation is:

'Le livre et la lettre sont rouges'. So there is an 's' at the end.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

396 Questions from a Newbie

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2654694>

JackiMex 11

I read the New User FAQs, the wiki, and the guidelines, but I still have some questions. (Suggestion: please put all these in one place, such as in a new Forum called Guidelines.)

At the top to the right of my username are three icons. Two of them are identified when I move my cursor over them: Streak and Lingots. What is the golden bell for?

Would you please explain to me the role of hearts? I know that one starts a Practice with three hearts, and if all 20 questions are answered correctly, one earns a lingot. One loses a heart for each error. After losing all three hearts, the user can continue to answer questions, but if he/she makes one more error, the practice ends. Is that the whole role of the hearts?

I read in some comments about having to strengthen words or skills so the tree remains gold and does not decay. Is this still necessary with the new design? If so, how does a user know which skills need strengthening?

Where is the Coach? I read on the official blog that a Coach will tell the user each day how many points he/she needs to earn that day. That sounds like a great idea. Is the Coach only found on the iOS app? If so, do the rest of us just do as much or as little as we want on the web site in order to count as a day in the Streak?

Many thanks for all the work that staff and users have put into making Duolingo an effective site for learning a language. Jacki

Give Lingot20

82 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Hi JackiMex,

The bell is for notifications if people respond to your comments, or if you are awarded lingots for translations, streak, and Double or Nothing in the Lingot store.

Yes, the role of hearts are just to count the number of your chances during a lesson. (Giving lingots used to involve giving hearts. But, they changed it to the red lingot jewel recently.)

Yes, skills still decay. But, Duolingo tinkers with this slowing or speeding up the skill decay rate to see what works best. If you peek or make errors this increases the rate of decay.

4. No idea. I don't use it so I don't know much about it. Sorry :(

I hope this helps! ^_^ Hopefully, someday Duolingo will help bring all of this information together by linking all of it to the help page.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

duolingoparis0 6

Thanks I was looking for an answer for that question too.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

BaconAddict 25 11 11

Yes, the coach is only on the app. When you open it up, he will appear at the bottom of the screen with a message telling you whether you are on track or how many points you need to get back on track.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TKelliott 21 21 21 10 10 557

Regarding point 4: your streak and the Coach are different concepts.

Your streak simply carries on every day you earn at least one point (XP - the gold coins) on Duolingo. It doesn't matter what you do, as long as you do something that earns you a point.

The Coach is for people who have decided they want further encouragement to earn a particular number of points. I don't use it myself, but I have heard that the Coach sort of counts your average over a week. So if you've said you want to do fifty points a day, if you do a hundred points on Monday and none on Tuesday, that keeps him happy. However, it will still break your streak (because the streak is simply about doing something - anything - every day). Apparently some people have ended up a bit irritated with themselves because they thought that keeping up their average number of points would mean their streak would survive even if they did nothing on one day. They were wrong. On the other hand, if you do one point a day for a week, you'll keep your streak but the Coach won't be happy.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AnneAho 18 11 8 7 6 6 3

"3. I read in some comments about having to strengthen words or skills so the tree remains gold and does not decay. Is this still necessary with the new design? If so, how does a user know which skills need strengthening?"

Yes, the tree does decay. The whole point of the tree not remaining gold forever is that once something falls out of gold, it's high time to strengthen that skill, so that's how you'll know! :) Also, if you do a "strengthen skills" session, it will automatically focus on your weakest areas, even if everything's still golden.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

397 What is the most sophisticated Language in your opinion and why
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7956074>

Karli178 4

Give Lingot3

21 year ago

Leave a new comment

60 Comments

paulaha88 16

French used to be the European language of diplomacy. I know there were many reasons that happened. But my friend told me that French was particularly well suited for the task because the way it employs passive voice makes it easier to speak about specific topics without specifically ascribing blame (like the English, "mistakes were made").

Diplomacy requires speaking very carefully but very precisely about very delicate topics, in very stressful conversations. Apparently French is particularly well suited to the task. Does that make it more "sophisticated"? It don't know.

I know that the politically-correct view is that all cultures are equal, and all languages are equal. Call me a Neanderthal, but I don't buy it. True, all languages can communicate all concepts equally well. But I believe that certain languages accomplish certain tasks more easily than others. For example,

English has an enormous palette of commonly-used vocabulary, with a large number of near-synonyms - words that have meanings that are similar but not precisely the same. That allows you to express a very precise meaning by choosing just the right word. It's like coloring with a Crayola-8 box of crayons, vs. a Crayola-64.

Spanish, while it does not have the extensive vocabulary of English, does have more vocabulary available for relationships. Not just romantic, but all sorts of interpersonal relationships. Therefore Spanish can more easily express those topics. Not better, just more easily.

I've heard (I can't confirm) that German is particularly suited for inventing new words that clearly express their meaning. Therefore it is easier to use in ares of invention and scientific discovery.

Latin and Greek both have a high degree of inflection. That gives them the freedom to rearrange word order to their hearts' content - the grammar is indicated by endings, not word order. That frees up syntax to do other chores - emphasis, concept relationships, etc. The other thing accomplished by complex inflection, is that Latin and Greek can support incredibly long sentences, without any loss of clarity. I can see where this trait would make them well suited to describing complicated concepts such as philosophy. Again, any language is CAPABLE of expressing these things, even Hawaiian with its 11 letters. But some languages make it easier than others.

12ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

frankenstein724 17 12 9 8 6 5 4 2

You say that you don't buy the "politically correct" view that all languages are equal, but then go on to show examples of languages being different, but in a positive way. "politically correct" or not, I actually don't think society as a whole (across the political aisle, even those who are more prone to worry about political correctness) thinks that all languages are equal, quite the opposite. I disagree however. I mean, first of all, though, just like you imply, it depends on what our definition of "sophisticated" is. Do we mean socioculturally sophisticated, or linguistically sophisticated? Linguistically speaking all languages are, in fact, equal but different. There is a phrase I picked up from some book, "if it can be said, it can be translated" which, as you've said, is then just a matter of how easy it is to say in any given language. Back in the day we used to think that indigenous languages were "savage" and lacking "sophistication" but, linguistically speaking, they are usually actually quite complex.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

paulaha88 16

I pre-defended my position because every time this kind of question comes up on the forum, "Which language is the most xxx?"*
the majority of the responses read, generally,
"No one language is more xxx than any other."

In this discussion alone, I count four responses that fit into that description (not including the raft of hidden posts). I'm not faulting them for holding that opinion. I'm just saying I disagree.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

frankenstein724 17 12 9 8 6 5 4 2
fair enough.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

territrades 23 19 17 14 12 8 8 7 4 1233

In linguistics there is something called the Sapir–Whorf hypothesis. It basically says that the ideas and thoughts of the human mind are influenced by the language it uses. A very good example of that is given in the novel 1984 by George Orwell.

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

paulaha88 16

I don't buy Sapir-Whorf on the macro scale. Micro, yes, but not macro. I don't think that how you perceive color influences your views on reality or the meaning of life (sarcasm). I think it's more of a chicken / egg question. What a culture values, its language reflects. But better minds than mine have been disputing that one for a long time now. With that said, I would like to hear McWhorter's take on that recent study.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rafforza 14 11 3 3 2 2 2

Although I'm not exhaustively educated on this topic, it seems to me that however diplomatically useful French may be, it's highly unlikely rulers used it because of those merits. In fact, those merits may be the result rather than the cause of its diplomatic usage. It's far more likely that the language was chosen due to the wealth and power of France's ruling elite & its central seat within the continent.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

paulaha88 16

Agreed. That's why my post said, I know there were many reasons that happened.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jorg.Ancrath 13 7 7 6

This was interesting!

Thank you for posting this. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Taloua 25 25 25 25 827

I cannot tell exactly which language. Because I appreciate each language and I love all of them.

8ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

Rafforza 14 11 3 3 2 2 2

The answer to this question is simple, because the question itself doesn't make any sense. It's like asking, "what language is more yellow?"

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

scilling 23 930

The answer to your question must be "US English", as the home of Pulitzer's and Hearst's yellow journalism. ;*)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Polish_polyglot 6

There is no such language although some of them sound less sophisticated than others.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Jorg.Ancrath 13 7 7 6

There is no such thing as sophisticated, difficult, maybe. And this is based upon what is your native language.

My native language is from the Romance group. So normally, I will have more ease learning a language that is from the same group than one that is from another language group.

Don't know why people down-voted your discussion. :|

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Teen_Polyglot 12 10 9

You're right. If you're talking about how complicated it is, every language has something complicated in it, and a lot does depend on your native language and your previous exposure to the language. No one can win the comparison game.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Teelamae 11 6
I don't know???

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SkillsInPills 7 5 2
Most sophisticated?

Hmm..I guess Latin since its so prevalent in academia.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

timikabz 12 10 8 6
In my opinion it is Hungarian. There is no other language similar to Hungarian, it is a really complicated language, the structure of the sentences, creating words, declension and conjugation done with prefixes and suffixes, very rich vocabulary, special and strong accent, spelling (letters like sz, zs, gy, ly, ny...). There are a lot of words which cannot be translated into other languages. And Hungarian has its own words for many international words - for example system = rendszer... I think it is very hard to learn but if you know it, you love it ;).

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Tvistnek 9 7 6
To say that there's no language like Hungarian is kind of a lie. Uralic langs are very similar to it, and all those features you have described can be found in other languages (very rich vocab - English, prefixes and suffixes a plenty - any agglutinative language, initial accent with length - Czech and Slovak, Polish has a similar orthography with digraphs).

Don't get this as me hating on Hungarian though, I do like it and am 1/8th Hungarian. C:

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

timikabz 12 10 8 6
I am Slovak, I can speak Czech and understand a lot of Polish, and my mother tongue is Hungarian. And if I compare these languages, Hungarian is the most difficult, I think. But yes, you are right, I do not know all languages of the world ;). I wrote only my opinion... BUT - I read many opinions of linguists and they are "obsessed" with Hungarian, because it is so special.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jenna_swiss 25 10 7 6 4 2 2
Any linguist who has half a clue what they are talking about would automatically answer this question by stating that language is arbitrary and therefore this question has no answer. Now that I've met my Nihilist quota for a lifetime, I must add that, no matter the arbitrariness, each language is FANTASTICALLY FUN TO LEARN and learn about!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CarrilloAbraham 16 14 11 8 2
Nobody can answer it because nobody can speak all the languages, and yes, the ideas and thoughts of the human mind are influenced by the language it uses, but the human race needs to create languages it allows to express everything that human mind can conceive, and every language can do it :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Twistnek 9 7 6

You have to specify what you mean by that, though, even if you do, that is a very subjective thing. For example, some people find French to be classy and romantic whereas I find it to be disgusting.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

yodydee 14 6

It has to be Esperanto. It's logical, clean and scientific (linguistically speaking).

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

frankenstein724 17 12 9 8 6 5 4 2

linguistically speaking? linguistically speaking all languages are logical and scientific, and I don't understand what "clean" is supposed to mean.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

yodydee 14 6

Hi, I mean that rules are rules, there are no exceptions. Which I like! Natural languages are NOT logical, at least they have way too many illogical elements, just think of English spelling...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

frankenstein724 17 12 9 8 6 5 4 2

orthography has nothing to do with grammar, so English spelling is irrelevant. And the fact that natural languages have elements that people view as "illogical" is subjective. There could be aspects of any language, Esperanto included, that speakers of other languages would find "illogical". Depending on how you decide to think about it, it is illogical that English should have to have any marker for person in the present tense (stem+s for 3rdSing), I think it is illogical that German is not a pro-drop language, but I'm sure there are plenty of people that would disagree with both of those points.

Also, not sure why my first post got so many downvotes, did I say something offensive? Just trying to have a productive conversation.

2ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

yodydee 14 6

No worries, I've just upvoted you and sent you some lingots! It's good to have strong opinions about things you feel passionate about!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

paulaha88 16

Bien hecho!

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

gwennott 6 5
French. It's so polite!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

frankenstein724 17 12 9 8 6 5 4 2
What makes it so polite?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Keima. 25 2
I would say Japanese because you would have to learn all the characters.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pseudocreobotra 14 6 6 6 5
Chinese is even more complex in this aspect because you can't use something like hiragana when you don't know the correct symbol. In Japanese, you can get by just by knowing the hiragana. It's certainly no good style but people will understand your writing. And hiragana are pretty simple in my opinion!

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

paulaha88 16
Yes, but we're talking about language, not writing.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

paulaha88 16
I think the three writing systems make Japanese complicated, but not necessarily sophisticated. However, Japanese speech changes radically depending on who you are speaking to. It changes, not only in word endings, but in the words themselves. A case could be made that this defines Japanese as very sophisticated.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rafforza 14 11 3 3 2 2 2
This gets at the notion of sophistication and the fact that languages are different from cultures themselves. Languages can certainly be more or less complex, but the idea that languages can be "sophisticated" - whatever that would mean - doesn't really make any sense at all. Complexity and sophistication are not the same and whatever notion you're getting at just doesn't boil down to anything substantive. It's like asking what's more sophisticated, $4 \times 2 - 3 = 5$ or $7 - 2 \times 1 / 1 = 5$? It's just numbers.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

paulaha88 16
I'll grant you that sophisticated is too nebulous of a term. And that complexity does not equal sophistication. But... let me propose a question.

Situation A. Standing in line at the Department of Motor Vehicles. Your place in line is based solely on when you arrived.

Situation B. A large Victorian-era dinner party which includes several powerful and influential people, on a grand estate. Seating arrangements are carefully orchestrated a month in advance, based on social status, wittiness, political views, and who holds generations-long animosities.

Is that dinner party seating plan more "sophisticated" than going to the end of the line at DMV? I don't know. I honestly don't, because it's such a nebulous word. But if it is more sophisticated, then Japanese is also more sophisticated than most languages.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rafforza 14 11 3 3 2 2 2

I didn't mean to imply that sophistication was a meaningless idea in and of itself, just that that quality cannot be applied to languages. It seems there's a tendency to equate a language with the culture it's associated with.

Cultures may, arguably, be more or less sophisticated, but languages themselves are nothing more than the syntax of molecular vibrations and squiggly lines. There's nothing about languages themselves that allows them to be either more or less sophisticated. It's like comparing math problems. Complexity is certainly a factor, sophistication, sorry but no.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Rafforza 14 11 3 3 2 2 2

I'm not saying the culture must be incorporated, I'm saying that language and culture are two entirely different things.

Just because the people who speak a language are a certain way does not mean that the language itself is that way.

2Give Lingot•1 year ago

paulaha88 16

Okay, may I give you a read-back? You're saying that aspects of Japanese culture are, and must be, incorporated into the language. So it is the culture which has those characteristics, and the language simply reflects it. Much like, if I took a picture of a beautiful woman and an ugly woman, one picture would not really be more beautiful than the other; they simply reflect the object captured.

Is that what you're saying? If so, I'll buy that. It makes sense.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

slogger 25 23 22 20 14 1177

Taking "sophisticated" to mean something like "flexible" or "expressive," of the languages I can read well (or could read at one time): Attic Greek, Russian, Latin, in that order, w/ Latin as least sophisticated. English, with its amazing vocabulary might also be there, but as it is my native language maybe familiarity with it makes me overvalue it. Sanskrit and Old Norse should be ranked with these, it seems to me, but I don't know much about their workings. Within the last week I read that Sanskrit is more sophisticated than Latin or Greek, although I don't remember where that was said.

This article on "classical languages" may add something to the discussion.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

1999Josh 21 11 10 8 2

This is my opinion:

Most: German

Least: Spanish

-12ReplyGive Lingot3•1 year ago

Ilmarien 25 25 25 15 14 13 2 1

The first published work on the grammar of a modern language was the Gramática de la lengua castellana in 1492. Super unsophisticated, I know.

4ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

Guckenberger1 25 14 13 13 8 7 6 6 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

I'm very interested miss. If I may, perhaps one may inquire, "How does the palabra 'castellana' contrast from la palabra 'español'?"

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ilmarien 25 25 25 15 14 13 2 1

The language known as Spanish originated in a specific area of Spain (Castile). They're synonymous terms, though I believe "castellano" is used more often in South America and Spain.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Guckenberger1 25 14 13 13 8 7 6 6 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Very interesting! Thank you for your help miss. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Guckenberger1 25 14 13 13 8 7 6 6 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

And, miss, I gave you a "lingot." :) Thank you, honestly, for the help miss. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

scarcerer 22 20 17 10 198

It's complicated.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Guckenberger1 25 14 13 13 8 7 6 6 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

I'm ready to "listen" or, perhaps, "read." Please inform me! I am very curious. :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

1999Josh 21 11 10 8 2

I'm sorry, but to me, it doesn't sound sophisticated.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lilybean20 15 2

it doesn't have to sound sophisticated to be sophisticated

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

1999Josh 21 11 10 8 2

I know that, but I was taking it as a hearing perspective :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jorg.Ancrath 13 7 7 6

Sorry to intrude in your conversation.

For me German, sounds more as an authoritative language. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Guckenberger1 25 14 13 13 8 7 6 6 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Interesting perspective! Thank you for your contribution! :) <3

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Guckenberger1 25 14 13 13 8 7 6 6 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Gracias señorita. :) Please refrain from s-a-r-c-a-s-m regardless. Dios te bendiga. :)

<pre> -Sincerely, Mr. Guckenberger </pre>

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

futureholder 11 9 6 3

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Guckenberger1 25 14 13 13 8 7 6 6 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 3 3 2 2 2 2 1

Please behave! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

398 "The boy buys a dog."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2051481>

Translation: Le garçon achète un chien.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

38 Comments

RodrigodaM6 10 6

Male dog is also correct, huh?

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cadilhac 20 9

Is that a question? Chienne is unambiguously a female dog — also note that it has the same span of meaning as bitch.

10ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

yassine.91 9

then why dog is "chien " and "chienne" , since we have bitch for chienne , dog should be chien only

2ReplyGive Lingot6•2 years ago

scifi2me 17 12 10 9 5 4 3 3 3 2 2 39

Because bitch isn't used in everyday language anymore. Most people mean dog to be generic either male or female. It is like saying horse in English. Female horses are called mares but people still use horse to refer to either male or female.

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Artilex 25 6 2

It is because male dogs and female dogs are different genders. Technically "chienne" means female dog, not bitch

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Fuzzy.Panda 10 2 2

He was saying "chienne" translates to "bitch," both of which are technically a female dog. Both are rarely used as female dog anymore though.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

LenelliAu 7

yes it is!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

azureskye 14 10 9 5 4 3 3 2 2 2

chien is male, chienne is female, and they both have the proper context. So yes. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

spownall1948 7

I agree - un chien is as correct as une chienne

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Ash2of6 10 6 5 2

ha, there were 3 options, one of them was la garcon achete un tigre. Now that I would pay to see ;)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

WillowTan 25 5

That's funny, the tiger will eat all moving things in the house. If it is bad mannered.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Kevin820932 7

I don't have french characters on my phone.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

scifi2me 17 12 10 9 5 4 3 3 3 2 2 39

Well, it'll depend on what type of phone you have, but on Android you push and hold the letter and a box will pop up with additional symbols to choose from. The accents should be under the letter that it looks like.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LemonsCombust 14 7 6 4 4 2

that also works with Apple

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MeganMMorse 11 2

is there a way to remember which way the accents face? can you hear it?

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ella.mckel 12

é has an "ay" sound, like in café. è and ê both sound like "eh" (like in bet). More detail here: <http://jakubmarian.com/french-e-e-e-e-e-whats-the-difference/>

4ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

bs804 13 6

Uh oh. Cats are buying dogs. What will they do next?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Alatrisme_11 19 15 11 10 10 9 224

But he shouldn't. He should adopt one.

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

PaigePPP 7 7 3

yah. It should have said the boy buys a male dog.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ako.lionel 18 11 7

Isn't dog "chien" and bitch "chienne" ? This app nerves sometimes

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Fuzzy.Panda 10 2 2

Chien vs chienne & dog vs bitch. They both, in this case, refer to the animal. However, "bitch" is usually used offensively. "Chienne" is rarely used as an animal, I'm not sure if it's used the same way as in English, but they both are grammatically correct.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

WhatRachel 9 1

This is the first time that accents have registered as mistakes!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SimonEspao 8

It means they're getting stricter in order for you/us to learn fluent French

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

WillowTan 25 5

Just adopt one.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Shirlgirl007 23 22 20 48

I was looking for DL to say another correct answer is: Le garçon achète une chienne, I guess that is not correct??

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Fuzzy.Panda 10 2 2

This is correct, just didn't show up. "Chienne" (out of what I've heard) is rarely used anymore though.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

dwD2X 5

Gamin is wrong?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NivlekAnujak 16 13 13 12 10 6 127

Can 'fils' also mean boy? Or just son?

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Drago117 7

why is it a female word

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Shirlgirl007 23 22 20 48

which word are you referring to?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Fuzzy.Panda 10 2 2

Can you specify which word?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

EXCELLENCEJUSTYS 6

Hello!

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

AelienFelis 16 14 12 11 11 11 10 9 6

C'mon! Do not buy a dog, adopt one!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JasmineFlower06 7 2

Why is it acheté and not achetés. Isn't achetés the plural of acheté?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Fuzzy.Panda 10 2 2

The boy isn't buying more than one dog. In English "buys" is singular and "buy" is usually plural.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Shirlgirl007 23 22 20 48

I think it depends in English on the pronoun used: I buy, he/she buys, we buy, you buy, they buy. The thing bought is not relevant, as to singular or plural. I buy a car, I buy cars. He buys a book, he buys books. They buy a book, they buy books. So yes, I would say he buys dogs.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Gootentag 6

the answer was correct. but I couldn't pass anyway

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

399 "The deadline ends tomorrow."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1026053>

Translation: O prazo acaba amanhã.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment
9 Comments

ChelseaBurns 12 10 6 5 5 3

The original sentence doesn't make much sense in English - you don't generally say that a deadline "ends", but rather that it "is." The deadline marks an ending in and of itself.

11ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Davu 25 25

You are right. I think this is a case where a poor translation of the Portuguese sentence has been added to the question pool. The word "prazo" also has meanings like "term" or "period" either of which would make more sense than "deadline" in a translation of the Portuguese sentence.

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AlfSagen 18 13 11 8 7

Agree, I have reported this several times. A deadline is a POINT in time, and has no start or end, but the PT prazo has...

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ChelseaBurns 12 10 6 5 5 3

Thanks for clarifying - that's really helpful in terms of understanding the way that "prazo" gets used.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Inkliizii 12

Por que nao usar 'termina' em vez de 'acaba'?

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ymeagain 25 17 15 13 238

Duolingo does accept 'termina' and is an easier one for me to recall anyway.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DREDWARD 25 7 92

Boa pergunta..... :/

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Gigi603474 15

...but in real life conversation would termina be acceptable?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

vinidcali 13 11

Yes! Both are widely used interchangeably in conversation C:

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

400 So I decided to do the reverse tree

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3596094>

mazonemayu 25 18

2 weeks ago i started doing the english -spanish tree and today I decided to check out the reverse tree just to check if there were any differences.

So here's what i found out: It starts the same with all the same words and so, BUT you actually get to type and sort a lot more spanish words than in the english - spanish tree, so imo it is actually highly recommended to take BOTH courses at the same time as the second one forces you to think a lot more in the language you're actually trying to learn..

Anyway, just my two cents

Give Lingot2

182 years ago

Leave a new comment

35 Comments

in2spanish 23

You may be interested in the nearly 15,000 Spanish vocabulary words located at: <http://quizlet.com/in2languages>. Many include graphics/pictures to help in memorization as well as gender were necessary. Also there is one set of about 2,000 cognates and one set of 4,000 high use Spanish words to keep you busy. I have nearly completed the DL series by skill as well . Enjoy!!

Good luck!!.

6ReplyGive Lingot7•2 years ago

roxyrenders 25 25 23 8

WOW- you have done a ton of work in your 5 months at Quizlet. I bookmarked it for later use. Gracias por compartir!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TrackMom 17 5 2 115

WOW ! THAT IS GREAT THANKS:-)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

wazzie 25 11

I think you need to be slightly ahead in your 'primary' tree.

Not sure about other languages, but I noticed the Spanish tree takes the (obvious) assumption that you already understand how to use direct/indirect objects in Spanish. I've also noticed a bit of the subjunctive used very early in the English (for Spanish learners) tree that you don't see until the very end of the Spanish tree.

(Oddly enough, you do eventually get to learn different words too!)

I'll add....

I waited until the (almost) end of the Spanish tree before starting the English tree. I think one big advantage to waiting so long is that I can participate in the Sentence Discussions in Spanish!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Yes, I tried my reverse tree before I had finished my original tree and it was fun at first. But not many skills in it became very difficult.

I like wazzie's comment about participating in the discussions. :D

EDIT: Moving my instructions for changing courses to here since comment is more visible.

To add another course, follow these images or see link below for text + image instructions.

Step 1

Step 1 how to change course. Image

Step 2

Step 2 how to change course. Image

For written instructions see This Entry on the \(unofficial\) Duolingo wiki/

PS Your flags and stats for one base language will not show up when you switch to a course with a different base language. But, they are not removed. They are just waiting for you to switch back.

Additionally, if you are using an app, take note of how Streaks work when you add another language. See This Entry for more about that. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BritBlue 12 7 6 4 2

I was going to try the reverse tree but after seeing what everyone on here has said now I think I might exercise some patience and wait a little while :D

I also like Wazzie's comment about the discussions, I'm sure the Spanish discussions are very interesting on the reverse course, interacting with native speakers is always the best way to learn!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kina.7 13

I'm thinking the same thing. I'll just have to be patient.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

Agreed. :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

roxyrenders 25 25 23 8

I also agree with the other posts. I think it is best be nearly finished with (and quite familiar with the vocabulary) of the first tree. I started with the Spanish for English speakers course. At about 3/4 the way through it, I started the English for Spanish speakers tree mostly as a different way to practice. After the first few early skills, there is a lot more use of direct and indirect object pronouns and the use of command/imperative type statements. Also more practice with subjunctive tenses. I have only two lessons to complete my Spanish tree. I am finding the English tree to offer much more practice with challenging concepts....but those concepts in the Spanish tree are presented much later and seem to not provide many practice lessons of them. For me the reverse tree is proving to be a good way to review vocab and a great way to practice some of the grammar and sentences structures that are challenging to me.

The only downside is that my present level of comprehension doesn't allow me to benefit much from discussions....but they are another source to practice reading/translating the language.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@roxyrenders Yes, those were the same two areas I was struggling with as well! I'm now redoing my Spanish for English speakers tree. I had planned to do the reverse course much earlier but, I really struggle with language learning. So, one thing at a time (2 or 3 times lol). But, the Reverse tree is something I won't dream of not doing. It is such a good way to really polish those dir/indir objects and conditional tense two very necessary necessary components of the language that many people struggle with.

I also encourage people to use Duolingo's Immersion feature and join a club, like this one You can join whenever and participate in whichever discussion thread you'd like that fits the chapter.

Though, it's more motivating if you can catch up and work through with the group. ^_^

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mandyturtle 19 13

a little technologically challenged here, I'd like to start the reverse tree but I'm not quite finished with the Spanish tree. how do you add a course? I seem to only be able to switch to a new course.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

[EDIT: I have moved the instructions for how to changes courses towards the top of the discussion, under wazzie's comment] :)

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

roxyrenders 25 25 23 8

Adding a new course is the same as switching courses. You will need to change the language you speak from English to Spanish and then the courses for Spanish speakers are listed. You will need to manually switch back and forth between the courses depending on what you want to work on. You can also switch between the courses on the Android app, also. Hope that helps. I switch back and forth daily - just takes a two or three clicks with the mouse

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

roxyrenders 25 25 23 8

Perhaps a faster way to add/ change courses - when prompted to set the language you speak - choose All Languages or (Todos los idiomas) from the drop menu and the Spanish and English courses are side by side in the course selections...I'm guessing that is because they seem to be the most popular courses? It just seems easier to choose "All languages/ Todos los idiomas" (it is always at the top of the drop menu list of languages) instead of scrolling through to find the language you want.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

ama-la-vida 18 8 2

That's what I was wondering too... or do u just have to totally switch every time?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

You have to switch every time.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 590

Is reverse tree when you learn English to Spanish and Spanish to English? Because I just tried that and I thought I lost all my Spanish progress! :-0 everything turned to Spanish and I could not see the Spanish lesson on my profile... It said English! But thankfully I went to the settings and changed my language to "I want to learn Spanish (I know English)" and it when back to normal. So what is reverse tree and how do I use it?-/ Is it learning Spanish (English) & English (Spanish) and if it is how do I do that with out almost having a heart attack? ;-) happy learning! -Spaceowl42

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

The reverse tree or the mirror tree is exactly what you say. It is when instead of learning [target language] from [native language], you "learn" [native language] from [target language].

Since it is all just translating back and forth between languages, it doesn't really matter which direction you take, but the reverse tree is going to have a lot more translating from [target language] to [native language] then the normal tree.

Unfortunately, there is no way to go back and forth without 'having a heart attack', but just rest assured that switching between courses will not cause you to lose progress.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Spaceowl42 18 5 590

Thanks! Now that is know that I might try it out! :-D happy learning! -Spaceowl42

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KollinR 18 15 12 11 10 8 5 3 3 2 917

I just had this same experience - I completed my English-Spanish tree over the weekend and then started the reverse tree. Then I couldn't get back, and my profile said I was learning only one language - English, and was level 1! I was freaking out! I googled to try to find help and found this thread.

I just wanted to put this out there in case this slightly more detailed explanation helps someone else:

In order to get back to your first language you can't just change the flag up in the top bar, but have to use the pull down menu by your name to change the settings. You need to go into your settings and change the language you want to learn (configuración/idioma) and set it to "I want to learn Spanish (I know English)".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mazonemayu 25 18

thanks for the comments guys, I really hadn't thought about it that way, 1 was about 1/3 of my first tree when I started with the reverse one. as someone said above, I find it a good way to practice vocabulary & I'll see where it takes me. It'll prolly get way harder in a few lessons, but I can always lay it aside for a while, or at least till I'm further in the original tree. we'll see ... :p

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

Yup, sounds like a good plan. You can always go back and forth as you learn new material.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Knoxienne 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 23 20 18 17 17 16 16 15 15 13 12 10 1275

Very helpful. I've been thinking about doing this, and maybe I'll set some up today.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mazonemayu 25 18

turned out to be helpful here, I just did the spanish/english tree up to plurals & ended up learning a few words that I hadn't learnt yet on the other tree (and I'm way further on that one). now I'm pretty sure that I'll get the other words on the original tree as well in the end, but as far as practice goes it's always nice to pick up a new word here & there while doing something you already know :p

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kgm_7 16 5

I just tried this now and found it somewhat harder. The fact that everything on the site changed to Italian made me really confused, and I had forgotten what the words meant because I completely forgot the English layout.

Also, I think this works once you've past the first half of the language you are learning. I've only done Basics 1&2, Phrases, Food, Plurals, Animals and Possessives. I think in a few weeks time I might try the reverse course again :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BobbieL 24 8 2

I'm hoping that they'll someday let us change our interface over to the language we're trying to learn (once we're deep enough into the tree that we shouldn't be hopelessly lost).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

The interface will change with your base language setting. So, if you were to take English for Spanish speakers (aka reverse course of your current course) the interface will be in Spanish. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BobbieL 24 8 2

My point was that I would prefer to be able to take Spanish for English speakers with the interface in Spanish.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AnaH135 18 17 16 8 6 6 5 3 2 595

I just finished my Spanish tree, and so far keeping it gold has not been very exciting. I wonder if this is an option for me to learn more words. . .can you take the English to Spanish tree at the same time as the Spanish to English?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

roxyrenders 25 25 23 8

Yes, you can. You have to manually switch courses but it takes just a few clicks. I try to work on both trees each day. I sort of rushed through my Spanish tree so I am reviewing slowly because I really hadn't learned the vocabulary so it stays in my memory and then I switch to the English tree and work my way down the tree. I am trying to it more slowly and thoroughly...lots of review.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Elgatobandido 25 21 18 11 9 8 5 4 3 3 2 2 2 998

I'm doing the reverse tree now. It it's hard, but not too hard. And it does help to reinforce what was learned in the first tree. I highly recommend it, but I also recommend you finish your Spanish tree first.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@AnaHall, yes. See my note above. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AnaH135 18 17 16 8 6 6 5 3 2 595

Thank you :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

04Teodora04

English and Spanish are the main languages...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

E.T.s_Son 11 11 8 8 6 3 2 2

I actually just finished doing a few skills in the Spanish To English tree and it was quite fun. There are many benefits to learning the language in reverse. I learned a few new words and concepts in the Spanish To English tree and it helped to reinforce my español.

Nonetheless, the spanish commenters in the discussions are just as hilarious in the discussions on this side of town so its fun to participate in conversations but most importantly you actually get to see spanish grammar in usage. It was still quite difficult to understand things but considering I still haven't learned all my tenses in Spanish its understandable. but im almost done with my Spanish tree.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

401 Tudo vs todo

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2372997>

Ikamjh 22 16 10 5

I recently responded to a question using todo where I was apparently supposed to use tudo? What is the difference? Is there a difference or was it just a mistake?

Give Lingot1

72 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

cristylata 22 19

They are definitely different. "Tudo" means "everything", as in "eu gosto de tudo" (I like everything), while "todo" is used as "every one" or "each", like "Todo dia" (every day). They are not interchangeable, you could maybe get away with mixing them up but you would sound very weird. I can see why it would be confusing so don't worry, its no big deal :) Hope this helped!

17ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

Danmoller 15 13 12 11 10 6 4 2

That's it.

And more: "tudo" is always a noun, while "todo" is generally an adjective or an adverb.

This means "tudo" will be found as the main part of the subject or the object, while "todo" is almost always referring to something else in the sentence.

There is the noun "o todo", it means "the whole", "the whole thing".

10ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

MCorralAlmada 20 218

Great! Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 weeks ago

Ikamjh 22 16 10 5

Thanks! Yeah it helped a lot.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wallacebottacin 10 10

Actually todo means "whole", "entire" or "every one". It is also used as "each", however depending on the context the correct translation for "each" is "cada" and not "todo".

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SDPhil 13 11 10 6 5 3 2 68

It can also translate to "all" (todos os dias = all the days = everyday; todo o dia = all the day = all day).

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FabianoGama 12 12 12 5 3 2

"Tudo" means "Everything". It's a stand alone concept. While "todo" is a word that refers to something else. Take a look at some examples:

você é TUDO o que eu sempre quis

you are EVERYTHING I've ever wanted

Eu fiquei te esperando o DIA TODO

I've been waiting for you ALL DAY

I've been studying ALL DAY, I think I know EVERYTHING.

Eu estudei o DIA TODO, acho que eu sei TUDO

I've been reading ALL DAY, now I know the WHOLE STORY

Eu li o DIA TODO, agora eu sei TODA A HISTÓRIA.

We also have "todos" and "todas". It refers to a series of things. Examples:

Você fez TODOS OS MEUS SONHOS virarem realidade.

You made ALL MY DREAMS come true.

Inacreditável! Você se atrasa TODOS OS DIAS!

Umbelievable! You are late EVERY DAY!

Eu sou um bom aluno, eu tiro notas boas em TODAS AS MATÉRIAS.

I am a good student, I get good grades in EVERY SUBJECTS.

You can make up some examples by your own. You may create a sentence in english and put only the words TUDO, TODO, TODOS and TODAS in portuguese if you want.

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

402 "How is the faculty?"

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3884175>

Translation: ¿Cómo es la facultad?

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

26 Comments

carter.ag 13 9 7 6

So, if I say this sentence to a prospective university, I would be asking "What's the faculty like?" rather than "How is the faculty?" (Do they teach well rather than are they sick or healthy right now), right?

15ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

droma 21 40

That is correct. In this case "cómo" means "what"

an interesting sidenote:

If you did not understand or hear a person correctly, you could say "¿cómo?" with the translation meaning "what" as in what did you say. This is true, at least, in Mexico.

14ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JamesWashi 19 8

I think its either or so they allow "es" or "esta"

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lynettemcw 22 13 9 6 6 5 4 2

Yes there are only a few situations where one would inquire as to the health and wellbeing of a whole group of people (except people's families) so I think it fair to assume that the question is about the characteristics of the faculty not the condition. Hence ser.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LukasvanS 20 10 3

why not ¿Qué tal la facultad?

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

alan.christian 15 14 11 10 10 8 8 6

Estoy muy de acuerdo, es lo que escribí y no fue aceptado.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

GeorgeCairns 19 11 4

Sí, exactamente! Significa lo mismo

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

RobertCols 11 7 6 5

Can it not be profesorado?

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cerrmcneel 10 3

Yes I've been living in Spain for several years and this is a clear example of a 'false friend' a word that sounds like the other in a language but has a completely different meaning. Facultad often refers to the facilities or grounds of an institution.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PaddyJohn 18 13 8 7

That was my understanding as well. My dictionary gives 'la facultad' as an ability and 'el profesorado' as a college faculty. So at least we should not be marked down for this answer. Reported

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

NEGenge 16

I agree. I think this would work much better - completely unambiguous. In the "picture" question at the beginning of the module, DL has a picture of students graduating. It's misleading because, of course, the students aren't teachers, so, not part of the faculty.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aaron.reis8278 14

Couldn't faculty be plural thus making the verb estan?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FLchick 25 19 13 9 5 3 2 440

aaron, Faculty, like police is a collective singular noun. I hope this is of help.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

vonstuben 22 10 3 2

If he were speaking of a set of faculties, then yes that should work.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Carlos1319 18 11 10 10 6 5

Faculty is el profesorado, los profesores o el cuerpo docente. Una facultad is a school as in School of Medicine, both the institution and the building.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

lynettemcw 22 13 9 6 6 5 4 2

Spanishdict agrees with you. I certainly don't mean to argue, since I have no first hand knowledge, but the RAE give the following two definitions for facultad (list as definition 5 and 6)

En la Universidades, cuerpo de doctores o maestros de una ciencia.

Conjunto de personas que conformen una facultad universitaria. "La facultad en pleno se sumó al homenaje"

This seems pretty parallel to our word faculty. I was wondering if this is a regional variation or just a difference from common use.

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Chistesen 14

In most Spanish-speaking countries, facultad refers to school, of business, of medicine, of arts and sciences. Using facultad to mean faculty, i.e. professors would be incorrect.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

FLchick 25 19 13 9 5 3 2 440

Have you used the Report option regarding this?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

MatthewMil961357 20

Why no impersonal "a"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

superchecha 22 12 7

it would be better to ask: What's the faculty like? Como es la facultad? Cuando dices Como esta la facultad?, te refieres al verbo estar, no al verbo de ser!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

austin.carpenter 10 3

When translating it back, it is acceptable to say '¿Cómo va la facultad?'

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Herb13 25 12

Since an institution's faculty can change, it seems that "está" would be more appropriate? Native speakers or more advanced students, please comment.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talca 25 13

Herb13: es is used here because it is "description." D description O occupation C characteristic T time O origin R relationships (DOCTOR for the verb SER)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

gubban9 18 12

está is accepted now. I have no idea if it makes a difference to the meaning of the sentence.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

espanola_amanda 14 8

See my response to the question above yours - it does make a big difference to the meaning.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Talca 25 13

está is now accepted? They would mean: How this the faculty feeling? Well, they could all have the flu. I think the "es" is much more common usage here. Duolingo is being a little weird with that answer...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

403 "Ihr seid Jungen."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/326316>

Translation: You are boys.

-13 years ago

20 CommentsThis discussion is locked.

emc21 4

When do you use seid and not sind - is sind just with Sie before? Sorry, getting a bit confused!

69Give Lingot•3 years ago

amoussa 17 15 14 10 10 4

ich (I) bin

du (you singular informal) bist

er (he) / sie (she) / es (it) ist

wir (we) sind

ihr (you plural informal) seid

sie (they) / Sie (you singular+plural formal) sind

883Give Lingot17•3 years ago

[+] 10 hidden comments

[+] 3 hidden comments

churchergy 4

What's the difference between Ihr seid and du bist?

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

Boodan 15 14 11 6

Du bist (singular informal), Ihr seid (plural informal).

5Give Lingot•3 years ago

veganpanda 13 5 4 2

I definitely heard the 't' so would not have put "seid" :(

0Give Lingot•3 years ago

Andreas305 25 25 24 19 15 9 9 6 5 3 2 2 2 816

the consonants b, d and g are spoken voiceless at the end of a word: b like p, g like k and d like t. So "seid" sounds like "seit". But "seit" is a different word, meaning "since".

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

TMilica 3

I thought Ihr was known to be for "they"???

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Andreas305 25 25 24 19 15 9 9 6 5 3 2 2 2 816

"they" = "sie"

"you" = "du" (you alone) or "ihr" (you all) or "Sie" (formal you)

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

ShreeKrsna 13 2

What are the differences between Ihr and du? Both of them mean You.

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Drakovyrn 10 9 8 5 5

Actually, this is an issue with English, as the language "technically" lacks a second person plural pronoun, even though different regions will use some form of one.

Because of this, things get lost in translation as the languages' contributors refuse to clarify other than the usual ordered list.

Since I'm an American Southerner, I use "y'all" pretty exclusively. It's a contraction of "You" and "all". I feel that "You all" is already pretty neutral, and that they should have used that in place of just "You."

Anyways, just remember that "Ihr" is the equivalent of "You all", "Y'all", "You guys", " You lot", "Youse", etc.

5Give Lingot•11 months ago

scarletmin1 2

I put "Are you boys"

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Andreas305 25 25 24 19 15 9 9 6 5 3 2 2 2 816

That is in english a question sentence, so it is wrong.

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

IkkaNurWah 5 4 3

Its capital letter matter? Sie and sie is different?

0Give Lingot•1 year ago

Andreas305 25 25 24 19 15 9 9 6 5 3 2 2 2 816

Indeed, the polite form "Sie" is written always with a capital S. Same for its declined forms like "Ihnen". But standing at the beginning of a sentence a word has to be written with a capital initial letter. So a "Sie" or "Ihnen" at the beginning of the sentence can have different meanings and the context is important.

Thats why:

"Haben Sie keine Zeit?" => "Don't you have time?" (formal you)

"Haben sie keine Zeit?" => "Don't they have time?"

...but:

"Sie haben keine Zeit." => "You have no time." (formal you)

"Sie haben keine Zeit." => "They have no time."

3Give Lingot•1 year ago

DemetrisG 5

when click on the word it says boys and young, but when I o to translate that with the word young it says that its wrong..

-1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Andreas305 25 25 24 19 15 9 9 6 5 3 2 2 2 816

In this context only the meaning of "the boys" is right.

"der Junge" means "the boy" in english. And the plural form of it is "die Jungen". But it is also used to say "die Jungs", which sounds more colloquial. So the given sentence would be right as well to say "Ihr seid Jungs"

For young animals we use in German a similar word but with another gender:

"das Junge" - "the cub" (it is neutral in German, not male!)

"die Jungen" - "the cubs" (never use "die Jungs" for that meaning!)

The second meaning that was given by Duolingo, "young", is the german adjective "jung". And it can become by declining the form "jungen":

"die jungen Tiere" = "the young animals".

"den jungen Hund" = "the young dog" (accusative form!)

In this way adjectives are usually written with a small initial letter.

But there is a case when the adjective can get an initial letter:

"I would like to buy that dog." - "The young one or the old one?"

in German:

"Ich würde gern diesen Hund dort kaufen?" - "Den Jungen oder den Alten?"

We call that phenomenon "Substantivierung" and a lot of german people have problems with it ;-)

7Give Lingot•2 years ago

DemetrisG 5

Wow... Thanks for the comment! so means a little bit of both and depend on the content?

-1Give Lingot•2 years ago

Andreas305 25 25 24 19 15 9 9 6 5 3 2 2 2 816

Right, but that's the way it is :-)

1Give Lingot•2 years ago

SaracevicAlen 7

I entered you are young and it says I am wrong even though i'm correct.

-1Give Lingot•1 year ago

Andreas305 25 25 24 19 15 9 9 6 5 3 2 2 2 816

"You are young" <==> "Ihr seid jung"

"You are Boys" <==> "Ihr seid Jungen"

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

404 "You are barking up the wrong tree."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1303900>

Translation: Du bist auf dem Holzweg.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

35 Comments

VaderGareth 19 13 10

Are you kidding, I've lost 2 hearts on idioms, that even weren't in the exercises before!

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

n1m 16 6 6 2

I think that's why it's a bonus thing. I guess they keep revising it with new idioms and then prompt us to "practice" it when it's updated, which I think is nice.

23ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

joadventuregirl 10 2

I disagree. The translation doesn't even make sense.

-12ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

n1m 16 6 6 2

Well, it doesn't make sense because idioms cannot always be translated exactly, even similarly like in this case, to other languages. If you are multilingual, you would know that. Idioms don't always have similar equivalents.

19ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

CarolZack 24 43

Yes! You said it better than I did. Please accept a Lingot.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

n1m 16 6 6 2

Thanks! You are too kind!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

TiagoMoita_PT 17 17 14 14 12 6 5 5 4 3 63

I wrote "Sie sind auf dem Holzweg" and it got marked wrong. So is this something you would only use in an informal conversation?

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

karlchen123 10 6

I wouldn't say so. Just report it.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sam.vimes. 13 10 5 2

Aren't most idioms informal speech though? I mean if you're going for the most formal of formal situations or something you wouldn't really use them in English. Maybe it's just a bit more of a defining line in languages which actually have formal and informal 'you'?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

danielley22 11 9 4 4

this is like you dont have money and someone comes and ask you for money but you dont have nothing jaja you are the wrong tree to barking up right? i understand it that wey

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

n1m 16 6 6 2

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Barking_up_the_wrong_tree

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

momokoala 11 7 3 2

i understand the idiom as ... lets say... you are mad at someone for something that happened, but they were not the reason that bad thing happened, they would tell you "dude youre barking up the wrong tree"

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sam.vimes. 13 10 5 2

What you're describing is more akin to "don't shoot the messenger" i guess. For this one 'you've got the wrong end of the stick' means much the same as barking up the wrong tree.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

robinj 20

No, that's not what barking up the wrong tree means (at least that is not all it means). It means that you are looking in the wrong place, blaming the wrong person, something like that. Leo gives "to be on the wrong track" "to be in a blind alley", so I think the English translation is close. Can someone explain what it means literally?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ClarissaBo 25 24 14 2

That's what I found: to make the wrong choice; to ask the wrong person; to follow the wrong course. (Alludes to a dog in pursuit of an animal, where the animal is in one tree and the dog is barking at another tree.) Ex.: If you think I'm the guilty person, you're barking up the wrong tree.

Anyway, I understand the thing of the dog on the wrong tree etc. but I can't understand what "Du bist auf dem Holzweg" actually means... What does it literally mean?

5ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PatriciaJH 25 25 16 7 1

"You're on the wrong track." Googling round, looks like "Holzweg" is mostly used in this idiom, or used to refer to this idiom or be funny about it. It literally means "wood track."

13ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

MartinElmr1 18 11 6 1

Well, it actually means timber road (or track), and refers to roads/tracks in the forest made and used for lumbering. These roads normally don't actually lead anywhere -except into the forest- and hence, unless you are a lumber-jack, or just there to enjoy the forest, they are quite literally "the wrong track".

24ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CarolZaczk 24 43

Ooh! I've been on those in Maine! Thanks, it makes perfect sense now.

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

LindaB_Duolingo 25 25 25 12 43

VERY helpful. Thanks, Have a Lingot :)

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

ClarissaBo 25 24 14 2

Thanks! ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Russell28 12

You're on the wrong track is also a idiom in u.s. english

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CarolZaczk 24 43

Apparently we either love or hate idioms. But how often do we use them in our own language without even noticing? I've seen that puzzled look on a visitor's face when I inadvertently said something "totally off the wall". Don't expect the translation to make sense, the goal is to find idioms with roughly similar meanings.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Oli0808 14 8 6 2

Du bist auf einer falschen Spur?

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

BlairScots 21 6 4 4 3 3 3 2 7

I wrote: Sie sind auf dem falschen Baum and it was wrong. It was in my translator.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sirdog84 8

I wrote something along the same lines, don't feel too bad :) Often times, idioms are more specific and harder to literally translate. They are more like a story that's been paraphrased.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jamaicarose2 16 14 1

Du gehst auf dem Holzweg ... can't gehst work as well as bist? It was marked wrong. Going down the wrong track makes sense in English.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

joadventuregirl 10 2

What does 'Holzweg' mean?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

karlchen123 10 6

Check the answer of MartinElmr1

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

joadventuregirl 10 2

According to Duo, it's not tree.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sagher 16

I don't know how to use "dem"!! Plz help

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CarolZack 24 43

Just when you think you know the difference between dative and accusative, you find yourself auf dem Holzweg? Are you wondering why it's not "auf den Holzweg"? I think it's because of the situation. The preposition auf requires dative when a place is expressed, but requires accusative when motion toward a goal or object is expressed. In this situation I'm on the path, but I'm not going anywhere. I'm just lost, wandering in circles. It's a dative situation, "auf dem Weg". If I were actually going somewhere, then it would be accusative, "mich auf den Weg machen" (set out, start on my way).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kajinac 20 12 3

well, and how am I supposed to know this sentence, if I just don't know it for the first time??

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

dorukkarinca 16 9 8 2

By trial and error as always..

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sagher 16

You are on the wrong track

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

405 Learning Spanish and French at the same time

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3302898>

sevenperfumes 20 10

Is anyone else learning two languages at the same time? My Spanish is very strong compared to my French, and at times I confuse words. Strangely, if I translate French in to understandable Spanish (instead of English) this helps me in both languages. Does anyone else have any recommendations for dual language learning?

Give Lingot

82 years ago

Leave a new comment

13 Comments

AlexisLinguist 25 21 19 19 13 12 12

Go slowly, so that your brain has a chance to absorb both languages. These two are extremely similar in my opinion, so slowness is key. It definitely helps learning two at a time, because you understand each's sentence structure and grammar.

9ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AnnaPoot 17 12 12 8 8

I really appreciated it when someone noted that the gender of nouns in both French and Spanish are generally (although not always) the same - that has helped me a lot as I learned French in high school (45 years ago!) and reviewing it on Duo now and doing Spanish as well. So, knowing the gender in one language, usually helps in the other. Also, you need to watch that you don't "cross contaminate" between lessons - I don't remember how many times I've written "il es" when it's supposed to be "il est" all because in Spanish it's "el es" - so sometimes the similarities will trip you up, but for the most part I have enjoyed the challenge of keeping them separate - I do a few sections in Spanish and then a few in French - keeps me on my toes. Good luck!

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lrtward 25 25 8 161

My Spanish is fairly strong, and I am doing the "French from Spanish" course. I love it. Sure, I get things wrong... like sometimes when translating from Spanish into French I'll put a Spanish synonym instead of the French word. My brain is apparently just looking for "that other word for drink" so when I see "tomo" I might put "je bebo" instead of "je bois". What I like most about it is I get to work on two languages at once and it gets the English out of my head. I LOVE that I'm not putting everything through an English filter. It's slow going but I wouldn't have it any other way.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MiriamHC 16 14 9 4

I'm also learning French and Spanish, though my French is much stronger than my Spanish. I would suggest doing some side-by-side comparison charts when things start to get really jumbled up (e.g, when to use the subjunctive, which is similar in the two but not exactly the same). I confuse words a lot, but I also think knowing French helps my Spanish and vice versa. Plus it's fun!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

annaannaannaan 23 21 12 27

i am doing both. I keep French to the mornings and Spanish to the evenings to help keep them separate in my mind, though, if ingrained too much, it might make my next trips to those countries entertaining...

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PopTartTastic 9 9 7 7 6 6 5 4

They have a French course for Spanish speakers, and a reverse course. You could work on one if you'd like. Some people can manage it, but some can't, but I think you probably can.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 7

It's pretty easy, but you have to have a lot of time to do both regularly.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sevenperfumes 20 10

Merci et/y gracias! I think I will try the French for Spanish speaker course. And go slowly! :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GarrettJoh4 5

What I do and will be doing next year, for when I enter both languages in my high school, is just to write down all the words that may get mixed up, like the masculine and feminine form words like una or one and so forth. Split a piece of paper into two columns and write those words down.... Then engrave them into your mind.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lynnethepa 14 8

I am also learning 2languages :French (studied for years, years ago) and Italian. It is hard for me when the words have the same spelling, same part of speech but different meaning.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DavidHudson123 7 2

I am also trying to do the same at the moment. Feel that learning the two together can be beneficially however like mentioned, they are very similar languages so can get confusing at times.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

janey89 25 22 7 7 5 406

I'd really like to do this because I have stronger Spanish, and am learning Spanish, but I have French family. I'm not sure my brain could take it, to be honest. I think I'm going to try to learn French when I have a more confident grasp of Spanish, but that in itself will take years and years!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

duolingonoora 5

I'm trying to find the answer too. Anyone mind giving me a lingot? XD

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

406 Stuck ! How do I advance to the next group or slot?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2654644>

RoweJuliana 7

Can someone please help.

Give Lingot

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

PattiSh 20 8 7 2

Hi! I'm not a mod, just a fellow user that is sorry that you're having a frustrating time. I know that you're level 6 and have been doing this for awhile, but have you checked out the skills on the last row of colored/opened skills? Is there a lesson still open within the skill? Sorry if this is too obvious and you've already looked. Good luck!

Also, you'll probably want to edit into your post what operating system you're using, the browser, and if it is the app or website. That helps the DL team in troubleshooting problems.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

Just to add to what PattiSh wrote, here is a visual

The levels go up when you earn points.. It's not related to how many new skills you learn (Basics 1 is a Skill. Inside of it are Lessons that you need to complete before you can continue into Phrases or Basics 2).

Alt text

<http://i.imgur.com/y8MYOFg.png>

Alt text

<http://i.imgur.com/LmCSbIK.png>

PS PattiSh the more people help one another out the more awesome our community becomes. You don't need to be a moderator to help build the community. So, thank you for sharing your knowledge :) (Also, moderators all start out as just helpful members of the community ;)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RoweJuliana 7

What do I need to do to advance?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RoweJuliana 7

Thank you all so much. I seem to be doing practice skills over and over. I want to progress. How do I open up the next set of skills? That's my frustration. I am using my computer, windows 7, accessing the internet using chrome. Could that be the problem?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

If you have a green checkmark in all of the lessons in Basics 1 (see screenshot 1 above), then go to <http://www.duolingo.com> and click on Basics 2 (screenshot 2 above). But, if all of the lessons in Basics 1 do not have a green checkmark, the next skill will not open. You must first successfully complete the lessons.

:)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RoweJuliana 7

Could I not be seeing what you are telling me because I am doing French? Thanks Usagiboy.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

@RoweJuliana,

There is someone who is likely experiencing a similar difficulty in another discussion. I have posted a lot of information there to try and help troubleshoot them through it. If you read it, it could help you to resolve the issue:

Link: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2640424> The name of the discussion post is "eenaleh". In case the link gives you a 404 (I keep getting glitches like that right now), use the search bar in the Discussion forum and type eenaleh into it. The discussion should pop up in the results.

As for your comment, my screenshot is from the Spanish course. There could very easily be a different number of lessons to complete and a different name on the skill.

If you are reading there and it still isn't helping you resolve the problem, please comment over there, but include a link to this discussion and the title "Stuck ! How do I advance to the next group or slot?" so I can keep track of where things are and what we've tried. Thank you :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

407 "The pig is below the table."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/6213987>

Translation: El cerdo está debajo de la mesa.

42 years ago

Leave a new comment

95 Comments

Candicebush 25 15

What is the difference between bajo, abajo and debajo?

47ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

rspreng 24

per my dictuionary ==> debajo/debajo de = underneath, beneath (physical position): abajo = down (adverb), down the river; bajo = low, (low voice) shallow, below zero. In some parts of the world there is variation and overlap

168ReplyGive Lingot9•2 years ago

Candicebush 25 15

Gracias amigo

25ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Talca 25 13

El cerdo está debajo la mesa. (wrong--because I omitted the de) But El cerdo está bajo la mesa. (correct). Interesante.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AltheaVet 16 24

So Baja California is not "below California." It is Short California?

1ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

chelsea162395 13 11 6 5 2

More like "low California"

4ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

OmaJennie 11 10 9

Hi. I see you gave the part of speech listing for "abajo", is it the same for "debajo" and "bajo"? From your examples, I wouldn't think so. It looks like, maybe, abajo = adverb, debajo = preposition, and bajo = adjective. Sí i no?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Rashane2 12

gracias

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

WilhelmJuan16 10

Im sorry, but what duolingo? A PIG?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

Greyson9 10 4 3

Where I am in Central America, cerdo = ham (or pork, it's just if the pig is dead and used for food), and Chanco= alive pig

36ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iggyl 15 7 6

Y donde eres tu? All over Spain I definitely saw "cerdo" on the menu. I was also told that in Guatemala "coche" is used for pigs, not for cars, but we are not trying to learn local peculiarities at this stage, are we?

-11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Greyson9 10 4 3

You seem to be confused. Cerdo should be on the menu, because that is what we eat of the pig. Chanco is when the pig is alive. By the way, I live in Nicaragua, and this is a Latin American Spanish course.

13ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

Ah. I see the confusion. In English, "ham" = «jamón» (a specific cut of meat from the pig), while "pork" es cualquiera carne de chanco/cerdo/puerco que se sirve como comida.

8ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Greyson9 10 4 3

Exactly! Except where I live, Chanco is used for alive pig. Jamon and cerdo are used for pig that we eat.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

Ah, ok. Good to know. :) :P

1Give Lingot•1 year ago

billy8195 14 1

Why do so many people talk half in english then finish in spanish?...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

[+] 3 hidden comments

CharlieBro2 9

You're on the money Igor. I lived in Guatemala for 8 months. "Vamos a coger el coche" means a whole different thing in Guatemala than it does in Spain.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CharlieBro2 9

Also "coche" is accepted, I used it for this example

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

soinuit 12 8

Can someone explain es vs. esta?

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

The verb «ser» is used for personality and other more permanent qualities that is essential to the entity: «El cerdo es rosa.» The verb «estar» is used for temporary states of being or locations, e.g. «Estoy enfermo.» or «El cerdo está debajo de la mesa.». Just because I may be sick now (and I am not) does not mean that I will stay sick forever; similarly, the pig will not stay underneath the table forever. Also, my being sick and the pig being underneath the table is not essential to either of our beings, personalities, etc. Hope this helps.

43ReplyGive Lingot5•1 year ago

soinuit 12 8

Super helpful, thank you.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

Great! ¡De nada! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KNagyTimi 15 10 10 4

Thank you, it does help a lot! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

Glad to be of help! ¡Que bueno!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AngelaMitc8 12

Gracias!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

¡No hay de qué!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mirkwood11 19

Es is for permanent objects.

For example "the Banana is yellow" == "El plantano es Amarillo" because the color isn't expected to change.

If you're describing a current emotional mood or something in a non-permanent location, you use esta.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

OmaJennie 11 10 9

Interesting, since a banana being yellow is a relative state dependent upon the degree of maturity. Here, we see bananas fresh off the boat, and green as gourds; then we see them ripen into a nice yellow, unless they are of the kind that ripens into another color, like Rose; then as they further age, they become brown. So, at what point is Yellow a permanent state of being for a banana?

1ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

If you say «El plátano es amarillo.», you are saying that, in general, the color that one associates with bananas is yellow. Just like one would say that stop signs are red; this is not entirely true, since they are also white and, with time, they may fade to a dark pink color. Generally, though, people would say that stop signs are red and that bananas are yellow.

If you want to pay attention to the fact that the banana is yellow at the moment, you would say «El plátano está amarillo [ahora].». When it starts to turn brown, you would again use «estar»: «El plátano [ya] está marrón.».

2ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Ilene-in-DP 25 13

Señor Jordan has really good utube videos that are free

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tlokken 20 2 33

Also see. Ana butterfly spanish

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

AndrewMS221 22 6 3 3 944

Why is the pig under the table?

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Cynthia_Pike 13

the dog got it

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ricaloca 23 2

I know this! I have a pet pig. She's under the table because...treats.

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Cynthia_Pike 13

"debajo" is an adverb that requires the use of "de" after it. It is like in English saying "The book is on top of the table". We wouldn't say "the book is on top the table". That is bad grammar. (debajo means under, underneath or below, but I used the above example because it shows the differences in grammar)

" Bajo" is a preposition which does not require the "de". It is like saying "The book is under the table". We wouldn't say "The book is under of the table". "Abajo" is an adverb that means below, Like "My signature is the one below yours." It doesn't require "de".

Bajo can also have many more meanings such as short, low, small, bass, bass guitar, the ground floor, quietly, flat, despicable, and underhand.

5ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

tessbee 24 16 67
Great explanation!

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

JohnHeetderks 15
what would the pig be doing under the table?! Probably being crazy.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208
Maybe eating his meal with the family.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ricaloca 23 2
You got it. I have pet pigs. They are always on time for meals. And snacks. And whenever anyone opens the fridge or the kitchen cabinets with food. If someone just opens the dishes cabinet, they don't move from their cushy spot in the living room.

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

kennet53 16
gata/gato is ok and so is perro/perra why not cerdo/ cerda if they are of different sex

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208
Idk. Perhaps it is not as common to differentiate between the two sexes for pigs, unless maybe you are the farmer. I would report it.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

OmaJennie 11 10 9
Isn't cerdo/cerda one of those words that has a different meaning for ending with -o versus ending with -a, like listo/lista?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Mirkwood11 19

I don't understand why it didn't accept "debajo" and insisted it should be "bajo".

If the pig is under the table then shouldn't "debajo" be correct?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Panosbcn 11 8 5 4

It accepted "El coche está bajo la mesa." lol

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Whovian2006 9

at least its not on top of the table XP

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ricaloca 23 2

We call it pork then.

2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

danielrentel 9

What the heck does this mean I am crying from laughing right now

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

EmmieJae 11 8 4

Hmmm my last phrase before this one debajo was below? Confused

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

I am sorry. I do not understand; what is it that confuses you?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

l8rgator 16

Yes same here !

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Nancita75 11

Why was pig translated as coche?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

herewardasleep 21 8 7

Excuse me, where's the pig?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sjthomas13 12

what's the difference between cerdo y cochina?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

As I understand, the noun «cerdo» is the animal "pig," and the adjective «cochino» means "disgustingly dirty."

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ar-chi-tec-ture 11

I love this sentence. Did Garcia-Marquez write it?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kayleighdo5 9

Why is the pig under the table shouldn't it be on the table slow roasted with an apple in its mouth

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bluesharkgeek 8 7

Why is a pig under the table?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ricaloca 23 2

Waiting for a friendly family member to drop her a snack. I have a pet pig.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

tessbee 24 16 67

Because it's still alive.

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

Gom8z 17 1

Can anyone clearly state what the need is for "de". If you took the "de" out of the sentence what would it translate too?

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

The same need as "of" when in English you say "on top of the table"

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

OmaJennie 11 10 9

Okay, I see, then, why debajo needs de (debajo de) but I'm unclear as to why bajo does not also need to be followed by de (bajo de). Can you explain it, please?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Cynthia_Pike 13

debajo is a preposition and requires the use of de. bajo is an adverb and doesn't.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•10 months ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

Where did you see «bajo de»? I cannot think of an example in which you need «de» after «bajo» at the moment.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Gom8z 17 1

Jennie is asking why is it different.. She is wondering why it is not "bajo de....". ps ty for your first point.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

You cannot say «bajo de» because «bajo» means "short" or "low;" that would not make any sense.

0Give Lingot•10 months ago

SaulSnatsky 15 15

"Puerco" is also correct. DL should not be so fixated on one translation.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

tlokken 20 2 33

Can chancho also be said to persons?

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

4s13 8 8 2

what

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

ntgermai 22 8 6 5 9

Why would a pig be under a table

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

Because it couldn't sit at the chair

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Rashane2 12

No entiendo why is it esta and not es debajo de la mesa

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

Locations in Spanish almost always take «estar»

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

jonathan143444 9 7

in south america cerdo is pork, chanco is a live pig is this the same in spain??

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

IraRoberso 13 2

I'm having trouble finding the difference between es and está. My answer was el cerdo es..... the right answer was el cerdo está.... any advice?

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

Use «ser» for characteristics of the being: «El cerdo es bajo. El cerdo es rosa. El cerdo es gordo.».

Use «estar» for location and for temporary states of being: «El cerdo está debajo de la mesa. El cerdo está enfermo.».

0ReplyGive Lingot•5 months ago

brandonoooo 12 7

I know i should know this but can someone tell me why esta is necessary instead of es in this example i sometimes do not know for sure i am going to search on my own but would love some input

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208

«estar» is always used for locations. «ser» is used for characteristics: «El cerdo es gordo. El cerdo es rosa. El cerdo es bajo.».

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

DieFlabbergast 11 11 11

Are you sure it isn't that elephant they were looking for?

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

The.Other.Caleb 15 5 4 3

Are you saying that there's an elephant in the room?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Prakhar786 12

Now, it's not the person here for which 'de' is being used???

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

ZuMako8_Momo 25 25 25 25 9 9 9 8 208
«debajo de» + noun is a fixed expression

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Emarvel1 25 14 522
El puerco está debajo de la mesa. (Es correcto también.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

JavezBarne 8
You have approximately a month

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Elasel1 8 8
Pig=Marrano, Cerdo, Puerco, Cochino.

Pork=Cerdo

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

TomJames5 14
i am always mixing es with the temporay esta

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

ilmarien1 19 395
Le singe es sur la branche :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

HarpoChico 15 14
... flaying footsies with the elephant...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 week ago

Ipound166 11
THIS WORKS El cerdo está por debajo de la mesa

-1ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

Unknownaccount 9 5 3 3
Duolingo shouldn't unstrengthen skills it is just silly

-3ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

Gom8z 17 1

So you think if you pass one of the skills that means you know it for life? There are people who use duo lingo by passing skills only one time and never coming back when they stop showing as gold. also they use every hint they can and they also input "close enough" answers and report them as correct answers. Everyone can do what they like but this is just stupidity in every essence of the word (in my opinion). Learning any skill or doing something new takes hard work and humility.

3ReplyGive Lingot6•10 months ago

OmaJennie 11 10 9

Years ago, I read that one loses up to 92% of a new skill within 30 days of initially learning said skill, if not followed up by reinforcement.

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

408 Ukrainian language "the third most beautiful language in the world" -1934 Paris
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/7676550>

G0uveia 4

Ukrainian is coming out soon so I did a bit of research and I found this nice little fact.

Do you know which language takes the second place in the world on melodic criteria?
(<http://bestofukraine.com/culture/interesting-facts.html>)

Ukrainian language took the second place on melodic criteria after Italian and it was ranked as the third most beautiful language in the world on such criteria as phonetics, vocabulary, phraseology and sentence structure after French and Persian at a linguistic contest held in Paris in 1934.

Directly I went on youtube to hear some interviews, songs and general videos in Ukrainian. It sounds very melodic for a slavic language. I can't wait for it to come out.

Here's two examples: (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cbkggjY0kP4>)

 I love this song. (even if I have no idea what's being said.) :-)
(<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pV3wRM3hJiM>)

You will be surprised.

Enjoy

Give Lingot6
231 year ago

Leave a new comment
15 Comments

flootzavut 17 17 17 16 13 12 12 12 11 8 7 6 5 5 5 4 2 2 10

I have to say, I disagree... at least partly because I personally don't find French or Italian all that beautiful grins, ducks the rotten tomatoes and runs away sorrreeeeee....

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cherub721 17 16 15 15 15 6 3 1136

The Ukrainian singer Ruslana has some pretty songs
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0zPGI562X6Q>

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

Wow! Nice song! I had a lot of Шаленію this week so this is a nice end to it, haha. I want to learn Russian but I like other Slavic languages too. Now I really want to try Ukrainian! This might sound weird but to me the woman sounds a bit like she is speaking Portuguese (not really but you get what I mean!) Love it! :D

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

p8c 16 16 16 16 16 16 15 14 13 13 12 12 11 11 651
i once hear a russian say that ukrainian was a "beautiful language".

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EvgenFirst 21 20 19 18 16 14 13 13 11 9 7 7 2 3
Yes. Ukrainian is a beautiful language. Now you heard it twice from a Russian)

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

EvgenFirst 21 20 19 18 16 14 13 13 11 9 7 7 2 3
Sometimes for me it sounds like some fable from my childhood. It's strange. I have never been in Ukraine.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ganya-ganya 16 11 9 5 3
Так поехали!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Twistnek 9 7 6
Ukrainian really just sounds the same as most other Slavic languages, to be honest.

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElectorDark 9 5
Might be my unpopular opinion, but I don't like the sound of Ukrainian. Furthermore, that fact's been going around the web for a couple of years now but I still can't find its source -- looks like a random claim given as a "true fact" when it's impossible to source. Ukrainian doesn't sound that different from other east Slavic languages, not to mention that that melodicy which you mention doesn't really stand out as melodic to me; IMHO Macedonian (FYROM) sounds far smoother to my ears, but that's another subjective claim.

-3ReplyGive Lingot2•1 year ago

G0uveia 4

For my part I love it :) Some like it, some don't, in the end it's a matter of opinion . Thanks for sharing ElectroDark.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SurrealSoul 13 12 11 10 10 9 8

I respect your opinion, but there is one discrepancy - the way Ukrainian sounds. Trust me on this - I speak 4 Slavic languages, 2 fluently (Rus and Ukr) and 2 conversationally (Pol and Cz). Each and every one of them has their unique sound which I can differentiate in a heartbeat and none of them sound really close in the way they sound. I suppose you don't speak any Slavic languages or maybe only one? So think about this - I don't speak any of the languages spoken in India. To me Hindi, Tamil, Kannada, Punjabi, etc. all sound the same. Now if I were to learn more about them, study them, use them everyday - I'd see the differences. So as a Slav and a language enthusiast, I hope you can understand and accept my message :)

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

[deactivated user]

SurrealSoul, I speak Russian and completely agree with you.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ElectorDark 9 5

I can speak Serbian and Macedonian fluently, as well as have rudimentary conversational skills in Polish and Russian (when it comes to Slavic languages); them being dissimilar doesn't mean that Ukrainian is wildly different from the rest somehow. I can tell them apart pretty easily (except Czech and Slovak, and Ukrainian and Rusyn), so I know they're different. Just, IMHO Ukrainian isn't really anything special :\

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Twistnek 9 7 6

ED speaks Serbian and partial Macedonian, so you've kind of got it. However, what would be the difference between Czech and Polish in the sound? The vowel length? The palatalized R? Or are there some other things which make it sound different?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

p8c 16 16 16 16 16 16 15 14 13 13 12 12 11 11 651

i think czech has beautiful vowel sounds! clearly distinct from polish (to my ear).

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Duolingo Discussion Forum Messages

409 – 437 of 912

[accessed March 16, 2017]

409 Is there a reason for the name of duolingo?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4616838>

AntonyWitzaney 19 8 6 3 2

So was duolingo just a random name, was it a voting, or did they just copy doulingo (which is a different language learning website) let me know where you think the name came from.

Give Lingot

12 years ago

Leave a new comment

13 Comments

perfect-disaster 25 20 11 10 6 5 4

Hi Francis_Xaiver, I suggest you move this out of the Troubleshooting topic (unless you really have a problem with Duolingo's audio, glitches not supposed to be there, etc.) and put it in Duolingo (English), as it seems like an interesting topic for users to discuss about Duolingo's name.

As for your question, "duo" means "two" and "lingo" means "languages". Then, "two languages". Kind of fitting because when you're learning a language on Duolingo, you're practicing (and learning) two languages: your native language (common grammar mistakes you might make) and your target language (the language you want to learn, the basic foundations).

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AntonyWitzaney 19 8 6 3 2

Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AernJardos 14 9 9 8 4 3 4

DuoLingo.com was registered January 26, 2010.

DouLingo.com was registered April 12, 2011.

DuoLingo came first by over a year. Long live Duo! :D

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AntonyWitzaney 19 8 6 3 2

So doulingo copied duolingo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jmberb 25 25 15 7 5 3 2 2 2 2

"Duo," coming from the Latin meaning two. "Lingo," coming from the Latin "lingua" meaning tongue or language. Duolingo = Two languages (or more as the case may be). Rather apt for a language learning site.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

psionpete 25 21 16 15 14 6 5 4 3 1154

This Duolingo is the only website I know of using that name, if you know different, what is the URL of the other site(s).

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AntonyWitzaney 19 8 6 3 2

The other site is called doulingo se how the o and u are in different places?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

psionpete 25 21 16 15 14 6 5 4 3 1154

Are you sure it's not a spoof? Google can't seem to find it. All it comes up with Duolingo.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AntonyWitzaney 19 8 6 3 2

Nope it's hear I just found it.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KrazyKaderKat 25 11 9 4

yeah I see.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DeroGoi 17 11 7 6 6 6 5 4 3 2 2 2

Are you sure that wasn't created after Duo?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

susanstory 20 17 13 11 10 10 9 9 8 8 5 4 3 3 3 553

<https://itunes.apple.com/ca/app/doulingo-learn-languages-for/id821593919?mt=8>

<http://reyshizz.com/r13/learning-to-speak-french-with-doulingo>

The above two websites have the green owl, the same as Duolingo.

<https://novoed.com/venture1-2014-2/reports/256819>

The above one spells it "Doulingo" but it seems to be a spelling mistake, because it mentions Luis Van Ahn.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Adina_atl 25 22

Bing translator thinks that the name means Globalization in Spanish--or at least if I put "duolingo" in a Spanish sentence and ask it to translate that's what I get. Google translator seems to know that it's a proper name, or at least it capitalizes it. (I reverse-translate things I've written in Spanish--my non-native language--into English to make sure that they at least sort of mean what I think they do. This occasionally runs into problems with proper names, such as when my landlord in Costa Rica, Leo, was regularly translated as "I read" when I checked my emails to him.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

410 Pronunciación de THE

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/5348>

matiasmasca 15 2

Es idea mía o a veces the suena a "di" y otras a "de". Como es la regla?

Give Lingot

464 years ago

Leave a new comment

64 Comments

Skany 14 5

Suele depender de la palabra que le siga y, si no recuerdo mal, depende de si es sonido vocal (sonido 'di') o consonante ('de')

Por ejemplo: 'The apple' se pronunciaría 'di' y 'The train' 'de'

32ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

wolf91 12

Ninguno tiene razón, se pronuncia "da" cuando la letra que sigue es "F", "H", "L" y "M", se pronuncia "di" cuando la letra que sigue es una vocal y se pronuncia "de" cuando la letra que sigue es cualquier consonante que no sea F ni H ni L ni M. no me creen?? prueben en google translate.

6ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sofialc 10 6

Google translate te traduce todo excepto un texto xD

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wolf91 12

jeje lo sé, es fatal (como todos los traductores hoy en día) sólo lo decía para que checharan la pronunciación nada más.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wsebastian 25 14 11 5 3 2 2

ps the elephant, no sigue ninguna de las letras que dijiste y se pronuncia di

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wolf91 12

es una vocal, se pronuncia di.

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NadiaArce 5

Ahh eso no sabia.Me pasaba igual.Avecas entendia "di y otras de"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Konichiwa 17 51

Creo que el "da" lo utilizan más los americanos de forma informal

6ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

wolf91 12

Ninguno tiene razón, se pronuncia "da" cuando la letra que sigue es "F", "H", "L" y "M", se pronuncia "di" cuando la letra que sigue es una vocal y se pronuncia "de" cuando la letra que sigue es cualquier consonante que no sea F ni H ni L ni M. no me creen?? prueben en google translate.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sofialc 10 6

Google translate te traduce todo excepto un texto xD

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 5 hidden comments

Obivalkenobi 9

la pronunciacion depende del sonido siguiente si es vocal o consonate, y el "Da" es utilizado como un slang (jerga) de cada persona que lo pronuncione o de un ingles diferente al americano.

6ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

everlopez 4

segun la regla se pronuncia di cuando la siguiente palabra empieza con vocal y de cuando la siguiente palabra empieza con consonante

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Momo51 9

THE, THAT o THANK no se pronuncia ni DE, ni DA, ni DI..cuando pronuncies una palabra que tenga th tienes que sacar un poquito la lengua entre los dientes y te da un sonido como de F..

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

wolf91 12

[deleted]

-1Give Lingot•3 years ago

JorgeLu1 13

Deja de floodear!!

-1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

dawins 3

ja ja creo que mientras la otra persona te entienda da lo mismo que suene di, de ,da o du ja ja

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Genesis_Joanne 14

JAJAAJAJA

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

pecosa43 5

estoy contigo

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

enz0 8

Gracias, no me había fijado.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

ensarman 12 8

si no me equivoco hay veces que se pronuncia "da"

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

deibiz 14 10

Si la siguiente palabra comienza por vocal se pronuncia /di/, en cambio si empieza por consonante se pronuncia /de/.

1ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

wolf91 12

Ninguno tiene razón, se pronuncia "da" cuando la letra que sigue es "F", "H", "L" y "M", se pronuncia "di" cuando la letra que sigue es una vocal y se pronuncia "de" cuando la letra que sigue es cualquier consonante que no sea F ni H ni L ni M. no me creen?? prueben en google translate.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[+] 2 hidden comments

1425364758697079 14 9 9 6 6 5 5 2

"di" es antes de una palabra que se comienza con a, e, i, o, u. "da" es antes de una palabra que no se comienza así.

The only way = di ónli ue

The air = di er

The honor = di ánor

The hat = da jat

The cookies = da cúquis

The children's toys = da chéldrens tois

Ademas, "th" y "d" no son iguales, "th" es cerca de "s" con ceceo.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

billjoe 6

Suele uno confundirse varias veces, el problema tampoco es que no escuchemos bien, es que el pronunciador lo pronuncia muy rápido, hasta a veces a mi me dice myy me dice todo doble y no se le entiende tres pirichuchi. Por otro lado, el inglés, se escribe de una y se pronuncia de otra, entonces no se le entiende ni J pero, debo admitir que es cierto que suena "di" o "de" es común, our a mi me suena we y repito diez mil veces el botoncito y no se le entiende ni tres pepinos.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

matiasmasca 15 2

Gracias Skany

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Skany 14 5

Jajaja que yo sepa, eso viene de Star Wars, "The Force" se pronunciaba Da... Algunas veces cuando dices the puede sonar como da por el acento tb o por hablar muy rapido o cosas asi...

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

jcsolis 13 8

cuando la palabra que sigue empieza con una vocal se pronuncia (De), cuando se empieza con una consonante se pronuncia (Da).

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Sibelthz 14 2

bueno para mi se pronucia como "ti"

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

draCoco 4

Se pronuncia Di ó Da, pero es mas usado pronunciar Da

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

BlackHeart01 21 14 13 12 11 10

a veces escucho como que suena como du tambien

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Genesis_Joanne 14
jajajajaajajajaja xD

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Danilo961 10
tienes razón aveces suena du, di y de es la pronunciacion pero es mas usado el da

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

avipon 7
yo lo escucho di

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

edier2 4
cuando la palabra que sigue comienza con vocal se pronuncia 'di' ejemplo en the end cuando la palabra que sigue comienza con consonante se pronuncia 'de' aunque es mas comun 'da'

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

topelava 14 8 6 3
es de

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

Vaquer 6
Yo siempre escucho que es como un "de" con mucho aire, como si empezases con una C y terminases diciendo De, CDE, con aire.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

1425364758697079 14 9 9 6 6 5 5 2 acutalmente, "th" suena como "s" con ceceo.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ricardo81062 8
Efectivamente hay un error de pronunciación, la voz femenina dice "DI" cuando no debe es decir cuando la continuación es una consnante debe decir "DA", seria bueno que esto lom corrija DUOLINGO que lo veo bastante bueno

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

cristianoti 6
Puede sonar de una u otra forma dependiendo de quien lo diga y quien lo escuche, Pero, el sonido "th" se pronuncia sacando un poco la lengua como cuando los españoles pronuncian la Z, por lo tanto la pronunciación de la palabra "THE" seria algo como la "Z" seguida de una combinación sonora entre "E" y "A"

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jess_ie 8

se pronuncia da cuando esta seguido de una consonante: ejemplo THE HOUSE se pronuncia di cuando esta seguido de una vocal: ejemple THE ANIMAL

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

nikolrojas 7

eat

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NadiaArce 5

no es idea tuya aveces suena "di" y otras a "de".Yo tambien lo he notado.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

NadiaArce 5

si es verdad aveces suena como "di" y otras como "de".Lo he notado.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

oliva23 22 1

todo ta bien nesecita uno poner mucha atencon

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wolf91 12

Ninguno tiene razón, se pronuncia "da" cuando la letra que sigue es "F", "H", "L" y "M", se pronuncia "di" cuando la letra que sigue es una vocal y se pronuncia "de" cuando la letra que sigue es cualquier consonante que no sea F ni H ni L ni M. no me creen?? prueben en google translate.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rleniz 9 3

Estoy recién aprendiendo, pero conversando con personas de habla inglesa dicen que es indistinto, se puede decir di, de o da y es lo mismo, no hay regla.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

wolf91 12

es que ellos no se percatan cuando lo hacen... pero con el oído se pulen estas cosas..

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

candela21 6

que discusion mas tonta

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

delia000 12 3

si a veces me confundo porque suena di en ves de

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

aprendiz55 11

tengo entendido que cuando el sustantivo que sigue al articulo comienza por vocal, se pronuncia di de lo contrario se pronuncia de

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

titoquin 6

Me gustaría ver y escuchar lo correcto del monitor que dirige este programa, pues no todos los comentarios son asertivos.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Josuecueto 6

no es idea tuya.. si tienen varias

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

HERNANDEZYOHELY 4

los dos estan correctos, pero en norteamerica se utiliza mas la pronunciacion di y en hipanoamerica la pronunciacion de

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

vilchez 14

como realmente se pronuncia

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

411 las gatas vs. los gatos?? la gata vs. el gato??

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/371268>

richshipley 10

las gatas vs. los gatos?? la gata vs. el gato?? These lessons are the first I have ever heard of las gatas or la gata. As far as I know from all previous study, los gatos and el gato include both genders. Can someone explain the difference and when you should use one or the other?

Give Lingot

53 years ago

Leave a new comment

1 Comment

Babella 17 14

El gato / los gatos are male cats (singular / plural), la gata / las gatas are female cats (singular / plural). "El gato" never includes both genders, "los gatos" can include it as long as there's some male cat in the group; in Spanish, when there's a group of all males we use the masculine, when there's a group of all females, the feminine and if it's a mixed group, we usually use the masculine, too. So if you had three male cats and a female cat, you would say "mis gatos" :]

12ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

412 Learning German and Dutch at the same time. Good idea or a bad idea?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4404549>

Zach.Rosell123 19 13 11 6 64

Hey guys, i've been learning German and Dutch for a month now and i've noticed i get confused with both languages and end up mixing them since they are similar in many ways

Should i continue learning German and Dutch at the same time or should i pick another language? or should i continue learning both but change my approach altogether?

Give Lingot5

22 years ago

Leave a new comment

10 Comments

Jsprwstr 25 24 20 19 17 16 11 9 6 6 4 4 3 101

Focus on one first and get comfortable with it, and then you can start learning the other one.

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JudithL1 11 10 7 5 2

I think this is a good idea. Once you have a very different level on both of them, it will be a lot easier, I think.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

anne_omoly 24 8

If you're mixing them up badly, then whatever you're doing's not working for you. Separating them so you practice one morning, one evening; or on alternate days; or just concentrating on one until you're confident in it are all options but only you can decide what's best for you.

In my case, it wasn't just that Dutch is close to German, it's that it's close to English too. (I caused much, much hilarity to my Dutch friend when I asked for Apfelsaft instead of appelsaft)

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RaizinM 11 10 10 6 6 3 3 3

when I asked for Apfelsaft instead of appelsaft

You're still mixing them up. The Dutch word is appelsap, not appelsaft. ;D

But you will always keep mixing up related languages to some extent. I'm a native Dutch speaker that speaks English at a near-native level, and every once in a while I still mix up idioms, proverbs, and even grammar. For example, I've accidentally said "dat moet je met een korreltje zout nemen" a couple times. (you have to take it with a grain of salt) This is partially because a good number of idioms overlap between Dutch and English, but most don't.

Some idioms and proverbs that are very similar include:

Makkelijker gezegd dan gedaan. = Easier said than done.

Uit het oog, uit het hart. = Out of sight, out of mind.

Zien is geloven. = Seeing is believing.

Geduld is een schone zaak. = Patience is a virtue.

Eind goed, al goed. = All's well that ends well.

De puntjes op de i zetten. = Cross your t's and dot your i's.

Wie het eerst komt, wie het eerst maalt. = First come, first served

Beter één vogel in de hand dan tien in de lucht. = A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

Een gegeven paard moet je niet in de bek kijken. = Never look a gift horse in the mouth.

Here's a list with more common Dutch proverbs and their English counterparts.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

anne_omoly 24 8

Thanks! I'm still keeping Dutch as a to-do language until my German is more secure, though. When I do get there, hopefully German will help but until then it's less stressful.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LupoMikti 19 16 14 11 9 9 9 7 5 5 5 4 4 3 3 3 3 3 2 2 37

You'll probably have to be more disciplined about it, but the way I keep them separate is to never switch from to the other unless at least two hours has passed since I finished one of them. I wouldn't stop with one of them, though. If it wasn't for them being so similar, I wouldn't be able to understand Dutch as well as I do. German is a huge help in that regard.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bookrabbit 22 22 20 19 19 17 16 16 16 16 14 13 13 13 13 12 12 8 5 22

I was doing them at the same time but they started interfering with each other badly so I abandoned Dutch. I will go back to it once I have finished my German tree. (Only 15 skills left). They are just too close.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Zach.Rosell123 19 13 11 6 64

Thanks guys, all of your suggestions are great I've decided i'm just going to continue learning both languages, but concentrate one of each on different days

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lwb_monster 8 6

Oh actually, I don't think it is a good idea to learn Dutch and German at the same time, for compared with English, Dutch has more similarities with German. Maybe you can not distinguish each other.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RenegadeHunter3 5
hmmph I'm going to try that too

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 days ago

413 Hindi and Urdu: What is the difference?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/14193402>

Chiiwit 9 9 7 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 3 2

This is something that has been bugging me for a long time and I can't seem to get a definitive answer. I have heard that they are essentially the same language but with a different writing system but I have also heard they have a massive differences in vocabulary. It is a question that people seem to be very divided upon. Do you have any answers to this question? Thanks.

Give Lingot
171 year ago

Leave a new comment
20 Comments

Tekinyorianer 25 9 8 4 3 3 2

The main problem is that there is no scientific/specific definition of language. Hindi and Urdu are mutually intellegible (speakers can understand each other). This is like Norwegian, Danish, and Swedish. However Chinese is considered one language when in fact Mandarin and Cantonese are not mutually intellegible. So as some linguists say, "a language is a dialect with an army and a navy." Hindi is a official language/dialect of India while Urdu is a official language/dialect of Pakistan. If anything about the specific examples of languages is wrong, please correct me.

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

frankenstein724 17 12 9 8 6 5 4 2

this is right on. So, I had a professor at Syracuse University who is, himself, Indian. While I know appeals to authority are technically fallacious, I still feel like pointing out his work shows that he knows better than probably most of us on here.

<https://scholar.google.com/citations?user=gJHTQAsAAAAJ&hl=en&cstart=0&pagesize=20>

While I'm sure there are some regional differences, and vocab differences like you say...He told us that they really are, by most standards, the exact same language but with different writing systems.

The thing is, though, that you wouldn't be able to tell a speaker of Hindi and a speaker of Urdu that their languages were the same, they'd have nothing of it. Like, it's kind of a huge deal.

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aaditsingh8 14 10 9 7 6 6 5 2
Urdu is the national language of Pakistan. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SaphiraTheDragon 21 16 6 3

The two languages have very different scripts. Urdu uses the Nastaliq script, which is written from left to right: https://qph.is.quoracdn.net/main-qimg-9533536a39f4ffffb242da0037138219?convert_to_webp=true . Hindi uses the Devanagari script: https://qph.is.quoracdn.net/main-qimg-f665bf0bf3a66905ff5c6b67920ed082?convert_to_webp=true.

A lot of words are different. Grammar-wise, they are pretty much the same. As a result, many Urdu words are commonly used replaceably (is it an actual word? :/) in Hindi. You can find many examples of this in Bollywood songs. Most speakers of both languages can understand the other without much difficulty.

"Pure" Hindi leans towards Sanskrit whereas "pure" Urdu tends towards Persian.

Hindi is predominant in India whereas Urdu is widespread in Pakistan.

The origins of Hindi and whether the two languages are separate or dialects of Hindustani is highly debated. You can read more about it here: https://en.m.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hindi-Urdu_controversy

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aaditsingh8 14 10 9 7 6 6 5 2

Which language originated where is debatable. But they both come from Hindustani, a language widely spoken in north India that has its roots to Sanskrit. Hindi was actually the commoners' language, and Urdu was spoken in the Mughal courts in order to be able to communicate with the commoners. Whether Hindustani was Persianised to make Urdu or was it Sanskritised to make Hindi is again debatable, but according to the theory I believe in, the Mughal rulers sort of Persianised Hindustani to create the language of the courts - Urdu. Urdu and Hindi both used the Persio-Arabic script, called the Nastaliq script. During the nationalist movement for independence, people started associating Hindi with Hindus, and so they started to write Hindi in the Devanagari script. Similarly Urdu started to be associated with Muslims.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

Rachala_P. 5 2 2

you basically have it right Hindi and Urdu are almost the same except for a few words and the writing script.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Pratyush. 15 12 8 7 6 1

If You want to compare can see this discussion.

As for me, "Hindi and Urdu are not same, but they are not different either.". They are so similar that they can be learned together. And there are many courses which teaches both Hindi and Urdu. The learners are taught in Devnagari script in beginning because it is less confusing for first time learners, then they are taught in Nastaq script once they get hold on language, thus they get to learn Hindi-Urdu together in the end. Just try to learn and you will find there is no major noticeable difference other than that of the words. Every preposition, pronoun, conjunctions are same. (In fact, Hindi uses few more), word order, voices are exactly same. In Urdu, some words are made in plural in Persian way but Hindi uses both of them.

Also, if Cantonese and Mandarin are same language, and difference between Moroccan Arabic, Bahrani Arabic, Levantine Arabic, Egyptian Arabic or Sudanese Arabic are only difference of dialects. Then Hindi and Urdu are essentially same language. (Yes, similarity is so much.)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Chiiwit 9 9 7 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 3 2

Wow, that was a fantastic article you wrote. Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

shrikrishna1 24 22 13 12 12 11 10 10 10 9 9 9 7 7 7 6 5 2 2 8

Do you know the word "Urdu" has come from a Turkish word meaning Army. So basically it was a language spoken by army personnels. later became a language of the court of empire. It was first used by a princely state in south India.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aaditsingh8 14 10 9 7 6 6 5 2

I guess you're talking about Hyderabad. Now it has developed into another dialect of Hindi/Urdu called Dakhani (not sure with the spelling). The language used by locals (Hindi, basically) was sort of Persianised to make Urdu, the language of the courts. That's what I think. People also think otherwise, but I don't think that's possible.

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

shrikrishna1 24 22 13 12 12 11 10 10 10 9 9 9 7 7 7 6 5 2 2 8

True it is Hyderabad state that used Urdu as a language of administration first time.

0ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

ReenaCathleen 15 8

Hindi is a language derived from Sanskrit and uses the Devanagari script. While Urdu was developed in the courts of the Mughals in India to enable communication between the Mughals and the locals and is derived from Persian (which was the official court language) and Hindi and uses a script based on the Persian script.

Hindi is the national language of India and Urdu is the official language of Pakistan. However, both are considered standardised forms of the same language.

Contemporary Hindi uses a lot of Urdu words and vice versa. but learning both languages will be very different experiences as the script, grammar and speech patterns are quite different.

-3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SaphiraTheDragon 21 16 6 3

You are mistaken to think Hindi is the national language of India as it does not have a national language in the first place. According to the Indian Constitution, Hindi is an Official language, along with English and 22 other regional languages.

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ReenaCathleen 15 8

you are right. there is nothing on record that gives Hindi the status of national language. I stand corrected. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

aaditsingh8 14 10 9 7 6 6 5 2

Also, Hindi doesn't use a script derived from Persian. It uses the Devanagari script, derived from the Brahmi script. :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

ReenaCathleen 15 8

true that!

1ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

MajestfulQueen 6

I don't know I don't even know what they are?

-19ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Chiiwit 9 9 7 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 4 4 3 2

Hindi: a language spoken predominantly in Northern India which has over 200 million speakers.

Urdu: a language spoken predominantly in Pakistan and in India which has over 50 million speakers.

9ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

MajestfulQueen 6

hindi sure has been spoken more i'll say I hope you get to find the answer to your difficult question good luck enjoy your stay in duolingo

4ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Manoehs 13 5

Urdu is my native language. Urdu and Hindi are 90% same except for a few words. This is because they were once living together in one country which then got divided into two parts. These two language are spoken in the same way but written differently.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

414 Hungarian flag is so similar to the Italian one :)

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/16441828>

Irusejka 15 10 10 9 8 6 6 4 2

Give Lingot

68 months ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

voltaire 25 10 10 9 8 7 7 6 5 2

Fun fact: The Hungarian flag is older than the Italian one!

14ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Jessica4201 16 11 11 10 8 8 7 7 7 6 6 6 6 6 5 5 5 5 4 2 2

Hungary's flag is as similar to Italy's flag as the Netherlands' flag is similar to France's. But if you think these are confusing, wait until Indonesian is released. Or even better still, the release of the Romanian course followed by a Sara one. ;)

6ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

Multi0Lingual4 23 19 14 13 12 11 11 4 3 2 143

And that, in turn, is kind of similar to the Mexican flag. :) Some of these flags confuse me...sometimes I think my Irish flag is a Hindi flag lol.

4ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

PolyglotCiro 25 25 25 25 14 13 13 12 11 11 10 6 41
lol

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

415 "The colors are not natural."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1375701>

Translation: Los colores no son naturales.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

8 Comments

yahoo3579 2 2

I got this right after "No! It's not true!"

Sith: The trees are neon yellow!

Jedi: No! It's not true! The colors aren't natural!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

strongwench 12

Why son, not eres is it because it is inanimate not a person

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sully.su 15

It is because it is plural, you can substitute "the colors" for they. And yes, inanimate objects are not referred to as "you", you would use "es" in the singular form, not "eres".

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SamThuo 10
Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rjraven135 11
You can tell by her gray roots

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

CamillaHol6 11
Does no have to be infront of son...?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bruce895840 12
Yes,

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

416 How many lessons in the whole course ??

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/872296>

Ahmed_ismeal 7 7

I just want to know how many lessons in the whole course of Italian and German so i can know how many lessons should i have per day for my schedule .

Thanks in advance . :)

Give Lingot3
263 years ago

Leave a new comment
57 Comments

stefott 24 23 23 22 20 18 15 14 12 12 7 7 3 3 2
German:

First Block (up to first shortcut):

9 Skills
32 Lessons
Second Block:

11 Skills
38 Lessons
Third Block:

20 Skills
98 Lessons
Fourth Block:

13 Skills
69 Lessons
Fifth Block:

19 Skills
112 Lessons
Total:

72 Skills
349 Lessons
This will teach you 1710 words :)

59ReplyGive Lingot22•3 years ago

laceyallyn 25 2

A couple months ago, Duo added a bunch more lessons for English to German. Here's an updated count:

Checkpoint 1: - 11 topics / skills (8 required, 3 bonus) -- 36 lessons (29 required, 7 bonus)

Checkpoint 2: - 7 topics -- 20 lessons

Checkpoint 3: - 12 topics -- 36 lessons

Checkpoint 4: - 19 topics -- 62 lessons

Checkpoint 5: - 17 topics -- 72 lessons

Checkpoint 6: - 17 topics -- 68 lessons

Checkpoint 7: - 20 topics -- 76 lessons

Checkpoint 8: - 20 topics -- 84 lessons

TOTALS: - 123 topics -- 454 lessons

According to @LugoschPierre, this results in around 2032 words, but it could be as many as 2385. If you've finished the tree entirely, comment the total number of words below!!

Early 2017 UPDATE: I have 10 topics left to go and am currently at 2087 words and definitely noticing new words scattered throughout the topics, so I'm guessing they add them now and again.

25ReplyGive Lingot10•1 year ago

AJ76257 19 14 14 5 3 3

I finished the updated tree and it says I learned 1970 words.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•11 months ago

DerLutz48 21 12 10 9 8

It says I've learned 2.055 (2,055 in American) words, and I still have 13 and half skills to go! Es sagt, ich habe gelernt zwei Milliarden funfundfunzig Worten., und ich habe dreizehn und halbe noch gehen. I probably really butchered that, but I wanted to try anyway. If anybody feels like typing how it should be written, please feel free to edify me! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•1 month ago

DerLutz48 21 12 10 9 8
just realized I forgot to include "skills", which I forgot anyway!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

avishagm 15
Do you know which official level is it? B1? A2? And thank you for the answer, I helps me to schedule my studies:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Ahmed_ismeal 7 7
Actually this time... also can't thank you enough :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

stefott 24 23 23 22 20 18 15 14 12 12 7 7 3 3 2
:)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

e-nawar 21 15 5
Thanks for the statistics

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Preusser 25
Thank you Stefott!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

SuarezLifts 5
Yikes, that is quite a few lessons =P

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

territech 21 20 950
Thank you! Now I don't have to count them!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

stefott 24 23 23 22 20 18 15 14 12 12 7 7 3 3 2
Spanish:

First Block (up to first shortcut):

Skills: 8

Lessons: 24

Second Block:

Skills: 10

Lessons: 33

Third Block:

Skills: 13

Lessons: 93

Fourth Block:

Skills: 35

Lessons: 179

Total:

Skills: 66

Lessons: 329

And you'll learn 1571 words :)

36ReplyGive Lingot12•3 years ago

wazzie 25 11

I was looking for this information, and realized that this post is out of date updated Spanish Tree numbers:

First Block (up to first shortcut):

Skills: 7

Lessons: 22

Second Block:

Skills: 8

Lessons: 22

Third Block:

Skills: 14

Lessons: 86

Fourth Block:

Skills: 35

Lessons: 187

Total:

Skills: 63

Lessons: 317

(not including bonus skills)

17ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

elsrbest 10 8 2

There are actually 64 total skills. Your individual numbers are correct, but $7 + 8 + 14 + 35 = 64$. The addition for lessons is correct as well.

5ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

territech 21 20 950

Thank you. Now I don't have to count them!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

stefott 24 23 23 22 20 18 15 14 12 12 7 7 3 3 2

For completeness sake:

French:

First Block (up to first shortcut):

Skills: 10

Lessons: 41

Second Block:

Skills: 11

Lessons: 62

Third Block:

Skills: 18

Lessons: 114

Fourth Block:

Skills: 29

Lessons: 136

Total:

Skills: 68

Lessons: 353

And you'll learn 1848 words :)

34ReplyGive Lingot24•3 years ago

mkmichael2 17 15 9 6

Lingots for your language awesomeness, so many languages. You should work for the UN.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

yilu5 12 8 2

The last block is so long.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pinkduckling 22 13 9 9 2

I've been wondering about this for a while, thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Noe010101 25 16 12 12 10

I also wanted to know this, thanks:)

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Brielo.o 14 13 12 11 11 8 7 37

Thanks! You deserve some lingots for that.

Does anyone know if this is still accurate?

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

stefott 24 23 23 22 20 18 15 14 12 12 7 7 3 3 2

Italian:

First Block (up to first shortcut):

9 Skills

40 Lessons

Second Block:

10 Skills

46 Lessons

Third Block:

21 Skills

139 Lessons

Fourth Block:

25 Skills

174 Lessons

Total:

65 Skills

399 Lessons

This will teach you 1791 words :)

31ReplyGive Lingot4•3 years ago

Ahmed_ismail 7 7

Can't thank you enough :) what about German ??

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

anirudhmkonduru 12 2

https://www.duolingo.com/comment/872296\$comment_id=12305438

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

grege2 20 2 1

I re-counted the Italian course (from English) 31Mar16.

Block 1: --- 11 skills, 45 lessons (including Bonus Skills)

Block 2: --- 9 skills, 40 lessons

Block 3: --- 21 skills, 133 lessons

Block 4: --- 28 skills, 196 lessons

Total: ----- 68 skills, 414 lessons (incl. bonus)

Hope that helps someone. I'm motivating myself by calculating the percentage of lessons I have done. (Which is $278/414 = 67.1\%$ woo hoo). But this is pretty bogus since some lessons have 20 items and some have far fewer. But it's good enough. [Note proper use of fewer :=) So tempting to just give in and say "less", but no ! that way lies the abyss !]

4ReplyGive Lingot1•11 months ago

maddyis7 18 8 5 5

Brilliant to know. I'm half way through my Italian tree on about 1,000 so it's good to see I'm getting somewhere, but 65 skills for the last block looks quite daunting. I do have a bit of vocab beyond DL, so I'd estimate I'm on perhaps 1,500 - 2,000, but it's still some way from the 5,000 figure I often see quoted as basic fluency.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

stefott 24 23 23 22 20 18 15 14 12 12 7 7 3 3 2

I don't think the amount of words you know says much about your fluency. My English is good enough to read Lolita and get most of the jokes, but if I have to speak it I'll struggle to find the right words. On the other hand, there are probably many people who wouldn't dream of reading Lolita (too difficult) but can stand their own in an English conversation.

Good luck with Italian :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Danidanger101 6

Thank you so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AwrificRed 13 12

I counted 66 skills Ill recount again and thats minus the 2 extra skills that you can buy Maybe they added one .. I just realized this is a year old.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DerLutz48 21 12 10 9 8

Thank you so much for sharing this information!!! You're AWESOME Ausgezeichnet!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

stefott 24 23 23 22 20 18 15 14 12 12 7 7 3 3 2

Portuguese:

First Block (up to first shortcut):

Skills: 10

Lessons: 35

Second Block:

Skills: 11

Lessons: 54

Third Block:

Skills: 15

Lessons: 108

Fourth Block:

Skills: 33

Lessons: 209

Total:

Skills: 69

Lessons: 406

And you'll learn 1942 words doing all these lessons :)

21ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Zach1337 8 5 2

Dang. The Portuguese tree has way more words than the other trees.

4ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Inevitablez 15 10 9 2 11

29/06/2016

<https://docs.google.com/spreadsheets/d/1sszd8BhO3em2HH0EI4LXE0hFEp4jNXc9WCewqdJLOek/e dit?usp=sharing>

I intend to add other courses in this sheet too.

Someone should ask duolingo to make this kind of information available

2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

Just put together details for Spanish (hoping that I did not make any mistakes in addition) NB:
Different users see different numbers!

=====

Basics1=3 [1=3]

Phrases=3, Basics2=4 [3=10]

Food=5, Animals=4, Plurals=1 [6=20]

Possess=2 [7=22]

CHECKPOINT#1 [7=22]

Clothing=2, Questions=2 [9=26]

V.Pres1=3, Colors=1 [11=30]

Conjunct=2 [12=32]

Family=2, Prep=3 [14=37]

Time=7 [15=44]

CHECKPOINT#2 [15=44]

Household=6, Sizes=1, Occupation=6 [18=57]

Adject1=9 [19=66]

V.Pres2=7, Determin=3 [21=76]

Adverbs=10, Objects=9 [23=95]

ToBe=2, Places=9, People=4 [26=110]

ObjPron=5, Numbers=5 [28=120]

V.Past=10 [29=130]

CHECKPOINT#3 [29=130]

V.Pres3=10, V.Inf1=10 [31=150]

V.FutPhr=10 [32=160]

Countries=4, Adject2=10, Pronouns=3 [35=177]

Directions=3, Education=4 [37=184]

AbsOb1=10, V.Partic=2 [39=196]

Feelings=3, Pres.Per=10 [41=209]

PastPer=5, Nature=7 [43=221]

AbsOb2=8, V.Inf2=10, Sports=2 [46=241]

Medical=9, V.Gerund=4, Business=5 [49=259]

Communic=3, V.Haber=1 [51=263]

Spiritual=2, V.Future=6 [53=271]

Arts=5, Fut.Per=2, Politics=10 [56=288]

V.SubImp=3, Science=5 [58=296]

V.Modal=2 [59=298]

V.Cond=1, V.P.Imp=5 [61=304]

V.Sub.P=1, AbsOb3=10 [63=315]

Cond.Per=2 [64=317]

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mathcore 14 10 7 6 5 5 4 2 2

there are a lot of errors in this count. just to name a few:

AbsOb2=9 V.Inf.2=11 Feelings=4 Pres.Per=11 Abs.Ob3=11

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

What filipmc wrote seems correct and matches my tree. Perhaps you are in a test group or not looking at the Spanish tree.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mathcore 14 10 7 6 5 5 4 2 2

my guess is that since you two are using old accounts, you don't have updated trees.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wazzie 25 11

Well, the tree is constantly being update and tweaked. These numbers were correct 5 months ago (as shown in my post above - a new account was used to derive those numbers)- but may not be now... or DuoLingo could just be testing a different number of lessons -they do this often before making perminate changes- and your numbers may not be the final ones. We really don't know, and we don't know which numbers are "correct" or when they will change again. For now, there is nothing wrong with listing varios trees and letting each user decide which tree they fall into.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

Double-checking, my AbsOb2=8. My V.Inf2=10. I only assumed they were the same for everyone. You are looking at Spanish?

0ReplyGive Lingot8•2 years ago

mathcore 14 10 7 6 5 5 4 2 2
GROUP 4

(from a newer user for newer users)

V. Pres. 3 - 11

V. Inf 1 - 11

V. Fut. Phr - 11

Countries - 4

Adject. 2 - 12

Pronouns - 3

Directions - 3

Education - 5

Abs. Ob. 1 - 11

V. Partic. - 2

Feelings - 4

Pres. Per. - 11

Past. Per. - 5

Nature - 7

Abs. Ob. 2 - 9

V. Inf. 2 - 11

Sports - 2

Medical - 9

V. Gerund - 5

Business - 5

Communic. - 4

V. Haber - 1

Spiritual - 2

V. Future - 6

Arts - 5

Fut. Per. - 2

Politics - 11

V. Sub/Imp - 3

Science - 6

V. Modal - 2

V. Cond. - 2

V.P. Imp. - 5

V. Sub. P. - 1

Abs. Ob. 3 - 11

Cond. Per. - 2

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

So, I suggest you give an entirely new set of numbers for the people in your group--whichever group that is. Now know there are at least two groups of people, I guess.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mathcore 14 10 7 6 5 5 4 2 2

your information is outdated. i have verified this with a friend who has never signed up for the spanish course. when she set it up (today), all the numbers were identical to mine. you and wazzie finished your trees before the changes took effect, so your numbers are incorrect for new users. i suggest you note this in your list.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

Jessica626185 17 10

Just finished the German tree today with only 1,410 words learned. Seems low compared to others.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

laceyallyn 25 2

I've noticed new words popping up in my lessons. If you buzzed through the tree pretty quickly, there's a chance you're not getting all of them. I haven't done the lessons Abs. Objects, Animals 2, or Present 3, and I've got a 1383 word count.

Keep your tree gold and you'll probably get more!

https://www.duolingo.com/comment/872296?comment_id=12305438

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

territech 21 20 950

I want to track what percentage of each course I have completed. When I count the number of nodes on the tree that is displayed on my home page, I do not see the numbers mentioned below. I count 64 nodes for Spanish and 72 nodes for German . How does this reconcile with the 329 and 349 number of lessons mentioned below? Are there nodes that I don't see, or multiple lessons within a node?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BenediktRuf 23 12 6 4 250

The latter. A node stands for a skill. Most nodes contain more than one lesson.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

territech 21 20 950

Thank you. I have since figured out that the best way to track my progress is by the number of words learned, as a percentage of the number of words in the course. I notice however, that I am credited with words learned only when I complete a lesson for the first time. When I repeat a lesson, I get words that I have never seen before, but my word count does not increase. So I guess that DL counts all the words available in a lesson the first time it is completed, even though some of the words in the lesson are not presented. Have you observed anything like that?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BenediktRuf 23 12 6 4 250

I don't look at the word count often, but probably DL counts the way you describe it here.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Joana.NL 12 9

Does anybody know how many lessons in the Dutch course?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

filipmc 25 11 7 6 6 3

Here is what I count -- with subtotals on every line so you can compute your progress NB:
Apparently different English=>Spanish learners see different numbers, so different English=>Dutch learners may see different numbers.

==== DUTCH (from English) =====

DUTCH

Basic 1=5 [1=5]

Basics 2=5, Phrases=6 [3=16]

Food=5, Animals=3 [5=24]

Plurals=3 [6=27]

Poss=2, Adj.Basic=6, Clothing=2 [9=37]

SHORTCUT#1 (9 skills)

Formal=1, Present=9 [11=47]

Indef.pr=4, Obj.pron=2 [13=53]

Colors=3, Prep=5 [15=61]

Questions=2 [16=63]

Numbers=8, Conj=4 [18=75]

SHORTCUT#2 (18 skills)

Dates/Times=8, Places=9 [20=92]

Er=5 [21=97]

Jobs=5, Family=3 [23=105]

Continuous=2, Present2=8 [25=115]

Health=7, Adverbs=8, Objects=10 [28=140]

Te+inf=5 [29=145]

Demonstr=4, Imperative=3, Modals=3 [32=155]

CHECKPOINT#3 (32 skills)

Diminutive=6, Travel=8 [34=169]

Adj2=8, People=5, Reflexive=5 [37=187]

PresPer=9, Nature=7 [39=203]

Passive=3 [40=206]

Education=7, SimplePast=9, Weather=5 [43=227]

PassPast=2, Future=5, AbsN1=8 [46=242]

FutPerf=3, Adj3=6 [48=251]

CHECKPOINT#4 (48 skills)

Map=8, Condit=4 [50=263]

RelPron=1, Communic=8, Arts=5 [53=277]

Sports=5 [54=282]

Feelings=6, Science!=6 [56=294]

Business=8, Government=10, Pluperfect=4 [59=316]

Gerund=2 [60=318]

Events=4, AbsN2=7 [62=329]

NL1=7, NL2=4 [64=340]

TOTAL 64 skills, 340 lessons

4ReplyGive Lingot7•2 years ago

OmneyaSadek 10

Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

luzvy2603 16

I want to know how many lessons in the whole course of English for people who speak Spanish?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

417 Changing between "main" languages

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3724197>

mace56617 16 13 13

So I've been brushing up on my french with Duolingo for a little while now learning from English. I know more Spanish than French and so I thought I'd try learning Spanish from French in order to increase both my spanish and my french levels simultaneously. I switched my main language to "French" in order to access that. However I seem unable to switch back to English and resume my old courses. The only option I have been able to find is "starting" a new language. Does anyone know how I can switch back?

Give Lingot1
62 years ago

Leave a new comment
5 Comments

Anglea 22 15 11 6 5

Terrifying, isn't it? I somehow got stuck in the German version and couldn't understand enough of what the options were in the Settings to get out of it. There was a scary few minutes before I fumbled on the right choices. I've done this before (no idea how I fixed it then either) so I knew I hadn't lost progress. I really wish there was a simpler way of switching home-language.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BritBlue 12 7 6 4 2

<https://www.duolingo.com/settings/direction> You can also try this link and pick the course from the drop down menu that you were on (e.g. I want to learn French - I speak English) and that should get you back to your old courses.

2ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Trang. 25 24 20 13 11 10 8 8 2 1228

<https://www.duolingo.com/courses> Find the course that you want to take and click Switch

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

JWSB28 10 8 5

Wow, that's pretty lame that you can't have all of your languages in one screen/login.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

mace56617 16 13 13

Thank you! Now they are all showing up!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

418 Colour codes

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/1139821>

pblackstone 12 2

Hi everyone, I am just wondering what the significance is of the colour coding of the icons on the home screen. They turn yellow when a lesson is completed, but turn back to green, blue, or red with non-use. Do these three colours have any meaning?

Pam

Give Lingot
33 years ago

Leave a new comment
12 Comments

ComradeFrancis 25 22 19 18 15 14 14 12 12 11 10 264

I haven't found any page with an official explanation, but these are the patterns I notice:

red - the first few lessons where you are just memorizing canned phrases and encountering concepts like gender and conjugation.

green - noun heavy lessons (typically under a conversation topic theme) light blue - verb heavy lessons (typically introducing a tense or other verb inflection)

dark blue - heavy on words of other parts of speech (demonstratives, adjectives, interrogative pronouns et cetera)

8ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

I had no idea. Good to know!

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

sakuyaluigi 16 8 5 4 2

I was wondering what the coloured meters meant. Thank you~!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ComradeFrancis 25 22 19 18 15 14 14 12 12 11 10 264

Unfortunately, node colours changed during the redesign, and I have not been able to discern a definite pattern.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

sakuyaluigi 16 8 5 4 2

That makes me sad now. So, I am once again lost. xDD

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pblackstone 12 2

Thank you! I kind of figured that from the little pictograms, but I thought the red/green/blue might mean various degrees of staleness from long periods of non-practice. Very helpful. Thanks so much!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

[deleted]

1Give Lingot•3 years ago

pblackstone 12 2

Thanks, but that link doesn't answer my question. The discussion there concerns the translation pages under "Immersion". My question is about the coloured icons on my Home page.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Usagiboy7 25 17 6 5 4 4 3

ah! i thought you were talking about color codes for sentences. Gold on your homepage means that all of your skills are strong. As your skills degrade (they degrade over time when you don't practice and keep them fresh) then they start to de-color.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

pblackstone 12 2

Yes, I've learned that the hard way. I just wondered what significance the different colours have (if any). They turn red, green, and blue. Do these mean something?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

PontusBerg1 22 8 2 177

After using Duolingo for several months, I only now realize that the colors have no particular meaning. At least that's what I understand reading this article:

<http://gregreflects.blogspot.se/2014/12/how-to-make-gold-duolingo-tree.html>

It seems the colors are arbitrarily assigned when new skills are unlocked, and then turn gold when all lesson's in the skill category are finished. Then, when the skill stops being golden, it simply returns to the original colors. I must admit I thought red had a special meaning, ie that the skill is long overdue...

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cursorcorner 14 46

The colours appear to be set between accounts. Both my wife and I have the same colours for the same lessons. They may have meant something at some point, but now seem to be mostly random. I think it helps add to the atmosphere of change and progress, similar to how the tree shapes are in sets of 1, 2, and 3 randomly. That might be what they were shooting for.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

419 "The cat is playing with a dog."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/736675>

Translation: Die Katze spielt mit einem Hund.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

14 Comments

NikolaRadjenovic 24 13 4 3

If a dog plays with a cat, it is "mit meiner" because the cat is feminine.

If a cat plays with a dog, it is "mit meinem" because the dog is masculine.

You need to look at the object.

19ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FritzjLeop 9 8 6

why if the dog play with the cat using einer, and when the cat play with the dog using einem

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

panimidi 13 10 10

"Der Kater spielt mit einem Hund" is wrong? I was trying to add some variaton to "Die Katze"

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RaymondLee10 13 8 4 3 3

Das wahrscheinlich sieht sehr süß ^^

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

meganevans249 13 2

Ohhhh that makes sense

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ArdentAshley 11 10

Why is this sentence dative? Isn't the dog the direct object here?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Katherle 25 22 12

Cases are also triggered by prepositions. "Mit" is a dative preposition, i.e. it is always followed by the dative case.

See: http://german.about.com/library/blcase_dat2.htm

PS: I don't think that "with a dog" can be described as a direct object in this sentence. A direct object would be something like "The cat is playing THE PIANO".

20ReplyGive Lingot1•3 years ago

ArdentAshley 11 10

Thanks

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RobertRoland 12

I thought that I must add -e to the masculin words in dative = Hunde, not Hund

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Katherle 25 22 12

Adding an -e to masculine and neuter nouns in the dative singular is dated and today generally occurs only in a handful of fixed expressions. You can say "mit einem Hunde", but that would sound very old-fashioned.

See also: <http://goo.gl/ku83pN>

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RobertRoland 12

Thanks Kitty ;)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Tanner-John 6

I agree

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mariaelena168053 8 8 7

I wrote 'die Katze spielt gerade mit einem Hund' and it says I am wrong. Does someone know why?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jack220838 11 6

Can anyone explain the difference between einem and eine? Thank you.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

420 "The boy walks from here."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/10996514>

Translation: El niño camina desde aquí.

31 year ago

Leave a new comment

7 Comments

arspaeth 11

Can someone please explain why desde is used here as opposed to de? Thank you.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rspreng 24

desde is used for 'from' in phrases relating to time or place; de often expresses possession, origin, or the material of which something is made

6ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

arspaeth 11

Thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cliftonlemon 9

So it's like estar vs ser? Origin of a person relates to identity- soy Chilongo, or soy de Mexico? But I come from Mexico is viene desde Mexico? That doesn't sound right.

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

deoxys94 12 8 8 7 6 5 5 1

In this case you can't use both "de" or "desde". "Desde" is a preposition used to state the origin (time or place) of an action. "De" has many uses, but, to state the origin of a thing, needs to be used with the verbs "ser", "venir" or "salir" (as far as I remember)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

AlyshiaSilva12 8

Aquí and aca -- anyone want to help me explain the difference?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KatherineCarson 20

why is it camina and not camino

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

421 When to use the various words for "the", "a/an" (το, η, ο, την) και (ένα, ένας, μια)
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4172369>

zcggcz2 18 7

I am a native English speaker using the English for Greek speaker course to learn Greek, and one of the things that I have found incredibly confusing is when to use:

το/η/ο/την - what are the general rules? I understand that they all mean "the" but when do you use what.

ένα/ενας/μια - again, I understand that they are the masculine/feminine/neutral forms of a/an but it is not clear when to use what.

Any help is appreciated! Thank you

Give Lingot3

572 years ago

Leave a new comment

56 Comments

drkameleon 24 15 9 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 3

OK, so let me get a few things straight first:

the = definite article

a/an = indefinite article.

The greek counterparts are used pretty much in the same fashion as the english ones. And yep, there are a few exceptions, but let's put that aside for now.

Greek, as you may already know, has 3 noun genders (masculine, feminine and neuter), 2 numbers (singular and plural) and 4 cases (nominative, genitive, accusative and ablative). Also, please note, that there is no plural for indefinite articles, in greek.

The article (as well as adjectives, for instance) always accord with the noun they are accompanying, in terms of gender, number and case.

Examples:

The book - Το βιβλίο (neuter / singular / nominative)

The books - Τα βιβλία (neuter / plural / nominative)

A book - Ένα βιβλίο (neuter / singular / nominative)

The woman - Η γυναίκα (feminine / singular / nominative)

The women - Οι γυναίκες (feminine / plural / nominative)

A woman - Μία γυναίκα (feminine / singular / nominative)

The man - Ο άντρας (masculine / singular / nominative)

The men - Οι άντρες (masculine / plural / nominative)

A man - Ένας άντρας (masculine / singular / nominative)

However, remember these forms are only an example of the nominative case. If you want to use them as part of a sentence, you'll most likely also need the accusative (and/or genitive case).

E.g.:

Η γυναίκα κοιτάζει τον άντρα. (The woman looks at the man).

For some reference on article case and declension, have a look:
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Modern_Greek_grammar#Articles

17ReplyGive Lingot7•2 years ago

zcggcz2 18 7

Thank you! Although I am still a bit confused about the nominative, genitive, accusative and ablative - English does not have all of these as you probably know. But thank you for the help!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

drkameleon 24 15 9 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 3

Well, I missed this one! Yep!

OK, let me put it simply (and finger crossed, I will not miss any point this time!):

Nominative is used for the Subject of a sentence. (E.g. The man looks at the woman - Subject = The man, Verb = looks at, Object = the woman. So, The man should be in nominative).

Genitive is used when something/someone belongs to something/someone. Remember the cases where in English you have a possessive 's or of. (E.g. The man's dog looks at the woman. Subject = The man's dog, Verb = looks at, Object = the woman. According to the rule above the subject should be in nominative. And it will. However, if you look at it closely, the subject, contains another element acting almost like an... adjective - specifying a property of the "dog" : "man's". So, the word "dog" goes in nominative, and the word "man" goes in genitive. The exact translation in greek would be "Ο σκύλος του άντρα" - nominative first, genitive next. It's like saying: "The dog (of the) man") Accusative is used for the Object(s) of a sentence. In the previous example, the object is "the woman" so that goes in accusative.

Ablative is used when calling someone, and only then. (E.g. Peter, give me that!). In greek, in ablative there's never an article.

P.S. From a strictly grammar point of view, English still has all this. Yep, nominative, accusative and everything. However, let's say it just happens that the nominative and accusative are the same thing - there's no perceptible difference between the different forms. Want me to point out an interesting case where it's not? Think of the word "who". That's nominative. Genitive is "whose". Accusative is "whom". ;-)

13ReplyGive Lingot4•2 years ago

bnvdarklord 11 9 9

Also let me add one more example of an apparent usage of accusative in English:

>This shirt belongs to him him is the accusative of he. You wouldn't say "this shirt belongs to he" ;)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

drkameleon 24 15 9 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 3

Yes, yes, yes. Spot on. All of the personal pronouns, in english, have an accusative case (object form), e.g. him, as well as a genitive case (possessive form), e.g. his.

Good catch! :-)

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/English_personal_pronouns#Table_of_basic_personal_pronouns

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Sarmadaki 11

The fourth case is called Vocative, not Abblative which is found in Latin.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zcgcz2 18 7

Wow! I was not expecting so much help! Ευχαριστω πολυ!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

drkameleon 24 15 9 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 3

You're welcome! My pleasure!

P.S. "πολύ" :-)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bnvdarklord 11 9 9

If you're using the standard greek keyboard layout, you can add an accent by pressing the key to the right of the L key, and then the vowel you want to accent.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

zcggcz2 18 7

Awesome! Ευχαριστώ πολύ!

3Give Lingot•2 years ago

LinguistiNerd 4 3

I like to think of it as subject and target

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

l1viathan 12 10 9 3 2 2 great answer! hope we can have a Greek course for English speakers soon :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

LinguistiNerd 4 3

There is... unless you mean English for Greek, which already exists

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

glavkos 22 14 14 10 8 7 6 6

The following links are giving an almost full overview about definite and indefinite articles in Modern Greek in comparison also with Ancient Greek.

<http://www.foundalis.com/lan/artindef.htm>

<http://www.foundalis.com/lan/definart.htm>

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zcggcz2 18 7

Awesome! Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jaye16 25 25 25 13 6 3 2 170

Thanks to all of you for these helpful posts. I'm bookmarking them as well as the references. It's so good to be having a conversation about Greek.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

C02JPXCWDTY3 7 6 3

It's more confusing using the reverse tree. But you'll have an easier time when they bring out the Greek for English Tree. Meantime I recommend this free course <http://www.language-transfer.org/#!greek-download/c1a3v> Now I hadn't realized but there's a bit of politics involved in language training software. So this system is based on the Michel Thomas, Paul Noble, Pimsleur etc method of audio only learning. I found it really helpful. He is threatening to upgrade the course while still keeping it free so I'll probably return to it then. The audio versions keep it simple and I think work well with writing/reading courses like DL.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zcggcz2 18 7
Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kkechagias 11 3
το is used for things , neuter η is used for female (and female things or female animals) ο is used for male (or male female animals)

ενα for neuter for things ενας for male (e.g. ενας man) μια for female (e.g. μια woman, μια butterfly)

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lidsville 25 10 8
then why is it το κοιτο?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

kkechagias 11 3
Is the girl u can't say she girl

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

deniss123456
The greek counterparts are used pretty much in the same fashion as the english ones. And yep, there are a few exceptions, but let's put that aside for now.

Greek, as you may already know, has 3 noun genders (masculine, feminine and neuter), 2 numbers (singular and plural) and 4 cases (nominative, genitive, accusative and ablative). Also, please note, that there is no plural for indefinite articles, in greek.

The article (as well as adjectives, for instance) always accord with the noun they are accompanying, in terms of gender, number and case.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KiriakiT. 8
Hi! I am a native Greek and I feel very happy that someone tries to learn my language. The user drkameleon is very right. Try to understand them by the examples. Keep going and good luck!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

korydalos 11

use "ο" when u speak for a man,for example " ο Νίκος" , use "η" for woman, and "το" for noun or things like "the house" that mean: το σπίτι!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lidsville 25 10 8

I don't understand why it's το κορίτσι - why is girl neuter?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 663

Because grammatical gender does not necessarily correspond to natural gender.

(Also because κορίτσι is in origin a diminutive with an ending that makes the word neuter.)

1ReplyGive Lingot1•2 months ago

lidsville 25 10 8

ευχαριστώ! This has really been bothering me! Also, I lived in Greece and I noticed the diminutive "itsi" (and "itsili"?) ending on words - so all words with that ending are neuter, then?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 663

Yes, all words in -itsi are neuter.

(If you just hear "-itsi", it could possible be a feminine -itsiη, but I don't think that exists - the only feminine version of this ending that I know is -itsiα.)

Other diminutive endings include -ούλα (feminine) and -άκι (neuter).

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

lidsville 25 10 8

is "ili" diminutive or an endearment then? How does Vassos become Vassili or in my village "Vassilitisi" - or was I hearing that wrong? Thanks so much and sorry to pester!

0Give Lingot•2 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 663

Βασίλειος is likely to be the name the priest gave him at Christening, and Βασίλης is a more colloquial form of that ending.

Βάσος would be a short form :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 months ago

lidsville 25 10 8

Neat! So good to know. Thank you so much!

1Give Lingot•2 months ago

d.kou 11 9 8 8 7 7 3 2

ο/η/ το are definite articles. that means they refer to a specific object. they have multiple forms (like German does) so ο would be ο, του, το(ν) depending on how you're referring to the object. sorry this isn't very good I'm a native Greek speaker and suck at explaining my own language

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

zcggcz2 18 7

No worries! I give you so much credit for trying! I would never be able to explain the complexities of the English language in Greek or any other language for that matter. Ευχαριστώ!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

d.kou 11 9 8 8 7 7 3 2

Παρακαλώ :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jaye16 25 25 25 13 6 3 2 170

You explained it very well. One or two tiny spelling etc errors -no biggy but please learn when to use and not to use words like "suck". Here is one place not to use it. I know it's hard to catch the nuances in another language and hope you don't mind advice from a native English speaker.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

d.kou 11 9 8 8 7 7 3 2

thanks a lot. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EllinoryVasalou 4 2

Right. You can use "ο"(male), "η"(female), "το" when you want to speak about someone who you know or you have met; Ο άντρας που μου μίλησε.- The man who talked to me (we have met so I know that he talked to me). But you use ένα/μία/ένα for something or someone like all the others. Είδα ένα πράσινο αμάξι.-I saw a green car (I have never seen this car before so I just mentioned it. I speak Greek and I hope you understand this rule.-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LeKats 4

So ο/η/το is like "the" and ένα/μία/ένα is like "a", right? Also, do the male and female genders apply only to living creatures of the respective genders or do they apply to some objects too, like in Russian, for example?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 663

Yes, ο/η/το is "the" and ένας/μία/ένα are "a". (And ένας/μία/ένα are "one".)

Genders apply to all nouns in Greek, whether they refer to humans, animals, objects, or abstractions. So, like in Russian or most(?) other languages with grammatical gender in nouns.

And grammatical gender does not always correspond to natural gender, e.g. το αγόρι "the boy" and το κορίτσι "the girl" are grammatically neuter even though boys and girls are male and female, respectively.

And masculine and feminine genders can apply to non-humans as in ο αέρας "the air" (masculine) or η ζέστη "the heat" (feminine).

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

LeKats 4
Okay, thank you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

Jane-Chan20th 10 6 2

I don't really have anything to add but to say that I've had yet to find a good way to learn proper Greek for so long and because of you I now know how. Ευχαριστο.

1ReplyGive Lingot1•7 months ago

bill276332 10 10 8 6 4

*ευχαριστώ . I am being a dick here but i have to add that all verbs in greek end with ω instead of ο

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

squirrel_d 8 8 5

ο/η/το are the definite article, like "the" in English "την" is one of the numbers of definite feminine article (singular - accusative) The general rules described in Wikipedia (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Modern_Greek_grammar#Articles) or in other sites like (<http://www.foundalis.com/lan/grkgram.htm>)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

karwan7 10

yes i can help you better..and hope to be able of helping. there is a site could help you better <http://langintro.com/greek/grammar/> you can download whole site also this helped me alot..good luck

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jeanprendiville 25 20 15 9

Just wondering, maybe one of your problems is the omission of the indefinite article before occupations eg είναι γιατρός, he is a doctor, but he is a doctor in the hospital, είναι ένας γιατρός στο νοσοκομείο he is a doctor in the hospital or you can leave out the article which changes the meaning a little. But you always include the definite article. Maybe that helps a little.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

UralMasha 13 12 12 10 6

ένα/ενας/μία - are indefinite articles, as "a/an" or numerals "one male/female/smith"; ο/η/το - are definite articles, as "the"; το(ν)/την/το - are definite articles or pronouns in αιτιακή πτώση, when something is acting in relation to something, towards something.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AnnaKanellh 4

Dear, I am a native Greek speaker. The articles ο , η , το are used in many cases. I say: the man=ο άντρας, man's =του άντρα, I love the man=Εγώ αγαπάω τον άντρα.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

annathiakaki 9

O, use for man or male. Η, use for woman or female. το, use for animal and things. But ο ουρανός(The sky) write with ο and not with το. And other words like η βιβλιοθήκη(The library). We have not rule for that. And I learn English from Greek. Can you help me when we use the do, does? Ένας for male. Ένας άντρας, αλλά και ένας κήπος(ο κήπος). Μια γυναίκα But and μια βιβλιοθήκη(library), η βιβλιοθήκη female. Ένα παιδί(το παιδί) child.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LeKats 4

I do, you do, he/she does, we do, you (plural) do, they do.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

eleniathfc 3

"το " when it thinks .."η" when it is woman or the things are like female example " η τηλεοραση "
.....the tv ...it is object but the meaning of that it is τηλε- οραση

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Effie_Kos 20

Hallo! In Greek language, like i.e. in German, Spanish and other languages nouns and adjectives have genders. (masculine/feminine/neuter=αρσενικό/θηλυκό/ουδέτερο). All nouns have a specific gender, but contrary to English, even things (including concrete objects and abstract ideas) can be masculine, feminine, or neuter, and there is no way to predict the gender from the semantics of the noun a point that causes a lot of frustration to learners of Greek. For example, the wall is masculine, the door feminine, and the floor neuter. ο τοίχος / η πόρτα / το πάτωμα. (οριστικό άρθρο) ή για το αόριστο άρθρο ένας τοίχος/μία πόρτα/ ένα πάτωμα So you learn each word together with the gender of it :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kataigida.1962 5

Hi zcgcz2 ...I'll try! ένα - one basket (neuter) ένας -one man (male) μία -one woman (female)

I hope to help youbye bye

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mirant-el-cel 13 11 8 1

Wait what. Greek for English speakers was a course 1 year ago and now it's not? I'm so mad.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

jaye16 25 25 25 13 6 3 2 170

It was the English for Greek speakers that began a year ago and is still here. The Greek for English course is coming out in May 2016.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•1 year ago

mirant-el-cel 13 11 8 1

I'M SO HAPPY!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jane-Chan20th 10 6 2

OMG REALLY?!? THANK THE LORD!

0ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

422 "The hat is purple."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3759575>

Translation: Le chapeau est violet.

02 years ago

Leave a new comment

31 Comments

tigerbread99 6 4

I put "La casquette est violette" and it was refused. My French teacher said you could use chapeau or casquette as you like. Someone help me :)

14ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

daintypegasus 11 3 2 2

La casquette, as I was taught, meant a baseball cap, or a specific type of hat, while chapeau is the more general word for hat. Not completely sure the specifics, but I hope this helps!

13ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

racjkkk 19 13 8 378

Then your teacher is wrong. Not every hat is a cap. Google the difference. You wouldn't call woman's hat a casquette.

1ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

Kelly199 14

Replying to Harry: You do Duolingo and have a French teacher???

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

hma 12 11 10 8 8 4
Same here

-2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

poltomin 16 15 13 10 10 7 7 7 58
I tried "pourpre" (which DuoLingo offers as a translation for purple when hovering) and it was rejected. Is it not a good translation? (Then why is it suggested?) What's the difference between violet and pourpre?

7ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ArdeJohnson 12 11 10
I was about to ask almost the same thing.

Nobody calls any random colored object in an everyday situation "violet" to identify it. You'd say purple. Just like you won't call something a "glaucous" object. You'd say blue-purple-ish. Unless you work in fashion or design. :\

Anyway, wondering if the French just "violet" casually. It'd feel weird for me.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LindaShepherd 9
I just looked this up in my dictionary 'Collins Robert French' It explains that violet is a bluish-purple; pourpre is areddish purple. The lighter colour is 'mauve'! Although I spelled pourpre incorrect and am content to have it marked wrong, I do think there needs to be more flexibility in the marking, or more precision in the question!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

KATEJ15 13 9
I have jolie sounding word on my tablet, with pronunciation slightly out. But nothing like violet!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kelly199 14
That is exactly how it works on my tablet too!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

kevinobrien1000 7 6 5 4
Me too!!!!!!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mac244295 24 19 7 419
Pourpre is perfectly correct Duo!

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SHIKHAR77 8

We can also write, 'le chape au est violette' but they are saying it's wrong...

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Mac244295 24 19 7 419

I work on the basis that Violet (fr) is purple in english. Violette (fr) is Violet but the difference is so minor that I would not mark you wrong. Do any natural French French speakers have a view?

Actually I still prefer pourpre (fr) for purple !

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

krisht96 12 8 3

Why isn't it poupre?

1ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

allandrats 8 5 3 2

I hear "vyoley"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

pastaboy2003 9 2

i know it is just the accent

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Samaychokshi 16

Awesome

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

SumOne1 10 6

Why did my <<mauve>> get rejected?? That's what we say in Montréal, Québec!!!!!! We rarely even use <<violet>> culturally anymore

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Gunasekara9 6

I tried chateau instead of chapeau.! Got a slap..! :P

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

Robert544629 6 3

I put la instead of le and I know its about grammer but still me is pissed

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

yochris1 15 14 6

why is pourpre not an appropriate translation for the word purple, please?

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Carmen_CostaRica 18 17 11 10 10 34

Pourpre should be accepted

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

RobertHopp 8 2

There is no pronunciation of violets and violet is definitely jolli

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DXLi 25 3 1260

Hmm... I definitely hear violet.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gcolle 8

Same for me

0ReplyGive Lingot•10 months ago

girly43 18 8

all it needs is an n then it'll be le chapeau est violent

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

423 Il Est or C'est?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4286849>

DXLi 25 3 1260

One of the most common questions I see from French learners is when you should use forms of il est and when you should use forms of c'est. The topic is confusing enough on its own, and it doesn't help that every French grammar has its own way of dealing with the topic. I'd like to share my method with all of you. It's a little unorthodox (and by no means official), but I found it to be quite easy and reliable.

When describing people and things with être in French, you must choose between two types of subject pronouns: personal (e.g. il) and impersonal (e.g. ce). Ce is invariable, so it doesn't change to agree with anything. There is no ces sont.

Masculine Singular: il est vs. c'est

Feminine Singular: elle est vs. c'est

Masculine Plural: ils sont vs. ce sont

Feminine Plural: elles sont vs. ce sont

The choice here hinges on the subject complement, which is whatever comes after être. If the complement is just made up of adjectives and/or adverbs, then use a form of il est.

Il est très fort. — He is very strong.

Elle est belle. — She is beautiful.

Otherwise, if the complement includes a noun/pronoun, then use a form of c'est. Note that c'est can also mean "this is" or "that is".

C'est un homme. — He's a man. / This is a man. / That is a man.

Ce sont des chats. — They're cats. / These are cats. / Those are cats.

C'est moi ! — It's me!

C'est Monsieur Incroyable ! — It's Mister Incredible!

There's one important quirk here: professions, nationalities, and religions can act as adjectives after être. This is optional; you can choose to treat them as nouns instead.

Il est médecin. — He is a doctor.

C'est un médecin. — He is a doctor. / That's a doctor. / This is a doctor.

There's one very important exception to note: c'est should be used when using an adjective to make a general comment about (but not describe) a thing or situation. In this case, use the masculine singular form of the adjective.

C'est normal ? — Is this normal?

Non, c'est étrange. — No, this is strange.

There are a few rare exceptions to these rules (as well as other nouns that can act as adjectives, like débutant), but I think this is a useful way of looking at this difficult bit of grammar in case the traditional approach doesn't work for you.

Give Lingot18

612 years ago

Leave a new comment

10 Comments

ptoro 14 11 8 4 3

tl;dr When describing nouns in French, use "C'est ..." unless it would be followed by an adjective or adverb ("Il est beau.") someone's profession, nationality, or religion ("Il est médecin.")

In those cases, use the corresponding form of "Il est" (e.g. "il est", "elle est", "ils sont", "elles sont").

18ReplyGive Lingot5•2 years ago

Resonance2001 15 11 10 5

That is good. I also have written an article regarding the matter:

<http://spanishplus.tripod.com/french/ConfusingDifferences.htm#Cestllest>

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AmeyaNJ 17 9 44

Thanks for this explanation. However, the fine folks at about.com, have used a slightly mode of explanation to yours which I've been referring to.

<http://french.about.com/library/weekly/aa032500.htm>

Adjectives - Describing a person -- Il est Describing a situation -- C'est

Adverb - Unmodified (just the adverb)-- Il est Modified (adverb with adjective (?)) -- C'est

Noun - Unmodified (just the noun) -- Il est Modified (like the example DXli has shared for professions) -- C'est

Proper Noun -- always c'est

Stressed Pronoun -- always c'est

Prepositional phrases -- always il est

While it is broadly the same, just wanted to point out that for adverbs DXli recommends a blanket 'Il est' the way I understand whereas it would be depending on whether it is modified/unmodified elsewhere. It's actually quite intuitive and logical once you get the difference, I didn't find myself referring to the rules too often.

2ReplyGive Lingot•7 months ago

xeno78 25 7

This is so helpful! I'm getting fairly proficient in French, and yet the c'est vs il/elle est distinction still confused me. Merci beaucoup, c'est tres utile. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

moogy 25 25 25 25 15 6 68
thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

helenvee 25 25 98

Thank you for that. I'm continually confused by which to use and this makes it clearer.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Owlish_Owl 16 2

Thank you so much! I've not yet encountered this issue, but I sure memorize this!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mateo37Mateusz 10 9 5
Thanks!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Batomouch 25 25 25 25 25 11 10 8 3 2 10
Excellent!! Thanks DXLi :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Yanni_M 13 10 6 5 4

Thank you for the very helpful explanation. Bookmarking for future reference.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

424 Learning 2 languages at the same time

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3602300>

Christine1999 12 10 6

I started with German, when I first came to Duolingo, but I quickly added another course - Italian. My progress in both languages was roughly the same. However, when I was about at level 7 I started realizing, that I'm messing up the two languages. Of course, I just focused more and I was able to overcome this obstacle, but, what do you think, is it better to first learn just one language and keep improving in this one a lot, till you add the second language, or to start two courses at the same time and learn the same things at the same time in both languages? Have you experienced the same problem as me? How did you solve it?

Give Lingot

42 years ago

Leave a new comment

16 Comments

LauraElizabethR 17 12 6

From what I've heard, it's not too difficult if the two languages are very different, like I had a friend in college who was studying both Arabic and French and did well in both. I'm not in the exact situation, but I spent 3 years of college studying Chinese and am trying to refresh my skills while learning German and haven't really had trouble managing the two. It's a little different for me because I already had the foundation of Chinese and German is totally fresh, but the two languages are so different that I don't have trouble switching between the two.

I also think it helps that I use Duolingo to learn German and am using my old textbooks and study materials to study Chinese. I have to set up my materials differently to study each so it's like I'm in different zones when I work on each language. Since you're using Duolingo for both you might be able to keep them separate by changing your learning environment for each. You could try studying one in one location and one in another, or maybe something as minor as taking notes for one language in one color ink and the other language in another color. I'm no expert so these are just suggestions and results are not guaranteed!

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Christine1999 12 10 6

interesting tips, thanks :). yes, i agree, maybe it's really true, that if i'd learn languages that are totally different, i wouldn't mess them up at all. i'll try out some of your advices :).

-1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

haleylou95 8

I have not been doing Duolingo that long and have no background in these languages but decided that I wanted to learn both French and Spanish. I started with the French tree and then tried to do a bit from the Spanish and struggled a lot because of the differences. I decided that French is the language that I want to learn the most and is the one that I want to put my time and effort into. I think when I am more comfortable with French I will probably go back to Spanish and try and learn it again!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

I reply to such a post very often with this video. It will help you. This guy is pretty famous for speaking more than 10 languages at a very high level. Give it a shot.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Christine1999 12 10 6

Thanks for sharing this with me. Actually, it gave me a lot of refreshing ideas. Definitely helped a lot :). Especially the theory that the two chosen languages should be different from each other and one should be easier than another, plus the time managing theory (difficult - 80%, easier - 20%). I've never heard about this guy before but I'll definitely watch more of his videos.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MultiLinguAlex 25 15 12 12 10 5 2 2 2

He definitely knows what he's talking about. The 80%-20% is called Pareto principle; Luca just applied it to learning languages and that's key indeed ;-)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SongbirdSandra 18

Ah ! Mon polyglotte favori. J'aime Luca. ;-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TravisNgenious 15 9 9 6 5

I've been learning German and I've tried to learn some French between my German lessons but every time I get an English phrase to translate into French I instinctively think of and start writing down the German translation. I have to consciously rummage around my brain for the French translation. So, I decided to concentrate on just German because of that and the fact there are lots of little things (different articles for cases, case-dependent endings, etc.) I need to remember and work on.

Some people may be able to work well on more than one language at once, but I can't.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Christine1999 12 10 6

I see. I was also thinking about stopping learning Italian to concentrate on German, but then decided that I have to manage both! I was a little bit angry and I think it helped me to move on:). You can maybe give French one more chance after finishing the German tree, can't you?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TravisNgenious 15 9 9 6 5

Yeah, I'll probably move on to French or maybe Dutch once I complete the German tree. Dutch and German share similar styles so I may move to that first before French, but I'll see how it goes.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

spacewaygerard 3

when I first started I learnt Italian, well, then, I began learning German, such as you, so I just stuck with the one I enjoyed learning the most and that one was German. So just stick with one and then return to the other later . I suggest to continue learning the one you have done the most of :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tomista 20 3

It's easier for me if I wait until I've progressed a bit in one language before adding another.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

IlyaDovzhanska 4

When you first begin learning languages, I wouldn't recommend learning ones that are too similar. When I was about sixteen or so, I began learning Greek, and a little more than a month later, I began learning Romanian. Since the two have different alphabets, it's hard to confuse them. If you can't learn two at once, then don't push yourself. It might help to memorize the articles along with the nouns you learn, so you won't mix them up. With verbs, it shouldn't be hard, as German verbs end in "e" in their first person singular forms, while Italian verbs end in "o".

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Maddie259041 8 3

I can't figure out how to learn another language. Is there steps or some buttons I have to click? Can someone please help me? Thanks!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ReidHT 25 15 8 7 6 5 2

Personally, I think people should have first and second languages. What I mean is you should work on the language you came here for, mine being French, and then after getting to level 4 or so you should begin your second language, mine being Spanish. That's just my opinion, but I'm sure there are lots of different ways to do it.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

LICA98 25 25 20 18 12 11 11 11 11 8 6 6 6 5 5 5 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 8

I haven't had that problem but I usually do only one language at once because I don't have enough time for the second one.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

425 Basic French greetings & expressions

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/2618775>

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

"Bonjour" can be said at any hour if you meet someone for the first time in the day, but if it's late, it's very weird to say "bonjour" as the "jour" (the day) is ending, you would say rather "bonsoir" (good evening). If you say "Bonjour" to someone and it's already the start of the evening, people will reply "Bonsoir" and you'll have to say: "oh, yes, sorry, "bonsoir" because it's already the evening now." (Oui, c'est vrai, bonsoir, c'est déjà le soir, maintenant...)

You never use "Bonjour" when you take leave of someone.

"Bonjour" can be also "good morning" in the morning.

"Bonne nuit" is "good night". It's the greeting we say before going to bed, (or you can say it when you take leave of someone in the night)

"Bonsoir" is "good evening", so you say it in the evening. And you also can say it when you leave of someone in the evening. You can say it also when you meet someone in the evening instead of "bonjour". (since "bonjour" is weird when it's late)

"Bon après-midi!" (sometimes spelled "bonne") is "good afternoon", you can say it when you take leave of someone in the after-noon.

For instance: I go to my grocery store, and I met the sales assistant, I say: Bonjour/Bonsoir I buy my groceries, and when I take leave of him, I say: Au revoir/ Bon après-midi/Bonsoir/Bonne nuit.

"Salut": (very informal, you can't say it to your boss, but only to friends) = Hello/Hi
How are you?

Note: It's idiomatic, you can't use the verb "to be" (être) in French to say that, you have to use the verb "to go" (aller), a irregular verb (Je vais, tu vas, nous allons, etc...)

Formal form: Comment vas-tu? (comment allez-vous?)

Less formal form: Comment tu vas? (comment vous allez?)

Even less formal form: ça va bien? / ça va?

Answers:

Formal form: Je vais bien. (Nous allons bien, for a group)

Less formal form: ça va bien/ ça va.

Slang greetings

Quoi de neuf? (litteraly: what is new?) = What's up?

Here the famous "What's up doc?" in French: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=eljJZ9mvi9w>
(Quoi de neuf docteur?)

The joke is to reply "Que du vieux". (Nothing's new, all is old)

Quoi de beau? (litteraly: what is beautiful?) = What's up?
Salut

"Salut" is very informal, you can't say it with your boss for example, you use it when it's too formal to say "bonjour".

For instance, you meet some close friends, you are a students, and you meet some other young students, etc...

"Salut" means:

"Hello/Hi" when you meet someone. It's the first word you say when meeting the person. It's the last word you say in this case. For instance:

-Salut! Comment vas-tu?

"Bye!" ("Salut" is less formal than "goodbye"), when you are taking leave of someone.

-Désolé, je dois partir maintenant... Salut! (Sorry, I have to leave now... Bye!)

Please note that:

There's only one word for "Salut", unlike English with "Hello, hi, hey", etc...

Salut is not used for "cheers" or anything else, it's only "hello" and "bye".

Cheers

When someone is sneezing, you will say in French, one of the following:

A tes souhaits (= Make a wish)

A tes amours (= I wish you good love relationships)

Dieu te bénisse (= God bless you)

When you drink with some friends you would say, while clinking your glass with the other person's glass:

Santé! / A ta santé! (=I wish you a good health)

Tchin' or even Tchin'-Tchin' (I don't know how to write "tchin' " because it's only an interjection, not a word)

(<http://static.canalblog.com/storagev1/jboehler.canalblog.com/images/trinquer9fu.gif>)

(<http://nathou.n.a.pic.centerblog.net/nxs5rkao.gif>)

(<http://centerloup.c.e.pic.centerblog.net/b32f287e.gif>)

Pardon/ Excusez-moi

Remember, the English "Pardon" is a French word, so, you already know the meaning.

"Pardon" is the noun from the verb "pardonner" (to forgive)

When you mean to say "Sorry", you say "Pardon!", it's used when you bump into someone for instance or if you have to make a passage through a crowd, etc...

You can use also "Pardonnez-moi" (see the conjugations table for the verb "pardonner" to adapt to the person), but it's much more formal, and can be used when you cut off when someone is talking, or if you made a wrong thing to ask for forgiveness.

Examples: -Pardonnez-moi, mais vous avez dit "100 €"? (Sorry, but you said "€100" ? (when cutting off someone)

-Pardon, je voudrais passer s'il vous plaît. (Excuse-me, I have to pass please)

"Excusez-moi" (see the conjugation table for the verb "excuser"), it "excuse me", the English "excuse" is also from the French. <http://www.etymonline.com/index.php?term=excuse>

You use "Excusez-moi" also to cut off someone who is speaking, but it's less formal.

You use "Excusez-moi" when you want to ask a favour, or ask a question the polite way.

You use "Excusez-moi" (or the more formal "Pardonnez-moi") when you want to call someone's attention.

Examples: -Excusez-moi, vous avez dit "100€"?

-Excusez-moi, pouvez-vous fermer la fenêtre s'il vous plaît? (Excuse-me, can you close the window please.)

-Excusez-moi, avez-vous un train pour Paris? (Excuse me, do you have a train to Paris?)

Je suis désolé(e)/ Je suis navré(e).

The English "desolate" and "desolation" are from the French).

"Je suis désolé" means "I'm sorry"/"I feel sorry". It's stronger than "pardon" or "excusez-moi", it means you are really sorry.

If you're a male: Je suis désolé.

If you're a female: Je suis désolée. (because "désolé" is an adjective)

Used when you feel sorry for something. If you bump someone really hard for instance, or if someone had a very bad experience and you feel sorry for the person.

You can say "Je suis vraiment désolé" = I'm really sorry.

"Très" désolé is not proper at all, the adverb has to be "really" not "très". (really = vraiment, très = very)

You can say also the short "désolé(e)!" = In this case, it's not so strong, and you can say it instead of "pardon!", it's a bit stronger and it's more formal than "pardon".

"Je suis navré (e)" / Navré (e) Same thing than for "désolé", but "navré" is stronger and more formal.

You bumped someone really really hard: Navré! But it's very formal, and can be weird in some situations.

"Je suis navré" is very formal, and is a strong regret.

I beg you pardon, but... = Je vous demande pardon, mais.... To ask a favor.

Je vous demande pardon?? = Is used to ask the person to repeat again what he/she was just saying. In you say it in an offended tone, it can be a mean to show your strong desaproval about an offending word the person just said.

Examples:

-Je vous demande pardon, mais pourriez-vous vous taire? (I beg you pardon but can you be quiet?)
- Je vous demande pardon !!! Vous avez dit "idiot"?? (I beg you pardon!!! Did you said "an idiot"?) -
Pardon/Excusez-moi, pouvez-vous répéter? (Excuse me, can you repeat)

Some people aso use "hein?" when they didn't hear what you said, or when they want to show incredulity/disaproval, but it's slang, the correct and very formal form is "Pardon?"

Give Lingot22

1012 years ago

Leave a new comment

57 Comments

lpybus 17 9 5

You should add some more slangy ones like: Quoi de neuf ? Quoi de beau ? (What's new? What's up?) You feel very lame saying "ça va ?" and "comment allez vous ?" all the time as a French newbie.

Also, parting greetings! I think a lot of us anglophones get caught up on that. Salut can also mean "bye," of course. Bonne journée and bonne soirée are more often said at parting, I think.

19ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

You're right, I will try to add some.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Soupcatcher_Ogre 25 18

Coucou for hello. Something kids might say.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

susanstory 20 17 13 11 10 10 9 9 8 8 5 4 3 3 3 553

My penpal always writes "Coucou, c'est Mireille" in the subject heading in her emails. Google translates it as "Cuckoo" but I didn't think she was calling me "Cuckoo". I wasn't sure what it meant.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Victor_Jay 10 7 6

the thing is that it basically comes from the old traditionnal european clock and it became then an expression to get the attention and due to it, to cheers and salutate people that you generally know pretty well.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Very good idea!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SuperSwipe 22 21 16 13 11 10 9 5 5 4 2

You can also shorten good afternoon when talking by simply saying "bon aprem' "

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

updated

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Updated: I added the section on "salut" and the sneezing greetings.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Joeyshare 14 11 10 10 9 4 3 2 2 2

Thanks a lot for the clarification! Very helpful.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mundusfr 25 25 18

I am jealous ! I would like the same kind of explanation in English...

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TomHilton1 25 20 14 6 446

Well, let's see if I can help you out with American English...

In-person greetings:

--"Hello" is pretty common, but it has a lot of syllables, so it usually gets shortened to "hi".

--"Good morning" actually means good morning; "good afternoon" means good afternoon; and "good evening" means good evening. "Good night", however, means goodbye (but only at night; if you say "good night" in the morning, people will think you have no idea what time it is).

--Because "good morning" isn't used throughout the day (unlike "bonjour"), you need to pay attention to the clock if you want to say this. If you're close to noon and unsure whether you're before or after, best avoid "good morning" or "good afternoon" and instead say "hello" (or "hi", which takes less effort), so people don't think you have no idea what time it is.

--After the initial greeting, people often say "how's it going?" or "how are you doing?" NOTE: they do not actually want to know how it's going, or how you're doing (see exception below). This is just a polite phrase, not an informational question, and if you actually tell them how you are they will start to squirm with boredom. Best answer with something completely non-substantive that shows you heard the question but understand that they don't want an answer. "Fine" usually works.

--Conversely, when you ask someone how they're doing, don't be offended when they give you a single-word answer.

--Sometimes, however, people do genuinely want to know how you're doing, and will be offended if you say "fine". There is no way of knowing when this is the case. However you answer, you risk offending someone who wants to know or boring someone who doesn't.

Telephone etiquette:

--"Hello" is generally acceptable for answering the phone.

--In the office, one might answer with one's name and/or place of business.

--Caller ID has changed phone etiquette somewhat. If you see it's someone you know, you can just launch into a conversation with them without the formality of a greeting. If you want to be especially polite, you can open with something like "[name]! I was just thinking of calling you!" They will appreciate that you went to the trouble of lying.

--If you see from the caller ID that it's a telemarketer, the polite way to answer the phone is "STOP CALLING ME!" There are less polite ways to answer, but I won't go into them here.

Hope this helps. ;-)

15ReplyGive Lingot3•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Thanks, very useful. You should do a discussion, it would be helpful to have it on its own page for people who want to learn English, and are not interested in French.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mundusfr 25 25 18

Thanks a lot, TomHilton1. If you have others expressions, don't hesitate to post them. Je suis preneur.

Here are useful for me...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

asereti 15 12 7 2

Wow, that's not a flattering description of us at all. Unfortunately it does prove to be true in a lot of situations but what people seem to forget is that America, like most (or ALL) countries, is made up of people, and not all people are the same. But, your description was somewhat amusing, regardless of its unfairness lol

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TomHilton1 25 20 14 6 446

It was somewhat tongue-in-cheek, not meant to be taken as absolute universal truth. Anyway, glad you were amused.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bethanw10 12

Is 'T'chin-t'chin' used because it's the sound that the glasses make when clinked together? I think I've heard people in England say 'chin chin!' before doing it as well, although not very often

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KimSCasey 22 3

-Je vous demande pardon, mais pourriez-vous vous taire? (I beg your pardon but can you be quiet?)
My question: : I cut and pasted this to a translator, and the translation was: I beg your pardon but could you SHUT UP" (MY EMPHASIS) When I typed in "I beg your pardon, but could you be quiet?" They translated it as "Je vous demande pardon, mais pourriez-vous être tranquille?" In English to tell someone to "shut up" is pretty out there. You save that phrase for the second or third time you've asked for quiet. Is there the same idea about "shut up" in French?

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Julka95 10

I study French and to me 'se taire' sounds rude, something in between 'be quiet' and 'shut up'... It's less rude than shut up, but certainly you shouldn't use it if you want to ask someone POLITELY to be quiet.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

TomHilton1 25 20 14 6 446

Very helpful! Thanks for posting this.

I'm wondering about phone etiquette in France. If someone calls you, what would be the standard thing to say when you pick up the phone (formal and less formal)? If you call someone else, what's the standard way to open the conversation? Are the usual in-person greetings carried over to telephone usage, or is it different?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

It's always "allô". Some very impolite people (like me ^^) considers it means also "hello" and don't start the conversation with "allô, bonjour" (except if I'm in a formal situation where I have to be very polite ^^)

Formal: "Allô! Bonjour.... Je suis monsieur.X. Puis-je parler à monsieur Y s'il vous plaît?

Unformal: "Allô: Je suis X..., je voudrais parler à Y (s'il vous plaît).

If you are called, you also say "Allô???"

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1161

I once heard that saying Bonjour late in the evening turns it into a pick up line. Do you agree? Or is it a different kind of "very weird"? :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2

"Pick up" line = drague? No, it's just not the right time, you can say it, but people will reply "bonsoir", and you will say "ah, oui, pardon, bonsoir, c'est déjà le soir".

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

annika_a 19 17 17 16 11 11 5 2 2 2 1161

Ah OK, thanks :-) Pick up line = chat up line = something silly to say to make someone you are interested in interested in you.

Maybe the person who told me this was just using really weird flirting techniques! :-D

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mundusfr 25 25 18

Sinon, j'ai besoin d'avoir une confirmation pour une expression française, enfin on peut dire ça. Vous avez tous déjà entendu ces deux mots là A table. Quand on vous invite à vous mettre à table pour un repas, quelque soit le repas, d'ailleurs...

Avez-vous la même expression en Anglais ? Pour rigoler, je dis parfois To table ! (Lol) Mais je sais que ce n'est pas correct. Et d'ailleurs, j'ai fait la recherche récemment sur le net concernant ce sujet, apparemment, la langue anglaise n'a pas cette expression, on est obligé de dire : Breakfast is ready, Lunch is ready or Dinner is ready. Alors j'ai raison ou pas ?

D'avance merci.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PeterWindatt 25 12 787

For food being served I might add some variations on the theme:- "food's up" or "grub's up" ("grub" is a not very nice slang word for food - you might find it used in pubs that don't really do proper food but advertise what they sell as "Pub Grub". Other phrases used in our family for when food is served include:- "it's on the table" / "come and get it" / "food's going cold" (used as a pun if ice-cream). It might still take my (now adult) children a few minutes to arrive.

1ReplyGive Lingot•12 months ago

BillofKempsey 25 16 15 14 10 6 2 2 510

Let's eat! (Very informal.)

Otherwise, I don't think there is a common idiom for this in (British) English.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mundusfr 25 25 18

Thanks. It confirms well my research on the internet. And what's about Au lit ? When the parents say to their children to go to bed. Can we say To bed, the children ? :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BillofKempsey 25 16 15 14 10 6 2 2 510

"Go to bed, children" or, in a very loud voice, "BED, KIDS!"

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Mundusfr 25 25 18

Well, I love the short terms. So it will be Bed, kids ! For me. :)

Merci BillofKempsey. Dès que j'ai d'autres questions, je reviendrai vers vous, si cela ne vous dérange pas.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

BillofKempsey 25 16 15 14 10 6 2 2 510

Pas de probleme.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

34Benbow 14 6 4 2 2

Thank you! This is really useful! I have always wondered what 'à tes souhaits' meant because my French teacher told us to use it when someone is sneezing instead of 'bless you'. However, she didn't tell us how it was spelt or what it meant so I just thought it was spelt similar to 'atishoo' or something like that like 'atissuet' and that it was just a word to say to sort of acknowledge someone's sneeze (-D) because we don't say 'atishoo' we just say 'bless you' and 'atishoo' was just the sound of the sneeze like onomatopoeia. It was interesting to find out that it actually meant something similar to 'bless you' ('make a wish') and that the word 'atishoo' probably came from the French (unless someone just heard someone sneezing, thought it sounded like 'atishoo' and then realised that it sounded like 'à tes souhaits' and it stuck! Although the first theory seems more likely). Thanks again! A lingot for you!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Thanks, I didn't know atishoo. The funny thing is that is midway between "à tes souhaits" and the onomatopoeia we say in French for a sneezing, "atchoum!"

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

34Benbow 14 6 4 2 2

Really? I didn't know that 'atchoum' was the sound of a sneeze in French. Just wondering, do we really make an 'm' sound at the end of a sneeze? But then again do we even say 'atishoo'?! A sneeze doesn't really have a word - it is just a sort of explosion, isn't it! I don't know why we give these sort of sounds words.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

The mystery of onomatopoeia, lol, why a French rooster make "cocorico!" rather than "cock-a-doodle-does".

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

34Benbow 14 6 4 2 2

(Sorry, only just seen your reply because I haven't been on Duo for a few days!) It is amazing how different the onomatopoeia words are in different languages and how they sound really quite different to each other (and also to the actual sound that they depict)! However, about the rooster sound, I think that the English one sounds more like the rooster call than 'cocorico' because the sound has five syllables like 'cock a doodle doo' and 'cocorico' only has four, so the French one should be extended to something like 'cocoricodoo'! Going back to my point about how the onomatopoeia words that we use sound nothing like the real sound, an example would be (although it is not exactly onomatopoeia because humans made it up and it is not a sound that we heard and tried to make ourselves) 'awww', when typing it out instead of saying it, to be the sound some people make when we see/hear something cute. It should be more like 'arrgh' but I think people would look at it and think of it as a sound someone makes when they are charging forward or something! It's not a very good example, I know, but I think it is weird. Are there any other examples of French and English onomatopoeia sounding different? (P.S. sorry for writing such a long passage to read!) ;D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

It depends the length of the syllables, you can imagine the sound "cocoriii-co" here:

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=p0_TCmvvDQ4

When French people see something cute, I think the sound is "Ooooooh".

For the difference between onomatopoeias: I think almost all are different in English and in French, and all the animals sound too.

Cui- Cui (fr) / Piou-Piou (en) - a bird

Ouah Ouah (fr) / Wouarf (en) - .a dog

bêêê - a goat or a sheep

hiiiiii han - a donkey

hiiiiii - a horse

sss - a snake

Meuh -a cow

Crac - a tree branch cracking

Miam Miam (fr) / Yum Yum (en) - I see a yummy cake.

Miaou (fr) / Miaow (en) - a cat Cocorico / cock-a-doodle-doo Aïe! (fr) /Ouch! (en) - it hurts. Chut (chuuut) (fr) / Shhhhh (en) - Be quiet! Beurk (fr) / Yuk - degusting! Pouah (fr) / Ugh - degusting!

2Give Lingot•2 years ago

34Benbow 14 6 4 2 2

Thanks PERCE_NEIGE! Yeah it actually does sound more like cocorico when you listen to that rooster in the video! It's interesting all those onomatopoeia words. Thanks for sharing them with me!

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

S3r3nnnnn 8

I agree too, this is useful!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ericp20 7

that's nice, I made a graphic to remember these rules at <http://www.frenchspanishonline.com/magazine/hello-in-french/> you may like it!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

xaug31

merci

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LaurelH799 9

This is great!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Djtoy 3

yes but some times you would say salut to some one

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

Yes, "salut" is in the list.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Carissa.N 11 7 7 6 5 4 3 3

How do you say "I feel sick" in French?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PERCE_NEIGE 22 19 13 9 8 6 4 4 3 2 2 2 2 2 2

"Je me sens mal." (se sentir = to feel, literally it's I feel myself ill/bad.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Carissa.N 11 7 7 6 5 4 3 3

Oh thank you! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lukman.A 20 20 15 14 6

[QUESTION]

Is "Je me sens malade" also correct?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

A51f 12

Cool! Looks very helpful!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LaraLoureiro 10 2

Merci! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Mundusfr 25 25 18

Now, I am also intrested in your courses.

Thank you PN.:~)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mlleanastasia 10 6

Is hello informal? Why not to write just hi as a translation of salute, except hi/hello. Confuses a bit...

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ana.Rae 14 7

YES. I've been looking for this! Merci Beaucoup.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KimSCasey 22 3

(under slang greetings) "Quoi de neuf? (litteraly: what is new?) = What's up?" that would be spelled L-I-T-E-R-A-L-L-Y..... (I am embarrassed to admit how nice it is to correct you for once :))

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lismart 25 25 25 25 936

Merci beaucoup!

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

kate13400 8

what is we call you i chose a answer from here and it was wrong

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

AmazingApples 7 4 4

does any one know how i can fix this?...when ever i go into my learning thing for french (like one of the quizzes that help you learn i have sound until i get about halfway into the questions and it is really getting on my nerves because i need to be able to hear what they are saying when there is suppose to be just audio on the question and the audio says something in french and i am supposed to type what i hear in french...but i cant hear it so i end up losing a heart...there are alot of those

And it was! lol. It makes you think. Anyway after all the months I've been on here I've got so used to it that I have to say I am now very fond of our 'Italian Lady' lol :)

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Chachinero 10

Yes, I agree totally. You do get used it, and it does force you get those brain cells working :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Melaninja 12 11 10 10 9 3 3 2

I was also horrified by the Italian voice but got used to it... lol

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

maffia 7 5 3 3 3

Yeah its hard for my to understand what she s saying, and thats because of that creepy voice

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nikkits 13 11 3

personally, i think the pronunciations are fine.. some things are a little hard to comprehend but over all it gets the words across.. with the regular and slow versions, i really can't ask for anything more!

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EsperanzaM38 24 22 10

I listen to "the machine" several times until I figure it out. After several lessons, you can understand it easily. I recommend you to be patient.

6ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

007woofwoof 25 7 21

I concur.....I disliked her voice so much that I switched to French, as much as I love Italy. During my travels in Italy, I found the Italians so easy and hospitable....with or without knowledge of their language. The French are so responsive and helpful when I speak to them with my caveman French. My next travels will take me to France thanks to Duo.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

horsecrazedgirl 5 4

I agree it is always so frustrating when she says un. I always put it as una and then get it wrong. :(

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pmm123 25 25 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 13 12 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 1115

I agree that it is not as good as the voices in the other languages. To my ears, Spanish and German have the best voices, French is next, then Portuguese, and Italian is at the bottom. But I'm still sticking with it. It only really interferes when you have to type what she says, and even then, only if you have to listen to the slow version.

Otherwise just focus on the written words.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LisaPopp 25 25 25 12 8

I don't think the voice is that bad. The slow version is very chopped, but the normal speed is quite merciful for Italian, and it sounds all right to me. The recording quality isn't the best, but other than that she doesn't sound different compared to what I usually hear in Italy.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MarioColombo 4

I can confirm that she speaks horrible Italian. This is just unacceptable and the main reason why I left the course.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RebeccaNYC 16

I also left the course because of this speaker. Dreadful

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Awesum_Domo 22 7 7

I think you can have her not speak go to settings and its maybe one of those not sure...

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

aaronwoolley 25 7 3

i personally think it is a good challenge. i have found through my travels, that every region in Italy has it's own dialect and accent and therefore it never sounds the same. Unless you are fortunate to only converse with Italian speakers that sound one way, then it probably sets the right expectations :-)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Velabro 24 5 5 5

I agree, I've lived in Calabria, Rome and Florence and I have very good friends from Modena and Torino. There is a wide range of accents, dialects, slang, etc. Much more so than English in North America or the UK.

Besides, "she" is a computer, free, and no creepier than Siri

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

charity.whitney 18 1

It always makes me laugh when she says "Burro," because she sounds shocked! I guess butter must be very surprising in Italy.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

esperanzaninja 20 12 10 3

she sounds sort of creepy, too :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pmm123 25 25 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 13 12 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 1115

LOL yes she does, I think it's the heavy breathing.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

only_human 22 22 21 14 12 11 9 8 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 6 6 4 2 2 31

I agree. Breathing sounds are supposed to make computer speech sound more natural but I took an instant dislike to them.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ikamjh 22 16 10 5

Yeah the italian voice isnt that good.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tliarch 23 23 23 22 12 10 4 3

I totally agree, Sarah. I know many italian speakers, and while they speak much faster, they are actually much easier to understand than is our "sweet italian speaking girl" on DUO. I also find it difficult to discern when she says 'ho una gonna', or similar. I'd love a chance to hear a different woman, or maybe un uomo? Good post.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

CatherinGregory 25 17 16 6 5 1153

When I get really stuck, or just because our italian voice is unhelpful, I paste my closest guess into google translate, then click the "hear it" button. Having two voices saying the same thing is really helpful.

4ReplyGive Lingot2•2 years ago

tliarch 23 23 23 22 12 10 4 3

Great tip, CatherinGregory!!! Thanks. I'm going to try that tonite. Gave you a lingot for it too!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

only_human 22 22 21 14 12 11 9 8 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 6 6 4 2 2 31

That's a good point. The "hear it" button on Google Translate is really good. When I've been unsure between a couple of pronouns or prepositions, I've put put both of them side-by-side into Google Translate to listen to the differences via the "hear it" button.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

wj677 25 18 5 1121

I am doing French and the voice is not great there so I have just turned the voice exercises off and only do the writing exercises, and use different sources with natural speakers for aural learning. Could you not do the same?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

only_human 22 22 21 14 12 11 9 8 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 6 6 4 2 2 31

I think that might not be such a good idea. In my opinion the voice exercises are one of the best things that Duolingo has going for it. Using more modes of communication in closely related time (listening, speaking, reading, writing) really engages the brain and also helps avoid the trap of learning words with sounds that resemble what the letters might suggest in our native languages. Straining to understand a spoken phrase and having to reply sensibly is a reasonable approximation to learning with normal communication activities.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nicoladc89 8

I'm Italian and I assure you that the voice is really bad and - sometimes - difficult to understand.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

falena32 17 1

The irony is that probably the best computer voices are produced by an Italian company Loquendo (see the wiki) which was bought out by Nuance a couple of years ago. You can buy these voices at Nextup.com with a product like Textaloud at a fairly reasonable price. There are 6 Italian voices which you can listen to on the site. I wish they would use one of those voices! Disclaimer - I am not associated with any of those companies

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Nitram. 25 16 16 11 6 6 5 2

Try the French one! That's even better! Le singe, l'oeuf, these are her favourite words to say... :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Awesum_Domo 22 7 7

Haha

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

shilpi_clp 6 3 2

i thought i am going good with italian... :(

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PopTartTastic 9 9 7 7 6 6 5 4

I've had the same problem, actually. At times, she sounded like she was crying. I honestly feel like the Portuguese voice is the best one, and if they could get her to do the rest, I'd be happy. And may I ask why all the voices are women? I don't mind, but I'm just curious.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

only_human 22 22 21 14 12 11 9 8 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 6 6 4 2 2 31

I tend to prefer women's voices on the computer and feel that my comprehension is better with them but I think the reason they use them might be for better reproduction on cheap tinny speakers.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SteveLando 22 18 17 16 14 12 11 10 10 9 9 8 8 8 8 7 6 6 6 5 5 3 1

there are some minor problems, like the nice è which sounds like she has an minor orgasm, or that she pronounces 'una' when it should be 'un', et cetera, but overall it's a good pronunciation

/ italian

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

pmm123 25 25 25 25 25 22 18 17 15 13 12 11 9 7 6 5 3 3 2 1115

LOL @ minor orgasm, now I'll have that in my mind when I hear her!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Lisiamc 25

She does have a few quirks, doesn't she? It took me a little while to figure out that "on-yah-mi" is ogni! Oh well, it's good for extra practice when I don't hear her correctly.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TomDiDove 20 6 3 1

Voglio sposare.... :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

EveAdelle 16 8 8 8 7 4 3 2

The Italian voice sounds very quiet it to me and I cannot understand what she is saying.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

adtse 20 20 17 15 14 11 9 3

The problem is clarity: even with the volume cranked up, I sometimes still fail to identify a word on the basis of sound. Sure, if I consider all the possible words, I suppose I could guess. but it is tough when I am trying to learn seven languages concurrently. I have the impression that the voice is mumbling. I have no difficulty with any other voices for the six other languages that I'm learning.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Jobie4 23 2 5

I wonder why they don't use real people to say things.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

427 Difference between et and est?

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/3233895>

Artkleno

Give Lingot

32 years ago

Leave a new comment

5 Comments

[deactivated user]

"Et" is the French word for "and". E.g. Ma chemise et mes gants (My shirt and my gloves)

"Est" is a form of the verb "Être" (to be). "Est" is used for the third person singular (i.e. il/elle/on (he/she/one)). E.g. Il est mon ami (He is my friend)

They both sound pretty similar, so for listening exercises, context is your best bet!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MrsBaggins 6
et-and est-is

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Eddie_Sammon 18 5 4 4 4 4 2 2 2 2 2 2

Et means "and" and "Est" means "is", but not after "tu" when you would use "es" instead.

I'm only a beginner, click on the explanations or descriptions when you come up with a new word.
Or just click on them anytime.

Good luck.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TheGandalf 23 8 6 5 5 5 4 4 4 2 2

Well "et" means "and", and "est" means "is". Fun fact, these are exactly the same as the Latin equivalents, except for pronunciation (but that's hard to measure anyway).

Pronunciation can vary, but I think "et" is usually pronounced "e", and "est" is usually pronounced "et". But I'm no expert on French, so I may be wrong.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Artkleno
Merci, everyone. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

428 "The horses drink milk."

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/181360>

Translation: Los caballos beben leche.

14 years ago

Leave a new comment

43 Comments

scadwyn 12 10 10 8 7 7 6 6 4 2 2 2

Why do all the animals, including some non-mammals, in Duolingo Spanishland drink milk?

16ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

JessicaBeasley1 8

Horses do drink milk as foals so this sentence is kind of true.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PokingFun4Life 9

weird horse

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

iinigo 6 3

The diet of Spanish animals sure is amazing

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Kergelepke 12

can we say 'las caballas'? There is 'gato' and 'gata', 'perro' and 'perra' if I understand it right.

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

rocko2012 25 7 3 1457

It seems to mean "the mackerels"(fish).

3ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

rspreng 24

yep -- it does not work for all animals "Tortuga" is one. Horse-wise, a mare is "la yegua"

2ReplyGive Lingot•4 years ago

[+] 1 hidden comment

daniel.mun 17

The female horse is yegua. It is an exception, like gallo and gallina

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Black_Panther 21 11 6 3 2 509

No, it would be incorrect, since there is a different word for a female horse in Spanish.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Taly__ 6

No. I don't get it either

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

rmaranda 8 3 2

Can it be "los caballos beben la leche"?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Santi_Minstrel 10 9

Not exactly. Spanish and English share the different meanings that the articles provide:

The horses drink the milk

The horses drink milk

Those have different meaning, and all this is shared in Spanish as well.

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

AnkitSpanish 11

To add on to your point:

"The horses drink the milk" would usually mean a specific type of milk whereas "The horses drink milk" would mean milk in general

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

learner555 7

Thanks, that cleared thing up for me immensely! :))

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

lilykate 6

I thought it could be 'la leche'. They skipped the article entirely. Why?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Santi_Minstrel 10 9

Because the English sentence also does. The difference in meaning is kept as well in Spanish

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

fatima-1 6

After 6 elephants finaly a horse comes thank god

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1136

Mi pingüino no bebe cerveza. :-P

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

damariej 9

Funny... mine does

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

FLchick 25 19 13 9 5 3 2 441
Yeah they do, when they are bebés.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

18jvilches 9 4
I spelled caballos cabellos shouldn't it have been right? on the other times I misspell words a little I still get them right.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1136
Caballo is horse.
Cebolla is onion.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Santi_Minstrel 10 9
Cabellos in fact means the hair on top of your head (unless you are bald)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Rae.F 12 12 11 11 11 10 8 7 5 4 4 4 2 2 1136
Today I learned! :)

Now I just need to construct a Spanish sentence about a hairy horse eating an onion. :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

DongjeLee 15 7 5 3 3
Un caballo tiene cabello y come una cebolla.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OmaJennie 11 10 9
Muy bien!

0Give Lingot•9 months ago

18jvilches 9 4
Thank you!

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jagherx 5
whats with the milk

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

JourneyCharish 8 2

that is just not fair i just spelled caballos wrong it is should correct you on that

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Fred5107 6

What happened to typo? Cabellos oops!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

1045874550 17

MIERDA DICE "bebe" no bebe"S"

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

SPACESHIIIIIPS 8

what kind of horse drinks milk?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DongjeLee 15 7 5 3 3

The kind of horse that is a mammal :))

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kimlewis13 20 3

One that likes milk! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

layla.sant1 5

I didnt know any turtles drink milk or drink anything

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

OmaJennie 11 10 9

Yup. Both.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

LAbbeyW 11 5 5

los caballos comen las cebollas

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

LAbbeyW 11 5 5

why are onion and horse so similar? i keep getting it wrong in the 'stengthen all your skills' bit. :(

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

QunT.Nguyn 10 8

Los caballos beben niña. How creepy :s

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DerekEllis 8

why is do you omit the la in front of milk?

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

OmaJennie 11 10 9

Yes; why? Especially after all of the previous discussion (a different exercise) about adding in the definite article even when it isn't in the English sentence to be translated.

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

AUenToad 10

Why is this is the past-tense lessons? There aren't any words in this sentence that are relevant to the lesson.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

429 " They eat off the plates. "

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/743437>

Translation: Ils mangent dans les assiettes.

03 years ago

Leave a new comment

30 Comments

molekebrasil 10

they eat IN THE plate = "ils mangent dans l'assiette". Ce n'est pas comme ça??!

22ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

Louvarun 6

"eat off" est une expression pour dire "dans"? Quelqu'un connait il la règle qui s'applique ici?

9ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2

le verbe "to eat off" veut dire "manger dans".

44ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

Patriotpreacher 25 25 14 5

Merci. C'est troublant comme formule mais les verbes avec prépositions sont en fait à apprendre par coeur. Hop, un de plus sur la liste ! ;)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Eniavllys 25 25 17 3 3 3

Et oui, c'est difficile de chasser le réflexe de tenter des traductions de "mot à mot". Merci de ta compétence.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

KTM2007 11

J'ai écrit "Ils mangent dans des assiettes" et Duo me l'a compté pour faux. Quelqu'un peut m'expliquer?

8ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Priscillia_PM 12 9 5 2

A mon avis, si c'était dans "des assiettes" la phrase aurait été "they eat off plates". Mais ici la phrase a été "they eat off the plates" donc "ils mangent dans les assiettes". Le mot "the" est très important

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cavenaile 25 13 28

Priscy211, n'est-ce pas la même chose que j'ai écrit juste avant ???

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Priscillia_PM 12 9 5 2

Cavenaile, effectivement, quand j'ai posté le commentaire je n'avais pas encore vu le vôtre, je m'en excuse.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cavenaile 25 13 28

Je suppose que pour que Duo valide votre réponse, la phrase aurait dû être : "They eat off plates". Ici, le "the" est indiqué, donc la bonne traduction est ils mangent dans LES assiettes.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

boulvis 25 378

Parce qu'ils attendaient "les" et pas "des"

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sf1s 14

Merci pour les commentaires. Je comprends que c'est une expression anglaise.

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

flemay 16 11 6

Ils mangent dans DES assiettes, ce n'est pas bon?

7ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

ricolino20 21 13 13 10 8 3 5

Je pensais que to eat off voulait dire finir de manger.

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

auoussaouiimen 6 4

j'ai pensé à la même chose, eat off vient de dire 'cesser de manger'

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

molekebrasil 10

c'est dur.. Parce que je fais la liaison avec "ON-OFF " sur les appareils électriques.... !!

3ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

RyanAsgl 8 4

Punaïse la traduction de "off" tellement utile. :S

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sf1s 14

je ne comprends pas la phrase en anglais

1ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

revealspectrum 12 10

En fait ça doit vouloir dire que "eat" = "manger" et "eat off" = ne plus manger avec ses mains mais dans un plat, dans le contexte d'un plat. Après l'anglais est un langage qu'on pourrait rapprocher de la "novlangue", la grammaire est très approximative et sous forme de lego.

3ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

skup0 14 6

là ok, c'est plus compréhensible

2ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

MattSiCou 14

Parfait j'ai bien compris. Merci pour les explications :).

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jrikhal 22 18 18 7 6 5 5 5 3 3 3 2 2 2 2

Que ne comprenez-vous pas exactement ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 years ago

[deactivated user]

Je comprends pas, Ils mangent dans des assiettes ou Ils mangent des assiettes?

1ReplyGive Lingot2•3 years ago

Nicolas-Roches 10

Quel est la différence entre "off / of " ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

asliKrDeni 7

of = "de" donc rien à voir

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

daniel_57120 12

petite question :comment dit on :

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

daniel_57120 12

ils me mangent pas dans les assiettes ?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Brigionet 16 149

"ils mangent dans les plats" a été accepté

0ReplyGive Lingot•4 months ago

Anne-M16 25 55

dans les assiettes n'est pas tellement français "des" est plus conforme

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 month ago

Peter83200 11

En Français, dans cette phrase il manque la suite..... dans les assiettes, vertes, ou celles de la grand-mèreetc. Ils mangent dans des assiettes est une phrase typiquement française et logique.

-2ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

430 The Danish Collection (Overview of Threads) [Please Read]

<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4277767>

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

Hej allesammen!

This thread is intended to be a collection of links to other threads, in which we will detail various parts of the Danish language that might be hard to understand. Since we wanted to get the course out to you as fast as possible, and these details will probably take a while to write, they are not yet written!

The over overview of the threads that we will eventually write is below here. I invite you all to comment if you bump into something in the course that you simply cannot understand, and which is not covered in this list. Similarly, you are welcome to comment on which ones of these you feel are most pressing. Then we will, of course, write those first :)

Be sure to check out the Facebook group as well.

<h1>Introductions</h1>

Welcome Students! [Please Read]

Welcome to the Danish Course!

Suggestions for the Danish Course

<h1>Phonology</h1>

The Danish Alphabet and Sounds

List of Difficult Words to Pronounce

<h1>Nouns and Properties</h1>

Determining the Gender of a Noun

Plural Endings

Noun Gender and Declension

Compound Nouns

Pronouns

Adjectives

Adverbs

<h1>Verbs</h1>

Overview of Verb Conjugations and Usages

Verbs: Tenses

Verbs: Passive Aspect

Verbs: Imperative Mood

Verbs: Present and Past Participle

<h1>Tricky Differences</h1>

"Røre" vs "røre ved"

"Hvis" vs "om"

"Tror" vs "synes"

"Lege" vs "spille"

"Ved", "nær", and "nær ved"

<h1>Constructs</h1>

Word Order Inversion when not a Question

Expressing Future

Expressing the Progressive

Expressing the Conditional

Modality: Auxiliaries and Particles

<h1>External Resources</h1>

We will try to collect useful resources for your Danish studies here. Feel free to post any additions in comments here or in this thread.

References

Ordnet.dk -- Here you can look up any word, and find inflections, examples, and more.

Sproget.dk -- Another dictionary with inflections, examples, which also shows the syllables for any word (useful for pronunciation).

Wiktionary (the English version) has most Danish words with IPA pronunciation, etymology, conjugations, and often a translation too.

Dsn.dk from the official authority on Danish language has word lookups with conjugations.

Forvo has pronunciations of many Danish words, recorded by native speakers.

Reading

Dr.dk/ligetil -- News written in an easy language.

International Children's Digital Library - Children's books in Danish.

Watching

Dr.dk/tv -- The Danish equivalent of BBC. Many programs are freely available to watch online.
Disney Songs in Danish -- Link to a channel on YouTube and links to specific songs in comments.
Most have double subtitles in Danish and English!
Dansk Udtale -- YouTube channel with many small videos explaining different parts of pronunciation.
Language spoken is Danish.
Danish Films - List of Recommended Titles -- Recommendations from Duolingo users on which movies in Danish or about Denmark to watch.
Listening

Thread on Danish Music
RadioPlay.dk -- Radio stations
Dr.dk/radio -- More radio stations IVONA This is the TTS voice we're using. Select Danish -> Mads (for male) or Naja (for female) and input any text you want to listen to again.
Google Translate Can read out in Danish too.
Hope you're enjoying the course! :D

Give Lingot56
2542 years ago

Leave a new comment
162 Comments

TP602 10 7 7 5
the pronunciation always makes me double take

31ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Jekadu 14 10 8 2
A friend of mine insists Danish is a throat disease. As a native (if rusty) speaker, I'd be more upset with this characterization if it weren't for the fact that it's painful to speak Danish with a sore throat.

Just keep at it, and you'll get the hang of it!

27ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

Knoxienne 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 23 20 18 17 17 16 16 15 15 13 12 10 1276
It's getting easier for me. Everything's just falling into place as I practice it, and I'm thinking, why was this even a problem for me before? I love this "disease".

13ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GeniusJack 25 25 20 16 14 14 13 13 11 10 9 9 8 6 2
I hope I succeed in getting this "disease".

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaudKon 13 9 6 2
"Synes godt om" ;)

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

benjer7 18 13 11 10 9 9 7 18

Jee you guys should try speaking Arabic or Hebrew. :P

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaudKon 13 9 6 2

I'm still waiting on Hebrew for English speakers :P

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

susacha 7 6

or Irish! I know I'm only a beginner but I fail to see what's SO difficult about it. Yeh, you have to put in some effort.....

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

tankman15 5 2

I am Irish yet I don't speak the language of the old country

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

PfifltriggPi 18 16 16 15 28

Irish pronunciation is actually not that hard. It is just really alien to most peoples' native languages.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DanielDiaz77 4 4 3 2 2 2

Arabic is very underrated.... people should know more about it....

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Vis_iOn 9 6 5 5

Jekadu: Haha funny you should say this, I have really bad strep throat right now and have been learning Danish. I feel like your right. Every time I go to speak a word, I always hold back because I feel like it will hurt to say xD still love Danish though.

2ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

cdp1974 15 10 9 9 9 8 5 10

The pronunciation is certainly a challenge, and I have difficulty making my computer understand my Danish accent!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

bonbayel 20 17 14 13 13 13 9 8 6 42

That's what I heard when I was planning to spend a year in Denmark, but, besides the glottal stop, which English also has, it just doesn't fit Danish. Try Dutch or Greek or Arabic for throat disease!

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

YoungSpice94 12 5 2

How can you be rusty if you are a native speaker?

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 months ago

bonbayel 20 17 14 13 13 13 9 8 6 42

By being born in Denmark, but living away as "udlandsdanske" for many years with little opportunity to speak it???

3ReplyGive Lingot1•3 months ago

Jekadu 14 10 8 2

Yep! I grew up in Sweden and have never lived in Denmark. Much of my childhood was still spent visiting the Danish half of my family, though, so I got a lot of practice. My brother used to be a better speaker than me, but he lost most of the pronunciation in the course of just a few years.

I still try to speak Danish whenever I can, but there aren't a lot of opportunities, sadly. I mostly used it when speaking with my grandparents, and they have passed away now. Amusingly enough, this means I have a fairly old-fashioned vocabulary and a Copenhagen accent.

I code-switch between Swedish and Danish when I talk to my mother, and there's the rare phone call from family in Denmark, but that's about it these days. Very rarely I will bump into a Dane on the street and have a short conversation.

I hope I will find a reason to use my Danish more in the future. It deteriorates more each year, to the point that I have trouble following conversations in dialects I'm not familiar with. I also never learned to read or write in Danish -- we were one kid shy of qualifying for the municipality program for first language tutoring, which I'm rather sad about now.

0ReplyGive Lingot•3 weeks ago

bonbayel 20 17 14 13 13 13 9 8 6 42

While trying to learn Danish from a book after having some slightly more practical experience with Norwegian and Swedish, which are pretty much written as spoken if you know the rules, - and while studying Germanic linguistics, I met a Danish woman at my university and asked her to help me with the pronunciation. I had everything completely wrong. It took me a while to even believe that how she pronounced things could possibly be correct. I had actually decided to try a year in Denmark for that reason - I think you really have to be there to learn the pronunciation!

1ReplyGive Lingot1•6 months ago

LadyLibberachi 9 8 7 7 4 2

me too

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LucaDorigo 12 11 10 8 8

A friend of my brother once told me that to pronounce Danish you just need to speak Swedish with a potato in your mouth. So there's that.

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

bonbayel 20 17 14 13 13 13 9 8 6 42

That was a Swede saying that. The languages are quite different, and the potato would make it pretty hard to talk. One thing that occurred to me was that Danish is pronounced 'backwards' from the more northern languages. Where Norwegian and Swedish pronounce gik/gikk with a soft y [yik] , Danish makes a hard g. Same with words like kirke, købe, (Norsk, Svensk are soft [sy] like sounds) while Danish softens central and final consonants: pige, steg, regn, hedder,

2ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

DanXander 22 15 14 9 9 8 6 4

I think the alphabet and sounds would be a great thing to start off with. :) Since I've been watching Danish movies/tv, the sounds are not completely unfamiliar to my ear, but how to form them...that's a little tricky for me.

11ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

Yes I will try to write that post today! In order to manage expectations, though, I must say that there are a lot of exceptions, a lot of confusing spelling, and that the vowels will be impossible to explain using English examples (it'd be like painting a colour picture with only black and white). But I will try! And I know of some youtube videos that go through the sounds, which I will try to find again and link to :)

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

Alright, it's up. I will probably add more later though. Feel free to mention anything you find missing: <https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4287094>

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

DanXander 22 15 14 9 9 8 6 4

Tak! I just watched all the videos you had included. Very helpful. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

annygaard 17

Thanks for the extensive tips and notes with each lesson. I think it may be the most comprehensive of any Duolingo course. :)

10ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

RikSha 18 17 13 13 13 13 12 11 11 11 10 9

I totally agree! And not only good tips and notes, but also encouragement and witty writing. Fun and useful reading :)

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

Glad you like it! :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Shostarsson 15 4

Yes, the tips and notes with each lesson are so useful. It's really one of the best one I've tried so far. Thank you so much for creating this course. :-)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GigiGottwald 25 15 15 11 8

I have only just started Danish, and already I can only agree whole-heartedly with annygaard: the tips and notes are excellent, and written in such a friendly style! Mange tak! If it carries on like this, I think I'll love this course!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

MaudKon 13 9 6 2

For iPhone there is the 'Soriko Radio' app with Scandinavian radio frequencies. I listen to DR1 (Denmark) when I go to sleep. It's only news and discussion, so it's a good way to see if you can catch the phrases. In addition to the news, you can follow (or download the apps of) DR Nyheder, TV2 Nyhederne and Jyllands Posten. They also post video's on their Facebook pages.

8ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

c14p 15 13 9 9 9 8 7 5 5 5

For all of us young - or "young at heart" - danish learners, here's a collection of...children's books :P <http://tinyurl.com/danishchildrensbooks>

(Hope it's not already somewhere in the comments & I missed it :/)

7ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

Great find! I'll add it to the post :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

c14p 15 13 9 9 9 8 7 5 5 5

Some more I wrote down a while ago:

-- <http://eblad.org> : a few online magazines and e-books

-- <http://gaffa.dk/> : Danish music magazine

-- <http://www.ekkoilm.dk/> : Danish film magazine

-- <http://opdagelse.dk/> : Blog about travelling

-- <http://metteogmartinrejser.dk/rejseblog/> A couple's travelblog

-- http://www.saxo.com/dk/boeger/e-boeger/sprog_dansk?order=2 : e-books - various genres

-- <http://bookboon.com/> : study e-books - for those who feel like studying C++ or marketing...in danish.

-- <https://www.ebogreolen.dk/boeger/gratis.html> : same as ^

-- http://filer.anima.dk/pdf/gr%C3%B8n%C3%A6de_web.pdf : cookbook with recipes for vegetarians

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

netomac 17 12 11 10 8 4

Sorry, I did not know where to point this. When you go to practice, it does not matter your level, you need to point out how to write "jakkesættet", "hatten" and "skoen". And together with this, the "clothing" part is always "not done".

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cipso01 17

I have the same problem. When I go to practice, I always get "skoen", "hatten", "jakkesættet", "bukserne". Always. It helped me to learn how to write "jakkesættet", but I would prefer to focus on other words now :)

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

I'm sorry you have this problem, but I'm glad you are reporting it! I have passed it on.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

cipso01 17

Thanks! How should we report problem like this in the future?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

There is already a similar thread here, that you can add your voice to, or you can create a new one under Troubleshooting in Discussion.

Alternatively, you can contact support directly: Click "Contact Us" at the bottom this page.

Whatever you do, please be as specific as possible in describing the problem: Add the sentence/word that keeps popping up, and what you are practising (a specific lesson, or just the "global" one, or redoing a lesson), and any other details that seem important.

My fiancée has the same, or similar, problem. She keeps/kept getting "the marriage" and "the shoe". The thing is that it must be a bug in the software, and so it's not something we as contributors can fix. Therefore we need to be very specific in reporting it to the Duolingo team, or they won't have a chance to find out what's causing this.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

netomac 17 12 11 10 8 4
Ok, noted! =)

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

theo Zhang 12 12 11 6 5 3 2
This still hasn't been fixed unfortunately

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

trinivybez 12 7 6 4 3
Norwegian needs to be added...I'm having so much fun :D <3

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

brightsideoflife 15 14 14 12 12 11 11 8 8 6
Thank you for your time and energy. I love generous people.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

blaubeerkuchen 18 17 11 10 10 7 7 1009
I also want to say thank you. The tips and explanations are wonderfully written and easy to understand. They really put a smile on my face whenever I read them. There is so much time and love put into the course – I really enjoy it a lot :)

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nopartyhorse 8 8 6 2
Did you think about unlockable possible bonus skills? fx. portuguese have idioms and flirting which probably would be fun and useful in danish aswell.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2
Yea we thought about them :) Currently, we don't have the technical possibility to make them, though. But hopefully we will at some point!

4ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TobiasJacobsen 12 11 9 7 4
Yeah that could be awesome! "Den der ler sidst, ler bedst." "Lige ved og næsten slår ingen mand af hesten".

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Ralph21501 9 8 5
My favorite course!

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Gracey_B 11 8 6 3 3 2
I just started Danish.

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Spatzeck-Olsen 4
danish is the swagist language

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Dibelisle 11 6
Here is a really good youtube video of the danish queen speaking. English translation in the info section. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=HKM92RR0UDY>

2ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

suse71 7
will watch later, thank you

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

StefanoSolgreno 17 16 14 11 11 10 8 7 7 7 5 2
I was out of Internet for a few days, and when back the Danish course is in beta. Gratulerer så mye!
:D Håper på at norsk-kurset kommer snart.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TobiasJacobsen 12 11 9 7 4
Yeah that could be awesome. More Scandinavian languages, please! :) You should try Danish!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

StefanoSolgreno 17 16 14 11 11 10 8 7 7 7 5 2
Yeah. I am Norwegian, so ... I have tried it a bit, it seems great. I want to be one of the guys making the norwegian one. xD

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TobiasJacobsen 12 11 9 7 4
Yeah okay, you should be able to get a long way easily?! You should do that, that would be awesome! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

StefanoSolgreno 17 16 14 11 11 10 8 7 7 7 5 2
Yeah, if I have time. But sometimes it would get a bit annoying, since I would be changing around the two.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

TobiasJacobsen 12 11 9 7 4

I can understand that. It demands a lot of time !

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

suse1070 13 12 8 4 2

I am curious, is there any point a Dane learning Norwegian or vice versa? Is it not just a different accent? Would that be like me saying I was going to "learn" American English?! I hope I have not offended. It fascinates me that two languages can be so similar but yet still classified as different.

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

NeonLibra 18 15 13 8 7 6 6 5 5 4 4 3 3 2 2 2

I've so excited for this language and having a great time learning it :D! WOO

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

Good to hear :D

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

BettyBHancock 22 9 7

Thank you, I am really enjoying beginning Danish!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

Good to hear :) You're welcome! :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

gixxerpilot 19 13 12 11

Good job!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

greekthenick 19 14 11 10 9

A Lingot from me to you good sir, for a greatly helpful post!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Eb00kie 25 17 17 11 8 4 3

Guys, the International Children's Digital Library doesn't seem to work well. Do you know any other websites for Danish books? Something like Ole Lund Kirkegaard's work, for example?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

jo7474 18

I am so happy you offer Danish because Denmark is my favorite foreign country!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2
Always happy to be (part of) a favorite!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

watersourcejkr 14
there should be added the speaking questions on Danish course.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Rmnt_drawings 12 9 8 5 3 3 2
i agree

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2
We agree, too :) But it's not up to us to make it happen, unfortunately. Hopefully it will be there one day.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

watersourcejkr 14
Good to know that, I feel like there's something missing on my danish knowledge, like imagine if I someday travel to Denmark I would have no idea what they are saying and would be forced to read everything.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Esperakantisto 10 7 3 2 2
Like "liestef", I've had some childhood exposure to Danish; in my case it ended at 8 years old, when my parents moved to Canada. The Duolingo Danish course is excellent.

One minor point: There is no English word "alright." It must always be two words: "all right." This should be corrected in the Tips and Notes to the first lesson: "Alright, get on it and see you in the next skill!" Thanks.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

lililil 10 10 8 6 5 4
The absolute confidence you display in stating that 'there is no English word "alright"' is astounding! Did you at least consult a dictionary first?

Here's what Oxford Dictionary has to say:

'Usage There is no logical reason for insisting that all right should be written as two words rather than as alright, when other single-word forms such as altogether have long been accepted. Nevertheless, alright is still regarded as being unacceptable in formal writing.'

NB. The Tips and Notes section is not formal - informative yes, formal no.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 9

Why don't you add links to all the tips and notes that you already have for my friends on their phones.

You can open these up in a browser on your phone. Scroll all the way down:

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Basics-1> (*)

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Basics-2> (*)

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Common-Phrases> (*)

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Food> (vowel combinations *)

There were no tips and notes for the Animal skill section.

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Plurals> (*)

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Possessives> (*)

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Adjective-Basics> (*)

Clothing had no tips and notes.

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Formal> (*)

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Verbs:-Present> (*)

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Pronouns-objective> (*)

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Indefinite-Pronouns> (no tips yet)

Colors has no tips and notes.

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Prepositions> (no tips yet)

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Questions> (*)

Numbers has no tips and notes.

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Conjunctions> (*)

<https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Dates-and-Time> (*)

Places has no tips and notes

https://www.duolingo.com/skill/dn/Er-vs.-\(T\)herehere) (*)

That is as far as I have gotten so far, so I cannot give you anything later.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ilhi 19 16 9

I am trying (here, elsewhere on Duolingo, and on the Web as a whole) to find a good explanation of when to use "til at" vs. "at" alone when an infinitive follows a verb and for that matter when to use "for at" and "med at" (the latter I think I get but it seems like it belongs in a comprehensive explanation). Is there one here I haven't found? If not, can anybody recommend a link where one is instead?

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

marmitelove 14 8 4 2

The link for Danish books in the International Children's Digital Library no longer works. I managed to find them after a few clicks. Copied and pasted the link here <http://www.childrenslibrary.org/icdl/ResultByWorld?area=4&start=0&pgct=12&ilangcode=en&ilang=English&view=cover&sort=title&type=0&country=country62> Not sure if it will work as it is a search result link. There are only 15 books for now :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Troy_The_Null 17 12 8 8 6 4

Did anyone else have trouble understanding the difference between "til at", and "for at"? Here is an example for each:

Jeg dækker vinduerne op for at undgå mennesker (I cover the windows up to avoid humans).

Jeg har ikke tilladelse til at gøre det (I do not have permission to do that).

I currently understand that "for at" means "in order to", and "til at" means basically anything else, but I'm still not sure.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

danespanol 11 4 3 3

You have the "til at" and "for at" right in your sentences, however, you do not really use the "op" in Danish as you have put it in your sentence. You would either say "jeg dækker vinduerne for at undgå mennesker" or "jeg dækker vinduerne til for at undgå mennesker"

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

komarserjio 14 4

I was so tired to check each word pronunciation on forvo, so I've made a chrome extension to automate this process:

<https://chrome.google.com/webstore/detail/pronounce-it/dcdfgblbpabgienfjcahgbggojmmhlj>

Highlight a word, click "Pronounce It" in context menu and the word will be pronounced by someone from the forvo database. If nothing found on the the forvo the extension will use Google Translate text-to-speech engine.

It tries to detect a page language automatically. If it fails you can strictly specify Danish in settings.

Hope you will enjoy it ;)

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rok.sraka 19 8 6 3 2

I find understanding native speakers the hardest. Where could I find some audio/video samples (e.g. movies) which are in Danish, but also have Danish subtitles? If I just listen to Danish radio stations, I can't understand a word, so it's pretty useless, but I'm starting to understand some written text, so that could help :) Suggestions?

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Major0415 16 15 717

Recommended danish television series: Rita, Hjørdis, Dicte, Borgen, Ørnen (The Eagle) Not only are they entertaining and engaging, you will be able to hear native danish speakers.

3ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

cdp1974 15 10 9 9 8 5 10

Have already watched Forbrydelsen, Broen....thanks for the other recommendations!

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Major0415 16 15 717

"The Legacy" is another recommended show. You can find it on Amazon.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

ramkikura 10

Try the national tv dr.dk. Most of the shows have subtitles in danish after a few days.

2ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

suse1070 13 12 8 4 2

have you watched en kongelig affaere ? it's veyr good. it's on netflix

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

rok.sraka 19 8 6 3 2

no i haven't :) netflix is not available in slovenia...but i might try to find it somewhere else

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

suse1070 13 12 8 4 2

Can you download Hola, then it doesnt matter where you are. I move between different countries to be able to watch whatever I want.

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Urowarm 13 11 10 8 7 6 6 1

Watching: ekkofilm.dk - Ekko Shortlist - the moments top 10 in short films + a library with all the old ones that entered the list

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Neumann20000 14 13 12 12 7 5 3 3 3

Tak. I really enjoy listening to danish radio and tv. Helps a little with the pronunciation issues

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Ozymandias0 13 8 7 4 13

<http://www.readersstuffz.com/downloads/ebooks/Language%20Books/Danish/Danish%20-%20Essential%20Grammar.pdf>

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

Eligeert 15 14 7

That is a great source of background information. Tak!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

LunarRaevyn 8 6 3 2

The pronunciation always gets me so frustrated, but I have so much fun learning the language, I don't particularly mind. Except, I have a sore throat at the moment, and it's getting kinda hard to enunciate, ahaha

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

km1 16 15 13 13 11 10 8 7 5 2 2

Here is a suggestion for listening - Danish folk, roots, and traditional music online radio station and podcasts. It is mostly in Danish but some English. These genres are not played much on Dr.dk, unfortunately. Commercial-free! <https://radiofolk.dk/>

1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

tbarasmussen 11 7 7 6

I made one for "en and et": (<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4288076>)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

If you could rewrite it using Markdown instead of images, I'll gladly make a section for user-contributed explanations! :D

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alex1836 7 5 3

Hello, can you guys also recommend online Danish-English dictionaries with pronunciations in danish?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

The best ones I've found are Gyldendal and Ordbogen.com, both of which require you to pay beyond 2 lookups/day, unfortunately.

Free resources:

Wiktionary (the English version) has most Danish words with IPA pronunciation, etymology, conjugations, and often a translation too.

Dsn.dk from the official authority on Danish language has word lookups with conjugations, but no translation or anything else.

Forvo has pronunciations of many Danish words, recorded by native speakers.

5ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alex1836 16 9 9 7 6 5 3 2 2 2

thank you :)

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Shostarsson 15 4

Or you can try the Memrise site (<http://www.memrise.com/home/>). There is some courses about Danish words with pronunciations.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

alex1836 16 9 9 7 6 5 3 2 2 2

I can't access the Immersion part for the Danish language

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bjarkehs 12 10 6 4

Immersion hasn't been enabled for Danish yet.

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

mopheadf 15 2

[deleted]

0Give Lingot•2 years ago

mopheadf 15 2

I figured it out, I'm in the Danish course now!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

AdrianPascu 11

do you know when will immersion be enabled?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

Sorry, we have no clue.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

smearadink 25 8 5 1433

How reliable is the Danish computer voice at this point?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

bjarkehs 12 10 6 4

Not that reliable. It depends a lot on the words and how they are placed. I would say that in some cases it's perfect, but in most it is flawed in some way or another. I would record some for you guys, but I have a terrible voice.

3ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

mwittenkamp 13 8 7 2

Jeg bor i et hus med 4 Dansker. Hvis du har brug for nogen stemmer, skal du bare spørge. // I live in a house with 4 Danes (myself included). If you need some voices, just ask. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

allintolearning 25 24 21 16 15 15 13 12 12 11 11 10 10 10 9 8 8 7 7 6 6 6 4 2 9

Perhaps you could ask them to add to this site until duolingo is ready since it is easy to add to and ever so useful.

<http://www.forvo.com/languages-pronunciations/da/>

Say, I was hoping that the pronoun section would be ready soon. Here is a pronoun table I found:
<http://www.speakdanish.dk/en/grammar/pronoun-pers-table.php>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

ladymao 11 9 6 4 3 3 2 2 2

The Duo Danish computer voice does seem to be very different from other Danish sounds I've looked for online, such as on Forvo. Are there any plans to improve the sound to make it more accurate? (Also, I'm sure your voice is fine, if you are a native speaker.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

DanielSzei 2

Hey, I know its not really an issue you can fix (and maybe its just me), but sometimes the read-out for the hearing problems is very difficult to understand (if at all understandable)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

km1 16 15 13 13 11 10 8 7 5 2 2

I agree. Try listening to the slow speed when the fast one is incomprehensible.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

end1dream 13 11 278

En af de bedste fri tovejs ordbøger, som jeg mener du skal inkludere i dit oprindelige indlæg:
<http://da.w3dictionary.org/>

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sohobbess 10 7 3

First, thank you so much for making this course! Second, I have a question, though I'm still fairly early on in the lessons so if it's addressed later I apologize. I'm curious though. I learned bits and pieces of Danish from my MorMor and MorFar. One used "snakker" for "speak" and the other used "taler." Out of curiosity, in the lesson, I typed "Jeg taler Dansk" (since that was the first one I was taught) and it was still marked correct. Is there a difference between the two - is one used only in certain situations? Or is it a regional dialect thing, since my grandparents were from different parts of Denmark? Thanks!!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nordSPB 13 8 7 3 2 2

I found out (and i hope I'm not misleading you) that snakker is more chatting/discussing while taler is used for speak

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sohobbess 10 7 3

Interesting... the lesson teaches "snakker" for "speak", i.e., Jeg snakker Dansk og Engelsk. Maybe it should be switched to taler?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

nordSPB 13 8 7 3 2 2

Snakker is not as formal as tale. Check it out, please It reveals the difference. =)

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sohobbess 10 7 3

Tak!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Tyveloser 8 2

As a child I grew up watching Far til Fire and was wondering if anyone knows anywhere I could find the old episodes online or on DVD. I'm particularly wanting to watch the Christmas episodes at the moment. :) Mange tak.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

I searched for "far til fire dvd" and came up with plenty of results :) Fx:

http://www.amazon.co.uk/s/ref=nb_sb_noss?url=search-alias%3Dapsfield-keywords=far%20til%20fire
<http://www.gucca.dk/soegning/far+til+fire>

<http://cdon.dk/search?category=1769q=far+til+fire>
0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

Morten.Jensen 13 8 7 6 5 4 3 2

I hope all of you enjoy learning My Language. Jeg forstår godt ,hvis i synes det er svært.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

susacha 7 6

If I keep "stengthening skills" from the first 6 levels (where I'm at now) will I eventually eventually gain access to different lessons?? I can't understand how this works. I have fluent spanish so I did the test and according to duolingo, my spanish is level 6, and I can't get beyond level six in a language I'm fluent in. My danish is obviously not fluent far from it,but I'm getting a bit bored going over a boy a girl the girls the boys argh!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

runem 19 11 6 5 5 5 4 4 3 2 2 2 2

The next skill should unlock as soon as all skills in the previous row have been completed. So, for example, when you complete "Definites" and "Plurals" you should be able to move on to "Genitive". Once that one is completed, you can move on to "Possessive Pronouns" and so forth.

If you are unable to do so, it might be a bug with the Duolingo software. In that case, you will need to contact them: Click "Contact Us" on the bottom of this page.

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

susacha 7 6

Thanks for your reply. I have done them all several times! I will try again for another day or two just to be certain that the system knows I've fulfilled the tasks, and then if I'm still not proceeding to subsequent levels, I'll know there is a problem. Thanks again.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

suse1070 13 12 8 4 2

I was susacha and i re-registered with a new email address and now it allows me to proceed with progress, so I worked around the problem! Can I ask (just wondering) is there a section for feelings and emotions? words for frustrated, apprehensive, anxious, overwhelmed, curious, impatient..... I've looked ahead and I don't see any category as such but maybe feelings and emotions are woven in to other lessons.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

_mari102 14 3 2

Magen tak for this course ! I'm enjoying learning Danish :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sweet_dansk 11

this might seem off topic.. but i really need help on this one.. is it common in danish literature/song writing to write the verb before the subject when conveying a message (despite the phrase not being a question) for e.g. Ta'r hun dig stille væk fra mig [as taken from Medina's Jalousi] - which I took for "tager hun dig stille væk fra mig"

according to translation the above translates to she is stealing you away from me

So in that form (when verb comes first) would not it be a question and not a definite statement?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sorens 12 12 11 11 9 8 8 8 6

Actually, in that song the full line before (som en engel sendt fra helvedes flammer) is the unit that comes before the verb. It's not the subject cause that's 'hun' as you say, but the verb doesn't come first in this case.

But in other cases you could actually see a verb in the first place without it being a question because the subject is simply dropped. But that is extremely informal style, but you could find it in spoken language/facebook chat and probably also pop songs.

I hope this makes sense. It was a good question :)

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

sweet_dansk 11

Oops! I guess I got so carried away translating it line by line to the point that I lost track of the general meaning/flow! haha! Thanks to you, this makes much more sense now!

Have a lingot for your fantastisk explanation!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

GigiGottwald 25 15 15 11 8

Always delighted to discover similarities to my mother-tongue German, I was happy to discover "kan godt lide". I think it's the equivalent of the German "kann gut leiden" which literally means "can tolerate well", but is used in the sense of "to like". However, in German we usually only use it for persons, e.g. "ich kann Thomas gut leiden" = I like Thomas. Can the Danish "kan godt lide" also be used for persons, e.g. "Jeg kan Ole godt lide", or does that mean I want to eat Ole?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sorens 12 12 11 11 9 8 8 8 6

Yes, it's so funny that 'lide' in other contexts mean suffer :D You can use it for persons too. But the right word order would be 'Jeg kan godt lide Ole'.

0ReplyGive Lingot1•2 years ago

GigiGottwald 25 15 15 11 8

Mange tak, sorens! Jeg kan godt lide sorens! Have a lingot!

1ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kennethwidmer 13 7

I just wanted to suggest this youtube channel: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=A_IX6_3hGjg

I'm not sure if they're any good, but it might be useful. It's a series of simple listening exercises, basically.

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

liestef 13 9

What a great thread full of great information!

I also want to say thanks for this wonderful course! I was fluent as a child nearly 30 years ago but I have forgotten more than I retained so it is great to be able to start from the beginning again. Really enjoying the course!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

simpsongeorge 14 5

I hope a Norwegian one to come up soon, but for now, Danish. Is that a good idea as i hear they can be mutually intelligible or will i just end up confused and speaking 'scandinavian' that no one understands?

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

sweet_dansk 11

very much enjoying the performance statistics that has been added recently.. tak!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

koenvanderauwera 18 10 5 69

Thanks a lot for the great course! Do you know of a few good twitter accounts to follow? Simple Danish, maybe news related, or language related?

Any pointers greatly appreciated!

0ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

suse1070 13 12 8 4 2

I googled nyheder and dk and found a good news site. Do you watch borgen, the killing, dem son draeber, livvagterne, arvingerne?! Denmark can't keep up with my love of Danish TV

3ReplyGive Lingot•2 years ago

kimojima 25 22 14 14 13 13 8 8 6 1204

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

zanneytdc 25 21 8 6 2 2

letbog.dk ****

Also tak. I'm looking at the site right now.

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

eiane_frida 12 5 5

<http://quizlet.com/fridaae8/folders/learn-danish> hej alle sammen jeg har lavet nogle flashcards fra duolingo emner :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

JirkaR 24 15 14 10 7 1267

Unfortunately there is not Danish pronunciation :-(

-1ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

PolyglotCiro 25 25 25 25 14 13 13 12 11 11 10 6 41

Like Up Number 200!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

IS013 14 10 10 7

Nice and useful compilation!

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

M.ZubairAlauddin 20 3 2

the dictionary I can use for learning dansk / englesk. email: mzubairalauddin@gmail.com

0ReplyGive Lingot•1 year ago

shona4frendz 6

Hej,

The reading section above suggests -International Children's Digital Library - Children's books in Danish but I am not able to find any Danish books when I select the language option as Danish in the drop down. Is there any other website where I can look?

Tak!

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

tvindy 22 15 13 9 8 377

That website is confusing, but it does contain some (well-hidden) Danish children's books. Here's a link that accesses them directly:

<http://bit.ly/1RXRkou>

(Duolingo alters the direct link every time I try to paste it in, so it doesn't work anymore. That's why I'm using a URL shortener.)

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

shona4frendz 6
Tak! :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•11 months ago

mizinamo 17 16 14 14 14 13 13 10 9 6 6 6 4 3 2 2 663
Mistake at <https://www.duolingo.com/skill/da/Adjectives-inflexion> - "In Danish you would say a green apple with the sentence et stort æble." -- that should read "a big apple" instead of "a green apple", and "with the phrase" instead of "with the sentence".

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

amanda_landers 9 9 7 7 5 5 5 5
Thank you Duolingo and all contributors for this Danish course. I recently visited my ancestor's lands in Jutland (west part of Denmark), and I am really looking forward to learning the language now!

0ReplyGive Lingot•9 months ago

JaxOfBo 8 4 4
As I am jumping back into learning Danish, I wanted to say how much I appreciate all the work that went into this course. Thank you to all who made it possible!

I have noticed, however, that the moderators don't seem to be around/active very much? Are they still active?

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

DanXander 22 15 14 9 9 8 6 4
Idk for sure, but I think the one (Bjarke) might be around more after August; he's got a busy summer ahead of him.
Also, you should join the Danish Slack group; there are Danes there to answer questions, and we do a weekly voice call on Saturdays. You can find info on joining the Slack group on this thread:
<https://www.duolingo.com/comment/4318599>

1ReplyGive Lingot1•8 months ago

JaxOfBo 8 4 4
Oh, I understand! I have no doubt they are all busy. I just remember back when the course started how active they were in answering questions, etc. and it really helped. I really appreciated all they did.

Thank you for the info on the Slack group!! I will check it out. I will try to get myself to join, but I might just lurk for a while? Since I am restarting Danish after my long absence, I am not very confident in it. :)

PS: It is good to see you still around. :D

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

DanXander 22 15 14 9 9 8 6 4

Well, just so you might feel a little more comfortable, when you join Slack, the main channel (#General), we speak in English 99% of the time. (There is a #Danish-Only channel as well as a #Beginners channel, though). Also, we have a few people in the group that either have stopped learning Danish, but have stuck around (because the group is that awesome, lol), and a few that are not even learning Danish (mostly Norwegians or Norwegian learners), so you don't need to worry about being good with Danish to join the group. :)

PS...thank you; and glad to see you getting back into the swing of things with Danish. :)

0ReplyGive Lingot•8 months ago

niscate 19 15 12 12 10 8 7 6 5

There are free Rasmus Klump stories to read on the official homepage. They are also read by a professional voice actor there (voice can be turned on or off). Found that very helpful for the beginning.

<http://www.rasmusklump.dk/lyt/>

0ReplyGive Lingot•6 months ago

Gobolinche 16 10 10

I'm a native German speaker and try to do the Duolingo course Englisch- Danish. The prepositions and pronouns make me mad, because they behave completely different in English than in German or Danish. Of course I looked up some tables, but I would be grateful for some examples.

